

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

POBLYKA MODNY

1919-1920

1921-1922

1923-1924

1925-1926

1927-1928

1929-1930

1931-1932

1933-1934

1935-1936

1937-1938

1939-1940

1941-1942

1943-1944

1945-1946

1947-1948

1949-1950

1951-1952

1953-1954

1955-1956

1957-1958

1959-1960

1961-1962

1963-1964

1965-1966

1967-1968

1969-1970

1971-1972

1973-1974

1975-1976

1977-1978

1979-1980

1981-1982

1983-1984

1985-1986

1987-1988

1989-1990

1991-1992

1993-1994

1995-1996

1997-1998

1999-2000

2001-2002

2003-2004

2005-2006

2007-2008

2009-2010

20480 e.  $\frac{159}{9}$

A HANDBOOK
FOR
TRAVELLERS IN FRANCE.

NOTICE TO THIS EDITION.

---

THE Editor of the 'Handbook for Travellers in France' requests that travellers who may, in the use of the Work, detect any faults or omissions which they can correct from personal knowledge, will have the kindness to mark them down on the spot and communicate to him a notice of the same, favouring him at the same time with their names—addressed to the care of Mr. Murray, Albemarle Street. They may be reminded that by such communications they are not merely furnishing the means of improving the Handbook, but are contributing to the benefit, information, and comfort of future travellers in general.

*.* No attention can be paid to letters from innkeepers in praise of their own houses.

CAUTION TO TRAVELLERS.—By a recent Act of Parliament the introduction into England of foreign pirated Editions of the works of British authors, in which the copyright subsists, is totally prohibited. Travellers will therefore bear in mind that even a single copy is contraband, and is liable to seizure at the English Custom-house.

CAUTION TO INNKEEPERS AND OTHERS.—The Editor of the Handbooks has learned from various quarters that a person or persons have of late been extorting money from innkeepers, tradespeople, artists, and others, on the Continent, under pretext of procuring recommendations and favourable notices of them and their establishments in the Handbooks for Travellers. The Editor, therefore, thinks proper to warn all whom it may concern, that recommendations in the Handbooks are not to be obtained by purchase, and that the persons alluded to are not only unauthorized by him, but are totally unknown to him. All those, therefore, who put confidence in such promises may rest assured that they will be defrauded of their money without attaining their object. English travellers are requested to explain this to innkeepers in remote situations, who are liable to become victims to such impositions. Notices to this effect have been inserted by the Editor in the principal English and foreign newspapers.—1847.

A HANDBOOK FOR TRAVELLERS
IN FRANCE:

BEING A GUIDE TO
NORMANDY, BRITTANY; THE RIVERS SEINE, LOIRE, RHÔNE, AND GARONNE; THE FRENCH ALPS, DAUPHINÉ,
THE PYRENEES, PROVENCE, AND
NICE, &c. &c. &c.;
THEIR RAILWAYS AND ROADS.

~~With~~ Maps and Plans.

NINTH EDITION, REVISED AND CORRECTED.

LONDON:
JOHN MURRAY, ALBEMARLE STREET.
PARIS: A. & W. GALIGNANI AND CO.; XAVIER.
1864.

The right of Translation is reserved.

246. d. 10168

Germany, Holland, and Belgium.

Switzerland

Italy.

VIHA/AN LAMIN	: ROWSWELL. : MATT. LEWIS.	MADRID : MALAGA :	: DURAN.—BAILLIERE. : FR. DE MOYA.
Russia.
VIHA/AN LAMIN	: HUYON ET COMP. INSA. : WOFF. N. ISMAKOFF.	MOSCOW : ODESSA :	: W. GAUTIER. : CAMOIN FRÈRES.
VIHA/AN LAMIN	: JULIAN INLANDS. : LORRY, J. W. TAYLOR.	Constantinople. WICK.	Greece. ATHENS : A. NAST

P R E F A C E.

---

THE Handbook for France, in its origin, plan, and arrangements, does not differ from the other Handbooks for Travellers, inasmuch as it is based on actual travels through the country, and on personal knowledge of the places described. When the Handbook first appeared, although there existed monographs and itineraries of many parts of the country, there did not exist in French or in any other language a complete guide-book to France. The author may claim credit for having opened, not only to his own countrymen, but to the French themselves, many new routes and districts of interest previously little known or visited.

The Handbook was published before the construction of Railways in France, and since their commencement travelling has been in a transition state: the changes produced by these useful and gigantic enterprises have caused similar changes—involving much labour and time—in every succeeding Edition of this book. Exertions have been made to bring the information down to the date of the appearance of each Edition, as well as to correct and improve the book in every part, and to render the description of the districts not visited at first more trustworthy, by the testimony and experience of an actual eye-witness. There can be no doubt that many errors and imperfections remain; and the Editor continues to invite Travellers to enable him to correct these by their own personal observations.

The chapters into which the book is divided are arranged according to the ancient Provinces, as being less minute, more historical, and better understood by English than the more intricate subdivisions of Departments. Though the latter are universally used by the French themselves, some centuries must elapse before Champagne and Burgundy cease to be remembered for their wines, Périgord for its pies, and Provence for its oil; nor will it be easy to obliterate the recollection of William of Normandy, Margaret of Anjou, and Henri of Navarre. And it may be observed that the modern Departments are either identical with, or are subdivisions of, the old French Provinces.

This volume contains no description of Paris, because to have included the capital would have extended this book to nearly double its present size.

An entirely new, condensed, and portable 'Handbook to Paris,' suitable to the wants of enlightened English travellers of the present day, is in active preparation, and will shortly be published by Mr. MURRAY.

A description of NICE and its neighbourhood, now annexed to France, is inserted in the present Edition, and, to make room for it, the account of the Island of Corsica is removed. It may be had separately, with a Map.

CONTENTS.

---

	PAGE
INTRODUCTORY INFORMATION . . . . .	ix

SECTION I.

PICARDY.—FRENCH FLANDERS.—ILE DE FRANCE.— NORMANDY.

Introductory Information . . . . .	1
Routes . . . . .	3

SECTION II.

BRITTANY.

Introductory Information . . . . .	103
Routes . . . . .	109

SECTION III.

ORLÉANOIS.—TOURAINÉ.—RIVER LOIRE.—LA VENDÉE.— POITOU.—SAINTONGE.

Introductory Sketch of the Country . . . . .	169
Routes . . . . .	172

SECTION IV.

LIMOUSIN.—GASCONY.—GUIENNE.—THE PYRENEES.— NAVARRÉ.—BÉARN.—LANGUEDOC.—ROUSSILLON.

Preliminary Information . . . . .	229
Routes . . . . .	241

SECTION V.

CENTRAL FRANCE.—BERRI.—AUVERGNE.—VIVARAIS.— ARDECHE.—CANTAL.—BOURBONNAIS.—LYONNAIS.— THE CÉVENNES.

General View of the Country . . . . .	349
Routes . . . . .	353

SECTION VI.

PROVENCE, LANGUEDOC, AND NICE.

	PAGE
Preliminary Information . . . . .	441
Routes . . . . .	444

SECTION VII.

DAUPHINÉ.

Introduction—Sketch of the Country . . . . .	523
Routes . . . . .	525

SECTION VIII.

BURGUNDY.—FRANCHE-COMTÉ.

Introduction . . . . .	547
Routes . . . . .	547

SECTION IX.

CHAMPAGNE.—LORRAINE.—ALSACE.—THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS.

Preliminary Information . . . . .	557
Routes . . . . .	558

SECTION X.

ILE DE FRANCE.—FLANDRES.—ARTOIS.

Introduction . . . . .	597
Routes . . . . .	597
INDEX . . . . .	611

HANDBOOK

FOR

TRAVELLERS IN FRANCE.

INTRODUCTORY INFORMATION.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
a. MONEY . . . . .	x
TABLE OF FRENCH FRANCS REDUCED TO £. s. d. . . . .	xi
„ ENGLISH MONEY REDUCED INTO FRENCH . . . . .	xi
b. TABLES OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES . . . . .	xii
„ FRENCH MÈTRES REDUCED TO ENGLISH FEET . . . . .	xiii
„ MÈTRES — ENGLISH YARDS . . . . .	xiii
„ ENGLISH YARDS — MÈTRES . . . . .	xiii
„ KILOMÈTRES — { ENGLISH MILES } . . . . .	xiv
„ KILOGRAMMES — { AND FURLONGS } . . . . .	xiv
„ HECTARES — ENGLISH POUNDS . . . . .	xiv
„ — ENGLISH ACRES . . . . .	xiv
c. PASSPORTS . . . . .	xiv
d. LONDON TO PARIS, STRASBURG, MARSEILLES, &c.—ROUTES ACROSS FRANCE . . . . .	xvi
MODES OF TRAVELLING—
e. RAILROADS . . . . .	xvii
f. POSTING AND PRIVATE CARRIAGE . . . . .	xix
g. MAILPOSTES . . . . .	xx
h. DILIGENCES . . . . .	xx
k. INNS—TABLES-D'HÔTE, ETC. . . . .	xxi
l. CAFÉS . . . . .	xxiii
m. A TRAVELLER'S GENERAL VIEW OF FRANCE—POINTS OF INTEREST—SCENERY—ARCHITECTURE—TOWNS . . . . .	xxiv
n. LIST OF THE 86 DEPARTMENTS INTO WHICH FRANCE IS DIVIDED, AND OF THE 33 ANCIENT PROVINCES COM- POSING THEM . . . . .	xxvii
o. THE ENGLISH ABROAD . . . . .	xxix
p. SKELETON TOUR THROUGH FRANCE . . . . .	xxxi
q. CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF KINGS OF FRANCE . . . . .	xx--

a. MONEY.

In France, accounts are kept in francs and centimes (or hundred parts), the coinage being arranged on the decimal system. 1 franc contains 10 décimes (or double sous), and each décime 10 centimes.

FRENCH MONEY.

Silver Coins:—

		£	s.	d.
Piece of 1 franc	= 100 centimes = 20 sous	0	0	9½ English.
"	20 centimes = 4 sous	0	0	2
"	½ franc = 50 centimes = 10 sous	0	0	4½
"	2 francs = 200 centimes = 40 sous	0	1	7
"	5 francs = 500 centimes = 100 sous	0	4	0

Gold Coins:—

	£	s.	d.
Napoleon, or 20 franc piece	= 0	16	0
Half Napoleon, or 10 franc piece	= 0	8	0
Quarter Napoleon, or 5 franc piece	= 0	4	0
50 franc and 100 franc pieces

Copper (Bronze) Coins:—

Décime, or 10 centime piece	= 0	0	1
5 centimes = 1 sous	= 0	0	0½
2 centimes = ½ sous	= 0	0	0½
1 centime	= 0	0	0⅓

N.B. To find the value of centimes, remember that the Tens are all pennies, and the Fives halfpennies: thus 75c. = 7½d. — 25c. = 2½d. — 15c. = 1½d. within a fraction, but near enough for all practical purposes.

To reduce French francs to English money for common purposes, where minute exactness is not required, it is only necessary to divide the amount of francs by 25, or to substitute 4 for 100, thus:—

Francs.		£
100	=	4
1,000	=	40
10,000	=	400
100,000	=	4,000
1,000,000	=	40,000

The Bank of France issues notes for 1000, 500, 200, and 100 francs which are now made legal tender everywhere.

FOREIGN COINS REDUCED TO THEIR VALUE IN FRENCH CURRENCY AT THE PAR OF EXCHANGE.*

	fr.	c.
English sovereign	=	25 21
shilling	=	1 26
Dutch guilder	=	2 15
Prussian dollar	=	3 75
Bavarian florin = 20 pence English	=	2 15
Austrian florin = 2 shillings English	=	2 57

* The actual rate of exchange varies from day to day. It was formerly as high as 26 francs, and is now not much more than 25 francs for a sovereign.

FRENCH FRANCS AND CENTIMES REDUCED TO THEIR VALUE IN ENGLISH POUNDS, SHILLINGS, AND PENCE, AT 25 FRANCS FOR £1.

	£	s.	d.		£	s.	d.
5 cents.	0	0	0½	10 francs	0	8	0
10	0	0	0¾	11	0	8	9½
15	0	0	1¼	12	0	9	7
20	0	0	1¾	13	0	10	4½
25	0	0	2¼	14	0	11	2
30	0	0	2¾	15	0	12	0
35	0	0	3¼	16	0	12	9½
40	0	0	3¾	17	0	13	7
45	0	0	4¼	18	0	14	4½
50	0	0	4¾	19	0	15	2
55	0	0	5¼	20	0	16	0
60	0	0	5¾	30	1	4	0
65	0	0	6¼	40	1	12	0
70	0	0	6¾	50	2	0	0
75	0	0	7¼	60	2	8	0
80	0	0	7¾	70	2	16	0
85	0	0	8¼	80	3	4	0
90	0	0	8¾	90	3	12	0
95	0	0	9¼	100	4	0	0
1 franc	0	0	9¾	200	8	0	0
2	0	1	7	300	12	0	0
3	0	2	4½	400	16	0	0
4	0	3	2	500	20	0	0
5	0	4	0	750	30	0	0
6	0	4	9½	1,000	40	0	0
7	0	5	7	5,000	200	0	0
8	0	6	4½	10,000	400	0	0
9	0	7	2	100,000	4000	0	0

ENGLISH MONEY REDUCED TO ITS VALUE IN FRENCH FRANCS AND CENTIMES.

	Fr.	Cts.		Fr.	Cts.		Fr.	Cts.
1 penny	0	10½	12 shillings	15	0	15 £ sterl.	375	0
2	0	21	13	16	25	16	400	0
3	0	31½	14	17	50	17	425	0
4	0	42	15	18	75	18	450	0
5	0	52½	16	20	0	19	475	0
6	0	63	17	21	25	20	500	0
7	0	73½	18	22	50	30	750	0
8	0	84	19	23	75	40	1000	0
9	0	94½	1 £ sterl.	25	0	50	1250	0
10	1	5	2	50	0	60	1500	0
11	1	15	3	75	0	70	1750	0
1 shilling	1	25	4	100	0	80	2000	0
2	2	50	5	125	0	90	2250	0
3	3	75	6	150	0	100	2500	0
4	5	0	7	175	0	200	5000	0
5	6	25	8	200	0	300	7500	0
6	7	50	9	225	0	400	10,000	0
7	8	75	10	250	0	500	12,000	0
8	10	0	11	275	0	1000	25,000	0
9	11	25	12	300	0	5000	125,000	0
10	12	50	13	325	0	10,000	250,000	0
11	13	75	14	350	0

b. WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

A uniform decimal system of coins, weights, and measures was introduced into France in 1790, and since 1840 takes the place of all others.

In this new system all the measures of length, superficies, and solidity, the unit of weight, and the unit of money, are connected together, and are derived from one fundamental measure of length, called Mètre, and equal to the ten-millionth part (0·0000001) of the distance from the pole to the equator = 3·2808992 English feet.

From this are derived the gramme or unit of weight = 15·43235 English grains; litre or unit of measure = 1·7596 imperial pints; are or superficial unit = ·02471 acre.

On these units the other weights and measures are named by prefixes: the prefixes which express multiples are Greek; the prefixes which express fractions are Latin; thus:—

Myria-	—	mètre = 10,000 Mètres.
Kilo-	—	mètre = 1,000 „
Hecto-	—	mètre = 100 „
Deca-	—	mètre = 10 „
		Mètre = Mètre.
Deci-	—	mètre = one-tenth of a mètre.
Centi-	—	mètre = one-hundredth „
Milli-	—	mètre = one-thousandth „

The same prefixes are applied to grammes, litres, and ares; the following are commonly used:—

Mètre	= 3·281 English feet	= 3 feet 3·37 inches.
Kilomètre	= 0·621 English mile	= $\frac{1}{2}$ mile 213 yds. 2 inches.
Kilogramme	= 2·204 lbs. avoird.	= 2 lbs. 3·26 ounces.
Litre	= 1·761 Imp. pints.
Hectolitre	= 22·010 Imp. gal.	= 22 Imp. gal. very nearly.
Hectare	= 2·471 acres	= 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ acres nearly.

---

1 French pied (old)	= 1·06576 English feet.
1 French pied métrique	= one-third of mètre.
1 French toise (old)	= 1·95 mètres.
1 French ligne (old)	= 2·256 millimètres.
1 French lieue de poste (old)	= 2 miles 743 yards.
1 French lieue (new)	= 2 miles 854 yards.
1 French livre (old)	= 1·078 lbs. = 1 lb. 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ oz.
1 French livre (new)	= one half of a kilog.
1 French arpent	= 0·5107 hectare.
1 French setier	= 1·56 hectolitres.

The comparison between the English and the French weights and measures is taken from the late researches of Prof. Miller (Ph. Trans., 1857); the French measures from the Almanach du Bureau des Longitudes, 1858.

TABLES OF FRENCH MEASURES AND WEIGHTS.

TABLE A.—FRENCH MÈTRES REDUCED TO ENGLISH FEET.

Mètres.	English Feet and Decimal Parts.	Mètres.	English Feet and Decimal Parts.	Mètres.	English Feet and Decimal Parts.
1	3·281	20	65·618	300	984·270
2	6·562	30	98·427	400	1312·360
3	9·843	40	131·236	500	1640·450
4	13·123	50	164·045	600	1968·539
5	16·404	60	196·854	700	2296·629
6	19·685	70	229·663	800	2624·719
7	22·966	80	262·472	900	2952·809
8	26·247	90	295·281	1000	3280·899
9	29·528	100	328·090
10	32·809	200	656·180

TABLE B.—FRENCH MÈTRES INTO ENGLISH YARDS.

1 mètre equal to	1·09 yards.	20 mètres equal to	21·86 yards.
2 " "	2·18 "	30 " "	32·79 "
3 " "	3·27 "	40 " "	43·72 "
4 " "	4·36 "	50 " "	54·75 "
5 " "	5·45 "	60 " "	65·58 "
6 " "	6·54 "	70 " "	76·51 "
7 " "	7·63 "	80 " "	87·44 "
8 " "	8·72 "	90 " "	98·27 "
9 " "	9·81 "	100 " "	109·36 "
10 " "	10·93 "

TABLE C.—ENGLISH YARDS INTO MÈTRES.

1 yard equal to	0·914 mètres.	20 yards equal to	18·288 mètres.
2 " "	1·829 "	30 " "	27·432 "
3 " "	2·742 "	40 " "	36·576 "
4 " "	3·658 "	50 " "	45·720 "
5 " "	4·572 "	60 " "	54·884 "
6 " "	5·488 "	70 " "	64·000 "
7 " "	6·400 "	80 " "	73·150 "
8 " "	7·315 "	90 " "	82·292 "
9 " "	8·229 "	100 " "	91·440 "
10 " "	9·144 "

TABLE D.—FRENCH KILOMÈTRES REDUCED INTO ENGLISH MILES, ETC.

KILOM.	Eng. Miles.	Far-longs.	Yds.	Ft.	In.	KILOM.	Eng. Miles.	Far-longs.	Yds.	Ft.	In.
1	= 0	4	213	1	11	8	= 4	7	169	0	4
2	= 1	1	207	0	10	9	= 5	4	162	2	3
3	= 1	6	200	2	9	10	= 6	1	156	1	2
4	= 2	3	194	1	8	20	= 12	3	92	2	4
5	= 3	0	188	0	7	30	= 18	5	29	0	6
6	= 3	5	181	2	6	40	= 24	6	185	1	8
7	= 4	2	175	1	5	50	= 31	0	121	2	10

5 Kilomètres = 3 English miles nearly.

8 „ = 5 „ very nearly.

TABLE E.—FRENCH KILOGRAMMES INTO ENGLISH POUNDS (AVOIRDUPOIS).

Kil.	E. Pds.	Kil.	E. Pds.	Kil.	E. Pds.	Kil.	E. Pds.	Kil.	E. Pds.
1	2·206	14	30·880	27	59·554	40	88·238	300	761·714
2	4·411	15	33·086	28	61·760	41	90·434	400	882·286
3	6·617	16	35·291	29	63·996	42	92·640	500	1,102·857
4	8·823	17	37·497	30	66·171	43	94·846	1,000	2,205·714
5	11·028	18	39·703	31	68·377	44	97·051	2,000	4,411·429
6	13·234	19	41·908	32	70·583	45	99·257	3,000	6,617·143
7	15·440	20	44·114	33	72·788	46	101·463	4,000	8,822·857
8	17·646	21	46·320	34	74·994	47	103·668	5,000	11,028·471
9	19·851	22	48·526	35	77·200	48	105·874	10,000	22,057·143
10	22·057	23	50·731	36	79·405	49	108·080	20,000	44,114·286
11	24·263	24	52·937	37	81·611	50	110·286	30,000	66,171·429
12	26·468	25	55·143	38	83·817	100	220·571	40,000	88,228·572
13	28·674	26	57·348	39	86·023	200	441·143	50,000	110,285·715

1 Kilogr. = 2·20462 = 2 lbs. 3 oz. nearly.

50 Kilogr. = 1 cwt. very nearly.

TABLE F.—FRENCH HECTARES INTO ENGLISH ACRES.

Hect.	Acres.	Hect.	Acres.	Hect.	Acres.	Hect.	Acres.	Hect.	Acres.
1	2·471	8	19·769	15	37·067	40	98·846	200	494·229
2	4·942	9	22·240	16	39·538	50	123·557	300	741·343
3	7·413	10	24·711	17	42·009	60	148·268	400	988·457
4	9·884	11	27·182	18	44·480	70	172·980	500	1,235·571
5	12·356	12	29·654	19	46·952	80	197·691	1,000	2,471·143
6	14·827	13	32·125	20	49·423	90	222·403	2,000	4,942·286
7	17·298	14	34·596	30	74·134	100	247·114	5,000	12,355·751

c. PASSPORTS.

Abolition of Passports in France.—By a decree of the Emp. Napoleon III., subjects of Great Britain and Ireland, since Jan. 1st, 1861, have been admitted into France and allowed to travel through the country without passports, on merely declaring their nationality. A police agent on the frontier, or the Préfet of Police in Paris, will stamp a visiting card or paper bearing the Englishman's name, and the display of this will obtain for him the privilege, formerly granted on producing the passport, of gratuitous admission to public monuments and exhibitions. On quitting France it is only necessary to present this card or paper.

This is, without doubt, a liberal concession; but, as Englishmen are not exempt from the need of passports in other countries, and as it is doubtful whether, on entering France from any other side than the Channel, an Englishman may not, even yet, be asked for his passport, it seems safer, on quitting England, to be provided with one from the Foreign Office, which at all events is never taken away from the bearer, and, if visé at all, requires nothing more for the space of one year than the words "Bon pour un an."

Every Englishman therefore, on going abroad, is advised still to provide himself with a passport. At least he has the comfort of knowing that the annoyance of constant demands for the passport and repeated visas exists no longer in France.

A Foreign-office passport can be procured (fee 2s.) at the Foreign-office between 11 and 4 by leaving or sending a letter of application from any banking firm in the United Kingdom, or a certificate of identity signed by any Mayor, Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, Minister of Religion, Physician, Surgeon, Solicitor, or Notary resident in the United Kingdom.

Bankers have printed forms of application, and will furnish one to any of their customers.

Certificates of identity may be in the following form:—

(Dated, &c.) The undersigned (mayor, &c., as the case may be), residing at (town, &c.), hereby certifies that A. B. (Christian name and surname at length), whose signature is written beneath, is a British subject and requires a passport, as he intends to travel on the Continent (accompanied by his wife, children, sisters, and servant—Christian name and surname of servant at length—who is a British subject).

(Signed) J. F. (usual signature).

Signature of the above-named A. B. (usual signature).

The letter or certificate must be enclosed in a cover addressed to the chief clerk, Foreign-office, London, with the word "Passport" on the cover, and left or sent with 2s. to the Foreign-office. The applicant may on the next day either apply at the Foreign-office in person, or send with a written order for the passport.

If the applicant is in the country he can apply by letter enclosing a post-office order for 2s. payable to the chief clerk, Foreign-office, at the post-office, Charing Cross, and the passport will be sent by post.

Passports may also be obtained from the following agents:—at Dover, Mr. Latham; at Folkestone, Mr. Faulkner; and at Southampton, Mr. Lefeuvre.

The passport must be signed by the bearer in the proper place, and he should take great care to sign it very legibly, otherwise he is liable to be kept waiting whilst the functionaries through whose hands it will pass are deciphering his name.

Lee, 440, West Strand, or Messrs. Dorrell & Son, 15, Charing Cross, will obtain the passport and procure the requisite visas at 1s. each on receiving the letter of application or certificate, and will also mount the passport in a book, and so save it from wear.

d. ROUTES ACROSS FRANCE — LONDON TO PARIS, STRASBURG, MARSEILLES, &c.

LONDON TO PARIS BY RAIL AND STEAMER.

a. By Folkestone (Rail—express  $2\frac{1}{2}$  hours), Boulogne (2 hours, steam), Paris (rail 6 hours). Total, about  $10\frac{1}{2}$  hours. The time of departure varies from day to day to suit the tide. Travellers may obtain in advance from the London and South-Eastern and Chatham and Dover Railway offices tide tables for every day in the month.

By crossing from Folkestone to Boulogne, instead of from Dover to Calais, several miles of land journey are saved. 2*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* 1st class; 1*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* 2nd class; return tickets cheaper.

N.B. Travellers must book through from London to Paris in order to leave Boulogne by the tidal train, otherwise they must wait for the next ordinary train.

b. By Dover, Calais, Lille,  $10\frac{1}{2}$  hours by the morning mail, 7-30 a.m., and evening mail at 8-30 p.m., from London (Lord Warden Hotel, Dover, good). Return Tickets by Dover and Calais, or by Folkestone and Boulogne, to Paris—1st class, 3*l.* 12*s.*; 2nd class, 2*l.* 12*s.*

N.B. Excellent fast steamboats cross the Channel between France and England; still they are often crowded to inconvenience, and in rough weather passengers are liable to be wetted by the rain or spray. The passengers, especially ladies, should therefore take with them a small change of raiment in a hand bag. Both at the Charing Cross and London Bridge Stations of the South-Eastern Railway, and at the Victoria Station of the Chatham and Dover Railway, passengers' luggage may be booked through (enregistré directement) to Paris, where it is examined by the Custom-house authorities, without any detention or trouble at Calais or Boulogne. On arriving at London it may there be examined by the Custom-house officers in like manner.

When the wind is N. or E. the best passage is from Folkestone, when S. or W. from Dover, and vice versa on the return.

c. By Newhaven near Brighton, Dieppe, and Rouen, 12 to 13 hours.

This is an economical and perhaps the shortest route, as far as actual distance is concerned, but it involves a sea passage varying from 6 to 8 hours, and is therefore not to be chosen by those who suffer from sea-sickness. In spring and summer the voyage is generally performed in 6 hours. The land journey is agreeable, and Rouen well repays a halt of a day. Passengers taking through tickets, which cost 28*s.* and 20*s.*, are allowed to remain 4 days on the road, which allows of their visiting Dieppe and Rouen comfortably. Luggage can be booked for Paris on this route also.

d. By Southampton, Havre, and Rouen, 17 hours.

Steamers in connexion with the S.W. Railway leave the Pier, Southampton, every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Fares 28*s.* and 20*s.* Sea voyage, in fine large steamers,  $9\frac{1}{2}$  hours, of which  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hours are within the Isle of Wight. Luggage can be booked at London for Paris by this route also.

e. By Dunkirk by screw steamer, and thence to Lille and Paris: this is the cheapest route.

f. By Boulogne from London direct in about 11 hours: fares to Paris—28s. 1st class; 20s. 2nd class; 24s. 1st class steamer and 2nd class railway.

LONDON to BORDEAUX and BAYONNE, by Orleans, Tours, Poitiers, Libourne and Dax. Railway open all the way. Trains in about 21 hours. Pau may thus be reached in 28 hours from Paris.

PARIS to MADRID.—Rail all the way (see HANDBOOK OF SPAIN).

LONDON to BÂLE, in SWITZERLAND, by Paris (12 hours), Strasbourg (rail, 12 hours), Bâle (4 hours), or by Bâfort and Muhlhouse (15 hours).

LONDON to GENEVA, by PARIS and Macon (railway).

LONDON to MARSEILLES in 34 hours—by railway Paris to Lyons, 11 hours (railway express); Lyons to Marseilles, 9 hours (rly.).

English contract steamers, belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Company, ply four times a-month between Marseilles and Malta, leaving Marseilles 5th, 12th, 20th, and 28th. They reach Malta in 2½ days, where they meet the steamer from Southampton. The fare is 9*l.*, including board, for a 1st class passenger; that of the 2nd class being 5*l.* They leave Marseilles on the 12th of every month, arriving at Malta early on the third day, or the 15th; and bring the mail for India, which is made up in London on the 8th, unless it should happen to fall on a Sunday, when it is deferred till the following day. By this junction steamer letters can be despatched from London three or four days later than by the packet that goes round by Gibraltar to Malta.

As the steamer often sails at an early hour, you ought to reach Marseilles the day before the steamer starts, in order to go through the necessary passport formalities, and to embark comfortably.

The arrangements of the Mediterranean steamers are frequently changing; and it is therefore advisable to refer to the tariffs issued annually by the different companies.

At Marseilles it is necessary to get the passport visé by the British consul and the local police; also a bill of health, and a permis d'embarquement. The people of the Packet-office will do this for a small fixed fee.

French Government contract steamers of the Messageries Impériales leave Marseilles for Alexandria, Messina, Constantinople, Piræus, and the Levant, touching at Malta, several times every month. Other Government contract steamers run from Marseilles to Malta, touching on the way at Leghorn, Civita Vecchia, and Naples, every Thursday in the afternoon; and for Civita Vecchia and Naples every Monday at 10 P.M., performing the respective voyages in 30 and 48 hours.

e. RAILROADS.

France, although tardy in commencing the construction of railways, the only lines previous to 1843 being to Versailles and to Rouen, has yet made good progress since 1851. At present railways unite all the chief towns, and a network of lines finished or in progress connects the remotest corners of the empire.

The Livret or Guide Chaix, published monthly, or the Indicateur des Chemins de Fer, weekly, contains the time-tables, fares, &c., of all the French railways: it is the "Bradshaw" of France, and will be a useful companion to travellers in that country.

Railway passengers with luggage are compelled to be at the station at least a quarter of an hour before the time advertised for starting, and to deliver up their luggage blindly into the hands of the officials, by whom it is booked (enrégistré), for which a fee of 2 sous must be paid, and a ticket is given, on delivery of which at the journey's end the baggage is restored to the holder. This gives rise to frequent inconvenience and inevitable delay; and the only advantage is, that the traveller if tired need not wait for his luggage, but may leave it till he chooses to present his ticket for it. The best way to obviate the nuisance is to take as little as possible, and to place it in one or more carpet-bags, which will lie under the seat in the carriage. 30 kilos (= 66 lbs. English) of luggage are allowed to every passenger free of charge, except the 2 sous for registering.

Passengers are excluded from the platform until the train is ready to start, and no one is allowed access to it at all without a ticket.

Provision is made for the personal comforts of railway travellers at the stations; and refreshment-rooms, very superior to our English ones, called buffets, are provided on all the lines at certain intervals, where halts are made of 10, 20, or 30 minutes, according to the distance travelled.

Luggage Ticket.—On arriving at your destination, instead of waiting for your things, you may give the ticket to the commissionnaire of the hotel to clear them for you.

RAILWAY STATIONS IN PARIS.

PARIS to—
Chemin de Fer du Nord	{ Boulogne, Calais, Amiens, Dunkirk, Brussels, Cologne, and N. Germany.	Place Roubaix.
„ de l'Ouest	{ Rouen, Havre, and Dieppe. Caen. Cherbourg. Versailles, rt. bank. St. Cloud. St. Germain.	Place du Havre. Rue St. Lazare.
„ Lyon et la Méditerranée	{ Lyons, Châlons, Marseilles, Geneva, and Turin.	{ Boulevard Mazas, near la Bastille.
„ de l'Est	{ Strasburg, Metz, Bâle, Vienna, and S. Germany.	Rue et Place de Strasbourg.
„	{ Orleans, Tours, Nantes, and Bordeaux. Bourges. Rochefort. Limoges. Bayonne.	{ Boulevard de l'Hôpital, near the Jardin des Plantes.
„	{ Versailles, left bank, and Chartres. Rennes. Brest.	Boulevard Mont Parnasse.
„	Vincennes.	Place de la Bastille.

f. POSTING. — PRIVATE CARRIAGE.

Since the completion of a radiating network of railways from Paris to all the extremities of France, posting has nearly become a thing of the past. The old Livre de Poste no longer exists. A few directions are here given for those who may be constrained to travel on bye-ways, cross-roads, or from railway stations.

Distances are calculated by kilomètres and myriamètres. See table, p. xiv.

The postmaster's authorised charge is, for each horse, 2 francs or 40 sous per myriamètre, or 20 centimes per kilom.

The Postilion is entitled by the tariff to demand only 1 franc per myriamètre or 10 centimes per kilom.; but it is customary to pay him 2 francs per myriam., or at the rate of a horse, unless he has misconducted himself, when he may be punished by limiting his pay to the tariff. He is bound to drive the myriamètre within 46 and 58 minutes. The English, who generally want to go faster, are too often in the habit of giving him 50 sous per myriam., or 5 per kilom., which is at the rate of nearly 4*l.* an English mile. In fact, French postboys are not satisfied with 4 sous, but well contented with 5.

The cost of posting with 3 persons in a calèche, may be calculated at 8 francs par myriamètre, or 80 centimes par kilomètre. For 2 persons, with 2 horses and postboy, the rate is about 6 francs, or nearly 9*d.* per English mile.

Tariff charge of post-horses for conveying a carriage from the railway termini in Paris—for 2 horses and 1 postilion, 6 francs; 3 horses and 1 postilion, 8 francs 30 centimes; 4 horses and 2 postilions, 12 francs.

Hired Carriages—Voitures à volonté.

It is difficult to fix a fair scale of prices to pay for the hire of a carriage and horses in different parts of France; the best guide is to calculate it at full two-thirds of the posting price for the same distance, exclusive of the carriage.

The carriage usually to be met with for hire is the cabriolet—a heavy, lumbering, and jolting vehicle: the charge for it is commonly 8 or 9 fr. a-day, exclusive of a pourboire of 2 or 3 fr. to the driver. It has neither the neatness nor the lightness of the gigs furnished at a country inn in England, but is necessarily clumsily built to stand the terrible cross-roads of France.

In out-of-the-way places often no other vehicle is to be found than a patache—a rustic cab, verging towards the covered cart, without its easy motion. He who rides in a patache must prepare to be jolted to pieces.

g. MALLESPOSTES,

equivalent to the English mail-coaches, and kept up at the expense of Government, perhaps still exist on a few roads, but are fast disappearing from service as the railways are completed. Their rate of travelling equalled at least 9 or 10 Eng. m. an hour; but the price of places was nearly double that of the diligence, being 1 fr. 75 cent. per myriam. = to nearly 3*d.* a mile, the outside fare on an English mail. It is generally necessary to secure a place some days beforehand, and but a small quantity of luggage is allowed. Travellers should take food with them, as the stoppages are not long enough to allow food to be taken or even procured.

h. DILIGENCES.

The old French stage-coach or diligence is a huge, heavy, lofty, lumbering machine, something between an English stage and a broad-wheeled waggon. It carries 15 passengers inside and 3 outside, and when loaded weighs some 5 tons. It is composed of three parts or bodies joined together: 1. the front division called Coupé, shaped like a chariot or post-chaise, holding 3 persons, quite distinct from the rest of the passengers, so that ladies may resort to it without inconvenience, and, by securing all 3 places to themselves, travel nearly as comfortably as in a private carriage. The fare is more expensive than in the other parts of the vehicle.

2. Next to it comes the Intérieur, or inside, holding 6 persons, and oppressively warm in summer.

3. Behind this is attached the Rotonde, "the receptacle of dust, dirt, and bad company," the least desirable part of the diligence, and the cheapest except

The Banquette, or Impériale, an outside seat on the roof of the coupé, tolerably well protected from rain and cold by a hood or head, and leather apron, but somewhat difficult of access until you are accustomed to climb up into it. It affords a comfortable and roomy seat by the side of the conductor, with the advantages of fresh air and the best view of the country from its great elevation, and greater freedom from the dust than those enjoy who sit below. It is true you may sometimes meet rough and low-bred companions, for the French do not like to travel outside; and few persons of the better class resort to it, except English, and they for the most part prefer it to other places. It is not suited to females, owing to the difficulty of clambering up to it.

The diligence is roomy and easy; but the pace is slow, rarely exceeding 6 or 7 m. an hour, and in bad weather, when roads are heavy, falling below that.

The coach and its contents are placed in charge of the Conducteur, a sort of guard, who takes care of the passengers, the luggage, the way-bill, and the mécanique, that is, the break or leverage, by which the wheel is locked. He is paid by the administration, and expects nothing from the passengers, unless he obliges them by some extra service. He is generally an intelligent person, often an old soldier, and the traveller may pick up some information from him.

The places in the diligence are all numbered, and are given out to passengers in the order in which they book themselves, the corner seats first; and it comports very much with the traveller's comfort to secure one of them, especially in long journeys. Before starting, the passengers' names are called over, and to each is assigned his proper place. The average rate of the fares may be calculated at 45 or 50 centimes for 2 leagues, equivalent to 1½ d. a mile English, except for the coupé, which is somewhat higher. Never omit to ask for the receipt or bulletin for the fare paid, which constitutes your legal title to the place.

Diligences run on the roads of France on which the traffic is not already engrossed by railways, and correspond with provincial companies who "coach" the more distant and cross roads, so that there is no want of means of conveyance in any part of France between places of moderate consequence. In many cases, however, the "turn-out" from provincial towns is of the worst kind, and the organisation is throughout inferior to the stage-coaching of England.

k. INNS, TABLES-D'HÔTE, ETC.

On the whole, the inns in the provincial towns of France are inferior to those of Germany and to those of Switzerland, in the want of general comfort, and above all of cleanliness—their greatest drawback. There is an exception to this, however, in the bed and table linen. Even the filthy cabaret, whose kitchen and salon are scarcely endurable to look at, commonly affords napkins and table-cloths clean, though coarse and rough, and beds with unsullied sheets and white draperies, together with well-stuffed mattresses and pillows, which put German cribs and feather-beds to shame. Many of the most important essentials, on the other hand, are utterly disregarded, and evince a state of backwardness hardly to be expected in a civilised country. The provision for personal ablution is defective. Fail not to take soap with you, a thing never to be found in foreign bedrooms. The washing of floors, whether of timber or tile, seems unknown. In the better hotels, indeed, the floors are polished as tables are in England, with brushes attached to the feet instead of hands; but in other cases they are black with the accumulated filth of years, a little water being sprinkled on them from time to time to lay the dust and increase the dark crust of dirt.

French inns may be divided into two classes:—a. Those which make some pretensions to study English tastes and habits (and a few of them have some claim to be considered comfortable), and, being frequented by Englishmen, are very exorbitant in their charges. Such are met with along the great roads and in the large towns. b. Those in remote situations, where the traveller who can conform with the customs of the country may live very cheaply. The expense of living in these country inns is moderate,—6 francs a-day board and lodging, and 10 sous to the servants.

In one respect the inns of France are more accommodating than those of Germany, that they will furnish at almost any hour of the day, at 10 minutes or  $\frac{1}{2}$  hour's notice, a very fair dinner of 8 or 10 dishes, at a cost not greatly exceeding that of the table-d'hôte. When ordering dinner in private, the traveller should specify the price at which he chooses to be served, fixing the sum at 3, 5, or more francs, as he may please. In remote places and small inns, never order dinner at a higher price than 4 francs: the people have only the same food to present, even if they charged 10 francs. A very fair dinner is usually furnished at 5 fr. a-head; but the traveller who goes post in his own carriage will probably be charged 6, unless he specifies the price beforehand. Travellers not dining at the table-d'hôte should bargain beforehand for their meals at so much per head (combien par tête), otherwise they will be charged for each dish à la carte, a recent innovation, and a method of fleecing the stranger which ought to be resisted. The usual charge for a table-d'hôte dinner is 3 fr. (including wine in a wine country, but not in the north), and ought never to exceed that except in large towns and first-rate inns.

Bargaining for rooms before you enter an inn, though usual, sometimes leads the landlord to suppose that you are going to beat him down (marchander), and he may therefore name a higher price than he is willing to take, and thus you may cause the exorbitance which you intend to prevent. In French inns it is the universal custom to lock the door of your room when you go out of the house, and to leave the key with the porter: it is expected, and is indeed necessary for safety.

Tables-d'hôte in France are not so well attended as in Germany or Switzerland. The majority of the company frequently consist of "commis-voyageurs," Anglicè, bagmen, who swarm in all the inns, and are consequently the most important personages. Even at Bagnères de Bigorre, Lady Chatterton relates, "We laughed a good deal at a scene we witnessed at the table-d'hôte yesterday, where a Frenchman, after helping himself to all the best pieces of the roast fowl, turned to the lady next him, and said, with a most insinuating smile, 'Madame ne mange pas de volaille.'"

In the principal hotels in Paris the charge for servants is 1 franc a-day, usually included in the bill, and that sum is ample in any part of France. It is usual, besides, to give a trifle to the porter who carries up and down the luggage on arriving and leaving.

The prices in large towns will be higher than those mentioned in the following table, and for the last five years prices have been rising so much in France that the editor has some hesitation in stating what the prices may be.

Average Charges at French Provincial Hotels.

Bedroom, 1 fr. 50 c. to 3 fr. and upwards.

Salon, 3 fr. and upwards.

Breakfast, tea or coffee, with bread and butter, 1 fr. 50 c.; with eggs or meat, 2 fr.

Dinner, table-d'hôte, 3 fr. to 5 fr.—Apart, 4 fr. to 8 or 10 fr. or upwards.

Bottle of vin ordinaire, 1 fr. 50 c.—N.B. Sometimes included in the charge for dinner in wine-growing countries.

The better wines are sold in demi-bouteilles. When only a part of the bottle is consumed, the waiter puts it aside for the owner until another time.

Coffee, 1 fr. It is usual to take it at a café, where it is always better, and costs only 8, and with a glass of brandy 12 sous.

Bougies (wax lights), 1 fr.

I. CAFÉS.

We have no equivalent in England for the Cafés in France, and the number and splendour of some of these establishments, everywhere seemingly out of proportion to the population and to other shops not only in Paris, but in every provincial town, may well excite surprise. They are adapted to all classes of society, from the magnificent salon, resplendent with looking-glass, and glittering with gilding, down to the low and confined estaminets, resorted to by carters, porters, and labourers, which abound in the back streets of every town, and in every village, however small and remote. The latter sort occupy the place of the beer-shops of England, furnish beer and brandy, as well as coffee, and, though not so injurious to health and morals as the gin-palaces of London, are even more destructive of time: indeed, the dissipation of precious hours by almost all classes in France produces as bad an effect on the habits of the people.

It is only to the superior class of cafés that an English traveller is likely to resort, and they furnish some agreeable resources to a stranger in a strange place. Ladies as well as gentlemen frequent these establishments (except in some towns those where "Estaminet" is written up), and obtain in the afternoon a demi-tasse of coffee well prepared, and a petit verre of liqueur; and in the evening, in summer, excellent ices, sorbets, orgeats, limonade, and other cool drinks; and in winter a very tolerable potation called "punch," but differing from its English prototype. They are always supplied with the journals of Paris and the provinces, including, in the principal cities, 'Galvani's Messenger,' and have billiard-tables attached to them.

In the evening they are most crowded, and even in the most respectable (except the first-rate Parisian cafés) the company is very mixed. Clerks, tradesmen, commis-voyageurs, soldiers—officers as well as privates—and men in blouses, crowded about a multitude of little marble tables, wrangle over provincial or national politics, or over games of cards or dominoes, while others, perspiring in their shirt-sleeves, surround the billiard-table. The rattling of balls, the cries of waiters hurrying to and fro, the gingling of dominoes, and the tinkling bell of the mistress who presides at the bar, alone prevail over the harsh din of many voices, while the splendour of mirrored walls and velvet seats is eclipsed behind a cloud of unfragrant tobacco-smoke. Such is the picture of a French café!

A large cup of coffee (café au lait), with bread and butter, and an egg for breakfast, costs about 25 sous. A demi-tasse, or small cup, in the afternoon, 8 sous; a petit verre de cognac, 4 to 6 sous. The waiter usually receives 2 sous.

m. A TRAVELLER'S GENERAL VIEW OF FRANCE.

It has been the custom of the English, who traverse France on their way to Italy or Switzerland, to complain of the tiresome and monotonous features of the country, and to ridicule the epithet "La Belle France," which the French, who, it must be confessed, have in general no true feeling for the beauties of nature, are wont to apply to it. By a "beautiful" country, a Frenchman generally understands one richly fertile and fully cultivated; and in this point of view the epithet is justly applied to France. It is also most fortunate in its climate. Many of its vineyards, the most valuable spots in the country, occupy tracts of poor, barren, and waste land, which in our climate would be absolutely unprofitable. But in truth our countrymen are unjust in forming their opinion from the routes between Calais and Paris, and thence to Lyons, Strasburg, and Dijon, perhaps the least varied part of the kingdom, and at least no fair sample of its beauties. To this district, and to a large part of the province of Champagne, the descriptions of "wearisome expanse of tillage, unvaried by hill or dale, and extent of corn-land or pasture, without enclosures, supremely tiresome," are almost exclusively applicable. Throughout nearly one half of France, especially in Lower Normandy, Brittany, a great part of the country S. of the Loire, the vicinity of the Pyrenees, Limousin, Auvergne, and Dauphiné, enclosures and hedge-rows are almost as common as in England, and the variety of surface in some of these districts is far greater. Our own island, indeed, presents as it were a miniature of other lands—a concentration, within a small area, of scenery varying from flat fen and rolling down to mountains and precipices. In France, the features of nature are broad and expanded, and you must often traverse 50 or 100 miles to encounter those pleasing changes which, in Britain, succeed one another almost every 10 miles. If the English had confined themselves less to the beaten track in their way from the Channel to the Mediterranean, they would have verified the truth of this assertion.

Arthur Young (who travelled 1792-94) advised those "who know no more of France than just once passing through it to Italy, that, if they would see some of the finest parts of the kingdom, they should land at Havre, follow the Seine up to Paris, then take the great road to Moulins, and there quit it for Auvergne, and so to the Rhône at Valence or Viviers: such a variation from the common road, though it demand more time, would repay them by the sight of a much finer and more singular country than the road by Dijon."

The districts of France which chiefly recommend themselves by their beauty and variety of scenery are, in the north, Normandy, the banks of the Seine (the finest of the great rivers of France), the valleys round Vire, Mortain, and Avranches, the wild coast scenery of Brittany, and the course of the Rance, and of other streams near Quimper;—in the centre, the Loire below Tours, and parts of Limousin, Auvergne, the Cantal and Ardèche, the Rhône—by some preferred to the Rhine, on account of its more extended prospects;—in the east, the hills of the Jura, the mountains and valleys of Dauphiné, especially the vale of the Gresivaudan, the gorge of the Grande Chartreuse, and the savage magnificence of peak and glacier around Mont Pelvoux, a region which may be styled the Chamouny or Grindelwald of France; among the Vosges and Ardennes are many soberly romantic scenes which have as yet attracted but little notice from travellers;—in the south, Provence, with its sunny sky, is too arid to deserve general praise, excepting that favoured terrace at the foot of the Alps along the shore of the Mediterranean, intervening between Toulon and Nice. The Pyrenees, however, without doubt, include the finest scenery in France, and, except in the want of lakes, are scarcely inferior to the Alps of Switzerland and Savoy.

This slight enumeration of the chief points of interest is filled up in ampler details in the introductions to the different sections into which this Handbook is divided, with a view of enabling the traveller to lay down for himself the plan of a tour, embracing as many of these points as his time or inclination will permit.

“Bretagne, Maine, and Anjou, have the appearance of deserts. The fertile territories of Flanders, Artois, and Alsace are distinguished by their utility. Picardy is uninteresting. Champagne, in general, where I saw it, ugly, almost as much so as Poitou. Lorraine, Franche Comté and Bourgogne are sombre in the wooded districts, and want cheerfulness in the open ones. Berri and La Manche may be ranked in the same class.”—Arthur Young.

On the other hand, these districts, which are not interesting in point of scenery, have a compensating recommendation in their architectural remains and relics of antiquity. The heaths of Brittany are studded with extraordinary Celtic remains, and abound in most beautiful churches. Out of the midst of the monotonous plain of La Beauce rises the wondrous fabric of Chartres cathedral; that of Bourges (colossal pile) overlooks the dull plain of Berri, as the spire of Strasburg surmounts the flat valley of the Rhine. Reims, Troyes, Laon, &c., give an interest to the otherwise tiresome journey through Champagne; the sight of Amiens, Beauvais, and Abbeville makes one forget the length of the way through Picardy and Artois; and the Roman remains of Nismes, Arles, St. Remy, Orange, and Antibes, equal to almost any in Italy, would alone compensate for a journey to Provence, even had it no other claims to interest.* France, * Fergusson's 'Illustrated Handbook of Architecture,' 800 woodcuts, 1855, and Mr. Petit's 'Architectural Studies in France,' 1854, should be perused and digested by every student of Gothic before he visits France. They are books full of instruction and suggestion, and the illustrations are valuable memorials to refer to on returning from one's travels. Fergusson's work, prepared especially as a companion to the Travellers' Handbooks of Europe, is the only one presenting a continuous view of all the French styles, arranged under the various provinces.

however, is particularly rich in architectural remains, especially in Gothic architecture, of which it possesses some of the noblest specimens existing, viz. the cathedrals above enumerated ; to which must be added those of Metz, and 3 churches at Rouen.

These glorious monuments of architectural skill and lavish devotion are far more stupendous in their proportions than the cathedrals of England, but have this peculiarity, that scarcely one of them is finished : thus, Beauvais has no nave, Amiens is incomplete in its towers, Abbeville has no choir, Bourges no spire. It has been said that a perfect cathedral might be made of the portal of Reims, the nave of Amiens, the choir of Beauvais, and the tower of Chartres.

The rose or wheel windows, the deeply recessed and grandly sculptured portals, are both more frequent and of larger dimensions than in English cathedrals, and contribute greatly to the beauty of those of France, where it is not uncommon to find three in one church. The quantity, variety, and richness of the painted glass which the ecclesiastical edifices still retain, in spite of Huguenot iconoclasts and revolutionary destructives, is quite marvellous : we have nothing to compare with it in England.

The churches are usually open all day, but the choir, its aisles and side chapels, are usually closed by an iron grating, and to obtain admittance one must apply to the suisse, or beadle, who struts about in cocked hat, sword, and laced livery, though a single franc is sufficient to render him most deferential.

The finest provincial cities are Lyons, Rouen, Bordeaux, Marseilles, and Nantes, all more or less distinguished for commerce, manufactures, and fine edifices. The minor provincial towns have a certain number of features in common which will not fail to draw the traveller's observation : such are the formal walk near the entrance or on the outskirts, often a mere platform, planted with rows of stunted trees, and the resort of nursery-maids, washerwomen, and recruits undergoing drill, except on Sundays or fête-days, when the dusty and gritty platform is crowded with a gay throng, to whom the sight of bright ribbons, shawls, and new bonnets, compensates for the want of other prospect. A walk into the country and across the fields is never thought of by the French artizan or shopkeeper, nor indeed are there any field paths, green shady lanes, or pretty villas, or neat cottages with gardens, on the outskirts of the towns, to invite him to sally forth. The high roads in France have been greatly improved since 1844 ; many are now macadamized : indeed, in spite of the desolating anarchy of 1848-50, the whole country shows unequivocal signs of great and increasing prosperity.

Every town of a certain size is surrounded with a wall or barrier for the purpose of levying the octroi or town duties on all articles for eating and drinking brought into it, and which go to the municipal caisse or corporation funds. All carts and carriages, public and private, are stopped at the gates in consequence, by officers, who search them, and the baggage contained in them, to ascertain that no "comestibles" are concealed in order to evade this tax. The space outside the gates usually swarms with low cabarets, guinguettes, &c., where the poor man may eat and drink at a cheaper rate than within the walls.

Arrived within the town, the traveller will commonly find narrow streets, with no pavement at the sides, but a huge gutter in the centre, neither clean nor sweet, lighted at night by lamps (réverbères), swinging from ropes attached to the houses on either side. After passing one or more barracks, the number of which and of soldiers is striking everywhere, the barrack being often a sequestered convent or church, he will reach the Grande Place or square. On one side of it, or in some other conspicuous situation, appears a large whitewashed building, graced probably with a portico in front, guarded by a sentinel, surmounted by a tricolor flag, and fenced round by a tall iron railing tipped with gilt spearheads. This is the préfecture or sous-préfecture.

There are many institutions and establishments in French towns deserving high commendation and general imitation in England: such are the Abattoirs, or slaughterhouses, always in the outskirts; the public Cemeteries, always beyond the walls; even the Public Walks to be found in every French town, though not suited altogether to English ideas of recreation, yet show an attention to the health and enjoyment of the people which is worthy of imitation north of the Channel.

In all the larger towns there is a museum of natural history, and generally of paintings, which, although for the most part of inferior merit, are commendable as institutions for public recreation.

Still more commendable are the public libraries and reading-rooms arranged in convenient apartments, with salaried librarians, common in all French provincial towns. An amiable traveller observes, "I could not visit these libraries without wishing that similar institutions could be introduced into England, where the easy access to books in every part of the kingdom could not but prove at once agreeable and beneficial. The encouragement of such an object would be a wise application of the public money."—Knight's Tour in Normandy.

There are three authors whose works should be perused before entering France: Cæsar for its ancient history; Froissart for its feudal history; and Arthur Young, for the picture of France before the Revolution: his vivid local descriptions hold good to the present day.

III. LIST OF THE 86 DEPARTMENTS INTO WHICH FRANCE IS DIVIDED, AND OF THE 33 ANCIENT PROVINCES COMPOSING THEM.

Provinces and date of union with France.	Départemens.	Chefs-Lieux.
ILE DE FRANCE, WITH LA BRIE, &c. Always attached to the Crown:	Seine. Seine-et-Oise. Seine-et-Marne. Oise. Aisne.	Paris. Versailles. Melun. Beauvais. Laon.

Provinces and date of union with France.	Départemens.	Chefs-Lieux.
PICARDIE. Louis XIV. 1667.	Somme.	Amiens.
ARTOIS AND BOULONNAIS. 1640.	Pas-de-Calais.	Arras.
FLANDRE AND HAINAUT FRAN- ÇAIS. Louis XIV. 1667-1669.	} Nord.	Lille.
	{ Seine-Inférieure.	Rouen.
	{ Eure.	Evreux.
	{ Calvados.	Caen.
	{ Orne.	Alençon.
	{ Manche.	Saint-Lô.
	{ Ile-et-Vilaine.	Rennes.
	{ Côtes-du-Nord.	Saint-Brieux.
	{ Finisterre.	Quimper.
	{ Morbihan.	Vannes.
	{ Loire-Inférieure.	Nantes.
	{ Loiret.	Orléans.
	{ Loir-et-Cher.	Blois.
	{ Eure-et-Loire.	Chartres.
	{ Sarthe.	Le Mans.
	{ Mayenne.	Laval.
	{ Maine-et-Loire.	Angers.
	{ Indre-et-Loire.	Tours. [dec.
	{ Vendée.	Bourbon-Ven-
	{ Deux-Sèvres.	Niort.
	{ Vienne.	Poitiers.
	{ Indre.	Châteauroux.
	{ Cher.	Bourges.
	{ Creuze.	Gueret.
	{ Haute-Vienne.	Limoges.
	{ Corrèze.	Tulle.
	{ Charente.	Angoulême.
	{ Charente-Inférieure.	La Rochelle.
	{ Dordogne.	Périgueux.
	{ Gironde.	Bordeaux.
	{ Lot-et-Garonne.	Agen.
	{ Lot.	Cahors.
	{ Tarn-et-Garonne.	Montauban.
	{ Aveyron.	Rhodes.
	{ Gers.	Auch.
	{ Hautes-Pyrénées.	Tarbes. [san.
	{ Landes.	Mont-de-Mar-
	{ Basses-Pyrénées.	Pau.
	{ Arriège.	Foix.
	{ Pyrénées-Orientales.	Perpignan.
	{ Haute-Garonne.	Toulouse.
	{ Tarn.	Alby.
	{ Aude.	Carcassonne.
	{ Hérault.	Montpellier.
	{ Gard.	Nîmes.
	{ Ardèche.	Privas.
	{ Lozère.	Mende.
	{ Haute-Loire.	Le Puy.
	{ Vaucluse.	Avignon.
BRETAGNE. François I. 1532.
ORLÉANAIS. Louis XII. 1498.
BEAUCE AND PAYS CHARTRAIN.
MAINE. Louis XI. 1481.
ANJOU. Louis XI. 1481.
TOURAINE. Henri III. 1584.
POITOU. Charles VI. 1416.
BERRI. Philippe I. 1100.
MARCHE. François I. 1531.
LIMOUSIN. Charles V. 1370.
ANGOUMOIS. Charles V. 1370.
SAINTONGE AND AUNIS. 1370.
PERIGORD.
GUYENNE. Charles VII. 1451.
ARMAGNAC (PART OF GASCOGNE).
BIGORRE (PART OF GASCOGNE).
GASCOGNE.
BÉARN AND FRENCH NAVARRE. Louis XIII.
COMTÉ DE FOIX. Louis XIII.
ROUSSILLON. 1659.
LANGUEDOC. John, 1361.
VIVARAIS.
GÉVAUDAN.
VELAY.
COMTAT VENAISSIN, ORANGE, &c. Louis XIV. 1713.

Provinces and date of union with France.	Départemens.	Chefs-Lieux.
PROVENCE. Louis XI. 1481.	{ Bouches-du-Rhône. Var. Basses-Alpes. Isère. Drôme. Hautes-Alpes. Rhône. Loire. Puy-de-Dôme. Cantal. Allier. Nièvre. Ain. Saône-et-Loire. Côte d'Or. Yonne. Doubs. Jura. Haute-Saône. Aube. Marne. Haute-Marne. Ardennes. Meurthe. Meuse. Moselle. Vosges. Bas-Rhin. Haut-Rhin. Corse. Alpes Maritimes.	Marseille. Draguignann. Digne. Grenoble. Valence. Gap. Lyon. St. Etienne. Clermont. Aurillac. Moulins. Nevers. Bourg. Mâcon. Dijon. Auxerre. Besançon. Lons-le-Saul- Vesoul. [nier. Troyes. [Marne. Châlons-sur- Chaumont. Mézières. Nancy. Bar-le-Duc. Metz. Epinal. Strasbourg. Colmar. Ajaccio. Nice.
DAUPHINÉ. Philippe de Valois, 1343.
LYONNAIS AND BEAUJOLAIS.
FOREZ.
AUVERGNE. Philippe Auguste, 1210.
BOURBONNAIS. Louis XII. 1505.
NIVERNAIS. Charles VII. 1457.
BRESSE, BUGEY, &c.
BOURGOGNE (DUCHÉ). Louis XI. 1477.
COMTÉ DE BOURGOGNE, OR FRANCHE-COMTÉ. Peace of Nimeguen, 1678.
CHAMPAGNE. Philippe le Bel, 1284.
LORRAINE. On the death of Stanislas Leczinaky, 1766.
ALSACE. Louis XIV. 1648.
CORSICA. 1794.
SAVOY AND NICE. 18 .

ο. THE ENGLISH ABROAD.

It may not be amiss here briefly to consider the causes which render the English unpopular in many countries of the Continent. In the first place, it arises from the number of ill-conditioned persons (mauvais sujets) who, not being in a condition to face the world at home, scatter themselves over foreign lands, and bring no little discredit upon their country. But, in addition to these, there are many respectable and wealthy persons, who, through inattention, unguardedness, wanton expenditure in some cases, niggardly parsimony in others, but, above all, from an unwillingness to accommodate themselves to the feelings of the people they are among, contribute not a little to bring their own nation into disrepute. The Englishman abroad too often forgets that he is the representative of his country, and that his countrymen will be judged by his own conduct; that by affability, moderation, and being easily pleased, he will conciliate; whereas by caprice, extravagant squandering, or ill-timed niggardliness, he affects the reception of the next comer.

There are many points, however, in which our character is misunderstood by foreigners. The morose sullenness attributed by them to the Englishman is, in perhaps nine cases out of ten, nothing more than involuntary silence, arising from his ignorance of foreign languages, or at least from his want of sufficient fluency to make himself readily understood, which thus prevents his enjoying society. If an Englishman were fully aware how much it increases the pleasure and profit of travelling to have made some progress in foreign languages before he sets foot on the Continent, no one would think of quitting home until he had devoted at least some months to hard labour with grammars and dictionaries.

Englishmen and Protestants, admitted into Roman Catholic churches, at times are often inconsiderate in talking loud, laughing, and stamping with their feet while the service is going on: a moment's reflection should point out to them that they should regard the feelings of those around them who are engaged in their devotions. Above all, they should avoid as much as possible turning their backs upon the altar. In a church ladies and gentlemen should not walk arm in arm, as that is contrary to the usual practice of the people and to their idea of good manners: they should avoid talking together during service.

Our countrymen have a reputation for pugnacity in France: let them therefore be especially cautious not to make use of their fists, however great the provocation, otherwise they will rue it. No French magistrate or judge will listen to any plea of provocation; fine and imprisonment are the offender's inevitable portion. The general conduct of the French towards strangers, especially that of the peasantry, is courteous and kind, and in no country is the foreigner more sure of redress in the event of suffering from fraud or injustice, provided only he preserves his temper and applies to the proper authorities. In the case of an exorbitant bill, a stranger may resort to a respectable lawyer in the place; and without being compelled to stay and appear, as in England, by merely leaving his deposition properly attested, the fraudulent innkeeper may be compelled to disgorge.

By the official returns it appears that there are at present in France 66,000 English residents. Supposing the average expenditure of each to be 5 francs a-day, the sum total will amount to about 4,820,000*l.* per annum. In not fewer than 25 towns of France places of worship for the performance of the English Church Service have been established, and at most of these there are resident English ministers, many of them having the licence of the Bishop of London. With few exceptions the stipends are very small, and English travellers availing themselves of the privilege and benefit afforded by these places of worship should remember that they are in duty bound to contribute, according to their means, to the support of the establishments and their ministers: the usual contribution is 1 franc each person at the lowest.

p. SKELETON TOUR THROUGH FRANCE, TO EMBRACE THE PRINCIPAL OBJECTS OF CURIOSITY, AND TO OCCUPY FIVE OR SIX MONTHS.

HAVRE—By land up the N. bank of the Seine, halting to explore its beauties and curiosities.

Rouen (to Paris by railway).

Andelys.

Descend the valley of the Seine by railway to Havre.

Caen.

Bayeux (Cherbourg).

Vire.

Avranches and Mont St. Michel.

St. Malo.

Dinant (Brest and Quimper).

Vannes and Carnac.

Nantes—Clisson.

Ascent of the Loire to Angers. (Rl.)

Saumur.

Chinon.

Tours.

Loches — Chénouailles.

Amboise.

Blois — Chambord.

Orleans.

Bourges.

Clermont — Puy de Dôme.

Mont Dore.

Cantal.

Le Puy.

St. Etienne.

Lyons.

Descent of Rhône — Valence.

Montelimart — Aubenas — Ardèche.

Viviers on the Rhône.

Orange.

Avignon — Pont du Gard.

Nismes.

Montpellier.

Narbonne.

Toulouse.

Descent of the Garonne.

Bordeaux.

Bayonne.

Pau.

Tour of the W. Pyrenees.

St. Gaudens.

Tour of the E. Pyrenees.

Perpignan.

Narbonne.

Montpellier.

Arles — Aix.

Marseilles.

Toulon.

Cannes.

Digne.

Sisteron.

Gap.

Embrun — Val Queiras.

Briançon.

Pass of Lauteret — Mont Pelvoux.

Bourg d'Oysans.

Grenoble — Vale of Gresivaudan.

Grande Chartreuse.

Bourg.

Châlons-sur-Saône.

Dijon.

Besançon.

Colmar.

Strasbourg.

Nancy.

Troyes.

Châlons-sur-Marne.

Reims.

Laon.

Soissons.

Mézières — Upper Meuse.

Amiens.

Boulogne.

q. A CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF THE KINGS OF FRANCE.

The succession from Meroveus, who reigned from 448, is traced in the following table:—

Childeric I. . . . . A.D. 458

Clovis I. . . . . 481

On the death of Clovis in 510 the kingdom was divided amongst his sons—

Thierry I., king of Metz; Clodomir, king of Orleans; Childebert, king of Paris; Clothaire I., king of Soissons. In 558 Clothaire became sole king, but, dying in 560, his kingdom was again divided: Charibert reigned in Paris; Gontran (560), Thierry I. (596), at Orleans; Sigebert (560), Childebert II. (575), Theodebert II. (596), at Metz; Chilperic I. (560), Clothaire II. (584), at Soissons.

Clothaire II., sole king . . . . . A.D. 613

Dagobert I. . . . . 628

	A.D.		A.D.
Sigebert II., king of Austrasia,	638	Clovis II., king of Burgundy	638
Childeric II. . . . .	660	Clothaire III. . . . .	656
Dagobert II. . . . .	674	Thierry III. . . . .	670
Pepin . . . . .	681	Clovis III. . . . .	691
Charles Martel . . . . .	715	Childebert III. . . . .	695
Carloman and Pepin . . . . .	741	Dagobert III. . . . .	711
Pepin the Little. . . . .	752	Childeric III. (deposed 752)	742
		Carloman . . . . .	768

	A.D.		A.D.
Charlemagne . . . . .	768	Charles IV., le Bel . . . . .	1322
Louis le Débonnaire . . . . .	814	Philip VI., de Valois . . . . .	1328
Charles le Chauve . . . . .	840	John II., the Good . . . . .	1350
Louis II., le Bègue . . . . .	877	Charles V., le Sage . . . . .	1364
Louis III. . . . .	879	Charles VI., the Beloved . . . . .	1380
Carloman . . . . .	879	Charles VII., the Victorious . . . . .	1422
Charles le Gros . . . . .	884	Louis XI. . . . .	1461
Eudes . . . . .	887	Charles VIII. . . . .	1483
Charles III., the Simple . . . . .	893	Louis XII. of Orleans . . . . .	1498
Robert I. . . . .	922	Francis I. . . . .	1515
Rodolf of Burgundy . . . . .	923	Henry II. . . . .	1547
Louis IV., the Stranger . . . . .	936	Francis II. . . . .	1559
Lothaire . . . . .	954	Charles IX. . . . .	1560
Louis V., le Fainéant . . . . .	986	Henry III. . . . .	1574
Hugh Capet . . . . .	987	Henry IV., the Great . . . . .	1589
Robert II., the Wise . . . . .	996	Louis XIII., the Just . . . . .	1610
Henry I. . . . .	1031	Louis XIV., le Grand . . . . .	1643
Philip I., l'Amoureux . . . . .	1060	Louis XV. . . . .	1715
Louis VI., le Gros . . . . .	1108	Louis XVI. . . . .	1774
Louis VII., le Jeune . . . . .	1137	Revolutionary Tribunal . . . . .	1793
Philip Augustus . . . . .	1180	Directory . . . . .	1795
Louis VIII., the Lion . . . . .	1223	Napoleon, Consul . . . . .	1799
Louis IX., the Saint . . . . .	1226	Napoleon I., Emperor . . . . .	1804
Philip III., the Hardy . . . . .	1270	Louis XVIII. . . . .	1814
Philip IV., the Fair . . . . .	1285	Charles X. . . . .	1824
Louis X., Hutin . . . . .	1314	Louis Philippe . . . . .	1830
John I. . . . .	1316	Republic . . . . .	1848
Philip V. . . . .	1316	Napoleon III., Emperor . . . . .	1852

ABBREVIATIONS, &c., USED IN THE HANDBOOK.

The Points of the Compass (true) are often marked simply by the letters N. S. E. W.

(rt.) right, (l.) left, — applied to the banks of a river. The right bank is that which lies on the right hand of a person looking down the stream, or whose back is turned towards the source.

kil. for kilomètre.

m. for English mile.

Dépt. for Département.

Inhab. for inhabitants.

b. built.

Cent. for century.

R. Rte. for Route.

p. for page.

Stat. for Railway Station.

The names of Inns precede the description of every place (often in a parenthesis), because the first information needed by a traveller is where to lodge. The best Inns, as far as they can be determined, are placed first.

B. breakfast ; D. dinner ; R. room and bed.

Every Route has a number, corresponding with the figures attached to the Route on the General Map of France, which thus serves as an index to the Book, at the same time that it presents a tolerably exact view of the great high roads of France, and of the course of public conveyances.

The length of the Routes and the distances from place to place are measured in kilomètres and English miles. On railways the distances are measured from terminus to terminus ; on other roads often from place to place.

LIST OF MAPS AND PLANS.

	Page
Course of the Seine and Railways . . . . .	To face 33
City of Rouen . . . . .	" 36
City of Nantes . . . . .	" 160
City of Orleans . . . . .	To face 175
Course of the Loire and Railways . . . . .	" 181
City of Poitiers . . . . .	" 217
City of Toulouse . . . . .	" 250
The Pyrenees . . . . .	To face 291
City of Lyons . . . . .	" 386
Clermont-Ferrand . . . . .	" 399
Course of the Rhône and Railways . . . . .	To face 444
City of Marseilles . . . . .	" 486
Nice . . . . .	To face 501
General Map of France . . . . .	At the end.

LATEST INFORMATION.

---

PARIS.—Hotels: H. des Princes has ceased to exist;—Do. Café de Paris;—H. Mirabeau has changed management;—H. des Deux Mondes, well spoken of;—Do. H. de Vouillemont;—Grand Hôtel, table-d'hôte not very select.

Rte. 41, p. 137.—The Rly. from Rennes to St. Malo was opened June, 1864=81 kilom.

STATIONS.

	kil.		kil.
Rennes to		Bernemain . . . . .	49
Betton . . . . .	13	Dol . . . . .	58
St. Germain . . . . .	20	La Fresnais . . . . .	67
Montreuil-sur-Ille . . . . .	28	La Gouesmen Stat., for Cancale . . . . .	72
Combours . . . . .	42	S. Malo, S. Servan Stat. . . . .	81

Avranches, p. 92.—In the Museum is a model of the destroyed Cathedral.
P. 92, col. 2, for Sanguière read Sanguière.

HANDBOOK

FOR

TRAVELLERS IN FRANCE.

SECTION I.

PICARDY—FRENCH FLANDERS—ILE DE FRANCE—NORMANDY.

INTRODUCTORY INFORMATION.

Objects of Interest—Country of Normandy—Architectural Remains—Skeleton Tour.

ROUTES.

[The names of places are printed in italics only in those Routes where the places are described.]

ROUTE	PAGE	ROUTE	PAGE
1 Calais to Paris, by Lille and Amiens—RAILWAY . . . .	3	14 Rouen to Havre —RAILWAY . .	61
2 Calais to Boulogne . . . . .	10	18 Havre to Fécamp (RAILWAY); thence to Dieppe , Eu , and Abbeville . . . . .	66
3 Boulogne to Paris, by Abbeville and Amiens—RAILWAY . . . .	14	23 Havre to Honfleur , Trouville , and Lisieux . . . . .	68
4 Creil to Beauvais . . . . .	25	24 Havre to Caen, by Sea . . . .	69
5 Amiens to Rouen—RAILWAY . .	27	25 Paris to Caen, by Evreux and Lisieux —RAILWAY . . . . .	70
6 Dieppe to Rouen—RAILWAY . .	28	26 Caen to Cherbourg —RAILWAY .	77
8 Paris to Rouen —RAILWAY . . .	32	27 Cherbourg to St. Malo , by Coutances , Granville , and Avranches ( Mont St. Michel ). .	88
9 Paris to St. Germain . . . . .	46	29 Caen to Tours , by Falaise , Alençon , and Le Mans —RAILWAY . . . . .	98
10 Paris to Rouen, by Magny . . .	48	31 Vire to Rennes , by Mortain and Fougères . . . . .	100
11 The SEINE, A.— St. Germain to Rouen.— Roche Guyon .— Château Gaillard . . . . .	50
12 The SEINE, B.—Rouen to Havre and Honfleur . . . . .	54
13 Rouen to Havre .— Road , by St. George Boscherville , Jumièges , Caudebec , and Lillebonne . .	57

PICARDY and Ile de France, through which lie the routes to Paris from Calais and Boulogne, present no attractions of picturesqueness, but some interesting historical associations to Englishmen, and a few fine examples of Gothic architecture, the chief of which are the Cathedrals of Amiens, Beauvais, Abbeville.

Normandy, on the other hand, is full of interest in many respects:—it is remarkable for varied outline of swelling hills waving with corn; for beautiful valleys abounding in orchards, and in rich pasturages, on which large herds of cattle are reared, and traversed by winding rivers; for richness and careful cultivation; and above all, for remains of antiquity; venerable cities, the delight of the painter; noble cathedrals, abbeys, and churches, not confined merely to the larger towns, but scattered over the country, so that every little village, in some parts, possesses a fine specimen of Gothic architecture. Normandy is decidedly among the most attractive portions of France. Parts of the upper country are certainly flat, bare, monotonous table-land; but in its joyous sunny slopes and winding dales, in its hedgerows, orchards, thatched cottages with gardens, in the general character of the landscape of La Basse Normandie, especially in its verdure, frequent village spires, and white chalk cliffs, an Englishman recognises with pleasure the features of his own Fatherland, which no other part of the Continent affords. He may also take pleasure in remembering that this was the cradle whence came the wise and hardy bands of conquerors from whose possession of England that country dates her rising prosperity and greatness.

To those who are fond of Gothic architecture, especially to the architect and antiquary, Normandy will afford a rich treat. Rouen, a city possessing much of the old Teutonic character in its edifices, and containing not only a magnificent cathedral, but, if possible, a still finer church, that of St. Ouen, is certainly one of the most interesting places in France, and will alone furnish occupation for many days.

Caen is also interesting, though in a less degree; but in its vicinity are a great number of curious village churches. The ruined abbeys, Boscherville, Jumièges, &c., on the N. bank of the Seine, are remarkable examples of genuine Norman architecture; and the scenery of the river on whose banks and peninsulas they lie—the great water highway connecting Paris with its port of Havre—is very pleasing. The cathedrals of Bayeux (famed for its tapestry), of Lisieux, and of Coutances also are noble edifices.

Normandy abounds in old castles; of which the most interesting, both in an historical and picturesque point of view, are Château Gaillard, the favourite stronghold of Richard Cœur de Lion; Falaise, the birth-place of William the Conqueror; and many others, the cradles of our English noblesse, whence they derive their titles; and above all, Mont St. Michel, which possesses a triple interest as an historical fortress, a remarkable ecclesiastical edifice, and a most grand and striking object.

The Roman theatre at Lillebonne deserves mention as an interesting example of an edifice of the kind, and almost the only one existing in Northern Europe.

The most picturesque parts of Normandy are the banks of the Seine from St. Germain to Havre, and especially from Rouen to Havre, though its innumerable islands, planted with rows of poplars and willows, are often monotonous; the vicinity of Vire and of Avranches charmingly posted on a hill top, whence the view extends to the Mont St. Michel, rising out of the sea, is peculiarly attractive.

The Marine Arsenal, Dockyard, and Breakwater of Cherbourg, at the extremity of the promontory called the Cotentin, which deserves to be explored for its geological peculiarities, must not be omitted among the curiosities of Normandy.

* J. H. Parker's excellent 'Introduction to the Study of Gothic Architecture,' 2nd edition, 1861, contains a short but lucid view of French Gothic, which renders it a useful companion to the traveller.

Skeleton Tour of 3 Weeks through Normandy.

Southampton, or Newhaven, to	11 Bayeux.
Dieppe; to	12 Valonges.
1 Havre: rail to	13 Cherbourg.
Bolbec Stat.: walk to	14 Coutances.
Tancarville.	St. Lo.
3 Lillebonne.	15 Vire.
Caudebec.	Mortain.
Jumièges.	16 Avranches.
4 St. George Boscherville.	Mont St. Michel.
7 Rouen.	17 Dol.
Château Gaillard.	18 Dinant.
Descent of the Seine to Havre, and	19 St. Malo, and by steamer to by steamer to	21 Jersey and Southampton.—Or from
8 Caen.	Dol to Dinant and Rennes, and
10 Falaise and back.	to Paris by rail.

The best account of the architectural remains of Normandy will be found in Whewell's 'Notes on German and French Churches;' D. Turner's 'Tour in Normandy,' one of the earliest descriptions of the country published in England or France; Cotman and Pugin's 'Illustrative Plates;' and Caumont's 'Histoire Sommaire de l'Architecture du Moyen Age.' The latest work is Musgrave's amusing 'Bye-roads and Battle-fields in Picardy,' 1861.

ROUTE 1.

CALAIS TO PARIS, BY LILLE AND AMIENS.

	Kil.	Miles.
Calais
St. Omer . . . . .	43	26
Hazebrouck . . . . .	62	38
Lille . . . . .	104	67
Douai . . . . .	137	85
Arras . . . . .	163	102
Amiens . . . . .	224	140
Paris . . . . .	355	220

5 trains daily—7 to 12 hrs.

This Rly., the main trunk of the Chemin de Fer du Nord, was completed 1848.

Terminus at Calais is on the Quay, close to the landing-place. It includes the Custom-house, Passport-office, Refreshment-room (Buffet), and Hotel (where good beds may be had), all under its roof. Baggage is taken from the steamer to the Custom-house, and may be cleared at once, unless the owner requires it to be searched in Paris.

CALAIS.—Inns: H. Dessin (formerly Quillac's): the Inn of that name where Sterne and Scott put up no longer exists. H. Meurice. H. de Paris, more moderate than the more pretentious inns. The preference generally given to Boulogne has diminished the custom of the hotel-keepers here; and this circumstance leads them to seek to indemnify themselves by an increase of prices. 10 fr. is the common charge for landing or shipping a 4-wheeled carriage.

For useful information on landing in France, see INTRODUCTION.

Calais has 11,969 Inhab.; it is a fortress of the second class, with a large and strong citadel, and several forts, situated in a very barren and unpicturesque district, with sandhills raised by the wind and sea on the one side, and morasses on the other, contributing considerably to its military strength, but by no means to the beauty of its position. Since 1840 it has been re-fortified, and the strength of its works greatly increased, especially to seaward. An English traveller of the time of James I. described it as "a beggarly, extorting town; monstrous dear and sluttish." In the opinion of many, this description holds good down to the present time.

The harbour, approached by 2 parallel wooden piers, one of them more than  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. long, has 5 feet water over the bar at low water springs, but is not so deep as that of Boulogne.

A Lighthouse of the first class, nearly 180 ft. high, and visible 20 m. off, is erected near the outer ramparts.

Except to an Englishman setting his foot for the first time on the Continent, to whom everything is novel, Calais has little that is remarkable to show. After an hour or two it becomes tiresome, and a traveller will do well to quit it as soon as he has cleared his baggage from the custom-house.

Calais has since 1830 become a manufacturing town; the bobbin-net (tulle) trade flourishes in rivalry of that of England; numerous mills have sprung up; steam-engines are multiplying; and the inner ramparts have been removed, to make way for factories. Gloves and hats are also made here, and the herring-fishery and mackarel-fishery are extensively carried on. The gates remain open all night. Water is scarce here, and throughout Artois. More than 60 millions of eggs are exported hence to England annually.

The Pier of Calais is an agreeable promenade. It is decorated with a pillar, raised to commemorate the return of Louis XVIII. to France, which originally bore this inscription:—

“Le 24 Avril, 1814, S. M. Louis XVIII. débarqua vis-à-vis de cette colonne, et fut enfin rendu à l’amour des Français; pour en perpétuer le souvenir, la ville de Calais a élevé ce monument.” “As an additional means of perpetuating this remembrance, a brazen plate had been let into the pavement, upon the precise spot where his foot first touched the soil. It was the left; and an English traveller noticed it in his journal as a sinister omen, that, when Louis le Désiré, after his exile, stepped on France, he did not put the right foot foremost.”—Quarterly Review. At the Revolution of July, 1830, both inscription and footmark were obliterated by the mob; and the pillar now stands a monument merely of the mutability of French opinions and dynasties.

The principal gate leading from the sea-side into the town is that introduced by Hogarth into his well-known picture. It was built by Cardinal Richelieu 1635.

No one needs to be reminded of the interesting incidents of the Siege of Calais by Edward III., which lasted 11 months, and of the heroic devotion of Eustace de St. Pierre and his 5 companions. Few, perhaps, are aware that the heroes of Calais not only went unrewarded by their own king and countrymen, but were compelled to beg their bread in misery through France. Calais remained in the hands of the English more than 200 years, from 1347 to 1558, when it was taken by the Duc de Guise, with an army of 30,000 men, from a forlorn garrison of 500. It was the last relic of the Gallic dominions of the Plantagenets, which, at one time, comprehended the half of France. Calais was dear to the English as the prize of the valour of their forefathers, rather than from any real value which it possessed; and it is usually related that Queen Mary I. grieved so much at the loss as to say that on her death Calais would be found written on her heart.

The English traveller should look at the Hôtel de Guise, at the end of Rue de la Prison, originally the guildhall of the mayor and aldermen of the “staple of wool,” established here by Edward III. 1363. It has some vestiges of English Tudor architecture. Henry VIII. used to lodge in it.

In the Great Market Place stands the Hôtel de Ville (Town Hall). In it are situated the police-offices. In front of it are placed busts of St. Pierre; of Francis, 2nd Duc de Guise, who conquered the town from the English; and of the Cardinal de Richelieu, who built the citadel on the W. of the town: above it rises a belfry, containing the chimes.

The principal Church was built at the time when the English were masters of Calais. It is a handsome Dec. Gothic edifice: a modern circular chapel has been thrown out behind the choir. It is surmounted by a stately tower and short steeple, which merit notice.

Lady Hamilton (Nelson’s Emma) died here, a pauper, in great misery, Jan. 1815. Her body, enclosed in a deal box, was interred in the public cemetery, which was converted, in 1816, into a timber-yard, about 20 yards beyond the Porte de Calais, on the l. of the road to Boulogne. A pillar, set up by Mr. R. Barton, marks the spot.

The old town is built in the form of an oblong square, surrounded by old walls, having a gate to the sea and one to the land. To this a large modern suburb has been attached, filled with busy factories, lace-mills (for bobbinet=tulle), and steam engines.

The walls and the pier are admirable promenades, and command a distinct view of the white cliffs of England. More than 2000 English are said to find employment in the factories here. Many of our countrymen besides reside merely for the purpose of economising; so that the place is half Anglicised, and our language is generally spoken. The number amounts at present to 4800 English residents in and around Calais. There is an English Chapel, Rue des Prêtres; service on Sundays, 11 A.M., 3 P.M.: also in the English ch. of St. Pierre-les-Calais, 11½ A.M. and 6¼ P.M.

There is a small theatre here; also a public library, and a Musée containing a picture of the Virgin ascribed to Correggio. There is a bathing establishment and bathing-machines.

Steamboats to and from Dover daily. The S.E. Rly. Company's vessels leave Dover at 11 A.M., and Calais at 3-30 P.M. The English and French government mail steamers go daily, except Sunday, at 9-35 A.M. and 10-40 P.M., and from Calais at 12-10 P.M. and 1-30 A.M., except Saturday. The passage is made in 2 hrs. At low water, when steamers cannot enter Calais harbour, passengers are landed in boats (charge 3 fr.), and must wait for their luggage until the steamer enters with the tide. Steamers direct to London in 11 hrs. twice a week. Chatham and Dover Rly. Co.'s boats, very good.

Diligence daily to Boulogne and to Dunkerque and Gravelines.

Railways to Lille and Paris—to Lille and Brussels—to Mons and Namur—to Bruges, Ghent, and Antwerp. A Railway from Calais to Boulogne in progress.

On leaving the Terminus on the Quai the line to Paris skirts the N.E. angle of the Citadel.

St. Pierre-les-Calais Stat. This is a great manufacturing suburb of Calais (14,000 Inhab.), more populous than the town itself. There are many tulle manufactories here, established by English capitalists since 1819. A great number of English weavers are settled here, for whom a neat Gothic ch. was built 1862, and consecrated by the Bp. of London.

The Rly. runs by the side of the river Aa: it crosses the Canal d'Ardres, near the Pont Sans Pareil.

The country about Calais, and for some distance inland, is low and wet, intersected by scummy ditches, and traversed by rows of pollard willows and osiers, useful for making the Picardy baskets. It is drained by the canal de St. Omer, which falls into the sea at Calais: the tides are kept out by embankments. The villages are composed chiefly of mud cottages. The peasants, men as well as women, are frequently seen mounted on very high pattens to avoid the dirt.

Ardres Stat., a fortress dismantled 1850. Pop. 2031.

The plain between this place and Guisnes, a little to the W. of the road, is the Field of the Cloth of Gold, the scene of the meeting between Henry VIII. and Francis I., 1520, with their suites of 5696 persons and 4325 horses, so called from the cloth of gold with which the tents and pavilions of the monarchs were covered.

Audruicq Stat.

Watter Stat.

St. Omer Stat. Inns: H. d'Angleterre; H. de France; Grande Ste. Catherine.

This is a third-rate fortress, whose means of defence lie less in its actual fortifications than in the marshes which surround it, and the facility afforded by the river Aa, on which it stands, of flooding the land round about, so as to leave only ½ of its circuit unprotected by the waters. Although it contains a population of 22,500 souls, it is a very dull place. There are, however, two ecclesiastical edifices worthy of notice.

The Cathedral, at the upper end of the Rue St. Bertin, is a fine building, showing the transition from the round to the pointed style. The arrangement of the chapels round the apse is very good. Transepts very large. Obs. the S. transept doorway, and the incised slabs removed from the floor and placed against the walls of a S. side-chapel.

Close to the Stat., at the opposite extremity of the same street, stand the scanty remains of the famous Abbey Ch. of St. Bertin, at one time the noblest Gothic monument of French Flanders—in its present state a disgrace to the town, and a reproach to the government; for be it known that its destruction has been perpetrated since 1830! At the outbreak of the great Revolution the monastery was suppressed; the Convention spared it; and though under the Directory it was sold for the materials, unroofed, and stripped of its woodwork and metal, yet its walls remained comparatively uninjured until the magistrates barbarously pulled it down to afford employment to some labourers out of work! The fragment remaining consists of a stately tower built in the 15th century (1431-1461), displaying the ornaments of the florid Gothic in the mutilated panelling on its walls, and bits of tracery in its windows; a small portion of the nave remains attached to it. The tower, threatening to fall, has been propped by an ugly, ill-contrived buttress of masonry; there is some talk of converting it into a museum. The town is well seen from its top, but there is nothing else of interest in the view. Within the walls of the Abbey of St. Bertin the feeble Childeric III., the last king of the first race, ended his days; here also Becket sought refuge when a fugitive from England.

A Seminary for the education of English and Irish Catholics exists here: it has succeeded the Jesuits' College founded by Father Parsons for the education of Englishmen. Daniel O'Connell was brought up here for the priesthood; and several of the conspirators engaged in the Gunpowder Plot were pupils of the same school. There are not more than 15 or 20 students at present. A large military hospital occupies the site of the convent and chapel in which Dr. Alban Butler, author of 'Lives of the Saints,' was buried (1773). About 400 English reside here. English Chapel, Rue du Bon Pasteur, Sunday, 11 and 3.

Canals to Calais and to Aire.

[About 20 m. S. of St. Omer is Azincour, a village of dirty farms and poor cottages, uninteresting but for its battle-field. Only the foundations remain of the castle mentioned by Shakespeare "that stands hard by." Azincour lies on the l. of the high road from St. Omer to Abbeville, which passes through the village of Ruisseauville, mentioned in all the accounts of the battle. The hottest of the fight raged between Azincour and the commune of Tramecour, where a wood still exists corresponding with that in which Henry posted his archers, who contributed so much to the victory, each armed with an iron-pointed stake, to fix in the ground before him and to serve the purpose of the modern bayonet.

Henry, like his great-grandfather Edward III. previous to Crécy, had marched, with a force of only 9000 men at the utmost, through a hostile country, from Harfleur on his way to Calais. On reaching the Somme below Abbeville he found the ford, by which Edward had crossed, staked, and was obliged to continue up the l. bank, finding every passage fortified and every bridge broken, until he arrived above Amiens, where he gained the rt. bank by a ford which had been left open. The French army, though more than six times the number of the English, retreated before him beyond St. Pol, and there drew up across the road to Calais to dispute his passage. There is thus a considerable similarity in the events attending the victories of Crécy and Azincour, and these two famous battle-fields are not more than 20 m. apart (see Rte. 3).]

Hazebrouck Junc. Stat. (H. des Trois Chevaux; St. George) is the point of junction of the lines from Calais and Dunkerque (by Cassel, Rte. 188), and Béthune.

This is a flourishing town of 7892 Inhab., whose Ch. is surmounted by a spire 240 ft. high, of open work, built 1493-1520.

Strazeele Stat.

Bailleul Stat. (Inn: Faucon).

Armentières Stat., a town of 10,104 Inhab., mostly weavers, on the Lys.

The Rly. skirts the fortifications of Lille, and is joined by the Belgian branch-line near the Porte de Fives. Some trains stop here, others traverse the ramparts to

LILLE JUNCTION STAT.

LILLE. (Flem. Ryssel.)—Inns: H. de Flandres et d'Angleterre; H. de Gand. H. du Buffet at the stat., convenient for those who start early.

This city is important both as a fortress of the first order for its strength, forming the central point of the defence of France on her N. frontier, and as a populous and industrious seat of manufacture, ranking seventh among the cities of France. In 1856 the Pop. within the walls amounted to 78,641, and including the suburbs of Wazemmes, Moulins, Fives, and l'Esquermes 113,420. It is chef-lieu of the Dépt. du Nord, and was formerly capital of French Flanders. The streams of the Haute and Basse Deule traverse the town, filling its moats and turning the wheels of its mills, and they are connected by a canal, by means of which the country for  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. around the citadel and walls can be laid under water.

There are no fine public buildings proportioned to the size and wealth of the city, its monuments have been levelled by bomb-shells, and its objects of interest for the passing traveller, unless he be a military man, are few. The old fortifications from the rly. stat. round to the citadel have been removed, and a wall, with gallery on arches, 4 m. in circuit, has been thrown out by modern engineers.

The Citadel passed for a masterpiece of the skill of Vauban, who was governor of it for many years. It is a regular pentagon, furnished with all the accessories which engineering skill can suggest, especially since the siege of 1792, and so strong, because commanded by no point, and capable of isolation by breaking the canal dykes, and filling its wide moats, that it is deemed impregnable. A great deal of misery, however, and enormous destruction of property, and injury to agriculture, would follow an inundation. The citadel is separated from the town by the Esplanade, a wide drilling ground, which serves also as a public walk, being planted with trees and traversed by the canal. Lille was captured from the Spaniards by Louis XIV. in 1667, in whose honour the triumphal arch, at the end of the Rue de Paris, was erected. At different periods, and under different masters, it has stood 7 distinct sieges; the one most memorable for an Englishman, and one of the most memorable on record, was that by the allied armies of Marlborough and Eugene in 1708, of 3 months' duration, during which the war was not merely waged above ground, but the most bloody combats were fought below the surface between the miners of the opposite armies, each endeavouring to sap and undermine the galleries of his opponent. The siege was considered an act of great rashness, as the French in the field under Vendôme were actually as numerous as Marlborough's army, and advanced to relieve the place. Marlborough, however, took up his positions so skilfully that the relieving army was unable to effect anything, and Bouffiers, the French commander of the town, after a masterly defence, was compelled to capitulate, but upon most honourable terms. It was finally restored to France by the peace of Utrecht, 1715. In the Grande Place d'Armes is a column and statue in memory of the citizens who fell in the siege and bombardment of 1792, of 9 days, by the Austrians, under the Duke of Saxe Coburg, who was compelled to raise the siege.

The Bourse, a richly ornamented Spanish building, erected 1652. In the court is a statue of Napoleon I., the protector of the Industrie Nationale.

The Hôtel de Ville was mostly rebuilt 1849, but retains portions of 15th centy. Gothic, a brick gatehouse and towers, which are parts of an ancient palace of the Dukes of Burgundy, built by Jean-sans-Peur, 1430, and inhabited by the Emp. Charles V. The Council chamber was painted by A. de Vriez, 1726. One division of the building, appropriated to a * Museum and School of Art, contains a most interesting and valuable collection of Drawings by old Italian masters, including 68 by Raphael, others by Masaccio, Fra Bartolomeo, and nearly 200 (mostly architectural) by Michael Angelo, well worthy the inspection of all who take an interest in art. They were left to the city by Chev. Wicar. Among a number of bad pictures are two by Rubens, Death of the Magdalen, and the Virgin and St. Francis, both from a ch. at Ghent; Van Dyck, a Crucifixion. St. Cecilia and St. Francis are by Arnold de Vuez (a native artist of considerable merit, b. 1642); and there is a series of curious old portraits of the Dukes of Burgundy and Counts of Flanders.

The principal Ch. (St. Maurice), close to the Rly. Stat., is in the Gothic style of the 16th cent., resting on slender piers, forming 5 aisles, all of equal height. It has been well restored. A Romano-Byzantine Ch. with a tall spire has been built in the Faubourg Wazemmes by a Lillois architect (1860). N. Dame de la Treille is a Gothic building, begun 1860, also by a Lillois. The designs of 2 English architects, Clutton and Street, obtained the 1st and 2nd prizes at a competition!

The huge storehouses for corn at the extremity of the Rue Royale, a street nearly a mile long, deserve notice. There are some very handsome shops in the Rue Esquermoise. In the public walk adjoining the canal, a statue has been erected, by public subscription, to General Negrier, slain in the republican revolt of June 25th, 1848, at Paris, in putting down the anarchist insurgents.

English Ch. Service, Rue du Curé St. Etienne.

The tall chimneys of numerous mills, even within the walls, announce the active industry which is working here, and show the unusual combination of a fortress and manufacturing town, while the country around, and indeed a large part of the Dépt. du Nord, is like a hive in population and activity, not unworthy of being compared with parts of Lancashire and the West Riding. The chief manufacture is that of flax, which is cultivated in the vicinity, and is spun into ordinary thread, and twisted to form the kind called Lille thread, by old-fashioned machines moved by the hand; besides which much linen is woven here. In the spinning of cotton, Lille is a rival of the English. The making of tulles and cotton lace has fallen off. The extraction of oils from colza and the seeds of rape, poppies, linseed, &c., and the manufacture of sugar from beet-root, are very important, having given a great impulse to agriculture, as well as employing many hands and hundreds of windmills.

There are not less than 600 windmills in the commune des Moulins: they are used for grinding rape-seed and other oleaginous grains for oil.

Brussels may be reached in 4 or 5 hrs. from Lille, by Rail—Rte. 186.

Railways to Paris—to Tournay; Courtrai, Ghent:—(in 3 hrs.) Brussels and Ostende—to Dunkerque—to Calais. Séclin Stat.

Carvin Stat.

DOUAI JUNCT. Stat.—Here the Lille branch of the Railway is joined by that from Valenciennes (Rte. 184), St. Quentin, Laon, and Reims (Rte. 187).

Douai (Inns: H. de Versailles;—de l'Europe;—de Flandres;—du Commerce) is a town of 22,819 Inhab., surrounded by old fortifications, seated on the Scarpe, defended by a detached fort, about 1½ m. distant, on the l. bank. Here is a first-class arsenal of construction, and one of the 3 great cannon-foundries of France. It is the least thriving place in the Dépt. du Nord, and appears to be falling off in population; and though it covers more ground than Lille, does not contain half as many inhabitants. Like the Flemish towns, it has a picturesque * Beffroi, in its market-place, rising above the Gothic H. de Ville, built at the end of the 15th cent., and many picturesque Gothic houses. In an old Jesuits' convent, near the Place St. Jacques (not far from the Stat.), are:—1. The Public Library, 35,000 vols., besides near 1000 MSS. from suppressed convents, including the English and Scotch convents at Douai; 2. a Museum of Antiquities (old records of the family de Lalaing, &c.) and Pictures (old Flemish school, &c.). In the Ch. of Notre Dame is a very remarkable early Flemish altarpiece (by Hemling?), consisting of a variety of subjects—the Trinity, the Virgin, Saints, &c., with figures innumerable. It was painted for the Abbey of Anchers, near Douai, and well deserves notice.

The Artillery Barrack aux Grands Anglais (close to the Rly. Stat.) was originally the English College, or seminary, founded in 1569 by an Englishman, Cardinal Allen, to educate Roman Cath. priests for England and Ireland. There were other English, Scotch, and Irish seminaries here, one alone of which (the Benedictines') remains. There is a considerable trade in flax here, and coal-pits are in the neighbourhood.

The sculptor called John of Bologna is supposed to have been born here.

Every July a procession parades the streets of Douai, consisting of a giant of osier, called Géant Gayant, dressed in armour, 30 ft. high, attended by his wife and family, of proportionate size; the giant doll is moved by 8 men enclosed within it.

A railway by Somain and Cambrai to Reims (Rte. 187).

ARRAS Stat.

Arras. (Inns: Griffon; omnibus from Rly.; —Petit St. Paul, well recommended; —H. de l'Europe, also recommended. Arras is a large and fine city, formerly the capital of the Pays d'Artois, and now of the Dépt. du Pas de Calais; Pop. 26,200. It is a fortress of third class, seated on the Scarpe. The entrance, between and amongst the lofty ramparts, shaded by loftier trees, is grand and imposing. In the interior it has quite the character of a Flemish town, especially in its Grande Place, surrounded by Gothic gable-faced houses, terminating in scallops and scroll-work supported on open arcades, which by a decree of the town-council are to be preserved unaltered. On one side of it stands the Hôtel de Ville, a rather pleasing structure in the latest Gothic, resembling our Elizabethan, built 1510, surmounted by a Beffroi. Not far from this is the Haute Place, larger and even more picturesque in its buildings.

The first Revolution raged here with exceeding violence—a matter of little surprise when it is remembered that Arras was the birthplace of the monsters Max<sup>m</sup>. Robespierre and his brother. (You may see the house, Rue des Rapporteurs.) They were the sons of an advocate, who abandoned them in their childhood and went to America, and they were educated at the College here, and maintained by the charity of some of the clergy of St. Waast. It is said that in one street all the inhabitants were guillotined, whence it was called the "Rue sans Têtes." One effect of this fury was the desecration of the greater portion of the religious edifices. The Cathedral fell like the rest, and only a fragment of it remains near the Place.

The present Cathedral, though in the form of a Latin cross, with flying buttresses, is an Italian edifice. Its interior, supported on classic columns, with side aisles and transepts, is plain but handsome. There is a pretty modern Gothic chapel at the Dames Bénédictines. Arras was fortified by Vauban. In the Citadel are the headquarters of the Ecole du Génie, or School of Engineers—an establishment well worth the attention of British Engineer officers.

Damiens, who attempted to assassinate Louis XV., was a native of Arras.

The cotton manufacture is carried on to a considerable extent here.

Diligences to Bethune, St. Pol.—The Railway quits the valley of the Scarpe.

Achiet Stat. Diligence to Bapaume, once a fortress, dismantled 1847. It has a handsome ch. (1560), containing remains of a former ch. and modern painted glass; also a Beffroi.

Albert Stat. Diligence to Peronne.

Corbie Stat., a town of 3058 Inhab., with a Gothic ch. and an ancient abbey. The Railway then crosses the Somme three times, and passes some considerable peat-works.

AMIENS (Stat.) and the Railway thence to Paris are described in Rte. 3.

ROUTE 2.

CALAIS TO BOULOGNE.

35 kilom. = 21 Eng. m. Diligences daily in 3½ hrs. Railway in progress.

To the flat land immediately about Calais succeeds a hilly tract, unenclosed and uninteresting, which continues as far as Boulogne.

Haut Buisson.

The poor village Ouessant, or Witsand, on the sea-shore, about 4 m. N. of this, is supposed to be the Portus Itius of the Romans, the spot where Julius Cæsar embarked for the conquest of Great Britain. Roman remains are found in the neighbourhood. The harbour has long since been blocked up with sand; yet it was for centuries the landing-place for passengers from England, and was one of the ports in which Napoleon's flat-bottomed boats were lodged.

Marquise, a town of 2000 Inhab., having in its neighbourhood mines of coal and iron of no great importance, and quarries of grey limestone, situated in a pretty valley of rocks, occupying a deep fissure in the plain, resembling Dovedale. This is a favourite excursion from Boulogne.

Ambletouse, another poor village on the coast, and deserted port, deserves mention only as the spot where James II. disembarked, Jan. 5, 1689.

In the churchyard of Wimille, at the road side, 3 m. from Boulogne, the two unfortunate aeronauts, Pilâtre de Rosier and Romain, are buried; the balloon in which they had ascended from Boulogne (1785), intending to cross the Channel, caught fire at an elevation of 3600 ft., and they were miserably dashed to pieces. An obelisk has been erected to their memory. On the beach of Wimereux, Aug. 6, 1840, Louis Napoleon landed, with a few faithful followers, on his premature attempt to seize the throne.

The road, previous to descending from the open high ground, passes close to a fort thrown up by Napoleon in 1804; beyond which, about 200 yards on the rt., rises the Napoleon Column. At Wimille, Wimereux, and Ambletouse are, or lately were, the remains of wooden jetties, erected by Napoleon in 1804, in order to form harbours for his invading boats.

The tunnel,  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. long, has been pierced through the hills to admit the rly. into BOULOGNE.—Inns: H. des Bains, table-d'hôte 5 fr.—really good; Pavillon Impériale, on the shore; H. du Nord—all 3 near the harbour. H. Brighton. H. de Londres; good, and great civility. H. du Commerce, good and reasonable. Hughes's Royal H., Rue d'Assas; quiet and moderate.

Boulogne-sur-Mer is a seaport in the Channel, or Pas de Calais, on the estuary of a small stream, the Liane, which forms a tide harbour, flanked on either side by wooden piers stretching out as far as low-water mark. It was the Roman GESSORIACUM or Bononia. The old town occupies the summit of a hill, on which it was built for security in ancient times, and it is still encircled by its feudal ramparts, and entered by cavernous gateways. The new or Basse Ville, stretching down the slopes of the hills which border the harbour, and under the brown cliffs which partly line it, is the chief seat of commerce, and contains the best hotels, streets, and shops.

The number of Inhab. is 34,700, among whom are at least 2000 permanent English residents; indeed, Boulogne, having the advantage of being within 5 hours of London, is, one of the chief British colonies abroad; and, by a singular reciprocity, on the very spot whence Napoleon proposed the invasion of our shores, his intended victims have quietly taken possession and settled themselves down. The town is enriched by English money; warmed, lighted, and smoked by English coal; English signs and advertisements decorate every other shop-door, inn, tavern, and lodging-house; and almost every third person you meet is either a countryman or speaking our language; while the outskirts of the town are enlivened by villas and country-houses, somewhat in the style and taste of those on the opposite side of the Channel. There are at least 120 boarding-schools (pensionnats) for youth of both sexes, many of them under English managers.

Le Port. The margin of the harbour concentrates the chief bustle and business; here is the landing-place of the packets, and the Douane, whither passengers are first conveyed on their arrival to deliver their passports, and to be visited by the custom-house officers. The number of persons who disembark here annually amounts to 100,000 or 150,000, and hence the chief source of the prosperity of Boulogne.

The Liane is a very small stream, and the present harbour is almost entirely artificial, and requires continual clearing from the sand which is driven into it both by the wind and by the sea. The harbour is dry at low water, but vessels of moderate draught can enter it for about 4 hours each tide. The tide rises from 16 ft. to 23 ft. The wooden piers or jetties on each side of the harbour form a pleasant walk 1600 ft. long, those on the W. 540 ft. longer. There is a lighthouse at the end of each. Above the harbour is the wide shallow basin of the Liane, occasionally used as a backwater for scouring the harbour. A sand-storm at Boulogne is a real calamity, rendering the place unbearable; and the quantity of sand blown into the harbour on such occasions is almost incredible.

To the E. of the harbour, on the margin of a fine sandy beach, is the Établissement des Bains, a showy building, fronted with colonnades, containing subscription, ball, and reading rooms. In front is drawn up in long array a number of bathing-machines. Boulogne is much resorted to in summer as a watering-place, both by the Parisians and English, on account of sea-bathing, for which it is well adapted, having a fine sandy beach.

On the opposite (l.) side of the harbour is a semicircular basin, dug out of the sand by Napoleon, to contain the Flotilla of flat-bottomed boats intended by him to transport an invading French army to the coasts of England, but happily not destined to reach our shores. There is a project to convert this into a floating dock. Fortifica- tions have been begun here, as in other Channel ports.

Almost all the 300 vessels belonging to Boulogne are engaged in fishery, and the arrival and departure of the boats collects a crowd of fishermen and fisherwives in their singular and picturesque costume, such as the pencils of Prout and Stanfield are wont to portray. These people occupy a distinct quarter of the town on the N. side of the harbour, the streets of which are draped with nets hung out from the fronts of the houses to dry, and in dress and manners they are distinct from the rest of the inhabitants, speaking a peculiar patois, and rarely intermarrying with the other townsfolk. They are an industrious and very hard-working race, especially the women, and very religious: the perils and vicissitudes of their hard life reminding them more nearly than other classes of their dependence on Providence. The Boulogne fishing-boats are the largest and best of the French boats in the Channel. A great number repair annually to the coast of Scotland for the herring fishery, and some go as far as Shetland and Iceland.

The Rue de l'Ecu, running parallel with the Liane, and the Grande Rue, ascending the hill towards the upper town, contain some of the best shops. About half-way up the Grande Rue is the Musée (in what was the Grand Séminaire). A sum has been voted for a new building expressly designed for it. It deservedly ranks amongst the best provincial collections in France, is highly creditable to the town, and owes a large part of its contents to private donations. The series of arms, dresses, implements, weapons, &c., of various nations, including the full dress of a Lapland lady given by Admiral Rosamel, is very extensive. Here is an imaginary model of the Tower of Caligula, which stood on the heights above the town: also engravings of the siege of Boulogne under Henry VIII.; a curfew of earthenware; some curious fragments of sculpture of the 15th and 16th cent. from churches, &c.; a Last Judgment, a bas-relief carved in wood very elaborately; an extensive series of medals,—among them th-celebrated one, which took too much for granted, struck by Napoleon 1804, and bearing the inscription "Descente en Angleterre," "Frappé à Londres," of which 3 or 4 impressions alone are said to exist, the die having been destroyed. The quantity of Roman antiquities, of pottery, glass, bronzes, coins, utensils of various kinds, found in and about the town by excavations, is very remarkable, as well as their good preservation. A collection of siege pieces, or coins struck in haste in besieged towns, is curious, as well as a series of French Assignats, or paper money issued at the Revolution. The museum possesses a mummy pronounced by Champollion one of the finest in Europe, for the number and brilliancy of its paintings, &c.; it was brought from Biban el Molouk by Denon.

Persons interested in natural history will find collections in all departments, by no means contemptible in extent or preservation. The geology of the district is illustrated by a large series of specimens, including the ironstone of the Boulonnois, the marble of Marquise (lower oolite), and the coal. Of the Picture Gallery much cannot be said, but there are 1 or 2 tolerable modern paintings; a good sea-piece by Delacroix.

The Museum is opened to the public Thursday, Saturday, and Sunday, from 10 to 4; strangers may obtain admission on other days by giving a small fee to the concierge. Under the same roof is the Public Library, containing 30,000 volumes and 3000 MSS., many of them rare and richly illuminated, including the oldest copy extant of Bede's 'Homilies,' from St. Bertin.

The Old Town of Boulogne, on the summit of the hill, retains its three arched gateways, and the ancient ramparts which defended it in the 15th cent., but offered a vain resistance to the assaults and cannonading of the army of Henry VIII. The town was restored, however, to Henri II. of France by the English (1550), in the reign of Edward VI., by treaty, upon payment of 40,000 livres. In consideration of this a bronze bust of Henri (by David d'Angers) decorates the Esplanade outside the gate des Dunes. The Remparts form an airy and agreeable walk, running uninterruptedly round the town, and commanding views in all directions, over the sea and port, and over the high ground to the E. occupied in turn by the camps of Caligula, Henry VIII., and Napoleon, and along the roads to Calais and Paris. In one corner of the walls is the Château, or old Castle, flanked by high round towers, and divided from the town by a fosse, but now much modernised externally, and converted into a barrack. The Emp. L. Napoleon was confined here after his abortive attempt to excite an insurrection in his favour, Aug. 6, 1840. In the midst of the old town, behind the Hôtel de Ville, rises the antique tower of the Beffroi.

The Cathedral, a large modern Italian building of good proportions, the dome of which rises to a height of nearly 300 ft., has been in progress since 1827, being built by subscription set on foot by a simple priest and self-taught architect, the Abbé Huffreingue, on the site of a Gothic ch. pulled down at the Revolution. Beneath it extends a very curious ancient crypt, supported on 2 rows of piers, 315 ft. long and 140 wide at the transepts, supposed to be the substructions of the ch. built in the 12th cent. by Ida of Lorraine, mother of Godfrey of Bouillon: an inscription, however, in the vault attributes it to the 7th cent. The tradition is, that a boat, without sails or oars, brought an image of the Virgin to this spot. It was a frequent object of pilgrimage in the middle ages, and of late years the custom has revived.

There are several Nunneries in the old town; that of the Ursulines is at No. 2, Rue de la Paille. The sisters, 40 or 50 in number, instruct a pension for young ladies. The Sœurs de Bon Secours (Rue St. Martin, No. 20) devote themselves to attend on the sick, and their services are much esteemed by the poor. The convent of the "Dames de la Visitation," about  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. out of the town, near the St. Omer road, is the largest, and has a fine chapel, open on Sundays.

Le Sage, the author of Gil Blas, who repaired to Boulogne in the latter years of his life to stay with his son, a canon of the cathedral, died 1747, in a house, No. 3, Rue du Château, as an inscription over the door points out. The existing building, however, is of much more recent date, and only occupies the site of the original house. Churchill the poet also died at Boulogne, whither he had come on a visit to John Wilkes, then a voluntary exile from England. Attempts made by the priests to obtain access to the dying man, in order to convert him to popery, were stoutly repelled by Wilkes.

There are 4 English Chapels here: one in the Rue du Temple, built by subscription of the English (1828), capable of containing 1000 persons, and two others in the lower town; the other in the Rue St. Martin in the Haute Ville.

The Poste aux Lettres is at No. 28, Rue des Vieillards; it is open from 8 A.M. to 8 P.M. The British Consul resides in the Rue des Vieillards.

In the Cemetery of the upper town are the graves of 82 female convicts from England, drowned in the wreck of the "Amphitrite," 1833, and the graves of those who perished in the Indiaman "Conqueror," 1843.

At Capecure a large flax-mill has been built, with 2 steam-engines, 6000 spindles, employing 1000 people; also other mills, foundries, &c.

Merridew, Rue de l'Écu, has an English reading-room and circulating library. Stubbs has another.

The Office for Passports is open from 9 to 2; but passports are signed at the Railway Station at all times.

On the very edge of the cliff, just above the sea-baths, a little to the E. of the port, are the scanty remains of solid brick walls known as La Tour d'Ordre (Turris Ardens, i.e. light-tower), supposed to be the foundations of a tower built by Caligula the Roman emperor, A.D. 40, when he marched to the shore of the Channel with an army of 100,000 men, boasting that he intended to invade the opposite coast of Britain, but contenting himself with gathering a few shells, which he called the spoils of the ocean. The tower is supposed to have been intended for a lighthouse, but the remains are very scanty, and from the falling of the cliff even these are likely soon to disappear.

On the same heights 18 centuries later another emperor—Napoleon—encamped an army of more than 180,000 men, designed to invade England, and placed under the command of Soult, Ney, Davoust, and Victor. Buonaparte himself, during his visits to the camp, occupied a temporary baraque, which was raised within a few yards of the Roman tower. Thence he could survey his flotilla of 2400 transports and flat-bottomed boats, and the shore on either side of the town, both under the cliff and upon the heights, bristling with batteries of cannon and mortars; while in the distance the vigilant fleets of England hovered incessantly. In one instance (1801) Nelson approached near enough to bombard the town and sink two of the floating batteries. "Boulogne," he writes, "was certainly not a pleasant place that morning; but it is not my wish to injure the poor inhabitants, and the town is spared as much as the service will admit." It is stated, however, that most of the bombs fell short, and that in excavating the new harbour many tons of them were dug out. He afterwards made an unsuccessful attempt with the boats of his squadron to cut out the flotilla in the teeth of the batteries, and burn it. Another attempt, in 1804, to burn the flotilla with fire-ships, made by Lord Keith, was attended with no better result.

The flotilla of Boulogne formed only part of the deeply laid scheme of Napoleon for the destruction of England. He designed to collect together the combined fleets of France, Spain, and Holland, which for years previously he had been constructing in the harbours of Antwerp, Brest, Cadiz, and the Mediterranean, and with a squadron of 70 ships of the line to sweep the Channel of the British. Under cover of this vast armament, he intended to have crossed over with the army of Boulogne, expecting to reach London in 5 days, where he designed to have proclaimed parliamentary reform, abolishing the monarchy and the House of Peers and substituting a republic!! The troops of the Boulogne expedition were so nicely drilled, and every man so accurately informed of the boat which was to transport him, that at a preliminary review, in 10½ minutes 25,000 were embarked; and relanded and drawn up on the shore again in 13 minutes more. The whole of these projects and combinations, however, were scattered to the winds; the fleet of England, under Sir Robert Calder, prevented the junction of those of the enemy, and Nelson finally annihilated them at Trafalgar.

A conspicuous memorial of this projected but unaccomplished invasion exists at the distance of nearly a mile from the town in the Colonne Napoleon, which surmounts the heights traversed by the road to Calais. It was begun by the grand army assembled for the invasion of England, as a monument to their leader and emperor. The first stone was laid by Marshal Soult, 1804; but its construction was discontinued after the departure of the troops, and the withdrawal of the subscriptions which they contributed out of their pay. Under Louis XVIII. it was resumed, with the ostensible design of commemorating the restoration of the Bourbons. In consequence, however, of the revolution of July it has resumed its original destination; and having been purged of carved fleurs-de-lis and royalist inscriptions, was dedicated, 1841, as a monument to Buonaparte, and surmounted by a bronze statue of him in his coronation robes by Bosio, and one of that sculptor's best works, while bronze bas-reliefs decorate the base. The pillar is of the Doric order, and 50 mètres=164 ft. high, exclusive of the statue, 16 ft., and is constructed of marble from the quarries of Marquise. A winding stair leads up to the top, whence a view may be had of the white cliffs of England. The hills for miles round Boulogne are still crowned with decaying redoubts, constructed by Napoleon.

½ m. past the column a monument of marble commemorates the distribution of the Order of the Legion of Honour by Buonaparte to his troops, during one of his visits to the camp.

Nearer at hand, attached to a small group of houses down in the hollow, 1½ m. from Boulogne, a few hundred paces from the Nap. column (1.), is the humble chapel of Jésus Flagelle; curious, because it exhibits an instance of the practice so common in the Romish Church of making votive offerings. It is resorted to by the fishermen of Boulogne and their families before they go out to sea; and they have lined its walls with votive pictures, even with lithographs, and hung its roof with models of their barks, each to commemorate some rescue from the perils of the great deep.

There is a very pretty walk to Wimille through the Val Denacre, keeping a little to the E. of the Calais road; and the valley of the Liane is rather pretty. The valley of Marquise (see above) is well worth a visit. About 4 m. off, on either side of Boulogne, along the coast, will be found huge tracts of sandy hills or dunes, occupying many square miles of land, and in some places encroaching on and destroying farms and fields. Some of these dunes are crossed by the Railway between Boulogne and Etaples.

Steamers. To Folkestone every day, and some days twice, in 2 hours.—To London: in summer every second day, in winter 2 or 3 times a-week, in 10 hours.

Railways. To Paris and Amiens. Terminus beyond the river, ½ m. from the steamboat quay. To Calais in progress. Omnibuses convey passengers holding rly. tickets between the pier and stat. gratis.

Diligences. To St. Omer; to Calais; to Samer.

ROUTE 3.

BOULOGNE TO PARIS, BY ABBEVILLE AND AMIENS—RAILWAY.

Boulogne	Kil.	Miles.
Montreuil . . . . .	39	24
Abbeville . . . . .	80	50
Amiens . . . . .	122	77
Clermont . . . . .
Creil . . . . .
Chantilly . . . . .
Paris . . . . .	255	160

BOULOGNE in Rte. 2.

4 trains daily; Exp. in 5½ and 6½, slow in 7 hrs.

Chemin de Fer du Nord. Terminus at the end of the bridge, on l. bank of the Liane.

The Railway at first follows the valley of the Liane, and is rather pretty; it then strikes across the hills, penetrating them by a tunnel of 200 yards, through the forest of Harelol. It then comes into the dunes (see above), and emerges on the wide sandy estuary of the Canche, with the two tall lighthouses of Etaples, a decayed port. The railway skirts the sands washed by the sea at high tide, then goes over a dreary flat to Montreuil Stat. The town, of 4000 Inhab. (H. de l'Europe; H. de France), is at a little distance to the l., and is pleasantly situated on a hill crowned by a fort, recently repaired. It is principally known to Englishmen as the spot in which Sterne laid one of the scenes in the 'Sentimental Journey.' The road follows the coast until it reaches the Somme, traversing a wide desolate expanse of sandy flats and shallows, with a few vessels lying on their sides or riding at anchor.

Rue Stat., a poor and hitherto "out-of-the-way" town, with an old Ch.

Noyelle Stat. The railway runs near the N. bank of the Somme. [A branch line crosses the Somme by a long wooden viaduct just below Noyelle to St. Valery, at the mouth of the Somme. This is said to be the port whence the fleet of William the Conqueror set sail to invade England; but the honour is claimed by another St. Valery, in Normandy. It is a characteristic specimen of an old maritime fortress. On the shore is a ruined tower called Tour ed Harold. It is partially resorted to as a watering-place.]

The Rly. runs close by the ford of Blanchetaque, where Edw. III. crossed the Somme with his army before the battle of Crécy. The ford is passable only at low water. The tide, rising immediately after, arrested the pursuit of the French forces, and compelled them to ascend the l. bank, while the English pursued their way up the rt.

The Somme is crossed by a bridge of 2 arches before reaching

Abbeville Stat.—Inns (none good): H. de l'Europe; de France; Tête de Bœuf. This is a town of 20,000 Inhab., which, from its situation on the river Somme, is accessible for vessels of 150 tons. Those who will penetrate into its narrow and filthy streets will find some quaint specimens of ancient domestic architecture, timber houses, &c., but the chief object of interest, is

The dilapidated Ch. of St. Wolfram. The W. front, and 5 first arches of the nave, are a portion of a magnificent design, never carried out, commenced in the reign of Louis XII., under the Cardinal George d'Amboise. The façade is a splendid example of the flamboyant style, consisting of three gorgeous portals, surmounted by a pediment, and flanked by two towers; the whole covered with the richest flowing tracery, or panelling; the niches being filled with statues. The central door is curiously carved. The remainder of the church is a mean continuation of the first plan. The prison is a fragment of the old Castle of the Counts of Ponthieu. The Maison Selincourt (Pl. St. Pierre) is a curious house. The ramparts form a shady promenade. M. Boucher de Perthes has a gallery of paintings and collections of geology, including wrought flint hatchets found in the vale of the Somme, in the gravel of the Drift.

[About 6 m. E. of Abbeville is the Abbey Ch. of St. Riquier, a very splendid and interesting Gothic edifice, well preserved, having a beautiful flamboyant W. front, in the centre of which rises an elegant tower; while beneath it opens the main portal, having statues in its top and sides. "The details of the front are exquisite, well arranged, and well executed." The interior is also very fine; the nave flamboyant, the choir apparently earlier. On the walls of the treasury are curious and ancient frescoes; one in the style of the "Dance of Death." It is well worth a visit. Cardinal Richelieu was abbé of St. Riquier; in his time Abbeville was a small parish belonging to the abbey.]

[From Abbeville Crécy may

visited as follows:—go through the forest of Crécy by Forêt l'Abbaye, which will give you a good view of Abbeville as you leave it, and of the village of Crécy as you approach it. At Crécy see the windmill, tower of Edward III., the Vallée de Clères, and the stone cross of the King of Bohemia. These two last may be seen en route by taking on your return the road to Hesdin, in which case you may also see on your way one or two chapels said to have been erected on the graves of the French who fell in the flight. Calculate on 2 hrs. going, 1 hr. there, and, if by Hesdin,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  for returning. The wood seen on the l., at a little distance from the road, is a part of the forest of Crécy; obscure in itself, but renowned for a victory gained in its precincts, Aug. 26th, 1346, by Edward III. and his 40,000 men over the French army of Philip of Valois 100,000 strong, commanded by the Count d'Alençon, which still, after the lapse of ages, remains one of the most brilliant in English annals. Here, upon that memorable day, to the winning of which the cannon, used, according to some, for the first time, contributed less than the clothyard shafts of the English yeomen, there fell, on the side of the French, the Kings of Bohemia and Majorca, the Duke of Lorraine, the Count d'Alençon (the king's brother), with 1200 knights, 1500 gentlemen, 5000 men at arms, and 30,000 infantry. Here it was that the Black Prince gained his spurs, and the feathers which the princes of Wales bear to this day.]

From Abbeville to Amiens the line is carried up the valley of the Somme along its l. bank, with extensive excavations for peat.

Pont - Rémy Stat. The village is on the rt. bank of the Somme, and has a large steam-mill for weaving canvas and sailcloth.  $6\frac{1}{2}$  m. off lies Ailly le Haut Clocher, so called from the lofty steeple of its fine Ch., in a style resembling Early English Gothic.

Picquigny Stat. The ruined castle, close to the Church, with its terraces, mentioned in Mad. de Sévigné's 'Letters,' was built at the end of the 15th cent. This place gives its name to a Treaty, signed 1475, between Edward IV. and Louis XI., who met on the bridge (blown up 1814 to arrest the march of the Prussians); but so distrustful of each other, that a barrier of stout palisades and wooden bars, "such as the cages of lions are made of," says De Comines, was raised to divide them, leaving space between the bars only wide enough to allow them to shake hands.

Before reaching Amiens the railway passes through some fine meadows, in which is situated the Amiens race-course, one of the best in France.

AMIENS STAT.—Inns: H. de France et d'Angleterre; H. du Rhin; H. du Nord, near the rly., good, clean, and cheap.

Railways to Paris; to Brussels, Lille, and Calais; and to Boulogne.

Amiens is an industrious manufacturing town of 56,000 Inhab., formerly capital of Picardy, now chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Somme, and situated on that river, which passes through the town split into 11 branches, and renders essential service in turning the water-wheels of many of the numerous manufactories, whose tall chimneys are seen rising above the other buildings, and are clustered around the outskirts. The weaving of cotton velvets, chiefly for Spanish consumption, and canvas, and the spinning of cotton and woollen yarn, are the principal branches of industry. Amiens is the cradle of the cotton manufacture of France, which dates no farther back than 1773.

The object which deservedly concentrates the attention of travellers at Amiens is the Cathedral, one of the noblest Gothic edifices in Europe. It was begun 1220, only two years later than Salisbury, though in a much more mature style than that edifice. It was designed and begun by the architect Robert de Luzarches, but continued and completed, 1269, by Thomas and Regnault de Cormont, except the W. front, not finished until the end of the 14th cent. Three vast and deeply recessed portals lead into it, the arches supported by a long array of statues in niches instead of pillars, while rows of statuettes supply the place of mouldings, so that the whole forms one mass of sculpture; an arrangement of constant occurrence in French Gothic, though rare in English. The sculpture of these porches merits attention; over the centre door the bas-relief represents the Last Judgment; the statues are those of the 12 Apostles. Over the rt. hand porch are the Death and Assumption of the Virgin; over that on the l. is the legend of St. Firmin, the apostle of Picardy. Above the portals runs a colossal line of French kings, behind which appears a noble wheel-window; and the whole is flanked by two stately but unfinished towers.

"The interior is one of the most magnificent spectacles that architectural skill can ever have produced. The mind is filled and elevated by its enormous height (140 ft.), its lofty and many-coloured clerestory, its grand proportions, its noble simplicity. The proportion of height to breadth is almost double that to which we are accustomed in English cathedrals; the lofty, solid piers, which bear up this height, are far more massive in their plan than the light and graceful clusters of our English churches, each of them being a cylinder with 4 engaged columns. The polygonal E. apse, and the arrangement which puts the walls at the outside edge of the buttresses, and thus forms interior chapels all round, in addition to the aisles, gives a vast multiplicity of perspective below, which fills out the idea produced by the gigantic height of the centre. Such terms will not be considered extravagant when it is recollected that the vault is half as high again as the roof of Westminster Abbey."—Whewell.

The entire length is 442 ft. The general character of the architecture is that of the early English, except the geometric tracery of the windows. The triforium is glazed, which gives great lightness to the interior. Just within the central porch are 2 fine brass effigies of bishops; that on the l. as you enter is Evrard de Fouilly, who laid the first stone of the church; that on the rt. Geoffroy d'Eu, "learned," as his epitaph tells us, "in medicine as well as theology." The splendid pulpit, the work of an artist of Amiens, Dupuis, is supported by statues of Faith, Hope, and Charity.

Placed at the crossing of the transept, the spectator may admire the 3 magnificent rose windows, all of elaborate tracery and varied patterns, filled with rich stained glass, each nearly 100 ft. in circumference, which form a great ornament to this church, and surpass everything of the sort which England can show. The font in the N. transept is an oblong trough of stone, probably of the 10th or 11th cent.

Round the wall which separates the choir from its aisles runs a low screen of stone, enclosing a series of curious sculptures, in high relief, representing on the S. side the legend of St. Firmin, and on the N. the acts and death of John the Baptist. They date from the end of the 15th cent.

The head of St. John the Baptist, brought from Constantinople at the time of the Crusades, has always been considered, and still remains, the most valuable relic possessed by this church. It is deposited in the side chapel dedicated to St. John. Several other heads of St. John existed before the Revolution in other churches of France, and one, indeed, in the neighbouring abbey of St. Acheul; but this, it was maintained, was the genuine one. Since the Revolution, the skull has been reduced to the frontal bone and upper jaw.

The choir, terminating in a semi-circular E. end, the elegantly groined roof resting on compressed lancet-pointed arches, yields in beauty to no part of the church. It is also especially distinguished for the elaborately carved woodwork of its 116 stalls: in variety of invention and delicacy of execution there is nothing finer of the kind in Europe. The intricate details of the tabernacles and lace-like parapets, the bold drawing, and effective though coarse expression in the bas-reliefs, representing subjects from Holy Writ, the Life of the Virgin, &c., and the close imitation of nature in the twining tendrils and playful foliage of the vine and other plants, deserve minute attention. The carvers were Arnoult Boullin and Alex. Huet, menuisiers of Amiens: the work was finished in 1520. To appreciate the vast proportions and examine the details of this cathedral, the visitor ought to ascend to the triforium gallery; thence he may mount the tower and enjoy the view over the vale of the Somme, remarking in his ascent the turret with the stone table, where Henri IV. posted himself to watch the retreat of the Spaniards in 1597. The roof is a wonderful piece of carpentry, 46 ft. high; a forest of oak and chestnut must be contained in it.

Within the cathedral of Amiens Edward III. did homage for Guienne to Philippe of Valois, 1329; and here, in 1385, Isabel of Bavaria was married to the idiot king Charles VI. The best description of Amiens Cathedral is that of M. Gilbert.

St. Germain's, in a dirty back street, S.W. of the cathedral and apparently coeval with it, is a very fine specimen of a town church, of late Dec. verging into Flamboyant, surmounted by a tower and spire at N.W. angle, a very striking feature. Obs. the W. door, marvelously enriched, canopied, and cusped, the graceful interior, and the vaulting perfect in construction. This ch. is a perfect study for an architect, and well worthy of investigation. (T.) In the Hôtel de Ville, a building of 1600, the treaty of "the Peace of Amiens" was signed, 1802, by the plenipotentiaries, Joseph Buonaparte for France, Lord Cornwallis for England, Chevalier Azara for Spain, and M. Schimmelpenninck for Holland. The hall is hung with pictures of the modern French school, of slight merit. There is a Museum, containing some antiquities, paintings, &c. Of the old castle nothing remains but the crypt, where St. Firmin is said to have suffered martyrdom in 301. No. 59, Rue des Vergeaux, is a Renaissance house.

A Boulevard surrounds the town, occupying the site of the ancient ramparts, and, being planted with trees, forms an agreeable promenade. A Citadel, however, remains, built on the rt. bank of the Somme by Henri IV., and strengthened by modern works. The Spaniards, in 1597, gained the city, which had claimed the privilege of exemption from a military garrison, through the stratagem of Hernando Tello de Porto Carrero, Spanish governor of Doullens, who, disguising himself and a band of companions as peasants, entered the town at early dawn, along with the market folk, driving a waggon laden with fruit, which he halted under the gateway. In passing the gate it was contrived that a sack of walnuts should burst; and while the unsuspecting guards were occupied on all fours scrambling for its scattered contents, the Spaniards fell on them and put them to the sword. In vain the portcullis was hastily lowered: the waggon had been drawn up so as to catch it as it fell, leaving a passage by which a party of armed Spaniards, in ambush outside, gained easy admittance. Henri IV., not yet firmly fixed in his throne, felt the loss of Amiens as a severe blow, and hastened to recover it. He was aided in the siege and capture of the town, 1598, by a body of 4000 Englishmen, under Sir Arthur Savage, furnished by Queen Elizabeth. On the opposite side of the town to the railway stat. is a magnificent promenade, with shady avenues of trees, a lake, &c.

Amiens was the Samarobrica of the Romans; and the Amiani, the Gallic inhabitants of the district (whence the name Amiens), are mentioned by Cæsar. Here Merovée was proclaimed king by being raised on the shield of his victorious soldiers.

The following eminent persons were born in the town or its vicinity:—Peter the Hermit, preacher of the first crusade; Ducange, author of the 'Glossarium ad Scriptores mediæ et infimæ Latinitatis;' a statue of him (Du Fresne, Seigneur du Cange) has been set up in the square near the Stat.; Gresset the poet, author of 'Vertvert'; Delambre the astronomer; also Gabrielle d'Estrées, the cherished mistress of Henri IV.

The Abbey of St. Acheul, on the outskirts of the town, was converted into a Jesuits' college under the Restoration. The crypt under the church contains some ancient tombs and bas-reliefs. At St. Acheul, 90 ft. above the Somme, and at other places in its valley, wrought flints have been discovered at a considerable depth in deposits of gravel along with bones of extinct animals. The age of these deposits is not proved.

Amiens is celebrated among gourmands for its pâtés de canard.

Railway to Rouen in progress (Rte. 5); to Tergnier, ditto.

The Lille, Brussels (Rte. 1), and Boulogne lines meet at Longueau Junct. Stat., where is a Buffet.

Soon after quitting Amiens large peat-works are seen. The road soon begins to ascend rapidly in order to attain the high plains of Picardy.

Roves Stat. Ruins of a Castle frequented by Henri IV. and La Belle Gabrielle (d'Estrées). It reaches the summit level, describing a great curve between

Breteuil Stat. and

St. Just Stat.

The earthworks are exceedingly heavy between St. Just and

Clermont Stat.

Clermont-sur-Oise (Inn: Croissant), a prettily situated town (Pop. 3260) on the slopes of a hill, surmounted by the Castle, which is now a Penitentiary for women, and modernized. It was, however, an important fortress from the 10th to the 16th cent.; taken by the English 1359 and 1434, and by Henri IV. from the troops of the League 1595. The elder Condé, disgusted with the Court, retired hither, 1615, and fortified himself against attacks.

From the agreeable promenade du Chatellier, which surrounds its walls, jutting out over the valley, a beautiful view of its winding stream is obtained. Cassini de Thury, the astronomer and geographer, was a native of Clermont.

Liancourt Stat. A pretty town. Near this place are seen the first vines.

Creil Junction Stat. (Buffet; H. de la Couronne; H. de l'Épée), a town of 3681 Inhab., on the l. bank of the Oise. On the island in the Oise are remains of the old Castle in which Charles VI. was shut up during his madness; and near it a small and curious desecrated Ch., St. Evremont, in ruins.

There is a parish Church, peculiar in ground-plan, and a massive bridge, also a large delft manufactory, at Creil.

Creil stands at the point of junction of 5 lines of railway: 1. to Paris direct; 2. to Paris by Pontoise (12 m. longer); 3. to Beauvais (Rte. 4); 4. to Cologne by Compiègne (Rte. 183), Noyon, St. Quentin, and Erquelines; 5. to England and Belgium by Amiens.

The direct line to Paris, finished 1859, turns out of that to Pontoise (see below) soon after leaving Creil Stat. The valley of the Oise is crossed on a bridge of 3 arches. The rly. traverses the stone-quarries of St. Maximin, which for ages furnished building-stone for Paris. Some of the old galleries are bridged over by the line, which is carried in a deep and long cutting, out of which was obtained free-stone for the construction of the Viaduct of Chantilly, a handsome structure of 36 arches, 66 ft. high in the centre, where they rest on piles.

Chantilly Junct. Stat. (Inns: H. du Grand Cerf; H. de la Pelouze, tolerably comfortable; H. d'Angleterre), a town of 2930 Inhab. The splendid château, built by the grandson of the Grand Condé, in the reign of Louis XV., was levelled by the mob at the first Revolution. The Great Condé here spent his latter years, after retiring from military life, in the society of Racine, Boileau, Bossuet, and the other literary men of his age. The Stables remain—a splendid pile, capable of lodging 180 horses, but unfinished, at the extremity of the Grande Rue, rt.

Condé took great pride in this beautiful retreat, and pleasure in embellishing it; and when Louis XIV., who had a claim on it, indicated a desire to obtain possession, he said, "Vous êtes le maître: mais j'ai une grâce à demander à V. M., c'est de me laisser à Chantilly comme votre concierge;" and the king had the moderation not to interfere. Condé's affairs were never in a more desperate condition than at the moment when he was honoured by a visit from his cousin and sovereign, 1671; nevertheless, nothing could exceed the magnificence of the entertainment, rendered memorable by the suicide of Vatel the cook, who ran himself through with his sword in despair because the fish did not arrive in time for dinner.*

* See Mad. de Sévigné's Letters.

Chantilly, one of the most beautiful spots in the vicinity of Paris, abounds in interest and in souvenirs of its most distinguished owner. A noble author,* who visited it in 1841, has touchingly described its vast natural forest, its limpid and purling streams, its green Arbele poplars, which have taken root in the ruins of the Grand Château, and now quite overshadow them, its green turf drives, and its hedges of hawthorn. Le Petit Château, built by the Montmorencys, is one of the most charming monuments of the style of the Renaissance in France. It is surrounded by water, and consequently the lower story is scarce habitable. The state rooms and gallery were adorned down to 1852 with the Battles of the Grand Condé, painted by Van der Meulen, now removed to Twickenham.

The Chapel contains a rich altar-screen in the style of the Renaissance, brought from Ecouen: a series of fine painted glass windows by B. Palissy, representing the story of Psyche, after Raphael's designs, is also now at Twickenham. After the death of the Duc de Bourbon, the last of the line of Condé, Chantilly became the property of the Duc d'Aumale. Le Petit Château is allowed to be shown, and ought to be visited. The estate was sold December, 1853, in conformity with the confiscation decree of Louis Napoleon, nominally to the English bankers Coutts and Co., for 11 million francs. An Hospital, built and endowed by the last Prince de Condé, remains a monument of his munificence to the town.

The Jardin Anglais, laid out before the Revolution, is very curious; the French garden is in bad taste—it has a noble Terrace.

The park and grounds are very beautiful, and are readily shown to strangers. The forest adjoining them has an extent of 6700 acres. There is some very fine turf here, and therefore Chantilly is the Newmarket and the Goodwood of France; and the principal horse-races of France are held here in May, September, and October.

The body of the aged Admiral Coligny, the noblest victim of the massacre of St. Bartholomew, after having been hung up by the heels on the gallows of Montfaucon, was secretly brought hither by Montmorency, and buried in the parish ch. without the head, which was conveyed to Cath. de Medicis. Here are interred the hearts of the princes of Condé.

* Lord Mahon:—Life of Condé.

Chantilly is famed for its silk lace (blonde, so called from the light colour), made here to a less extent in the town itself than in the 20 or 30 neighbouring communes, the artificers being women and children. There are now 7 large establishments; but they only give out the patterns and materials: the work is executed at the homes of the lace-makers.

Branch Rly., Chantilly to Senlis.

A fine view is seen in crossing the Viaduct of 15 arches over the Thève valley. Just below appear the Ponds, or Etangs de Comelle; on the dam at the margin is a modern Gothic Castle, called Château de la Loge de Viarmes, on the site of one said to have been built by Queen Blanche of Castille, mother of St. Louis. Three avenues traverse the ponds; and here grand stag-hunts were held by the royal princes.

Not far from this is the ruined Cistercian Abbey of Royaumont, founded by St. Louis, 1230, who often retired hither from the world, tending the sick and eating with the monks. A wall and turret of the church, with bits of the refectory and cloister, alone remain, and are now converted into a cotton-mill. The valley of the Oise in this vicinity is very rich.

Orry la Ville Stat.

Luzarches Survilliers Stat. The town lies on rt.

Luzarches has an interesting Church of the end of the 12th or beginning of the 13th cent.: its portal is ornamented with curious sculptures of martyred saints; and a fragment of a square donjon and a chapel, remains of a castle of the French kings, exist on the top of the hill.

Louvres Stat. Near this, at Survilliers, is the Château de Morfontaine, once the property of Jos. Buonaparte.

Villiers le Bel Stat. Coach to Ecouen. Pierrefitte Stat.

[Ecouen. The chief building is the Château of the Constable Anne de Montmorency, built in the reign of Francis I. It was converted by Napoleon into a seminary for the education of the daughters of members of the Legion of Honour, and placed under the direction of Madame Campan. It is now subordinate to the chief establishment of the order of St. Denis. The principal front was destroyed at the Revolution, the other 3 are well preserved. Within are traces of frescoes, of 16th cent., which were white-washed by Madame Campan. The elegant chapel, ornamented with carvings in wood and a richly-decorated chimney-piece, is a chef-d'œuvre of the style of the Renaissance.]

Our rly. falls into the loop-line from Pontoise shortly before reaching St. Denis Stat. See below.

Creil to Paris by Pontoise.

The railroad, hitherto carried along the high land of Picardy (chalk in part), here enters the valley of the Oise.

St. Leu d'Esserent Stat. The Abbey Church (quite close to the Stat.) is one of the finest in the district. It has 2 W. steeples, one only finished, and 2 towers, in place of transepts, flanking the choir. The W. front shows a transition from round to pointed; the rest of the ch. is pure early pointed, grand in proportions, with a well-planned chevet. Portions of cloister and of the abbey buildings remain.

Beaumont-sur-Oise Stat., a town of 2000 Inhab., surmounted by a ruined tower, part of its old castle. Church 13th cent.

Isle Adam Stat.

Auvers Stat. Fine Church. Pretty country to

Pontoise Stat. (Inns: Grand Cerf; H. des Messageries), a town of 5400 Inhab., occupies a steep slope on the river Oise, here traversed by a bridge, whence its name. It is famous for calves and flour, and supplies Paris with these two articles. The Vionne, which here joins the Oise, turns 30 corn-mills.

The Ch. of St. Maclois is an interesting edifice presenting various styles; there is some painted glass in a chapel near the principal entrance. The Palais de Justice is a Gothic building.

Pontoise is a place of some historical notoriety. St. Louis, attacked by a violent illness, was here warned by a voice from heaven to assume the cross—1244. During the hard winter of 1437, when the ground was covered with snow, the English took the town by surprise, through the ingenious ruse of Talbot, who clothed his soldiers in white, under cover of which, in the obscurity of the night, they reached the foot of the walls unobserved by the garrison.

[Coaches to Gisors and Chaumont.

Gisors.—Inn: H. de l'Ecu. An ancient town of 3500 Inhab., prettily situated on the Epte. Its venerable ramparts are converted into agreeable promenades, whose plantations encircle the ruins of its commanding Castle, once the bulwark of Normandy on the side of France, and still retaining many interesting characteristics of a feudal fortress. The octagonal Donjon especially, and its enclosure, crowning the top of a high artificial conical mound, are of the most solid construction, and are works of the 12th cent., built by our Henry II. The walls of a dungeon under one of the towers have been curiously carved with a nail by some unfortunate prisoner. At an interview which took place here between Henry and Louis VII., the two monarchs agreed to assume the cross for the recovery of Jerusalem.

The Ch. of SS. Gervais and Protas presents a combination of styles, and an abundance of uncouth sculptures: it has a choir built in the 13th cent. by Blanche of Castille (it is said); the nave and remainder of the ch. are of a later period. The portal, richly carved, is of the latest style of French florid Gothic. The organ-loft, and an emaciated monumental effigy, both attributed to Jean Goujon, merit notice, and there is some fine painted glass in the windows. In the S. aisle is a singular twisted column, surrounded by spiral bands of tracery.

A timber-framed house of picturesque antique construction deserves the attention of the artist.]

Herblay Stat.

[Excursion to St. Leu Taverny, celebrated for its château and park, which, before the first Revolution, belonged to the Duc d'Orléans, and was the favourite residence of Madame de Genlis. In the time of Napoleon it was given to Hortense, the Queen of Holland, and after the Restoration became the property of the Duc de Bourbon, who ended his days there miserably and mysteriously, being found hanging to the window-bolt (espagnolette) of his bed-room. Not a trace remains of the château of the last Condé, and even the grounds are all altered. It was purchased by the Bande Noire, sold for its materials, and streets built on the site, one appropriately called Rue des Vandales. The Orleans family have erected on the spot an octagonal monument to the family of Condé.]

The Comte de St. Leu, ex-king of Holland, father of the Emperor Napoleon III., and other members of the Buonaparte family, are buried in the village ch., rebuilt by the Emp. Louis Napoleon.]

Enghien Stat. Enghien les Bains (H. des Quatre Pavillons) is a very pretty village on the borders of a pond, the Etang de Montmorency, with a Bathing Establishment supplied with medicinal waters from a sulphureous spring. Not only on this account, but for the beauty of its situation and environs, it is much frequented by the Parisians as a sort of French Richmond. The walks in the Parc de St. Gratien are pleasant.

[An omnibus runs from Enghien Stat. to Montmorency, about  $1\frac{1}{4}$  m., whose beauties are much exaggerated by the Parisians.]

Montmorency is a dirty little town 14 m. distant from Paris,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  m. from Enghien. Its fine Gothic Ch., of the 15th cent., contains some good painted glass.

In the house called l'Ermitage, about  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. off, Rousseau resided 1756-58, and wrote there his 'Nouvelle Héloïse.' It was then the property of Madame d'Epinay, and really a peasant's cottage, fitted up for Rousseau, to prevent his returning to Geneva. It was afterwards occupied by Grétry the composer, who died here 1813. It still exists, but incorporated into a large and more modern mansion. Nothing of Rousseau now remains except perhaps in the garden.]

The line is carried past one of the detached forts (la Briche), which surround Paris, and skirts (rt.) the margin of the Seine shortly before reaching

5 St. Denis Junct. Stat. (a town of 22,000 Inhab., nearly enclosed within a semicircle of modern fortifications), about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. from

The Abbey of St. Denis, one of the most important and wealthy religious foundations in France: its abbots were powerful potentates; Turpin was chancellor to Charlemagne, and Suger prime minister to St. Louis.

The Abbey Church has been the burial-place of the kings of France from the time of Dagobert (638), and is a building of great interest, in spite of the dilapidations of revolutionary violence, which the restorations carried on under Napoleon, the Bourbons, Louis-Philippe, and the present Emperor, have not entirely repaired, and can never atone for. Independently of its historic interest, the works lately executed have made it one of the most magnificent and gorgeous Gothic edifices in the world. The W. front, flanked and surmounted by 2 towers (one rebuilt since 1847), is in the Romanesque style, having been raised by Abbot Suger, 1140-44. The E. end of the choir and semicircle of chapels is of the same age and style. It was in the porch of St. Denis that Henri IV. abjured the Protestant faith. Over the central portal, which is semicircular, is a bas-relief of the Last Judgment. A vestibule, crowded with piers to support the towers, leads into the nave, which was built 1281, and is of remarkable width (40 ft.), considering that the roof is of stone. It is about 92 ft. high and 354 ft. long. The choir is, like that of Canterbury, narrower than the nave.

In the chapels on the l. (N.) as you enter the nave, Obs. some bas-reliefs in stone from St. Pierre, Chartres, 1543 (Acts of the Apostles); others of 14th and 15th cents.; some old glass windows, 15th cent. ; martyrdom of St. Barbe, &c.

In the rt. (S.) chapels are carved stalls from a ch. near Beauvais, and from the Château de Gaillon.

At the crossing, in front of the raised choir, is the High Altar. On the rt. of it is the monument of Dagobert, a singular Gothic structure, raised to his memory by St. Louis; the effigy is modern; that of his Queen Nanthilda is a fine work of the 13th cent. ; so are the bas-reliefs representing the pretended vision of a hermit, who reported that he had seen Dagobert in a boat pursued and scourged by devils, but defended by St. Denis, St. Martin, and St. Maurice.

In the midst of the nave rise 3 splendid monuments, in the style of the Renaissance, (a) of Louis XII. and Anne of Brittany, whose recumbent effigies in marble are surrounded by 12 sitting statues, in niches, of the Apostles, admirable for design, attitude, and execution. The bas-reliefs round the base represent the battle of Agnadel and the entry of Louis into Milan. This monument is the work of Jean Juste of Tours, 1591. (b) Of Henri II. and Catherine of Medicis his queen, said to have been designed by Philibert Delorme and executed by Germain Pilon. The royal effigies are repeated twice; below recumbent as dead, above kneeling: at the 4 corners are the Cardinal Virtues in bronze, copied from 4 of the king's mistresses!

(c) The cenotaph of Francis I. and Claude his queen, begun 1552, from designs of Germain Pilon, and others. The recumbent effigies are by the skilful hand of Philibert Delorme, as well as the elegant arabesques which decorate the canopy. The frieze running round the base of the monument represents, in a series of marble bas-reliefs of good execution, the battles of Cerisol and of Marignano. The canopy is surmounted by duplicate statues of Francis and his queen, with their 3 children.

In the N. transept are placed monumental columns to Henri III., assassinated by Jacques Clement 1589, and to Francis II., husband of Mary Queen of Scots, its base surrounded by weeping angels. In the S. transept is a pillar in memory of Henri IV. The effigy of the Breton knight Du Guesclin, whose valour and renown procured for him, as Turenne's did in later times, burial in the company of kings, but availed not to save their ashes from sacrilegious dispersion by the republicans; Du Guesclin's is remarkable for its diminutive size.

The choir and its side chapels, elevated considerably above the nave, glow with modern decoration in painting and gilding. The windows are mostly filled with painted glass of modern dates, a very small portion of the old having escaped the fury of the Revolution. The chapel of the Virgin alone retains some of that with which Abbot Suger decorated the building in 1140: it is regarded as the oldest in France. A red flag suspended behind the altar supplies the place of the once-venerated Oriflamme, the standard of the realm of France, but not used in battle since the time of Charles VII. It was originally the church flag of the Abbey of St. Denis, which was delivered by the abbot to the military guardian of the church whenever he went forth to fight its battles, and was supposed to secure victory to those who bore it. It supplanted St. Martin's cloak, which had previously served as the royal standard of France.

A flight of steps on either side of the choir leads down into the crypt beneath it. Here, along the aisle, are arranged chronologically the monuments of the kings of France from the time of Clovis. The statues called Clovis King of the Franks, and his Queen Clotilda, were brought from the portal of the church at Corbeil on the Seine at the Revolution. They are supposed to be works of the 11th or 12th cent., and are curious specimens of royal costume: the filleting of the queen's long hair is worth notice. Those of kings preceding the 13th cent. consist of rudely-sculptured effigies executed by order of St. Louis, of lias limestone—the others are of marble. His own bust and that of his queen, with statues of his two sons, painted and gilt, follow next in a separate chapel. The more modern statues of the sovereigns of the house of Valois and Bourbon are of white marble. The series is closed with those of Louis XVI., Marie Antoinette, the Duc de Berri, &c., executed for the Monument Expiatoire destined for the spot where the Duc de Berri was assassinated, but removed to the darkest corner of the crypt after the July revolution: in conception and execution they appear nearly the worst of the whole.

This long range of Royal tombs is now quite empty, in consequence of a decree of the Convention of 1793 ordering the destruction of the tombs of the ci-devant kings at St. Denis. In the course of 3 days 51 tombs were opened, rifled, and demolished; and the bodies of kings, queens, and princes, in every stage of decay, cast out in an indiscriminate heap into 2 trenches, hastily dug without the walls of the church, after being subjected to every species of brutal indignity. A soldier with his sabre cut the beard from the nearly perfect corpse of Henri IV. to wear it as a moustache on his own lip; and the valiant Turenne's body, so little injured by time that the likeness to his portrait was still recognised, was stuck into a glass case, and made a show to gratify idle curiosity. The broken monuments were conveyed, along with relics of saints and church-plate, to Paris, and owe their preservation and restoration to the praiseworthy zeal and care of M. le Noir, founder of the Musée des Petits Augustins. For 12 years after this sacrilege the Abbey Ch. of St. Denis, stripped of its lead to furnish bullets, remained roofless; having first been offered for sale for the value of the building-materials, and next used as a market-house. Napoleon, however, undertook its restoration, and caused the desecrated sepulchral vaults of the Bourbons to be fitted up as a mausoleum for his own family. His design, frustrated by the Restoration, is likely once more to be carried out by the Emperor Louis Napoleon. The vaults below the high altar contain the confused mass of royal bones, withdrawn by order of Louis XVIII. from the ditch into which they had been cast, together with the burnt remains of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, the coffins of Louis XVIII. and others of his family. In an obscure corner lies the last Condé, father of the Duc d'Enghien, who died at St. Leu.

Between 1806-47, 290,000*l.* have been expended on the restoration of St. Denis. Napoleon's commencement was followed up by the Restoration; but what had then been done was not considered in good taste by Louis Philippe, who, besides repairing and improving, pulled down and replaced much that had been put up by his two predecessors. The present Emperor has intrusted the restoration of the ch. to the care of M. Viollet le Duc, than whom there is no more experienced architect in Europe, from his knowledge of Gothic. Under his management great changes have been made, with the object of bringing back the ch. to the state in which it was in 1707, and the works are still proceeding.

E. of the ch. is La Maison Impériale, occupying the buildings of the ancient abbey, and devoted to the education of 400 daughters of members of the order of La Légion d'Honneur.

There are numerous trains to St. Denis, and omnibuses also, from Paris.

The Rly. crosses the canal de St. Denis by a skew iron bridge, the line of Fortifications of Paris, and the Chemin de Fer de la Ceinture, passing (rt.) the hill of Montmartre and the Hospital Lariboisière.

PARIS. — Terminus, perhaps the grandest railway station in Europe, Place Roubaix.—See Murray's Handbook of Paris.

Inns: — GRAND HOTEL, Boulevard des Capucines; H. DU LOUVRE—prices of rooms diminish in the upper floors. Two colossal establishments, making up 500 beds each at least: the rooms are luxuriously furnished, and everything on a magnificent scale; the chief complaint is want of attendance: table-d'hôte of 200 and 300 persons.

Hôtel Meurice, Rue Rivoli; comfortable; frequented by English and Americans: bed 3 fr. per day; breakfast, tea and coffee, with eggs, 2 fr.;

dinner at table-d'hôte, without wine, 5 fr.; lacquais-de-place 5 fr.; carriage 25 fr.; servants all round 1 fr. a-day, but less in proportion for family. Hôtel Bristol, Place Vendôme, perfectly comfortable, capital cuisine. H. Wagram, Rue Rivoli, excellent. H. du Rhin, Place Vendôme. H. de Londres, Rue Castiglione, good. N.B. In first-rate hotels dinners served in private are now charged as in London, à la carte, each dish separately, which renders the price per head very high. H. de France et de Bath, Rue St. Honoré; good, and charges moderate. H. Brighton, Rue Rivoli, clean, charges moderate—a fine view over the Tuileries garden. The hotels in the Rue de Rivoli have the great advantage of sun in winter, and a covered walk under its arcades in wet weather. H. des Princes, Rue de Richelieu; expensive. H. Windsor, Rue de Rivoli; moderate. H. Victoria, Rue Chauveau la Garde, near the Madeleine. H. de la Terrasse, Rue Rivoli, quiet; no table-d'hôte. Hôtel de Lisle and Albion, formerly Lawson's, in the Rue St. Honoré; very good.

Boarding House. Madame Guilhom's Pension, 5, Rue des Champs Elysées; a very respectable establishment. The best Restaurants are on the Boulevard des Italiens; Véron's, Vefour's, and the Trois Frères Provençaux, Palais Royal; Philippe, Rue Montorgeuil, is good and very moderate in prices.

Galignani's Reading Room, in the Rue de Rivoli, No. 224, formerly 18, Rue Vivienne, is a great resource to the Englishman in Paris: here he will find all the best newspapers of all the world; here he will meet with his friends, a list of his countrymen visiting or residing in Paris being kept here, and may supply himself with books, or subscribe to the circulating library. Galignani's Messenger is a capital paper, condensing all the news of the English papers without reference to politics. It is a comfort to have it sent after the traveller from place to place as he moves about France, which M. G. will undertake to do.

M. Xavier, Rue de la Banque, near the Bourse, keeps a very extensive [France.] assortment of English and foreign books.

Public and private carriages are stopped at the outer gate or barrier of Paris by the officers of the Octroi, whose duty it is to levy a tax upon all provisions, wines, &c. Railway baggage is also searched by them.

ROUTE 4.

CREIL TO BEAUVAIS.

A branch railway, about 16 m. long, leads from Creil (Rte. 3) to Beauvais.—Inns: Hôtel du Cygne; —d'Angleterre.

This is the chief town of the Dépt. de l'Oise: it has 13,082 Inhab. The central portion (la Cité) is very ancient, still in part enclosed by its old walls, which on the E. side have given place to airy boulevards planted with trees; many of the houses are of wood. The most conspicuous edifice, and the principal object of curiosity here, is the Cathedral. At a distance it appears a heavy and uncouth mass, overtopping the rest of the town with its prominent roof, which is supported by 3 rows of flying buttresses, surmounted by double ranges of pinnacles rising from broad buttress walls. It was commenced 1225, and the design of its founders and architects, excited to emulation by the splendour of Amiens, which had been begun 5 years earlier, seems to have been to surpass in vastness and magnificence all other Gothic edifices. They miscalculated, however, the resources both of their art and their treasury, and the result was repeated failure and final defeat; for the progress of the edifice was arrested when it was only half finished, and it remains a mere gigantic choir with transepts. As it is, however, this choir is the loftiest in the world, the elevation of the roof above the pavement being 153 ft.—13 ft. higher than that of Amiens; but though more extraordinary, it is less pleasing than it. "The extension of its dimensions upward is carried to a degree which strikes the spectator as exaggeration. Amiens is a giant in repose; Beauvais a colossus on tiptoe."—W. To increase the wonder of the building, the architect designed to support it on half the number of piers employed at present; but in spite of the iron braces used to hold the piers in their places, the walls bulged out, and the roof fell twice. The only means, then, of maintaining it was by inserting intermediate piers in the wide spaces left between the original ones. The transepts, begun 1500, under the Bishop Villiers de l'Île Adam (who, as well as his brother the Grand Master of St. John of Jerusalem, was a Beauvoisin), by the architects Jean Waast and Martin Cambriches, and finished 1555, are a fine example of the flamboyant style.

One compartment of the nave was actually begun when the architects (moved, it is said, by a vain ambition to rival the height of St. Peter's dome, and M. Angelo's masterpiece) abandoned it to raise a tower 455 ft. high, which lasted only 5 years, having tumbled down 1573. The choir "though raised to a loftiness that strikes the beholder with awe and astonishment, displays the space between the tall and slender pillars so entirely filled with glass that the whole range of windows only appears like a single zone of light supported and separated by nothing but narrow mullions situated at wide intervals."—Hope.

In the interior the effect of the admirable painted glass, executed in the best period of the art, is very rich. That in the N. and S. rose windows is attributed to Nicholas Lepot, and that in some of the side chapels to Augrand Leprince, both celebrated as artists in this line in the 16th cent. In the choir are hung 8 of the tapestries for the manufacture of which Beauvais was celebrated, and which preceded by 3 years that of Gobelins. The monument in the N. aisle of the choir of Cardinal Forbin de Janson, surmounted by his kneeling effigy, is by Nicholas Coustou, and of good workmanship.

The entrances to the Cathedral are by the transepts: the portal at the extremity of the S. transept is loaded with flamboyant decorations, though, from the fury of iconoclasts, it has lost the statues which filled the niches. It is surmounted by a noble rose window, of very rich tracery. The façade of the N. transept has very much the character of English perpendicular Gothic; its portal, deeply recessed, with feathered mouldings to the arches, retains its original carved doors, which are surmounted by a bas-relief, in the tympanum, of a genealogical tree; the escutcheons suspended from the branches.

A ruinous building called the Basse Œuvre, on the W. of the cathedral, occupying part of the space which the nave, if carried out, would have covered, is curious as one of the most ancient buildings in France (8th or 9th cent.). The lower part of the outer walls displays masonry with bonds of tiles, and tiled arches in the manner of Roman edifices. The superstructure served as a church in the 10th cent.; in its interior square piers support plain round arches. It seems never to have had a stone roof.

St. Stephen's Church. The nave exhibits the transition from Romanesque to Gothic; it is very plain, with round pier arches, and round-headed clerestory windows. The W. front resembles a plain early English front of our own country. The painted glass is very excellent. The Bishop's Palace, rebuilt in the 15th cent., has externally the aspect of a castle surrounded by walls, and its entrance flanked by 2 large round towers.

Cæsar thus mentions the Bellovaci, the ancient inhabitants of the Beauvais: "Plurimum inter Belgas Bellovacos et virtute et auctoritate, et hominum numero valere."

The most remarkable event in the annals of Beauvais is its Siege by Charles the Bold in 1472, when, being destitute of garrison, it might have fallen by a coup de main, had not its citizens boldly closed their gates in the face of an army of 80,000 Burgundians, and maintained an obstinate resistance until succour arrived from Paris. The peculiar feature in this defence was the part which the wives and daughters of the townsfolk took in it, guarding the walls, and sharing in all the perils of the men. The chief heroine, Jeanne Hachette, appeared upon the breach at the moment of the fiercest assaults, seized a Burgundian standard which a soldier was endeavouring to plant on the walls, and, hurling the bearer to the bottom, bore it off in triumph into the town. Louis XI. rewarded the valour of the citizens by releasing them from taxes, and complimented the ladies by an ordonnance authorising them to take precedence of the men in the procession of St. Angadrème, instituted to commemorate the raising of the siege. This procession is still kept up, on the Sunday nearest the 14th Oct.; the females lead the way, carrying the banner so valorously acquired by Jeanne Hachette, which is preserved in the H. de Ville. A statue of her, erected 1850, adorns the "Place."

At an earlier period (1357) Beauvais was the centre of the revolt of the serfs against their tyrannic lords, called Jacquerie, from Jacques Bonhomme (Goodman James), the familiar sobriquet of the peasantry. It extended over several provinces before it was put down by the armed force of the seigneurs banded together, and with fearful cruelty. Froissart thus describes an instance of wholesale vengeance performed upon the rebellious peasants by the Duke of Orleans, the Count of Foix, and the Captal de Buch: "They set fire to the town and burned it clean, and all the villagers of the town that they could close therein."

ROUTE 5.

AMIENS TO ROUEN—RAILWAY.

Railway in progress—Stations not yet fixed upon. Near Sommery it passes through a tunnel  $\frac{3}{4}$  m. long. It will pass near Poix (stat.).

Aumale (stat. ?).

Neufchâtel, famed for its excellent cylindrical cream-cheeses, called Bondes.

Forges les Eaux stat. A village and watering-place, possessing chalybeate springs once of some repute, but neglected at present. They are three in number—La Reinette, La Royale, and Cardinale; the two last named from Louis XIII. and Cardinal Richelieu, who visited Forges to drink the waters in 1632, the period of their highest celebrity, in consequence of Anne of Austria, after living childless for 18 years, here becoming enceinte with Louis XIV.;—an event which was attributed to a course of these waters.

Gournay, famed for its butter, is situated in the district anciently called Pays de Bray. S. of the railway,

The Church of St. Hildebert was begun in the 11th cent., but not finished until the 13th, and its W. front, with pointed arches, is perhaps of the latter date. In the interior, very massive round piers support semicircular arches inclining to the horseshoe form. The sculptured ornaments of the capitals are very remarkable for variety of pattern. Herring-bone masonry occurs in the E. end. About 5 m. from Gournay is the Abbey Church of St. Germer, as grand and large as a cathedral, of the 13th cent.

ROUEN (Rte. 8).

Jacques is a statue of Adm. Duquesne, a native of Dieppe and a Calvinist, who beat the Dutch Admiral de Ruyter off the coast of Sicily.

The Castle, rising on the tall cliff at the W. end of the town, built in the 15th cent., is now a barrack, and modernised. It contains nothing remarkable. It is, however, a picturesque object, with its group of quaint cone-headed towers, its high bridge and drawbridge spanning a chasm which runs down to the sea; it commands a fine view, and it possesses historical associations of great interest. Within these walls Henri IV., retreating before the army of the League, found shelter among his "bons Dieppois," as he called them, who had been the first to acknowledge his right to the throne, before the battle of Arques. He made choice of Dieppe from the attachment of its inhabitants, the fidelity of its governor, and the advantage of an open communication by sea with England. While here he received from Queen Elizabeth a reinforcement of 1000 Scotch and 4500 English soldiers.

In 1650 the Duchesse de Longueville, so prominent among the leaders of the Fronde, defying the royal authority, was compelled to take refuge in the castle; but being pursued even hither by the vengeance of Mazarin and Anne of Austria, she with difficulty at length escaped hence by night, and, making her way amidst storm and tempest, after innumerable escapes and adventures, embarked alone from the coast in an English vessel, dressed as a man, and at length succeeded in reaching Rotterdam.

Dieppe at present gives little token of its former celebrity and prosperity; yet 3 centuries ago it was the most flourishing seaport of France, and one of the first in Europe, and contained 60,000 Inhab. The fleets of its adventurous merchants traversed every sea: one of them, indeed (Ango), riding in the Tagus with his merchant squadron, bearded the King of Portugal in his own capital; another captured the Canaries. Its skilful and hardy sailors distinguished themselves by their geographical discoveries and early settlements in the 15th and 16th cents. Claims are put forth for their having found out the passage round the Cape of Good Hope before the Portuguese. If it were so, they certainly kept the secret so close that they have lost the credit of it. They were among the first visitors of the New World, explored Florida, opening the fur trade in Canada, and establishing the earliest European colony in Senegal; whence, as well as from the East Indies, they drew the costliest gums, gems, precious stones, metals, and tissues, with which they for a long time exclusively supplied their luxurious countrymen. The importation of elephants' teeth from Africa is said to have given rise to the pretty manufacture of carved ivory, which still exists here, and is almost peculiar to Dieppe. The rivalry of the Port of Havre, and its superior advantages in internal communication up the Seine, were the ruin of Dieppe. The persecution of the Protestants and the English bombardment inflicted severe blows in addition; and the town is only just reviving.

Dieppe, however, is much frequented as a watering-place in summer. The Etablissement des Bains is situated on the beach, nearly under the castle, and is a handsome fanciful building of wood and glass, furnished with gardens, in which a band plays in the afternoon. It is well supplied with English and French newspapers. There are bathing-machines; and a pretty structure of wood has been erected as a Bath-house and News-rooms. A series of little huts are erected at the sea-side, from which ladies issue in robes resembling those of nuns, and gentlemen in wide trousers, and thus bathe in public. Ladies are assisted by male dippers appointed for this service, if they require their aid. There are also hot baths near the beach. The ground bordering on the sea has been laid out in pretty gardens, walks, and drives, resorted to in the season by a gay throng.

Considerable parks of oysters are laid down in the Bassins de Retenue, and furnish supplies to Paris and other towns of the interior.

English Ch. service, Sunday at 1 P.M., in the old Carmelite convent chapel.

Diligences to Eu and Treport; to Fécamp, thence by rail to Havre (Rte. 18).

Steamer to Newhaven.

The Environs of Dieppe present several interesting excursions. About 2 m. to the E., on the cliffs above the sea, is a camp capable of holding many thousand men, once attributed to Cæsar, but now supposed to be Gallic, and called la Cité des Limes. It is triangular in form, defended on the land-side by a rampart in places more than 50 ft. high. It is near the road to Eu (Rte. 18), 18½ m. distant, where are the Château of Louis-Philippe and a fine Gothic Church.

The most delightful walk, however, in the neighbourhood of Dieppe is to the ruins of the **Castle of Arques*, which are far more interesting than the Cité des Limes. They are situated in the valley of the Béthune, at its junction with the Arques, less than 4 m. S.E. of Dieppe, and are celebrated for the momentous victory gained beneath the walls by Henri IV. and his devoted band of 4000 Protestants over the army of the League, 30,000 strong, under the Duc de Mayenne, which decided the fate of the Béarnais prince. The artillery from its walls contributed not a little to the result of that day. "Il en fut tirée," says Sully in his Memoirs, "une volée de quatre pièces, qui fit quatre belles rues dans leurs escadrons et bataillons." Three or four more discharges not only checked their advance, but drove them behind a bend of the valley to shelter themselves from the cannonade, and from this check they never recovered. The king, expecting the Leaguers to débouche down the valley to attack him, had disposed and intrenched his little band accordingly, when he suddenly found the advanced guard of the Duc de Mayenne in his rear, pushing forward to cut him off from his stronghold, Dieppe. Henri, with great quickness and dexterity, changed his front, threw up fresh ramparts to protect his flanks, and managed still to keep up his communication with Dieppe. Among the heroic traits of Henri on that anxious and hard-fought day, are his words to M. de Belin, an officer of the League, who scornfully inquired where Henri's forces were, to oppose so large an army: "Vous ne les voyez pas toutes, car vous ne comptez pas Dieu et le bon droit, qui m'assistent." A rude obelisk, raised on the brow of the hill, marks the spot where the deadliest struggle occurred.

The **Castle*, a fine object at a distance, occupies a commanding position on a tongue of high land between two valleys, and covers a large area with its ruins; but its shattered condition, arising less from the hazards of war and the effects of time than the dilapidations of man, has robbed it of much of its picturesqueness. For a series of years, down to the end of the last cent., the government allowed it to be pulled to pieces as a mere quarry of building materials. It is difficult to fix the age of its shapeless walls, deprived of their casing of masonry; but it is probable that the oldest parts, viz. the Donjon and its enclosure, date from the time of our Henry II., who rebuilt the castle at the end of the 12th cent.; other portions are not older than the 16th cent. The English, under Talbot and Warwick, again obtained possession of it in 1419, and kept it for 30 years, down to the capitulation of Rouen, by which it was yielded to Charles VII.

The main entrance remains flanked by 2 massive towers of immense size; and portions of the piers of the drawbridge which led to it are still standing, but the 3 successive arches of the gateway are torn into nearly shapeless rents.

Within a pleasant walk from Dieppe, at the pretty but scattered village of Varengeville, stands le Manoir d'Ango, the château of the celebrated Dieppois merchant Ango,—the host and friend of Francis I. Though now converted into a farm-house, so little of its external form is defaced that the eye can readily trace all the richness of decoration which distinguished the style of the Renaissance when it was built.

"The walls are principally constructed of black hewn flint, which, alternating with a white stone, produce a very beautiful mosaic. They retain all the sharpness of their original construction; and the sculptures with which they are enriched are of the most classical and graceful form. A number of large medallions above the grand entrance, and along the façade of the principal corps de bâtiment, are remarkable: among them the portraits of Francis I. and Diane de Poitiers. In the interior are some finely sculptured fireplaces and the remains of a large fresco; but they are only to be discovered by groping amongst the greniers, into which the apartments once so splendid have been changed."

—Miss Costello.

The Rly. to Rouen was opened 1848.

4 trains daily: time  $1\frac{1}{2}$  to 2 hrs.

Terminus near the wet-dock (bassin-à-flot).

A tunnel at Appleville, rather more than 1 m. long, carries the rly. into the valley of the Scie, up which it runs for more than 18 m., crossing it 22 times. It is enlivened by several mills in the midst of meadows and orchards.

In the outskirts of Dieppe we cross the road to Havre. The high road to Rouen is passed on a level. 1. Beyond Sanqueville are the ruins of the Castle of Charlesmesnil. The way is varied here and there at long intervals by villas or châteaux, without any claim to beauty. The numerous orchards are one of the characteristic features of Normandy, which is a cider, not wine-drinking, province.

Longueville Stat. stands on the domain of an abbey, the chief conventual building of which is now a cotton-mill. Upon the hill over the village, on l., may be perceived the ruins of the Castle of Longueville, celebrated during the wars of the Fronde, and for the courage and adventures of the Duchesse, sister of the Great Condé.

Auffay Stat. A considerable village, with several cotton-mills, a large sugar refinery, and tanneries, and a pretty Gothic ch., 16th cent.

St. Victor Stat. William the Conqueror was the founder of the abbey, and his statue occupies a niche outside of the ch. The Scie rises about 100 yards to the l. This is the nearest Stat. to Neufchâtel (Rte. 5): coaches thither.

rt. About  $2\frac{1}{2}$  m. is Tôtes. (Cygne, a small but clean country Inn.) The spinning and weaving of cotton furnish employment to the inhabitants. Mills and factories increase in number as we approach Rouen, the great centre of the cotton manufacture in France.

The summit level of the line is attained through the long and deep cutting of Frithemesnil, leading into the Valley de Clères, a little beyond which is the Clères Stat. Here is an old castle in which is shown the bed of Henri IV.

The Dieppe Rly. falls into the line from Rouen to Havre near Malaunay Stat. and the Viaduct of 8 arches. (Rte. 14.)

The line of houses, factories, and chimneys, interspersed with villas, orchards, and gardens, almost uninterrupted, from Malaunay to Rouen, may remind an Englishman of the clothing district of the W. of England. In 1845 (Aug. 19) a terrific whirlwind swept down part of this valley, and in the course of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  minute demolished 3 factories, crumbling them like houses of cards, and all within them, people and machinery. 60 lives were lost, 100 were wounded, many were buried in the ruins.

Before entering Rouen a pretty view is obtained of the blue hills which border the Seine; nor is the atmosphere thickened with so dense an envelope of smoke as hovers over the great manufacturing centres of England. A great part of the coal here used comes from England; the Dépt. du Nord furnishes also its supplies.

Maromme Stat. Through 2 tunnels partly under the suburbs Bovrenil and Cauchoise, and the cemetery of St. Gervais, we reach person, caused by his horse starting, which proved mortal a few days after at Rouen. The castle of the French kings, where Henri IV. held the conferences with the Romish clergy which preceded his abjuration of the Protestant faith, was destroyed by the Regent Duke of Orleans.

ROUEN STAT., Rue Verte, on the Boulevard (in Rte. 8).

Rosny Stat., a dirty little village, contiguous to which, between it and the Seine, stand the Château, the birthplace of Sully, where he was frequently visited by his friend and master Henri IV., who slept here the night after his victory at Ivry. The king, having overtaken Sully on the road desperately wounded, carried on a litter, accompanied by his squires in a like plight, fell on his neck and affectionately embraced him. The château is a plain solid building of red brick, with stone quoins and a high tent roof, surrounded by a deep ditch; it was rebuilt by Sully at the beginning of the 17th cent. It is destitute of architectural beauty externally, and within has been modernised, although one room is still called Chambre de Sully. From 1818 down to the Revolution of 1830, Rosny was the favourite residence of the Duchesse de Berri, who erected here a chapel to contain the heart of her husband. The château has since changed hands repeatedly, and its present proprietor has pulled down the wings, which were modern, and added by the duchess. The grounds extend for some distance along the margin of the river, to which they owe their sole charm, the ground being perfectly flat, and traversed by long formal avenues.

In skirting the forest of Rosny, contiguous to the village, we are reminded of the sacrifice made by Sully, in felling in it at one time timber to the amount of 100,000 francs to pay his master's debts.

A great projecting buttress of chalk now intervenes, crowned by the village and ch. of Rolleboise, round which the Seine winds in a widely circuitous curve. The rly. pierces this by a Tunnel about 2480 yards long—driven through the chalk and a flinty conglomerate very hard to penetrate, terminating on the W. at a short distance from

Bonnières Stat., the railway having been previously carried over the high-road by a bridge. Hence the railroad runs under the high ground close to the river as far as

Vernon Stat. Inns: Lion d'Or; H. du Cheval, best. This town (Pop. 7674), which, like many others in Normandy, gives a name to a noble English family, is prettily situated, and its interior retains a venerable air of antiquity in its timber-framed houses; but its narrow streets, however picturesque, are by no means convenient on a great highway of traffic. There is preserved an ancient tower (Tour des Archives), tall and massive; and a Gothic Ch., the choir of the 13th, the nave of the 16th cent., in which one monument only among many escaped the Revolution,—that of a lady of the family Maignard, — consisting of a kneeling effigy in marble (date 1610). At the foot of the bridge is a curious antique building, now a mill. During the great war English prisoners were confined in it. Vernon possesses a hospital founded by St. Louis, very extensive Artillery barracks, and quarries of building-stone on the opposite side of the Seine.

The Château de Bizy, one of the finest seats in Normandy, the property of the Counts of Eu, and afterwards of the Duc de Penthièvre, was destroyed at the Revolution, and is now replaced by a plain country house belonging to the Orleans family. The grounds are beautiful, and the walks through them agreeable. They are approached by a fine avenue near the stat.

Coaches to Gisors (Rte. 3).

Vines cease soon after Vernon.

Gaillon Stat. is about a mile from the village, where there is a huge penitentiary, or Maison Centrale de Detention, occupying the place, and in part the remains, of the Château of the archbishops of Rouen. It was built 1515 for the Cardinal d'Amboise, out of the tribute levied on the Genoese, conceded to him by Louis XII., by the architects Jean Joconde and Androuet du Cerceau, and was adorned by the sculptor Jean Juste de Tours. It was demolished at the Revolution, except the entrance portal, flanked by 4 turrets, and covered with inscriptions and bas-reliefs, the clock tower, and the chapel tower. A gateway, a splendid example of the style of the Renaissance, was transported to Paris, where it has been reconstructed in the court of the Ecole des Beaux Arts. Its architect was Pierre Fain, date 1509.

In the distance is seen the imposing ruin of Château Gaillard, the pet castle of Richard Cœur de Lion (Rte. 11), rising on a lofty rock washed by the Seine, but 5 or 6 miles N. of our road; so great is the circuit which the river here again makes. Gaillon is the station nearest to Auteuil and the town of Andelys (omnibus runs thither), and hence an excursion may be made to the castle of Château Gaillard. Near le Grand Villers, two Tunnels are driven through the mass of a projecting promontory of chalk hill. The first or easternmost, of Le Roule, is a mile long, and the second, of Venables, 470 yards long.

St. Pierre de Vauvray Stat. [The manufacturing town of Louviers is about 5 miles or 8 kilom. W. of this stat. Omnibus every train. A Railway is projected.

Louviers (Inns: H. de Rouen, dear; du Mouton, good), advantageously situated on the numerous branches of the Eure; it is one of the 3 principal clothing towns of France, the other 2 being Elbœuf and Sedan. It contains 30 cloth manufactories, and 19 spinning-mills of woollen yarn, which employ from 7000 to 8000 persons in and around the town, though the number of Inhab. does not exceed 11,000. The cloth of Louviers is remarkable for its fine quality; yet the town is not prosperous, being outstripped by its rival Elbœuf. Its ancient features are fast being swept away. The Ch. of Notre Dame, shrouded behind the number of its flying buttresses, presents a mass of incongruities and sad mutilations, yet is a fine ch., well worth examination. Its S. portal, projecting forwards on fringed arches, with a pendant hanging from the centre, is decked out with an exuberance of florid ornament. It was built in 1496. The W. end has 3 portals, the centre supported by a Corinthian pillar. In the inside the nave and choir date from 1218, and exhibit the transition from the round to the pointed style; low and thick columnar piers support pointed arches, on which rests a glazed triforium of round-headed trefoil arches, with lancet windows under trefoil arches in the clerestory; the aisles are more modern. The bas-reliefs, carved in wood, of sacred subjects from the life of our Saviour, and the painted glass, merit notice, as well as the open gallery of filigree stone-work under the central tower, S. side.

The Gothic house with pointed windows, called Maison des Templiers, is probably as old as the 13th or beginning of the 14th cent.]

The Seine is traversed obliquely for the 3rd time by a bridge at Le Manoir just above the confluence of the Eure, and the rly. proceeds along the rt. bank of the Seine for a short distance to

Pont de l'Arche Stat. at the extremity of the bridge leading to that town. Pont de l'Arche is a small town whose main street is a narrow and inconvenient lane leading to the bridge, rebuilt 1854, which connects the town with the Stat. The view from it is pretty; on the rt. is seen the Côte des Deux Amans (see Rte. 11).

The Gothic Ch. contains some curious painted windows: in one of them the inhabitants of the town, male and female, in the costume of the 16th cent., are seen towing barges through the central arch of the old bridge. Near this place is a lock, the only lock on the Seine below Paris. The tide does not rise beyond this.

Omnibus to Romilly, where are large copper-works.

The rly. next passes through the hill of Tourville by a short Tunnel of about 500 yards, and crosses the Seine, here divided into two arms, for the 4th time, by a bridge resting on the Ile des Bœufs, to Tourville. Stat. for the industrious town of Elbœuf (Rte. 11). Omnibus thither. Hence it proceeds onwards along the l. bank of the Seine through St. Etienne de Rouvray and Sotteville.

(rt.) See on the hill the Pilgrimage Ch. of Notre Dame de Bon Secours. About 2 m. from Rouen the railway divides, one branch going to the terminus at the foot of the Rouen bridge in the Cours la Reine (St. Sever), the other branch crossing the Seine by an iron bridge of 8 arches, each 131 feet span, its centre resting on an island. (N.B. Beautiful view of Rouen from the bridge.) This leads direct into the first tunnel, carried under part of St. Catherine's Hill, 1133 yards long. It describes a radius of about half a mile; the works were very difficult, owing to the rush of waters from springs in the chalk. The railway issues from it into the valley of Darnétal, filled with dye-works and cotton-mills, and crossed, together with the 2 small streams which traverse it, the Robec and Aubette, by a rly. viaduct. The line speedily re-enters the chalk hills, and in 2 succeeding tunnels (one of them 1530 yds. long) sweeps round the town of Rouen, penetrating beneath the Boulevards St. Hilaire and Beauvoisine in a series of cuttings and tunnels, works of arduous execution and great engineering merit, made at great cost. It emerges at the Rue Verte station (built by Tite, architect of the Royal Exchange), situated in a hole cut in the chalk, shut in by escarpment, excluding all view, and between 2 tunnels, and a long way from the heart of Rouen and the quays.

ROUEN: Stations, St. Sever on the l. bank, and Rue Verte (for Havre and Dieppe) on the rt. bank of the Seine. Travellers leaving Rouen should be careful to ascertain from which station the train starts. Buffet at the rly. very good. Postmaster's charge 1 fr. 50 c. for each horse and each postilion in conveying a carriage from the rly. to any part of Rouen. Omnibus to all parts of the city.

ROUEN.—Inns: H. de Paris, on the Quai, between the two Bridges; fair. H. d'Angleterre, on the Quai. H. de France, in the town; good. Others inferior.

Rouen, anciently Rotomagus, the capital of Normandy, and the chief town at present of the department of the Seine Inférieure, is agreeably seated on the Seine, and yields to no provincial city of France in its majestic and venerable aspect, in historic associations, and in magnificent buildings, the triumph of the ecclesiastical and civil architecture of the middle ages. It has this advantage also over most other ancient towns, that it is not a mere heap of dry bones, destitute of life and abandoned by commerce; its narrow streets of gable-faced, timber-fronted mansions, swarm like an ant-hill with busy crowds passing to and fro: it is a focus of trade, and the chief seat of the cotton manufacture (Rouennerie) in France. It may be called, indeed, the French Manchester. It contains 103,000 Inhab., or with the suburbs 150,000 Inhab., and is surpassed in population by only 4 other cities in France.

The situation of Rouen on a river which affords ready access on the one hand to the sea at Havre (103 m. distant by the windings of the stream), and with the capital on the other, tends highly to promote its industry and commerce. The Seine, here more than 1000 ft. broad, is accessible for vessels of 300 tons; and the number of vessels at the quays, though much diminished on account of the railway, adds both to the picturesqueness and animation of the scene. Its banks are formed into fine broad Quais, and these are lined with handsome modern buildings, which serve as a screen to hide a rear rank of tottering timber houses, which once formed the bulk of the city, and which previously extended down to the river-side. Modern improvements and additions, indeed, have of late greatly detracted from the venerable and picturesque appearance of Rouen; and the demolitions of 1860 are extensive: but the stranger who will plunge into its almost inextricable labyrinth of streets will find enough of antiquity to satiate the artist or the most ardent lover of bygone times. A law has been passed prohibiting the rebuilding of houses in wood; their number must diminish every year.

A Boulevard, occupying the place of the old fortifications which resisted Henry V. of England and Henri IV. of France, runs round the old town nearly in a semicircle, touching the Seine at its two extremities. This line includes within it all the most interesting public monuments and objects worth notice; outside of it spreads a supplement of populous fauxbourgs, occupied chiefly by the weavers and working classes, who also form the bulk of the population in the suburb St. Sever, on the l. bank of the Seine, having wider but not cleaner streets than the inner town, interspersed at intervals by tall smoking chimneys and lavishly glazed spinning-mills.

To face page 36.

A walk through the town in the following order will carry the pedestrian to the things best worth observation; but if he wishes to see them thoroughly, he will find one or even two days not enough. The distances from one quarter of the town to another are considerable, to say nothing of the fatigue of walking over the execrable pavement which he will have to encounter. The Rue Grand Pont, which runs up from the lower or suspension bridge, and is continued across the city under the names Rue des Carmes and Rue Beauvoisine, and includes the best shops, will bring you to the Cathedral; a little in the rear of it, to the E., is the church of St. Maclou, from which the Rue Impériale, running due N. from the upper or stone bridge quite across the city, will bring you to St. Ouen, the noblest church in Rouen. Close beside it, in the H. de Ville, is the gallery of pictures; but more worthy of attention is the Museum of Antiquities, near the Boulevard. Hence you must thread your way back to the river, visiting in turn the Palais de Justice, Tour de la Grosse Horloge, Place de la Pucelle (where Joan of Arc was burnt), and Hôtel du Bourgtheroude.

The Cathedral of Notre Dame occupies with its W. front one side of a small square, formerly the fruit and flower market. The vast proportions of this grand Gothic façade, its elaborate and profuse decorations, and its stone screens of open tracery, impress one, at first glance, with wonder and admiration; diminished, however, though not destroyed, by a closer examination, which shows a confusion of ornament and a certain corruption of taste. "It is viciously florid, and looks like a piece of rock-work, rough and encrusted with images and tabernacles, and ornamented from top to bottom."

—G. Knight. The projecting central porch and the whole of the upper part were the work of Cardinal d'Amboise (1509-1530); the lateral ones are of an earlier period (13th cent.) and chaster style; and the sculpture adorning them deserves attention. Above the central door is carved the genealogy of Jesse. Over the l.-hand (N.W.) door is the Death of St. John Baptist,—in it may be seen Herodias's daughter dancing, or rather tumbling, before Herod: over this on the rt., much mutilated, the Virgin with Saints. Of the two stately flanking towers, that of St. Romain, on the N., rests on walls older than any other part of the building (12th cent.): it may be profitably ascended on account of the view. The rt.-hand, or S.W. tower, called Tour de Beurre, because built (between 1485 and 1507) with the money paid for indulgences to eat butter in Lent, is a far more beautiful structure, surmounted with an elegant circlet of stone filigree. It contained the famous bell, named George d'Amboise, melted at the Revolution; it is now gutted. Of the central spire the less that is said the better; it is a cage of cast-iron bars intended to replace a spire of wood burnt by lightning 1822; and judging from its shape and size, seen at a distance, might be taken for the parent of all the factory chimneys in and about the town. It reaches to a height of 482 ft. It is quite out of character with the rest of the building, and is intended to be gilt. A corkscrew or geometrical staircase of iron worms itself up the centre to a dizzy height.

The N. and S. fronts are in a style resembling the decorated of England, with geometric tracery. The very beautiful N. door, called Portail des Libraires, from the book-stalls which once occupied the court before it, was not finished until 1478. The opposite one leading to the S. transept, called Portail de la Culende, and nearly of the same age and style, is ornamented with bas-reliefs from the history of Joseph. The figure hanging, vulgarly supposed to represent a corn-merchant who suffered for using false measures, while his property was confiscated to build this entrance, is otherwise, and more accurately, explained to be Pharaoh's chief baker. The N. transept is flanked on either side by open towers of great beauty, and of such proportions as would fit them for the W. front of an English cathedral. The whole of the W. front was formerly covered with old houses, built against it, such as are now to be seen on the S. side; and the beautiful N. door has only since 1850 been cleared from sheds and buildings.

The interior measures 435 ft. in length, and the height of the nave is 89½ ft. It is in the early pointed style. Above the main arches of the nave runs a second tier, smaller, but opening a so into the aisles; an arrangement not uncommon in Normandy, but rare in England. The three rose windows, in the nave and transepts, are very fine in size and decoration. In the end chapel, on the S. side of the nave, is the tomb and effigy of Rollo, first Duke of Normandy, and opposite to it that of his son William Long Épée: but the figures are not older probably than the 13th cent.

The choir, separated from the nave by a modern Grecian screen, was built between 1280 and 1300. The carving of the stalls, executed 1467, is extremely curious. The finest and oldest painted glass is to be found in the chapels of the choir aisles; it is of the 13th cent. Small lozenge-shaped tablets of marble, let into the pavement of the choir, mark the spots where the heart of Richard Cœur de Lion, and the bodies of his brother Henry (died 1183), of William son of Geoffroy Plantagenet their uncle, and of John Duke of Bedford, regent (prorex Normanniæ) under Henry VI. (1435), were interred. Their monuments, much injured by the outrage of the Huguenots in 1562, when all parts of the church suffered more or less, were removed, and lost until 1838, when the effigy of Richard I., a rude statue 6½ ft. long, was dug up from under the pavement on the l. of the high altar. His "lion heart" was also found still perfect, but shrunk in size, enveloped in a sort of greenish taffeta enclosed in a case of lead, and is now deposited in the Museum. His body was interred at Fontevault; but he bequeathed his heart to Rouen, on account of the great affection which he bore to the Normans. The effigy of limestone, much mutilated, represents him crowned, and in the royal robes, and is now placed in the Lady Chapel behind the high altar, which contains two other splendid and highly interesting monuments. On the rt. hand is that of Cardinal George d'Amboise, Archbishop of Rouen and minister of Louis XII., and his brother, a magnificent structure of marble, in the style of the Renaissance, executed in 1525. The marble statues of the two cardinals, uncle and nephew, kneel below a covered canopy richly ornamented and gilt; behind is a bas-relief of St. George and the Dragon; above, in niches arranged two by two, are statues of the 12 Apostles; below are the Cardinal Virtues. The pilasters and intervening spaces are adorned with rich and fanciful arabesques. The bodies of the Cardinals d'Amboise were torn from the grave by the Revolutionists of 1793, the lead of the coffins melted, and the contents scattered.

On the l. side of the chapel is the monument, in white and black marble, of the Duc de Brézé, grand seneschal of Normandy; but more remarkable as husband of Diana of Poitiers, mistress of Henry II., by whom it was erected. The effigy of the distressed widow kneels at the head of an emaciated corpse representing her husband after death, stretched on a sarcophagus of black marble. She is in a mourning attitude corresponding with the words of the epitaph which she caused to be engraved on the tomb:—

"Indivulsa tibi quondam, et fidissima conjux, Ut fuit in thalamo sic erit in tumulo."

A sentiment, however, which must be taken in an ironical sense; it is quite certain that she was not buried with him, but at her château of Anet, and it is probable that she was as true to her word in one respect as in the other. Above, in an arched recess, is the statue of the duke in full armour on horseback. This tomb is a splendid work of the age of Francis I.; and is attributed to Jean Goujon, or Jean Cousin.

A rich florid Gothic niche at the side, surmounted by a stone canopy of open work and intervening stems, was erected at an earlier period (1465) to Pierre de Brézé, grandfather of the preceding. Neither statue nor inscription remains.

The elaborately carved screen in front of the sacristy, executed in the latter part of the 15th cent., and its wrought-iron door, must not be passed without notice.

Passing the Archevêché, contiguous to the cathedral on its N. and E. side, we come to the **Church of St. Maclou*, which ranks third among the churches of Rouen in beauty. Its grandest feature is its triple porch; it is a fine specimen of the florid architecture of the 15th cent., and the sculpture adorning it is of exquisite taste and beauty of execution. Obs. the wooden doors (including that on the N. side), beautifully carved with Scripture subjects, in bas-relief, by Jean Goujon, it is said, and to the elaborate winding stair of stone near the W. entrance, leading to the organ-loft. There is much painted glass in the windows. The nave is limited to 4 bays.

The fine wide street, Rue Impériale, leading from the Bridge to the Boulevard, brings you to the **Church of St. Ouen*, which surpasses the cathedral in size, purity of style, masterly execution, and splendid but judicious decoration, and is inferior only as regards historic monuments. It is one of the noblest and most perfect Gothic edifices in the world. Although it suffered considerably from the Huguenots (1562), who made 3 bonfires within the building to burn the stalls, pulpit, organ, and priests' robes; and from the republicans, who turned it into an armourer's shop, and raised a smith's forge in its interior, by the smoke of which the windows were blackened until they ceased to be transparent, it has escaped in a remarkable degree; and judicious restorations leave little to desire touching its state of repair.

The first stone of the existing edifice (for 4 other churches had preceded it) was laid 1318 by Abbot Jean Roussel; the choir, the chapels, and nearly all the transept were completed in 21 years, and the nave and tower finished by the end of the 15th cent. Thus, one plan being followed to the termination, perfect harmony of style prevailed throughout. The W. front, long unfinished, has been completed by the addition of 2 flanking steeples, surmounting 3 deep-set portals. Although it may be regretted that the original design (still preserved in the library) has not been more strictly followed, the modern front and towers are fine. This ch. is now one of the very few continental churches which are actually finished.

Above the cross rises the central tower, 260 ft. high, which, whether examined close at hand (as it ought to be) or seen at a distance rising above the town, is a model of grace and delicacy. It is an octagon composed of open arches and tracery, throwing out flying buttresses to the turrets in the angles, and terminates with a crown of fleurs-de-lis, which ancient royal symbol is also discovered in the pattern of the tracery of the windows, and in the painted glass.

The S. portal, called des Marmouzets from figures of the animals carved on it, deserves attentive examination, as a gem of Gothic work scarcely to be surpassed. It is surrounded by a fringe of open trefoil arches; while 2 groined pendants, 6 ft. long, drop from its vault. The bas-relief over the door represents the Death and Assumption of the Virgin, with the statue of St. Ouen beneath: the whole has been well restored.

The interior (443 ft. long, 83 ft. wide, 106 ft. high), notwithstanding its size, is peculiarly light and graceful; the front pillars of its richly moulded piers run up uninterruptedly to the roof as ribs, the side ones bend under the arches. The clerestory being very large increases the effect of lightness; "the windows seem to have absorbed all the solid wall," and the roof is maintained in its place by the support of pillars and buttresses alone. The four central pillars supporting the tower are unrivalled. All the glass is painted, and there are 2 noble rose windows filled with it. The stranger should look into the holy-water basin (bénitier) close to the W. door; he will find the beauties of the interior all mirrored on the surface of the water. The slab tomb of the master mason under and by whom this noble ch. was reared is in St. Agnes' chapel, the 2nd on the l. in the N. choir aisle. His name was Alexander Berneval; and, according to tradition, he murdered his apprentice through envy, because the youth had surpassed, in the execution of the rose window in the N. transept, into the tracery of which the pentalfa is introduced, that which his master had constructed in the S. transept. Though the mason paid the penalty of his crime, the monks, out of gratitude for his skill, interred his body within the church which he had contributed so much to ornament.

The whole of the transept, choir, and lower part of the tower, are decorated in character, passing into the flamboyant in the upper story of the tower and in the nave.

The material used in the structure of St. Ouen is an indurated grey chalk, containing flints, which have been often patiently cut through in the delicate carving and tracery. But the details of the building should be studied on the roof, upon the tower, and in the internal galleries. It will well repay the trouble of the ascent.

A very pretty Public Garden, whose great ornament, however, is the adjacent church, extends along the N. side of St. Ouen, behind the Hôtel de Ville; it was originally the convent garden. Within it, attached to the church, stands a very perfect Norman tower, with round-headed windows, in the style of the 11th cent.; it probably formed part of a previously existing church. It is called "La Chambre aux Clercs."

St. Ouen was archbishop of Rouen, and died 678.

The **Hôtel de Ville*, a handsome building of Italian architecture, attached to the N. transept of the church, formed part of the monastery of St. Ouen, to which a modern front, with Corinthian colonnade, has been added, so as to give the building an official, civic air. Besides the public offices, it contains the Public Library, and Le Musée des Tableaux, a collection in which the good paintings bear a very small proportion to the bad. There is an ancient and curious picture, attributed to Memling, of the Virgin and Child amidst Angels and Saints, a delicious painting, and pronounced on good authority to be original;—the predella of an altarpiece, by Perugino (? Raphael), brought from Perugia; a copy of Raphael's Madonna di San Sisto; St. Francis in ecstasy, by Ann. Caracci; the Plague at Milan, by Lemmonière of Rouen; an Ecce Homo, by Mignard; Trajan and the Widow, by De la Croix; and others of the modern French School.

The Bibliothèque Publique is a valuable collection of 33,000 vols., very accessible, being open every day from 11 to 4, and from 6 to 9, except Sunday and Thursday. Among the 1200 MSS., many richly ornamented with paintings, are the History of the Normans, by William of Jumièges, 11th cent.; a Benedictionary, which belonged to an archbishop of Canterbury; and a missal book of the 12th cent. The Gradual of Daniel d'Aubonne, 17th cent., containing about 200 vignettes and initials, is very beautiful.

**Le Musée des Antiquités*, in the suppressed convent de Ste. Marie, Rue Impériale, near its junction with the Boulevard Beauvoisine, from the number and rarity of the curiosities deposited in it, consisting for the most part of voluntary donations, is interesting, and highly creditable to the administration of the department, by whom it was founded, 1833-4; no stranger should omit to visit it. The following enumeration will give an idea of the nature of the objects preserved here:—

The door of the house in which Corneille was born; many Roman and Gallic tombstones, coffins, &c., dug up at Rouen and other places in the Dépt. de la Seine Inférieure; many fragments of Roman sculpture; specimens of pottery, glass, mosaics; inscriptions; together with a draped female statue of good work, but wanting the head, from the Roman theatre, Lillebonne.

It is chiefly, however, for works of art and antiquities of the Middle Ages, and the following period down to the 17th cent., that this museum is entitled to attention.

The windows, 15 in number, by which the gallery is lighted, are all filled with painted glass derived from suppressed convents, churches, &c., forming a chronological series from the 13th to the 17th cent.; very valuable and interesting, as showing the progress of the art. The most remarkable are those from the Church of St. Eloi, Rouen, 16th cent.; the miracle of St. Nicholas, from St. Godard (first half of 16th cent.), very fine. There is no collection of glass painting equal to this in France or England.

In glazed frames against the wall are hung charters and other ancient MSS., containing autographs of remarkable persons—among them, Wm. the Conqueror's mark, a cross (he could not write); and the signatures of our other Norman dukes and kings, among which those of Henry I. and Richard Cœur de Lion may be observed. Here also is now deposited the heart of the Lion-hearted King in a glass box.

The shrine of St. Sever, which once contained the relics of that saint, formerly placed in the cathedral, is in the shape of a Gothic chapel, with silver statues of saints in niches round its sides. It is of oak, covered with copper plates gilt and silvered, and is an elegant piece of workmanship of the end of the 12th cent.: it has been restored. A crucifix, carved in stone, 16th cent.: at the foot of the cross the holy women; on the opposite side the Virgin and Child. Many other specimens of sculpture, of the 15th, 16th, and 17th cent., in stone and wood, from religious edifices: 5 bas-reliefs of the Last Judgment, in marble, from the Church of St. Denis-sur-Scie; in one, Christ is rescuing souls from the jaws (literally) of hell. Many capitals of Gothic columns richly sculptured.

An extensive collection of coins and medals; Roman, Gallo-Roman, French Norman, &c.

Castas from the bas-reliefs of the Hôtel du Bourgtheroude, representing the interview of the Field of the Cloth of Gold between Henry VIII. and Francis I. A small collection of arms and armour; among them will be found the coat of mail of Enguerrand de Marigny, from the Church of Ecouis: also several early cannon and wall pieces, ancient furniture, cabinets.

A fragment of the famous bell George d'Amboise, which, at the Revolution, was melted into cannons and sous-pieces, bearing the legend "monument de vanité, détruit pour l'utilité, l'an II. de l'Egalité."

This Museum is open Sunday and fête-days from 11 to 4, and Thursday from 12 to 3; but it is generally accessible to strangers.

In an adjoining building is a very respectable Museum of Natural History.

The amateur of stained glass should not omit to visit the churches of St. Godard, containing two windows 32 ft. high and 12 wide, and St. Patrice, where there are many more of still greater beauty, executed in the 16th cent. The architecture of these two churches is not remarkable; they are very late in the Gothic style.

The Church of St. Vincent has an exquisite Gothic porch, and very fine painted glass likewise.

Another church, St. Gervais, situated in the very remote faubourg Cauchois, near the Havre Railway terminus, is reputed the oldest structure in Rouen, and one of the earliest Christian monuments in France. The church itself is low, humble, and not remarkable; but below it is a crypt even more simple and unadorned, yet exhibiting to the eye of the antiquary marks of construction as old probably as the 4th cent., in the courses of Roman tiles between the layers of rough masonry. It has an apsidal termination: in the side walls are holes for the cancelli or rails, to which the curtain was hung to separate the chancel from the rest of the church: the altar-slab is marked with 5 + +. The two low arched recesses in the walls are said to have been the graves of St. Mello and St. Avitien, the first archbishop of Rouen. The circular E. end of the ch. itself, which rests upon this crypt, is in the earliest Norman style: and some of the pillars let into the wall, but too short to support the roof, have classic capitals. The Roman road to Lillebonne passed close to St. Gervais. William the Conqueror, tortured by the wound he had received at the cruel sack and burning of Mantes, repaired to the retired monastery of St. Gervais to die. His death-bed exhibited a melancholy example of the vanity of earthly grandeur. Deserted by his own sons when the breath was scarce out of his body, forsaken by friends and courtiers, and plundered by his servants, his body remained stripped and deserted, until the pity and charity of an unknown knight in the neighbourhood provided the funds necessary for the funeral; and he himself escorted the body to its last resting-place at Caen.

Previous to the Revolution there were 36 churches in Rouen, there are now 14; and there remain many suppressed churches in Rouen, most of them converted into warehouses.

The **Palais de Justice* is a very interesting specimen of civic Gothic architecture, which may vie with some of the town-halls of the Low Countries. Reared at a time (the reign of Louis XII.) when the style had become fantastic in its forms and exuberant in its adornments, it yet displays so much originality and magnificence, that it is hard to condemn it for a want of taste and purity. It has been repaired and completed with a second wing in the most judicious manner. The façade is decorated with all the ornament which the fertile resources of the architect afforded; the square-headed windows are set within delicate garlands of stone; the buttresses are studded with niches and crowned by pinnacles; and the lofty dormer windows, rising against the high-pitched roof, are surmounted by canopies of delicate open work, with pinnacles and statues, many of them executed by first-rate artists at Paris.

It lines 3 sides of a square; the wing on the l. is the Salle des Procureurs, built 1493, as a sort of exchange for merchants, native and foreign, to meet in. It is a large and handsome hall, with an open roof, like a ship's hull reversed, 160 ft. long and 50 ft. high—a sort of Westminster Hall in miniature, and now serving the same purposes. The body of the building in the centre was raised 6 years later by Louis XII. for the Cour d'Échiquier of Normandy, the ancient supreme tribunal of the duchy, at least as old as the time of William the Conqueror, for which the name of parliament was substituted in 1515 by Francis I.

The chamber in which the parliament of Normandy met is now the Salle d'Assises. It has a carved roof of black oak, set off with gold; but the elegant pendants which hung from it have been removed, and the wainscoting, painted over with arabesques and old mottoes reminding judges of their duties, has been taken down or effaced by whitewash. The little room in the tourelle is well worth a visit. In the new buildings are numerous courts of justice, &c., on a very handsome scale.

Behind the Palais is a large building, formerly the residence of the president of the parliament, now used for the sittings of the Cour Impériale.

La **Rue de la Grosse Horloge*, not far from the Palais, one of the narrowest and most picturesque in Rouen, is so called from the antique clock gate-house, built 1527, by which it is spanned, adjoining the tower of the Beffroi, whence the curfew is still tolled every evening. In this street are several ancient houses. Nos. 115 and 129 deserve notice.

The old house near the S.W. corner of the Place W. of the Cathedral was formerly the Bureau des Finances, and has been restored by a private club, which occupies a part of it.

The Place de la Pucelle, known also by the vulgar name Marché aux Veaux, serves to record the fate of the heroic and unfortunate Jeanne d'Arc, the deliverer of her country, and the terror of the English, who was burned alive here as a sorceress 1431, on the spot marked by the contemptible modern statue placed upon a pump, which bears her name, but the outward aspect of Bellona! Her ashes were collected by the hangman, and cast into the Seine, by order of the Cardinal of Winchester. He and other prelates were spectators of her execution; and some of them, unmoved by her sufferings, even interrupted the priest who was confessing her, by their impatience, exclaiming, "Now, priest, do you mean to make us dine here?" After she was bound to the stake, and while the flames were rising around her, she begged her confessor to hold aloft the cross, that she might still behold the sacred emblem above the smoke; and she died expressing her conviction of the truth of her mission, and calling on the name of Jesus. The cruelty exercised upon this simple and gentle maiden (for in all her battles she never killed an enemy, and was always intent on preventing the effusion of blood) is a disgrace to the annals of England. In prison she was subjected to insult, insidious treachery, and even outrage; at her trial, in the chapel of the castle, she stood alone without counsel or adviser, browbeaten by her inhuman and bloodthirsty judges, yet baffling their cunning and sophistry by her plain straightforward answers.

But one of the saddest circumstances connected with the death of the forlorn maiden of Domrémy was, that her most active enemies and eventual betrayers were her own countrymen: the Bishop of Beauvais, her unjust judge, her accuser, and the false priest who was introduced into her cell on the pretence of friendship as a spy to betray her secrets, were all Frenchmen. Her own countrymen allowed her to be made prisoner at Compiègne without an attempt to defend or rescue her; it was they who sold her to the English; and Charles VII., her king, who owed his country and throne to her enthusiasm, appears neither to have cared for nor remembered the heroine of Orleans, from the hour when she fell into the hands of the English. He certainly neither attempted to ransom her, nor did he protest against her trial.*

It was not until 24 years from her death that a papal bull proclaimed her innocence; and a cross was raised by her own countrymen, once more become masters of Rouen, on the spot where she had been bound to the stake.

The great tower of the old castle in which she was imprisoned was demolished 1780. She was shut up in a cage of iron, and her feet were fettered, yet her spirit remained unbroken; and when some English nobles came to insult her, she answered, "Je sais bien que les Anglais me feront mourir, croyant après ma mort gagner le royaume de France; mais fussent-ils cent mille Goddams de plus qu'à présent, ils n'auront pas ce royaume."

On one side of the market-place, within a short distance of the statue, is an ancient mansion, which the common people call Maison de la Pucelle, but properly **Hôtel du Bourghtheroude*, constructed at the end of the 15th and beginning of the 16th cent., by William le Roux, seigneur of Bourghtheroude, nearly at the same period as the Palais de Justice. It is built round a courtyard, and its inner wall is ornamented with a series of bas-reliefs on tablets of marble, representing the interview of the Cloth of Gold, and the procession of the two kings Henry VIII. and Francis I., attended by their suite, among whom Cardinal Wolsey is conspicuous. Above these are other sculptures of allegorical figures, and the elegant hexagonal tower is decorated with pastoral and other subjects.

The Marché Neuf, not far from the Place de la Pucelle, abounds in picturesque architecture.

* From a masterly and most interesting memoir of Jeanne d'Arc in the Quarterly Review, vol. 69.

There are several Gothic fountains in various parts of the city:—La Croix de Pierre resembles in form Waltham Cross, but erected, 1500, by the Cardinal d'Amboise; it stands in the Carrefour St. Vivien. La Fontaine de la Crosse is a low Gothic structure of the 15th cent., elegantly adorned with tracery La Fontaine de Lisieux, Rue de la Savonnerie (date 1518), of good design and work.

The house in which "Le grand Corneille" (Pierre) was born, the most illustrious of the natives of Rouen, stood until 1861 in Rue de la Pie, No. 4; a statue of him has been erected by his fellow-citizens on the stone bridge. Fontenelle, his nephew, author of the 'Plurality of Worlds,' resided in the Rue des Bons Enfants, No. 132-134. The composer Boieldieu was also born here, and the town has raised a statue to him on the quay facing the Bourse.

The great Lord Chancellor Clarendon died here, in banishment, 1674.

The Crèches—an asylum for infant children while their parents are at work—may be seen here in full operation, and deserves a visit.

On the exterior Boulevard is the Donjon tower, the only part remaining of the old Château built in 1205.

The very old and curious edifice called Les Halles, situated between the cathedral and the stone bridge, appropriated to the purpose of a cloth-hall for the sale of the manufactures of Rouen, occupies the site, and seems to have formed part, of the ancient palace and Vieille Tour, in which King John Lackland is said to have imprisoned and finally murdered his nephew Prince Arthur.

The structure called Monument de St. Romain, opposite the cloth-hall (date 1542), was the spot where, by virtue of an ancient privilege conceded by King Dagobert, the chapter of the cathedral were entitled to claim, on Ascension-day, the release of a condemned criminal, how great soever his crime. This custom was intended to commemorate the circumstance of a sentenced malefactor having been the only person willing to accompany St. Romain in his dangerous encounter with the dragon (gargouille) which infested the neighbourhood of Rouen. The monster, as it turned out, did not give much trouble; it was rendered powerless by the simple act of the saint making the sign of the cross over it, and, with his stole tied round its neck, allowed itself to be led quietly into the town. The privilege was maintained down to the time of the Revolution, though latterly under considerable modifications. In the front of the house at the corner of the Rue St. Romain and Rue la Croix de Fer, a curious bas-relief of the 16th cent., representing a school, is inserted.

The houses occupying the district N. and E. of this are incredibly old and dilapidated.

On the St. Sever side, near the Rly. stat., and close to the stone bridge, is the Cours la Reine, a fine avenue and promenade along the banks of the Seine, and beyond it are wide meadows, in which the races are held.

Bridges.—The first bridge over the Seine here was built (1167) by Queen Matilda, daughter of Henry I.; it lasted till the middle of the 15th cent., when it was destroyed, and a bridge of boats substituted for it. In 1829 the upper bridge of stone was completed, and in 1836 the boats were finally replaced by a suspension bridge 650 ft. long. An opening is left in the centre of this, between the supporting piers, under a lofty cast-iron arch rising 82 ft. above the river, to allow masted vessels to pass.

The cotton manufactures of Rouen are of such extent and importance as to render it the Manchester of France; they are greatly promoted by 3 small streams—the Robec, the Aubitte, and the Reuelle. A particular kind of striped and chequed stuff is called Rouennerie (toiles peintes, rayées, et à carreaux), because originally and more especially fabricated here. Spinning and weaving mills, dye-works, especially of Turkey red, printing and bleaching works, are most plentifully distributed, not only through town and suburbs, but over the adjacent country in a circuit of many miles, employing, on a moderate computation, 50,000 persons.

The English Church service in the English chapel, Sotteville, at 11 A.M. and at 3½ P.M., in French Protestant Ch., Place St. Eloy.

At the shop of Lebrument, bookseller, Quai de Napoléon, the traveller may provide himself with many interesting works relating to the antiquities of Normandy, with views and maps.

Rouen is celebrated for its bonbons and sucre de pomme.

The Poste aux Lettres is in the grand new street, Rue de l'Impératrice; open from 8 A.M. to 8 P.M.

British Vice-Consul, Rue de la Vi-comté.

Steamboats to Havre in summer (?).

Railways to Havre and Dieppe, Stat. Rue Verte; to Paris, Stat. Place St. Sever, at the end of the Suspension Bridge.

Walks and Excursions.

The **Mont St. Catherine*, the escarped chalk hill on the E. of the city, rising above the Seine and the road to Paris, affords the best distant and panoramic view of Rouen, and will well repay the labour to those who are not afraid to face a steep ascent, 380 ft. high, which may be mastered in half an hour, starting from the extremity of the Cours de Paris (omnibuses to the top every ½ hour). The entire mass of the town is spread out below you, surmounted by engine chimneys mixed with spires, sending out its long lines of houses and factories up the hill sides and into the neighbouring industrious valleys, uniting it with distant villages; the noble spires of the cathedral and of St. Ouen rising out of the midst, the winding and sparkling river Seine, spanned by its 2 bridges and crowded with shipping, the Railway also crossing the river, and then pursuing its mole-like course, half above, half under ground, give a pleasing variety to the landscape. The marks of active industry are everywhere apparent, the bleach-fields strewn with white webs, the stream-courses marked by rows of factories and tall chimneys, the nooks in the hill sides choked with villages.

All along the top of the mount are traces of ditches and foundations of bastions, part of the strong Fort occupied by the Marquis Villars and the soldiers of the League during the siege of 1591, which were captured by Henri IV., and dismantled by him in compliance with the request of the citizens, with the memorable words, that "he desired no fortress but the hearts of his subjects." This post was taken by assault, chiefly through the bravery of Henri's English allies under the Earl of Essex, who challenged Villars to maintain, in single combat, on horse or foot, in armour or doublet, that his cause was the better and his mistress the fairer.

Not inferior to St. Catherine's is the view from N. D. de Bonsecours, much resorted to by pilgrims, 2 m. out of the town. A splendid modern Gothic Ch., gorgeously painted and gilt internally, and adorned by fine painted windows, was built 1854 to replace the ancient chapel. The lower part of the walls is covered with ex-voto tablets, and the ch. and the view from it well deserve a visit.

It is worth while to drive out to the château of Canteleu, on the road to Caudebec (Rte. 13), on account of its beautiful view, even if you go no farther.

A more distant excursion, which will occupy 1 day very agreeably, is to Château Gaillard, near Andelys (Rte. 11). The Paris Rly. passes within 3 m. of Andelys, and is the quickest way.

There are many interesting monuments of architecture in the vicinity of Rouen, among them the Chapelle de St. Julien, 3 or 4 m. S.W. of Rouen, on the l. bank of the Seine (Rte. 12); St. George Boscherville, 9 m. off, on the road to Havre (Rte. 13).

Darnétal, about 3 m. from Rouen, situated in a fertile valley, and full of factories, contains a fine Gothic ch., called Long Paon, and the fine church-tower of Carville.

La Bouille, a very pretty spot about 5 m. below Rouen (steamers several times a-day). On fête-days the caverns and quarries near this place are visited by large numbers of people. About 2 m. from it, on the road to Rouen, are the ruins of a castle called

Château de Robert le Diable. The walls are mostly fallen, but there are numerous vaults and vaulted passages remaining.

There is a fine view from the road to Dieppe; and, in fact, the hills and valleys in the neighbourhood of Rouen offer a succession of fine views and delightful walks in any direction.

ROUTE 9.

PARIS TO ST. GERMAIN.

Railroad, see next page.

The high road from Paris to St. Germain commences at the Arc de Triomphe de l'Etoile, the largest triumphal arch in the world, and the finest entrance into the French capital. Yet the eye scarcely appreciates its vastness: few would suspect that it is nearly as wide and lofty as the façade of Nôtre Dame, or that the aperture of the arch equalled that of its nave. The road skirts on the l. the Bois de Boulogne.

A cross road, called Chemin de la Révolte, leading from Neuilly to St. Denis, branches off on the rt.: near the entrance of it, at a place called Sablonville, occurred the melancholy death of the Duc d'Orléans, who was killed in jumping out of his carriage, of which the horses had run away. An elegant Byzantine Chapel has been built on the site of the house in which he breathed his last: it is dedicated to St. Ferdinand, and is in the form of a Greek cross. It contains a monumental cenotaph, the effigy of the prince in his uniform reclining on a bed, by M. de Triquety. On two pedestals on either side are angels, one at prayer, the other offering up the tears of the survivors to heaven, displaying exquisite beauty and refinement of sentiment, one of the last works of his sister the Princess Marie. The painted windows were executed at Sèvres, from Ingres' designs.

At Neuilly the road crosses the Seine by the celebrated bridge of 5 arches, each of 120 ft. span, the masterpiece of the architect Perrot, built 1772. Henri IV. and his queen were dragged into the water here in their cumbersome state coach, and narrowly escaped drowning: an accident which caused the ferry to be superseded by a bridge of wood. The park of Neuilly extends for some distance down the rt. bank of the Seine, and into the islands which here divide its stream. On the l. bank is seen the village and large barrack of Courbevoie. A little beyond the posthouse, our road, a perfectly straight line hitherto, bends to the l. and passes the Versailles Rail. (rive droite).

The road skirts the enclosing wall of Malmaison for some distance, and, soon after reaching the l. bank of the Seine, passes La Chaussée, where La Belle Gabrielle had a house, and Marly la Machine, so called from the cumbersome pile of wooden scaffolding and wheels constructed to raise the water of the Seine 300 ft. to supply Versailles, but now partly replaced by a steam engine. The Aqueduct of 36 arches, the loftiest 70 ft. high, by which the water is conveyed, is a conspicuous and fine object rising against the hill. The Château de Marly, built by Mansard for Louis XIV., was destroyed at the Revolution, having been purchased by speculators who pulled it down to sell the materials, and nothing now remains to mark that scene of a monarch's extravagance and magnificence. St. Simon, describing its construction, relates that whole forests of full-grown trees were brought from Compiègne,  $\frac{1}{3}$ ths of which died and were replaced by others; large tracts of wood were suddenly converted into sheets of water, and back again to shady groves; and all to adorn a small villa in a contracted valley without view, in which Louis might pass 3 or 4 nights in the course of the year.

The pavilion of Luciennes, on the brow of the hill above Marly, was the last residence of Madame du Barry, mistress of Louis XV.

14 St. Germain-en-Laye (see below).

RAILROAD—Paris to St. Germain, 19 kilom. = 12 Eng. m. Trains every hour in 30 min.: but see the printed bills. The Terminus (Embarcadère) in Paris is in Rue St. Lazare. This rly. received injuries from the Republican mob of Feb. 1848, to the extent of 1,700,000 frs.

The first part of this line as far as Asnières Stat. is the same as the Rouen Rly. (Rte. 8).

The high road from Paris to Rouen is crossed within a short distance of 7 Nanterre Stat., a village celebrated as the birthplace of St. Geneviève, the patron saint of Paris, who preserved it by her prayers, according to the legend, from the invasion of Attila. The chapel of the saint, at which Anne of Austria came to pray for an heir, 1636, who was born 2 years after, no longer exists. Nanterre is famed for cakes.

Mont Valérien, on the l., converted into the citadel of the fortifications of Paris. The Church on this height, founded on the débris of one destroyed by Napoleon, contains numerous relics: among them a fragment of the true Cross (!) and the Calvary attached to it has attracted pious pilgrims for several centuries. Madame de Genlis, the preceptress of Louis Philippe, was buried in the cemetery. The aqueduct of Marly and château of St. Germain are now seen in the distance.

Rueil Stat. Here the Card. Richelieu had a magnificent residence. The large barrack on the l. of the road was occupied in the time of the elder Bourbons by the Swiss guard. In the little church of the village, built 1584, and decorated with a portico at the cost of Cardinal Richelieu, from the designs of Lemer cier, is buried the Empress Josephine. A simple monument bearing her statue kneeling, by Cartellier, has been erected by her children, Prince Eugène (Duc of Leuchtenberg), and Hortense Beauharnois (ex-Queen of Holland, mother of the Emp. Louis Napoleon). She has since been buried here herself by the side of her mother. A kneeling statue veiled, by Bartolini, was erected to her memory, 1846, by her son, and bears the inscription "A la Reine Hortense, le Prince Louis Bonaparte." Josephine died, May 1814, at her favourite villa, 2 m. from Rueil, Malmaison. Her pleasure-grounds have been sold in lots; her conservatory and menageries, in which she took much delight, and the Swiss dairy and Merino farm, are swept away. The place seems to have owed its charms chiefly to art; the soil is very sterile. It was some time the property of Queen Christina of Spain, but the Emp. Louis Napoleon bought it in 1861. Buonaparte spent 5 days here in June 1815, between his second abdication and his final departure for Rochefort, having been sent out of Paris by Fouché and the provisional government.

The Seine is crossed for the second time shortly before arriving at 3½ Chatou Stat., by 2 bridges resting on an island which here divides the river. The village of Chatou lies on the rt. hand of the rly. and rt. bank of the Seine. A branch rly. has been constructed hence to St. Germain.

3¾ Le Pecq Stat., opposite the village of Le Pecq, which is a suburb of St. Germain, and is connected with it by a bridge of stone, erected 1835, in the place of one of wood, by which, in 1815, the Prussian army under Blücher crossed the river on its march upon Paris.

The Rly. is carried across the Seine and up a steep incline by atmospheric pressure into the middle of the town.

St. Germain-en-Laye Stat.—Inns: H. du Prince de Galles, fair, near the Rly. Stat.; de la Chasse Royale. There is a Restaurant at the S. end of the terrace, au Pavillon de Henri IV.; the best, but all dear. This deserted residence of kings is interesting from historical recollections, and pleasing from the grandeur of its site; but although it contains 14,283 Inhab., it has a melancholy air of abandonment in its grass-grown streets and straggling edifices. The huge gloomy pile of the Royal Château itself, the favourite residence of Marguerite de Valois, Henri II., Henri IV., Francis I., and the birthplace of Charles IX. and of Louis XIV., having been gutted at the Revolution, has nothing but its souvenirs to recommend it. It looks like a prison, and was converted into a military penitentiary, and surrounded by a wall for security. It is now closed, and permission is not granted to view the interior, which contains the chapel, the oldest part and the least impaired, the hall of Francis I., the bed-chamber of Madame de la Vallière, and the trap-door by which the youthful Louis gained entrance into it after his mother had caused the door of the backstair to be walled up; also the Oratory of James II., and the chamber in which he died, 1701. This palace was assigned to him as a residence by his host Louis XIV., who was tired of the place himself, having taken an aversion to it because it commanded a view of his destined resting-place St. Denis. James resided here 12 years, holding the semblance of a court. Part of his body, "une portion de la chair et des parties nobles du corps," was buried in the parish church, recently rebuilt and faced with a Doric portico, where a monument was erected to his memory by George IV.

The only real attraction in St. Germain at present is its beautiful Terrace, stretching along the brow of the hill for 2400 metres =  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m., and commanding a delightful prospect over the valley of the Seine and its windings, with the aqueduct of Marly on the rt., Château of Maisons on the l., the rlys. and the Arc de Triomphe de l'Etoile, with the spires of St. Denis rising against the horizon, in front; and a country-seat built by Anne of Austria, "Les Loges," around which a lively fair is held (la Fête des Loges) on the last Sunday in August, or 1st in September. Paris is hid from view by Mont Valerien.

The Forest of St. Germain, one of the largest in France, having a circuit of 21 m., occupies a promontory formed by a sweeping bend of the river Seine. It is intersected by roads offering agreeable rides and walks in all directions, and by the Rouen Rly. In the midst of it is the Pavillon de la Meute (Dog-kennel), begun by Francis I. Deer, roes, wild-boars, and wolves are found in the remote parts.

The name of St. Germain-en-Laye comes from a chapel and monastery of St. Germanus, built in the reign of King Robert, in the midst of the forest then called Silva Ledia.

Many English reside here, on account of the cheapness of living and the pure air. The Church service is performed on Sundays in a private room.

ROUTE 10.

PARIS TO ROUEN, BY MAGNY.

This was formerly one of the principal roads, but is now, of course, deserted.

Paris to Pontoise, by rail. (Rte. 3.)

Pontoise to Rouen 87 kil. = 54 m.
From Pontoise the road is tiresome to 14 Bord'haut, a hamlet dependent on the village of de Vigny, whose fine old Castle, flanked by round towers, topped with extinguisher roofs, and surrounded by a moat, stands on the l. of the road. It was built by the Cardinal d'Amboise, minister of Louis XII., and is a picturesque and interesting specimen of domestic architecture in the beginning of the 16th cent.

13 Magny.—Inn: Grand Cerf. In the pretty Church, in the latest Gothic, passing into the Italian style, is a monument, consisting of 3 marble statues kneeling, to the memory of the family of Villerond (date 1617); another in bas-relief recording the virtues of M. Dubuisson, pastor of the parish, and a richly ornamented canopy, carved, and bearing statues, which covers the baptismal font.

We now enter the district anciently called le Vexin. The little river Epte divided the French from the Norman Vexin, and formed the boundary of Normandy. It is crossed at St. Clair-sur-Epte, whose ruined Castle, a mixture of late Norman and early pointed, is reputed the scene of the interview between Charles the Simple and the pirate Rollo; when the barbarian conqueror, called upon to do homage for the fertile province of Normandy, which he had in fact wrung from the weakness of the Frankish king, instead of kneeling to kiss the king's foot, seized the royal leg, and without bending carried it to his mouth, so as to upset the monarch from his seat, amidst the laughter of the rude warriors of the north.

The Epte is crossed on quitting St. Clair.

17 Thilliers-en-Vexin, in the midst of a monotonous plain of rich corn-land. Near the middle of this stage the road passes, at some distance on the rt., a village called Hacqueville, insignificant in itself, but deserving mention as the birth-place of the late Mark Isambart Brunel, the engineer of the Thames Tunnel, whom England is proud to own as her son by adoption, although France claims him by birth. He was educated in the college of Gisors, and when the vacations called him home his favourite resort was the shop of the village carpenter, whose tools and instruments had greater attractions for the youthful engineer than Latin and Greek, and his allotted holiday task (devoirs). The writer of this has frequently heard him describe the wonder and delight with which he for the first time beheld (1784), on the quay of Rouen, the component parts of a huge steam-engine, just landed from

[France.]

England: "When I am a man," he said to himself, "I will repair to the country where such machinery is made."

15 Ecouis contains a fine Gothic Church, on the unusual plan of a Greek cross, founded by Enguerrand de Marigny, the unfortunate minister and high treasurer of Philippe le Bel, unjustly condemned to death without trial at the instigation of the succeeding king's uncle, Charles of Valois, and hung on the robbers' gibbet of Montfaucon. His monument, set up in this church at a time when his innocence and worth were acknowledged, was destroyed at the Revolution. That of his brother, Archbishop of Rouen, is still surmounted by his effigy in white marble. He went as ambassador to Edward III. in 1342, "and appeared at court in the guise of a warrior, not of a minister of peace." There are several other tombstones in the choir.

A rapid ascent and descent carries the road across the industrious and picturesque vale of the Andelle, in the midst of which is 9 Fleury-sur-Andelle. About 10 m. N.E. of this, and 2 from Lions la Forêt, are the ruins of the Abbey of Mortemer, begun 1154 by Henry II. of England. The church is pulled down; but some of the conventual buildings in the style of transition from round to pointed—including a fine chapter-house (date 1174)—remain. It was at Bourg-boudouin that Roland, the ex-minister and Girondist, committed suicide, 1793. As soon as he heard of his wife's death by the guillotine, he resolved not to survive her; but unwilling to endanger the generous friends who had sheltered him in their house at Rouen, he took leave of them, and, carrying a sword-stick in his hand, set out on the road to Paris. When he had got thus far, he sat down under a tree and stabbed himself, leaving about his person a note, written by his own hand, to this effect: "Whoever you may be who find me lying here, treat my remains with respect. They are those of one who devoted his whole life to be useful, and who died as he lived, virtuous and unsullied. May my fellow-citizens embrace more humane sentiments! When I heard of the death of my wife, I loathed a world stained with so many crimes." He perished an instance of the miserable fate which unerringly awaits those who, either from good or evil motives, are the first to plunge a country into revolution.

12 La Forge Féret.

From the brow of the steep hill leading down through deep cuttings into Rouen, a fine view is obtained of that city and the Seine. The upper and lower roads from Paris unite in the suburb Eanplet.

11 ROUEN (Rte. 8).

ROUTE 11.

THE SEINE, A.—ST. GERMAIN TO ROUEN.

The figures mark distances from place to place in French lieues = 2½ Eng. m. From St. Germain to Rouen is 56 leagues, about 140 Eng. m.

Steamers very uncertain; about 14 hrs. descending and 18 ascending. Not much used since the completion of the Railway (Rte. 8).

The scenery of the Seine (Sequana, —from the Celtic seach, devious, and an, water) is very pleasing, almost meriting the epithet "beautiful;" its banks are abundantly studded with towns, villages, and châteaux, and are alternately wooded, or rise in round bare hills, sometimes presenting escarpments to the river, which, from the white colour of the chalk, are not altogether picturesque. There are not many old castles—Château Gaillard, however, is an imposing and interesting ruin, and perhaps, taken as a whole, the finest feature in the voyage. The number of islands in the river between Paris and Rouen is said to be 300. The circuitous windings of the river prolong the distance from Pecq to Rouen to 141 m., while by land it is only 71 m.

The most interesting objects on the river are described Rte. 8.

The island Ile Belle, opposite Meulan, is reputed the prettiest in the whole course of the river; but it is feared its shrubberies, and thickets, and plantations have been cut down.

Before reaching Vernon is, rt., La Roche Guyon, one of the largest châteaux on the Seine, and one of the most striking objects, a structure of different ages, part modern, part Gothic, situated at the base of a rock of chalk, which has been escarped artificially to make room for it. The kitchen, vaults, cellars, &c., are excavated in the rock, with merely fronts of brick. The oldest part is the tower on the eminence above, commanding the country far and near, and communicating with the château by steps cut in the hill side. On the summit of the hill is a large reservoir for water, excavated out of the rock. The château, long the property of the La Roche-foucaults, now belongs to the family of Rohan. François de Bourbon, Comte d'Enghien, who gained the battle of Cérsoles, was killed here, during a scuffle with snowballs among the young courtiers, by a box full of linen being thrown upon his head from a window above: it is supposed by the Comte d'Aumale, afterwards Duc de Guise, and by order of the Dauphin. Francis I. was in the castle at the time. The chamber and bed occupied by Henri IV. on his frequent visits to the castle are kept in their original condition. The attraction which drew him hither was the charms of the lady of the castle, the Marquise de Guercheville, whose high-minded reply to his assiduities deserves recording: "Je ne suis pas d'assez bonne maison pour être votre femme, mais je suis de trop bonne maison pour être votre maîtresse." The bourg adjoining the castle has a handsome Gothic church. "The houses of the poor people here, as on the Loire in Touraine, are burrowed into the chalk, and have a singular appearance; here are 2 streets of them, one above another." —A. Young. A Suspension Bridge, of 656 ft. opening between the piers, has been thrown across the Seine here.

rt. Limetz, a village at a little distance from the river, nearly marks the situation of the embouchure of the Epte, a small stream, which once formed the boundary or limit of Normandy. Charles the Simple, in 911, was fain to offer to the Norman Rollo all the territory extending from this streamlet to the sea, and with it his fair daughter Gisela, to arrest the exterminating inroads of the warriors of the North. The offer was accepted; and Neustria, receiving the name of its conquerors, became Normandy.

rt. The hills which border the river, with nearly precipitous cliffs, have a singularly wavy outline, their curved tops being saddled, as it were, with green turf, while between them dry valleys or coombes open out. They rise in the form of an amphitheatre, encircling an extensive plain. Nearly at the centre of the curve which the Seine here describes, on the summit of a commanding chalk cliff, rises rt. Château Gaillard, the most picturesque ruin and interesting object, both from its situation and associations, in the lower course of the Seine. Immediately below its frowning antique towers and crumbling crags, a light and convenient wire suspension bridge has been thrown over the river.

The castle was begun and finished in one year by King Richard Cœur de Lion, in defiance of his rival Philippe Augustus, and in the face of the treaty of Louviers, by which he had bound himself not to fortify Andelys, the little town on the strand at the river side. He thus broke it in substance, while he kept to the letter. Exulting in his stronghold, as he first looked down from its commanding battlements on the defenceless town and exposed river below him, he named it, in the pride of his heart, his "Saucy Castle." Even now that it is reduced to a mouldering ruin, one cannot gaze up to its towering battlements, or down from them upon the sunny landscape below—the glassy Seine flowing close at the foot of the castle rocks, then girdling the peninsula in front, and reflecting vine and corn clad slopes, trees, spires, and cottages in its surface—without sharing in this feeling of exultation of the fierce soldier king, in the possession of a stronghold which enabled him to intercept the navigation of the Seine between Paris and the capital of Normandy, to separate the French king's forts of Vernon and Gisors, and overawe the country around with his armed bands and archers.

The eminence on which it stands projects forward, isolated from the neighbouring hills on all sides but one, where it is connected by a narrow tongue. This was cut through by a deep fosse skirting the outer line of wall. On all the other sides steep escarpments rendered the height inaccessible; towards the river, indeed, it presents a vertical precipice. Yet even along the edge of the cliff tall flanking towers were raised, some of which have long since toppled over, while others are tottering to their fall. But these were only the outworks; within them rose a citadel of singular form and strength,—a huge irregular circle or drum tower, having a wavy surface alternately projecting and receding, like a frustum of a fluted column. The circle is broken by the insertion of a round tower shaped externally like a dice-box on the side overhanging the Seine. This was the Donjon, and contained the royal apartments; its walls are 14 or 15 ft. thick. A second deep fosse surrounds this citadel, cut in the chalk rock, here interspersed with flints which were used in the building, and thus it served at once as quarry and defence. Extensive caverns, supported by piers of the rock left standing, branch off from one side of this fosse; they probably were used as stables. The original gateway into the citadel is no longer accessible, but entrance may be gained by clambering through a small sallyport in the corner. It is to be feared that only a small part of the existing ruins belonged to the castle of King Richard. At his death Philippe Augustus, waging war as the champion of Prince Arthur with John, laid siege to this castle. It was bravely defended by Roger de Lacy for 6 months, when he was finally starved into surrender. He had previously expelled from its walls the useless mouths, the old men, women, and children, to the number of 400 or 500; but the French king, wishing to distress the garrison, drove them back and refused them passage, so that the poor wretches, denied admittance into the castle, perished of famine in the ditches between the two armies. Château Gaillard continued to be the chief bulwark of Normandy down to 1606, when Henri IV. demolished it along with other castles as dangerous to the Royal authority. In 1314 two frail queens were immured within its walls, and one of them, Marguerite de Bourgogne (heroine of la Tour de Nesle), wife of Louis X., was strangled here by order of her husband. David Bruce found an asylum here 1334, when an exile from Scotland, the castle having been ceded to him by Philippe de Valois. With a small garrison of 120 men it resisted for 16 months the forces of Henry V., and yielded at length because cut off from a supply of water by the wearing out of the ropes by which the buckets were let down into the well!

Against the face of the cliff above the Seine rises a curious pigeon-house tower, lined with cells for the pigeons, a common appendage to ancient fortresses, being a sort of natural larder. A chapel of recent date has been excavated in the rock near it.

The suspension bridge over the Seine beneath the castle opens a communication with Louviers (12 m.), rt. Below the castle rock crouches the town of Petit Andelys (no Inn); the large and conspicuous red building, surmounted by a dome at the lower end of it, is an Hospital founded by the Duc de Penhièvre.

Grand Andelys (Inn, Cerf, dear; the house is a curious and picturesque specimen of domestic Gothic architecture within and without; it was the residence of the Archbishop of Rouen, Pierre Harley, temp. Henri IV.). This town of 5000 Inhab. lies about 1 m. inland away from the Seine. The Gothic ch., somewhat in decay, curiously Italianized on its N. side, contains some painted glass, and a rude representation of the neighbouring Château Gaillard carved in stone. It has many rich details, including a fine oriel. Turnebus, the Greek commentator, was a native of Andelys. The hamlet Villers,  $\frac{3}{4}$  m. from this, was the birthplace (1594) of Nicolas Poussin, the painter; but the humble cottage of his parents is pulled down. A monument was set up to his memory (1851) in the market-place of Great Andelys. In the Mairie is a picture by him—Coriolanus among the Volsci, receiving his mother and wife.

La Fontaine de Ste. Clothilde alone recalls to mind the monastery founded here by the first Christian queen of France. It is swept away, but the water of the well is believed by the peasantry still to retain the virtues imparted to it by the royal saint, and to cure their children of stomachaches.

Andelys is about 4 m. distant from the railroad (Rte. 8). There is a direct post-road to Rouen by Pont St. Pierre.

The Seine, leaving behind the white crags and towering ruins of Château Gaillard, makes a wide sweep along the base of a series of semicircular chalk cliffs. This curve of the river is 18 m. long, while the direct distance from (rt.) Thuit to the mouth of the Andelle is only 8 m. There is no place worth notice on the Seine between these two points. The railway emerges from a tunnel near (rt.) Venables, and skirts the river.

rt. The pretty and industrious valley of the Andelle opens out into the Seine at the foot of a green hill, "the last of a long promontory," bearing the name of Côte des Deux Amons. It is the scene of the old romantic Lai of Mary of France—of the young lover who was to marry the mistress of his heart, a king's daughter, provided he could carry her to the top of the hill without stopping to rest. He fell dead under his precious burthen, exhausted with the exertion, just as he reached the summit; at which the king's daughter died of a broken heart, and was buried in the same grave with him. The hardhearted father, who had caused this catastrophe by imposing such cruel conditions, struck with remorse, founded on the spot where it occurred a convent whose existence is traced to an early period, but the building now standing on the top of the hill is not older than 1685.

At Romilly, 8 m. up the valley of the Andelle, are the most extensive copper-works in France, consisting of a foundry with rolling-mills. The banks of the Andelle are studded with fulling-mills. A bridge has been thrown across for the rly. a little above the influx of

1. The Eure, from which the Dept. is named, a considerable and useful river, on which stands Louviers (Rte. 8). The Eure falls into the Seine  $2\frac{1}{2}$  m. above

1. Pont de l'Arche (Rte. 8). This town is only 12 m. from Rouen; whilst, in consequence of several serpentine bends, the distance by water is 33. The Seine abounds in islands in this part of its course, which increase the intricacies of the navigation.

1. A little below the bridge stand the remains of the Abbey of Bon Port, consisting of the refectory, and another monastic edifice, the ch. being quite destroyed. It was founded 1190 by Richard Cœur de Lion, in gratitude for his escape from drowning in the waters of the Seine, into which he had plunged in the heat of the chase while pursuing a stag. On reaching the bank, after a severe struggle with the current, he called the spot "bon port," and vowed to build a ch. The approach to the town of Elbœuf is marked by the number of tall chimneys, and the many floating arks moored in the midst of the river, used for washing wool.

1. Elbœuf, Pop. 18,821, is exclusively a manufacturing town, and, if Rouen has any claim to be compared to Manchester, it may be called a French Leeds, as one of the principal seats of the manufacture of cloth; more than half of its inhabitants, and about 20,000 persons in the adjoining communes being weavers, or occupied in other departments of this branch of industry. Its situation on the l. bank of the Seine is advantageous to its prosperity. The wise enactments of the sage Colbert (1669) promoted greatly its already thriving commerce; but the revocation of the Edict of Nantes annulled their good effect, dispersing its industrious artisans, who settled in Leyden, Norwich, and Leicester. The manufactures of Elbœuf did not recover from this check until the events of 1815, relieving France from the competition of Belgium, gave them so decided an impulse that their produce is now threefold greater than it was then. The value of the cloth made here in one year is estimated at more than a million sterling.

The two Gothic churches of St. Etienne and St. Jean contain curious painted glass; in the latter is a window presented by the clothworkers' guild somewhere about 1466, in which various implements of the craft, such as shears and teasels, are introduced.

The working classes are generally industrious and economical, and are consequently far better off than those of Rouen.

Steamers 3 times a-day to Rouen.

1. The Rocks of Orival, a range of chalk cliffs beginning at Elbœuf, consisting of detached pinnacles and projecting shelves, formed by the hard flint layers enclosed in the rock, present a singular outline of fantastic forms. On a platform half way up their face a small chapel has found a niche; it is partly excavated in the rock, so are likewise many small dwellings around it. One of these needles of chalk, called Roche de Pignon, rises 200 ft. above the river. The Rouen Rly. crosses the river and an island in the midst of it at an oblique angle near Oissel.

rt. From Oissel, marked by its spire, to Rouen the river is thickly set with islands bearing long rows of tall poplars. Beyond (rt.) Authieux the rt. bank rises in tall chalk cliffs, at the base of which, between them and the Seine, runs the road to Paris (Rte. 9), passing a series of villages and manufactories.

1. St. Etienne de Rouvray. William the Conqueror was hunting in the forest of Rouvray, which still exists behind this village, when the news was brought him of the death of Edward the Confessor, and of the usurpation of his throne by Harold, his brother-in-law.

ROUEN (Rte. 8).

ROUTE 12.

THE SEINE, B.—ROUEN TO HAVRE AND HONFLEUR.

34 leagues =  $85\frac{1}{2}$  Eng. m. The distance to Havre by land is 53 m.

Steamers uncertain.

The scenery is so pleasing, that, notwithstanding the windings of the river, the voyage in fine weather is very agreeable whenever steamers run.

The places where the steamers stop for passengers are marked by Italics.

The hour of starting varies so as to enable the vessels to meet the flood tide off Quillebœuf, and by the aid of it to pass the shifting sands there.

For some distance below Rouen the river is intersected by numerous islands, long narrow strips of earth planted with willows and poplars: a scene of rich verdure, but somewhat monotonous. The hills near Rouen are dotted with white country houses of its citizens and manufacturers.

rt. The vale of Bapaume, beset with cotton factories, opens out.

l. Petit Quevilly (3 m. from Rouen). Here is an ancient little chapel of St. Julien in the Romanesque style, terminating in an apse having the windows and doors roundheaded, built soon after 1162 by our Henry II., who had a hunting-seat in the adjoining forest. Though now degraded into a barn, it is an edifice possessing an interest for the antiquary.

rt. Canteleu, a château of the time of Louis XIV.; its terraces and gardens were laid out by Le Nôtre, but have been modernised.

rt. Dieppedale, a long row of houses bordering the river.

l. Grand Quevilly once contained a Protestant ch. (temple) capable of holding 10,500 persons; but in 1685, through the machinations of the Jesuits, it was closed, and a few months after razed to the ground. This act of intolerance was committed shortly before the revocation of the Edict of Nantes entailed persecution and exile on the large and industrious Reformed community which then occupied this district.

l. Moulineaux (4), a prettily situated but poor village, on the high road to Honfleur (Rte. 23), has a ruinous but interesting ch. in the earliest pointed style; date the beginning of the 13th cent. On the hill above it are some of the walls and some dungeons of a castle destroyed by King John, which, according to the tradition, once belonged to Robert the Devil, a fabulous personage, a sort of Norman Blue Beard, who murdered his friends and mistresses, and in the end sold himself to the evil one. Some suppose him to have been Duke Robert, the father of William the Conqueror.

l. Near La Bouville and Caumont are extensive quarries of building-stone. Bare yellow cliffs line the river for some distance.

rt. St. George de Boscherville. This famous abbey stands at some distance from the Seine, near the Havre road (Rte. 13), and is only just visible from the river.

The Seine makes a bend 18 m. long between Rouen and this point; in a direct line they are not more than 10 m. apart.

rt. Duclair ( $5\frac{1}{2}$ ), a pretty village traversed by the road to Havre (Rte. 13), squeezed in between the river and the rocks, one of which, an elevated crag, goes by the name of la Chaire de Gargantua. The rt. bank again sweeps round to the S., its elevated slopes covered with hanging woods.

rt. It is recorded that at the little hamlet of Mesnil, Agnes Sorel, mistress of Charles VII., breathed her last, in the arms of the king. An old building is still pointed out as her abode; it retains its chimneys of the 15th cent. It was called Mesnil la Belle; it is now a labourer's cottage. The l. bank below Mesnil has risen into round hills of considerable height, part bare, part wooded; houses few, and scenery solitary. To this succeeds on the rt. a plain, verdant and bosky, formed into a peninsula by the winding river, out of the midst of which rise the now spireless twin towers of Jumièges Abbey (Rte. 13).

1. The Château de Mailleraye (7½), situated at the water's edge, below the village of Guerbaville, where there is a large shipbuilder's yard, belongs to the Duc de Mortemart. It is an edifice of the 17th cent., in a park surrounded by green walls of straight clipped trees, and is a conspicuous object from the river, but not otherwise worth notice.

Below Mailleraye the river expands considerably, and its channel begins to be beset with the sand-banks which render its navigation so difficult, leaving only a narrow passage in the middle free.

rt. Caudebec (2½), the most considerable and prettily situated town on the banks of the Lower Seine; its long terrace of houses, screened by an avenue of green trees, and surmounted by its elegant church spire, was a favourite subject of the landscape painter Vernet. It is described in Rte. 13.

rt. A humble structure at the foot of the steep wooded heights below Caudebec is the chapel of Notre Dame de Barre-y-va, much resorted to by sailors, who have covered its walls with ex-votos, paintings, models of ships, &c. The name probably comes from the circumstance of the much-dreaded Barre, or Bore, at the mouth of the Seine, ascending at times thus far.

rt. Villequier, prettily placed, and forming an agreeable intermixture of trees and houses surmounted by a Gothic spire, is a fishing village and station of the pilots. The Ch. has some late painted glass, and its original font.

1. Vatteville la Rue.

The Seine, which has run nearly due S. from Caudebec, resumes its proper direction from E. to W. below Vieux Port, and preserves the same as far as its mouth. Its banks, retiring to a considerable distance from each other, allow it to expand into a wide but shallow estuary, frequently enlivened by large shipping, tug steamers (remorqueurs), &c.

1. Quillebœuf (no good Inn), an important town and small seaport which Henri IV. wanted to convert into a fortress, but which his widow Marie de Medicis dismantled, is built on a projecting promontory, at the extremity of which stands its massive church-tower and lighthouse. The Ch. is Norman (11th cent.) and has some points of interest. This is the station of the pilots to the number of 110, with 28 apprentices (aspirants), whose duty it is to carry vessels through the intricate navigation of the mouth of the Seine, from Havre and Honfleur up to Villequier.

This is the most difficult and dangerous portion of the whole river for vessels, on account of the strong tide and shifting sands, only to be passed during high tide. Shipwrecks occurred here almost every year before the introduction of steam towage, which, by enabling vessels to pass up, even when the wind is unfavourable, has diminished the delay and risk. So variable are the sand-banks off Quillebœuf that they have been known to change their position more than a league in the course of twelve months: this indeed occurred in 1840. The cause of this must be looked for in the sandbanks below, and in the sudden contraction of the river at this point to about ¼ m., while a little below it is 3 m. wide. The consequence is that the vast mass of water poured into the Seine very commonly enters the river in the form of a lofty wave or wall of water, 1 to 3 ft. high, here called the Barre, and similar to the Bore at the mouth of the Severn. It stretches across from one bank to the other, marked by a line of white foam, sweeping all before it with a roar like thunder, heard forty minutes before it arrives. It seems to acquire the greatest force abreast of Quillebœuf, where it dashes over the quays, hurling vessels against them, and sometimes injuring the buildings, but it is perceived as high as Caudebec.

The still water produced at the point where the rising tide encounters the descending current allows the sand and mud, carried along by the river when in rapid motion, to fall to the bottom, and accumulate into shifting sand-banks. Among these the "Télémaque," a vessel said to have been laden with property belonging to émigrés, and with jewels of the Bourbon princes, was lost at the time of the Revolution. A recent attempt to raise the hull failed.

The Government of Louis Napoleon are improving the harbour of Quillebœuf.

rt. Through the vista of the valley of the Bolbec, which opens out opposite Quillebœuf, a glimpse is obtained of the castle towers of Lillebonne, celebrated for its remains of a Roman theatre (Rte. 13).

rt. The opening of another small valley is marked on one side by a conspicuous conical white rock called Pierre Gante (? Géante), overhanging the Seine at a height of 200 ft., and on the other by the Castle of Tancarville, the venerable stronghold of the chamberlains of the Dukes of Normandy, planted on a pedestal of high cliff forming part of the headland called Nez de Tancarville. To the water-side it presents an open terrace, on which stands a modern mansion, with sash windows, and a tall watch-tower, round on one side, and angular like a bastion on the other. Behind stretch two long lines of varied and stately towers connected by curtains forming a large triangular enclosure, once the castle courts, now grass-grown and encumbered with ruins. The country behind it is one dense forest, over which these ancient battlements peer majestically. The best-preserved portions are the gatehouse with caged windows, and grooves for double portcullis, and the contiguous tower dating from the latter half of the 15th cent. Here, within walls 9 ft.

thick, may be seen the "cachots"—and the "chambre de question" which is frequently mentioned in the old archives. In the corner tower (l'Aigle), on the brow of the cliff overhanging the Seine, one or two old wall-pieces, so constructed as to be loaded from the breech, are preserved. In this part only of the old castle do roofs and floors remain. All the rest is mere shattered walls, gutted towers, enclosures dark and overgrown with nettles and hemlock, which now luxuriate on the hearths of the Tancarville, Montmorencys, Harcourts, and La Tours d'Auvergne, its ancient owners. The chapel and the Salle des Chevaliers, with 3 fireplaces, are pointed out to strangers. The loftiness of some of the towers, and their singular form, deserve notice: the Tour de Lion is the segment of a circle; the Tour Coquisart, 60 ft. high, of 5 stories piled one over the other, and still surmounted by the stone-groined ribs of its roof, while all the rest is fallen, is in the shape of a triangle with curved sides. It communicates behind with the Donjon, which was detached from the body of the place and entered only by a drawbridge. It contains a well 300 ft. deep. The date of its construction is the early part of the 15th cent., and scarcely any portion of the castle seems older. The English under Henry V. burned down the preceding one 1437. The modern mansion is tumbling to pieces as fast as possible. From the noble owners whose names are mentioned above, Tancarville fell into the hands of Law of Lauriston, the South Sea schemer. It was plundered and demolished at the Revolution as the property of aristocrats and émigrés (the Montmorencys); but after having been for 20 years attached to a hospital at Havre, it has once more reverted to that family. The poor small hamlet of fishers' huts beneath the castle affords no tolerable accommodation for travellers. The distance from Lillebonne is 6 m., and from St. Romain on the road to Havre (Rte. 14) about 7½ m.

Below this the banks of the Seine are too distant and destitute of objects of interest to need further notice, excepting the towns and ports of

rt. HARFLEUR, in Rte. 14.

1. Honfleur, described in Rte. 23.

Passengers can be put ashore here, where they can take the Rly. to Lisieux and Caen. It is about 7 m. across to rt. HAVRE, in Rte. 14.

ROUTE 13.

ROUEN TO HAVRE—LOWER ROAD, BY ST. GEORGE BOSCHERVILLE, JUMIÈGES, CAUDEBEC, AND LILLEBONNE.

86 kilom = 53½ Eng. m.

Although the Railroad from Rouen to Havre (Rte. 14) is the quickest way, yet the following rte. is one of the most agreeable in Normandy, both for the pleasing view of the Seine which it commands, and for the succession of ancient ecclesiastical remains in the vicinity of which it passes. It is, however, hilly. A little way beyond the industrious cotton-spinning village of Bapaume, it surmounts the long and steep hill of Canteleu, from whose top Rouen is seen to very great advantage, and the Seine winding away S. to double the ridge of which the hill of Canteleu forms a part. On the l. is the Château of Canteleu, belonging to M. Elie Lefebvre, which commands the view in perfection, and about 2 m. beyond it a road turning off to the l. leads to the Abbey of St. George de Boscherville, whose Church is one of the most ancient and unaltered monuments in Normandy. It was founded by Raoul de Tancarville, chamberlain of the Conqueror, previous to the Conquest, and consecrated in the founder's presence. From the precision with which its age is fixed, it has been termed "a landmark of Norman architecture." The Abbey was destroyed at the Revolution, but the church was preserved for the use of the parish. It has the usual characteristics of pure Norman—vast proportions, simplicity, and austere grandeur. Its W. end has a round door ornamented with 5 mouldings, and 2 side towers, in whose upper story the pointed arch of a very early date appears. This may have been the part of the church last finished. The vaulting of the nave and transepts is also pointed, all the rest is Norman; the arches are carried round the ends of the transepts, forming 2 lofts or tribunes supported on a column, and there is an apse at the E. end of each, as in Winchester Cathedral, the older part of which is very like this church. The Chapter-house adjoining is of later date, 1157, and of mixed architecture, both round and pointed arches occurring in it. The capitals of its columns, sculptured with subjects in relief, such as the Passage of the Jordan and the Sacrifice of Isaac, merit notice.

Returning to the high road, you descend to the borders of the Seine, on which is situated the village and post-station.

20 Duclair (6 m. from St. George's), a row of houses between the river and the cliffs, one of which, from a supposed resemblance to a pulpit, is called Chaire de Gargantua. The Ch. tower is good Norman work, and supports a fine broad spire.

The Seine once more takes a widely curving sweep, while the high road cuts across the neck of the peninsula. In the midst of this the twin towers of the Abbey of Jumièges are conspicuous. A cross road turns off to it near Yainville, whence it is about 2 m. distant. It was the most important monastic institution on the banks of the Lower Seine for its extent, the number of its inmates, and its share in promoting learning during the dark ages, and it now towers venerable and majestic above the humble timber-framed and chalk-walled cottages of the village. It has been compared with some of the Romanesque churches of the Rhine its plain but stately W. façade, surmounted by octagonal towers which have now lost their spires, but between them the porch projects in an unusual manner. This and the entire nave as far as the cross, surmounted by a more massive central tower, one side of which only remains standing, is of unchanged early Norman (date 1067, the year after the Conquest). The round arches are supported alternately on square piers and circular columns; their capitals, destitute of any sculpture, were ornamented with painted foliage, some traces of which still remain. The interior is in a state of ruin, entirely roofless, save a small fragment of vaulting in the aisles, and open to the rains of heaven; greensward supplies the place of pavement; the E. end, which was in the pointed style of the 13th cent., has been razed to its foundations. For the origin of this dilapidation the Revolution has to answer, but its consummation is of very recent date, this ancient and interesting fabric having been absolutely quarried and carted away to build barns with its masonry. The stone employed is a hard chalk enclosing flints, which are frequently exposed in the courses of the piers. The present owner fortunately has respect for the ruins, and watches over their preservation, having fitted up the old gatehouse for his residence. A number of curiously and rudely sculptured fragments, keystones, bas-reliefs, &c., have been discovered by him, and merit notice. Beneath a plain black marble slab, fractured into several pieces, and lying in a corner, was once deposited the heart of "Agnes Seurelle (Sorel), Dame de Breauté." She died near this, at Mesnil, and Charles VII., her royal lover, had apartments fitted up in the abbey in order to be near her. She was a benefactress to Jumièges, and the monks retained her heart, though her body was interred at Loches in Touraine. Breauté was the name of one of her domains; some have read the inscription erroneously "Dame de Beauté." Here also another mutilated monument has been brought to light. It consists of mutilated effigies of youths in royal garbs, with circlets on their heads, known by the name of "les Enervés" (i. e. the hamstrung), from a tradition that they represent the two sons of Clovis II., who, having rebelled and waged war against their father, suffered the cruel punishment of having the sinews of their arms and legs cut. They were then bound and set adrift in an open boat on the Seine, whose current wafted them down as far as Jumièges, where they were kindly received by the monks, and ended their days. On the S. side of the ch. are remains of the chapel of St. Pierre, a pointed work of the 14th cent.; and of a large vaulted apartment called "Salle des Gardes de Charles VII.," parallel with which runs a very extensive range of subterranean vaults, probably cellars, and the gatehouse.

The high road beyond Yainville and Le Trait is carried on a lofty terrace along the shoulders of the hills, commanding a most pleasing view of the windings of the Seine both upwards and down. Nearly in front the intervening slopes are covered with orchards and gardens, and on the opposite bank stands the Château of Mailleraye, a conspicuous and large edifice (Rte. 12). At the little village Caudebecquet, about 3 m. before reaching Caudebec, a road turning to the rt. leads in 1½ m. to another monastic ruin, of inferior interest to the other two, but of great antiquity, St. Wandrille, founded by the saint of that name in the 7th cent., and at first called Fontanelle. Here may be seen some elegant pointed arches, sole relics of a ch. sold at the Revolution for building-materials, and pulled down or blown up since 1828. The conventual buildings, a palace in extent, are in the Italian architecture of the 16th or 17th cent., and have been converted partly into a manufactory of Jacquerie, partly into a bark warehouse and mill. The Cloisters behind them contain several arches, rich morceaux of flamboyant Gothic, and a Lavatory, with a few relics of sculpture, becoming fewer every day through wanton mutilation. Part of the Refectory is Norman, and lined with a circular arcade.

The good judgment of the monks is very conspicuous in the choice of the site for this convent, a nook shut out from the world in a side valley of the Seine, fertile, well watered, and wooded. St. Wandrille now stands a monument of the fall of ecclesiastic pomp and wealth. The hill side to the N. was terraced to form gardens and shady walks, now grown wild. On the top of the height above them is a little chapel of St. Saturnin, an early Norman structure (11th cent.), with 3 apses and windows like loopholes and walls of herring-bone masonry, many centuries older than any part of the convent below. St. Wandrille is about 4 m. from 16 Caudebec.—Inn: Poste, extortionate; Commerce. This is one of the prettiest little antiquated towns on the Seine, with its quay and terrace along the waterside, shaded by trimmed elms, forming a screen before the row of houses which face the river. The old wooden buildings in the heart of it have been scarcely at all modernized, and are highly picturesque. In its outskirts the hills are dotted with neat villas and country seats. Its only remarkable edifice is its Church, a beautiful Gothic building in the florid style of the 15th cent., in the form of a parallelogram without transepts. It is surmounted by a tower having a short steeple of open stonework, the flamboyant tracery in it taking the form of fleurs-de-lis. Its flying buttresses and variously patterned parapets are very elegant. It was begun 1426, and stands at the side of the church. In the W. end, the gorgeous triple portal, with side porches bent back, all exuberantly ornamented with carved foliage, statues, and niches, and the rose window above, merit notice. Also the N. porch.

Within, there is much fine painted glass of the 16th cent., and a wooden cover to the font, well carved in relief with subjects from the life of Christ. The spaces between the buttresses are occupied by small chapels; those at the E. end expand, and the central one, the Lady Chapel, behind the high altar, is distinguished by a finely groined roof, the ribs of which descend in the centre to form a pendant of stone, 14 ft. long, ending in a carved boss, or cul de lampe. In the next chapel of St. Sepulchre is a group of 8 figures, as large as life, representing the holy personages at the tomb of our Lord, under a florid Gothic canopy. The master mason of the church, William Le Tellier, is buried in the Lady Chapel: he was employed on it 30 years, down to his death, 1484, and in that time completed the upper part of the nave, the choir and chapels around it, including the Lady Chapel and its pendant.

Caudebec was anciently a strong fortress, capital of the Pays de Caux; it was taken 1419 by the English, under Talbot and Warwick; and, during the wars of religion, Alexander Farnese, Duke of Parma, commander of a Spanish force sent in aid of the League, lost his arm in reconnoitring the ramparts, 1592. His army, having been hemmed in by that of Henri IV., escaped by crossing the Seine here—a masterly movement, effected without loss of a gun or a man, under fire of a Dutch flotilla.

In Rue de la Boucherie is a bit of good domestic Gothic, 13th cent., once a convent.

Omnibus to Yvetot Stat., 7 m., Rte. 14.

About 1½ m. up the valley, near the road which goes to Yvetot (Rte. 14), stands the Church of St. Gertrude, repaired 1841: it merits notice for its architecture, Gothic of the 16th cent., its stone tabernacle, and painted glass.

The Havre road beyond Caudebec quits the borders of the Seine, not to rejoin it until Harfleur is passed. It mounts a steep ascent and traverses a part of the table-land of the Pays de Caux. There is nothing of interest until you descend into the valley where lies the town of 16 Lillebonne (Inn: H. du Commerce), numbering 5000 Inhab., prettily situated on the stream of the Bolbec, and interesting on account of its Roman theatre—a relic of the ancient

Julia Bona of the itineraries of Antonine and Ptolemy, capital of the Caletes (inhabitants of the Pays de Caux), of which the present town occupies the site, and retains (with a slight change) the name. The road, on entering the town, passes under the old Castle on the rt., and nearly over the space which must have anciently been the stage of the Theatre. On the l. hand is seen the semicircular portion allotted to the spectators, for the most part cut out of the hill, which, forming a gradual slope for the rows of seats to rest on, saved the cost of vast substructions—an advantage of which the Romans and Greeks usually availed themselves in their theatres. The remains consist chiefly of foundations, and have been laid open since 1812. The fragments of walls in the centre belonged probably to the orchestra, those on the slope of the side to the dressing-rooms. On the hill, among fragments of masonry, are several semicircular terraces, one above the other, with traces of the vomitories, or entrances; and round the whole runs a corridor or vaulted passage, gradually rising from the side to the centre, by which entrance was obtained to the highest seats. The walls and part of the vaults here remain tolerably perfect; they are supported by many spurs or buttresses. The walls are faced with ashlar masonry, or with small stones about the size of bricks neatly jointed, the centre filled in with rubble of flint strongly cemented with grouting, the whole banded together at irregular intervals by horizontal courses of red tiles. The stone employed is a porous but coherent calcareous tufa, or travertine, which is to this day deposited by the water of a neighbouring brook.

This is the best preserved, and indeed almost the only example of an ancient theatre in the N. of France, or of Europe. It measured across the chord of the arc 300 ft., and the dimensions of the circular corridor were 625 ft. The ground in and about the town can scarcely be turned up without disclosing ancient remains of one sort or another. In 1823 a fine bronze male statue (now in the British Museum) was discovered; and the Museum at Rouen has been greatly enriched from this mine of antiquities.

On the opposite side of the high road, looking down upon the theatre, is the Castle, a picturesque ruin, historically interesting as the residence of Wm. the Conqueror, who here called together his barons to unfold the momentous scheme of the invasion of England. The massive outer walls now serve to enclose a garden and modern house; close beside it is a tall round tower of beautifully even masonry, having walls 13 ft. thick, and some finely ribbed vaults; isolated by a deep fosse, crossed by a drawbridge. It is a construction of the 15th cent., built probably by the Harcourts, who owned the castle down to the Revolution. Not far off is a mutilated angular tower of the 13th or 14th cent., The great Norman hall, in which, according to the tradition, William met his barons in council, has been entirely swept away by the present proprietor, a cotton-spinner. The commanding elevation of these ruins gives them a magnificent view over the adjacent valley, with a peep, through a gap at its extremity, of the broad estuary of the Seine 3 m. below the town.

The Parish Church has a fine tower and spire, similar to that of Harfleur, but inferior, and a rich portal.

Owing to the abundant supply of water from the neighbouring hills, Lillebonne has become a manufacturing town, and cotton-mills have multiplied considerably about it, especially up the valley towards Bolbec: calicos and indiennes are principally made here.

The Castle of Tancarville (Rte. 12) is 6 m. distant from Lillebonne, by cross-roads, the latter part so narrow and steep as to be practicable only for a light carriage. A cabriolet may be hired for 12 fr. to go thither, and on to St. Romain on the Havre road, waiting to allow the traveller to see the castle. The direct road from Lillebonne to Havre passes within 3 m. of the castle: the diligences go round by Bolbec. (Rte. 14.) Both roads meet at 18 La Botte.

In descending from the Plain de Caux towards

Harfleur, a fine view is obtained of that town, its noble spire, and the Seine beyond. The railroad hence to 17 HAVRE is described in Rte. 14.

ROUTE 14.

ROUEN TO HAVRE—RAILROAD.

	Miles.
Rouen Stat.
Barentin Stat. . . . .	10
Yvetot Stat. . . . .	24
Beuzeville Stat. . . . .	39
Havre Stat. . . . .	55½

95 kilom. = 55½ Eng. m.

4 or 5 trains daily, in 2 and 3 hrs.

This line was opened 1847. Its engineer is Mr. Jos. Locke, and its construction is almost entirely due to English skill, enterprise, and capital.

It is carried, for the most part of the way, over the high and fertile table-land of the Pays de Caux.

The station at Rouen is in the Rue Verte (Rte. 8).

On quitting the station you pass through the tunnel Cauchois, under the suburb of Bouvreuil and the cemetery of St. Gervais. A fifth tunnel succeeds, which ends near the village of Déville.

Even after Rouen is a long way left behind, the country traversed by the road exhibits the vivifying effects of the cotton industry, in mills or factories, country-houses, villages, &c. Among these are Maromme (Stat.), and Déville, situated in a pretty valley which bears its name.

Malainay Stat.

Here is a Viaduct of 8 arches, and an embankment, over the Dieppe road. Near this the branch Railway to Dieppe (Rte. 6) diverges.

A 6th tunnel, nearly 1 m. and 3 fur. long, pierces the heights of Piccy-Poville, and the railroad crossing the high grounds is carried across the valley of

Barentin—Stat.

The curved Viaduct of Barentin, of 27 arches, each 60 ft. span, the central arch 108 ft. high, 765 yds. long, was constructed by Messrs. Mackenzie and Brassey. It gave way in the early part of 1846. It was reconstructed in the short space of 6 months, at great cost, with the utmost care and solidity.

Barentin is a town of 2700 Inhab., in a small valley on the stream of the Austreberthe, which sets in movement many cotton-mills; the railway leaves it on the l. Omnibus to Duclair on the Seine, 6½ m., near which are the ruined abbeys of St. George Boscherville (Rte. 13) and Jumieges (Rte. 13).

The railway has now emerged by gradual ascents out of the basin in which Rouen lies, to the table-land of the Pays de Caux, an elevation of about 400 feet.

Yvetot Stat. (Inn, a cabaret) is an industrious little town of 9032 Inhab., with houses of timber, containing some manufactures of cotton, but destitute of water and of objects of interest. The title of "Roi d'Yvetot" has given a wide celebrity to its name, and has greatly puzzled antiquaries and local historians, who have failed in proving the existence of any sovereign authority, or in discovering the origin of the title.

There is a tradition that one Gauthier, Lord of Yvetot, having offended King Clothair, son of Clovis, and having been banished his presence, ventured to throw himself at the feet of the king while he was kneeling in prayer before the high altar at Soissons on Good Friday, thinking that the holiness of the place, and of the day of pardon for the sins of mankind, might obtain forgiveness for him also. Clothair, however, no sooner saw him than he drew his sword and slew him, but, repenting afterwards of his crime, and desiring to make atonement to Gauthier, created his heirs kings of Yvetot. But this story has no gr foundation. Béranger describes the king of Yvetot :—

"Il était un roi d'Yvetot,
Peu connu dans l'histoire,
Se levant tard, se couchant tôt,
Dormant fort bien sans gloire,
Et couronné par Jeanneton
D'un simple bonnet de coton."

Diligence to Caudebec, 7 m. Rte. 13.

Here, in the very heart of the Pays de Caux, the traveller will now in vain look for the Canchoise head-dress, once commonly worn by the women. It was a huge structure of cambric and lace, something between a cap and a helmet, and appears to have been the fashion even in England during the 15th and 16th centuries. The modern modes of Paris have driven it out of the field, even in remote Norman villages, and it is now rarely seen.

The Pays de Caux, through the centre of which the railroad runs, retains the name, slightly altered, of its ancient inhabitants in Cæsar's time, the Caletes (? Celts). It is a high table-land, only here and there intersected by river-courses, exceedingly fertile, though somewhat arid. Trees are rare on the high ground, except the usual avenues of fruit-trees on the road-side, and around villages and farm-houses, whose existence and position are invariably denoted by a sort of verdant rampart of stiff elms, planted in straight lines and double rows, on or near a high bank of earth; you may be sure that a farm or château is hid behind such an enclosure.

Nointot Stat. Omnibus to Bolbec and Lillebonne. [4 m. S. is Bolbec, a fresh-looking town (9834 Inhab.) of staring brick houses, which replace those of wood destroyed by a great fire in the last century: situated in one of the pleasant little valleys which intersect the Pays de Caux. It contains a number of cotton-mills, manufactories of calicos, printed stuffs, and handkerchiefs; printworks, bleaching-grounds, &c.; in short, it is one of the most industrious places in the Dépt. of the Seine Inférieure, and owes its prosperity to the Protestants. The abundant stream which runs through it, and is a main cause of this activity, turns no less than 113 usines before it joins the Seine below Lillebonne. That ancient town (see Rte. 13) is only 5 m. distant; its Roman Theatre merits notice.]

Bolbec lying in a depression of the table-land, high embankments and a viaduct were required to carry the railway across it.

At Mirville is a viaduct of 48 brick arches, the highest 106 ft. above the ground. Hence there is a steep incline (requiring an extra engine to surmount in coming from Havre) by which the railway descends nearly to a level with the Seine at Beuzeville Junct. Stat. Railway to Fécamp (Rte. 18).

HARFLEUR Stat. Harfleur (1500 Inhab.) is situated on the Lézarde, a small stream now barely navigable, and 2 m. distant from the Seine, yet Monstrelet calls it "le souverain port de la Normandie." The deposits brought down by the Lézarde have contracted its bed, and formed a fringe of land along the shore of the Seine, which has greatly increased the distance between the town and the estuary. Before the rise of Havre, Harfleur was the chief port of the mouth of the Seine, at which the wool of Spain and Portugal was imported and sent up to Montevilliers to be wrought, while by reason of its fortifications it was the key to the entrance of the Seine. In 1415 it resisted for 40 days the besieging army of Henry V., who, as soon as it had yielded, uncovered his feet and legs and walked barefoot to church to say his prayers, after which he collected the inhabitants to the number of 8000, and turning them out of their houses with only the clothes on their backs, banished them and confiscated their property, substituting English colonists in their place. In 20 years, however, the town was surprised by a band of peasants, aided by a number of the former inhabitants, and the English were expelled. The tower, spire, and N. aisle of its Church, built in the 15th cent., it is said, by Henry V., and its fringed N. portal, are deservedly praised as masterpieces of Gothic.

The E. end dates from the 13th centy. The body of the church has, however, suffered so severely from decay and injudicious repairs, as to be scarcely worth a visit. The tower is well seen from the railway. There is a fine timber-house (15th centy.) near the Ch.

The Terrace of the Château of Orcher, running along the heights above the town, commands a remarkably fine view of the river.

From Harfleur to Havre the railroad is carried along the side of a hill, sloping gently down to the Seine, whose embouchure is seen at intervals between the trees and houses. On the rt. a little above the road stands Graville. Its small church, prettily situated on a wooded bank, is Norman of the end of the 11th century. Its transepts are decorated externally with round intersecting arches, surmounted by figures of animals. The capitals of the pillars in the nave are sculptured with monsters. In the courtyard behind the Hôtel de Ville are caves in the rock, once the monks' cellars. The church was built in honour of St. Honorius. Her relics were removed for safety, at the Norman invasion, to Conflans, and confided to the custody of the monks, who, when the danger was overpast, refused to restore them. Notwithstanding this loss, the place where they had been retained its sanctity, so that more pilgrims and worshippers repaired hither than to the church at Conflans which actually held them! In spite of some injudicious repairs lately executed, this church still presents an appearance of great antiquity, and is very well worth a visit. Remains of the masonry of a quay, with rings to attach vessels, are said to have been found under Graville. N.B. The omnibuses from Havre stop nearly a mile short of the church: those to Harfleur pass close beneath it.

Havre Terminus, close to the Cours Napoléon, and not far from Bassin Vauban. It covers 36 acres.

HAVRE.—Inns: H. Frascati, outside the walls, on the seashore, far from the Rly., with a good table-d'hôte, reading-room, and neat and cheap warm-baths. H. de l'Europe, Rue de Paris, dear. H. de l'Amirauté, Wheeler's Hotel, H. des Indes, all on the Quai, near the steamers.

Havre (now le Hâvre, originally Hâvre de Grace, from a small chapel of Notre Dame de Grace which stood on its site), the port of the Seine and of Paris, one of the most thriving maritime towns of France, is situated on the N. side of the estuary of the Seine, and contains 70,000 Inhab. It is quite a modern town, owing its foundation to Francis I. (1516), and its prosperity to the judicious enactments of Louis XVI., though it has received its great impulse since the war, and has been rapidly gaining upon its elder rivals, Bordeaux and Nantes. It has no fine buildings nor historical monuments; its streets are laid down chiefly in straight lines, and at right angles with one another, and they are grouped round the basins, or docks, which communicate from one to the other by lock-gates, and are entered from the outer (avant) port. The quays bordering on the basins, lined with vessels, and choked up with cotton-bales, sugar-casks, &c., are the chief scenes of life. The strange cries and glittering plumage of parrots and macaws will remind the stranger of the connexion of the port with tropical countries. Its principal street (and it is a handsome one) is the Rue de Paris, extending through the Place du Spectacle from the Hôtel de Ville to the Pier, at the entrance of the port, constructed on the site of the old Tour de François I.

Improvements have been made here. The old ramparts, which completely surrounded the town, were removed in 1856, and Havre, Ingouville, and Graville, containing a population of near 70,000, are united. New Fortifications, including the whole, with detached fort, are in progress. The Citadel, built by Richelieu, in which Cardinal Mazarin shut up, in 1650, the leaders of the Fronde, the Princes of Condé, Conti, and Longueville, "the lion, the ape, and the fox, caught in one trap," to use the expression of Gaston of Orleans, has been dismantled. The release of these distinguished captives was at length effected (Feb. 1651) by one of those sudden popular risings so common in the history of the Fronde. Mazarin, prostrated from the height of power by this revolution, bethought himself how he might make friends of his former victims, and, disguised as a courier, posted off instantly from Paris, in order to be the first to tell the joyous news, and unlock the prison gates. Assuming an air of the most obsequious servility, he assured them he had no hand in their imprisonment, and stooped to kiss the boot of Condé, as the hero mounted his carriage, amidst salvos of artillery, on his way to Paris.

The body of water passing up the Seine keeps up the water in the harbour, so that there is high-water for nearly four hours each tide; at low-water the Avant-Port is left dry. The harbour consists of the Avant-Port or tidal harbour and 7 docks; the Bassin du Commerce (14 acres), in front of the theatre, and two other docks (one of 15 acres) communicating with it; the Bassin de la Floride, destined for large Atlantic steamers, which make the passage to New York, with a very wide dock entrance; and two docks, Barre and Vauban, near the railway station. The largest of all is le Bassin de l'Eure. There is no dry dock in the harbour, and vessels are either hove down or taken into a floating dock for repairs. The principal foreign trade is with America, and numerous large liners usually lie alongside the quays.

The saying of Napoleon, that "Paris, Rouen, and Havre formed only one city, of which the Seine was the highway," explains the cause of the prosperity of Havre. It is the place of import of all the foreign articles needed for the supply of the French metropolis: like Liverpool with us, it is the chief cotton port of France, furnishing this commodity to the manufacturer of Rouen, Lille, St. Quentin, and even as far as Alsace, and from these cities it again receives the manufactured goods for exportation. Much of the cotton now goes by the railway, but the huge barges called chalands, towed by steamers, are still employed. Havre is the principal port of communication between France and the United States; and a great number of emigrants, many from Germany, annually embark here for the New World.

The imports of Havre, though only one-half in quantity and weight of those of Marseilles (the chief seaport in France), are said nearly to equal them in value. The number of vessels belonging to the port is considerable. More than a million tons of shipping enter in and out yearly. Some of the principal mercantile houses here are English and American.

The shipbuilders of Havre, especially M. Normand, enjoy a high reputation for the skill and science which they display in the construction of their vessels, yet their shipyards are nothing more than an open space on the sea-beach, outside the fortifications, fenced in with a wooden paling.

The N. Jette is the principal promenade, and very amusing it is at high-water. By a system of balls hoisted on a staff the state of the tide is communicated to the lighthouse on La Hève, and repeated for the benefit of vessels in the offing.

The annals of Havre are connected with the history of England at several points. Henry of Richmond embarked here, 1485, for Milford Haven and Bosworth Field, backed by 4000 men, furnished by Charles VIII. to aid his enterprise. The town was delivered over to the keeping of Queen Elizabeth by the Prince de Condé, leader of the Huguenots, 1562, and the command of it was intrusted to Ambrose Dudley, Earl of Warwick; but the English were ejected within a year, after a most obstinate siege, whose progress was pressed forward by Charles IX., and his mother, Catherine de Medicis, in person, sensible that the possession of Havre by the English would be a thorn in the side of France. Hatred of the English, indeed, had united all parties in France against them. The Protestant Condé served in the besieging army, which was commanded by the Constable Montmorency, previously the ally of the English. Warwick held out against vastly superior numbers, until his force was reduced by slaughter and the plague from nearly 6000 to 1500; he was himself shot in defending a breach, after which the place surrendered.

The fleet of William III., which had failed before Brest, made an ineffectual attempt in 1694 to bombard the town, as it had before done in the case of Dieppe with success. In 1796 Sir Sidney Smith, while cruising in the Channel, endeavoured to cut out a French ship of war from under the batteries, but became entangled in the currents and sandbanks of the Seine, and his vessel, having been perceived next morning lying high and dry, was captured by some gunboats, and he was sent a prisoner to the Temple in Paris.

Bernardin de St. Pierre, author of 'Paul and Virginia,' was born here in a house No. 47, Rue de la Corderie. Havre is also the birthplace of Made-moiselle Scudery, 1697, and of Casimir Delavigne.

There is an English Chapel in the Rue d'Orléans; service at 12 and 3½ on Sundays.

A handsome Museum, containing pictures by Troyon, Yvon, Couture, &c., and specimens of fossil reptiles, fish, tortoises, &c., dug up beneath high-water mark in the estuary of the Seine, and Public Library has been built near the old H. de Ville, on the Quai, at the end of the Rue de Paris.

At the other end of the Rue de Paris is seen the magnificent Hôtel de Ville, with a pretty garden in front of it; and not far off is the Sou-préfecture, rivalling the Hôtel de Ville in splendour. Both are built on the site of the ramparts.

The Cercle du Commerce is a large commercial club-house, furnished with almost all the European newspapers and many American: strangers can be introduced to it by members.

The Theatre in the Place Louis XVI., or du Spectacle, at the extremity of the Bassin du Commerce, is one of the most striking buildings in the town.

Baths.—Frascati, on the sea-shore, not far from the pier, contains good hot and cold sea-water baths. In summer, bathing is carried on in the open sea. Cabinets are provided for dressing and undressing, and men and women bathe together, but covered up in bathing dresses. There are no bathing-machines; ladies are led out to a sufficient depth of water by the guide, who then seizes them by the shoulders, lays them on the surface of the water, and dips them by sousing their heads under water.

N.B. The draught of the tide is so strong as sometimes to overpower even skilful swimmers. The bathers lay hold of ropes attached to posts, to avoid being swept away in stormy weather.

Bureau de Police, New Hôtel de Ville, is open at 8 o'clock a.m.

Poste aux Lettres, Place Louis Seize.

Consuls reside here from Great Britain and from other maritime states of Europe, and from the U. S. and other Governments of America.

Steamers to Caen daily in 3 or 4 hours (Rte. 24); to Honfleur twice a day in ½ hr. (Rte. 23); to Trouville once or twice daily; to Cherbourg twice a week; to Morlaix in Brittany in 18 hours, every Wed. and Sat.; to London twice a week; to Southampton three times a week; to Dunkirk, Rotterdam, and Hamburg twice a week; to Amsterdam; to St. Petersburg and Copenhagen twice a month. More than 40 steam-vessels, including tug-boats, belong to the Port du Havre.

The Norman Church of Gravelle, 2 m. on the Rouen road (see above), is well worth a visit from the architect.

Those who have an hour or two to spare at Havre cannot better employ it than in ascending the hill of Ingouville and to Ste. Adresse, consisting chiefly of neat country-houses with gardens. The view from the top over the town of Havre—its forest of masts rising from amidst its buildings over the embouchure of the Seine, the distant hills of Calvados appearing on the horizon like an island, and over the heights of La Hève to the rt. (N.), crowned by its twin lighthouses—is very striking and pleasing. Large forts have been built since 1858 on the heights above the town; one at St. Adresse, the other above Tourneville.

The cliffs under the lofty headland of Cap la Hève, on which the lighthouses are erected at a height of 300 ft., offer some fine rock scenery; but, except when the tide is low, the shingly beach is not favourable for walking. These rocks were the favourite haunt of the author of 'Paul and Virginia.' The road to the lighthouses themselves runs through the village of St. Adresse.

Those who have time should go over to Honfleur by one steamer, returning the same tide by another.

ROUTE 18.

HAVRE TO FÉCAMP (RAIL.); THENCE TO DIEPPE, EU, AND ABBEVILLE.

171 kilom. = 106 Eng. m.

A branch railway diverges from Beuzeville Junct. Stat. (Rte. 14) to Fécamp. 3 trains daily.

The high ground of the Pays de Caux is intersected by a number of valleys running down to the sea, in every one of which a village or small town nestles; this renders the road a succession of ups and downs. When the harvest is cleared from the ground and sheep are feeding among the stubble, a long narrow cart, covered either with a coved wooden roof or thatched with straw—a sort of horizontal sentry-box on wheels—may be seen drawn up by the road-side or in the fields; it is the moveable bed of the shepherd, in which he shelters himself at night or in bad weather.

Grainville Goderville Stat.

Les Ifs Etretat Stat. Coaches from this or from Fécamp to Etretat, about 10 m. S.W. of Fécamp, and 18 m. from Havre: an old fishing town, now a place of resort for sea-bathing, for which purpose it is well adapted. (Inns: H. Blanquet, H. des Bains, H. Gustave Hanville.) It is remarkable for the beauty of its coast scenery.

43 Fécamp Stat. (Inns: Poste, extortionate; H. du Commerce), a town of 10,000 Inhab., nearly fills the bottom and sides of a narrow valley opening out towards the sea between 2 high falaises or cliffs, on one of which stands a lighthouse. It has the advantage of being at once a seaport and a manufacturing town, owing to the abundant stream which, as it descends the valley, turns numerous cotton and other mills, besides which there are 3 steam saw-mills. The harbour is small and was much sanded up, but is now deepened and improved, and is resorted to by colliers from Newcastle and Sunderland, and Baltic timber-ships, besides fishing vessels.

In the centre of the town stands the Ch. of the Abbey of Notre Dame, a large and fine edifice in the early pointed style, with some Norman features, built in the beginning of the 13th cent., except the 2 round-arched apsidal chapels, behind the E. end, which are older, and the S. side of the choir, which is more modern and florid. The Lady Chapel, with its carved woodwork of the 16th cent., and the monuments in the side chapels of abbots Richard (1223), William (1297), and Robert (1326), consisting of altar tombs enriched with crocketed niches, bearing their effigies reclining under florid canopies, merit notice. Also some curious carvings of Scriptural subjects in the N. transept.

Fiquainville, near Fécamp, was the retreat of Cuvier during the storm of the Revolution. He pursued his studies in the natural history of marine animals here on the sea-beach. On the top of the cliff behind the town, near the new lighthouse, 328 ft. above the sea-level, is the Gothic Chapelle de N. Dame de Salut, built by Henry I. of England, much resorted to as a place of pilgrimage by sailors and fishers.

The fishwives sometimes mount up to it on their knees as a penance.

On the beach to the W. of the town is the bathing establishment of the "Société des Eaux de Fécamp," with the usual accessories of café and restaurant, promenade and ball-rooms, and an hotel constructed to accommodate 200 guests. Burnt 1858; rebuilt?

On the rising ground behind the Etablissement, laid out as gardens, in the form of an amphitheatre, a number of ornamental chalets are provided for the residence of visitors.

French Protestant service on alternate Sundays at Criquetot, 5 m., and at Monthivelliers. Carriages and horses easily procurable.

A steep hill carries the road out of Fécamp on the side of Dieppe.

19 Cany, in its pretty green and wooded valley, is an agreeable contrast to the bare open land which precedes and follows. The Château belongs to the Duc de Luxembourg.

The road again approaches the sea at 12 St. Vallery en Caux, a fishing town of 5328 Inhab., with a port formed by locking the stream, which here descends to the sea. Some contend that William the Conqueror embarked from this St. Vallery.

18 Dieppe, in Rte. 6.

Omnibus runs daily between Dieppe and Eu. Diligence twice a day to Abbeville. The road, as before, is carried over the high ground at some distance from the sea, and traverses in succession several valleys.

30 Eu.—Inns: Poste or Cygne; H. de l'Union, neither good nor cheap. Eu is a somewhat lifeless town of 3730 Inhab., on the Bresle, a small stream which formed the boundary of Normandy, and which falls into the Channel 2 m. lower down at Treport. In the centre of the town is an irregular market-place, no two sides of which are parallel, overlooked by the E. end of the Parish Church, a heavy building and injured by modern reparations, externally propped up by huge flying buttresses. It is in the early pointed style; the triforium arches open into the aisles; the E. end is angular, but several of the side chapels are of late florid Gothic. Attention should be directed to the screen before that of St. Laurent, an Irish archbishop; to the Entombment in another chapel composed of statues as large as life; and to the fantastic, spirally banded column in the S. transept. The church was restored by Louis Philippe, who gave several painted windows from the manufactory at Sèvres.

In the crypt (caveau) below the church are deposited a series of monumental effigies, mutilated by the revolutionists 1793, but restored by Louis Philippe. The oldest is of St. Laurent, Archbishop of Dublin, who died at Eu (1181), whither he had repaired on a mission of peace, to reconcile Henry II. and the King of Ireland. The rest are of the counts of Eu, of the family of Artois; viz. Charles d'Artois, 1471—the head and hands are of marble; of his father, Philip d'Artois, made prisoner at Nicopolis by the Turks, d. 1397 in Anatolia; Jean d'Artois, 1386, his surcoat studded with fleurs-de-lis of copper—he was taken prisoner at Cressy along with the French king; Isabella de Melun, his wife, in an elaborately carved dress, with dogs at her feet; Jeanne de Saveuse, wife of Charles d'Artois, a pleasing countenance and curious costume; Hélène de Melun, his 2nd wife; Isabelle d'Artois, who died unmarried, 1397.

Eu is chiefly remarkable, however, on account of its Château, which belonged to King Louis-Philippe, who inherited it, with the Comté d'Eu, from his mother, daughter and heiress of the Duc de Penthièvre. His Majesty here received H. M. Queen Victoria in 1843. The château is a low building of red brick surmounted by high tent-shaped roofs of slate, like the pavilions of the Tuileries, and is without architectural beauty. It was built 1578 by Henry of Lorraine, le Balafré Duc de Guise, on the site of a castle which had belonged in turn to the Lusignans, the Briennes, the Artois, the Clèves, and the Saint Pols, and which was burnt down by Louis XI. (1475), to punish the treachery of the Comte de St. Pol. It was much augmented by the late king, and splendidly fitted up, the walls being clothed with a collection of historical and family portraits, to the number of 1100. In consequence of the events of 1852, all the pictures and furniture of the palace were moved to England; the names under the vacant spaces now alone indicating the treasures which once covered the walls.

The small Chapelle, a mixture of Gothic and Italian in its decorations, has some modern painted glass windows from Sèvres; one is a portrait of St. Amélie, after the picture by Paul Delaroche.

The Parc or grounds are a wilderness of trees, mostly woody elms, planted in rows with angular terraces; a gloomy canal, and muddy circular ponds beset with willows. On the l. of the castle a few beeches preserve the remembrance of their predecessors, beneath whose branches the Balafré Duc de Guise heard the suits of his vassals, and concerted plots against his sovereign. Here a small space was railed in by Louis-Philippe, who affixed this inscription:—"Ici les Guises tenaient conseil au XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle." At the extremity of the grounds is a terrace overlooking the gap through which the Bresle, quitting the bare and dull valley, enters the sea, and the little village Treport is perceived at its mouth. On this terrace is a brick Pavillon, fitted up by poor Mademoiselle, during the time she was banished to her estate at Eu by Louis XIV. for refusing to marry the paralytic and imbecile King of Portugal.

The effigies of the Duc Henri de Guise (le Balafré), murdered at Blois, and of his wife Catherine de Clèves, are in the Eglise du Collège, originally of the Jesuits, who were established at Eu by le Balafré. The church, built out of the ruins of the old castle, as well as the monuments, were raised at her expense; they are rich in marble, but of no value as works of art. He is represented in armour, she in ruff and farthingale; there are duplicate effigies of both, attended by figures of Prudence, Strength, Faith, and Charity; Gillot was the sculptor. From the pulpit of this ch. Bourdaloue preached his first sermon.

On the Bresle, close to the palace, is a mill for making sea biscuits, sawing timber, &c., established by an Englishman.

Treport, the port of Eu, 3 m. distant, is a fishing village of 2265 Inhab., having an old Church seated on a height, approached by a flight of steps, remarkable for its elaborate W. porch, and for the roof of its nave distinguished by pendants of stone hanging from it, of the 14th century. Treport is supposed to be the Uterior Portus of Julius Cæsar.

16 Valines.

18 Abbeville (Rte. 3).

ROUTE 23.

HAVRE TO HONFLEUR, TROUVILLE, AND LISIEUX.

Havre to Honfleur—steamer	45 min.	7 miles.
Honfleur to Pont l'Evêque	25 kil.	15 "
Pont l'Evêque to Trouville	12 "	6 "
" to Lisieux	17 "	9 "

Railway to Honfleur from Lisieux, 25 m. Branch from Pont l'Evêque to Trouville.

Havre in Rte. 14.

Two or three steamers go from Havre to Honfleur each tide. The voyage occupies 35 minutes, and is pretty; but the mouth of the Seine is occasionally rough.

Honfleur (Inn: Cheval Blanc, opposite the landing-place of the steamers), a seaport town of 10,000 Inhab. at the mouth of the Seine, here 7 m broad, on its S. bank, opposite to Havre. The town contains many quaint and picturesque old wooden houses, and its situation, backed by wooded heights, is very pleasing. One of the churches is double-aisled, and built of wood, apparently very old. Opposite to it is a curious wooden market-house and belfry. The doorway of St. Leonard's is of the 12th cent. There are a pier, harbour, and 3 floating docks, and a good deal of trade in Baltic timber, coal, and other things. 7000 dozens of eggs are exported weekly to England, besides butter and fruit. The Cours d'Orléans, on the road to Caen, is a fine avenue and promenade. It is well worth while to ascend to the chapel of Notre Dame de Grace, on the hill above the town to the W., much resorted to by sailors and filled with their ex-votos, and in a charming situation for the view over the Seine. It was formerly not uncommon for the crews of vessels which had escaped imminent danger at sea to make a pilgrimage hither in their shirts, barefooted and bareheaded.

Several English families reside near Honfleur; and there is English service, and a resident clergyman.

Railway to Pont l'Evêque and Lisieux, also to Trouville by Touques. Diligences daily to Pont Audemer and Trouville, 7 m.

[About 14 m. S.E. from Honfleur is Pont Audemer.—Inn: Pot d'Etain: the samlets (saumoneaux of the Risle) are excellent. This is a prettily situated town of 5400 Inhab., famed for its Tanneries, of which it contains 40; besides which some cotton is woven here, its industry being greatly promoted by the Risle, which passes through it in small streams. It once had a castle, in besieging which, in the early part of the 14th cent., cannon were first used in France: it was razed by Du Guesclin. The Terrace of the château de Bonnebon presents a pleasant view. English Ch. service on Sundays, 45, Rue de Bernay. It is a pleasant walk to ascend the lovely banks of the Risle as far as the Castle of Montfort.]

Pont l'Evêque Junct. Stat. A modern town of 2000 Inhab., at the junction of the Touques and the Calonne. Here a branch rly. diverges N.W., by Touques Stat., where Henry V. landed on his way to Azincourt, to

Trouville Stat. Inns: H. de Paris, very good, looking on the sea; H. Bellevue, on the Quai, fair; La Poste (Bras d'Or)—a town at the mouth of the Touques, always celebrated for oysters, and now raised to 4500 Inhab. by its popularity with the French as a watering-place, first brought into notice by Alex. Dumas. The road to it is through a fine forest, and the town itself is very prettily situated on the shore. The sands are very good, and a prodigious number of Parisians resort to it in the summer and autumn, making it difficult to find room at any price.

Steamers to Havre twice a day, and Rail to Pont l'Evêque and Honfleur.

Objects of Interest: 1. Ruins of St. Arnold's Chapel; 2. Château de Bonneville, where Harold promised England to William the Norman; 3. Henriqueville, obs. church; 4. The Châlet, view over mouth of Seine.]

The rly. to Lisieux proceeds through a green and pretty valley to near the town of Lisieux, when it plunges into a tunnel under a part of the town, and emerges a short distance from

Lisieux Junct. Stat. (Rte. 25). You may here await train to Caen.

ROUTE 24.

HAVRE TO CAEN.

This journey may be performed by crossing to Honfleur in the daily steamer, and thence to Pont l'Evêque and Lisieux (Rte. 23) by rail.

Steamboats daily from Havre to Caen, starting as soon as the height of the tide allows them.

The voyage, which takes up about 3 hrs., 2 of them on the open sea, is pleasant in fine weather. The steamer skirts the coast of the dépt. Calvados, in sight of the bathing-place Trouville (Rte. 23), and of the mouth of the Dives, where William the Conqueror tarried for a month to collect his fleet of 3000 ships and his army of 50,000 men. A monument was set up here (1861) by M. de Caumont, to commemorate the conquest of England!

The mouth of the Orne is entered with difficulty on account of the sands and rocks, and we then thread its sinuous channel between low banks, but the landscape is enlivened by several ancient churches. A canal was completed in 1857, by which some of the windings of the Orne are avoided, and the distance from the sea to Caen, 10 m., abridged. If the vessel, owing to tempestuous weather, should miss the tide to cross the bar, it must wait outside, and lie off the mouth for 10 or 12 hrs. for the next tide, or return; but this rarely happens. The river soon becomes very narrow, and the turns in it are sharp. On the rt. bank are many of the quarries from which the celebrated Caen stone is obtained. The river is pretty enough, but affords no very remarkable scenery.

"At length the city of Caen extends itself, terminated at each extremity by the venerable abbeys of William the Conqueror, and Mathilda his queen; the latter, surmounted by 3 towers, is nearest at hand. There are no traces of workshops and manufactories, or of their pollution; but the churches, with their towers and spires, rise above the houses in bold architectural masses, and the city assumes a character of quiet monastic opulence, comforting the eye and the mind."—Palgrave.

Ahead of the town the river is lined with quays of masonry, alongside of which the vessel is moored.

CAEN. Rte. 25.

ROUTE 25.

PARIS TO CAEN (RAIL).

	Kil.	Miles.
Paris.
Mantes . . . .	57	35
Evreux . . . .	108	67
Listieux . . . .	190	118
Caen . . . .	240	150

Four trains daily,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  to  $7\frac{1}{2}$  hrs. Railway continued to Cherbourg in 1858, Rte. 26.

From Paris to Mantes Junc. Stat. is described in Rte. 8. A little beyond this we quit the route to Rouen, turning to the l. out of the valley of the Seine, up a fertile but monotonous country.

Bueil Stat. Diligence to Anet and Ivry, 10 m. S. of this, where Henri IV. gained a momentous victory over the Duc de Mayenne and the army of the League 1590; also to Dreux. (Rte. 35.)

Boisset-Pacy Stat.

At Cocherel, on the rt. bank of the Eure, 4 m. below (N. of) Pacy, Du Guesclin, in 1364, defeated the forces of the King of Navarre, Charles le Mauvais.

Fine view of the Cathedral from

Evreux Stat. (Inns: H. du Grand Cerf, very good—de France, opposite the Cathedral, good), chef-lieu of the Dépt. de l'Eure, with 13,000 Inhab., and prettily situated in a bowl-shaped valley shut in on N. and S. by hills, and watered by the Iton, an affluent of the Eure, divided into several branches. It has a considerable share in the cotton manufacture (ticking and stockings), here carried on by the handloom more than by the steam-engine. It is an interesting place, and will repay a visit of 3 or 4 hrs. Its chief edifice is **La Cathédrale*, small, but excellent in proportion and arrangement, though presenting to the W. an incongruous Italian front flanked by two towers, and surmounted at the cross by a loftier tower and florid spire, erected by the Cardinal de la Balue, favourite of Louis XI. The nave is in the Norman style, probably of our Henry I.'s time, since he burnt the town, with the permission of the bishop, on condition of rebuilding the churches. The upper part of the nave, and the rest of the ch., are pointed, and on the whole more modern than the reign of Philippe-Auguste, who again burnt the town to revenge himself on the treachery of Jean Sans Terre, in making it over to him during King Richard's captivity, but on Richard's unexpected return not only withholding it, but murdering the French garrison placed in the castle. The choir, supported on clustered columns with glazed triforium (1330–60), is very lofty and light. The Lady Chapel and the N. transept are still more recent (1465–75), and the N. Portal leading into it, in the flamboyant Gothic, elaborately ornamented, is deservedly admired, in spite of the injuries and loss of its statues inflicted by the Revolutionists. The beautiful rose window in the S. transept, and the wooden screens to the side chapels round the choir, showing the flamboyant Gothic style modified by the reviving Italian, also merit notice. The Lady Chapel, of elegant architecture (temp. Louis XI.), contains painted glass equally remarkable for its fine execution and perfect preservation.

The Bishop's Palace, built 1484, presents some curious details.

At the opposite end of the town is the Ch. of St. Taurin, attached to the séminaire; it is small, and resembles the cathedral in the various styles it displays, having shared like it the fortune of war and conflagration. It has a modern pulpit of oak. The outer wall of the S. transept is ornamented with an arcade of semicircular arches, the panels of which are prettily diapered with a pattern formed of red tiles let into the masonry. This is supposed to be a relic of the Ch. built 1026 by Richard II. Duke of Normandy. The cloister is curious.

The Chasse or Shrine of St. Taurin, which once contained his relics, is preserved in the sacristy. It is a wooden box, shaped like a Gothic chapel, covered with plates of copper or silver gilt, encased with a diapered pattern, and set round with bas-reliefs and small statuettes of bishops and saints; it is a work of the 13th cent. The architectural decorations are rich and in good taste: such shrines are now very rare. The precious stones which once ornamented it have been stolen or lost.

The streets of Evreux preserve many antique timber-framed houses, and on the Boulevards are traces of the walls which once defended it. It possesses a Beffroi called Tour de l'Horloge, built in the 15th cent.

Excavations made at Vieil Evreux (Mediolanum Aulercarum) have led to the discovery of a theatre, baths, &c., and of various relics now deposited in the Musée d'Antiquités.

The name of the premier English Viscount, Devereux Visct. Hereford, is derived from this town: the family traces its descent from Normandy.

Conches Stat., a town of 2000 Inhab., on the top of a hill, contains a fine ch., St. Foy, with good 16th centy. glass; a castle, or donjon, of the Comtes de Conche. Diligence to Verneuil.

Romilly Stat.

Beaumont-le-Roger Stat. Here are ruins of a priory.

Serquigny Stat. About 10 m. N. of this, and rather farther from Bernay, are the ruins of the famous Abbey of Bec (Hallouin), despoiled 1793, and destroyed, save a ruined tower of 15th cent., and some buildings degraded into a cavalry dépôt. From this came Lanfranc and Anselm, Archbishops of Canterbury!

Bernay Stat. (Inn: La Poste, Lion d'Or), a manufacturing town of 7244 Inhab. It once possessed an important abbey, founded by Judith, wife of Richard II. Duke of Normandy; the Ch. of which, now converted into a market-hall, and faced with a 17th centy. front, is one of the oldest Norman (Romanesque) buildings in Normandy, having been begun in 1024. It is large in its dimensions and perfectly simple in its style: plain square piers support equally plain circular arches. The columns attached to the piers are carved, and one is inscribed "Isambardus me fecit." The choir ends in an apse, and there is one in each transept. "The dome vaulting over the aisles is exceedingly curious." In St. Croix are some painted windows: the high altar was brought from Bec, and also 2 fine incised slabs of Abbots—Wm. d'Auvillers, 1417, and Robert III. de Bec, 1490, in their grand robes, inserted into the W. wall of the ch. The curfew tolls from its tower at night.

The houses in the Grande Rue retain curious porches and bits of Gothic. N. Dame de la Couture is a Gothic ch. of 11th cent., and a place of pilgrimage, a little way out of town.

Lisieux Junct. Stat. (Inns: H. de France; H. d'Espagne), a thriving manufacturing town (12,651 Inhab.), prettily situated at the junction of the valleys of the Touques and the Orbec, well worth a visit. About 3500 persons are employed in and around the town in weaving coarse woollens, flannels, horse-cloths, &c. Its streets exhibit specimens of ancient domestic architecture, timber-framed houses and pointed gables, well suited to the artist's pencil. In the Rue aux Fèvres are the oldest and most curious houses.

The *Church of St. Pierre (formerly cathedral) faces an open square, with its W. front surmounted by a spire; one of its towers has been rebuilt. It is in the early pointed style of the 13th cent., with lancet windows, holding a place between the Norman and the lancet Gothic of England. A preceding edifice, built 1143-82 (when the pointed style had scarcely begun to appear in this part of France) was burnt down 1226. The W. end of the choir and transepts, without the vaults, are the only parts remaining of the first ch. The E. end of the choir and apse were built 1197-1214. The Lady Chapel was founded, in the 15th cent., by Pierre Cauchon, Bishop of Beauvais, and president of the unjust tribunal which condemned Joan of Arc, in expiation of "his false judgment of an innocent woman," as he expressly states in the deed of endowment. Henry II. was married to Eleanor of Guienne, the divorced wife of Louis le Jeune, 1152, in this cathedral. This church has been repaired. Adjoining the Sous-Préfecture, once Bishop's palace, is a beautiful garden, thrown open to the public, and hardly surpassed in any French town. St. Jacques is a fine ch., and has good painted glass.

Lisieux was the capital of the Lexovii, a Gallic tribe mentioned by Cæsar, and ruins of the ancient town (Noviomagus, l.) have been discovered at a short distance from the present one. Thomas à Becket retired hither 1169, during his exile from England. Le Val Richer, a small country house near Lisieux, is the summer-retreat of M. Guizot.

The Castle of St. Germain-de-Livet, 4 m. off, in the valley of the Touques, is a curious pile of towers and turrets and bartizans, part brick, part timber.

Railway to Honfleur, Pont l'Évêque, and Trouville (Rte. 23).

Mezidon Junc. Stat. Here the Rly. to Le Mans, by Falaise, Argentan, Alençon, falls in (Rte. 29).

CAEN Stat. Inns: Humby's Hotel, on the Quai, close to Havre steamers, kept by an Englishman, is clean and comfortable; H. Ste. Barbe—good; H. d'Angleterre; H. de la Victoire, in the Place St. Pierre, clean, but small.

Caen, chief town of the Dépt. du Calvados (so named from a long reef of rocks on its coast, on which a Spanish vessel, the Calvados, was wrecked in the reign of Philippe II.), is situated on the Orne, 10 m. from its mouth, and has 46,000 Inhab. A smaller stream, the Odon, passes through the town and around the line of its old ramparts, to which it served as a fosse, before it joins the Orne, turning on its way several mills. Notwithstanding the antiquity of Caen, its wider streets, its large central square, in which stands the statue of Louis XIV., and its houses of white stone, give it a more cheerful air than Rouen, though less enlivened by passing crowds.

To the traveller Caen recommends itself by its numerous specimens of ancient architecture, to the permanent resident by the salubrity of its site and the cheapness of house-rent and provisions, which had caused our countrymen to settle themselves down here in a colony.

Near the centre of the town, on one side of a small market-place full of bustle and quaint costumes in the early part of the day, rises the Church of St. Pierre, surmounted by one of the most graceful towers and spires, in the complete Gothic style, which Normandy can produce; the middle story, formed of tall lancet windows framed within reeded mouldings, is a model of strength and lightness. Its spire of stone, partly pierced à jour, was built 1308, and is 242 ft. high. The nave was constructed probably about the same time, the choir, more richly ornamented, rather later, while its roof and the chapels round the choir were added in 1521. The rich groining of the roof of the choir is surpassed in the chapels, where it assumes the form of pendent fringes, giving the roof a cellular character. The side walls of these chapels are pierced with arches and set with statues. Some of the capitals of the columns in the nave exhibit ludicrous carvings, such as Aristotle bridled and ridden by the mistress of Alexander, and Lancelot crossing the sea on his sword, from the old romances.

Caen possesses two very remarkable monuments of the piety of William the Conqueror and his queen—or rather of their desire to appease the Pope for contracting a marriage within the prohibited degrees—in the churches of the Abbayes, Aux Hommes and Aux Dames: both founded 1066, although they now retain but small portions of the original buildings.

The \**Church of St. Etienne*, or of the Abbaye aux Hommes, destined by the Conqueror as a resting-place for his own remains, was finished and dedicated by him in his lifetime, 1077, under Archbishop Lanfranc, who was the first abbot. The W. front is so perfectly and severely plain that it will probably disappoint expectations. The W. front, and 2 stately W. towers, were not set up until about 1096. The line of junction of old and new masonry is visible in this and other parts of the ch. The spires and choir were added in the beginning of 13th centy. The interior of the nave exhibits the rigid severity and massy strength, with the grandeur of proportion, of the Norman Romanesque style. The ch. is 371 ft. long and 98 ft. high. The lower row of arches supports a gallery, having arches of nearly equal span and  $\frac{3}{4}$  of the height of those below, an arrangement resembling the arcades of the Roman Coliseum. These upper arches originally opened into the aisles, the vaulting below them dating from 1160. The clerestory windows consist of a tall and short arch placed alternately on one side or the other to meet the curve of the vault. The choir, ending in an apse, and surrounded by apsidal chapels, is in the pointed Gothic style, answering to the early English of the 12th cent. (some say 1316-44). A plain grey marble slab in the pavement before the high altar marks the grave of William the Conqueror, the founder of the ch., but it has been long since empty: it was broken open, the costly monument erected over it by William Rufus destroyed, and the bones scattered, by the Huguenots, 1562, and lost without record, except one thigh-bone, which was re-interred. The Revolutionists of 1793 again violated the grave, and this also disappeared.

[France.]

The funeral of the Conqueror, undertaken by the charity of a simple knight, as already detailed (p. 42), was singularly interrupted, even within the precincts of the ch., and before the service for the dead was concluded, by a cry from one of the bystanders, a man of low degree, who claimed the site of the grave, saying that it occupied the place of his father's house, that he had been illegally ejected from it in order to build the ch., and he demanded the restitution of his property. This claim, thus boldly made, in the presence of the dead monarch's son Henry, the chief mourner, being backed by the assent of the townspeople, who stood by, was not to be denied or rejected, and the bishop was obliged to pay down on the spot 60 sous for a place of sepulture for the royal corpse. Even then it is related that, as the coffin was being lowered into the grave, it struck against some obstacle, fell, and was broken into pieces, so that the corpse, ejected from its tenement, diffused so horrid a stench through the ch., that the rites were hurried to a close, and the assembled priests and laity dispersed.

The exterior of this ch. surmounted by its 2 W. towers, its central octagonal tower, and 4 turrets on the E., has a peculiarly striking effect from a distance, and reminds one of the arrangements of some of those on the Rhine.

The adjoining conventual buildings (date 1726) have been converted, since 1800, into a College (Lycée Impériale). A boy may be fairly well educated here for 25 or 30*l.* per ann.

A portion of the building now employed by the Ecole Normale is Gothic (14th cent.), and occupies the site of the old Norman Palace, called Grand Palais. The ancient hall called Salle des Gardes, of the 13th or 14th century, still exists in part.

At the opposite end of the town, on the heights of St. Gilles, is the **Abbaye aux Dames*, and ch. of la Ste. Trinité, founded and consecrated 1066, though probably unfinished, by the Conqueror's queen, Mathilda, and destined by her for a nunnery of noble ladies. The conventual buildings attached to the ch. are quite modern (1726), and are converted into an Hospital (Hôtel Dieu), in which 40 sisters of the order of St. Augustine perform the duties of nurses of the sick: the choir of the ch. is railed off for their use. The ch., in the lighter and more ornate character of its architecture, displays a broad contrast to the masculine plainness of St. Etienne. It is doubtful whether anything but the core of the walls is of the Conqueror's time; the rest is apparently of the end of the 11th and middle of 12th centy. With the exception of the upper part of the W. towers this edifice is a perfect and unaltered specimen of pure Norman Romanesque; the choir ending in an apsis, being of the same age and style as the nave. The piers are lighter, the engaged pillars project more, than in St. Etienne, the embattled fret here runs round the main arches, and instead of a lofty triforium the walls above them are threaded by a gallery supported by misproportioned pillars, exhibiting grotesque figures among the foliage of their capitals. The arches under the central tower are remarkably bold, and their archivolts are chased with the Norman lozenge. The one opening into the nave is obtusely pointed, but apparently of the same date. The choir, ending in a semicircle of double arches, one tier over the other, encloses in the centre the fragments of the black marble grave-stone of the foundress, broken in pieces by the Calvinists, who dispersed her remains, which, however, were collected some years after. Underneath is a crypt resting on 34 closely set pillars.

For the student of ancient architecture the following churches remain also to be visited. Not far from St. Etienne is St. Nicholas, another Norman ch., coeval with the two abbeys; it is now a hay-store, belonging to the Remonte de Cavalerie. It is unaltered, very plain in style, and ends in an apse: date probably 1100.

St. Etienne le Vieux, opposite the College, restored, in good taste, 1860, is a fine specimen of pointed Gothic.

St. Julien and St. Gilles may interest the architect.

St. Jean has two unequal and unfinished towers, in the style of that of St. Pierre, but inferior to it in late pointed style.

St. Michel, in the suburb of Vaucelles, displays some curious architectural features; in the Norman tower the very long but narrow and round-headed windows deserve notice. The fringed portal is surmounted by a gable filled with elegant flamboyant tracery, in the style of the 15th or 16th cent.

There are many old houses, with curiously ornamented fronts of the 15th and 16th centies.: in the Cour de la Monnaie; Hôtel de Than, in the Rue St. Pierre; and 2 timber-framed houses, Rue de Geôle and Rue N. Dame; but they are fast disappearing. The Hôtel de Valois, Place St.

Pierre, now the Bourse, is of Italian architecture (16th cent.)

The Castle, surmounting the height to the W. of St. Pierre, built by William the Conqueror and his son Henry—held for a long period by the English, but finally taken from them by the brave Dunois, who compelled the Duke of Somerset with a garrison of 4000 men to surrender, 1459—has now the aspect of a modern fortress bastioned and counterscarped; but having been dismantled by a decree of the Convention, it is at present reduced to a barracks. The only Norman portions subsisting are the small Chapel of St. George, whose nave is probably of the 11th centy., though the earliest mention of it is in 1181; while the chancel, separated from it by a bold arch, is of the 15th centy.: among very interesting Norman hall has been ascertained to have been the original Hall of the Exchequer of Normandy, of the time of William the Conqueror. Both these buildings are now used as storehouses. From the ramparts there is a good view of the town.

In the Hôtel de Ville, which occupies with its Grecian portico one side of the Place Royale, is a Collection of Paintings. Observe a genuine *PERUGINO, Marriage of the Virgin, imitated by Raphael in the famous Sposalizio at Milan;—the Passage of the Rhine, by Van der Meulen;—Melchizedec offering bread and wine to Abraham, Rubens;—the Virgin with 3 Saints, by some old master, called Albert Dürer. Here is also the Library of 40,000 vols.

In the Cabinet d'Histoire Naturelle in the Palais de l'Université, Rue de la Chain, is a collection of the fossils of Normandy, including Ichthyosauri, Plesiosauri, and a very perfect crocodile from the neighbouring quarries of l'Allemagne. The collections made in the South Sea by Admiral Dumont d'Urville have been deposited here.

The English Church Service is performed on Sundays at 9.45 and 2.45, in the French Protestant Temple, Rue de la Geole.

The Poste aux Lettres is in the Rue de l'Hôtel de Ville.

Caen is well provided with promenades, formal avenues of trees;—the chief are called Grand Cours, and Cours Cafarelli, by the side of the Orne. The handsome quais bordering the Orne and the Odon near their junction form pleasant walks.

The women of the lower and middle classes in Caen, and throughout a large part of La Basse Normandie, are finely formed, fully grown, and handsomer than in most other parts of France.

The principal street, in which are the best shops, is the Rue St. Jean.

Froissart narrates the story of the capture of Caen in 1346, a short while before the battle of Crécy, by Edward III. and the Black Prince, who, being irritated by the resistance of the citizens, gave it up to plunder. It was then "large, strong, and full of drapery and all sorts of merchandise, rich citizens, noble dames, damsels, and fine churches." The English fleet returned home laden with its spoils.

Several of the leaders of the party of the Girondins, proscribed by the Jacobins of the revolutionary tribunal, and driven from Paris by the insurrection of May 31, 1793, retired to Caen to organise a revolt against the tyranny of the Mountain, but were entirely defeated and put down in a battle at Vernon. It was shortly after this event that Charlotte Corday (a native of St. Saturnin, near Séez), actuated by the spirit of resistance against the tyranny of the Terrorists, which prevailed strongly at Caen, set out hence to Paris to assassinate Marat. The Girondins used to meet in the Hotel, No. 44, Rue des Carmes.

Among the illustrious natives of Caen, the learned Huet Bishop of Avranches, born 1613, may be singled out; also the poets Clement Marot, Malherbe, Malfilâtre, and Ségrais; and the Oriental traveller and scholar Bouchart.

Brummel, the Beau par excellence of the court of George IV. when regent, lived many years at Caen, and ended his days here in a lunatic asylum (l'Hospice du Bon Sauveteur, an establishment which does credit to Normandy, and can receive 1600 patients); Bourienne, Secretary and early friend of Napoleon, died in the same asylum.

Railways—to Paris; to Cherbourg (Rte. 26); to Houdéur (Rte. 23); to Alençon, Le Mans, Tours, &c. (Rte. 29).

Steamer to Havre daily.

The making of lace is said to occupy 20,000 women and children in and about Caen. The streets of the suburbs are lined with family parties seated round their cottage doors merrily twirling their bobbins. They make tulles, brodéas, and blondes.

With this exception Caen has no claim to be a manufacturing town; though it was so in an eminent degree until the revocation of the Edict of Nantes banished all its most industrious artisans.

Environs. A cabriolet or other one-horse carriage may be hired for 8 or 10 francs the day. Omnibus to Creully, la Délivrande, Corseulles, &c.

The student of ancient architecture might spend many days profitably and agreeably in visiting the ecclesiastical and civil monuments which abound in the neighbourhood of Caen. The Dépt. du Calvados is particularly rich in monuments of architecture; the distinguished archæologist of Caen, M. de Caumont, enumerates nearly 70 specimens of the Norman architecture of the 11th and 12th centuries existing in it.

a. On the outskirts of Caen, to the E., at the extremity of the Rue Basse St. Gilles, is a singular castellated mansion called Les Gens d'Armes, from 2 stone figures of armed men on the top. Though surrounded by battlemented walls and furnished with towers, it was not built as a place of defence, but as a maison de plaisance for one Gerard de Nollent, in the beginning of the 16th cent. Its walls are fantastically ornamented externally with medallion heads of emperors, &c.

b. 2 m. from Caen, rt. of the road to Bayeux, are the remains of the Abbaye d'Ardevigne, consisting of a well-preserved Gothic church, and of the abbey buildings, partly ruined, now serving the purpose of farm offices. There is a fine gate-tower with a round-headed gate and pointed wicket, large stables, "a buttressed barn which puts to utter shame the largest of our edifices of this kind." The beautiful Ch. closely resembles in style the early English of our abbeys of Bolton and Newstead. Its W. front is especially noticeable; it has a rose within a pointed window, and a rich porch supported "on detached shafts." The Castle of Creully is a picturesque ruin, also on the rt. of the road to Bayeux.

c. Thann, Fontaine-Henri, La Délivrande, Luc-sur-Mer.

A capital macadamised road, traversed by omnibus, leads N. of Caen, to Luc, a bathing-place on the sea, about 12 m. It passes several objects of architectural and antiquarian interest, to which  $\frac{1}{2}$  a day may be devoted with advantage, as follows. (N.B. This excursion may be made in a gig, costing 12 frs., in 5 or 6 hrs., including stoppages.)

From Caen a range of high table-land is ascended, on the summit of which is a calvaire, or crucifix. "The traveller will not fail to linger on the little hill just beyond the first crucifix. Here he enjoys a lovely prospect. The horizon is bounded by long lines of grey and purple hills: nearer are fields and pastures, whilst the river glitters and winds amidst their vivid tints; nearer still the city of Caen extends itself." It is worth while to walk thus far (2 m. from Caen), for the sake of the view.

$7\frac{1}{2}$  m. Thann. Here is a true Norman church, scarcely altered since the days of Henry I., when it was built, excepting the loss of its S. aisle. It is a good deal ornamented. The tower is capped with a hollow pyramid of stone, the oldest example of the nascent spire known. It is now deserted.

$1\frac{1}{2}$  m. farther to the N. is the interesting Château of Fontaine-Henri, a seat of the family d'Harcourt, built in the first 30 years of the 16th cent., partly in the bastard Gothic, corresponding more with the late Elizabethan of England, partly in the Italian style, resembling the revived classic architecture of Audley End and Longleat. It is a mansion of no great size, but is distinguished by a preposterously lofty and steeply pitched roof, surmounting one wing, flanked by an equally lofty chimney. The most profuse decoration of sculpture is lavished on its singularly irregular façade. The ornaments of the windows, the panelling, balustrades, &c., are not inferior to those of the Palais de Justice at Rouen, which they much resemble. The Church of the village is Norman.

A second steep ascent, surmounted by another calvaire, commands a pleasing view over the sea, including 6 or 8 village spires, all having a strong family likeness to that of St. Pierre at Caen. A steep descent of about a mile brings you to the pilgrimage chapel of La Délivrande, to which the Norman sailors and peasants have resorted for the last 800 years. It is a small Norman edifice. The statue of the Virgin, which now commands the veneration of the faithful, was resuscitated in the reign of Henry I. from the ruins of a previous chapel destroyed by the Northmen, through the agency of a lamb constantly grubbing up the earth over the spot where it lay. Such is the tenor of the legend. The reputation of the image for performing miracles, especially in behalf of sailors, has been maintained from that time to the present, although it suffered much at the Revolution, when pilgrimages were forbidden. It was visited by Louis XI. in 1471.

It is a drive of 3 m. from this chapel to Luc-sur-Mer (Inns: H. de la Belle Plage; H. de Londres), a watering-place, with facilities for excellent sea-bathing.

d. 12 miles from Caen is Corseulles, a small fishing port facing the terrible rocks of Calvados, which, however, are never visible except at the lowest ebb of spring tides. It is famed for its oysters. Paris receives from the "parcs aux huîtres" here  $\frac{7}{10}$  of all that it consumes, amounting to 5½ million dozen annually. The propensity for bathing which has lately seized on the French has raised this little village to 1600 Inhab., with baths, lodging-houses, &c. (Inn: H. des Etrangers.)

e. The Church of Iffs, about 3 m. S. of Caen, has a curious early-pointed steeple; but a still more remarkable tower and spire exist at Norrey, on the way to Bayeux (Rte. 26).

f. The quarries of Caen stone have long furnished England with building materials, and during the middle ages the White Tower, old London Bridge, Henry VII.'s Chapel, Winchester and Canterbury cathedrals, besides many of our country churches, were built of it. They are situated within the circuit of 1½ m. to the W. and S. of Caen, near la Maladrerie, on the road to Bayeux, and at Haute Allemagne. The rock is an oolite, equivalent to our Stonesfield slate, but without its slaty structure; it is extracted from subterranean quarries through vertical shafts, in blocks 8 or 9 ft. long and 2 ft. thick. It is still employed in England.

A visit to Falaise Castle, the birth-place of the Conqueror, is rendered easy by the opening of the rly. to Mezidon, &c. (Rte. 29.).

Another antiquarian and architectural excursion may be made on the way to Bayeux, to Frèsne-Camilly, Creuilly, and St. Gabriel (Rte. 26).

ROUTE 26.

CAEN TO CHERBOURG (RAILWAY).

	Miles.
Caen	—
Bayeux . . . . .	18
Lison . . . . .	34
Valognes . . . . .	65
Cherbourg . . . . .	80

197

Paris to Caen, 150 m.; to Cherbourg, 230. Trains in 8½ hrs. This rly. was constructed by the English contractor Brassey, and was opened in Aug. 1858, on which occasion Queen Victoria and Louis Napoleon visited Cherbourg.

2 m. beyond Caen is la Maladrerie, so called from a lazaret-house founded by our Henry II. for lepers of the town of Caen, now replaced by a huge penitentiary (Maison Centrale de Dé-tention), called Beaulieu. Near this may be perceived the whims or wheels by which the Caen stone (see above) is raised out of the quarries. The Orne is crossed.

Bretteville Stat. is called l'Orgueilleuse, though of what it has to be proud is not evident, except its handsome steeple. This, however, is entirely eclipsed by the very fine open belfry and spire of Norrey, seen on the l. about 1 m. off the road. This beautiful Church, which has been termed a miniature cathedral, is in the pure and simple Gothic style of our early English, and of the most elegant proportions, with an enriched choir, circular apse, and N. porch. "All the mouldings are deep, free, and repeated so as to give the greatest strength of line to all its parts." The tower owes its character of unequalled beauty to the 4 narrow and tall lancet arches which occupy the N. face of its belfry-story; the two central ones open so as to let daylight through.

In going from Caen to Bayeux a détour might be made to visit Frèsne Camilly, a church in the transition style, round arches prevailing in the body of the building, with indications of pointed arches in a panelled arcade on the exterior of the N. wall. At Creully the Castle, a construction of different ages, retains, among more modern additions, 2 round towers. It belonged to Robert of Gloucester, natural son of Henry I., and is now converted into a dwelling-house. The church is genuine Norman. A little farther is St. Gabriel, a ruined priory, founded by Robert of Gloucester, 1128: the choir of the church alone remains, and is a very remarkable example of florid Norman. This is a détour which will repay those of antiquarian taste.

There is a road from Bretteville to the Castle of Creully, passing by Sacqueville en Bessin, whose church is curious, partly pointed, partly round.

Bayeux Stat. (Inns: H. du Luxembourg; good; — Grand Hotel; small, but clean), a quiet and dull ecclesiastical city, with much the air of some cathedral towns in England, was anciently capital of the Bessin, and contains 9303 Inhab. It is washed by a small stream, the Aure, which enters the sea at 5 m. distance. It consists of two main streets, including some ancient specimens of domestic architecture, running up a hill to a large open Place, lined with trees. Its only curiosities are its Tapestry and its **Cathedral*, its chief ornament, restored with care and taste since 1852. The W. front is a fine elevation, in the pointed Gothic, surmounted by 2 steeples of the 12th cent., in the towers of which pointed arches alternate with round. The 3 porches, which, as well as that on the S. side, deserve attention for their bas-reliefs and ornamental foliage, are later in date and florid in style. The interior is 315 ft. long and 81 high. The W. end of the nave consists of florid Norman arches and piers, whose natural heaviness is relieved by the beautifully-diapered patterns wrought upon the wall, probably built by Henry I., who destroyed the previously-existing church by fire, 1106. Above this runs a blank trefoiled arcade in the place of a triforium, surmounted by a clerestory of early-pointed windows very lofty and narrow. The arches of the nave, nearest the cross and the choir, ending in a semicircle, exhibit a more advanced state of the pointed style, and are distinguished by the remarkable elegance of their graceful clustered pillars. They were built by Bishop Henry de Beaumont, an Englishman, 1205. The circular ornaments in the spandrels of the arches are very pleasing and of fanciful variety. The stalls are of oak, well carved. The chapels in the side-aisles, and the exterior of the E. end, should not pass unnoticed. Under the choir is a crypt, probably the only part remaining of the original church, built, in 1077, by Odo, half-brother of the Conqueror, and fifty years bishop of Bayeux. It is supported on 12 pillars with rude capitals, and contains some episcopal tombs. In the Trésor is preserved the chasuble of St. Regnbert, in a casket of ivory, with enamelled ornaments, both apparently of Arab workmanship, said to be gifts of St. Louis.

The student of architecture may visit with profit the Chapel of the Séminaire, adjoining the Hôtel Dieu, a simple oblong plain groined hall, lighted by double lancet windows, and not unlike the E. end of the Temple Church in London: its date is 1206. Behind the altar is a singular recess, beautifully groined. The little Norman Church of St. Loup, in the outskirts of the town, on the way to St. Lo, also deserves notice.

The **Tapisserie de Bayeux* has been removed from the Hôtel de Ville—where it used to be unwound by the yard from a roller like a piece of haberdashery, and subjected to the fingers as well as eyes of the curious—to a new room in the Public Library (open 8 A.M. to 4 P.M.), where it is more carefully preserved, and quite as conveniently exhibited, under a glass-case. Many persons will look upon it merely as a long strip of coarse linen cloth, 20 inches wide and 214 ft. long, rudely worked with figures worthy of a girl's sampler. It is, however, a curious historical record of peculiar interest to an Englishman; and, although it presents such anomalies as horses coloured alternately blue and red, there is much spirit in the drawing. It is ascribed, with much probability, to the needle of Matilda, Queen of the Conqueror, and represents the Conquest of England, and the events which led to it. It was preserved in the cathedral until the Revolution, being hung round the nave on certain days. The earliest record of it is in an inventory of the effects of the church, taken 1476. Its series of rude worsted pictures represents such events as Edward the Confessor designating William as his heir; the treachery of Harold; the shipment and landing of the Norman army and battle of Hastings: in many of these scenes, Odo Bishop of Bayeux, the Conqueror's half-brother, is a prominent figure. The design has evidently been to represent Harold as a usurper, and William as the rightful heir to the crown, having other claims besides that of conquest. The Normans are drawn with shaven heads and chins, in armour of scales, helmets protected by nose-pieces in front, and shields shaped like boys' kites, sometimes bearing devices of crests (supposed to be of later invention) suspended by a belt round the neck. All the buildings have round arches. At the bottom runs a curious border of animals, including camels and elephants, said to represent fables from Æsop. (?) The tapestry has been excellently engraved for the London Society of Antiquaries by the late Charles Stothard. When Napoleon was meditating the invasion of England, he caused this tapestry to be transported from town to town, and exhibited on the stage of the playhouses between the acts, to stimulate the spectators to a second conquest!

Wace, the author of the Roman de Rou, was a canon of the cathedral. According to it Harold actually did homage to William of Normandy, as heir of Edward the Confessor, for the throne of England. Many of the women about Bayeux still wear the Bourgogne or Bavolette, a rich and high head-dress, resembling that worn at the courts of the Dukes of Burgundy.

There are good Baths at the side of the river, and near them a pretty Nursery Garden.

A little N. of the line is

Formigny, where the English were defeated (1450) in an engagement so decisive, that it occasioned them the loss of Normandy, which has never since been separated from the French crown. A monument on the rt. of the road marks the battle-field, and commemorates the victory. It must be borne in mind that Sir Thomas Kyriel, who commanded the English, an old soldier of Agincourt, who took little account of superior numbers on the side of the French, attacked, with a vastly inferior force, the army of the Comte de Clermont, and while thus engaged was assaulted in the rear by a second army, under the Constable de Richemont.

Le Molay Stat.

Lison Junct. Stat. Here the rly. to St. Lo diverges. (Rte. 27.)

Isigny Stat., on the Aure, is accessible for vessels of considerable size, with the tide. Much butter is exported hence to England and elsewhere.

The river Vire, forming the boundary between the departments of Calvados and La Manche, is crossed by a great iron railway-bridge.

Carentan Stat. (Inn: H. d'Angleterre, good), a town of 3193 Inhab., in a low marshy situation. Its feudal fortifications exist no longer, but it possesses an old Castle, which belonged to the Kings of France, and was besieged by Edward III., 1346, and a handsome Church, surmounted by a spire; it is Norman, with pointed additions, the E. end in the style of the 14th cent. There is some painted glass, but defective.

Across marshes nearly all the way to Chef de Pont Stat.  $2\frac{1}{2}$  m. rt.

Sta. Mère l'Eglise has a similar church to that of Carentan.

Monteburg Stat. The ruins of the Abbey have been swept away to the foundation since 1817, having been sold in lots for the materials.

At Carentan we enter the peninsula of the Cotentin, so called from the "côtes"—coasts, which border it on 3 sides. It is a fertile and pleasing district, celebrated for its pastures, on which large herds are fed, everywhere enclosed within hedges, and abounding in old ruined castles and ancient churches. It is particularly interesting to Englishmen, as the cradle of some of the oldest and most noble English families. At every step the traveller will encounter obscure villages and hamlets, whose names are familiar to him as household words, as patronymics of great houses distinguished in French and English annals, most of whose founders left their country in the train of William the Norman. Such are Beaumont, Greville, Carteret, Bruce, Neville, Bohon, Perci, Pierpont; but these are only a few examples among many. The geology of the Cotentin is very interesting; its tertiary beds, in which more than 300 species of fossil shells, identical with those of the Paris Basin, have been found, and its Baculite limestone, may be well studied in the quarries near Valognes.

[At Quinéville, 6 m. N.E. of this, on the coast, is an ancient monument of masonry, 27 ft. high, and 30 in circumference at the base, which is square, and surmounted by a hollow cylinder garnished round with 2 rows of pillars. It is called la Grande Cheminée; and though some writers have made it a Roman monument, it may be more safely pronounced a structure of the end of the 12th cent., and nothing more nor less than a chimney.]

From the heights of Quinéville King James II. beheld the sea-fight of La Hougue, which destroyed all his hopes of regaining his throne. It is said that, in the heat of the battle, on seeing the French ships boarded and carried in succession, his English feelings so far prevailed, that he exultingly exclaimed to the French officers about him, "Look at my brave English sailors." (See La Hougue.)]

Through a pleasing country, to which the hedges and woodlands give a perfectly English character, not unlike parts of Sussex, to Valognes Stat. (Inns: H. du Louvre; Grand Turc, tolerable), a pleasant town of 6940 Inhab., containing some large and handsome mansions, the residence of numerous genteel families. The castle of William the Conqueror is demolished; it was here that he was warned by his fool, in the middle of the night, of the conspiracy of the Seigneurs of the Bessin and Cotentin to surprise and assassinate him. He instantly mounted his horse, and escaped with difficulty to Falaise.

[Although Valognes possesses nothing in itself to detain the traveller, in its vicinity are several objects of high interest.

a. Octeville, where is a Norman church with an octagonal tower and curious carvings (a Last Supper, &c., in bas-relief) older than the reign of Henry II.; and Martinvaast ( $2\frac{1}{2}$  m.), where is a still older ch. in the same style, and unaltered, with slender half-pillars, supporting Ionic capitals, outside its semi-circular E. end, and a cornice of grotesque heads under its eaves: its lofty stone vaulted roof is supported on horse-shoe arches. It stands in a sequestered spot, with a fine old yew beside it. There is a fine Castle, still inhabited, hard by.

b. Bricquebec (8 m. W. from Valognes), a village, including an ancient Castle, whose lofty donjon keep, 100 ft. high, in shape a decagon, seated on a high mound, remains tolerably perfect (date 14th cent.), as well as the walls of the outer enclosure. Other portions are as late as the 16th, and some as early as the 11th cent. It belonged in turn to the families of Bertram, Paisnel (Paganel) and Estouteville. It was taken from the last by Henry V. after the battle of Agincourt, and bestowed on his favourite William de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, who parted with it to ransom himself from the hands of the French.

c. In the adjoining forest, on the hill des Grosses Roches, are three Druidical monuments of the kind called "Galerie Couvertes." A little more than a m. N. E. of Bricquebec is the Trappist Convent, founded 1823 by M. Onfray, on a spot of ground just cleared from the forest. Its inmates, 32 in number, of whom 12 are priests, are bound by strict vows to silence, communicating by established signs on indispensable matters, living on coarse dry bread, a few vegetables, a salad with a spoonful of oil, a little milk, and a bit of cheese. They are prohibited from wearing linen even when ill, and sleep with their clothes on, upon a straw mattress piquée, 2 inches thick. They are allowed one sort of meat when sick, but fish is forbidden. They rise daily at 2 A.M.; and on fête-days at 12 or 1, and spend their time in prayer, reading, and work.

d. An omnibus plies from Valognes Stat., passing near Columby (a ch. with pointed lancet windows), to Saint Sauveur le Vicomte (S.W. of Valognes), where there is a picturesque and imposing **Castle* of the Tessons and Harcourts, but given by Edward III. after the treaty of Bretigny to John Chandos, one of the most famous captains of the wars of Edward III. and the Black Prince. He built the square and lofty keep-tower, one of the gateways, and other portions. In the 17th century it became a hospital, and continued such down to the Revolution. Although falling to ruin at present, it is the best preserved feudal fortress on the Côtentin.

Here are also ruins of an Abbey. The beautiful ch., the groundwork Norman (1067-1160), with additions, in the pointed style, of the 13th cent., has been rescued from ruin.

e. Between St. Sauveur and Bériers is the Abbey of Blanchelande, founded by Richard de la Haye, a favourite of Henry II. (1115-85) who had been captured by corsairs, and passed many years in slavery. It is beautifully situated, and consists of the abbot's house, still perfect and inhabited by a farmer, and part of the Church, in which late insertions have been added to an original Norman structure.

f. At Alleaume, the Roman Alauna, a village contiguous to Valognes, are very scanty remains of a bath. A Roman theatre, described by Montfaucon, has been totally demolished.

g. An omnibus runs from Valognes to La Hougue and Barfleur by Tamarville ( $2\frac{1}{2}$  m.), where the Norman Ch. has an elegant octagonal tower (a rare form) composed of 3 stories of narrow round-headed arcades and windows.

St. Vaast la Hougue, 10 m. N.W. from Valognes, is a seaport town of 4181 Inhab., situated in a fine bay, with the fortified island and lazaret of Tatihou in front, provided with a pier 984 ft. long. Previous to the rise of Cherbourg it was the chief port of the Cotentin. Vauban proposed to make it what Cherbourg is, the chief arsenal of France in the Channel, but the project was stopped, owing to the difficulty of quitting its port with a N. wind. The English frequently effected hostile landings here, to lay desolate the fair fields of France. King Stephen, in 1137, landed here, and the army which conquered at Crécy under Edward III. in 1346. Other armaments disembarked here in the reigns of Henry IV. and V.; and in 1574 a force of 5000 French and English Protestants, despatched by Queen Elizabeth under the Comte de Montgomery, to aid the cause of the Huguenots, made a descent upon Normandy at this point. La Hougue is chiefly known in English history, however, on account of the sea-fight of Cap la Hougue in 1692, when the united English and Dutch ships, under Admirals Russell and Rooke, annihilated the expedition prepared by Louis XIV. for a descent upon England, with the design of restoring James II. to the throne. The action commenced at some distance from the coast between Cape Barfleur and the Isle of Wight. The French admiral, Tourville, a man of great bravery, having orders from his master to engage at all odds, ventured to measure his strength with a fleet of 80 vessels, the largest which had entered the Channel since the Armada, while his own force did not exceed 44. It is supposed that he was ignorant of the junction of the Dutch, and that he counted on the desertion of Admiral Russell, who, it is well known, was in secret correspondence with James. However, nothing of this sort occurred; and, after a running fight, the French, in 3 divisions, retired to their own coast, pursued by the English. 3 of the largest ships, including the admiral's, le Soleil Royal, sought refuge in Cherbourg, where they were blown up by the English admiral Delaval. Tourville, hoisting his flag on board another vessel, conducted 12 into the bay of La Hougue, where he had time, before the arrival of Russell the day after, to prepare means for a stout defence, running them aground on the shallows with their broadside to the enemy. The French army, united with a body of Irish and English refugees, was drawn up on the heights above; while the artillery was embarked on floating batteries, à fleur d'eau, to assist in repelling any attack on the ships. James II., attended by Marshals Berwick and Bellefonde, who commanded his forces, was a spectator of the action which ensued. The only really brilliant part of the battle was the attack and capture of this armament by the boats of the English squadron under Sir George Rooke; these, and a few light frigates, only being able to approach near enough to take a part in the action on account of the shallows. In the teeth of a tremendous fire of musketry and artillery from shore and ships, the English sailors pulled up to the stranded vessels, boarded them all, one after the other, with loud huzzas, and pointed their guns against the French on the shore. All the 12 ships of war were burnt, together with a number of transports, 300 of which had been collected, in this and the neighbouring ports to convey the army across to England.

A magnificent view of the coast may be obtained from the churchyard of la Pernelle.

h. About 7 m. N. of St. Vaast is Barfleur, an ancient and now nearly deserted town, built of granite.

Down to the end of the 12th centy. it was the most frequented port by which the communication between Normandy and England was maintained, in spite of the dangerous rocks around. Upon them perished the "Blanche Nef,"—the ship which conveyed William the only son of Henry I., with 140 young noblemen—through the fault of the intoxicated pilot and crew. The prince himself might have escaped had not an affectionate desire to save his natural sister, the Countess of Mortagne, caused him to turn back towards the foundering vessel. The boat which was bearing him to the shore was instantly filled by a crowd of despairing wretches, and all sank to the bottom together.

On the extreme point of the Cap de Gatteville, the W. horn of the great bay into which the Seine discharges itself, the E. headland being near Fécamp, about 1 m. N. of Barfleur, a magnificent Lighthouse was completed in 1835. It is 271 ft. high above the sea, and is constructed entirely of granite. The light is seen at a distance of 27 m. out at sea. There is a fine view from the top. Barfleur is 15 m. E. of Cherbourg: a good road leads thither. Near to it, about 2 m. E. of St. Pierre l'Eglise, lies the Château de Tocqueville, seat of the family of the late eminent author of 'Democracy in America,' 'The French Revolution,' &c., M. Alexis de T., who is buried in the churchyard; and on the other side of the village, the Château St. Pierre, a building of the 18th cent., seat of the Count de Blangy.

i. About 7 m. from Valognes, l., is the small town of Brix, a memorable name, since it is the same as Bruis or Bruce in its primitive spelling. The noble family of that name was allied to the Dukes of Normandy, and from it sprang Robert Bruce the King of Scotland. The castle of the Seigneur de Brix, built in the 12th centy., is now reduced to a few ruined vaults and foundation walls. It was called Château d'Adam.]

The rly. from Valognes is carried by Sottevast and Couville Stat. to Martinvast Stat. Here is a very old and unaltered Norm. Ch., and a fine Castle still inhabited.

About 2 m. S.E. of Cherbourg is the castle of Tourlaville, the magnificent seat of the family of Ravalez, now a farmhouse, belonging to the de Tocquevilles. Its position is beautiful and its architecture of high interest; part of it dates from the 15th centy., part was added in the reign of Hen. II., and the Tour des 4 Vents (fine view from its top) has the character of Heidelberg Castle. "The bleeding heart and motto of the Ravalez family, 'Un seul me suffit,' are everywhere visible among the faded frescoes and gilding of its walls and ceilings."—H. R.

Cherbourg is so surrounded by hills that the rly. makes a great curve to the W. before reaching l'Univers, good and comfortable: Br. 2 fr.; D., table d'hôte, 3 fr.; B. 1½ to 3 fr. H. de France, good. H. de l'Europe, on the Quai), one of the principal naval ports and dockyards of France, situated at the N. extremity of the peninsula of the Cotentin in the Dépt. de la Manche, in the centre of a bay, the extremities of which are formed by Cap Levy on the E. and Point Omanville on the W. Its docks have been gained out of the rock, and its harbour won from the winds; for no pains nor cost have been spared to secure for France on this point, so advantageously projecting into the Channel, a naval arsenal and port, whence she may be ready to watch or annoy her rival on the opposite coast. The town lies in the hollow of the valley of the Divette, which opens out to the sea under the lofty falaise of the quartz hill of Le Roule, crowned by a fort. More than a dozen detached forts and redoubts have been erected on the hills behind the town, at distances varying from ½ m. to 1½ m. from the sea. Apart from its consideration as a naval station Cherbourg is insignificant; with dirty streets, reminding one of Portsmouth Point, and its commercial relations are very limited. The extensive naval works employ about 10,000 out of its 38,000 Inhab., and upon them depends its prosperity. Those who are accustomed to the bustle of an English port will find it difficult to conceive how so large a town can exist with so little water traffic. Not more than a couple of coasters leave the harbour each tide, and there are not above a dozen of the larger class of vessels in the basin or moored under the huge breakwater. The roadstead inside the breakwater usually presents a most desolate appearance. During the season the place is enlivened by a few English yachts, which come over to lay in wines and spirits. Among its few articles of export are eggs to the value of one million francs yearly sent to England. There is a commercial harbour formed at the mouth of the Divette, consisting of a floating dock of about 6 acres, and an outer tidal harbour protected by long stone piers or jetties, with a lighthouse on the eastern jetty. Yachts pay no port dues, and are admitted into the floating dock without charge, except a few francs for quarantine dues. Those who visit the place in a yacht are well received, and can usually obtain permission to see anything. The commercial port is quite distinct from

CHERBOURG Terminus (Inns: H. de

The Dockyard (Grand Port), or Port Militaire et Arsenal de la Marine, situated on the N.W. of the town. The regulations as to viewing this are variable: sometimes Englishmen are admitted without the least difficulty, at other times are absolutely refused admittance. The Aide-major or his assistants can deliver a permis de circulation. The Grand Port occupies a nearly triangular space of ground, one side resting on the sea, and is surrounded by fortifications of its own, 3 m. in extent, faced with granite masonry. It was designed, as well as the Digue, by Marshal Vauban, whose plan, drawn by his own hand and signed, is preserved in the H. de Ville, but was only partly begun by Louis XVI. Napoleon did something towards the completion, Louis Philippe much more, and Louis Napoleon has nearly completed the design. The dockyard, including the basins, is of greater extent than any English dockyard, and the buildings are very large and handsome. Having no harbours like those of Portsmouth or the Medway in which to place their ships in ordinary, the French have been compelled at an enormous expense to excavate out of the solid rock, principally by blasting, two floating docks of 20 and 15 acres respectively, and a tidal basin of 18 acres, besides one or two smaller basins, comprising altogether an area of 48 acres of deep water—i.e., more than 5 times the space afforded at Portsmouth, accessible by the largest ships of war, fully armed, at all times. The large 20-acre Floating-dock (Bassin à Flût Napoléon III.) was opened by the emperor in 1858, on the visit of the Queen of England. It is cut 54 ft. deep in the live rock; its quays are interrupted by 7 dry docks (formes de radoub) and 7 building-sheds (cales); 2 sets of lock-gates open into it; and on one side is the anchor-yard. The slips (cales de construction) and dry docks are very handsomely and expensively built, and all upon the solid rock. Some of the building-slips are roofed over most substantially, the roofs resting on arches supported on piers of stone, and the sides closed by wooden blinds. The arsenal also contains an atelier des forges, or smithy, and atelier des machines, or workshops, with machinery for planing, sawing, turning, &c., and for working in iron; an iron-foundry roofed with zinc; and very large store-houses. On the W. of the docks are the Parc and Caserne d'Artillerie, and the extensive pumping machinery for emptying the docks. The steam-power, however, is but small; and the dockyard generally presents an appearance of magnificence but of inactivity.

The Timber Shed (Hangar au Bois) is 958 ft. long, and supported on 130 stone pillars. The Salle d'Espadage, or rope-walk, is a covered building of great length. The yard is supplied with water from the Divette by a long and expensive conduit. On the road from the town to the Grand Port is the Caserne de la Marine, where the sailors are lodged when there is no ship ready for them.

Convicts are not employed at Cherbourg.

\**La Digue*. The roads of Cherbourg, though protected on three sides by the land, are naturally open and exposed to the N. wind. To remedy this defect, the project of throwing a Break-water across the bay's mouth, in the deep sea, has been favoured by every French government since that of Louis XIV. The old Bourbons, the Republic, the Empire, the Restoration, and Louis Philippe, have all desired to advance a scheme which should contribute to secure for France a safe and strong harbour on this part of her coast, exactly opposite Portsmouth, which would be an eye to watch and an arm to strike the English on the opposite side of the Channel. Hitherto the French have possessed no port for ships of war between Dunkirk (and that is fit only for frigates) and Brest. Now that the works have been carried on nearly 50 years, and more than  $2\frac{1}{2}$  millions sterling, together with about 4,000,000 cubic metres of stone, sunk in the operation, the Digue is at length complete, and its permanent duration seems probable, since for several years past no perceptible alteration has been produced by the action of the waves in the structure or profile of the base. For a long time the undertaking could be regarded only as a series of experiments and failures. The plan first adopted under Louis XVI. (1784) was that of forming truncated cones of timber, or huge broad-bottomed tubs, floating them on empty casks to the proper place, sinking them, and filling them with stones, and heaping up others round about them. But a very brief exposure to a few storms overset some of the caissons, shattered the framework of others to pieces, and spread the stone and wood over the anchorage, so as to injure it. After a considerable interruption from the Revolution, another scheme was resorted to of sinking stones at random (à pierre perdue), so as to be swept by the waves into a long and gradual slope to seaward: this was continued down to the time of Napoleon, who, as was his custom, looked at the project in a military point of view, and at once directed the formation of a fort in the centre of the Digue. All exertions were thenceforth concentrated on this object; a mole was formed, a battery raised on it mounting 20 guns, a garrison of 90 men was established on it, and lodged in barracks erected for the purpose. In 1808, however, a storm of extraordinary violence burst upon the roads; the waves, carried to an unusual height, soon submerged all the buildings raised upon the Digue, and, by the impetuosity of their shocks, swept them all off, save the cabin of the commandant of the prison, and, forming a wide breach in the masonry, poured over and through it with tremendous violence. There were at the time upon the dyke 263 soldiers and workmen, of whom 194 were drowned, 69 were saved by finding shelter in hollows among the stones, and 38 got off in a boat which they managed to reach during a short lull, with great difficulty, since the vessels in the roads within the Digue were all driven from their moorings. By this disaster the operations of 16 years in sinking large blocks were nearly annihilated, and the whole mass of stone was reduced to the condition of a rubble bed, rendering it doubtful whether the plan of even protecting the roads at all was practicable. Nevertheless, Napoleon did not abandon it, nor did his successors lose sight of it. A survey made by order of the government in 1828 showed, however, that the foundations had shifted in the course of 40 years from the position in which they had been first placed to a considerable distance. Under the vigorous superintendence of Louis Philippe a new mode of proceeding was adopted in 1832. As the result of the schemes previously pursued had shown that the mere weight and volume of the stones thrown into the sea was insufficient to secure their fixity, a layer of beton, a species of concrete, composed of 1 part of small stones and pounded brick and 2 of lime, is now deposited on the loose stone heap, sloping on either side, and upon it a vertical wall of well-jointed and solid masonry, faced with granite, is raised to the height of 20 ft. above ordinary high-water, forming a regular terre-pleine 20 or 30 ft. wide, and parapet 12 ft. thick. Even this, however, was destined to be the sport of the waves during a storm which occurred in 1836, the most terrible since that of 1808: the coat of concrete was broken and turned over in places; blocks of stone, weighing 3 tons, were raised 22 ft. high in the air, and carried over the wall to the inside of the Digue. At the end of 3 days 300 of them had found their way across, hurled with appalling violence and noise against the granite masonry, and acting upon it like battering rams, so that serious breaches and wide gaps were formed in the body of the breakwater. This is more or less the effect of every serious tempest.

The Digue de Cherbourg extends between the Ile Pelée and the Pointe de Querqueville, in length 4111 yards, or more than 2 m., leaving openings for the entrance and exit of vessels on the E. of 1257 yards, and at the W. of about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. The width at the base is 310 ft. The depth of the sea about the Digue varies from 36 to 45 ft. at low water. There are lighthouses at each end, as well as forts commanding the two entrances E. and W., and in the middle is the Fort Central, all casemated, and guns may be mounted all along the Digue. The stone employed is partly from the quarries at the base of the Montagne du Roule, conveyed to the harbour along a tramway; the slate comes from the excavations made in forming the docks, and the granite from Fermanville and Flamanville, and from the Chaussées near Guernsey. There is generally no difficulty in visiting the breakwater, and the best way is to hire a boat in the harbour and row off to it, the distance being about 2 m.

The following statement of comparative measurements in yards will show how much more serious an undertaking the Cherbourg Digue is than the Plymouth Breakwater:—

	Length.	Breadth.	Height.
Digue,	4111	103-310	22	} yards.
Break-	1760	120 at base,
water, }		16 at top,	14

The lapse of years however will alone decide whether the Digue can stand heavy N.W. gales. Even now that the breakwater has been built, a very heavy and troublesome sea drives through the roadstead when the wind is N.E.

The following description is nearly in the words of Commodore Sir Charles Napier, who visited Cherbourg during the Naval Review, Oct. 1850:—"We have seen, almost within sight of our own shores, a splendid Breakwater nearly 3 m. long rise from the bottom of the sea, 60 ft. deep, under which can lie at moorings 50 sail of the line with perfect safety, almost frowning on England. That breakwater is defended by 3 tremendous fortifications, independent of movable guns without number, to protect either entrance that may be attacked. On the Isle Pelée opposite the breakwater, on the E. entrance, is Fort Imperial, mounting 90 guns casemated. Opposite this, on the main land, is Fort des Flamands, mounting many heavy guns; in its rear is the redoubt of Tourlaville.

"At the W. entrance of the harbour are the Forts of Querqueville, St. Anne, Hommet, and Fort Chavagnac, built on a rock between the W. end of the breakwater and Querqueville. These forts mount upwards of 150 guns. There are also strong batteries to the left of the basin, bearing on the roads. Upon the land, excavated out of rock and faced with stone, is the avant port, capable of containing 10 sail of the line alongside the quay, 30 ft. deep at low water spring-tides. In this port are a dock and 4 slips; in a line with this, and communicating with it, is an inner basin in which 10 sail of the line can also lie alongside the quay. On two sides of this basin are magazines; and here also lies the sheer hulk. In the rear of Fort Hommet there is another small basin, and two building-slips. This serves as a ditch to the fort, which is cut off from the mainland and island by a drawbridge; from the lower tier of guns another bridge conducts you over a ditch to a large barrack-yard, casemated; and two small stairs lead up to a second tier of guns.

"In the rear of the avant port and the inner basin inland, there is another basin, which communicates with both. It can accommodate 20 sail of the line alongside the quay. Here are 4 docks and 5 slips. To the l. of the great avant port there is another avant port, which leads to the steam basin, where there are 3 slips. The storehouses are large, well arranged, and close to the basins. There is also a port of refuge, leading to another steam basin, where, as in the other basins, the steamers can coal alongside the wharf.

"The splendid dockyard is surrounded by a high wall, and the wall is again surrounded by regular fortifications, with a wet ditch: and to protect the works, the heights in the rear, and, indeed, all round from Tourlaville, there is a double chain of strong re-doubts.

Two piers project a considerable distance beyond the quays. Both the town and basin are outside the fortification."

A small basin or harbour has been built near Fort des Flamands; and the whole of the sea forts have been repaired, and in some places enlarged, by the present Emperor. The total expense of the works here, including the Digue, exceeds 16,000,000*l*.

These works will render Cherbourg, if not impregnable from the sea, at least very difficult to attack.

In 1758 the English, under General Bligh, effected a descent on the coast, to the number of 7000, in the face of 16,000 French troops, who offered no effective opposition. The English forces kept possession of Cherbourg for three days, in which time they destroyed all the naval and military works, docks, arsenals, &c., blowing them up with the powder which the French had left behind, burning the lock gates of the harbour and all the vessels of war and commerce. They levied a contribution of 44,000 livres on the town, but no injuries nor pillage of the inhabitants or their dwellings were permitted. To this the French themselves bear honourable testimony, acknowledging that the protection of the British officers prevented any outrage. All the cannon were carried off, but the bells of the ch. were conceded to the entreaties of the curé, and allowed to remain.

Cherbourg has no antiquities to show. The Ch., built about 1450, does not possess any interest. In the centre of the Quai, at the end of the Place d'Armes, is an equestrian statue of the Emperor Napoleon I.

The Chapelle de Notre Dame du Vœu, outside the town near the dockyard, owes its existence and its name to a vow made by the Empress Maude when caught in a fierce tempest, which threatened to overwhelm the vessel in which she was attempting to gain the port of Cherbourg, on her flight from the usurper Stephen, by whom she had been driven out of England. While still at her prayers, and in the agony of anticipated death among the waves, "Chante, Reine," exclaimed a sailor, "behold the land; your prayers are heard:" and from this circumstance, it is said, the spot where the queen landed, and near to which she built the chapel, now enclosed within the dockyard, was called Chantereine,—a name which it still retains. The present Chapel of the Vow is however modern, and stands on a different spot. Mathilda is not the only refugee sovereign whom Cherbourg has seen within its walls at various periods: besides Charles X., who here took a last farewell of his country, after abdicating the throne at Rambouillet, 1830, Don Pedro, ex-Emperor of Brazil, arrived here, 1831, when driven from his states, and James II. repaired hither after the battle of La Hougue.

The Hôtel de Ville contains a Collection of 164 Pictures, formed and bequeathed to the town by a native, Thomas Henry, himself an artist. "The best are (33) David, by Herrera el Viejo; (34) Christ bearing the Cross, by Alonso Cano (called Murillo);—the majority are of the French school."—R. F. In the court-yard is a very curious chimney-piece, of the age of Louis XI., rescued from a demolished convent.

Consuls reside here from Great Britain and the maritime states of Europe and the United States of America.

There is a Bathing Establishment on the sands, to the E. of the old Arsenal and Jettée, but it is not well appointed.

The Poste aux Lettres is on the Quai de l'Avant Port.

The view from Fort du Roule on the height S. of the town is very fine, and all the country at the back of Cherbourg is exceedingly pretty, consisting of green and well-watered valleys with limestone cliffs rising over them—exactly what would in England be chosen for country residences.

Steamers to Havre twice a week.

Excursions may be made to the Phare de Gatteville, Barfleur, and La Hougue; to the interesting Châteaux of Martinvaast, belonging to the Comte Dumoncel; of Flamanville, a splendid mansion; of Tourlaville; of Blangy—all described in Rte. 26.

Querqueville, 5 m. W. of Cherbourg, is a hamlet whose name is variously derived from the oak, quercus, which once surrounded it, or, with more probability, from its small Church (kerk) of St. Germain standing by the side of the parish ch. This is one of the oldest monuments of Christianity in Normandy. It is in the form of a cross; its chancel and transepts, lighted by loophole windows, all end in apses, and all this part is of herring-bone masonry; the nave and tower were added at a subsequent period. The ornaments of the towers, stripes of stone projecting from the wall, surmounted by the round arch, resemble those of Barton on the Humber, Barnack, and others in England.

The fort of Querqueville is one of the defences of the roads of Cherbourg, and its lighthouse points out the entrance to them.

13 m. farther to the W., beyond Beaumont, the Cap la Hague (often confounded on the maps with La Hougue) stretches out towards Alderney (called by the French Aurigny), from which island it is only 9 m. distant. Both the cape and the island, as well as the Cape Flamanville, are of granite, the fundamental rock of the Côtentin, supporting the grauwaacke and clay slates, which for the most part appear on the surface of that district. Opposite Cap la Hague, on a rock called le Gros du Raz, about a mile out at sea, stands a lighthouse.

The Trappist Convent at Bricquebec, and the Castle and Abbey of St. Sauveur le Vicomte, are described above in Rte. 26.

ROUTE 27.

CHERBOURG TO ST. MALO, BY COUTANCES, GRANVILLE, AND AVRANCHES.—MONT ST. MICHEL.

	Kil.	Miles.
Cherbourg to Lison } (Rly.) {	75	46
Lison to St. Lo . . . }	20	12
St. Lo to Coutances . . .	29	18
Coutances to Granville . .	29	18
Granville to Avranches . .	26	16
Avranches to Dol . . . .	41	26
Dol to St. Malo . . . . .	18	17
Total: Rly. to St. Lo, 58 m. Road to St. Malo, 93 m.

Railway to Lison Junction (Rte. 26), where is a branch rly. to

St. Lo Stat. (Inn: Soleil Levant); named from St. Lo, or Laudus, who lived in the 6th century, and came from this part of Normandy. It is picturesquely situated, and its ch. (once Cathedral), standing prominently on the brow of the hill, has an imposing appearance, with its double towers and spires, but as a building it is not of much interest. The W. end is florid, of the 15th centy.; it has three fine porches, but the upper part is defective and irregular; and, as well as the choir, exhibits marks of slovenliness in its builder. The nave is better, in the Pointed style of the 12th centy. Outside the church, in the N.E. angle, is a fine stone pulpit, with a pyramidal canopy over it. Charlemagne founded here, in the 9th centy., the once celebrated Abbey of St. Croix; but this building was swept away at the invasion of the Northmen, and the present Eglise de St. Croix, a very curious edifice (restored 1861) in the early Norman style, does not appear older than the 11th centy. The nave arches rest on pillars, and the S. side is plainer, and apparently older than the N. Over the round-headed doorway at the W. end is a bas-relief representing St. Lo restoring sight to a blind woman. The adjoining conventual buildings are of late dates.

St. Lo is chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Manche, and numbers 8941 Inhab.; it has a manufacture of fine cloth, but possesses no great attraction to the stranger. There is a small terraced platform to the W. of the cathedral, called Petite Place, which commands a view of the vale of the Vire. The modern H. de Ville is built with considerable taste in the style of the Renaissance.

The road to Coutances passes near Hauteville, the castle whence Baron Tancred and his six stout sons proceeded to the conquest of Sicily and Apulia.

Coutances (Inns: H. du Dauphin; H. des Trois Rois; H. d'Angleterre, good), at present a somewhat lifeless town of 8957 Inhab., is built upon a nearly conical hill, the summit of which is occupied by the Cathedral, proudly predominating over other buildings, with its 3 towers. The high road, carried in a broad winding terrace along the flank of the hill, round the outskirts of the town, forms an agreeable walk. There is also a beautiful Public Garden, the bequest of a townsman.

The **Cathedral* is one of the finest churches of Normandy, in the early pointed style, free from exuberant ornament, but captivating the eye by the elegance of proportion and arrangement. "The whole is of a piece, complete in conception and execution. The lofty towers terminating in spires, both finished and alike, flank its W. front." "Its interior is very lofty, more than 100 ft. from the floor to the keystone of the vault. Cluster piers divide the nave from the aisles: coupled pillars surround the choir (which ends in a hexagon). Most of the windows are of later date than the body of the building."—Knight. "The peculiarities of this cathedral are, the side porches close behind the towers; the open screens of mullioned tracery, corresponding with the windows, which divide the side chapels; and the excessive height of the choir, which has no triforium, only a balustrade just before the clerestory windows. The central tower is wonderfully fine in the exterior; it is apparently an expansion of the plain Norman lantern as at Caen. Some of the painted glass is in the oldest style: diapered patterns black on a grey ground."—Palgrave.

Obs.—Sculptures in end chapel; S. side, much historic glass, as in upper apse windows, &c.

A magnificent cathedral was built at Coutances in the 11th cent. with contributions partly furnished by Tancred de Hauteville and his 6 sons, the conquerors of Sicily and Apulia, who were natives of the diocese of Coutances; it was consecrated 1056 in the presence of William Duke of Normandy, 9 years before he conquered England.

Some of the antiquaries of Normandy have maintained that the existing edifice is the one completed at that time, and have claimed in consequence for their country the invention of the pointed style in the 11th centy.; but as no buildings either in W. France or in England were constructed in that style until 130 years after, and as, on the contrary, all the buildings erected during that period are in the round style—for instance, the church of Lessay, only 9 m. off, consecrated 1178—there is no reason to concede their claim. The evidence upon which they found it is, that the Livre Noir, (a mere account of the advowsons of the diocese, compiled 1250) makes no mention of the rebuilding of the church after the 11th cent. There exists, however, proof, from inscriptions on the walls of the side chapels, that several of them were dedicated, and therefore probably built, in the latter half of the 13th cent. (1274), and it is also known that the church was nearly ruined in 1356 by the army of Geoffrey d'Harcourt, so that it must have needed serious repairs, though the record of them is lost, executed probably about the end of the 14th cent. (See Knight's Normandy.)

From the top of the fine lantern tower a view may be obtained of the sea, with the distant island of Jersey on the W., and of the rock of Granville.

The Ch. of St. Pierre is in the florid Gothic style of the 15th cent., and has some good glass.

The steep and narrow valley which bounds the town on the W. and is traversed by the terraced road leading to Granville, before mentioned, is crossed by the remains of an ancient Aqueduct, consisting of 5 perfect arches, and 15 piers supported by buttresses, called Les Piliers, which is also the name given to the village or suburb in which it is situated,  $\frac{1}{4}$  m. out of Coutances. In most guide-books and descriptions of the town it is called a Roman aqueduct, but its pointed arches, its buttresses with offsets, and coarse irregular masonry, prove clearly that it is not so, but a work of the middle ages, probably monkish. It is supposed to have been erected in the 13th cent. by one of the noble family De Paisnel (Paganel.)

Coaches to St. Lo daily; to Granville 3 times a day.

Those who love old Gothic ruins, either for their picturesqueness or architecture, will be repaid by an excursion hence to the Abbey of Hambye, about 15 m. to the S.E. It may be taken on the way to Granville, making a détour of 9 or 10 m. A good road leads through a pleasing but hilly country by Mesnil l'Aubert and St. Denis le Guest, leaving Hambye l'Eglise  $\frac{1}{4}$  m. to the rt., to Bourg d'Hambye, a scattered village, with a small but clean cabaret, furnishing only homely fare, —coffee, milk, cheese, and cider. The old Castle of Hambye, whose keep, 100 ft. high, stood on an eminence over the Bourg, is swept away to mend the roads.

The churches of Orval (6 kilom.), St. Sauveur (9 kilom.).

It is a pleasant walk of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. from the Bourg to the Abbey, but the road thither, through narrow lanes, is practicable only for light cars.

The little Abbey of Hambye nestles in a retired valley, sheltered under picturesque cliffs by the side of a trout-stream (the Siègne) the beau idéal of a monastic site. The roof and W. end are gone, the ivy begins to creep up the mouldering walls, and destruction is advancing apace, yet there is much beauty in the narrow arches which enclosed the choir, resting on columnar piers, in the style of the 15th centy. Behind them are side chapels much older, having round and pointed arches in combination, which marks the period of transition. The tower in the centre of the cross rests on square piers which become octagonal below by chamfering. The convent buildings are now occupied by a farmer. The Chapterhouse, a double pointed vault elegantly groined, resting on angular pillars and entered by a fine doorway deep sunk in its early English mouldings, is now turned into a woodhouse: it should be seen. This abbey was founded by William de Pagnel 1145, but renovated, or probably rebuilt, in the 15th cent. by Joanne de Pagnel, the last of her family, who was buried in the church with her husband Louis d'Estouteville, the defender of Mont St. Michel against the English. Their tombs were destroyed at the Revolution.

About 5 m. from Hambye is Perci, cradle of the Earls of Northumberland. The high road to Granville may be regained at Bréhal.

The direct road from Coutances to Granville has no interest.

Bréhal. Trees diminish in size and number on approaching the sea, glimpses of which and the island of Chaussey are seen at intervals. The entrance to Granville is by a steep descent, excavated partly through a deep hollow way; on the rt. a natural wall of rock separates the road from the sea-shore, and through a gap cut in it access is afforded to the baths and sea-beach. In front rises a high hill, its slope cut away evenly and levelled, until it is as steep and smooth as the roof of a house, in order to form a glacis for the fort on its top. A bend in the road presently discloses to view the lower town and harbour.

Granville. — Inns: H. du Nord; H. des Trois Couronnes. A small but tolerably prosperous seaport (9984 Inhab.), chiefly resorted to by fishing vessels, but driving some commerce along the coast and with Jersey (33 m. distant) and Guernsey.

Its situation is singular, built in steps or terraces under a rocky promontory projecting into the sea, surmounted by the fort, whose presence restricts many of the buildings from rising above one story in height. Under the shelter of this eminence lies the little port, screened by it from the N. winds. A new town is gradually spreading itself along the low margin of this harbour, and up the banks of a stream so small that it is generally swallowed up in soapsuds, and contributes, with the filth of the town itself, especially at low water, when the harbour is drained to the lees of mud, to produce a state of atmosphere barely tolerable. The sombre hue of the buildings, whose walls are dark granite and their roofs black slate, renders Granville on a near examination as unattractive to the sight as to the smell, and moreover it contains few objects of interest.

The stranger desirous of a fine sea-view may repair to the churchyard at the Fort, or to the Lighthouse, whence Jersey is visible, or to the noble Pier, begun 1828 and still unfinished, enclosing an older one in its much wider circuit. It is very strongly built, so that guns can be mounted on it. A floating dock has been made. The tide rises and falls here at times from 40 to 44 feet.

Steamers (small and dirty) to Jersey (in 3 hours) and to St. Malo once a week. Rly. projected to Paris through Vire and Argentan.

Diligence twice a day to St. Lo Stat.

The Church at the W. end of the town is a low gloomy building, chiefly in the late flamboyant style, though it has some round arches. It is of grey granite, even the capitals of its columns being worked in that hard stone.

In order to ascend the hill above the old town it is advisable not to thread the labyrinth of filthy alleys, steep slopes, and stone steps which compose it, but to issue out by the road to Coutances, and then scale the steep slope no farther than the walls of the fort, a point which commands a good sea view. Close under the cliffs lie the baths (Salon des Bains) and reading-room, which can be approached only through the breach in the rock before alluded to, leading also down to the sands, a fine smooth and broad expanse, quite shut out from the town. There are no machines; instead of them bathers are enclosed in cases of canvas carried in the fashion of sedan-chairs, and they must walk into the water thick-clad: the ladies led by the women: the men are banished to the distance of  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. to the N.

Granville is one of the few towns on the Continent which possess regular waterworks. The town was bombarded by the English in 1695 and in 1803; and though not a particularly strong place, it resisted effectually the attack of the peasant army of Vendéens, 30,000 strong, on their ill-fated march, N. from the Loire, in 1793, led on by the gallant Larochejacquelin, in the hope of opening a communication by the sea with England, and to secure a place where they could deposit in safety the women and children, the sick and the priests. The Vendéens, being destitute of artillery to breach the ramparts, were unable to resort to a regular siege, and the attempt to storm the place was foiled. More than once these brave soldiers gained the ramparts, sometimes supplying the want of scaling ladders by sticking their bayonets into the chinks of the masonry, but as often they were swept off by grape and musketry from the walls and gunboats in the harbour, until at length they were forced to retire with a loss of 1800 killed. Their army never advanced farther N.; this was the culminating point of their success, and from henceforth they were compelled to retreat. During this attack the suburbs of the town were set on fire by the republicar's commander of the fortress and burnt down.

It is a very pretty ride from Granville to Avranches; the view obtained from the height, after crossing the wooded dell of Sartilly, of the peaked rock of Mont St. Michel, is especially striking.

[About 4 m. N.E. of Sartilly is the ruined abbey of Luzerne. The granite church, in the transition style, is tolerably perfect: it was completed 1178, except the nave, which is later. The conventual buildings, turned into a cotton-mill at the Revolution, are fast going to decay. The situation in a wooded valley is very beautiful. The road from Sartilly is wretchedly bad.]

Avranches.—(Inns: H. de Londres, best, and comfortable for ladies: Br. 2 fr. 50 c., B. 2 fr., table-d'hôte 3 fr.; garden behind. H. de France; H. de Bretagne; both tolerable. H. d'Angleterre.) Avranches (Abrancæ), a town of 9000 Inhab., is now chiefly remarkable for its very beautiful situation on the sides and summit of a high hill, the last of a widely extending ridge, rendered accessible for the high road by broad terraces carried up its steep slope in zigzags. *The view which you obtain in ascending, and especially that from the little mound on the l. of the road before you enter the town, in front of the Sous-Préfecture, is one of the most beautiful in the N. of France. The landscape abounds in wood, with partial clearances of well-cultivated corn-land, through the midst of which winds the river, flashing in glittering pools until expanding into a broad estuary it meets the sea, which borders the horizon. But the prominent feature of the view is the peaked rock of Mont St. Michel, and the twin islet of Tombeleine rising grandly from the hem of the waters.

Under this mound is a Public Walk planted with trees, formerly the garden of the Archevêché, in the midst of which a statue of General Valhubert, a native of Avranches, who fell at Austerlitz, is set up.

The cathedral of Avranches, one of the noblest in Normandy, and the chief ornament of the town, was pulled down to prevent its falling 1799: its site remains an open platform, commanding an extensive view, and now named Place Huet, from the celebrated Bishop of Avranches. All traces of the church are swept away, save a single stone, la Pierre de Henri II., said to be that on which the king kneeled, a humble penitent, before the Papal Legates, to make atonement for the murder of Becket, "which had affected him more than the death of his own father or mother." After swearing on the Gospels that he had neither ordered nor desired it, he here received the Papal absolution, 1172. The stone stands at what formed part of the door of the N. transept, and is surrounded by a chain.

There are some portions remaining of the old ramparts of the town with herringbone and other masonry.

Another point of view, preferable perhaps, in some respects, even to that above described, is obtained from the Jardin des Plantes, in which has been set up the Gothic porch of a chapel now swallowed up by the sands.

The Palace of the Bishops, in former times, is now devoted to the Public Library, containing 10,000 vols. and some old MSS., among which was discovered a copy of Abelard's treatise called 'Sic et Non,' published 1836 by M. Cousin; a Museum of Antiquities; and a Picture Gallery.

The beauty of the situation, the salubrity of the air, and the cheapness of living, have rendered Avranches a favourite residence of the English, who form a considerable colony here. The English Ch. Service is performed in a room once a barrack, in the Boulevard de l'Ouest, where it joins the Rue Sanguière.

The Post Office is in Rue St. Gervais.

[The interesting Excursion to Mont St. Michel may be made from Avranches in 8 or 9 hrs. A one-horse chaise costs 10 frs. Pedestrians should go by the sands, inquiring beforehand whether the tide will suit.]

In going to Pont Orson and Dol you quit Avranches by another series of zigzags overlooking the bay of Can-cale with Mont St. Michel in the midst, rising above a beautiful foreground of trees, and at Pont au Baud, at the bottom of the hill, you cross the little river Selune.

At Louis, 3 m. short of Pont Orson, a cross-road turns off on the rt. to the Mont St. Michel, crossing the sands, which are never covered by the sea except at spring-tides.

Pont Orson. Inns: Poste; Croix Verte; tolerable; a horse and car for 5 or 6 fr. to Mont St. Michel, and this is the best point to start from.

The Castle, now entirely swept away, was intrusted by Charles the Wise, 1361, to Du Guesclin, to hold as a frontier post against the English. During his absence on a foraging expedition, however, it was very nearly lost, through an understanding between an English prisoner, Felton, and the waiting-maids of Du Guesclin's lady. The attempt was discovered, as the enemy were scaling the walls, by his sister, a stout Amazon, who overthrew the ladders into the ditch, and the treacherous waiting-maids were sewed up in sacks and drowned in the river.

The interesting granite Church, partly Norman, with a transition W. end and pointed choir, contains, in the N. aisle, a singular series of carvings in stone, representing the Passion—but so mutilated as to lose much of their value; also a very old stone altar-table, with sculpture mutilated, in the N. aisle.

The Maire of Pont Orson can give an order of admission to see the interior of Mont St. Michel.

[A good macadamised road, leading from Pont Orson to **Mont St. Michel*, 5 m., renders this by far the best approach to the Mount. It passes near Beauvoir and Ardevon, where are the remains of conventual farm-buildings, anciently belonging to the monks of the mount. The road is succeeded by a tramway across "la Grève," i.e. the sands, extending for many square leagues all round the mount, and left bare for 4 or 5 hours by the sea, which interrupts the passage to it between 1 and 2 hours near high water. "At neap-tides (aux eaux mortes) the rock is not surrounded by water at all at any part of the day. At spring-tides (aux eaux vives) it is surrounded twice each day, and then the sea sometimes breaks into the soldiers' mess-room."—G.B.A.

The castle is only shown between 10 and 4; 3 P.M. is a good time for the visit.

The distance across the Grève to the mount is about a mile; the driest track is firm and perfectly safe for horses or carriages, but on either side are quicksands, which render it dangerous to diverge. There always remain behind a few pools which would reach above the ankles of a pedestrian. There is something mysterious and almost awful in the aspect of this solitary cone of granite, rising alone out of the wide, level expanse of sand. One might imagine it the peak of some colossal mountain just piercing through the crust of the earth, but deprived, at the moment of its appearance, of the geological force necessary to rear it aloft. Slight as is its elevation, its isolated position in the midst of the sea, and its heaven-pointed top, render it the prominent object of every view from the surrounding coast, and from a long distance give it the appearance of being much nearer at hand than it really is. On approaching it, it is found to be girt round at its base by a circlet of feudal walls and towers, washed by the sea; above these rise the quaint irregular houses of the little town, plastered as it were against the rock, and piled one over another. Above them project the bare beds of rock, serving as a pedestal from which the lofty walls, high turrets, and prolonged buttresses of the conventual buildings are reared aloft, surmounted in their turn by the pinnacles and tower of the church (now bearing a telegraph), which crowns the whole, and forms the apex of the pyramid.

Not inferior in interest to its outward aspect are the historical associations connected with this shrine of the Archangel Michael—the successor of Bel and the Dragon—the saint of high places. Holy hermits succeeded to Pagan priests in the possession of this natural temple, which Norman dukes and kings further honoured by building a church, and converted into a fortress almost impregnable in ancient times. Henry I. here effectually resisted his two elder brothers. Here Henry II., in 1166, kept his court and received the homage of the turbulent Bretons, whom he had subdued with a strong arm. This was the only fortress which held out for the French king when all Normandy was overrun by the armies of the conqueror of Azincour; successfully withstanding 2 sieges, in 1417 and 1423, under the brave Louis d'Estouteville. The shrine of St. Michel was for ages visited yearly by thousands of devotees from far and near, and the records of the convent preserve the names of more than a dozen royal pilgrims who have repaired hither to prostrate themselves as penitents before it, and to load it with their bounty. The Revolution dispersed the monks, interrupted the pilgrimage, and changed the destination of the building to a Prison, in which 300 aged priests were immured until death should release them. Its prisons and oubliettes, however, are of far greater antiquity. Who has not heard of the iron cage of St. Michel, which, though originally of metal bars, was afterwards changed to one of thick beams of wood placed 3 inches apart? Its last occupant was an unfortunate Dutch journalist, who was seized most unjustifiably, beyond the territory of France, for having abused the unscrupulous tyrant Louis XIV., who treated the Dutchman as he did the Italian prisoner of the iron mask. St. Michael's Mount in Cornwall, which bears so remarkable a resemblance to this, though on a smaller scale, was one of the foreign dependencies of the abbey.

The entrance to Mont St. Michel is by 3 gates, one within the other, the second flanked by 2 of the long cannon with which the English forces of Henry V. ineffectually bombarded the mount in 1424, firing from them stone balls 1 ft. in diameter. Near this the arms of the knights of St. Michel, with a lion for supporter, are seen carved in the wall: the third gate is provided with a portcullis. Here is a fair little Inn, the Tête d'Or. The town (so to call it—400 Inhab., and garrison of 200 men) consists of one narrow, steep, and very foul-smelling lane. The best way of ascending is by the ramparts, turning to the rt. after passing the gate, up a succession of grass-grown flights of stairs "hanging to the side of the rock," provided with machicoulis at the side to annoy an enemy below. The uppermost gateway, leading into the castle convent, stands midway across a flight of steps, and is flanked by 2 bartizans or turrets; it "is very scenic and baronial," built probably 1257; but the chamber of knights and princes now re-echoes to the clank of chains and the rattle of the shuttle and beam. The present destination of the building is a prison. It contains 800 prisoners. Admission having been gained through this gate, the stranger is conducted by dark mysterious vaults and passages, up and down gloomy stairs. The convent-building, called "the Marvel," consists of 3 stories, the lower one a series of vaulted crypts, Salles de Montgomery; above this 2 noble halls, probably erected by Philip Augustus, who was a great benefactor; and above all the cloister and dormitory. The **Cloisters*, the most beautiful part of the building, and a gem of Gothic architecture, unique of its kind, were built between 1220 and 1228. Towards the court they are supported by a double row of pointed arches resting on thin granite pillars, leaving an exquisitely groined narrow vault between the rows. The pillar of one arch alternates with the point of the next, so as to allow a most graceful carved volute or sprig, issuing from the capital of every alternate pillar, to be seen. The spandrels of the arches are filled up with a vegetative creation of foliage, sprigs, flowers, garlands, such as is scarcely to be equalled anywhere for fanciful variety, and sharpness and excellence of execution; the whole is surmounted by a cornice of flowers, and is in good preservation. It highly merits to be drawn in detail. The arches and carvings are of soft limestone brought from a distance; all the rest of the buildings are of granite, and the rock of St. Michel itself is of that stone.

The Chambre des Chevaliers, below the cloisters, is a noble hall or nave, of 4 finely-vaulted aisles, supported on 3 rows of pillars, and measures 98 ft. by 68. The chapters of the knights of the order of St. Michel, founded 1496 by the bigot Louis XI., who twice repaired hither as a pilgrim, were held in it.

The Church of the convent consists of 2 parts, of different ages and styles. The Romanesque nave is in the massive style of the 12th cent. (about 1140), with slightly ornamented capitals and a wooden roof. The pointed Gothic choir is of the 15th cent. (1452-1521):—the mouldings of the arches are carried down into the reeding of the piers without any interruption of capitals. The arches are closed up with walls, into which curious Scriptural bas-reliefs, such as Adam and Eve driven from Paradise, Noah's ark, &c., St. Michael killing the dragon, very grotesquely treated, are let in. The piers supporting the central towers, having given way, owing to the injury they received from a fire, the last of the 8 or 10 conflagrations, several of them caused by lightning, which at different times have consumed the abbey, have been repaired and restored in good style.

Beneath the choir of the church a circle of drum-like pillars, set very close together, with one in the centre, supports the superincumbent weight, and forms a curious crypt.

The view from the top of the church, elevated 400 ft. above the sands, from amidst its florid buttresses and pinnacles, now much mutilated, is curious. The Rochers du Cancale, on the coast of Brittany, the town of Avranches, and the neighbouring rock of Tombeleine, are the most conspicuous objects; all around is, as the tide ebbs or flows, either a waste of sand, interspersed with pools and channels of rivers, or a wild expanse of tossing waves.

Some change is said to have taken place on the coast of late years, so that the sea barely reaches the Mount except at spring-tides, and it then rises with such rapidity as to be extremely dangerous, especially as it renders the sand quick for some distance in advance of it. Formerly, owing to the short stay the sea made round the walls at every tide, the castle was hardly accessible by a boat, and from this circumstance, and its amphibious position, changing twice a day from land to water, its strength as a fortress arose.]

The river Couësnon, crossed by a bridge on quitting Pont Orson for Dol, forms the boundary between Normandy and Brittany. A fertile and very picturesque country succeeds, well wooded; in fact, one entire orchard, the corn-fields being invariably planted with rows of fruit-trees. A last view is obtained of Mt. St. Michel from a lofty hill over which the road is carried.

The caps worn by the women hereabouts consist of a piece of white linen, bent like a roof, laid on the top of the head, the front, or gable, turned up in a sort of scroll, exactly corresponding with that seen on monumental effigies in English churches, of ladies of the 15th and 16th cent.

Dol. — Inns: La Grande Maison, not very good; homely, but not dear; Hôtel de Notre Dame.

Dol is a remarkable town, as bearing thoroughly the aspect of ancient days: the black hue of the granite of which its houses are built, contrasting sometimes with splashes of whitewash dashed over them, the heavy projecting gables, the arcades of various heights and patterns running under the houses, the quaintly carved granite pillars on which they rest, all give a peculiar character to the place, and offer some good bits for the artist's pencil, while he may fill a sketch-book with costumes in its market-place. It has 3990 Inhab. and a considerable corn-market held in a desecrated church (des Carmes) distinguished by fine flamboyant W. window and a Norman nave.

The chief building is the **Cathedral* (before the Revolution an episcopal see), built of sombre grey granite, uniformly in the early pointed style, except the porches; that on the S. leading into the nave being florid, and having carvings in white stone like those in the cloister of Mont St. Michel. The arches of the nave have deep mouldings, and rest on circular piers, composed of a group of 4 columns, the inner one towards the nave being detached half-way up to the roof, where it becomes engaged like the rest. The choir, more ornamented than the nave, but in the same style, has a square E. end, like the English churches, but behind the high altar is an open arch of two divisions separated by a slender pillar admitting a view into a small Lady Chapel behind. The space above this arch is occupied by a large E. window filled with old and good painted glass. There is a very ancient granite font. These are the most striking points in this fine edifice, which is worthy of attention for its similarity to the Gothic of England; indeed many of the churches of Brittany are said to be the work of English architects.

There is an antique building called le Palais or Maison des Pluïds, apparently Romanesque.

The old walls of Dol remain tolerably perfect, wanting the gates; many of their flanking towers and bastions are surmounted with deep machicoulis, and the whole is surrounded by a fosse. A high Terrace walk has been formed on the outside of this, and planted with trees. On the side of the town next the cathedral a view is obtained from this walk of the solitary eminence of Mont Dol, a granite rock something like Mont St. Michel, only rising out of the dry land. (See below.)

These antiquated fortifications of the 15th and 16th cent. were defended by the Vendéans after their retreat from Granville against the Republican army, which was beat off after a bloody combat of 15 hours' duration, and compelled to retreat.

The tract of land between Dol and the sea, a distance of 3 m., is chiefly marsh gained from the waters by embankments; very fertile, but teeming with miasma, which, however, has diminished of late from improved drainage. A tremendous irruption of the sea, reclaiming its own, in the beginning of the 17th cent., overwhelmed this district.

About 1½ m. outside of Dol, and ½ m. to the l. of the Rennes road (turning off at a cross and looking out to the rt.), is one of those Druidical stones, so common in Brittany, called Menhirs. It is known as la Pierre du Champ Dolent, a name which probably marks it as a funeral monument, perhaps on some field of blood or battle. It is a rude, skittle-shaped obelisk of granite, a single block, 30 ft. high above ground, and 8 or 10, it is said, below, rising in the midst of a cornfield, and surmounted by a wooden cross.

On the way to St. Malo you pass on the rt. the Mont Dol, a granite rock surmounted by a telegraph, rising out of the flat land, and most probably once an island in the bay of Mont St. Michel, for the sea no doubt once extended thus far. Where the road reaches the present margin of the bay the shore is lined by a long scattered village, composed of nearly as many windmills as cottages. Not a boat can approach them, owing to the shallowness of the water, although the tide comes up to their doors twice a day. On the W. shore of the bay, however, is the small port of Cancale—4880 Inhab.—visible on the rt., backed by high cliffs, famed for the oyster-beds on the Rochers de Cancale below them, whence Paris and a large part of France are supplied.

In 1758 an army of 14,000 English, under the Duke of Marlborough, landed here, but after fruitlessly summoning St. Malo, which was found too strong to be taken by assault, they re-embarked, having burned a few small vessels; and, as H. Walpole said, "The French learned that they were not to be conquered by every Duke of Marlborough."

St. Malo. — Inns: H. de France; rooms at 1, 2, and 3 frs. per bed; table-d'hôte at 5, 3 frs.; déjeuner à la fourchette, 2 frs. 50 c.; in this house Châteaubriand was born (extra charge for sleeping in his room); H. de la Paix, good; in high repute for its cuisine.

This fortified seaport town (Pop. 10,100) may be styled a little French Cadiz from its position on a rocky island (l'Île d'Aron) communicating with the mainland by a long causeway called Le Sillon, forming the port, which is separated from the open sea by the island and this causeway. The town fills the island completely, so that its picturesque walls and flanking towers, surmounted by a deep cornice of machicolis, rise at once from the water's edge, washed by the waves; and the houses and buildings squeezed closely together, having no room for lateral extension, rise to the height of 5 or 6 stories above its narrow and filthy lanes.

The tides rise here higher than at any other point in the Channel, viz. to an elevation of 45 to 50 ft. above low-water mark, and the harbour, which is protected by a stout pier, is drained perfectly dry at ebb, so that carriages and foot passengers cross it to go to the populous suburb St. Servan (9984 Inhab.), in places covered an hour or two before with 4 fathoms of water; when the tide is up, the communication is by ferry-boat. An attempt to bridge the harbour, and form a dock, has been abandoned. Behind the promontory, on a rock, stands St. Servan. Here the river Rance (Rte. 41) empties itself into the sea.

A Ferry Steamer plies every hour to Dinard on the opposite side of the Rance, a pleasanter resting-place than St. Malo, with a good and moderate Hotel. N.B.—The steamers start from 2 different quays, according to the tide. Take care you are not purposely directed to the wrong one.

The harbour is lined with a broad quay running just under the town walls, and here the steamers moor when the tide permits them to enter. The Town walls afford an almost uninterrupted walk around the island, and the circuit may be made in  $\frac{3}{4}$  of an hour. The view out to sea is varied by the little archipelago of islands;—white, angular, bare rocks, which raise their bristling heads around the roads, the larger ones crowned with forts and batteries. That called La Conchée is occupied by [France.]

a strong citadel built by Vauban; and Cisambre, 6 m. off, is also strongly fortified. The smaller isles and the sunken rocks attached to them render the access to the port difficult.

The public buildings are of no interest: on the side of the town nearest the Sillon, and separated from it by a bridge, is the old Castle, which, together with a large part of the fortifications, may have been constructed in the 16th cent. by Anne of Brittany, who placed over one of the towers this inscription—"Qui qu'en grogne, ainsi sera, c'est mon plaisir." The Cathedral, very capacious and much modernised, has a choir something like that of Dol, and a new gaudy Gothic altar from Paris, with several marble statues worth notice.

The sabbath is more strictly observed by the Malouins, and indeed in Brittany generally, than in most other parts of France.

English service is performed at the British Vice-Consulate, Rue de Dinan, on Sunday.

The statue opposite the Hôtel de Ville is that of Duguay Trouin, a native of St. Malo (born 1673), and a naval hero of whom the French are very proud, "parcequ'il a chassé les Anglais sur toutes les mers."

The illustrious Châteaubriand first drew breath in the Rue des Juifs, No. 15, in the house which is now the H. de France, in the room marked No. 5, from the window of which the sea and his tomb are visible. The Abbé de la Mennais, author of Paroles d'un Croyant, and Mahé de la Bourdonnais, governor of the French East Indies, who took Madras from the English, 1746, were also Malouins.

On the sea-shore, by the side of the Sillon, just beyond the castle, on the rt. of the road from Dol, are Sea-baths and a Subscription Reading-room. There is a large expanse of sand extending at low water as far as a little rocky island in front, well adapted for bathing, and provided with machines.

St. Malo was bombarded by an English fleet in 1692, and by another under Admiral Berkeley, 1695—both times with slight result. In June, 1758, an army under the 2nd Duke of Marlborough, having landed in the Bay of Cancale, burned 80 vessels lying in the harbour of St. Malo.

St. Malo flourished during the last war, when it was styled the "Ville de Corsaires," fitting out privateers to prey on the commercial ships of England; many large fortunes were then made.

The best view to be obtained of St. Malo is from the Fort de la Cité, situated on the promontory a little to the W. of St. Servan, reached by the first turning on the rt. after you enter that suburb from St. Malo. Hence from a considerable elevation you look down upon the town, upon the singular inlets of the sea branching out into the land which form the harbour, and on the archipelago of little islands grouped around its entrance. Among them the islet of Grand Bey, situated to the S.W. of the town, chosen by Châteaubriand for his last resting-place, and bestowed upon him by the municipality of his native town, is conspicuous. His fellow-citizens erected a tomb on it to contain his remains. Immediately beneath the spectator on his l. rises the triangular tower of the Solidor, a feudal fort 60 ft. high, with flanking towers at its angles, approached by a drawbridge. It is now a prison.

At St. Servan the Union Boarding-house is recommended; charges 5 fr. a day, or 100 fr. a month, exclusive of wine.

Rly. to Rennes projected 1858.

[Combours, a poor small town, famed for its sausages and horse-fair, 18 m. from St. Malo. The Castle has belonged to the Châteaubriands for 150 years, and before them to the Duras's. Châteaubriand, the author and minister of Louis XVIII., spent part of his boyhood here, and his chamber and study remain unaltered. It is a square building with towers in the 4 corners, enclosing a small court: it is in perfect preservation, with its wall-galleries and loopholes. The present entrance, by a long flight of steps, is modern.]

Steamers. It is a pleasant excursion up the river Rance from St. Malo to Diuan. A small steamer ascends and returns with the ebb when the state of the tide permits. (Rte. 41.)

Steamers twice a week, in about 3 hrs., to and from Jersey, whence Southampton may be reached.

ROUTE 29.

CAEN TO TOURS, BY FALAISE, ALENÇON, AND LE MANS—RAIL.

	Miles.
Caen to Mezidon . . . . .	15
Mezidon . . . . .	33
Argentan . . . . .	50
Alençon . . . . .	85
Le Mans to Tours . . . . .	62

Caen to Mezidon, see Rte. 26. At Mezidon the Cherbourg line is left, and the trains correspond.

St. Pierre-sur-Dives. Here is a very fine Ch., to which was formerly attached a large monastery, suppressed at the Revolution. The towers of the W. front are fine; one, the S., Norman, the N. in the Pointed style with deeply moulded lancet windows. Some of the painted glass is apparently very old. But a much more interesting object to the student of ecclesiastical architecture is to be found at about a league hence, viz. the ch. of Viel Pont-en-Auge, which belongs to the 5th to the 10th cent., and presents fine specimens of the peculiar masonry ("petit appareil") of that time.

Fresnay Stat.

Coulbœuf Junct. Stat.

[A branch Rail. hence to

Falaise. Inns: H. de Normandie; H. du Grand Cerf; H. de France. This ancient and not very prospering town of 9580 Inhab. occupies the summit of a lofty platform, bordering on a rocky precipice, or Falaise, whence its name. One very populous suburb has extended into the narrow ravine below this precipice; and another, situated at the distance of 1 m. to the E., called Guibray, now rivals the town itself in size and population, and is distinguished for its Fairs established by William the Conqueror, held in August, celebrated for the horses then brought to market. Falaise is a dull lifeless town at present, but has one object of great interest to every traveller—the Castle, one of the few real Norman fortresses remaining in France, the ancient seat of the Dukes of Normandy, and the birthplace of William the Conqueror. It is a grand and picturesque ruin, occupying a commanding position at the extremity of the town, where the platform is cut into a narrow promontory by gullies which isolate it on 3 sides, rendering it a place of great strength until the invention of gunpowder. To this it was indebted for the 9 sieges which it had to endure. The approach to it is behind the modern H. de Ville. A college or grammar-school has been established within the exterior court, and occupies a chapel said to be of the 12th cent. A grassy terrace walk along the ramparts, shaded with trees, leads to the Norman Donjon Keep, an oblong square, whose walls, supported by high and massy buttresses, rise abruptly from the edge of the precipitous rocks de Norrou. It is now a mere shell, partly filled with rubbish; its walls show traces of herringbone masonry, and retain several round-headed windows, of 2 lights supported on short pillars, and having capitals carved with Runic knots. In one corner a cell is shown in which, according to the tradition, the Conqueror was born. From those windows and ruined walls you look down into the Val d'Ante, so called from the small stream which runs through it, crowded with mills and tanneries. It was while gazing upon this scene, according to the tradition, that Duke Robert, the father of the Conqueror (like David of old), first espied Arlotte, the tanner's fair daughter, washing in the stream, and became at once so smitten with her charms, that he made her his mistress, and continued faithful to her until death. And there remains the window, there is the tanner, and there are the women washing, to carry us back 900 years. There are several remains of rooms in the keep, remarkable as having chimneys to them, and the windows of a lower floor now inaccessible are visible. The Chapel has been converted into a powder magazine.

The keep is surpassed in elevation by Talbot's tower, a cylinder of beautifully smooth and perfect masonry, rising beside it to a height of more than 100 ft., crowned with a rim of broken machicoulis. Its walls, 15 ft. thick, enclose a winding stair leading to the top, and a well opening into each of the 5 vaulted stories. This tower is supposed to have been built by "Valiant Talbot," who was lord warden of the "Marche Normande," after the capture of Falaise by Henry V., between 1418 and 1450. It was repaired about 1835, and the new stone employed was of so bad a quality that it is actually decaying, whilst the stone 400 years old remains untouched. A very ugly modern zinc roof has been put on the tower. Henry V. assaulted the castle from the top of the still loftier cliff Mont Mirat, on the opposite side of the ravine, where traces of his intrenchments still remain: the siege lasted more than 4 months. On the other side of the castle is a relic of another siege, viz. the breach in the wall by which Henri IV. carried the fortress by assault, after 7 days of cannonade, in 1589.

The ch. of St. Gervais has an early Norman tower, and the outside of the clerestory appears old, but most of the ch. has been modernised to a very florid Gothic. The ch. Ste. Trinité is of a debased Gothic profusely ornamented, chiefly of 15th and 16th centy.

A bronze equestrian statue of William the Conqueror was set up by his fellow townsmen in 1851, in Trinity-square, at the foot of the Castle.

A large portion of the old town walls remain, running round the edge of the ravines, through which the stranger may ramble agreeably, either upwards into the suburb of Val d'Ante, the birthplace of the Conqueror's mother, below the castle keep, or, issuing out of the picturesque "Porte des Cordeliers," the only gate remaining perfect, he may follow the direction of the Ante downwards through shady lanes, and re-enter the town by the dismantled Porte St. Laurent. The suburb Guibray, larger than the town, is devoted to the manufacture of cotton nightcaps. Hand-machines for making them whirr in every cottage, and every other shop is a bonneterie. The ch. of Guibray is Norman, but has been much altered. There are some Norman engaged columns round the walls, to which arches in brick and plaster were put in 1858. Part of the S. transept and the W. porch are curious. Round the ch. are a number of exceedingly old shops or booths for the annual fair.]

Fresnay la Mère Stat.

Argentan Stat. (H. des Trois Maries, good; H. du Point de France), a dull old town of some 5500 Inhab., on the Orne, still partly surrounded by ramparts. There are 2 large late Gothic churches with some fine old glass, and a curious semi-castellated building, now the Palais de Justice and prison.

Sées Stat., a poor little city with a population of only 5000, possessing a fine Cathedral of early Pointed Gothic of the 13th cent.; the choir and transepts of the end of the 14th cent. Owing to original mal-construction, its spires are supported by huge buttresses, giving a singular effect to the W. front. It has some good rose-windows. The choir retains the Basilican arrangement; the high altar being at the crossing, and the bishop's throne at the end of the apse.

The country is hilly, but green and pretty with hedges and trees, and there is a heavy ascent and tunnel emerging on a green valley between Argentan and

Alençon Junct. Stat. (Rte. 35), on the line from Paris to Rennes. The rly. now takes the valley of the Sarthe to

Le Mans Junct. Stat. (Rte. 34), on the line from Paris to Rennes; a dreary heathy country succeeds.

Ecommoy Stat.

Aubigné Stat.

Château du Loir Stat. Here the rly. crosses the green valley of the Loir. Soon afterwards numerous quarries of white stone will be seen, many of which are inhabited as houses, and are said to be quite dry and pleasant.

St. Patern Stat. The rly. passes amongst some hills not far from

Mettray Stat., famous for its Reformatory (Rte. 53), and then emerges on the valley of the Loire; the river is crossed some miles below Tours, and the rly. then makes a great sweep to reach TOURS TERMINUS (Rte. 53).

ROUTE 31.

VIRE TO RENNES, BY MORTAIN AND FOUGÈRES.

120 kilom. = 75 Eng. m.

12 Vire (Inns: *H. St. Pierre, clean and moderate, fine view; Cheval Blanc, not good)—this will be a principal station on the projected rly. from Paris to St. Malo—a picturesque antique town (pop. 7000), the capital of the Bocage of Normandy, situated on a lofty eminence bordered by ravines. A Norman Castle occupies the extreme point of the promontory, naturally inaccessible on 3 sides, owing to the precipices which surround it; and on the 4th originally separated from the town by a deep ditch. It is now reduced to the fragment of the tall keep, a construction of the 11th cent., having been dismantled 1630, by order of Richelieu, but its ruins are preserved, and surrounded by a sort of dusty pleasure-ground or plantation belonging to a private individual. It commands a view of the country around, streaked with long lines of "tents" upon which cloth is hung, and especially of the 2 valleys beneath it, called, par excellence, Les Vaux de Vire, whence comes the word Vaudeville, originally applied to the merry and humorous drinking songs composed among these valleys by one Oliver Basselin. He was a native of Vire, and owner of a fulling-mill, which still remains at no great distance from the town. He flourished in the 15th centy., and is reported to have been present at the battle of Formigny. His chansons, chiefly in praise of good wine and his native province, soon became so popular over France, that their name was transferred to those truly national dramas peculiar to the French stage, in which the plot or story is carried through chiefly by songs.

In the narrow and steep streets of Vire may be found many specimens of ancient domestic architecture, well adapted for the artist's sketch-book. The Ch. of Notre Dame is a fine building; but the chief boast of Vire are the walks in and about it. Terraced paths are carried up the hill side amidst thickets and plantations, commanding at intervals very pleasing views.

The valleys in the neighbourhood, generally shut in by craggy heights and copse-covered slopes, abound in mills of paper and cloth, in which the clothing for the French army is made. This gives employment to half the inhabitants of Vire. On the 10th of August the "Fête des Drapiers" is celebrated here, and more than 10,000 persons assemble under the apple-trees, which are illuminated at night for the occasion.

Vire has a gastronomic celebrity for chitterlings (andouilles) and for pastry.

Diligences, several daily, to Avranches (22 m.), through a beautiful country, "rich swelling hills, green meadows, and vast seas of waving wood. The first view of Avranches about 5 m. before you get there, with the rich foreground, the spire of the town crowning the height, and the sea beyond, with Mont St. Michel rising out of it, is truly striking."

[10 m. S. E. of Vire is Tinchebray, where Robert of Normandy succumbed in battle to his younger brother Henry, 1106. This victory secured a throne to the one prince, and a prison for life to the other.]

13 Sourdeval.

10 Mortain. (Inn: H. St. Guillaume, Poste, opposite the Ch.; not clean.) Mortain, a decayed and lifeless town, occupies a position nearly resembling that of Vire, and at least equally romantic. "The valleys are narrower, the steeps more rocky and better wooded; the river at the bottom is more considerable, and a wide extent of distant Campagna is seen through the jaws of the ravine. The whole scene put me in mind of Italy and of Tivoli, and the cascades which we heard from above and visited afterwards helped to keep up the resemblance."—G. Knight.

"You descend to the side of the old Castle, but when you arrive there you find it a most suitable spot for an eagle's nest. A jutting cliff, only connected to the height by a narrow ledge of rock, afforded just space enough for a feudal fortress. The strength of this fortress made it once a place of importance. Here dwelt the brothers and the sons of kings of England." The whole of this venerable structure has been levelled with the dust, and in its place now rises the staring modern Sous-Préfecture.

The Collegiate Ch. has been groundlessly pronounced to be a work of the year 1082, when a church is known to have been founded here. But the only fragment remaining of that epoch is a circular doorway leading into the nave on the S. side, ornamented with zigzags and saw-tooth ornaments; the rest is of the pure and unmixed Early Pointed style of the 13th cent., and the clumsy junction of the new wall around the old circular portal is very apparent. The arches of the nave rest on thick short pillars; those of the choir are narrower. The summit of the hill above the cemetery commands a beautiful view.

About a mile out of the town, seated in a secluded valley, is the Abbaye Blanche, founded 1105. The Church, restored with care 1850, is in the Transition style, round-headed windows alternating with pointed. An Early Pointed cloister also remains tolerably perfect. The abbey is now a Séminaire for the education of priests.

The Cascades of Mortain are the finest, and indeed almost the only ones, in Normandy.

a. About 8 m. from Mortain are the ruins of the Abbey of Savigny, b. 1173, in the Transition style, but partaking more of the round than pointed character.

b. About 20 m. S.W. is Domfront (2840 Inhab.), a picturesque fortified town of the middle ages, perched on a conical height. Its Castle, rising on the very edge of a precipice 200 ft. high, completes the walled circuit, with large flanking towers clad with ivy. Our Henry II. resided in this castle, and here received the Nuncio of the Pope, sent to reconcile him with Becket. In 1574 it was besieged by the armies of the League under Marshal Matignon, and defended by the Hugonot leader Gabriel de Montgomery, but was battered in breach and taken, and the commander carried prisoner to Paris. At the bottom flows the Varennes in a rocky gorge. At the foot of the rock stands the old ch. of N. Dame sur l'Eau, containing the monument of Guill. de Bellesme, who founded both it and the castle.

The Manoir de la Saucerie is a picturesque mansion of stone and timber, a few miles from Domfront.

15 St. Hilaire du Harcouet is the entrepôt for the agricultural and manufacturing produce of a large part of Brittany: its markets are greatly frequented. The frontier of Brittany is crossed about 4 m. to the N. of 11 Louvigné. At the door of the present posthouse M. de Lescure, the Vendéan chief, died of his wounds, and was buried at the road-side—site unknown.

16 Fougères.—Inn: H. St. Jacques. This town (4635 Inhab.), once a frontier fortress, the key of Brittany on the side of Normandy, "is full of picturesque interest. The old town, built on a steep acclivity, shows traces of the middle ages; the ancient arcades still obtrude in places upon the streets. It is still surrounded by antique ramparts. There is a Church of some architectural interest, and a charming promenade on a high eminence commanding romantic prospects."—G.

Attached to the town walls, at the lower end, is the huge and picturesque ruined Castle, of which the Donjon, built by Olivier de Clisson, and la Tour de Melusine, so named by the former owners, the Lusignans, from the Fair M., from whom they claimed descent, are the oldest parts of the castle; the rest of the 14th and 16th cent.; and the outer towers and curtains are still later. Its approaches and defences are very curious. In 1794 Fougères was siezed by the Vendéans.

20 St. Aubin du Cormier. Near this La Trémouille gained a decisive victory, in 1488, over Francis II. Duke of Brittany, the Duke of Orleans, afterwards Louis XII., and others, who had leagued against the Crown.

10 Liffré.

18 RENNES (in Rte. 34).

SECTION II.

BRITTANY.

INTRODUCTORY INFORMATION.

1. Character of the Country. 2. Language. 3. People. 4. Celtic Remains classified. 5. Superstition. 6. Churches, Carvings, Flamboyant Gothic, Bone-houses, Kersanton Stone. 7. Connection with England. 8. Chouannerie. 9. Books to consult. 10. Tour of Brittany. 11. Accommodation for Travellers.

ROUTE	PAGE	ROUTE	PAGE
33 Paris to Versailles . . . .	109	42 Morlaix to Nantes, by Huel- goat, Carhaix, Pontivy, Jos- selin, and Ploermel . . . .	142
34 Paris to Rennes, by Chartres, Le Mans, and Laval (RAIL- WAY) . . . . .	112	44 Brest to Nantes, by Quimper, Auray, Vannes, and La Roche Bernard.—Excursions to Lo- rient, and to Carnac and Loc- mariaquer . . . . .	145
35 Paris to Rennes, by Dreux and Alençon . . . . .	121	46 Le Mans to Nantes, by Angers (RAILWAY) . . . .	154
36 Rennes to Brest (RAILWAY) .	124	47 Nantes to Croisic . . . .	166
38 St. Brieuc to Brest, by Paim- pol, Lannion, Morlaix, St. Pol de Léon, and Folgoat . . . .	133
41 St. Malo to Nantes, by Dinan and Rennes.—Ascent of the Rance . . . . .	137

1. There can scarcely be a more abrupt contrast to the smiling land of Normandy than that presented by the neighbouring province of sombre, poverty-stricken Brittany. Here we find an atmosphere of mist and moisture; and a soil based on hard granite, best fitted for heath, fern, and broom, the very broom (genêt) which supplied our first Plantagenet with his crest and name, and which is so beautiful a feature when in blossom that travellers should choose the early summer to enjoy the sight. In many points the country bears a strong resemblance to Scotland; the same wide, barren moors, the same deep and picturesque wooded dells and storm-beaten coasts. Here, however, are no grand lofty mountain chains like the Grampians: the highest ridges of the Menez-Arrés hills, the back-bone of the peninsula of Brittany, rarely surpass 1200 ft. above the sea-level.

2. In civilization it is behind almost every other part of France: its inhabitants are of Celtic origin, speaking a language of their own, allied to the Welsh and Cornish. It is exclusively spoken to the W. of a line drawn from the point of Finisterre through Châtelaudran and Pontivy; the "Vrai Bretagne Bretonnante," as Froissart calls it, to distinguish it from "La Bretagne Douce," where French is spoken. One of the principal objects of interest and study for the stranger in Brittany is its inhabitants, who have been kept distinct from the rest of France by position as well as difference of language.

3. The peasantry are almost as wild as their country, excessively quaint in their costume, wearing broad-brimmed hats and flowing hair, and in some districts trunk hose (bragous bras = breeks) of the 16th cent.; in others wrapped up in goat-skins, like Robinson Crusoe, a costume which they retain as it was handed down from their ancestors. They are usually mean and small in their persons; coarse-featured in face; squalidly filthy in their habitations; rude and unskilful in their agriculture. They are almost unchanged in their manners, customs, and habits: modern innovation has not entirely rubbed off the rust of long-continued habit; old legends and superstitions still retain their hold on the popular mind. They present a curious picture of a primitive state of society; and if a century behind their neighbours in what is called improvements, they are at least not corrupted by revolutions and commotions. In no part of France are the people, both of upper and lower orders, more observant of their religious duties, of festivals, fasts, &c.; nowhere are the churches so thronged.

"There is much picturesque beauty in Brittany, though of a character not so imposing at first sight as that of countries moulded on a grander scale. Scenery of great and winning loveliness is to be found on the banks of the Trieux, the Lannion, the Châteaulin, and the Rance, and in many other secluded and scarcely accessible valleys, where the 'broomie knowe,' the wooded dell, and the rocky cliff alternately border the brawling mountain torrent, as it flashes along its stony bed, or is pent up in the still pool of an old water-mill, which looks as if it had stood untouched (as it has perhaps) from the time of the 'good Duchess Anne.' The quaint and antique aspect of the buildings adds much to the picturesque character of the country. Some, as in Dinan, Morlaix, Quimper, &c., are framed of timber, with projecting stories resting on grotesquely carved brackets; but generally the houses both in the towns and villages are of grey granite, with massive round or ogee arched imposts to the doors and windows, often enriched with Gothic mouldings; and presenting, from the peculiar colour and grain of the stone, an appearance of antiquity even in buildings recently erected. The churches again are features of great interest and beauty, scattered profusely over the country, and many a ruined castle or tower, or dilapidated 'manoir' with its old avenue, huge granite portals, round turrets, and 'extinguisher' roofs, recalls the days of the Breton chivalry. Add to these characteristic features, that the country is usually very intricate and thickly wooded, the enclosures being small and surrounded by high earthen banks, upon which, from six to ten feet above the level of the road or field, grows a close phalanx of timber-trees, oak, elm, or ash, gnarled and pollarded into grotesque forms, and intercepting all view, so as to give rise to constant excitement, as the scene changes almost at every step that the traveller advances."—G. P. S.

The way of living among the Bretons is homely and frugal to a degree even when in circumstances to afford better fare. Of drink they unquestionably are fond, but it is not a regular habit with them to indulge in strong potations—cider, the produce of the country, is a favourite drink on Sundays and feasts. Wine is hardly ever tasted in the province, but brandy is cheap and good, as in other parts of France. They live much upon buckwheat made into cakes, and mix rye with their wheat into a coarse meal, which forms a dark-coloured bread; these with savoury esculents, and at times salt-fish and meat, constitute the staple of their subsistence. The most perceptible feature of difference, perhaps, between Normandy and Brittany, is that, in the former, large and commodious farm-buildings are observed around the farmer's dwelling, whilst in Brittany it is rare to see a barn, or granary, or any roomy out-house. And till lately the Bretons pursued the wasteful habit of threshing out their corn in August, on an open floor, and housing it in the grain; paying enormously for such labour (to an ambulant class called "les batteurs"), and losing the otherwise valuable season of warmth and daylight for cleaning and working the soil against seed-time. Now, however, steam threshing machines have been introduced, and the agriculture of some districts is more advanced, and near Roskoff and Lannion is really good. Hemp, onions, and oats are the great crops; and many of the wild heaths have been planted or brought under cultivation.

Finisterre, one of the strangest districts of Europe, is to be seen properly only in its villages and its churches and country towns on a Sunday. Then alone are the population abroad in their quaint and showy garbs, crowding the roads, squares, and churchyards; at other times the natives are lost in their fields and workshops.

The indescribable forms of many of the caps worn by the Bretonnes are worth remarking. Both Norman and Breton caps are pleasing auxiliaries to the scenery, which they enliven by their snowy whiteness. Old point lace is not unfrequently discerned on peasant heads, and these curious and costly "coiffures" sometimes adorn the brows of more than one generation in turn.

It is the Bretons who chiefly man the navy of France: their qualities are eminently suited to the seafaring life, and the perseverance and patient courage they display stand out in contrast with the natives of other provinces of France, and denote a totally different origin. It is not a little remarkable that the Bretons in France should be naturally sailors, whilst the native Irish, Welsh, and Scotch of the same race are all averse from the sea.

4. Of Ancient Monuments of different ages there is no lack in Brittany, and, above all, of Celtic Remains; those extraordinary masses of rude unhewn stones whose objects, age, and uses have never been satisfactorily accounted for, but which are supposed to have been in some way connected with the religion of the Druids, and their number would prove this country to have been the chief seat of that mysterious worship. In Great Britain we possess a few, and, above all, we have in Stonehenge a more stupendous monument than any elsewhere; but in Brittany the number is enormous; almost every wild heath possesses one or more. They are most numerous, however, on the storm-beaten promontories and islands of the W. coast; especially in the Morbihan, which includes the wondrous stony array of Carnac and the monstrous granitic obelisks of Lokmariaker, larger than any single blocks at Stonehenge, but now fractured.

These rude Remains are of several different kinds, distinguished by the following names:—

a. Menhir (literally long stone: Ir-min-Sul; long stone of the sun) is a monolith in the form of a rude obelisk set upright on one end, whose height much exceeds its breadth. There is a menhir near Dol which rises 30 ft. above the ground, but the largest specimen of this class known is at Plouarzel, near Brest; it exceeds 42 ft. in height. Those at Lokmariaker, now laid prostrate and broken by violence, were more than 60 ft. high, and were thick in proportion.

b. Peulven (pillar of stone), an upright stone of inferior height to the menhir; the single stones at Carnac are generally of this class.

c. Dolmen (from "taal," table, and "maen," or men, stone), in England commonly called Cromlech, is an arrangement of rude blocks, by which one or more upright stones are made to support a horizontal block or slab. Sometimes they nearly resemble a table, the upright stones serving merely as props or legs, and are called in French "pierres levées," or "pierres couvertes;" at others the supporting stones are wide slabs, so arranged as to fit close to one another, and so lofty as to allow a man to walk upright beneath the horizontal roof-stone which they support. Kits Coty House in Kent is an instance of this kind, and there are others in Cornwall, but they are far inferior in size to those of Brittany, which are often 60 or 80 ft. long. The French sometimes call them "allées couvertes."

d. Kistvaen is similar to the Dolmen, inasmuch as it consists of two rows of upright stones supporting flat blocks; but the stones are smaller, and the whole structure lower and longer; it appears to correspond with the "Hunnengräber" of North Germany. The most remarkable example is on the island Gavre Innis near Lokmariaker.

e. Galgol is a tumulus, barrow, or cairn: the largest known is the Butte de Tumiac on the shore of the Sea of Morbihan.

The Celtic remains, are not confined to Brittany, though most numerous there; they occur almost invariably on some flat open plain at a distance from the hills, in situations corresponding with Salisbury Plain and Dartmoor in England. Brittany appears, like our Mona, to have been the sacred land of the Gauls, the centre of their worship, to which probably the various nations and tribes repaired on pilgrimage at stated times to pay their devotions.

Of the particular destination or object of these rude elevations in general, or of the individual uses of the different classes enumerated above, no satisfactory explanation has been offered. The accumulated ranges, the long avenues of stones of Carnac and Erdevan, amounting to thousands in number, may have stood in the place of temples where rites of initiation and purification similar to the Grecian mysteries may have been performed. The upright solitary menhir may have been a symbol of some individual deity, as the sun; the dolmen may have served as an altar or shrine; and the galgal and kistvaen were probably monumental. Equally unexplained are the mechanical means by which a rude people contrived to transport, and to elevate one above another, such huge masses.

5. Their mysterious influence is not yet, by any means, effaced from the mind of the lower orders in Brittany. The first teachers of Christianity in this region found this attachment to superstition so strong, that, after in vain attempting to eradicate it by overthrowing and destroying these rude stones, they altered their plan to that of engrafting, to a certain extent, their own faith upon the old idolatrous worship of stones and fountains, converting the dolmen into a chapel, and making the menhir serve as a pedestal to a crucifix, which it commonly does even to the present day.

The influence of paganism lingered long in these remote wilds, attached as it was to visible objects; indeed, the inhabitants of Ouessant are said to have been idolaters until within 150 years.

Hence has arisen a strange jumble of Paganism and Romanism; thus pilgrimages are made to fountains by those who desire to be relieved from some malady, by pouring its holy water over the affected part: and visits are paid in the depth of night to some solitary menhir by the barren woman, who hopes to become fruitful by rubbing her bosom against the hard stone. Some of these inanimate objects also are supposed to possess virtue to cure the diseases of cattle. Heathen divinities were replaced by saints, of which the number in Brittany exceeds that of any other part of Romanist Europe; most of them are peculiar to the country, their names being unknown elsewhere, and their canonization conferred rather by the popular voice than with the authority of the Pope. Elmost every church has its own strange legend, and on its saint's day a pilgrimage or Pardon is celebrated, when indulgence for past sins is obtained, and the penitent pilgrims are no sooner shrived than they begin to run up a fresh score at the riotous festivities which follow these assemblies. These pardons, or village festivals, which are nearly equivalent to the German kirchweih, the Flemish kermes, and the English wake, deserve the attention of strangers, from the illustrations they afford of Breton life, manners, and costume.

6. In Ecclesiastical Monuments Brittany is not so well furnished as Normandy, but the architecture is of a different style, chiefly the florid or Flamboyant Gothic, and of a much later period: indeed, even in architecture, Brittany seems to have been behind the rest of the world, and the fashions of building only reached it when superseded in other parts. The following excellent remarks apply generally to all parts of France, yet will not be out of place here. "The most obvious characteristics of the Flamboyant style are the flat 3-centred arches of doorways, the entire independence of different pilasters upon the same pier as regards the vertical height of their base mouldings, the scrupulous interpenetration of different mouldings, and the absence of capitals if the arch mouldings are continued on the pier, or their dying gradually into the pier by penetration if they are not continued on it."—G. B. A. There are some peculiarities in "the Breton style" which render it well worthy the attention of architects. In elaborateness and profuseness of ornament, in the minuteness and delicacy of carving, especially of the foliage (for the figures are inferior), there are some churches in Brittany which yield to few in any part of Europe. As instances may be mentioned those of Folgoat near Brest, St. Pol de Léon, which is remarkable for its exquisite spire, Théogonec near Morlaix, St. Herbot near Poulahouan, and the cathedral of Nantes.

The Department of Finistère is the quarter in which churches more especially abound, and it is quite as profusely supplied as Lincolnshire, and many of the village churches are of unusual size and richness. "In the churches near Brest, instead of building a tower with 4 walls, containing windows or panel-work, the practice seems to have been to raise stages or floors, one upon another on open arches, so as to make a kind of square pagoda, not contracting in dimensions, through which in certain directions the light is seen and the arch piers look comparatively small. This peculiarity deserves attention from architects."—G. B. A.

Several of the churches, even in remote situations, as at St. Herbot, are decorated internally with carvings in wood and stone; roodlofts still exist at Folgoat, St. Fiacre le Faouet (of oak painted and sculptured), Lambader, &c., though scarcely found elsewhere on the Continent: painted glass is also by no means uncommon. These very gorgeous churches of Brittany were erected principally from the end of the 14th to the beginning of the 16th cent.

Formerly the churchyards and even roadsides were adorned with Crucifixes of most elaborate execution, and comprising a multitude of figures; "most of them suffered by the Revolution, but many exquisite examples remain almost as perfect as those of Plougastel near Brest, St. Théogonec, &c., and hardly a single point of intersection of two roads can be passed which is not marked by a more or less mutilated cross, oftentimes restored by the piety of the present generation."—G. P. S.

The Bone-house or Reliquaire will be constantly found in the Breton churchyards, and illustrates a curious custom. To allow "the rude forefathers of the hamlet" to repose quietly in the grave is opposed to the ideas of piety and affection in these rude people: after a certain number of years the survivors are required to show their remembrance and respect for their parents and relations by removing the skulls and bones from the coffin and placing them in the Ossuary,—where the former are arranged on shelves, open to the view of all, each with the name or initials in black paint written across the fleshless brow. There is a curious Reliquaire in St. Herbot.

One cause of the profuse decoration of these churches, and of their excellent preservation, may be referred to the materials employed—a greenstone, peculiar to Brittany, called Kersanton (St. Anthony's house), remarkable for the facility with which it is worked, and its tenacity in withstanding the weather. It is believed to be a hornblende rock, with a mixture of oxide of iron, in particles minutely disseminated. It is found only in two localities, on the W. of the harbour of Brest, near the escarped rocks of Quelern, between the river of Faou and that of Landernean. It is regarded as volcanic, both from its composition and because the rocks adjacent to it show marks of dislocation, caused apparently by its intrusion. The weather has scarce any destructive effect on it, even after the lapse of ages; and its peculiarly bright green colour gives to a portal carved out of it the appearance of being cast in bronze.

Of churches in the Romanesque or Norman style the examples are few: among them are the church of Dinan and the chapel of Lanteff, which, after all the disputes of learned antiquaries respecting its origin and great age, is probably merely an equivalent to the round churches of England.

The cathedral of Dol nearly corresponds in style to the Early English; and the tradition of the country attributes it and some of the later churches to English architects. This is not surprising, considering the long and early connection between Great Britain and Little Britain to the S. of the Channel—Armorica, as it was styled, which the careful researches of historians and philologists have proved to have been colonised by natives of Britain after the 6th century, partly during the Roman dominion, partly after the invasion of the Saxons. From Brittany, if we believe the native traditions, we derive our most popular romances, our nursery and fairy tales. Arthur here held his court with the Knights of the Round Table; and the cradle of Merlin was on the Ile de Sein, a low sand-bank in that stormy sea La Baie de Trépassés.

7. Many of the names of places closely resemble those of Wales and Cornwall. Brittany also has its Cournouaille, equally celebrated with our own for wrestling matches, still held annually, at which the true Cornish hug is said to be given; and for wreckers, whose infamous trade is promoted by the ever-raging sea and iron-bound coast. The Droit de Bris, right of “jetsam and flotsam,” is, however, nearly abolished in France as in England: and the time is past when a race or whirlpool was as productive to a landlord as a mine or fishery.

English armies have fought and bled on this soil of Brittany; and the chivalric heroes of our history, Edward III., Chandos, Sir Walter Manny, were opposed to no unworthy antagonists in the Du Guesclins and Clissons. In the castle of Elven, Henry of Richmond passed 15 years of his youth, though a prisoner, yet protected from the vengeance of the Yorkists.

A perusal of Froissart will be a good preparation for a visit to Brittany.

8. Brittany, old-fashioned in all things, is still the stronghold of that old-fashioned virtue, loyalty to its sovereign; and, besides sharing in the horrors and glory of the war in support of the legitimate monarch, which had its rise in La Vendée, was the seat of a hard-fought contest of its own, called La Chouannerie, from the cry, “chou, chou,” in imitation of the night-owl, the signal for onset among the Breton peasantry, originally employed as a sign by smugglers in their nocturnal expeditions. Memorials or recollections of these struggles will be encountered by the traveller at every step.

9. Those who desire full information respecting the antiquities, customs, legends, and poetry of the Bretons should read Souvestre's excellent work, ‘Les Derniers Bretons,’ and Fremerville's ‘Finisterre and Morbihan.’ For its churches and Druidic remains consult Merimee, ‘Sur les Monuments de l'Ouest de la France,’ for its history, Daru:—and Mrs. Stothard's ‘Tour in Brittany,’ and Villemarqué's ‘Chansons Populaires de la Bretagne,’ will repay the perusal.

10. Skeleton Tour of Brittany.

Brittany is accessible to travellers from England, by steamers either direct from Southampton to St. Malo, a very good starting-point, or from Southampton to Havre, and thence by land through Normandy, or by steamer to Morlaix.

The traveller coming from Paris may commence his tour at Rennes, but the capital of la Bretagne does not possess any of the characteristic features of the province.

Dol.
St. Malo.
Dinan.
St. Briec.
{ Lanleff.
{ Paimpol.
{ Treguier.
Morlaix.
St. Pol de Léon.
Folgoat.
St. Théogonec.
Landivisiau.
La Roche Maurice.
Landerneau.
Steam down the Elorn.
Brest—dockyard.

Pointe St. Matthieu.
Châteaulin (by water).
{ Carhaix.
{ Huelgoat.
{ St. Herbot.
{ Châteaulin.
Pleyben.
Quimper.
Quimperlé.
Auray.
Carnac and Lokmariaker.
[Peninsula of Rhuys.]
Vannes.
Roche Bernard.
Nantes.

11. Accommodation for travellers. Brittany is accessible from England at little expense, and travelling in it, including Inns, is moderate. In the large towns, they are very good; while even in spots remote from the high road the fare and the accommodation have improved of late years. The people are civil, and seem to be less dirty than formerly; still much is wanting in most of the inns to render them even tolerable for English ladies. The means of locomotion are also improving and increasing.

Travelling Map. That published by Auguste Logerot, Quai des Augustins, 3 frs. in case, may be had at Nantes or Rennes.

ROUTE 33.

PARIS TO VERSAILLES.

From Paris to Versailles there are 2 railroads, one on the l., the other on the rt. bank of the Seine. The l. bank railway is continued from Versailles to Chartres and Le Mans. (Rte. 34.)

a. Chemin de fer, Rive Gauche, 16½ kilom. = 11½ Eng. m. Terminus, Boulevard Mont Parnasse, 44. Time employed 20 to 25 minutes, with stopping train 35 minutes.

Before issuing beyond the line of the new fortifications you see on the rt. Grenelle and Vaugirard, now forming a town of about 6000 Inhab., most of the houses being cabarets, the resort of the working classes on Sundays and fête-days; and on the l. Montrouge, where are numerous quarries of building stone.

Beyond the Lines the railway passes between the detached forts of Vanvres and Issy, a village whose name is fancifully derived from a temple of Isis! In the Séminaire, which still exists as a sort of country-seat dependent on that of St. Sulpice, Fénelon was interrogated by a conclave of bishops, styled the Conference of Issy, on certain points of doctrine; and here the Cardinal Fleury died, 1745.

rt. Vanvres. The Château, formerly the property of the Condés, built here by Mansard for the Duc de Bourbon, now belongs to the Collège Louis le Grand.

Clamart Stat. The village, half hid among the trees, on the l., was the retreat of La Fontaine, of the Abbé Delille, who wrote here his poem 'L'Imagination,' and of Condorcet.

Emerging from a deep cutting we traverse on a lofty viaduct (Pont du Val) of 2 rows of arches, one above the other, 108 ft. high and 145 ft. long, the bosky dell of Val Fleury, commanding a pretty view of the château of Meudon on the l., while the Seine is perceived on the rt.

Meudon Stat. A little on the l. lies the bourg of 3000 Inhab. Rabelais was curé of Meudon, 1550.

The Château, belonging to the crown, approached by a fine avenue of 4 rows of lime-trees, was built by the Grand Dauphin, son of Louis XIV., who died in it, from designs of Mansard, 1699, by the side of an older château now destroyed, the work of Philibert Delorme, which the widow of the minister Louvois sold to Louis XIV. During the Revolution the Comité du Salut Public converted it into a factory for inventing and perfecting warlike engines, and surrounded it with a permanent camp to keep out spies. The existing château was fitted up for Marie Louise by Napoleon, 1812. The best things about it are its situation, its gardens laid out by Le Nôtre, but lately rearranged on a more modern plan, and its terrace. The view from the terrace is very fine.

The Forêt de Meudon is a favourite holiday resort of the Parisians. Near this the fatal accident occurred on this railway, May 1842, when, by the fracture of the axle of a locomotive, several of the foremost carriages of a long train were crushed, throw upon the engine-furnace, and set on fire, and more than 100 persons were burnt alive, together with the railway-carriages in which they were locked up, in the space of about  $\frac{1}{4}$  hour. An expiatory chapel, dedicated to Notre Dame des Flammes, has been erected on the spot where this catastrophe occurred. Another cutting succeeds, and the railway passes under the Meudon avenue.

Bellvue Stat. was named from a villa built in a few months to please Madame de Pompadour, but pulled to pieces during the Revolution.

rt. Sèvres Stat., contiguous to Bellevue.

12 Sèvres (Pop. 4000), situated on the l. bank of the river, 6 m. distant from Paris, between 2 hills, the hill of Meudon on the l. and that of St. Cloud on the rt., along whose slopes the 2 railways to Versailles are carried. Sèvres, like Faenza and Delft, gives its name to the china made in it, and for which it is principally known. The manufactory is in the large building on the l. of the road, erected 1755, when the works were transferred from Vincennes, and purchased by Louis XV. It is now the property of the nation, and employs 150 persons. Admission to see it is given by the directeur, M. Brongniart, a distinguished mineralogist and geologist, to whose scientific researches the manufacture owes much of its present perfection. Besides the show-rooms filled with objects for sale, there is a very complete and curious Porcelain Museum here, consisting of clay, earthenware, and china of all countries and periods, from the oldest Greek and Etruscan vases down to the most recent productions of the nations of Europe and Asia, China, Japan, and the East Indies, and of many of the rude tribes of America. Here is a series of all the objects made in the establishment since its commencement, marking the change of fashion and forms: also the various materials, earths, calces, colouring matters used in the manufacture. The Kaolin, or white clay, comes from St. Yreix near Limoges. The paintings are very remarkable from the talents of the artists employed (among whom Madame Jacotot and M. Constantin rank highest), and the skill displayed in the burning or the colours gives an equal pre-eminence to Sèvres ware. Several pictures by ancient and modern masters have been copied in the size of the originals; some were painted on the china tablet in Italy and sent over to Sèvres to be burnt, and again sent abroad to be retouched. The Sèvres manufacture is celebrated for its white unglazed ware, biscuit de Sèvres, the white glazed ware, the elegance of the shape, and the beauty of the painting.

The manufacture of painted glass has been revived and brought to considerable perfection within a few years; also the imitation of precious stones.

The park of St. Cloud reaches as far as Sèvres; there are 2 entrances to it from the town.

The high road, and the chemin de fer, rive droite, now run parallel and within a musket-shot of our line.

A deep cutting through part of the crown forests leads to Chaville Stat., so called from a village on the l.

Viroflay Stat. l. Railway to Chartres diverges.

Versailles Station (in the Avenue de la Mairie).—See Handbook of Paris.

b. Chemin de Fer, Rive Droite. Terminus in Paris, Rue St. Lazare, 120, the same as the St. Germain and Rouen railways, and the 3 railways use the same line of rails as far as Clichy. Time in going 30 to 35 minutes.

After crossing the Seine by the Pont d'Asnières at the Stat. beyond Clichy, this railway turns to the l. out of the St. Germain line (See Rte. 9) to Courbevoie Stat., whose large barrack, built by Louis XV., is seen on the l., and beyond it the Arc de l'Etoile. The avenue leading from it, after passing the Seine by the Pont de Neuilly, branches out into two roads leading to Rouen, the upper and the lower, both of which are crossed by the railway before reaching.

Puteaux Stat. A fine view is obtained of Paris and the Seine from this part of the line, while skirting on the rt. the flanks of Mont Valérien, now converted into one of the citadels of Paris.

Suresnes Stat.

St. Cloud Stat.

The Imperial Château, built or altered by Mansard for the Duc d'Orléans, brother of Louis XIV., has been the scene of great events. Here the fatal Ordonnances of July 1830 were signed, which lost Charles X. the throne; here Napoleon, like Cromwell before him, laid the foundation of his power on the memorable 19 Brumaire (Nov. 11, 1799), by expelling with his armed grenadiers the Council of Five Hundred from the Orangerie, in which they held their sittings;—two of the most momentous of the Revolutions of France. It was a favourite residence of Marie Antoinette and of Bonaparte, and is now occupied by the Emperor.

The interior is handsomely furnished, and contains some paintings chiefly of the modern French school, Gobelins tapestry, Sèvres vases, &c. The finest apartment is the Salon de Mars; the most interesting for its associations, the Orangerie already mentioned. Even more remarkable than the Château is the Parc de St. Cloud, laid out by Le Nôtre, always open to the public, and well worthy of a visit on account of the beautiful view which it commands over the winding Seine and the country around Paris, for its artificial cascades, and its waterworks, which play the 1st and 3rd Sunday of every month. The Grand Jet d'Eau rises from the centre of a circular basin, at the extremity of a long avenue, to a height of 137 feet, and discharges 5000 gallons per minute. The copy of the beautiful circular temple at Athens, called the Lanterne de Démosthène, will not be passed unobserved, being made conspicuous by a very incongruous basement. In this park a fair is held on the 7th September, and lasts 3 weeks, one of the most celebrated and frequented of all the fêtes near Paris.

The name of St. Cloud is a contraction of St. Clodoald, grandson of Clovis, who escaped alive when his brothers were murdered by their uncle Clothaire, by hiding himself in a wood here, and living as a hermit. Here, in the Maison de Gondi, Henri III. was assassinated by Jacques Clement, 1589, while his army, united with that of Henri of Navarre, was encamped on these heights preparing to attack Paris. The father of King Louis Philippe was born here.

The railway is carried under a part of the park of St. Cloud in a Tunnel more than 1650 ft. long.

Sèvres Stat. Both railways have stations here, but at some distance from the village, as well as at Viroflay Stat. l. The railway to Chartres diverges about 1 m. beyond Viroflay.

rt. The small village of Montreuil is the birthplace of General Hoche, who commenced life as an under groom in the royal stables, and rose to be commander of the army of the Moselle.

Versailles Station, Rue Duplessis, Boulevard de la Reine. Inn: H. du Reservoir.—See Handbook of Paris.

ROUTE 34.

PARIS TO CHARTRES AND RENNES
(RAILWAY).

Paris.	Miles.
Versailles . . . . .	10
Rambouillet . . . . .	30
Chartres . . . . .	55
Le Mans . . . . .	130
Laval . . . . .	186
Rennes . . . . .	232

Chemin de Fer de l'Ouest. Terminus in Paris, Boulevard Mont Parnasse. 2 trains daily to Rennes in 9 hours. 6 trains daily to Le Mans.

Paris to Versailles (Rte. 33).

A little way on the rt. lies St. Cyr (Stat.), converted by Napoleon into an Ecole Militaire, 1806, for 300 pupils—a destination which it still preserves; but it was originally founded by Louis XIV., at the suggestion of Madame de Maintenon, as a school for 250 young ladies of noble birth, and Mansard furnished the designs for it, 1686. Racine's tragedies of Esther and Athalie, written for the pupils of the establishment, were here first brought out, in the presence of the King and Madame de Maintenon. She retired hither after Louis's death, and dying here, 1719, was buried in the church.

[Near Magny—Les Hameux are the scanty remains of the once celebrated abbey of Port Royal des Champs, destroyed by royal decree 1709, at the instigation of the Jesuits, as the headquarters of Jansenism, after the nuns, its tenants, had been subjected to the most cruel persecutions in order to compel them to subscribe to the bull of Alexander VII. against the doctrines of Jansen. In 1644 a number of learned men and profound divines, professing the same doctrines, settled in a farmhouse near the convent, called Les Granges, repairing hither for study; and here composed those works which, as "they were published anonymously, are known by the name of their place of residence. Arnauld, Nicole, are among the Messieurs de Port-Royal,—an appellation so glorious in the 17th cent."—Hallam. Boileau and Pascal were their friends, and Racine, who wrote their history, their pupil.

"He whose journey lies from Versailles to Chevreuse will soon find himself at the brow of a steep cleft or hollow, intersecting the monotonous plain across which he has been passing. The brook which winds through the verdant meadows beneath him stagnates into a large pool, reflecting the solitary Gothic arch, the water-mill, and the dovecot (Columbier), which rise from its banks, with the farmhouse, the decayed towers, the forest-trees, and innumerable shrubs and creepers which clothe the slopes of the valley. France has many a lovelier prospect, though this is not without its beauty, and many a field of more heart-stirring interest, though this, too, has been ennobled by heroic daring; but through the length and breadth of that land of chivalry and of song, the traveller will in vain seek a spot so sacred to genius, to piety, and to virtue. That arch is all which remains of the once crowded monastery of Port-Royal. In those woods Racine first learned the language—the universal language—of poetry. Under the roof of that humble farmhouse, Pascal, Arnauld, Nicole, De Sace, and Tillemont meditated those works which, as long as civilization and Christianity survive, will retain their hold on the gratitude and reverence of mankind. There were given innumerable proofs of the graceful good-humour of Henri IV. To this seclusion retired the heroine of the Fronde, Ann Geneviève, Duchess of Longueville, to seek the peace the world could not give. Madame de Sévigné discovered here a place 'tout propre à inspirer le désir de faire son salut.' From Versailles there came hither to worship God many a courtier and many a beauty, heartbroken or jaded with the very vanity of vanities—the idolatry of their fellow-mortals. Survey French society in the 17th cent. from what aspect you will, it matters not, at Port-Royal will be found the most illustrious examples of whatever imparted to that moiey assemblage any real dignity or permanent regard. Even to the mere antiquarian it was not without a lively interest."—Stephen. The ruins of the Ch. have been cleared out by the Duc de Luynes.]

The magnificent Château de Dampierre, in the lovely vale of Chevreuse, built from Mansard's design, was partly destroyed at the Revolution, but has been restored by its owner, the Duc de Luynes, one of the most respectable and richest nobles in France. It has been adorned with paintings by Ingres, and with sculptures by Simart. It contains a silver statue, life size, of Louis XIII., and is surrounded by well-kept gardens and dressed grounds. The well-timbered park has an area of 2000 acres. The valley is one of the prettiest and least visited spots in the vicinity of Paris.

Rambouillet Stat., a dull town of 3000 Inhab., remarkable only for its Château, long the residence of the kings of France, down to the time of Charles X., who, after the July revolution, here signed, in conjunction with the Duc d'Angoulême, his abdication of the French throne, Aug. 2, 1830, under pressure of the news that the mob of Paris, armed, was on its march hither, seeming to threaten results not unlike those which befel Louis XVI. at Versailles, Oct. 1789. It is a gloomy and ugly pile of red brick, with 5 flanking towers of stone, destitute of interest beyond what it may derive from its history. A chamber is shown in the great round tower where Francis I. died, 1547, aged 52. The dreary park and extensive forest adjoining were the favourite sporting-ground of Charles X. The château was converted by Louis Napoleon into a Seminary for officers' daughters, 1852.

The rly. continues along a dull but fertile plain, and then descends the valley of the Guesle, following its sinuosities, as far as

Epéron Stat.: no tolerable Inn.

The name of this town of 1600 Inhab. was changed from Autrist to Epéron by Henry III., who created it and the district around a duchy for his favourite Nogaret. It retains portions of its old walls and towers, and is prettily situated on the banks of the Guesle, under a commanding rock of limestone.

Maintenon Stat. is situated between the ruined aqueduct of Louis XIV. (see below) and the imposing modern rly. viaduct of 32 arches, 65 ft. high, raised on light piers. The Château attached to this little town was given by Louis XIV., with the estate and title of Marquise de Maintenon, to Françoise d'Aubigné, widow of Scarron, at the time when the king made her his wife. Their marriage is said to have been celebrated in the chapel of the castle by the Père la Chaise in the presence of Harlay and Louvois, 1685, she being 50 years old and Louis 47. The Castle stands on the margin of the Eure, and now belongs to the Duc de Noailles, by whom it has been well restored. The round towers and chapel are parts of the original structure raised by Cocquereau, treasurer of finance to Louis XI. and Charles VIII. The bedroom of Mad. de Maintenon, and her portrait in robes trimmed with ermine and fleurs-de-lis, are shown.

From the rly. there is an excellent view of the imposing ruins of the Aqueduct, constructed 1684-88, at the mandate of Louis XIV., to convey the waters of the Eure from Pont Gouin to Versailles, but afterwards abandoned for the machine at Marly.

"As Louis had committed the blunder of building in a place without water, he proposed to remedy his mistake by conveying the river eight leagues, by a new channel, to adorn his park. To accomplish this it was necessary to join two mountains at Maintenon, and form an aqueduct: 40,000 troops were employed in this great work, and a camp formed expressly for the purpose. From the unhealthiness of the work or of the air, a great mortality ensued; the dead were carried away in the night-time, that their companions might not be discouraged: but the loss of many thousand lives to please the wanton caprice of a despot excited no sympathy and created no surprise. The war of 1688, however, interrupted the labour, and it was never afterwards resumed."—Lord J. Russell. The aqueduct was partly pulled down, after a lapse of 65 years, to build the villa of Crécy for Mad. de Pompadour. The remains consist of 47 arches, 42 ft. span and 83 high. The total length of the canal, of which this was to form a part, would have exceeded 33 m. if completed.

Diligence to Dreux. (Rte. 35.)

After leaving Maintenon across the viaduct of 32 arches we enter the fertile plain called La Beauce, comprising some of the finest corn-land in France. In the early summer it is an uninterrupted ocean of waving corn as far as the eye can reach—without hedges, little varied by trees or houses. "In crossing this monotonous plain I was much struck with the number of churches. I counted at one time about 13, yet the villages are neither numerous nor large."—P. H.

Rather more than 1 m. from Chartres the river Eure is crossed on a viaduct of 11 arches. The twin steeples of Chartres are conspicuous a long way off.

CHARTRES Station. — Inns (none good): Post, or Grand Monarque; Hôtel Duc de Chartres; H. de France, indifferent.

Chartres, a city of 18,234 Inhab., once capital of the fertile Beauce, and now of the Dépt. d'Eure et Loire, is situated on a slope, at the bottom of which runs the Eure, washing the only remaining portion of the old fortifications and one of the city gates, the picturesque Porte Guillaume; the other gates have been pulled down, the ramparts levelled into walks, and the town thrown open. Chartres is remarkable in a commercial point of view for one of the largest corn-markets in France, held every Saturday, where the produce of the Beauce is disposed of; and in point of architecture, for its \* Cathedral*, one of the most magnificent in Europe, conspicuous far and near, with its two tall but unequal spires surmounting the hill on which the city stands. Its most striking and interesting features, after its vast dimensions and elegant proportions, are its 2 rich and singular lateral portals, its painted glass, scarcely equalled in France, and its 3 rose windows.

There is much perplexity in the dates assigned to different parts of the building, but, with the evidence of style, we may pronounce the Crypt, running under the whole extent of the choir aisles, to be the only part remaining which was built by Bishop Fulbert, 1029. He was aided in his pious foundation by gifts from the kings of England, France, and Denmark, and a great body of people came over from Rouen to work at it, encamping in tents around while it was in progress. The ch., as it exists, was not dedicated until 1260, and the greater portion of it may safely be referred to the 13th centy.; but the W. front was completed in 1145, except the elegant crocketed N. spire raised in 1514, partly at the charge of Louis XII., by Jean Texier, an architect of the Beauce: it is 304 ft. high, and the upper part of beautifully light and delicately executed work. It is well worth ascending for the view, not only of the surrounding country, but of the Cathedral itself. In the W. front, which is simple in its style, we have to remark the triple portal of pointed arches; that in the centre, called Porte Royale, supported and flanked by statues of royal saints. These are attenuated figures with formal plaited drapery, characteristic of the Byzantine sculpture of the 12th centy. Above the door is the image of Christ in an oval, with the symbols of the 4 Evangelists, as designated in the vision of Ezekiel; around him. Below these are the 14 Prophets in a row, and in the arches above the 24 Elders of the Apocalypse, playing on musical instruments of the middle ages. The sculpture of the right-hand portal relates to the life of the Virgin, and in that of the l. is seen Christ, again surrounded by angels, with the signs of the zodiac, and the agricultural labours of the twelve months.

Far finer are the two entrances on the N. and S. sides, consisting of triple projecting Gothic porticoes (something like the W. end of Peterborough), resting on piers, or bundles of pillars, with side openings between them. The stately statues which line the sides and vaults are of a superior style of art, and of a later date (14th cent.) than those of the W. front.

The interior is of such consistent vastness in all its parts, that its dimensions do not perhaps strike the spectator, at first sight, to their fullest extent, but its length is 422 ft., and the height to the apex of its roof 112 feet. The style throughout nave and choir is the vigorous early Gothic. In the centre of the nave a maze or labyrinth, of intricate circles, called La Lieue, from its supposed length, is marked out on the pavement in coloured stone: to follow it through its windings (967 ft. long), saying prayers at certain stations, was probably at one time a penitential exercise. The ch. possesses a perfect treasure of Painted Glass, more than 130 windows being completely filled, and few being quite destitute of this splendid ornament. They date, for the most part, from the 13th centy. Some of the glass is  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch thick. The 3 rose windows at the end of the nave and transepts are remarkable for their size, 30 or 40 ft. diameter, and their complicated tracery, but it is somewhat clumsy. The windows, both in nave and choir, illustrate subjects from the Bible, or legends of saints; in the lower compartments are frequently seen representations of various trades—shoemakers, basket-makers, &c.—showing that their guilds or corporations were the donors.

Attached to the E. end is a chapel dedicated to St. Piat, in the form of an oblong; it was founded in 1349, and is flanked by 2 round towers externally.

The choir has double aisles and a semicircular E. end; in the inside 8 marble bas-reliefs, of Scriptural subjects, mediocre in design and execution, are inserted, and behind the high altar is a huge marble piece of sculpture, in the taste of the time of Louis XIII., not consistent with the character of the building. The outside of the screen, which separates the choir from its aisles, is ornamented with a series of very remarkable Gothic sculptures, each representing an event in the life of Christ or the Virgin Mary, in 45 compartments surrounded with the most elaborate tracery and tabernacle work; they were begun 1514, and continued down to the middle of the 17th century, and are interesting as some of the final efforts of Gothic art. The execution has been compared to "point lace in stone, and some of the sculptured threads are not thicker than the blade of a penknife."

In the choir of Chartres cathedral Henri IV. was crowned, 1594; Reims, the ancient scene of the royal coronation, being at the time in the hands of the Leaguers. The ceremony was performed by the bishop of the diocese, and, as the "Sainte Ampoule" was not to be got at, a vial of holy oil, said to have been given by an angel to St. Martin of Tours, to cure a bruise, was brought in procession from the Abbey of Marmoutiers, and with this the king was anointed. This cathedral narrowly escaped destruction by fire in 1836: fortunately the roof and interior of the towers were alone consumed.

"The origin and splendour of this cathedral are owing to the circumstance that it was the earliest and chief church in France dedicated to the Virgin, and thus the object of vast pilgrimages. The sacred image, supposed to date from the time when this place was the centre of the Druidic worship, as described by Cæsar, stood in the crypt. It was burned and the crypt sacked in 1793. The church still contains the relic of the Sacra Camisia, given by Charles le Chauve; and there is a black image of the 12th century in the N. aisle, which attracts much devotion. It is worth while to ascend the tower—not for the panorama, which is only over a vast plain, but in order to have a near view of the painted glass inside the cathedral. A full account of every window will be found in the elaborate History of the Cathedral by the Abbé Bulteau, price 4½ francs." —A. P. S.

The roof of iron and copper, built after the fire of 1836, is skilfully constructed and light.

The celebrated black image, after having been crowned with a bonnet rouge during the revolution, is now as much an object of adoration as ever.

and has been replaced in the crypt, which is on the N. side of the church, lately converted into a chapel, and so completely "restored" as not to show a vestige of antiquity. The sacristan lives opposite the N. portal, and will show the crypt roof and tower (fee 1 fr.). There are many other vaults under the church.

After exploring this noble and surpassing edifice, the traveller will probably have little desire to look at inferior churches, yet the only other curiosities here are

The Ch. of St. Pierre (St. Père), in the lower town, contiguous to a huge caserne, once a convent, and not far from the river. Although very inferior to the cathedral, it presents a remarkable lantern-like E. end, filled with rich painted glass. The lantern character is increased by the triforium, running all round the choir, being opened and glazed. The choir, though pointed, must be very early in the style, the piers having a Romanesque character; the nave slightly different, and apparently later, yet retains the transition appearance in its columns. Its triforium is a row of trefoil-headed arches, supported on pilasters. In the chapel of the apse are 12 panels of the finest Limoges enamel, brought from Châteauneuf d'Anet. Undoubted remains of polychromatic decoration can be seen on the walls and pillars.

St. André, also near the river, and now a magasin de fourrage, filled with straw and hay, is yet interesting to the student of architecture as an early, plain, and severe example of the Pointed style. In the W. façade a circular-headed doorway is surmounted by a triplet of lancet windows, and these by a bold rose window. The piers supporting the nave arches are cylindrical, marking the transition from Romanesque to Gothic. The choir, which was carried across the Eure, is destroyed. A curious crypt extends from the S. aisle down to the river, and below its level. St. André is supposed to have been founded 1108.

An Obelisk has been set up in the Marché aux Herbes, now called Place Marceau to record the fact that Marceau was a native of Chartres,—"Soldat à 16 ans, Général à 23; il mourut à 27." The original inscription mentioned his exploits in destroying the rebel Vendéans at Le Mans and Laval. A statue has been erected to him near the Porte d'Épais. The revolutionary hero Pétion was born here.

The Corn Market is exceedingly well regulated; business is transacted for ready money, and is usually over in ½ hour. The measuring and selling of the grain, and receiving payment for it, are managed by a corporation of women, of long standing, remarkable for their integrity, and implicitly trusted by the owners. The town seems thriving, and the shops unusually good.

There are a public Library of 30,000 volumes and a Museum in the town.

Railway to Paris by Versailles:—to Le Mans, Alençon, and Laval:—in progress to Rennes and Brest.

The little village Bretigny, 6 m. from Chartres, gives its name to the treaty of peace, signed 1360, between France and England, by which Edward III. renounced his claim to the throne of France, and released the French king, John, taken prisoner at Poitiers, upon payment of a vast ransom, and delivery of numerous hostages. A violent storm which fell upon Edward and his army near Chartres, and "reminded him of the day of judgment," caused him to make a vow (looking towards the towers of the cathedral) that he would give peace to France, and led to this important treaty.

The journey from Chartres is continued through the monotonous but fertile and well-cultivated corn-plain of La Beauce.

[5 m. S. of this is the Château de Villebon, where the illustrious Sully died. It is a square building of brick, with towers at the angles, and not many years ago retained its ancient furniture, even to the bed on which the great minister expired. The Eure rises about 15 m. to the N. of Courville.]

At Montlondon the fertile Beauce terminates, and the country becomes hilly.

Nogent-le-Rotrou Stat., a town of 7070

Inhab., contains a ruined Castle of the Comtes du Perche, once the residence of Sully, and his Monument in the chapel of the Hôtel Dieu founded by him. It bears the marble statues of himself and his wife by Boudin, 1642, and a long inscription at the back; it escaped the fury of the Revolution, but the grave itself was violated, and the bones disinterred and scattered. The word Nogent is an abbreviation of the Latin Novigentium; Rotrou was the name of a count of Perche, in which district it is situated. The river produces crawfish in great abundance. (Inn: St. Jacques.) The railroad follows the direction of the Huisne river from Nogent nearly to Le Mans.

Ferté-Bernard Stat. is a prettily situated town in the Dépt. de la Sarthe. Within it the Parish Ch., N. D. des Maraîs, is an interesting Gothic building, end of 16th century, having a richly sculptured external gallery, with the words "Salve Regina" cut in stone, and 3 chapels, from the vaulted roofs of which hang stone pendants. One of the town gates is converted into an Hôtel de Ville.

Connerre Stat. is a large Dolmen or Druidic monument of rude stone slabs, like Kitsu Coity House in Kent. (§ 4.)

St. Mars-la-Bruyère indicates by its name the desolate sandy heaths in the midst of which it is situated.

Le Mans Stat. (Inns: H. Boule d'Or, best; H. Dauphine; H. de France), once capital of the province of Le Haut Maine, now chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Sarthe, is situated on the l. bank of the river Sarthe, a little above the junction of the Huisne, and has 20,000 Inhab.

The principal edifice is the Cathedral of St. Julien, which is well deserving of attention. It is in two styles; the nave, Romanesque, though with pointed arches, dates probably from the 12th centy., but its side aisles and walls, and the plain W. front, are not later than the 11th, perhaps much earlier. Indeed, the external masonry of the side walls, resembling Roman construction, is probably part of the original church, founded in the 8th or 9th centy. Above the W. door are portions of reticulated masonry, and an ancient bust of a king or bishop; on each side are figures supposed to represent the 2 signs of the zodiac, Capricorn and Sagittarius.

On the S. side is a richly-carved Romanesque doorway (12th cent.), a round arch preceded by a pointed porch, flanked by statues of kings and saints, resembling the W. door at Chartres, and with angels in the vault. It is much mutilated, unfortunately.

The Choir is a beautiful production of the 13th centy., the period of perfection in Pointed Gothic. It is surrounded by double aisles and by 11 radiating chapels; restored 1858, when the Lady Chapel was scraped clear of whitewash, and remains of polychromatic decoration discovered. Its windows are filled with beautiful painted glass, little inferior to that of Chartres, except in preservation. In the transept is a fine rose window, together with much stained glass of the 14th or 15th centy., a date rather more modern than that of the choir. In the walls of the nave above the columns are arches of an older building.

This church contains the monuments of Berengaria of Sicily, queen of Richard Cœur de Lion, brought from the abbey of Epan, and much defaced; of Charles of Anjou, 1474; and of Langey du Bellay, distinguished as a soldier and as a writer in the reigns of Francis I. and Henri II. The last is attributed to Germain Pilon; its arabesques and bas-reliefs in marble are well worthy attention.

An undressed block of silicious sandstone, standing on one end, has been incorporated into the wall of the church on the outside; it is supposed to be a Druidic stone.

The Church of Notre Dame du Pré is probably of the 11th centy.

Notre Dame de la Coûture (de cultura Dei) (rest. 1857) has a very old choir, supposed to have been begun 990; both arches and vaulting are round and of rude construction; it has a very elegant portal, adorned with sculpture of considerable merit (Last Judgment). The conventual buildings to which it was originally attached are now the Prefecture, but contain besides the Library, and a Museum, partly devoted to natural history, partly to paintings of a very inferior order, but possessing one curiosity at least, viz. a full-length portrait of Geoffroi Plantagenet, Comte du Maine, enamelled on copper, 25 in. by 13, 12th centy., a very early specimen of that class of art: it was originally attached to his tomb in the cathedral, destroyed 1799. There are also many objects of Roman antiquity found in Le Mans and the neighbourhood, at Alonnes pottery, &c.

St. Pierre is supposed to be the oldest church here, that is to say, the lower part of its walls.

The Séminaire, originally the Abbaye de St. Vincent, has a noble façade and a fine staircase. There is a handsome theatre.

Many specimens of ancient domestic architecture remained here until lately, but are fast disappearing, and the town is becoming modern and commonplace. There used to be some old houses in the Grande Rue. Nos. 7, 10, and 12 deserve attention; the last is known as the house of Queen Berengaria, but appears not to be older than the 15th century. It contains a chimney-piece adorned with bas-reliefs. The house of Scarron (husband of Mad. de Maintenon) is pointed out near the cathedral. The vestiges of the Roman rule at Le Mans are not considerable: the chief are the remains of 3 subterranean aqueducts, by which the city was supplied with water from a distance. A portion of them may be seen in a cellar of the Rue Gourdaïne. Fragments of the Roman town walls still exist; but all traces of an amphitheatre, discovered in the last century, have been swept away.

Le Mans was the birthplace of Henry (II.) Fitz-Empress, the first of the Plantagenet kings of England: a name derived from the plant or sprig of broom (genêt), the abundant production of his native province Anjou and Maine, which his father, Geoffroi, used to wear in his cap.

A great trade is carried on here in clover-seed, which is sent over in large quantities to England. The chief article of manufacture is wax candles. Le Mans is also famed for poultry; its poulards and chapons supply the markets of Paris.

Le Mans witnessed the ruin and final dispersion of the Vendéan army in 1793. Worn out by the disastrous fatigues of a six months' campaign, they were here assaulted by the Republican forces under Marceau's command. Very obstinate was the resistance made by the Royalists in the streets and great square of the town before they were finally expelled, with their leader, Larochejacquelin, who was wounded in the action. Then ensued a fearful carnage, not only of the Vendéan soldiery, but of their miserable wives and children, who accompanied them. By the joint exercise of cannonades of grape and platoons of musketry, discharged upon the defenceless crowd, under the order of the commissioners of the Convention, upwards of 10,000 persons were slaughtered on that occasion.

Railways to Tours (Rte. 53), to Alençon (Rte. 35), and Meziidon (Rte. 25), to Paris and to Rennes.

There is nothing remarkable before

LAVAL STAT. (Inns: H. de Paris, very good; H. de l'Ouest); a curious ancient town, chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Mayenne, on the river Mayenne, with 16,500 Inhab. The oldest part consists of black timber houses, each story projecting beyond that below it, until the gable overhangs the street; but a new quarter has risen on the W., where the streets are wide and regular. On the rt. bank of the river, close to the old bridge, the Castle of the seigneurs of La Trémouille rises from a basement of rock, on which its lofty wall is raised, flanked at one end by a machicolated round tower. It was built in the 12th centy., and its Chapel on round arches is perhaps of that date, but there are many later additions, and the jambs of some of the windows facing the inner court retain some rich ornaments in the style of the Renaissance (15th or 16th century). It is now a prison.

The Cathedral is a cruciform edifice, the choir alone having aisles: the nave a fine work of the same type as the churches of Angers and Poitiers. The nave and choir (except the aisles and side chapels, additions of the 15th and 16th centuries, in the Flamboyant style) are not older than the 12th century. The E. end is square; the porch is a wretched addition of recent times. Under the ch. are very extensive substructions and crypts, thrown up in consequence of the slope of the ground to form a platform or pedestal for the building.

St. Vénérand, a ch. of the 15th or 16th centy., has a little painted glass.

The church in the village of Avenières, adjoining the town, built 1040, well deserves the notice of the architect. The fabric generally has all the characteristics of early Romanesque, yet the principal arches are all pointed, and are perhaps the earliest examples in this part of France. Its choir is surrounded by 5 apsidal chapels, and 2 others open into the transepts. Above the cross rises an elegant stone spire of very late Flamboyant. The ch. contains a miracle-working image of the Virgin.

The architect and antiquary ought not to leave unseen the little ruined Ch. of Grenoux, 2 m. from Laval. It is destitute of all ornament. The structure of its masonry, small square stones with intervening bonds of tiles, marks the style of a period not later than the 9th cent. Within it is a monument of a knight and his lady.

Laval is essentially a manufacturing town, occupied in the production of linens and cottons (toiles, cottils, siamoises), and of linen thread, large quantities of which are spun here. A market for the sale of these productions is held every week in the Halle aux Toiles.

Rail: Laval to Mayenne and Flers projected.

Laval was the centre from which arose the Royalist insurrection of 1792, called Chouannerie, either from 4 brothers named Chouan, its first leaders, of the village St. Ouen des Toits, or from the cry of the owl, imitated by the salt-smugglers of this district as a signal to their confederates, and afterwards adopted during the struggle, by the peasant guerrillas, to announce the enemy's approach.

One of the most glorious victories of the Vendéans was gained in Oct. 1793, a little to the S. of the town. Defeated in several previous combats, and driven across the Loire, with a large Republican army in pursuit of them, their enemies believed the war extinguished. Barrère announced this intelligence to the Convention in Paris: "La Vendée is no more, the brigands are exterminated, a profound solitude reigns in the Bocage, covered with cinders and watered with tears;"—but at the very time that these words were being uttered, Larochejacquelin had carried Laval at the point of the bayonet; then, turning round on his pursuers, he exhorted his brave bands to efface the memory of their former defeats, and to fight for the preservation of their wives and children who accompanied them, now far from their homes. Lescure insisted on being carried through the ranks on his death-litter, mortally wounded as he was, to encourage the Royalists by his presence, and to share their peril and toil. The Vendéans, obeying the appeal, rushed upon the enemy in close column, routed them entirely, and pursued them beyond Château Gonthier, with a loss to the Republicans of 12,000 men, among whom were the redoubted garrison of Mayence, and of 19 cannon. The conflict began at les Croix de Bataille, 2 m. S. of Laval. So precipitate and complete was the rout, that the remains of the Republican army, reduced to 12,000 men, were not collected and reorganised until 12 days had elapsed, and not before they had left the town of Angers in their rear.

St. Pierre la Cour Stat. There are large coal-works near this.

Vitré Stat. (Inn: H. de Sévigné, good and reasonable, formerly the residence of Mad. de Sévigné) is in appearance a town of the middle ages, Gothic and irregular, retaining the greater portion of its feudal fortifications, high and thick walls flanked by towers, surmounted by machicolations, and surrounded by a deep ditch. They appear not later in date than the 15th cent. On one side of them, but detached from them by a ditch, stands a venerable and picturesque Castle of the Seigneurs de la Tremouille, now converted into a prison and falling to decay. In the court is an elegantly ornamented structure, half Gothic, half Italian, supposed to have been a pulpit. At the time of its construction the lords of the castle were adherents of the reformed faith, and the inscription, which may still be read around the console, "post tenebras spero lucem," probably alludes to the persecutions they suffered.

The Ch. of Notre Dame is in a style indicating the decline of Gothic art; attached to it, on the outside, is a stone pulpit, and within one of the chapels hangs a frame containing 32 small enamels, probably from Limoges.

The peasants of this part of Brittany wear a dress of goatskins with the hair turned outwards, which gives them a somewhat savage aspect, and reminds one of Robinson Crusoe.

About 3 m. S. of Vitré is the Château des Rochers, long time the residence of Madame de Sévigné; her bedroom and the cabinet where she wrote many of her charming letters are pointed out, and there is a fine portrait of her by Mignard, but the furniture, &c., of the interior has been altered.

[Near Essé, 7 lieues S.W. of Vitré, is a very fine Druidical monument called "la Roche aux Fées," consisting of 43 large rough blocks of stone—34 upright, supporting 8 others which form a roof.]

The Vilaine river, after which the department is named, rises near Vitré; our road runs parallel with its course as far as Rennes, crossing it by a stone bridge at Châteaubourg Stat.

2 m. beyond this the road passes close to a large slate-quarry excavated to a depth of more than 100 ft.

RENNES Junction Stat. Here the lines from Brest, Redon, and St. Malo will meet.—Inns: H. Julien, very good; Cornes de Cerf; H. de France, quite French, but clean, comfortable, and moderate. This town, once capital of Brittany, now chef-lieu of the Dépt. Ille et Vilaine, is situated at the confluence of these two streams, and contains 39,600 Inhab. Here are few antiquities; the town has an entirely modern aspect, arising from a dreadful fire which in 1720 reduced nearly the whole to ashes. It lasted 7 days, and consumed 850 houses, besides nearly all the public buildings: the ancient and solidly built clock-tower crumbled to pieces on the third day, calcined by the flames. The public buildings, of a date subsequent to this catastrophe, display for the most part the bad taste of the 18th centy.

The streets are uniform; and, "notwithstanding the sober and gloomy hue of the slate of which the houses are chiefly built, Rennes is rather a handsome city," but dull. Considerable improvements have taken place; many narrow streets have been removed, and a bridge has been thrown over the Vilaine.

The stately Palais de Justice, in the handsome Place du Palais, was the parliament-house of the States of Brittany, and is the most remarkable building here. It contains one fine large Salle, des Pas Perdus, and several apartments rich in gilded ceilings and stucco ornaments, Cupids bearing festoons, &c., with roofs and panels painted by Jouvenet. Its date is 1670. It has been restored in part at an expense of 40,000*l*.

The interior of the modern Cathedral "is a very spacious, lofty, and imposing Hall of Grecian architecture; the principal aisle having a richly decorated vaulted roof, supported by massive and well-proportioned fluted Corinthian columns. On the whole the effect is striking, but not at all ecclesiastical." St. Melaine retains a Romanesque porch supported on engaged pillars with curiously carved capitals, probably of the 12th century.

There is a very handsome modern Theatre, situated in another respectable square, with covered arcades around it, lined with shops.

In the modern Hôtel de Ville facing the theatre is a collection of pictures removed from the damp Musée in which they were before deposited: the greater part are of little worth. As a curiosity may be cited a Judgment of Solomon painted by King René of Anjou, but much injured, faded and dingy in hue. There is a Lion-hunt, said to be by Rubens (?).

Here is also the Public Library, containing 30,000 volumes, and many rare MSS., among them a charter of Don Henry of Trastamare, granting lands in Spain to Du Guesclin.

The chief attraction of Rennes, however, is its Public Walks, especially that called le Mont Thabor, planted with fine trees, and commanding a pleasing view over the town, and valley of the Vilaine. A miserable statue of Du Guesclin has been set up in it. The Botanic Garden. The other walks are le Mail, extending down to the junction of the Ille and Villaine, le Mont de Madame, and le Champ de Mars.

One of the old town gates, la Porte Mordelaise, is preserved opposite the new cathedral; the entrance is by a pointed arch, and the masonry includes a stone bearing a Roman inscription, dedicated by the town of Rennes (Redonis) to the Emperor Gordian; it is no longer legible. Through this gate the ancient Dukes of Brittany made their solemn entry into Rennes on their accession, but before passing it they swore to preserve the Catholic faith and the Ch. of Brittany, to govern wisely, and to execute justice; they were then conducted into the ch., where, after 2 days spent in prayer, they were crowned with the golden circlet, and girt with the ducal sword.

The manufactures of Rennes are sail-cloth, which it supplies to the French navy, and some table-linen. The butter (beurre salé) is excellent, especially that of Prévalaye, large quantities of which are sent to other parts of France.

The Roche des Fées (see last page) is best visited from Rennes.

Railways—to Paris by Chartres: to Brest, open to Guingamp; to Nantes, Vannes, l'Orient, by Redon; in progress to St. Malo by Dinan.

ROUTE 35.

PARIS TO RENNES, BY DREUX AND ALENÇON.

355 kilom. = 220 Eng. m. Direct railway, branching off from Versailles, in progress. N. B. The quickest way to Alençon is by rail from Le Mans (Rtes. 34 and 29).

As far as Versailles the road is described in Rte. 33.

The old road to Rennes and Brest, in quitting Versailles, passes between the park wall and a large sheet of water called Pièce des Suisses.

19 Pontchartrain, near which is the Château built by Mansard.

11 La Queue.

13 Houdan.—Inns: l'Ecu; le Cygne. There are a handsome Gothic Church and an old Tower, part of the ancient fortifications, in this town of 2000 Inhab.

7 Maroles.

The river Eure is crossed at Cherisy. 12 Dreux.—Inns: H. du Paradis; du Lion d'Or (Durocassis)—a town of 6400 Inhab., on the Blaise, a tributary of the Eure. It was on the plain between the two rivers that the battle, known as la Journée de Dreux, one of the bloodiest in the French religious wars, was fought between the Roman Catholics, under the Duc de Guise, who was victorious, and the Huguenots, under the Prince de Condé, who was made prisoner, 1563. The Duc de Guise shared his couch the night after with his mortal enemy, and slept soundly by his side.

The hill which rises above the town is crowned by the ruins of the Castle of the Comtes de Dreux, which was captured with the town from the Duc de Guise by Henri IV.; the remains of the very old Donjon or keep tower of brick, of a handsome Norman gateway, and of a Gothic Chapel, built 1142, still exist. The space enclosed by the walls is planted and converted into a garden, in the midst of which rises a modern Chapel, in the form of a Greek temple, surmounted by a cupola, erected by the late King Louis Philippe, when Duc d'Orléans, to replace one destroyed at the Revolution, which was the burial-place of his maternal ancestors. Beneath it are interred the Duchesse de Penthièvre, the remains of the Princesse de Lamballe, who was massacred at the Revolution, the Princesse Marie of Würtemberg, the accomplished daughter of the King, and the Duke of Orleans. Louis Philippe expended vast sums in adorning the edifice with the best productions of modern French art. The entrances to the Chapel are Gothic: the dome is painted in fresco with the 12 Apostles. Some of the painted glass and the sculpture on some of the tombs are good, the finest of all being an Angel in a bending attitude, the chief d'œuvre of the late King's daughter—finer even than her well-known Jeanne d'Arc. The Chapel of the Virgin is enriched with carving, with pendants from the roof, and with painted windows of modern glass, representing religious subjects. The King built a long low range of apartments for the residence of himself and his family, but they have been removed. Around the hill are carried agreeable walks. Its top is surmounted by a telegraph-tower, and the view from it is very extensive.

The Gothic Parish Church, its lower portions in the style of the 13th cent., the upper part and tower in that of the 16th, contains the graves of Rotrou, a dramatist of the 13th cent., and of Philidor the chess-player, both natives of Dreux.

The Hôtel de Ville, part Gothic, part the revival style of the 16th cent., now turned into a museum, contains a curious chimney-piece, and a bell, cast in the reign of Charles IX., bearing a representation, in relief, of the procession of the Flamboyards.

There are numerous manufactures of coarse cloths, serges, &c., in the arrondissement of Dreux.

Diligences to Bueil Stat. on the railway to Paris:—to Maintenon Stat. on way to Chartres daily.

[11 m. N.E. of Dreux are the scanty remains of the Château d'Anet, built by the architect Philibert Delorme for Diana of Poitiers out of the funds furnished by the liberality of her royal lover Henri II., 1552, on the site of a castle which belonged to her husband Louis de Brézé, to which she retired to pass her widowhood. When she first became acquainted with the king she was 31, and he a youth of 13, yet she maintained her influence over him to the day of her death, in spite of the Queen, Catherine de Medicis, and he wore her colours—the widow's weeds, black and white—to the last, and her symbol, the crescent of Diana, is conspicuous in all his palaces. She was buried in the Chapel, which still remains, surmounted by a cupola, but her monument was removed to Paris, 1793, when her body was torn from the grave and lost. The château was almost entirely pulled down at the Revolution; part of the façade was transported to Paris, where it has been re-erected at the Ecole des Beaux Arts. The ruins are pleasantly situated on the banks of the Eure. That stream traverses, a little lower down, the Plain of Ivry, the scene of one of the most decisive victories gained by Henry IV. over the armies of the Ligue, 1590, composed of French and Spaniards under Mayenne. Henri's words to his soldiers before the battle were—"Je veux vaincre ou mourir avec vous. Gardez bien vos rangs; ne perdez point de vue mon panache blanc, vous le trouverez toujours au chemin de l'honneur." The monumental obelisk erected on the spot to commemorate the battle was thrown down 1793, but restored by Napoleon.] The Ch. of St. René near Dreux is a fine example of the Flamboyant style.

On the Avre, a tributary of the Eure, are several manufactories; the paper-mills of the very eminent stationer and publisher Didot, 2 or 3 cotton-mills belonging to Mr. Waddington, and the woollen-yarn mill of Mr. Vulliamy—the 2 last Englishmen, who employ a great number of persons. The mechanical power is water only.

14 Nonancourt.

The site of the house in the market-place, near the church, in which Henri IV. slept the night before the battle of Ivry, is pointed out.

11 Tillières-sur-Avre.

10 Verneuil.—Inns: Poste; Cheval Blanc. This interesting old town, of 4000 Inhab., contains several remarkable specimens of Gothic architecture—the finest being the Tour de la Madeleine, a magnificent work in the most gorgeous late Gothic style, surmounted by a stunted spire. Verneuil was once a place of strength:—under its walls, which partly remain, a fine specimen of fortification of the 12th cent., was fought a bloody battle, August 17, 1424, between the French and English, which, after two days of hard and uncertain contest, terminated in favour of the Regent Duke of Bedford, and was the last great victory obtained by him. The bravest leaders and most efficient troops who fought on the side of the French were the Scotch. Their commanders—the Earl of Douglas, who had been created Duke of Touraine; his son, the Earl of Buchan—and many other knights were slain. The English army was inferior in numbers to the enemy, yet it left 1600 dead on the field, while on the side of the French there fell 4000, including Scotch and Italian allies. As usual, the English archers contributed mainly to the victory. Attached to the portion of the fortifications not yet removed is a tall tower, 60 ft. high, on the margin of the Avre, called la Tour Grise.

Diligences to Laloupe Stat. on the Paris and Le Mans rly., and to Conches Stat. on the Paris and Caen rly.

16 St. Maurice.

22 Mortagne.—Inn: H. de France—an old town (5158 Inhab.) which claimed to be capital of la Perche. It is situated in a commanding position on a hill, surmounted by the high road in a series of zigzags, in order to reach the principal square. It was a place of strength, often besieged, and suffered much from the horrors of war. During the contests of the League it was taken and pillaged by the two parties 22 times in 3½ years. Parts of its ramparts remain, and a fragment of its castle, a vaulted chamber, now called Portail St. Denis. Its only supply of water is obtained by means of a steam-engine pump, from springs at the bottom of the hill. The Church is remarkable for the pendants in the roof of its nave, its old painted glass, and wood carvings.

Canvas used for pictures is made at Mortagne, besides coarse linens and some porcelain.

Omnibus meets the trains at Alençon.

[7 m. N. of Mortagne, at Soligny, is the convent of La Trappe, founded in the 12th cent., but owing its celebrity to the severe rule of the order enforced, 1666, by the Abbé La Rancé, who is said to have always lived strictly and ascetically. The well-known story of his conversion is a pure fable. He was frequently visited here by James II. The convent was suppressed 1790, by a decree of the Assemblée Nationale, and its church destroyed with the tomb of La Rancé, but the monks were restored in 1814 by the exertions of M. Lestrangé. They are interdicted from all intellectual labour, and only allowed to work in the fields.

8 m. S. of Mortagne is the ancient and well-preserved Castle of Bellême.]

16 Mesle-sur-Sarthe. The Sarthe, a tributary of the Loire, is crossed here.

10 Ménil Broust.

13 Alençon (Stat.) (Inns: Grand Cerf, good; Poste; H. d'Angleterre), chief town of the Dépt. de l'Orne, has a population of 14,700, and is a thriving place, situated on the Sarthe, near the junction of the Briante, in an open plain, now a station on the line from Le Mans to Mezidon (Rte. 29). Its manufactures consist chiefly of cotton and woollen, hempen and linen cloths, called "Toiles d'Alençon."

The making of point lace, "Pointe d'Alençon," established here by Colbert, for which the town was long celebrated, has now nearly disappeared. Cider and perry (poiré), the common drink of the country, are sold to a considerable extent, in casks called pipes.

The public buildings are not very remarkable. The Cathedral consists of a Gothic nave, built in the 16th cent., having some painted glass, injured by a storm, 1821, and a pulpit approached by a staircase cut in the pier, attached to a plain modern choir. The crypt beneath the church contains the remains of the Ducs d'Alençon.

2 high battlemented towers of the old Castle, built by Wm. de Bellesme 1026, are converted into a prison, and the Préfecture is a brick building, which, once a palace of the Dukes d'Alençon, belonged to the Duchesse de Guise.

One of the most atrocious of the Revolutionary leaders, Hébert the anarchist, editor of the infamous journal Père Duchesne, was a native of Alençon. He was led trembling and weeping to the scaffold, to which he had condemned so many thousand innocent persons, in 1793, exhibiting in his last moments the most abject cowardice.

The name Diamants d'Alençon is given to the crystals of smoky quartz (rock crystal) found in the neighbouring granite-quarries; where the beryl also occurs. Alençon is built of granite, which becomes the predominant rock of the country farther W. Omnibus to Mortagne, Bellême, and Domfront (Rte. 31).

The cultivation of wheat becomes rarer, buckwheat takes its place; broom and rushes abound.

11 St. Denis. The river Mayenne rises near this, and is crossed about half way to 13 Prez en Pail, in the Dépt. de la Mayenne; the portion of it traversed by the road is a dreary country, unenclosed and covered with heath.

18 Le Ribay.

The high road to Brest merely skirts a suburb of Mayenne, leaving the town itself on the rt.

18 Mayenne.—Inns: Belle Etoile; —Tête Noire. A town of 10,000 Inhab., situated  $\frac{3}{4}$  on the rt. bank and  $\frac{1}{4}$  on the l. of the Mayenne. Its manufactures of calicoes, linen cloth, and tickens employ 8000 persons in and around the town. The Castle, now in ruins, is a picturesque object, on the rt. bank of the river, near the bridge. It belonged to the seigneurs of Mayenne, and was taken after a 3 months' siege, by the English, under the Earl of Salisbury, 1424. Many of the streets are very narrow, and so steep that it requires 8 or 10 oxen to draw a cart up them.

The road descends the valley of the Mayenne, having the river on the rt., but out of sight, to 13 Martigné.

17 Laval.

RENNES. } (See Rte. 34.)

ROUTE 36.

RENNES TO BREST—RAIL.

240 kilom. = 149 Eng. m. Rail open to Guingamp, 131 kilom.; in progress to Brest.

L'Hermitage Stat.

Montfort-sur-Meu Stat.

[28 m. S.W. lies Ploërmel (Inn: H. de France), a town of 5207 Inhab., near the margin of a large mere (l'Étang du Duc.)

In the Parish Ch., a low and heavy structure of the 12th centy., are the monumental effigies in armour of Dukes John II. (1305) and III. (1341) of Brittany. They were brought from the church of the Carmelites, founded by John II., who had fought in Syria against the Infidels, and had visited Mount Carmel; the sculpture is good, and they are tolerably perfect: the church was destroyed at the Revolution. These statues are interesting examples of the costume and armour of the time. There is some painted glass in the church.]

Montauban-de-Bretagne Stat.

Broons Stat. is remarkable only as the birthplace of Bertrand Du Guesclin, the great captain of France in the 15th century. He was 10th child of Robert Du Guesclin, and remarkably ill-favoured to look upon. He first saw the light in the castle of La Motte Broons, of which no vestiges remain, but the place where it stood is marked by an avenue of trees, and a Monument, erected at the cost of the department, by the side of the road to Brest, about 1 m. out of the town.

Plenée Jugon Stat.

Lamballe Stat. (4400 Inhab.) (Inn: H. de France, moderate, and civil people) was the chief place of the Comté of Pen-thièvre; the castle of the counts was reduced and dismantled by Cardinal Richelieu, 1626, to punish a rebellious seigneur. The Ch. of Notre Dame, on the top of the hill whose slope is occupied by the town, was originally the castle chapel, and is a very fine Gothic building. Thick cylindrical piers surmounted by capitals in bands support the lancet arches of the nave, whilst the choir rests on clustered pillars, the arches being surmounted by a double triforium gallery. It has a wooden roof. In a side aisle is some good carved woodwork, with Decorated and Flamboyant tracery, perhaps the remains of a roodloft. Part of the church was built 1545.

The road to St. Malo (Rte. 41) diverges from this.

rt. Glimpses of the sea.

Yffiniac Stat.

20 St. Brieuc Stat.—Inns: Croix Blanche, clean and good; H. Univers, quiet—better situation.

There is nothing worth notice in this town of 14,053 Inhab.; it is situated on the Gouet, and has a port called Légué, 2 m. lower down the stream, provided with a long quay, accessible for vessels of 400 or 500 tons to unload at. On the top of a hilly promontory, commanding the bouchure of the river, stands the ruined Tour de Cesson, built 1395, to defend its entrance, but blown up 1598, after the war of the League, by order of Henri IV. Such, however, was the thickness of the wall, and the coherence of the mortar, that one half of the cylinder remains standing, braving the tempests, while the other lies shattered into a few large masses at its base, as it fell. There is a pretty walk from St. Brieuc to Légué, through a narrow ravine, traversed by a small tributary of the Gouet.

St. Brieuc was taken by the Chonans in the Vendéan war, 1799.

Au interesting antiquarian and architectural excursion to Lanleff, Paimpol, &c., may be made from this (Rte. 38).

Rail, St. Brieuc to Napoléonville, projected.

Châtelaudren Stat. (H. de l'Ecu, fair), a small town on the Leff.

Guingamp Stat. (Hôtel de France, good) is a very picturesque town situated in the vale of the Trieux, which abounds in pleasing scenery (7200 Inhab.). It formed part of the vast possessions of the Ducs de Pen-thièvre, and descended from them to Louis-Philippe. The site of their castle, razed to the earth, is occupied by a grove of trees, and serves as a promenade; but fragments of the town walls remain. Its Church, surmounting the other buildings, part Gothic, part in the style of the revival, has some peculiarities, viz. grotesque heads projecting from the shafts of its piers.

The Fontaine de Plomb, in the middle of the Place, is rather an elegant work of Italian artists in the 15th cent., it is supposed.

The Chapel of Notre Dame de Grace, 3 m. out of the town, is well deserving a visit, although its rich decorations in sculptured tracery and figures have been much mutilated. "Its elegant spire, finely proportioned pillars, and light arches, are still worthy of admiration; and much of the grotesque carving which formed the cornices of the nave and aisles may still be seen." —Trollope. It was erected in the 14th cent. by Charles of Blois.

Good road Guingamp to Paimpol, passing Lanleff (Rte. 38).

19 Belle-Ile-en-Terre.

The Dépt. of Finistère, embracing the larger portion of la Basse Bretagne, the ancient Armorica, is entered before reaching 19 Ponthou.

A grand viaduct carries the railroad across the valley at 15 Morlaix (Inn: H. de Provence, excellent, clean, and moderate, fit for ladies; H. de l'Europe) is a flourishing little port and town of 12,900 Inhab., picturesquely seated in a valley wide enough only for the tidal river or creek which runs up it, lined with 2 quays and 2 rows of houses, "behind which the hills rise steep and woody on one side, on the other gardens and rocks and wood; the effect romantic and beautiful."—A. Young. The rock rises so close behind the houses as to give rise to a proverb, "From the garret to the garden, as they say at Morlaix." It is only  $6\frac{1}{2}$  m. from the sea, and is reached by vessels of considerable tonnage. The river has been converted into a floating dock, divided into 2 parts, the lower with 14 ft. water, the upper with 12 ft. To the stranger its chief attraction is the picturesque air of antiquity which it retains in its older quarters, such as Grande Rue, the Rues des Nobles and du Pavé, and the thoroughly Breton character of its street architecture and houses overhanging the footway, each story, fronted with an apron of slates; more nearly approaching its neighbour on the opposite side of the way, until the inmates of the garrets may shake hands. The grotesquely carved corner posts, ornamented with figures of kings, priests, saints, monsters, and bagpipers, the Gothic doorways, the sculptured cornices, would enrich an artist's sketch-book, and furnish employment for many days. The costume of the people also is thoroughly in keeping with the buildings; their pent-house brimmed hats, their loose trunk hose, their shaggy locks hanging like manes down their backs, are all thoroughly characteristic of la Bretagne Bretonnante (§ 2).

Sad havoc, however, has been made in this antique town by modern improvements; and the opening formed for the new Rue de Brest, by which the road to Brest issues out on the W., has swept away a crowd of crazy but picturesque constructions, whose loss would have made poor Prout sigh.

Two small streams, descending from separate ravines, but uniting above the town, are arched over to furnish space for the market-place and modern Hôtel de Ville; below which, expanding naturally, and partly by their bed being artificially excavated, they formed a port, lined with quays and lofty picturesque houses, resting on covered galleries or arcades called Lances, now nearly all pulled down. One of the houses on this quay is particularly remarkable for its carved staircase. Beside these quays several merchant vessels may usually be seen lying, together with a variety of small craft.

The churches are not remarkable: St. Mathieu is Gothic; in St. Melaine is some good carved screen-work.

Many of the houses in the Rue du Pavé and Rue des Nobles, and especially the staircase of Madame Perrins in the Grande Rue, deserve notice; they are richly ornamented in the Flamboyant style.

The Gothic fountain of the Carmelites, and the Chapel of the Convent of St. François, may be visited by those who have time. The Manufacture Impériale de Tabac, a large building on the W. quay, is said to produce the worst tobacco in Europe.

In 1522 the fleet of Henry VIII., who was at that time incensed with Francis I. for seizing the ships and goods of English merchants in French ports, on its return from escorting the Emp. Charles V. to Spain, under the command of Henry Earl of Surrey, entered the river, in number 50 vessels, and, effecting a descent in the neighbouring bay of Dourdu, surprised Morlaix. The English set fire to it in 4 different places, pillaged it, massacred the inhabitants, and burnt to the ground great part of it, "together with some right fair castles, goodly houses, and proper piles."—State Papers. They retired to their vessels loaded with booty; but 600 of the hindmost were intercepted by the infuriated inhabitants, and cut off with great slaughter near a spring, still called Fontaine des Anglais, or, as the Bretons, like their Welsh kinsmen, style them, the Saxons.

Near the said fountain begins a very pleasant promenade, planted with trees, called Cours Beaumont, which extends nearly  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. down the rt. bank of the river. The views from it of the river and the wooded valley are very pleasing.

The site of the old castle, planted with trees, also commands a fine view of the town. There is a Welsh Baptist missionary church at Morlaix.

About  $\frac{1}{4}$  m. from Morlaix, on the hill above the l. bank of the river, a handsome Gothic church, dedicated to N. D. de Salette, has been built.

Morlaix is the native place of General Moreau.

Diligences daily to Brest; to Quimper; to St. Pol.

Well-appointed Steamers run from Morlaix to Havre, 70 leagues, in 20 hrs., Wedn. and Sat., fare 25 fr.

The churches of Kreisker, St. Pol de Léon, of St. Théogonec, and of Folgoat, may be visited by making a détour on the way to Brest (Rte. 38). Another interesting excursion is to the mining district of Huelgoat and Poulahouen (Rte. 42).

Rather more than half way (9 m.) between Morlaix and the next stat. is the village of Théogonec. Stop here, to see its remarkably fine Church, in the style of the Renaissance; a vast edifice, richly decorated with sculptures in the dark Kersanton stone. Its delicately carved pulpit, its reliquary, and its Calvary, deserve special notice.

21 Landivisiau (Inn: H. de Commerce) has a Church also, with a very fine S. portal filled with statues of the 12 Apostles; and at the W. end a most elegant tower and spire well worth studying. Stop and see it.

[The Church of the Templars at Lambäder, 5 m. N. of this, on the road to St. Pol, contains a beautifully pierced and carved roodloft and screen of wood, composed of exquisite Flamboyant tracery, like lace; also a staircase in the same style. The chains of some knight, liberated from slavery among the followers of Mahoun, still hang in the choir.]

3 m. short of Landerneau, on a hill above the village **La Roche Maurice*, stand the ruins of its castle, reduced to 3 shattered towers, but very picturesque in its outline and position on the peaked top of a jagged rock.

In the churchyard is an Ossuary, filled with skulls and dry bones, ornamented in front with a sculptured frieze, representing the Dance of Death, executed 1639. The Church is Gothic, and built 1599, and contains some good painted glass. The carved portal in Kersanton stone, and the sculptured roodloft of wood within, are worth notice.

16 Landerneau (Inn: Hôtel de l'Univers), a pretty town, seated in the hollow of the charming valley of the Elorn, whose mouth forms one branch of the roadstead of Brest. There are some picturesque Gothic bits among its old houses. 6500 Inhab. Near it is a Scotch flax-mill. Steamer to Brest.

No one should omit the voyage by the river to Brest. An old convent here is converted into a naval or military hospital.

The roads to Brest from Morlaix, from Carhaix (Rte. 42), and from Quimper (Rte. 44), all converge at this point.

A little beyond Landerneau, on the l. of the road, between it and the river Elorn, a ruined gateway, draped with ivy, is the sole subsisting relic of the Castle of the Joyeuse Garde, now known as Château le Forêt, the cradle of chivalry, the seat of Arthur, Lancelot du Lac, and the Knights of the Round Table. Of course there is no pretension that the existing remains are of their time. The name Joyeuse Garde is supposed to be a perversion of a Breton term.

20 BREST.—Inns: H. du Grand Monarque, old-fashioned house, not very clean, otherwise good; Br. 2 fr., D. 3 fr., R. 1 fr. 50 c.;—H. de Provence. N.B. The gates of Brest are open all night to travellers.

Brest, the chief naval arsenal of France, a Dockyard, and fortress of the first class, is very advantageously situated near the W. extremity of the Dépt. Finistère (the Land's End of France), on that portion of her territory which projects most to the W. between the Channel and the Gulf of Gascony. It stands on the N. side of one of the finest harbours in the world, nearly land-locked, accessible only through a narrow and well-fortified throat, Le Goulet, about 1 m. wide, divided by a rocky islet (Roche Mingan) in the middle, and extending far inland in 2 branches, one to Landerneau, the other towards Châteaulin. The town is built on the summit and sides of a kind of projecting ridge, and some of its streets are too steep to be passable except on foot. A narrow but deep creek, which is in fact formed by the mouth of the small stream the Penfeld, running up from the harbour behind this ridge, serves as the basin to the dockyard, and divides the town on its l. bank from the suburb Recouvrance on its rt.

The communication between the town and suburb is kept up by an Iron Swing Bridge, the largest swing bridge in the world, 65 ft. above high-water mark, in 2 divisions, 347 ft. long between the piers; it opens in the centre to allow ships of war to pass; each valve turns on a colossal granite pier, and moves by ingenious machinery. It was completed June 1861, and is a fine work of engineering. Close above the mouth of this creek, which is not more than a musket-shot across, and is defended by several tiers of batteries on either hand, rise the feudal round towers and colossal curtains, not less than 100 ft. high, of the picturesque old Castle, which belonged to the Ducs de Bretagne. It was besieged in vain by Du Guesclin and Clisson, and was long held by the English, having for governor, 1373, the brave warrior Robert Knolles. It was yielded up by Richard II. 1395, in consideration of 12,000 crowns, and was finally modernised by Vauban, 1688, who formed casemates in the interior of its massive towers, and platforms with embrasures for cannon on their tops. From its walls there is a good view of the port and dockyard, but the Fort de l'Ecole, on the opposite side of the water, commands one still finer, including the roadstead also. There are numerous dungeons beneath the castle, and extensive vaults.

The inner port of Brest, or creek above mentioned, is so narrow that there is barely space near its mouth to hold the merchant vessels; but there is no deficiency of depth (30 ft. at low water), and 30 or 40 ships of war might lie within it in single file. Above the castle the shores of both sides of this creek are enclosed by a high wall, separating the dockyard within it from the town. Around the harbour run quays of great extent, alongside which the largest ships can lie, and 5 artificial basins are excavated out of the rock. The mouth of the creek is closed by a boom. A commercial harbour and dock for merchant shipping is to be made at Porstrein, and a long breakwater is being formed in the roads to protect it. The population of Brest exceeds 61,000, of whom 13,000 consist of soldiers, sailors, &c. There is accommodation in the numerous barracks for a garrison of nearly 10,000 men.

Although Brest is enclosed within ramparts, there are several fine open spaces within its walls: such are the square called Champ de Bataille, innocent of any other combat than a sham fight, and the Cours d'Ajot (so named from an officer of engineers who laid it out), a promenade agreeable on account of the fine trees which shade it, and the beautiful view of the roads, appearing like a vast lake, which its terrace commands, but infested all the morning by parties of recruits undergoing drill. Rue de Siam, on the top of the hill, is the best part of the town; from it flights of steps lead to the Grande Rue.

More rain, it is said, falls in Brest than in any other town of France, and the whole department of Finisterre is peculiarly exposed to storms, winds, mists, and fogs.

In 1548 Mary Queen of Scots, then a child 5 years old, landed at Brest, and a few days after was affianced to the Dauphin Francis at St. Germain.

The Dockyard, or Port Militaire.—The authorities connected with the dockyard (major de la marine, &c.) will not admit foreigners to see it without a note from the British Consul. The dockyard of Brest is situated on the 2 sides of a narrow but deep creek or arm of the sea, running up in a winding direction between high and steep rocks, which intrude so near upon the water that it is only by paring them down that space is formed for the buildings, and for the quays and yards required in front of them. Three dry docks of the largest dimensions have been cut out of the solid rock. The first view, looking down from above into this narrow ravine, lined with long and massive ranges of buildings rising tier over tier in the form of an amphitheatre, is exceedingly striking. On one side is the Voilerie (sail-house), Magasin Général (stores), and Corderie (rope-walk), of 3 stories, surmounted by the old Bagne, and above it rises the New Hospital. On the opposite side are various ateliers, forgeries, Atelier d'Artillerie de Marine (burnt in 1833). The Foundry, and the Quartier des Marins, or sailors' barracks, where they are lodged when in port in the same manner as soldiers—an admirable establishment, which might be advantageously copied by the English Admiralty—fill up the opposite side. The level space at the water's edge is occupied by slips (cales de construction), the ships whilst building being covered with oilcloth. Above the slips is the Atelier des Capucins, the government foundry and steam-factory, for the construction and repair of steam engines, surpassing in extent and good arrangement any in Britain: from a square tower connected with it the machinery is lowered into the ships. There are, besides, timber-yards, boat-sheds, water-cisterns supplied by a steam-engine where vessels fill their tanks, sheds for containing the new tanks, and government cellars, while a very large space near the sea entrance of the dockyard is covered with dismantled cannon. Here also is placed a trophy from Algiers, a brass gun 20 ft. long, which forms an excellent column reared on its breech; out of this gun a French consul, Levacher, was fired by a brutal Dey of Algiers into the French fleet in 1683. The precautions against fire and theft are very rigid; a vigilant guardian watches in every apartment; cisterns are placed at short distances with tubs full of water every 8 or 10 yards.

The ground occupied by most of these buildings has been gained, as before observed, by excavations out of the granitic schist of the hill-side. Greatly as the space on either side of the water has been widened by artificial means, the cliffs even now approach too near the slips and timber-sheds, preventing a free circulation of air. Near the timber-sheds is the Musée Maritime, filled with models, ships' heads, &c., but containing nothing very remarkable.

On both sides of the port, roads are carried up the steep sides of the confining heights in zigzag terraces, so that they may easily be surmounted by heavy carriages.

The Victualling Office (Direction des Subsistances et Parc aux Vivres) is near the mouth of the port, on the rt. bank, and includes the bakehouse, containing 24 ovens, the slaughterhouse, kitchens, &c. In 1802-3, when the combined Spanish and French fleets lay in the roads, 50,000 rations were supplied hence daily.

The Bagnes or hulks for convicts no longer exist, the forçats having been removed in 1860 to the penal colony of Cayenne. The buildings now serve as storehouses for hemp and sailcloth.

On the Recouvrance side of the Penfeld lie the Smithy (Usine) de Ville-neuve, the iron forges, furnaces, and workshops, moved by hydraulic wheels. The Steam Engine Factory (Ateliers des machines à vapeur) is one of the largest and most complete in Europe, comprising a boiler-house, and sheds for construction and repairs of all parts of a steam engine. By means of a huge crane the heaviest weights are raised from the quay or lowered down to it.

Near the mouth of the Penfeld, opposite the château, is the Parc aux Vivres (Victualling yard), where every sort of provisions for the fleet is prepared or stored, corn warehouses, flour-mills, bakeries, cooperage, abattoirs (slaughterhouses), and salting-houses.

Outside the dockyard, a little higher up the hill than the prison, rises the Hôpital de la Marine, an edifice of great extent, though of unpretending architecture, of which Brest may well be proud. It was built 1824-1835. It contains 26 salles, each with 53 beds; and is attended by between 30 and 40 Religieuses, Sœurs Fidèles de la Sagesse as they call themselves, who are also lodged within the building. So far from being revolting, as is the case in many hospitals, it is a pleasing sight to enter one of the salles; its cleanliness puts to shame the confined frowly wards of Greenwich Hospital. Here are wide, airy apartments, the roofs without speck, the floors, though of tile, sedulously polished and provided with pieces of carpeting, each window hung with white curtains, each bed of metal, also with white curtains and furniture. The salle des officiers is superior to the common rooms, even elegant. The kitchens, laboratories, linen-closet, &c., are in the same style. 1200 sick can be received in this establishment.

A British Consul resides here.

There is a French Protestant Church.

At Hébert's library and reading-room, Rue d'Aiguillon, the papers may be seen, and many interesting works on Brittany, especially those of MM. Souvestre and Fremenville, obtained.

Diligences daily to Landerneau. Railroads to Paris by Rennes, Chartres, Lorient, Auray, and Nantes. Steamers to Havre, 25 fr., three times a month. Steamers also to Landerneau, 13 m., a charming voyage, up the Elorn.

Steamer every day traverses the Roadstead to Port Launay. This excursion to the head of the harbour is very fine and interesting. The ships of the line laid up in ordinary are now moored opposite Landrennec.

The Roadstead of Brest lies between the great promontory of Finisterre on the N. and the smaller peninsula of Quêlern on the S., which approach so near as to leave a passage only 1749 yards broad between them, called the Goulet. The Mingan rock, rising in the midst of this channel, contracts the entrance still more, and compels vessels to pass close under the guns of batteries which line it on either side, and command it by a cross fire. The roads consist of numerous bays, into which several rivers empty themselves, the principal being the Elorn from Landerneau, and the Châteaulin, which is navigated by a steamboat. The harbour is about 15 miles long, and in some places 3 m. broad, and the area of its surface is estimated at 15 square leagues, and, although there are several sandbanks and shoals, 200 vessels can anchor within it. The roadstead may be divided into two parts by a line from Ile Ronde to Ile Longue. In the lower part is the Banc de St. Pierre, near which is the anchorage for large ships; further up is the Banc de St. Marc. The upper part contains numerous creeks called Anses. The roadstead is rather exposed to the N.W. winds, but still all the fleets of France might lie snugly within it, and a hostile ship dare not venture within its entrance without the risk of being battered to pieces. Not only are the jaws of the harbour bristling with fortifications "à fleur d'eau," but the works are carried inwards so as to command the anchorage, and the batteries spread outside to the rt. and l. of the entrance, while every eminence is crowned with other forts commanding those below. The number of cannon and large mortars which could be brought to bear on an enemy from the batteries of the Goulet, and of the coast outside of it, is not less than 400, while 60 pieces sweep the anchorage from the forts within the Goulet. The forts and batteries defending the Goulet and roadstead are, on the N. the Fer à cheval and Parc au Duc, the forts of Portzic, of Délée, of Mingan, of Minou; on the S. side those of Pointe Espagnole, of Robert, of Kervignou, of the Capucins, of Cornouailles, and of Cap-Tremet. On the N. of the Goulet, in the midst of the bay of Bertheaume, are 2 island forts united together with the shore by bridges. The extreme fort on this side is the batterie de St. Mathieu, under the ruined abbey, and close to the lighthouse. On the S. of the Goulet lies the Bay de Carmaret, one of whose numerous and formidable batteries goes by the name of Mort Anglaise, commemorating the miserable defeat of the expedition which landed here 1694 from a British fleet commanded by Admiral Berkeley. On approaching the shore the English found it bristling with armaments: batteries were thrown up on all sides, gunners at their posts, troops of horse and foot drawn up behind the guns, and, as soon as the English began to disembark, 3 masked batteries opened on the ships a destructive fire. 900 men under the command of General Tollemache, who persisted in landing in the face even of such formidable preparations, reached the shore, and were almost immediately cut to pieces, the ebbing of the tide having left their boats dry, and cut off their retreat. And thus the expedition failed miserably. What wonder? The news of the intended descent had been betrayed to Louis XIV. and James II. more than a month before, by traitors in the English ministry. There seems no just reason for attributing this disclosure to the Duke of Marlborough, who was not in the ministry, although he appears to have written about the time of the sailing of the fleet from Portsmouth to his old master James:—"The capture of Brest would be a great advantage to England, but no advantage can prevent or ever shall prevent me from informing you of all that I believe to be for your service; therefore you may make your own use of this intelligence."—Macpherson's State Papers. In the interval between the receipt of the intelligence and the sailing of the armament the skill and activity of Vauban had put the intended landing-place in such a state of defence, by throwing up batteries, disposing cannon, and collecting troops, as to render success hopeless, defeat inevitable.

The Pointe des Espagnols owes its name to a body of Spaniards, about 600 strong, who occupied it for several weeks, 1594, and threw up an earthen redoubt, which was captured by assault. The peninsula of Quélern is defended by lines, drawn across the isthmus which connects it with the mainland, nearly a mile long, consisting of bastions faced with masonry, constructed by Vauban, mounting 60 pieces of cannon. From a point near these lines, just above the Bay of Camaret, the finest view is obtained of the roads of Brest and their defences, with the point of St. Mathieu and the archipelago of Ouessant on the N., and on the S. the Bay of Douarnenez and the Pointe du Raz.

The defences above enumerated do not include those of Brest itself, amounting altogether to 400 pieces of cannon, nor of the intrenched camp behind it, numbering 60 more cannon and mortars.

Excursions.—The country about Brest is far from picturesque, but it contains many objects of interest.

a. The Menhir of Plouarzel (§ 4), about 10 m. N.W. of Brest and 3 beyond the village of St. Renan, is the loftiest of those singular Celtic monuments now remaining in Finisterre. It measures 35 ft. in height, and stands on an eminence in the midst of a wild heath. Whatever its original destination, it is still looked on with awe by the peasantry, and singular superstitions are associated with it. Often in the dead of night the barren woman repairs hither, hoping to procure the boon of fruitfulness by rubbing her naked breast against the hard granite.

Near the mouth of the pretty river Aber Ildut, which flows past St. Renan, are the quarries of granite which furnished the pedestal for the obelisk of Luxor, erected in the Place Louis XV., at Paris.

3 m. N. of St. Renan, at Lanriouaré, is the graveyard of the 7777 saints, a walled enclosure, never trod by the peasants except with bare feet and head uncovered; it is paved with slabs, and marked by a cross.

The ruined Abbey of St. Matthew, situated on the extreme W. cape of Finisterre, N. of the Rade de Brest, is about 15 m. W. from Brest and 10 from St. Renan. The roads from both places converge at the little town of Le Conquet, where la Grâce de Dieu is a decent cabaret. An attempt of the English in 1513, under Sir Edward Howard, to cut out some galleys from this port was foiled, and the Admiral slain. Conquet suffered from an English fleet sent forth by Queen Mary, 1558, to ravage the French coast, and to surprise Brest, "because it was known not to be well garrisoned, and was thought the best mark to be shot at for the time." The English commander, landing at Conquet, "put it to the sackage, with a great abbey, and many pretty towns and villages, where our men found good booties and great store of pillage."—Holinshed. Thence it is a walk of 3 m. along the tops of the granite cliffs (which abound in red feldspar, quarried at Le Conquet), battered below by the waves, to the storm-fretted ruins of St. Matthew's Abbey, which stand on the bleak exposed promontory above the sea—the most W. point of France, and, with the exception of Cape Finisterre in Spain, of the European continent. It occupies a position similar to St. Mary's Abbey, Whitby, so as to be the first and the last object seen by the mariner quitting or entering the Bay of Brest. Whatever wind may blow, it is rare but it rages a hurricane around these mouldering arches and piers, which yet have braved for 5 centuries the pelting storm and whistling wind. The architecture is pointed (13th cent.) in the greater part of the building, with some Romanesque portions and round arches at the W. end. It is of solid granite, simple in style, and without ornament. Close beside the ruins a Lighthouse has been erected. There is much savage grandeur in the scene around, viewed from this point, increased by the sullen roar of the mighty Atlantic chafing in the eaves and fissures of the rocks below. In clear weather the eye ranges over the dangerous strait called Passage du Four, beset with rocks, between the mainland and the granitic islands Molène, Beniguet, and Ouessant. The last is supposed by some to be the Ultima Thule of the ancients: its inhabitants remained idolaters down to the 17th century. The indecisive naval action of Ushant (as we call it) was fought off this island, 1778, between the French fleet under d'Orvilliers, and the English under Keppel and Palliser. On the S. the roads of Brest and the peninsula of Quélern lie open, and on the horizon appears the Pointe du Raz. The fort of Bertheaume has been strongly armed and connected with the shore by a bridge, instead of the rope basket, formerly the only means of communication.

b. On the E. side of the roadstead, and on the shore of the estuary of the Landerneau river, opposite to Brest, lies Plougastel, remarkable for a Calvary, attached to its cimetière, one of the most remarkable of the Gothic monuments of Finisterre. The 3 customary crosses, carved in Kersanton stone (§ 6), are surrounded by an army of stone saints on foot, raised on a platform with bas-reliefs around it, rudely but forcibly executed, representing scenes of the Life and Passion of Christ. Some of the subjects, such as the entry of our Saviour into Jerusalem to the music of the bigniou (bagpipe), the Temptation, and Hell, are treated in a homely manner, approaching the grotesque, marking the hand of a rustic artist. "Notwithstanding its Gothic character, it appears by an inscription upon it to have been executed in 1602: but we must remember that the middle ages lasted longer in Brittany than elsewhere."—Souvestre.

The costume of the women of Plougastel is remarkable for its elegance.

Ferry and market boats ply between Brest and the point of Plougastel.

The fine Gothic Ch. of Folgoat (Rte. 38) would form an agreeable day's excursion for any one who interests himself in architecture. He might take the patache which runs daily from Brest to Lesneven and back.

The Anse de Kerhuan (7 m.) on the way to Landerneau is worth a visit. It is a pond 2 m. long and  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. wide, where timber to an enormous value is kept. 1 m. higher up the river is the Chapelle de St. Jean, formerly a Chapel of Ease to the Commandery of Knights Templars at l'Hôpital.

ROUTE 38.

ST. BRIEUC TO BREST.—COAST ROAD BY PAIMPOL, LANNION, MORLAIX, ST. POL
DE LEON, AND FOLGOAT.

Diligence well appointed from St. Briec to Morlaix.

The distances are marked in lieues communes of 3 Eng. m., measured from place to place.

This route properly consists of two excursions from the high road from Rennes to Brest: it carries the traveller to a succession of interesting churches and ecclesiastical remains well worth visiting, though much of it lies over cross roads: no posting.

St. Briec (Rte. 36).

Thus far there is nothing remarkable, unless the traveller diverge about 1 m. to the l. of the road beyond Binic, to visit the beautiful Gothic chapel of Lantec, which has been compared with the Ste. Chapelle at Paris, but is far inferior to it.

[From Plouha the antiquarian traveller may diverge to the l., to visit a ruined building, known as the

7½ Temple de Lanleff, about 8 m. from Plouha. A carriage cannot easily get within a mile of it, owing to the badness of the roads. It has been the subject of much controversy, some writers calling it a Pagan Temple; but in truth it is nothing more than an early Christian church, probably of the 10th or 11th cent., in the form of a rotunda, like the English churches of the Temple, St. Sepulchre Cambridge, Little Maplestead, &c. But the building which it perhaps most nearly resembles is the round church at Nymegen, in Holland, attributed to Charlemagne, but now in ruins. It consists of 2 concentric walls, the inner one a cylinder 30 ft. high, resting on 12 circular arches, supported on square piers, with engaged columns on each side, of granite, having rudely carved capitals of monsters, human faces, rams' heads. Outside of this runs a lower concentric wall, destroyed for a considerable part of its circuit, but which once extended quite round the inner wall, and thus formed the aisles of the church. It is pierced with narrow loopholed windows, which widen inwards, the early form common in churches built before glass came into use. The edges of the vaulted roof which covered this aisle may still be traced, and a small portion of the aisle is included in the modern church; but whether the vaulting of it be as old as the walls on which it rests cannot be distinctly affirmed. This ruin now forms a vestibule to a little village church. As a ruin, it is too rude in its architecture to be pleasing. A noble yew-tree, which rose in the midst of it, tall and straight, surmounting the old wall with its dark canopy of foliage, was cut down for timber a few years ago.

The tradition of the country is, that it was built by the Templars, the "Moines Rouges" as they are called. It is just possible that Gothic architecture in Brittany was not more advanced in the 12th cent. than this building indicates.]

Lanleff is about 24 m. from St. Briec and 7½ from 2½ Paimpol (Inns: Hotel Gigquel, good, 1861; H. du Commerce), a town of 2112 Inhab.

On the sea-shore, 2 m. to the E. of Paimpol, are the ruins of the Abbey of Beauport. It is beautifully situated on the shore of a retired bay. The remains consist of a Church, now roofless and deprived of the choir, in the Pointed style, with a W. front showing an Early English character, together with several conventual buildings at the E. end. An elegant small chapter-house, its vaulted roof supported on a row of circular pillars, is so perfect that it is now used as a school. On the N. side are an extensive vaulted cellar, and an apartment of a superior character, also vaulted, which was the grand refectory. At the Bank here English money may be changed.

From Paimpol to Treguier is about 9 m., passing through Lezardrieux, where the river Trieux, descending from Guingamp, is crossed by a fine wire suspension-bridge resting on lofty piers.

From this a boat may be hired (for 2 or 3 frs.) to

The castle of La Roche Jagu, an interesting specimen of domestic architecture, finely situated on the Trieux above Lezardrieux, 2 m. from Pontrieux. It is a semi-castellated mansion, entered by a low doorway closed by an oaken door and a heavy iron gate of crossbars. Although dismantled, it is inhabited by a peasant. There is a fine view from its roof.

Another suspension-bridge thrown over the Jaudy leads into 3 Treguier (Inn: Hôtel de France, tolerable), a town of 3178 Inhab., occupying the summit and slope of a hill.

The Church in the market-place, formerly the cathedral, has a fine S. porch, the vaulted roof panelled, and the divisions filled with quatrefoils, and a doorway ornamented with statues in niches, of good workmanship. The piers of the nave are irregular in form, and its arches vary in width. The N. transept is Romanesque, with circular arches and well-wrought capitals to its pillars. Contiguous to it is a tower in the same style, and probably of the 11th cent., though named Tour de Hastings, after the Danish pirate of a much earlier period. This tower is best seen from the cloisters, where some mutilated effigies of ecclesiastics and knights are deposited.

In a farmhouse a little way out of the town, called Kermartin, is preserved the bed of St. Yves, a favourite Breton saint. It is a cupboard bedstead, the front of dark wood finely carved. An omnibus runs to 4 Lannion (Inns: H. de France; H. de l'Europe, good and moderate), on the Guier, possesses a market-place filled with odd old houses, several of a very peculiar style of architecture, and nothing else worthy of remark. Diligence daily to Morlaix. There is a post-road hence to Guingamp, 32 kilom., and another by Pleston, 18 kilom., to Morlaix, 19 kilom.

The district extending N. from Lannion to the sea, between the rivers Guier and Jaudy, is the very cradle of romance. King Arthur held his court at Kerduel, graced by the presence of the Paladins, Lancelot, Tristan, and Caradoc; and a short distance off the coast is an islet called Agalon or Avalon, which the Bretons maintain to be King Arthur's burial-place, thus depriving Glastonbury of that honour.

About 6 m. S. of Lannion, on the E. bank of the Guier, between it and the road to Guingamp, is the Castle Tonquedec, one of the largest and best preserved in Brittany. It was built in the 13th cent., and dismantled by order of Richelieu, after having served during the wars of the Ligne as a royal fortress. It consisted of 3 courts defended by moats, drawbridges, and portcullises. In the inner court is the keep, a tall round tower, "accessible only by an opening in its 2nd story, approached by 2 drawbridges, supported midway upon an isolated square pier." The staircase was formed in the thickness of the wall. "In many respects these ruins are well worth coming some distance to visit. To the antiquary they are precious as a specimen of the finest military architecture of the 13th cent. For the sketcher they combine the requisites to form a lovely landscape."—Trollope.

There is excellent fishing in the Guier, which also abounds in leeches. In the season men and women too may be seen in deep water beating the water with poles: the leeches seem disturbed by this, and, attaching themselves to the legs of the operators, are caught.

The direct road from Lannion to Morlaix (about 23 m., diligence takes 5 hours) passes St. Michel-sur-Grève, a spot where the sea encroaches on the shore, and a little farther we enter the department Finistère. On the sands near this, according to the legend, King Arthur fought the dragon.

The crypt under the church of Lanmeur is of great antiquity, and encloses the holy fountain which caused its foundation, and is still held in repute by the common people. The piers which support the crypt have serpents carved on them.

About 5 m. N. of Lanmeur, close upon the coast, lies the village of St. Jean du Doigt, whose church, containing the precious finger of St. John, from which it is named, is a favourite place of pilgrimage with the peasantry, who repair hither to the number of 12,000 on the eve of St. John. The church has a wooden roof elegantly carved and painted, and surmounted by a spire of lead; it also possesses a ciborium bearing enamelled medallions of the 12 Apostles, a beautiful crucifix of the 16th cent., a chalice and a patina presented by Anne of Brittany, who was a patroness of St. John's finger. She built the hospice by the side of the church to receive pilgrims.

Souvestre mentions a singular little chapel called the Oratoire, between this and Plougasnon, in which the young girls who are about to marry in the course of the year hang up their hair as an offering to the Virgin; this ancient Gaulish custom, however, is diminishing every year.

7½ Morlaix (Rte. 36).

There is nothing very interesting beyond Morlaix until the towers and spires appear of 5 St. Pol de Léon. — Inn: H. de France, clean and comfortable quarters, and moderate; pretty view. Diligence to Brest and Morlaix.

This ancient and almost deserted ecclesiastical city reminds one of St. Andrew's in Scotland, and St. David's in Wales, in its remote position near the sea-shore, in its decayed state, and in its ancient edifices. It possesses 6700 Inhab. and 2 very fine churches.

The * Cathedral, dedicated to St. Pol, is flanked at the W. end with 2 fine towers, whose central stories, pierced with long and elegant lancet windows (like St. Pierre at Caen), are surmounted by spires, also pierced through to the sky. They open to the choir beneath, so as to form a sort of vestibule as at Peterborough. The nave is in the early Pointed style, probably of the 13th cent.; the transepts display Romanesque features; in the S. transept is a fine circular window, its tracery cut in granite. The trough-shaped bénitier near the W. end was probably a tomb, and from its rude sculpture is certainly very old. The choir, longer, more ornamented, and of later date than the nave, is surrounded by double aisles, and ends in a Lady Chapel; it contains some good carved wood-work of the 16th cent. The S. porch, a rich florid work with foliage delicately cut in Kersanton stone, merits examination. In the church are several boxes with skulls, and in the cemetery is a bone-house.

The boast of St. Pol is the spire of the * Church of Creizker (the word means centre of the town), 393 ft. high; a structure of open work of great lightness and grace, though constructed entirely of granite. The richly ornamented square tower is surmounted by a very boldly-projecting cornice, above which rises the spire, its masonry cut to imitate overlapping-tiles. The whole rests on 4 pillars, not particularly thick, but the arches of the aisles act as buttresses to support it. The interior view of the tower is remarkable. This spire was built at the latter end of the 14th cent. by John IV., Duke of Brittany: according to tradition the architect was English. The N. portal, florid and fringed, is very rich and in good taste, though much injured; the rest of the church is not remarkable.

3 m. to the N. lies the little port of Roscoff. Half-way, near Chapel Pol, are some Celtic remains, several dolmens, and a menhir (§ 4).

Roscoff is filled with sailors and smugglers, and contains a vegetable prodigy, a fig-tree, in the garden of the Capucin convent, whose branches, supported by scaffolding, would shelter beneath them 200 persons. The church, though of the time of Louis XIV., has a Gothic character, while its details are Italian; at the W. end are 7 very curious bas-reliefs in alabaster. There is a curious granite ossuary.

Opposite Roscoff lies the little island of Batz, separated from the mainland by a strait which may be crossed in 10 min. In the cemetery there is a monument of granite to the memory of a lady who succoured the proscribed and fugitive priests during the Revolution. The young Pretender landed here after his hazardous escape from Scotland.

There are two roads from St. Pol to Lequeven on the way to Brest; that by Plouescat passes through a very primitive country, and is bordered by at least 30 very curious crosses.

7 Lesneven.—Inn : Grande Maison ; very bad. Some Roman remains, urns, &c., found a few miles S.E. of this dull but picturesque old town, on the way to Landivisiau, have been supposed to mark the site of the long-lost Breton town Occismor.

Pursuing the road to Brest, 1 m. beyond Lesneven, we reach the village of **Folgoat*, marked in the distance by its tall spire, inferior to the Creizker, but very stately for a village, attached to the Church of Notre Dame, one of the most remarkable Gothic buildings of Brittany. It owes its origin to the following circumstance :—This spot was once haunted by an idiot-boy, who was in the habit of begging alms of those who passed, using at the same time this one unvaried exclamation, "Oh! Lady Virgin Mary!" so that the place became known as "ar fol coat," the fool of the wood. The fool died, and in a short time there sprang up from his grave, even out of his mouth, according to the legend, a beautiful lily, whose leaves bore inscribed upon them the name of Mary. This miracle was noised abroad, and, coming to the ears of John de Montfort, then warring with Charles de Blois for the dukedom of Brittany, he vowed to build a church on the spot if he triumphed over his rival. In consequence, after the victory of Auray, he laid the first stone on the spot where the lily had sprouted forth, but the church was not finished until 1423, by his son John V., who, in an inscription legible on the l. of the W. portal, claims to be its founder.

It is built of the very dark greenstone called Kersanton (§ 6), which gives the edifice on the whole a gloomy appearance, but it is well adapted for delicate sculpture, by the sharpness with which it has retained the delicate touches of the artist's chisel. Almost every part of the church, inside and out, deserves minute inspection ; the fertile invention, laborious pains, and dexterous skill of the sculptor are visible in almost every part, though the edifice has been sadly injured through neglect. This is more especially conspicuous externally in the W. portal, the canopy of which fell down 1824. Round the doorway runs a delicate wreath of thistles and vine-leaves, perfect in their prickly flowers and stems, and even in the very fibres of the leaves and the curves of the stalks and tendrils. Birds also (chardonneret) and serpents are interspersed among the leaves. Above the door is a bas-relief of the Nativity, the Adoration of the Magi on one side (St. Joseph with wooden shoes has all the character of a Breton peasant), and of the Shepherds on the other. Below, the centre pier is formed into an elegant niche enclosing the bénitier under a graceful canopy, and supporting it on a bracket. Among the foliage here and in other parts may be seen the ermine, the armorial device of the dukes of Brittany, bearing their motto, "Melius mori quam fedari." The thistle (chardon) and the goldfinch (chardonneret) also recur repeatedly in the ornaments of various parts of the church.

A more beautiful porch is attached to the S. transept. Here 12 niches line the vault leading to the door, in the mouldings around which similar leaves and wreaths are reproduced with far greater truth and delicacy. The stone from its peculiar colour has all the effect of bronze. This portal is believed to have been built by Anne of Brittany, as the arms of France united to those of Brittany are visible on it.

The sloping, open parapets which decorate the gables of the transept, the tracery of the E. windows, especially the central one surmounted by a rose, and the elegant arched niche at the E. end below it, on the outside of the church, constructed to receive the waters of the miraculous fount, which bursts forth from beneath the high altar itself, are not to be passed unnoticed. The water of this spring is held in great repute by pilgrims, who, regardless of bystanders, strip themselves to apply it to all parts of their persons.

Within the church on the rt. as you enter is the Fool's Chapel, covered with frescoes nearly destroyed by the damp. The jubé or roodloft between the choir and nave consists of 3 round arches most elegantly fringed, surmounted by canopies resting on panelled pillars, and supporting a gallery, of rich open work, pierced with quatrefoils. The foliage composing the crockets is an elaborate yet natural imitation of the most complicated leaves, and the two angels who occupy the place of finials are well designed.

The E. window, seen from within, surmounted by its rose, is admirable for its tracery: the high altar below it is a single slab of stone, 14 ft. long, supported on a front of niche-work filled with statuettes. The side screens and side altars are all more or less worthy of observation. There are numerous statues of saints curious for their costume. But the chief peculiarity of this church is the manner in which the sculptor who decorated it has rendered into stone the productions of the vegetable creation.

The roof of the church does not agree with the rest in splendour, and is evidently not completed conformably with the original plan.

The Gothic College on the N. side of the church was built by Anne of Brittany; she, as well as Francis I., were lodged in it when they came on a pilgrimage to Folgoat.

The country between St. Pol and Brest was formerly very dreary and poverty-stricken, but is now improved. The villages are prettily situated in the valleys, and many of the hills are topped by Gothic church-spires. The ch. at Gouesnon, about 4 m. short of Brest, has a fine carved porch lined with mortuary chests and skulls.

We fall into the great high road from Paris about a mile before entering $6\frac{1}{2}$  Brest (in Rte. 36).

ROUTE 41.

ST. MALO TO NANTES, BY DINAN AND RENNES.—ASCENT OF THE RANCE.

To Rennes direct 71 kilom. =  $44\frac{1}{2}$  Eng. m.; thence to Nantes 107 kilom. =  $66\frac{1}{2}$  Eng. m. Rly. by Rennes, avoiding Dinan, contemplated.

The détour by Dinan is 13 kilom. or 8 Eng. m. longer than the direct road.

St. Malo is described in Rte. 27.

A Steamer ascends the Rance daily, except when the locks are under repair, which is usually in Aug. or Sept., or the engine out of order—not an unfrequent occurrence. There is much beauty in the scenery, but no comfort in the voyage, except when the tide is up. It takes 3 hrs. There are 2 locks (barrages éclusés) to be passed midway, at Châtelier and at Ecluse, which are not pleasant: by means of these a depth of more than 6 ft. is always maintained in the Rance at Dinan.

Owing to the variation of the tides on this coast, amounting to 40 ft., the current of the Rance is desperately rapid, and the river fills and empties with remarkable celerity.

The steamer quits the harbour rounding the point on which stands (l.) the Fort de la Cité, then enters the inlet formed by the mouth of the Rance. The places passed in succession upon either bank are—

1. Dinart, a pretty watering-place, with good Inn, sea-bathing, &c., connected with St. Malo by steam ferry every hour. Diligences to Dinan daily.

1. St. Suliac, the prettiest village on the Rance.

1. Port St. Hubert, a little watering-place in a charming situation.

1. Plouer.

rt. Pleadihen.

Châtelier.

1. Tadens.

The river is confined between lofty precipices nearly all the way to Dinan, and may vary in breadth from  $\frac{1}{4}$  to  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. Sometimes expanding into wide reaches, it resembles a Scotch lake.

The high road from St. Malo to Dinan runs on the E. side of the Rance, but only now and then in sight of it, and is devoid of interest until it comes in view of Dinan.

The postmaster charges 4 kilom. extra on quitting St. Malo at high water, on account of the circuit round the port which his horses are obliged to make, instead of crossing direct to St. Servan, as is done when the tide is out.

35 Châteauneuf, a strong fort covering the high road to Rennes; here are remains of an old castle.

We here quit the direct road to Rennes by St. Pierre de Plesguin 13 kilom.; Hédé 20 kilom. (p. 141); Rennes 23 kilom. = 34 $\frac{1}{2}$  Eng. m.

Some of the prettiest scenery of the Rance may be seen by those who, travelling by land, choose to quit the high road and their vehicle about 8 m. short of Dinan, walk over to the river at l'Ecluse, and ascend its rt. bank.

Pursuing the post-road, the picturesque towers and spires of Dinan are seen crowning the summit of a rocky steep. A granite viaduct—a work worthy of the Romans—carries the carriage-road across the valley of the Rance nearly on a level with the town, so as to avoid the tedious and toilsome descent and ascent formerly incurred by travellers approaching from St. Malo or Paris. The arches are 10 in number; the principal piers, rising from the bed of the Rance, are 130 ft. high; the whole of solid masonry. The work was begun by Louis Philippe, but lingered until 1852 for want of funds.

18 Dinan.—Inns: H. de Bretagne, outside the gate, on the road to Brest; H. du Commerce, Place du Guesclin; H. des Voyageurs.

The country in which Dinan is placed is perhaps the most beautiful in Brittany. The situation of the town (8500 Inhab.) is very romantic, on the crown and slopes of a hill of granite, overlooking the deep and narrow valley of the Rance, flowing 250 ft. below it. The sides of the hill are excessively steep; but, notwithstanding, houses and streets have been built along the face of it to the water's edge. The Rue de Jersuel, which stretches down to the old bridge, is so precipitous as to be scarcely practicable except on foot, and it is even difficult for a pedestrian to descend its slippery pavement; yet this originally formed the only approach to the town on the side of St. Malo, through a pointed and ribbed Gothic gateway.

The modern road from St. Malo, after making a wide sweep and many turns under the old walls, in order to master the hill, enters the town by the Porte St. Louis close to the old and picturesque Castle, built about 1300, and often inhabited by Anne of Brittany, but now a prison. It was besieged by the Duke of Lancaster, 1389, and successfully defended by Du Guesclin against the English. It stands on the edge of the ravine on the outskirts of the town, and isolated from it by a deep fosse. The present entrance has been forced through a wall into the chapel, a finely vaulted chamber. A recess on one side, beside the altar, in which the lord or lady of the castle might hear mass without being seen, is called the oratoire of Anne of Brittany. The deep cornice of machicolations which crown the Donjon tower give it a very picturesque appearance, and there is a pleasing view from its top.

The Place Du Guesclin receives its name from that Breton hero, whose statue (in decayed plaster!) is placed in the midst of it; and from the circumstance of its having been the lists in which he fought and vanquished an English knight, "Thomas of Cantorbrie," whom he challenged to single combat for seizing treacherously, in time of truce between the two nations, his brother Oliver, 1359.

The Cathedral of St. Sauveur is an interesting edifice to the antiquary, in the Romanesque style, such as is more commonly met with in the S. of Europe than in the N. The crumbling nature of the granite of which it is composed gives it the appearance of greater antiquity than it really possesses. The lower part of the W. front and the S. side are probably of the 12th or even 11th centy.; the rest is modernised. The central portal, a round arch deeply recessed within mouldings and pillars (the two outer ones detached), is flanked on each side by blank arches, containing statues of the four Evangelists standing on lions, &c., under curious Romanesque canopies. From the wall above, the winged lion and ox, attributes of St. Mark and St. Luke, project in high relief. The buttresses against the S. wall are in the form of round attached pillars, or square pilasters surmounted by capitals. Nothing within the church merits notice except a black tasteless slab in the N. transept, bearing engraved on it and gilt a double-headed eagle, whose outspread wings are crossed by a bar, below which a quaint inscription, in gold letters, informs us that the heart of Bertrand Du Guesclin (spelt gue a q u i) reposes beneath it, while his body lies among those of kings at St. Denis. Now, at least, neither statement is any longer true. The slab was found among the ruins of the church of the Jacobins, now razed to the ground; and all traces of the heart, and of the tomb of the Lady Tiphaine, the wife of Du Guesclin, by whose side the heart was deposited, are gone: the body shared the fate of the royal ashes at the desecration of St. Denis in the Revolution. There is a still finer Church (? St. Etienne), of Norm. architecture, in the street leading from the Brest gate to the college.

The old town wall and watch-towers still remain; the streets in the older quarters abound in picturesque bits of architecture; and no spot in Brittany is better fitted to exercise the artist's pencil.

The Museum at the Mairie is very interesting and instructive for the geology and antiquities of the district.

The admirer of ancient domestic architecture should explore the narrow streets, with overhanging houses, the basements planted on pillars, each story projecting on corbels, which form the nucleus of the town. Arcades resting on carved granite pillars or wooden posts are very prevalent. Besides the steep Rue de Jersuel already mentioned, the Carrefour d'Horloge, so called from its lofty granite clock-tower, the Rue de la Vieille Poissonnerie (where is a house bearing the date 1366), and the Rue de la Croix (where the house of Du Guesclin and his lady Tiphaine is shown near the Hôtel de Ville), are the most remarkable in this respect.

The English settled in Dinan are now very numerous: they have a Chapel here, in which Service is performed on Sunday at 11 and 4½ p.m.

Medical men, MM. Guillard and Piedvache.

Mademoiselle Roussin keeps a tolerable circulating library.

Mrs. Barr's Boarding-house, Rue de St. Malo, affords English comfort and cleanliness. Families can be received for one or more days. It is kept by the widow of a captain of the 33rd. Charge 35 fr. a week. Dinners, table-d'hôte.

The Steamer from St. Malo ascends the Rance as far as the bridge of Dinan.

Diligences daily to Rennes and Le Mans, to Brest, to St. Malo, to Dol, and to St. Brieuc in 5 hrs.

On the outside of the town, under the old walls, now overgrown with ivy, while the ditches are converted into gardens, run agreeable Terraces, commanding beautiful views over the vale of the Rance. The Mont Dol and Mont St. Michel are visible, it is said, from some points. There are manufactories of fine linen and of sailcloth in and about the town.

Excursions almost without end, each varying from the other, may be made on horse and foot in this delightful neighbourhood. Donkeys may be hired.

a. At the distance of less than a mile from the Porte St. Louis, prettily situated in the bottom of a dell, through which a streamlet falls into the Rance, lies the village of Lehon, where are the ruins of a once celebrated abbey and a castle. The Abbey is entered by a fine circular archway within deep mouldings: the church, now roofless, is in the early Pointed style: it is called La Chapelle des Beaumanoir, from being the burial-place of the family of that name, whose tombs were broken open at the Revolution, and the remains dispersed, while their monumental effigies, originally placed in the niches on either side of the church, have been removed to the Mairie. There are 4 figures of warriors armed, and an ecclesiastic, all in high relief; the drapery well executed, the hands folded in prayer. One of them is said to have been the leader of the Bretons in the famous "Combat des Trente." (See Rte. 42.)

The steep wooded height above the village is crowned by the Castle, now reduced to a square enclosure of walls levelled down to the surface of the potato-field which they enclose, having round towers in the angles and centre of each face. It was taken by Henry II. of England, 1168. From this castle-crowned height a beautiful view opens out of the village and abbey at its feet, of the course of the Rance and the romantic valley through which it flows. The navigation above this is continued by means of a canal which unites the Rance with the Vilaine.

The walk may be very pleasantly extended from this along the slopes of the hills by paths across the fields behind the Hospice des Aliénés, towards the village of St. Esprit, where there is a curious Gothic crucifix of granite, with figures of the First and Second Persons of the Trinity, now much mutilated. The charm of this walk, however, is the fine view it presents of the antique towers and spires of Dinan, on the opposite side of the valley to the rt., and the insight it affords into the curious system of labyrinthine lanes by which a great part of Brittany is traversed. The country is well wooded, abounding especially in oaks, and each field is surrounded by hedges. The lanes by which it is intersected in all directions, owing to the soft and crumbling nature of the soil, differ little from ditches worn down 8 or 10 ft. below the surface of the fields, and vary in character between a pool or slough of mud and a mound of hard bare rock. A stranger is almost sure to lose his way among them, so intricate and numerous are their crossings. The country, seamed and grooved by these hollow ways, is like a rabbit-warren, and this thoroughly explains how the Chouans and Vendéans were able, among such fastnesses, to put to defiance so long the armies of the Republican Government.

b. The Château de la Garaye is a ruined mansion of the time of Francis I., exhibiting in its falling walls and towers some picturesque bits of architecture in the style of la Renaissance, intermixed with Gothic ornaments. The last owner, Claude Toussaint, Comte de la Garaye, quitting the gay world, converted this house into an hospital, while, with his wife, he devoted all his time and fortune to the care of the sick. To fit themselves for this duty they both studied medicine and surgery, and the lady* became an excellent oculist. The hospital was destroyed at the Revolution, which the benevolent founders fortunately did not live to see, having died 1755-7; but the monument over the graves even of these benefactors of the district, in the churchyard of Taden, did not escape destruction from the ruthless hands of the Republican spoilers.

c. d. The Castles of Montafilant and Guילו on the sea-coast near Plom-balay.

e. About 14 m. N.W. of Dinan is the Château of La Hunaudaye, an interesting old castle surrounded by rampart and ditch, and tolerably perfect, in the form of a pentagon. It is supposed to have been built in the 13th century, by Olivier de Tournemine. It is to be reached only by a cross road, intricate to find without a guide, passing through Corseul, site of Curiosolium mentioned by Cæsar, where Roman remains have been discovered.

* Mrs. Norton's fascinating poem on the Lady of Garaye has added the charm of poetical association to these ruins.

About 10 m. beyond the castle, on the coast, is St. Cast, where an ill-conceived expedition of the English was ignominiously defeated in attempting an inroad on Brittany in 1758, with a loss of 822 men, including 42 officers, killed and taken prisoners.

f. About 4 m. from Dinan, in the middle of a thick wood, are the ruins of the castle of the ancient family of Coëtguens, the last of whom was Duchess of Duras. Beneath are large dungeons.

From Dinan to Rennes it is worth while to take the route by Hédé, for the sake of the Ruined Castle, occupying a very picturesque site and commanding a beautiful view. In the chapel of Montmuran, near Hédé, Du Guesclin was armed a knight.

On the road from Dinan to Rennes the small town of Evrau is passed; it is situated on the Canal which joins the Rance to the Ille. The castle of the Beaumanoir here is now modernised. The country beyond is very tame; fields and hedgerows, and few villages. Country-houses, where they occur, lie at a distance from the road, without lodges or dressed grounds.

29 La Chapelle Chaussée.

24 Rennes, in Rte. 34.

The Railway from Rennes to Nantes, by Redon and Savenay, Rte. 44, by Brux Stat.

Guichenbourg Stat.

Messac Stat.

Beslé Stat.

Redon Junct. Stat., Rte. 42.

There is a road from Rennes to NANTES by Châteaubriant, 119 kilom.

==73 Eng. m., through a fine country.

18 Corps Nuds.

17 Thourie.

18 Châteaubriant (Inn: H. des Voyageurs, small, but clean), a town of 3673 Inhab., at the intersection of several roads. Its ancient walls remain nearly intact. The Castle was dismantled by Henri IV. and Louis XIII., but part of it, including a spiral stair leading to the chamber in which, according to tradition, Françoise de Foix was bled to death by her husband Jean de Laval (1525 or 37), are incorporated in the public offices. The Ch. of St. Jean de Béré is an interesting Romanesque structure; and altogether the town is worth a visit.

18 La Meilleraye.

About 1 m. on the l. of the road lies a Monastery of the Order of La Trappe. It was sold as national property 1793, and was repurchased 1816 by a Romanist Society of Trappists, who had settled at Lulworth in Dorsetshire, but their number has been diminished (to 25) since 1830, in consequence of their having mixed themselves up with the Chouan insurrection of that period.

19 Nort (Inn: homely, but very cheap) is a small town on the l. bank of the Erdre, which becomes navigable here for steamers. One plies daily between Nantes and Nort, to and fro. The Erdre is a river of considerable beauty, for 12 m. below this passing between low rocky hills covered with trees, and near Nantes ornamented with the country-houses of the Nantais. At one place it swells out into the form of a lake. On its rt. bank are Chapelle-sur-Erdre, and the castle of la Gâcherie, residence of the Princess Marguerite de Navarre, sister of Francis I., and authoress of the romances known by the title 'Heptameron.'

A little farther is the castle of Blue Beard (Gilles de Retz), whose story is told in Rte. 59.

19 Carquefon.

11 NANTES, in Rte. 46.

ROUTE 42.

MORLAIX TO NANTES, BY HUELGOAT, CARHAIX, PONTIVY, JOSSELIN, AND PLOERMEL.

This is a cross-country road, not a post-road, but traversed by a diligence. It is described because it includes several places of interest.

There is a good view of the picturesque town of Morlaix (Rte. 36) from the heights crossed on quitting it. The road gradually approaches and surmounts the chain of the Menez Arrés hills, through a desolate country chiefly moorland. The summit level is reached at Croix Court, which is also the boundary of the arrondissements of Morlaix and Châteaulin. About  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. beyond Le Mendi, a hamlet  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. from Morlaix, a road turns off on the rt. to Huelgoat (4 m. further). Inn: H. de Bretagne, comfortable, but high charges. Huelgoat is a town of 1200 Inhab., prettily placed on a tarn or lake, in a remote and thinly-peopled district celebrated for its Mines of lead containing silver mixed with it. They are situated about  $1\frac{1}{4}$  m. from the town, in the midst of a picturesque valley, through which runs a rushing stream, concealed from view at one particular spot by an éboulement of colossal fragments of rocks.

The path to the mines is carried through thick woods by the side of a narrow canal or aqueduct, conveying water to move the machinery and the hydraulic pump by which the mine is kept dry. This machine is a masterpiece of mechanical skill, constructed by M. Juncker, an engineer of Alsace, and related to Cuvier. It well deserves the minute attention of all who take an interest in mining or machinery, and has been thought worthy of an eulogistic report, read to the Academy of Science by M. Arago. It has the force of 280 horses, and raises 3 cubic mètres 53 centièmes per minute, a height of 754 ft., effected by a column of water equal to 21 cubic inches falling from a height of 196 ft. It has been at work for many years night and day; its movements are free from the least irregularity or the slightest noise. It is entirely under ground, at a considerable depth below the surface. The process of separating the silver from the ores by amalgamation with mercury is also very curious. M. Juncker, who for many years directed these works, introduced considerable ameliorations on the Saxon method, by means of which large masses of very poor ores have been worked, which were formerly rejected; by this means the prosperity of the Huelgoat mines has increased much of late years. Permission to enter the mines is readily given by the resident director. The best time for visiting them is at six o'clock, when the gangs of miners are shifted, and the nightworking set relieve those who have toiled through the day. The descent is made by a bucket and rope. The vein of lead has been traced for more than  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile in a clay slate of the upper Silurian formation. The lead-ore (galena) is sent to Poulahouan to be smelted.

In the Church of Huelgoat is a curious reading-desk (lutrin) resting on a pedestal resembling the classic tripod, but of wood, each of the 3 sides ornamented with a figure in bas-relief of a classic character. On one is a man with long hair and a mace over his shoulder, with no other clothing than a short cloak; on another a young man in classic garb, bearing a torch in one hand and a dart in the other; on the third a female bearing a cup and vase, in the guise of a Bacchante. It has been well described by M. Freminville; but nothing is known of its origin or the meaning of its carvings.

The Ménage de la Vierge is a species of cave formed by fallen masses of granite rock, through which a small stream of black water and of unknown origin flows, in places out of sight, excavating the stone into basins and funnels. It is possible with a sure foot and steady head to descend into the gulf. Near this is a Roeking Stone (Pierre branlante).

The Cascades of St. Herbot are worth the walk to them, less on account of the waterfalls themselves than for the scenery of the little valley in which they lie, varied with dense woods and bare jutting rocks. The village Church, surmounted by a fine square tower on a height above, contains the tomb and effigy of the anchorite St. Herbot, some carved screen-work in the choir, and a roodloft of elaborate and beautiful workmanship in the style of the Renaissance. There are 2 painted windows of rich colour with the date 1556. It has a fine W. portal in the decorated style, but bearing the date 1516, an ogée arch ornamented with frizzled foliage, and a still more beautiful S. porch, but the statues are poor. Herbot is a veterinary saint, who cures the diseases of animals, provided a lock of the beast's hair be laid on his altar.

At Braniis in the parish of Locqueffret, about 6 m. from Huelgoat, at a distance from any village, surrounded by 3 or 4 hovels, is a fine large Church in the best style of Gothic art, surmounted by a spire, and internally adorned with carving in stone and wood, and with painted glass, now all going to decay. Guimiliau has a Church Calvary nearly as fine as that of Plou-gastel in the ch.-yard; and a remarkable font canopy of wood, carved with statuettes—the Baptism of our Lord, &c.—30 ft.-high (date 1675).

Poulahouan, on the direct road from Morlaix to Carhaix, contains other lead-mines, but inferior in extent and productiveness to those of Huelgoat. Here, however, are the smelting-houses in which the ore from both mines is reduced. The galleries of the mine have been driven horizontally  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile, and vertically more than 600 ft., in the Silurian rocks.

There is a direct road (15 m.) from Huelgoat to Carhaix (Inn: La Tour d'Auvergne; game very cheap; partridges 3d. a brace), a primitive, dull, and dirty town (2000 Inhab.) among the hills, in the midst of that most unsophisticated district of ancient Brittany, Cornouailles. It abounds in old houses, with projecting cornices and carved timber-work, and is inhabited by people as old-fashioned as their dwellings.

Here is shown the house in which La Tour d'Auvergne (Théophile-Malo Corret) was born, in 1743; who, stern republican as well as brave warrior, steadily refused rank, but died the "premier grenadier de France," in the battle-field on the banks of the Danube. A statue of him by the sculptor Marochetti is erected in the Place. In the Château de la Haye are preserved his heart, an early portrait, his sword, and his boots.

A little way out of the town on the road to Callac is an ancient structure, said to be a Roman aqueduct. There is also a Roman road which can be traced for more than a mile on the way to St. Gildas. Richard Cœur de Lion was defeated at Carhaix, 1197, by his rebellious vassals, the nobles of Brittany. Six high roads—to Brest, Morlaix, St. Brieuc, Vannes, Châteaulin, and Quimper—unite here.

A direct road leads from Carhaix to Lorient, over the high range of the Montagne Noire by Le Faouet (Inn: Lion d'Or, good fishing quarters). Not far from this is the beautiful but decayed Church of St. Fiacre, with carved wooden roodloft, &c.

The road to Pontivy and Vannes quits the Dépt. of Finisterre soon after leaving Carhaix, passes Rostréren (Dépt. Côtes du Nord), beyond which it crosses the Brest and Nantes Canal, and reaches

Pontivy, or Napoléonville (Inns: H. des Voyageurs; H. de la Grande Maison), an ancient town with old walls and gates, to which a new quarter was tacked on by Napoleon, who changed the name of the place to Napoleonville. At the restoration of the Bourbons this was dropped, but is now revived. The river Blavet, rendered navigable to the sea at Lorient, and the canal from Brest to Nantes, afford openings for some commerce. The Castle of the Dukes of Brittany is of ancient foundation, but the actual edifice was rebuilt 1485. It is very picturesque, but rapidly falling to ruin. The fine church tower and spire of St. Nicodème is  $2\frac{1}{2}$  lieues from Pontivy.

About 6 m. N. of the road to Josselin is Rohan, cradle of the noble family of that name, now a poor and insignificant village, but prettily situated. Of the Castle, now neglected by the princes its owners, scarcely a morsel of wall remains above the surface; the last fragments having been pulled down to build cottages with the stones.

Posting is established on the road between Pontivy and 34 Josselin.—Inn: Croix d'Or. The Castle of Josselin, an ancient feudal fortress, founded on a rock above the river Oest, was the residence of the famous Constable de Clisson, who added a donjon, now destroyed, to the building, and died here, 1407, in a chamber facing the river, still pointed out. The oldest parts are the round towers, on the outside, built of slate. The most remarkable portion of the building is the inner front, in the irregular but picturesque style of Gothic in its latest form, equivalent to our Elizabethan, and dating probably from the 16th centy. It is surmounted by pointed gables, and no two divisions correspond; the windows, surmounted by Gothic canopies, are interspersed with parapets of interlacing tracery, in the midst of which the words "à plus," the motto of the Rohans, to whom the castle still belongs, cut in letters of stone, are constantly recurring. From the initials A. V. with a coronet, it is supposed to have been built by Alain VIII. Vicomte de Josselin.

The Tomb of Olivier de Clisson, in the Ch. of Notre Dame, was violated at the Revolution, and the effigies of himself, and his wife Marguerite de Rohan, through whom he inherited the castle, were broken to pieces. Some mutilated fragments may be seen in the sacristy. A modern mausoleum has been erected, in execrable taste. Here is some good painted glass.

In the midst of a grove of firs, half way between Josselin and Ploermel, a modern obelisk marks the spot where the Combat des Trente took place. Here, if we may believe Breton poets and writers of modern date (for ancient authority is wanting for the event, and many have doubted whether it ever occurred), close to an oak, which has long since disappeared, called "chêne de mie voi," a battle is said to have been fought 1351, between 30 Bretons on the side of Charles de Blois, and 30 partisans of Jean de Montfort, consisting of 20 English, 4 Flemings, and 6 Bretons, there not being enough English on the spot to form the full complement of combatants. The challenge was given by Du Beaumanoir, the Breton leader of the garrison of Josselin, to his opponets, who composed part of the garrison of Ploermel, in consequence of an alleged infraction of a treaty by the latter. The English were led on by a knight whom the French call Brembro (? Pembroke), and after a very stout resistance were vanquished, chiefly owing to the death of their leader. The combat of the 30 is not mentioned in the oldest copies of Froissart, the contemporary chronicle of the wars of Brittany, and is doubted by Daru in his History; notwithstanding which the monumental obelisk erected since the Restoration, in the place of one destroyed at the Revolution, headed "Vive le Roi! Les Bourbons toujours!" gives a list of the names of the 30 Bretons engaged in it.

12 Ploermel, in Rte. 36.

15 Malestroit.—There is no posting from this place to Redon Stat., a town of 4500 Inhab., on the Vilaine, a tidal river up to this point, and navigable for vessels of considerable size, while the navigation is continued by locks above this to Rennes.

The Church, originally belonging to the Abbey, is a fine Gothic building with a semicircular E. end. The conventual buildings are turned into a college.

The Château de Beaumont, in the vicinity of the town, retains 3 towers of considerable antiquity attached to its modern constructions. There are extensive slate-quarries near this. Rly. to Nantes and Rennes.

19 Rozay.

24 Bout de Bois. We here enter Rte. 41.

14 Gesvres.

14 NANTES. (Rte. 46.)

ROUTE 44.

BREST TO NANTES, BY QUIMPER, AURAY, VANNES, AND LORIENT—EXCURSIONS TO CARNAC AND LOCMARIAKER.

307 kilom. = 191 Eng. m.

Railway open from Quimper to Nantes.

Diligence daily to Quimper until the rly. is finished. It is a finely constructed road, though hilly from Brest to Le Faou. Steamer up the Elorn, Brest to Landerneau—a charming voyage.

The high road from Brest to Châteaulin makes a great circuit in order to avoid the creeks jutting out of the Bay of Brest: it follows the Paris road to 20 Landerneau (Rte. 36), then turns abruptly S. to

[France.]

19 Faou, seated on a river which becomes all slime at low water. The costume of the people in this part of Brittany is such as was worn in England in the time of Charles I. and II.—slouched hats, trunk hose (bragou bras, i. e. brogues or breeks), very wide, and with many folds, the hair hanging down the men's backs, reminding one of the pictures in Isaac Walton. The black charcoal-burners thus attired have a very singular appearance. The women here wear a sort of cravat round their necks. The Pardon (§ 5), celebrated four times a year at Rumengol near Faou, is attended with very curious ceremonies.

From the high ground beyond Faou a pretty view is obtained on the rt.; the road, which is very hilly, next dips into a wooded and picturesque dell, at the bottom of which is a royal manufactory of gunpowder, called Pont de Puis. Another hill surmounted, and we reach the banks of the Châteaulin river at Port de Launay.

[A steamer runs in summer from Brest to Port Launay, 2 m. short of Châteaulin (3 hrs.), traversing the Rade de Brest through its entire length. For a general description of it, and of the vast range of batteries which defend it, see Rte. 36.

rt. The Pointe des Espagnols, the extreme projection of the peninsula of Quélern, and l. the Pointe de l'Armorique, both strongly defended by forts. During the wars of the Ligue, a Spanish force sent over to aid the Duc de Mercœur in his resistance to Henri IV. took possession of the point, and, intrenching themselves on it, completely commanded the entry of the roads. Their fort was at length captured by assault by Maréchal d'Aumont, assisted by 1800 English, commanded by Col. Norris, sent over by Queen Elizabeth, after an obstinate defence, and all within it were put to the sword—the French say, chiefly through the savageness of the English. The English formed the forlorn hope in scaling the breach; and here the veteran mariner Frobisher, the tamer of the Spanish Armada, got his death-wound.

The peninsula of Quélern, consumed on both sides by the ever-restless waves, exhibits a fringe of notched and jagged rocks, which, as they become undermined by the ocean, are constantly giving way. Immense fissures are formed every year in the ground above, and are followed by numerous landslips. These bare and exposed promontories, covered with heath and cut up and corroded by the waves, were the chosen site of the worship of the Druids, and abound in those curious Celtic remains called Druidic stones. (§ 4.)

1. The Bay of Daoulas, or "Double Murder," is so called from the slaughter of two saints by a pagan chief, which gave rise to an Abbey whose ruins still remain. They are chiefly of the 15th centy., with earlier portions in the round style. Near this are the quarries of the Kersanton stone, so much used for the churches of Brittany. (§ 5.)

rt. The steamer next entered the inlet of Châteaulin, bending round the projecting promontory Landevennec, on which are ruins of a church attached to a once celebrated Abbey, the Breton Chartreuse, which was destroyed at the Revolution, and its valuable charters and MSS. sent to Brest to be made into cartridges by the artillery.

The banks of the inlet, now contracting into a river, are picturesque, but the course of the stream is very winding.

At Port de Launay the voyage for steamers ends; the river Aulne being crossed by a weir and lock a short way above this, to render it navigable for barges as far as Châteauneuf, where the canal to Nantes commences; a diligence takes passengers on to Quimper.]

There are many slate-quarries on the banks of the river near to 19 Châteaulin.—Inn: Grande Maison; none good. A small, but not remarkable town, in a pretty, park-like valley, having a bridge over the Aulne, and an old castle in ruins on a rock behind it. At Pleyben, 7 m. E. of this, is a fine

Gothic Church, with a lofty tower and well-preserved sculptured portal, bearing inside of it statues of the 12 Apostles; the windows are adorned with painted glass. In the churchyard is a very curious Calvaire resting on 4 arches, on the sides and the top of which our Saviour's passion is represented in bas-reliefs and statues, more than 120 in number, not ill drawn, the drapery especially. The costume is that of the 16th centy., yet the date affixed to the monument is 1650.

Quimper may be reached from Châteaulin in about 2½ hours. The road here quits the valley of the Aulne by a steep ascent 3 m. long; from the very top of which, an open moorland tract, you still look down upon Châteaulin and its valley. This ridge is called the Black Mountain. It was near this part of the road that a party of intrusive clergy and bishops, appointed by the Revolutionist government, proceeding to a confirmation at Brest, were stopped, dragged out of the coach by a party of Chouans, and murdered on the highway.

Quimper Stat. (Corentin).—Inn: *H. del'Epée, good, and the only good one.

Quimper is capital of the Dépt. Finisterre, though it has only 11,000 Inhab., while Brest has 54,000. It bears the stamp of antiquity as much as any town in Brittany, and is still warty surrounded by the walls and patch-towers erected for its defence by Pierre de Dreux, who, though a bishop, was also a great captain in his time. The Cathedral rears its stately W. front, with a deep sculptured portal, rich in foliage, like that at Folgoat, overlooked by the equestrian statue of King Gradlon, between two handsome spired towers, rebuilt 1858, on one side of the market-place. It is a large and fine edifice, begun 1424, and has a polygonal apse, with outer aisles, side chapels, and a chancel inclining to the N., not on a line with the nave. The interior is of a stately height; has a fine trefoil-headed triforium, and a clerestory retaining some good old glass; in the S. aisle is a curious grated niche. The pulpit is carved and gilt, good Renaissance work.

The best and most modern houses line a quay on the rt. bank of the Odel, which flows through Quimper in the form of a canal. On its l. bank stands the Préfecture, fronting a sort of Champ de Mars, behind which a tall and steep hill rises, covered with a hanging wood, cut into terraces and zigzag paths, forming an agreeable public walk, leading to the top, whence there is a fine view of the river, which expands greatly below the town.

Quimper is an agreeable residence, and some trout-fishing might be had in the neighbouring streams: the surrounding country is very pretty and the inhabitants very primitive. A pardon or fête, or even the Saturday market, is well worth seeing:

[For those who have time and inclination, there remain to be visited near Quimper the picturesque manoir of Coat Billy, a little to the rt. of the road to Châteaulin (date 1517); the elegant and well-preserved chapel of La Mère de Dieu, 16th cent.; the Moustoir, an ancient fortified mansion on the way to Concarneau.

A good road has been made from this by Audierne (H. de Commerce—clean) to the Pointe, or Bec du Raz, a storm-beaten promontory, surmounted by a lighthouse, which, though nearly 270 ft. above the sea, is constantly covered by the spray during tempests. The spot has little grandeur, but a savage wildness; the sea around is always tempest-tossed, and the shore of the Baie des Trépassés, so called from the number of dead bodies washed upon it, is perpetually covered with wrecks. The flat, bare, rocky peninsula of Penmarch abounds in Celtic remains. Near Soc'h is a Druidic parallelogram of upright stones, and the finest dolmen in Finistère, consisting of 16 vertical slabs supporting two horizontal or tabular stones. (§ 4.)

The road out of Quimper to Quimperlé has been carried round the flanks of the hills, instead of over their tops; but pedestrians should take the coast road, passing through the unique old walled town of **Concarneau* (Inn: H. des Voyageurs—fair), a great station for the sardine fishery. Mail cart to Quimperlé. Pontaven is another very primitive Breton village on the road.

Quimperlé (no good Inn; the Abbot's house now serves as a hostel), seated amidst hills, on a brawling river, the Elle. It is a pretty town. 5300 Inhab.

The large mass of building on one side of the Place, now serving as Mairie, &c., was originally a convent of Benedictines, attached to which, behind, is the Ch. of Ste. Croix, a building calculated to interest the antiquary and architect, from its age (10th or 11th cent.?), and its form, a rotunda surmounted by a dome with 4 projecting apses, one of which has been modernised. The arrangement of the central piers, concave inwardly, convex outwardly, the pilasters attached to them, the narrow, loop-holed, roundheaded windows high up in the wall, all mark its antiquity. 3 flights of steps lead up to the altar, beneath which is a curious and still more ancient crypt, entered from the outside. It contains the grave of St. Gurlot: the Bretons thrust their arms through a hole in his tombstone, in order to be cured of rheumatism. Above the main entrance to the church is a bas-relief of good execution, of the age of Francis I., representing the 4 Evangelists and the Theological Virtues.

There is another church (St. Michel) on the top of the hill, its groundwork Romanesque, with additions of the 12th and 15th cents.]

The rly. leaves Quimperlé on the l., and proceeds to Rosporden Stat., on the borders of a large pond.

The Rly. is carried from Rosporden to Lorient Stat. (H. de France is a good Inn; H. des Etrangers). There is nothing remarkable in Lorient, a dull modern town of straight streets and 25,000 Inhab., save its Dockyard, which is not readily shown to an Englishman, and which he need not care to see, as it is much inferior to those of his own country. The town is strongly fortified, and stands in the angle between two creeks, one of which, the estuary of the Scorff, forms the port militaire, the other the port marchand. They unite below the town, where they are met by the estuary of the Blavet from the E., and expand into the Roads; but as the dockyard occupies nearly the entire margin, and is surrounded on all sides by a high wall, all view of the water is excluded from the town, and contributes nothing to remove the monotonous dulness of its dirty streets. An excellent bird's-eye view of the dockyard may be obtained from the top of the tower of the parish church.

At the entrance of the Dockyard is the house of the Préfet Maritime. The adjacent buildings are part of those erected by the "Compagnie des Indes Orientales," whose establishment here, 1666, converted into a town a previously obscure village. The company was dissolved 1770. Law of Lauriston, the South Sea schemer, occupied the house which is now the Préfecture. Near to it stands a narrow look-out tower 180 ft. high, overtopping all other buildings, affording a view of the whole roadstead and of the coast far and wide; near this is a small astronomical observatory. Lorient is exclusively a building dock; there are no bagnes nor convicts here. There are 15 or 16 building-slips (cales) here and on the opposite side of the creek. A fine dry dock was finished 1862. A Fonderie near to the shed for masting vessels, 2 large mast-houses, and very extensive workshops, with steam-engine and machinery for making iron vessels, have been erected.

The roads open out at the lower extremity of the creek which forms the port: they are partly dry at low water. Some way down is the Ile St. Michel, covered with the yellow buildings of the Lazaret, and beyond it, on a projecting point, the fortress of Port Louis, commanding the entrance of the harbour, mounting 500 cannon(?). The Emp. Louis Napoleon was shut up in it after the Strasburg affair.

Steamer from Lorient to Nantes, and vice versâ, touching at Belle Isle, a barren rock, which was captured by the English, under General Hodson and Admiral Keppel, in 1761. A part of the fortress is used as a prison for political criminals.

The estuary of the Scorff is crossed by a beautiful Iron Bridge, from the forges of Creuzot, on leaving Lorient.

The road to Hennebon passes out of the Dépt. Finistère into the Morbihan.

The river Blavet is crossed by an iron suspension bridge to reach

Hennebon Stat. (H. du Commerce; tolerable), an antique town, 4477 Inhab., prettily situated on its l. bank, once the chief port of Morbihan. It is one of the chief corn-markets in Brittany. Its name must be familiar to all who have read Froissart, through the noble defence which it made in the succession war of Brittany 1342, during two sieges sustained by Jeanne de Montfort against the armies of Philippe de Valois and Charles of Blois. The capture and imprisonment in Paris of Jean de Montfort would have ruined his cause in Brittany but for his heroic countess, who, possessing the courage of a man and the heart of a lion, threw herself into Hennebon, strengthened its works, filled it with provisions, and animated the courage of the garrison and inhabitants to resist to the last extremity. To marshal troops, to lead them to the onset, to fight hand to hand armed cap-à-pied with sword and casque, to manage a war-horse with the skill of the most adept cavalier, to preside in council, or dictate treaties; such were the accomplishments of this noble dame. Several times did she boldly sally forth at the head of her troops to assail the enemy, and on one occasion set fire to his camp; and when the besiegers turned round to defend it in such numbers as to cut off her retreat into the town, she forced her way through them and effected her escape to Auray, whence, after beating up the country around for 5 days, she returned in triumph to Hennebon with a force augmented from 300 to 600 men, and entered the gates in safety. At length the last extremity arrived; provisions were nearly exhausted, her counsellors advised surrender, and articles of capitulation were drawn up. She was forced unwillingly to consent to yield, provided at the end of 3 days succour did not arrive from England. On the eve of the 2nd day, as she was gazing from her watch-tower, she perceived the English fleet, which had been detained by contrary winds, entering the mouth of the Blavet full sail, bringing the brave knight Sir Walter de Manny, with a strong force of English knights and archers, and plenty of provisions. All thoughts of surrender were now abandoned; and, after one or two successful sorties, the siege was raised. Two years after this, Edward III. in person landed here with an army of 12,000, which laid siege to Vannes. In 1375, however, the town was taken by Du Guesclin, and the English garrison all put to the sword, except the commanders Wisk and Prior, who were reserved for ransom. The only relics now remaining in the town from that period of bloodshed are a portion of the town-wall on the side of the river, and a pointed gateway which led to the castle, between 2 very massive round towers, now a prison. The Church is said to have been built by the English; it is unfinished, and only remarkable for a lofty and elegant portal, recessed and fringed, not unlike that at Harfleur, surmounted by a crocketed steeple. There are some picturesque old houses here.

[About 1 m. W. of Baud, a poor town 15 m. N. of Hennebon, is the statue called Venus of Quinipily, standing in the garden of an old ruined château of that name. It is of granite, 8 ft. high, coarsely worked and badly designed; the arms are crossed in front over a piece of drapery like a stole, descending halfway down the thighs; in other respects it is naked. Nothing is known concerning its origin, and the conjectures are very vague. One writer supposes, from its Egyptian character, that it was a Gallic Isis, and it is called Venus only in the inscriptions on the pedestal set up 1689. This much is certain, that down to the 17th centy. it was worshipped with foul rites, and is even now looked on with superstitious veneration by the peasantry.]

A dreary and monotonous country of moor and heathland is crossed on quitting Hennebon to reach

Auray Stat. (Inns: Post, good, landlord obliging and intelligent; Pavillon d'en Haut, good cuisine), a town of 3734 Inhab., on the Auray; in nowise remarkable, but from its position it is the best starting-point for a visit to the Celtic antiquities of Carnac and Locmariaker. Cabriolets may be hired for 8 or 10 fr. to go and return, from the landlord of the Post.

The Castle of Auray, no part of which is now standing, is said to have been founded by King Arthur. A battle fought under its walls, 1364, settled the succession to the dukedom of Brittany in favour of young De Montfort, son-in-law to King Edward III., who owed the victory to his English allies, led on by the brave John Chandos. In the opposite ranks fought Du Guesclin, who was made prisoner by Chandos, and Olivier de Clisson, who lost an eye in the battle. Charles de Blois was slain in the thickest of the fight, and there fell on his side not less than 5000 men, while the English lost a very small number.

St. Anne d'Auray is a celebrated pilgrimage church 3 m. from the town, frequented usually by 6000 devotees from all parts of Brittany in the month of July, but not otherwise remarkable. It is a modern and not handsome building.

In another direction, about a mile from Auray, is the nunnery of the Chartreuse, occupied by the Sœurs de la Sagesse, who instruct a school for the deaf and dumb. Attached to their church is the "Champ des Martyrs" and the Expiatory Monument, erected by the Bourbons to the memory of the 950 unfortunate Emigrés and Royalists who composed the ill-advised expedition to Quiberon, 1795, and who either fell there, or were shot by the Republicans on the banks of the Auray, at the spot marked by a Grecian temple not far distant from the Chartreuse. Another monument, in the church, is not a work of merit, either in general design or in the execution of the bas-relief intended to adorn it. It bears the names of those who fell.

The village of Brech was the birth-place of George Cadoudal, a leader of the Chouans. Morbihan was the centre of their insurrection.

[The Excursion to Carnac and Locmariaker may be made in one day, provided the traveller can walk 6 or 8 m., the only mode of passing between these two places being on foot. a. If the wind be favourable he may hire a boat for 8 or 10 francs and descend the Auray to Locmariaker. Let him seek out the pilot Joseph, an old sailor and good boatman. It is a pleasant voyage of a little more than an hour. If he visit Gâvr Innis (N.B. in this case take candles and matches), 1 or 1½ hr. more is required.

b. Or, the order of proceeding may be reversed, thus: from Auray, a pleasant walk or drive of 9 m. to Plouharnel. (H. de Commerce, a comfortable Inn; landlord intelligent; has a collection of Celtic antiquities, gold torque, flint knives). ¼ m. off are 2 well-preserved dolmens. Here you may sleep. Next day walk 2 m. to Carnac, and thence to Locmariaker, 8 m. Here hire a boat for Gâvr Innis, Auray, or Vannes, where you may take the train.

In sailing up or down the estuary of the Auray you pass

rt. The Château de Plessis Kaer, a Gothic castle, with additions of the time of Francis I., and the ruins of another, called Rosnareu. Near this the boatmen assert that ruins of the piles of a bridge, which they attribute to Cæsar, may be discovered at low water in the bed of the river.

rt. A perfect Château, called Ker-entrec. The river now widens out, and a little farther on we enter

The Morbihan (Little Sea), an inland sea or archipelago from which the department is named, so thickly beset with islands that the common belief assigns them a number equal to the days of the year. The shores on all sides have a most jagged outline, fringed with capes, creeks, and inlets; they are of granite, barely covered with the scantiest vegetable soil, supporting a growth of barren heath; very often the surface is mere bare rock. 2 narrow peninsulas or arms, projecting from the E. and W., separate this gulf from the sea, allowing only a narrow passage between them. This archipelago is very difficult to navigate—a perfect labyrinth of islands, separated by intricate passages which only the experienced navigator can thread. The land rises but little above the sea; it is sterile in the extreme; the peasantry are miserably poor, and barely win a scanty crop from a soil whose proper productions seem heath and furze. Yet this melancholy and mysterious district contains several Druidical remains.

The island of Gâvr Innis, or Gaffr' né (Isle of Goats), nearly opposite Locmariaker, may be visited on the way thither, diverging a mile or 2 to the E. It is "an island of granite about ¼ m. long, of granite covered with turf, in which rises a tumulus 30 ft. high and 300 in circumference. It is traversed by a subterranean passage or cromlech, consisting of 13 and 14 vertical props at the sides and 10 cap-stones. Some of them are covered with engraved lines forming patterns somewhat resembling the tattooing of a New Zealander."—Lukis. The only living objects represented are 3 serpents. On one of the stones are cut 2 stone loops like handles of a shield; to which, it is said, victims were bound. L'Isle Longue contains a choked-up cromlech, and L'Isle aux Moines a dolmen grooved as if to receive a human sacrifice. To get to these islands take a boat from Locmariaker. The Auray boatmen will go over for an extra fee.

Locmariaker is a poor village. No proper Inn, but good boats and steady boatmen for Gâvr Innis, Auray, or Vannes. It stands on a heathy promontory projecting between the ocean and the Gulf of Morbihan, but is deserted by the tide at low water, so that one must land at a sort of pier a little to the S. of the village, near the Mont Hellu, a mound of stones or galgal, about ¾ m. N. W. of the village. There is another similar mound to the S. E. called butte de Cæsar. The most interesting of the Celtic monuments lie to the N. of the village, between it and the Mont Hellu. Contiguous to the last house is a menhir 25 ft. long, overthrown like every other in this district; a little to the l. on an eminence is a dolmen, the top stone of which is 12 to 15 ft. square, and in parts 3 ft. thick. Still farther to the N. lies prostrate and broken into 4 fragments the largest Menhir known; it measures just 64 ft. in length, and 5 or 6 ft. in height as it lies. It is difficult to imagine by what force so huge a mass can have been snapped short across, with such clean fractures. Some have attributed its fall to lightning. Near to it is another dolmen called Dol ar Marchant, the Merchant's Table, which seems larger than any other in the neighbourhood; it consists of 2 table-stones, one of them 16 ft. by 12, supported on 3 vertical ones; it is possible to creep under it, and remark the singular figures cut on its under surface. Between it and the Mont Hellu, a vast heap of cinders is said to have been found, and on the Mont Hellu a subterraneous cromlech has been lately cleared out.

The monuments of Carnac and the Morbihan Archipelago bear more resemblance in form and locality to those of the Orkney Islands than to Stonehenge. Some have supposed them to have been connected with the worship of the serpent.

Locmariaker (i. e. place of the Virgin Mary) is supposed to occupy the site of the ancient Dariorigum, the capital of the Venetes: its position agrees with Caesar's description of their "oppida in extremis linguis, promontorisque posita," and some substructures of houses laid bare near the village are attributed to the Romans.

[The peninsula of Rhuys, which, with that of Locmariaker, form, as it were, the natural piers separating the Sea of Morbihan from the Atlantic, contains the following objects of curiosity. 1. Le Grand Mont, called also la Butte de Tumiak, situated about 4 m. from Sarzeau, an obscure little town, but memorable as the birthplace of the author of Gil Blas. It is the largest tumulus existing in France, 100 ft. high and 300 in circumference, and is planted near the extremity of the promontory; a low, dark passage admits the visitor, on hands and knees, to a small chamber. 2. The ruined ch. of the Abbey of St. Gildas de Rhuys, remarkable because it was the retreat of Abelard in 1125, who narrowly escaped poisoning at the hands of the refractory and ill-conditioned monks, whose dissolute manners he wished to repress. The remains consist of a modern nave, and a very ancient choir in the Romanesque style, terminating at the E. end in 3 semicircular chapels. The walls of the transept are partly of herring-bone masonry. The date of the oldest part of the building is probably 1038. The tomb of the saint is pointed out; an ancient font deserves notice. St. Gildas is about 21 m. from Vannes. On the way to St. Gildas from Vannes, 3, the Castle of Succinio may be visited. It is a fine and perfect feudal fortress, built 1260 by John the Red, Duke of Brittany. It has nearly the form of a pentagon flanked by 6 round towers. It was the birthplace of the Constable de Richemont, who defeated the English at Formigny.]

Between Carnac and Locmariaker, a walk of 8 m. (2 hrs.), a deep frith of the sea penetrates far inland, and is crossed half way by a ferry; a good road has now been made to the ferry and thence to Carnac. The pedestrian need not go through the village of Carnac.

The Ferry of Cherispere over this inlet is prettily situated, and commands a view of the little port of La Trinité in the bay of Crach.

A little to the W. of the ferry, near some salt-works, at the bottom of a shallow dell, is a rude monument to mark the grave of a royalist, shot on the spot, 1801.

The approach to Carnac is marked by the prominent Cairn, or Tombelle de St. Michel, so called from the chapel surmounting it. It is a cone of loose stones artificially heaped together, standing at the E. extremity of the great army of rocks of Carnac, of which it commands a view, as well as of the sea and promontory of Quiberon.

Carnac. Inns: H. Rio; H. des Voyageurs, an humble auberge.

The great Celtic Monument of Carnac, the most extensive in France, is situated about  $\frac{3}{4}$  m. from this remote village, and is traversed by the road from Auray. The wild heath on which these stones were once placed has now become nearly all cultivated. Many of the stones have been removed, many more enclosed in hedges, and the effect is now altogether marred. A few years ago however there stood on a dreary heath rude blocks set on end, angular, showing no marks of polish, and hirsute with the long moss which has covered the hard surface of the granite, and marks the length of time they must have stood in their present position. At first sight it is difficult to distinguish any order, so many are overthrown, and the gaps left in the lines by depredations are so numerous and wide; indeed, every house and every wall in the vicinity seems to have been built out of this ready quarry. The great mass of the stones extends between 2 windmills. They are arranged in 11 lines, forming 10 avenues, with a curved row of 18 stones at one end, touching at its extremities the two outside rows.

The ranks are best preserved, and the stones are highest, near the farm called Menec. There were, it is said, not less than 12,000 stones, blocks of the granite which forms the basis of the country, and which is barely covered with soil, and in many places projects naked above it. None exceed 18 ft. in height, and a very large proportion are cubical masses not more than 3 ft. high. They give one the idea of a regiment of soldiers, and the tradition of the country respecting their origin is, that St. Cornely (Cornelius), hard pressed by an army of Pagans, fled to the sea-shore, but, finding no boat to further his escape, uttered a prayer, which converted his pursuers into stones. Of the numerous theories invented by learned antiquaries to account for the origin and object of these stones, several are not less absurd nor more probable than the legend just mentioned; none are satisfactory. The opinions perhaps least unworthy of consideration would suppose either that it was a burial-place on the site of some great battle-field, and that each stone marked a grave, or that it was a great temple dedicated to serpent worship. It was probably connected with some of those rites of initiation which formed part of the Druidical religion, and were derived from the same source as the Greek Mysteries.

At Erdevan, about 8 m. W. of Carnac, and again at St. Barbe, between Carnac and Erdevan, there are similar assemblages of stones, but not so numerous. Some have maintained that these three systems of rude pillars were once united, but there is no evidence of this. The piles of stones invariably follow the same direction from E. to W. One can scarcely see Carnac without comparing it with Stonehenge; and it must be admitted that, in spite of the vast multitude of stones, the few and gigantic masses of Salisbury Plain are far more impressive than the long array of the petrified army on the heath of Morbihan. At Carnac there are no cross-stones raised on the top of the upright slabs, as at Stonehenge.

The Peninsula of Quiberon stretches 10 m. S. into the sea, a little to the W. of the village of Carnac. Its name is associated with melancholy recollections of the ill-contrived and ill-executed expedition, consisting of 6000 French emigrants in the pay of England, who were landed there from a British fleet 1795, and, after a futile attempt to break through the Republican armies opposed to them, were for the most part driven into the sea by General Hoche. The surprise, by Hoche, of Fort Penthièvre, which guards the neck of the peninsula, and of which the émigrés had made themselves masters on first landing, decided the fate of the expedition. Sombreuil, their brave leader, when expelled from it, drew up his little band on the farthest extremity of the sand, where they made the most determined resistance, so as to call down the admiration of their antagonists and fellow countrymen. Humbert, the republican general, advanced with a flag of truce, and promised that their lives should be spared if they laid down their arms. A storm prevented the British fleet rendering them any assistance; one corvette alone for a time checked the Republicans by its destructive fire, and a few of the fugitives were brought off in the boats of the squadron; but many, including women and children, perished in the waves. 950 unfortunate men, most of them persons of rank or station, who capitulated on promise of amnesty, with their commander, Sombreuil, were, in spite of that, conveyed to Auray as prisoners of war, and shot there. The descent on Quiberon was an example of the danger of disgrace and failure which England runs by "waging a little war."]—

Rail, Auray to Nantes.

There is nothing to note between Auray and Vannes Stat.—Inn: Hôtel du Commerce, tolerable; H. de France; H. de la Croix Verte. This town, capital of the Dépt. of Morbihan (population 13,600), is built at the extremity of a narrow inlet, branching out from the Gulf of Morbihan, and about 15 m. from the open sea. It possesses in an eminent degree the character of antiquity which distinguishes most Breton towns, in its narrow streets, overhanging houses, massive town walls and gates, but has no curiosities to detain the stranger. The portal of carved Kersanton stone, the towers of the Cathedral, and a tower in the centre of the town, erroneously called Tour du Connetable, because Olivier de Clisson was said to have been confined in it 1387, are the only buildings worth mentioning. 3 or 4 old convents, suppressed at the Revolution, now serve for barracks and similar purposes.

The castle into which the Constable de Clisson was entrapped, under pretence of asking his opinion of the new fortifications, by John (IV.) de Montfort, who then locked the door upon him, and loaded him with chains, was the Château de l'Hermine, which was razed to the ground in the 16th centy. Clisson owed his life to the forbearance of the governor, Bazvalan, who (like King John's Hubert) pretended compliance with De Montfort's order to murder his prisoner, but, when his master's anger cooled, informed him of his captive's safety. Clisson was not released, however, without paying a heavy ransom.

A sailing-boat with a favourable wind will cross the Sea of Morbihan to Locmariaker, on the way to Carnac in about 2½ hours; but as no conveyances are to be obtained at either of these places, most persons will prefer the land journey via Auray.

Excursion through the Promontory of Rhys.

The pedestrian may walk by the Castle of Succinio (see above) to Sarzeau (where is an humble Inn), St. Gildas Abbey, and back to Sarzeau for the night; next day by Butte de Tumiac to Port Navalo, whence cross in a boat to Gâvr Innis and Locmariaker.

The railway from Vannes to Nantes turns away from the sea and the line of the old road, passing through a country abounding in heath and broom, to Elven Stat. See ruins of the Castle of Elven, one of the best preserved fortresses of the middle ages in Brittany, built on the model, it is said, of some castle in Syria. It stands in a wood, surmounted by a lofty octagonal keep-tower. Young Henry of Richmond (afterwards Henry VII.) was shut up in it for many years, along with his uncle the Earl of Pembroke, by Francis II., Duke of Brittany. Fugitives from their own country after the battle of Tewkesbury, they were driven by a storm on the coast of Brittany, and Henry remained a prisoner nearly 15 years, until 1484, when, escaping into France, he accepted the invitation of friends in England to supplant the tyrant Richard III. In the churchyard is a curious Ossuary.

Redon Junct. Stat. (See Rte. 42).
Railway to Rennes (Rte. 34).

[Omnibus to

Roche Bernard, on the l. bank of the Vilaine, which is there crossed by a Suspension Bridge of iron wire, supported on 2 piers of granite masonry, each approached by 3 lofty arches of granite. The opening between the two points of suspension measures 626 ft., the elevation of the roadway above high-water mark 108 ft. In its general appearance it resembles the Menai bridge; it was constructed under the superintendence of M. Leblanc, the engineer des Ponts et Chaussées. It was completed 1839, and subjected to the trial of its strength which the French law requires, by placing 2 rows of 115 carts and carriages heavily laden on the carriage-way, and of 117 barrows filled with stones on the footpath, which it stood without the least symptom of weakness.

The road leading to and from the bridge is well engineered, and leaves the town of Roche Bernard on one side. Inn: Hôtel Silvestre, tolerable, on the new road,  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. S. of the bridge.]

Beyond Redon the country is very dreary, with few hills. The railway crosses the Vilaine river by an iron bridge, 45 yds. span.

Sévérac Stat.

St. Gildas Stat. l. ruined convent of St. G.

Pont Château Stat., through tunnel.
Savenay Junct. Stat. Here a line diverges to St. Nazaire (Rte. 47). At Savenay, in December, 1793, the last relics of that daring army of Vendéan peasants, which had crossed the Loire 6 weeks before 80,000 strong, now reduced to 8000 or 10,000, made a last stand against the Republicans, but their obstinate bravery was of little avail against overpowering numbers. They fought long after their ammunition was exhausted, even women taking part in the combat, but were at length cut to pieces or made prisoners, 3000 only escaping back into La Vendée.

Glimpses of the estuary of the Loire are seen on the rt.

Cordemais Stat.

St. Etienne-de-Monluc Stat.

Basse Indre Stat.

Near Santron is the Château de Buron, one of the residences of Madame de Sévigné.

Chantenay Stat.

The approach to Nantes is marked by the number of neat country houses.

23 NANTES (in Rte. 46).

ROUTE 46.

LE MANS TO NANTES, BY ANGERS—RAIL.

185 kilom. = Eng. m.; 4 trains daily in 4 hrs.

Railway to Angers Stat. down the valley of the Sarthe.

Le Mans is described in Rte. 34.

Voivres Stat.

La Luzé Stat.

Noyen Stat.

Maize begins to grow to the S. of Le Mans, but nowhere to the N. of that place.

Juigné Stat.

Sablé Stat. (Inn: Croix Verte, comfortable and moderate), "a beautiful little town on the Sarthe, with a château built by M. de Torcy, foreign minister in the reign of Louis XIV. (1696-1715), and nephew of Colbert, still in the Torcy family. Near Sablé are immense marble quarries. Anthracite coal is worked La Ragotière."—L. About 2 m. beyond Sablé,  $\frac{1}{2}$  an hour's walk by the river side, is the Abbey of Solesmes, purchased since 1830 and re-occupied by a society of Benedictine monks, who devote themselves to study in this picturesque retreat. The church is remarkable for 4 groups of statues, called Les Saintes de Solesmes, enclosed in niches, each surrounded by a rich framework of architecture and sculpture, in a style of Gothic approaching to the Renaissance. The groups of statuary represent, 1. The Entombment of our Saviour; the head of Christ and the figure of the Magdalen are particularly well executed. Above the recess rises an ogee arch decorated with the richest foliage of thistles and mallows. It bears the date 1496. 2. Christ disputing with the Doctors; the figures, in the dress of the 15th centy., are somewhat coarse, reminding one of a Dutch painting. 3. On the l. of the choir, the Communion of the Virgin. 4. Death of the Virgin, in the N. transept. These sculptures have been variously attributed to Italian artists, and to the Frenchman Germain Pilon, but without authority. An altar in the S. transept has been lately fitted up with fragments of other statuary found among the ruins of the abbey. The stalls in the choir, carved with the genealogy of Christ, are worth notice.

Morannes Stat.

Etriche—Châteauneuf Stat.

Turée Stat.

Econflant Stat.

The Loir 6 m. below this falls into the Sarthe.

On approaching Angers the road passes near some of the vast quarries of slate, which forms a principal production of the district.

ANGERS Stat.—Inns: H. d'Anjou, clean and good, in the Champ de Mars, beautiful situation; superb salle à manger;—Cheval Blanc, in the heart of the town, also good;—H. du Faisan;—H. le Roy.

Angers, chef-lieu of the Dépt. Maine et Loire, is situated on the Maine, called Mayenne in the upper part of its course, a little below the junction of the Sarthe with it, and about 5 m. above the influx of the Maine into the Loire. It has 46,000 Inhab. Modern improvements, the formation of a broad quay along the l. bank of the river, the substitution of tall, regular white stone houses, like those of the Rue Rivoli, for the old gable-faced cottage-built structures, have greatly innovated upon the thoroughly antique character which Angers previously bore. A broad formal boulevard, planted with young trees, replaces the old fortifications,—

"The flinty ribs of this contemptuous town;
 . . . those sleeping stones,
 That as a waist did girdle it about,
 By this time from their fixed beds of lime
 Have been dishabited." King John.

The "strong barred gates" are all down, and only one tower remains near the upper bridge of those "saucy walls." Black Angers, as it was called from the sombre hue of its buildings of slate, is now like an old coat with a modern trimming: but plunge into the midst of its labyrinth of buildings, scale its steep and narrow streets, many of them inaccessible to wheel carriages, and you will find traces enough of the Angers of olden time, the capital of Anjou, and residence of its dukes. In few towns of France will the antiquary, artist, or architect find a greater number of interesting antique churches and houses than here.

Most of the old houses are timber-framed, their fronts gable-faced, the roofs, and often fronts, covered with scales of slate, which abounds in the neighbourhood and forms the common building-stone, and many of the door and corner posts, the joists and cornices, bear rich Gothic carvings. The most venerable relic of antiquity is the old Castle, at the water-side, close to the suspension bridge. Its walls were originally washed by the waters of the Maine, until its moat was partly filled to give place to the new quay. If its size and preservation be jointly considered, it is perhaps the finest feudal castle in France. 17 colossal towers surround it; they are 70 to 80 ft. high, close set along the walls, shaped like dice-boxes, thick below, narrow waisted, and having bands of white stone let into the black rough slate of which they are built, so as to give them the appearance of being hooped. A broad and deep ditch isolates the castle from the rest of the town; it is entered by a massive gateway under a perfect portcullis, and within its portal is the furnace where lead and pitch were melted for the benefit of invaders. This castle was begun by Philippe-Auguste, and completed by Louis IX. It serves at present for a prison, barrack, and dépôt of powder. The part which served as a palace of the Dukes of Anjou, overlooking the river, is now in ruins, but shows the architecture of the Renaissance. It stood between the high tower called Du Moulin, because it once supported a windmill, and that called Du Diable, because close to it was the fearful oubliette, down which criminals were cast alive. From this tower there is a capital view of the town, its spires and other buildings, of the river and its bridges; while a slight glimpse of the Loire also, deep set in its distant valley, may be gained. There is a neat chapel, now filled with fire-arms, showing, in the delicate tracery of its windows, a good example of Gothic. Beside it is a small building flanked with turrets, in which, it is said, King René of Provence and Anjou was born. The view from the terrace outside the castle-gate is less extensive, but nearly as good, as that from within the walls, and on the whole the castle is more imposing from without than interesting within.

On one side of the open space surrounding the castle stands a handsome modern building, originally L'Académie d'Equitation. Mr. Pitt (afterwards Lord Chatham) and the Duke of Wellington received part of their education at the military college here, now removed to Saumur, which occupied this edifice, still called L'Académie. The Duke was here one year. It has been converted since the Revolution into a caserne de cavalerie and dépôt de remonte. No trace or tradition is preserved of either of these great men, of whose education it may be said "fas est ab hoste doceri."

The Cathedral of St. Maurice is everywhere conspicuous from its elevated position and its delicate tapering twin spires, whose effect is somewhat marred by thrusting between them an ugly pavilion, an addition of the Renaissance (1540). The W. portal, a work of the 12th centy., is remarkable for the richness and good preservation of the sculptures surrounding its elegant early-pointed arch; they retain indeed even their colouring. On either side are 4 saints, male and female; above, the curved niches are filled with smaller statues, angels, &c., while the tympanum is occupied by the Saviour, surrounded by the attributes of the 4 Evangelists. The workmanship is good, the faces expressive, the draperies elaborate, but the whole displays the stiff style of Byzantine art of the period. Higher up, in a row of niches, are 8 statues of Dukes of Anjou, later in date (15th centy.) and inferior in execution. On the l. hand as you enter, passing from below the carved organ-loft, is an antique bénitier of oblong form, in verde antique, supported on lions, a Byzantine work of the Lower Empire; it was brought from the East, and presented to the church by King René. The church consists of a very long nave without aisles (12th centy.), each division of the side wall being a wide pointed arch resting on the ground without pillars, and an upper arch rising from engaged groups of pillars having Romanesque capitals, enclosing a pair of narrow circular-headed windows. The greater part of these windows, as well as those of the nave and choir, are filled with painted glass of the richest colour and very old (13th centy.), forming one of the chief ornaments of the church. This and other churches in the Angevine style are destitute of triforium or clerestory. The choir and transepts are short, the E. end is multi-angular. In the choir (end of 12th centy.), on the l. as you look towards the apse, is a splendid Flamboyant doorway. Both transepts (1225) terminate with fine wheel windows, the other windows are pointed, and below these along the wall runs a rich pointed arcade. The nave is about 80 ft. high, and nearly 54 ft. wide, stone vaulted. Local historians lay great stress on its roof being supported without flying buttresses, but their place is supplied by huge clumsy square piers at least 8 ft. by 10 square, and retaining the same thickness up to the roof, raised outside between each pair of windows and at the angles of the transepts, and thus the wonder is removed. Margaret of Anjou was buried in St. Maurice, but her tomb was destroyed at the Revolution.

Not far from the cathedral is the Musée, placed in a building erected by an intendant of the province, afterwards converted into the Séminaire, and added to in the time of Louis XIV. Its cloister and winding staircase are curious examples of latest Gothic style.

It contains a large collection of mediocre paintings, mostly of the modern French school. Among them is placed a Vase of antique Egyptian porphyry, obtained by King René from the East, which for a long time passed for one of the water-pots used at the marriage feast of Cana. It bears 2 bearded masks carved on it, and is broken, which is not surprising considering its thinness. Here is a fine bust of Napoleon by Canova, in marble, condemned to be broken at the Restoration, but saved by being hid in a garret. One room is filled with casts from the works of the living French sculptor David, given by him to his native town. His statues of Guttemberg, inventor of printing, for Strasburg, of General Foy in a Roman dress, of Armand Carrel in loose pantaloons plaited round the waist, of the Greek girl at the tomb of Marco Botzaris; his busts of Göthe, Hahnemann the homœopathist, and Jeremy Bentham, appear best worth notice. He has also executed a series of medallion heads of celebrated persons of 19th centy.

The Museum of Natural History, situated in the upper story of the building, is reached by a corkscrew stair remarkable for its lightness and its singular groined roof. The collection is exceedingly well arranged and named. The geology of the department is illustrated in a series of specimens by themselves. Among a few antiquities is the crosier of Robert d'Arbrissal, founder of Fontevrault, found in that Abbey; it bears a semi-pagan representation of St. Michael and the dragon, of gold (?) partly enamelled. The shoes of Joanne de Laval, 2nd wife of King René, high-heeled and ornamented with open work; also an œrolite, which fell in one of the faubourgs of Angers 1822, deserve attention. The Library possesses some curious old MSS.

Not far from the Musée is the ruined church of Toussaints, attached to a convent now converted into a Dépôt des Subsistances Militaires. It is an elegant pointed building, and almost identical in style with the early English. It is a cross church without aisles, with lancet windows, richly cut capitals, and corbels, from which springs the roof destroyed at the Revolution. The E. window is a wheel, apparently of later date.

The massive and stately tower of St. Aubin, in the early pointed style, unfinished and surmounted with a conical roof of slate, is now converted into a shot-tower. Not far from it is the Préfecture, on the site of the ancient convent of St. Aubin; along the corridor on the l. hand, now released from a coating of plaster, runs a colonnade of florid Norman architecture, of very early date, and of curious and elaborate workmanship. The small round arches rest alternately on piers faced with pilasters, and on detached pillars arranged in 2 rows, each 5 deep. All the pillars, cornices, and mouldings of the arches are elaborately and sharply carved, very perfect, and no two alike. The mouldings running round the arches consist of bearded heads, monsters, animals, fish, &c. In the midst is a circular portal, the lower part of which is sunk rather below the surface of the ground, supported on cut columns of varied patterns, and surmounted by a series of Runic bands, cords, and foliage, each confined to one stone, and radiating from a common centre. Next to this is a double arch ornamented with fresco paintings instead of sculpture, the subjects being Herod on his Throne, the Massacre of the Innocents, the Temple of Jerusalem, and the Nativity and Adoration of the Magi, who are seen on horseback approaching Bethlehem. The style of drawing bears a near resemblance to the tapestry of Bayeux; the colours are very perfect. These arches formed part of the refectory of the convent.

The Eglise de St. Martin, now converted into a magazine of fagots, and piled up to the roof with them, so as to be scarcely visible, will yet interest the antiquary from its age and structure, though the nave, the oldest part, is nearly all destroyed, and the rest is probably not older than the 12th and 13th centuries. The stone dome covering the central tower rests upon thick round pillars set in the 4 inner angles of the walls which support the tower. Its windows are round-headed and long. The choir (date end of 12th or beginning of 13th cent.) ends in a polygonal apse.

At the extremity of the town to the N. is the Church of St. Serge, remarkable for a choir built 1050 by the monk Vulgrin, who became abbot, supported on 6 columns of peculiar lightness and height, from whose freely cut capitals rises an elegant pointed roof; behind it is a square Lady Chapel. The style indicates the transition from Romanesque to early pointed. The windows are without tracery, for the most part round-headed, enclosed within pointed arches. The transepts seem of a much older date than the choir; the nave is in the late Gothic of the 15th cent. St. Serge is entered by a vestibule or atrium.

Here is a finely-carved spiral staircase of wood; every panel contains a different sculpture and composition.

In the same quarter of the town is the Jardin des Plantes, an agreeable walk in hot weather under shady trees, near to the Séminaire, a vast edifice.

Among the more interesting specimens of ancient domestic architecture, with which the streets of Angers abound, may be mentioned a corner house, in the Place behind the cathedral, adorned with curious carvings in wood; that called Hôtel des Marchands near the central bridge; and another in the Rue du Figuier, known as the Hôtel des Ducs d'Anjou, for what reason is not evident, since René, the last Duke of Anjou, died 1480, and this building cannot be older than the 16th centy., and is in the style of François I.'s time, with more of Italian than of Gothic in the composition of its architecture. The square turrets, or projecting oriels, at its angles are singular. In the Rue St. Sang is a house called Abraham, and another called Adam in the little Place St. Maurice, end of Rue St. Aubin, deserving notice.

The wire Suspension Bridge close to the castle over the Maine fell in 1849, during the march of a regiment of infantry across it; the greater part were precipitated into the river and nearly 250 men were drowned.

In the suburb of la Doutre (beyond, or on the further (or rt.) bank of the Maine) are several buildings deserving notice for their antiquity. The Eglise de la Trinité is a Romanesque building probably of the 11th and 12th centuries. It consists of a long nave without aisles, having in the side walls a series of apsidal recesses under pointed arches. The choir, very shallow, and formed of a central and 2 side apses, is separated from the nave by a wall pierced with a pointed arch, which contracts the view of the high altar, but serves as a support to the Tower, which is square below, octagonal above, and very elegant. In a recess on the l. are two old frescoes.

Close to this church, indeed touching it, is a second equally ancient and in a nearly similar style, l'Eglise de Ronceray, once attached to a famous nunnery founded in the 10th century by Fulk Count of Anjou, who placed under the rule of its abbess the whole suburb. It is now included in the extensive range of buildings forming the Ecole des Arts et Métiers. The church serves as a chapel for the students; it is plain excepting some rich Romanesque arches and pillars.

On the same side of the river, a little higher up, is the Hospice St. Jean, founded by Henry II. King of England and Duke of Anjou. The great hall, begun 1177, finished 1184, almost pure Gothic in mouldings and details, yet lighted by round-headed windows, is a fine apartment, lofty and airy, its groined and pointed roof supported on 2 rows of light pillars. Here the beds of the patients are ranged in rows, the males separated from the females by a low partition. The office of nurses is performed by nuns; the whole is kept very orderly, the linen-closet particularly neat. The cloisters between the great hall and the church are partly in the Romanesque style; double pillars support the arches; a round portal with deep mouldings leads into the Chapel. The cellar or crypt and the granary are curious.

There is a very curious antique bridge near the Hospice. The large arch near the land appears to have been defended by a portcullis.

A decayed Barn near the hospital is about the same date. It is Norman, with 3 aisles, like old Westminster Hall, and deserves to be drawn.

At the opposite extremity of the Suburb Doutre, below the suspension bridge, near the Nantes road, is the vast Nunnery du Bon Pasteur, surrounded by high walls. The sisters keep a school for females.

Very extensive Boulevards, planted with trees and lined with some very handsome houses, the Mairie, &c., occupy the site of the old walls, and communicate with a wide open space for the exercise of troops, called Champ de Mars, traversed by the road to Saumur. Some of the houses about it bore until lately the marks of bullets fired in the attack of Angers by the Vendean army, 90,000 strong, 1793.

Angers occupies a fortunate position, near the mouth of 3 navigable rivers, in a country producing lime, coal, and slate.

Angers is famed for its nursery gardens; there are not less than 30.

Railways—To Tours and Orleans, to Nantes, to Le Mans: in progress to Bressuire and Niort.

The neighbourhood abounds in Slate Quarries, which employ between 2000 and 3000 men, and supply a large part of France. They furnish 80 millions of slates yearly, which are exported to the value of 1½ million of francs per annum.

The most considerable, Le Grand Carreau, is about 4 m. off, a little to the l. of the road to Saumur. It is nearly 400 ft. (105 mètres) deep, and occupies an area of 4000 mètres. Besides the yawning open excavation, a considerable cavern, approached by a horizontal gallery on one side of the quarry, has been driven under ground. It is a grand sight, like an underground cathedral, and well worth a visit. It is approached by vertical ladders, and frail extracting machinery overhangs the precipice. At times serious slips, or éboulements, produce very dangerous avalanches of rock. In the great floods of 1856 some of the quarries were filled with water, the pumping out of which required months.

The Railway from Angers to Nantes is described in Rte. 59.

Inns.—Inns: H. de France; H. des Colonies and du Commerce; H. de Paris, Rue Boileau: none very good.

Nantes, the ancient residence of the Dukes of Brittany, when that province was independent—which disputed with Rennes the title of capital of the duchy, now chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Loire Inférieure, seat of a bishopric and of a Collège Impériale—is situated on the l. bank of the Loire, at the influx into it from the N. of the Erdre; the junction of the two rivers being in the middle of the town. The Sèvre (Nantaise) from the S. flows into the Loire a little below Nantes. There are at least 16 bridges in the town over these various streams. It is distant about 40 m. from the ocean, and is a flourishing seaport, the fourth in rank and population in France, numbering 108,500 Inhab. As a town it is one of the handsomest and most pleasing in France. Its fine Quais, extending about 2 m. along the Loire, and on both sides of the Erdre, and the wide open space left by these two rivers, enlivened with small craft, remind the traveller somewhat of the busy aquatic towns of Holland—Amsterdam and Rotterdam, and give a very cheerful character to Nantes, which is, besides, far less dirty than most French towns. In the new quarters it has streets lined with houses

METRES.

0 100 200 300 400 500

1. Préfecture.
2. Hôtel de Ville.
3. Palais de Justice.
4. Bourse.
5. Château.

6. Museum.
7. Theatre.
8. St. Pierre, Cathedral.
9. Jardin des Plantes.
10. Place Launay.

11. Place Graslin.
12. Place de Viame.
13. Place Royale.
14. Place Louis XVI.
15. Railway Station.

not unworthy of Paris. The Place Royale and Rue d'Orléans contain the chief shops. Those who admire and would seek out picturesque bits of street architecture, now fast disappearing even from the old town under modern improvements, must penetrate the streets between the cathedral and the Erdre. The celebrated old prison, Le Bouffay, near the Quais Brancas, was pulled down in 1848, and the house "aux Enfants Nantais," at the corner of the Place du Change, was pulled down in 1859. There are many old houses in the Rues Casseberie and de la Juiverie. In the Rue des Hauts Pavés is a house said to have been inhabited by Anne of Brittany.

The most prominent and remarkable edifice is the Cathedral of St. Pierre, externally an unsightly pile, from the unfinished towers not rising much higher than the roof. The three lofty portals of its W. front, however, are striking for size and the great number of small bas-reliefs and other sculptures adorning them. It was begun 1434, and finished about the end of the centy. The nave, of the same age, "a remarkably fine structure of admirable proportions and great effect, in pure Flamboyant style," is very imposing on account of the great elevation of its roof, 120 ft. above the pavement, and the elegance of its arches; but its windows are destitute of tracery. The modern wood-carving in some of the side chapels, and the stone-work of the organ-loft decorated with pendants, a delicate work of the 16th centy., deserve notice. Attached to this noble nave is a plain Romanesque choir, inferior in height and plain in style, probably of the 11th centy.: it was already enclosed in new walls, corresponding with the nave, preparatory to pulling down the old structure, when the works were stopped for want of funds near the latter end of the 15th century. The solitary transept on the S. side is curious, as traces of four successive buildings can be seen; it contains the splendid Monument (removed from the suppressed Carmelite convent) of Francis II., last Duc de Bretagne, and his wife, Marguerite de Foix, raised to their memory by his daughter, Anne of Brittany. It is a splendid work of art in the style of the Renaissance, executed by a Bas Breton artist, Michel Colomb, a native of St. Pol de Léon, who preceded Jean Goujon. It was fortunately secreted at the Revolution, and thus preserved from destruction. It is a large altar tomb of marble, black, white, and red, raised to a height of 5 ft. Upon it repose the recumbent figures of Francis and his wife; three angels support their heads, and their feet rest on a lion and greyhound. In the four corners stand statues as large as life in white marble: of Justice, with sword and scales, said to be a portrait of the Duchess Anne; of Power, strangling a dragon (heresy), which she draws out of a tower; she is attired with helmet and breastplate, and has a scarf wound round her arm: Wisdom or Prudence, double-faced, bears a mirror and a compass; and Temperance holds a lantern in one hand and a bit in the other, as attributes. These statues are well designed, and executed with great delicacy, which is particularly conspicuous in the draperies. Along the sides of the tomb small statues of the 12 Apostles are ranged in niches, and below them are figures of mourners in coloured marble. The patron saints of the Duke and Duchess, St. Francis d'Assisi and St. Margaret, stand at their feet, St. Louis and Charlemagne at their head. The remains of the illustrious dead, for whom this splendid tomb was raised, having been torn up and scattered in 1793, the body of the Constable de Richemont, one of the generals who contributed to drive the English out of France in the reign of Charles VII., was deposited within it in 1815. The N. transept and the choir have been completed since 1852.

Beyond the cathedral a broad and much-frequented promenade, occupying the site of the old fortifications, and forming a sort of boulevard, extends from the Loire to the Erdre, under the names Cours St. Pierre and Cours St. André. The former is approached by a broad and stately flight of steps from the Loire, and is ornamented with statues of the Duchess Anne and the three Breton heroes,—the constables Du Guesclin, Clisson, and De Richemont. Between the two walks stands a Column raised to the memory of Louis XVI., and surmounted by his statue; but since 1830 made to commemorate a combat between some young men of the town with the troops of the line, in which 10 of the former were killed, during the July Revolution. The brass plate which records this states that "Des ouvriers Anglais ont fait graver cette inscription." 'Tis a pity English workmen cannot mind their own business, without meddling with the politics of a foreign country.

The New Church of St. Nicholas, from designs of M. Lassus, well deserves attention: it is a grand Gothic edifice, lately completed at a cost of at least 100,000*l.*, nearly all raised by subscriptions. The effect of the interior is much marred by the walls being ruled to imitate stone-work.

St. Clement is also a handsome new Gothic church, as is the Church of the Jesuits.

The Castle (a non-commissioned officer for a small gratuity will, on application at the corps de garde in the gateway, show the interior), a massive and venerable edifice of the 14th century, partly modernized in the 16th by the Duc de Mercœur during the wars of the League, flanked with bastions, still bearing on them the double cross of Lorraine, stands at the extremity of the Cours St. Pierre, on the margin of the Loire, surrounded on the land side by a deep fosse. Its massive round towers are built of slate and granite: a portcullis still defends its entrance, and the interior contains several constructions of the 16th cent., in the latest Gothic, the windows surmounted with canopies. In one is a curious spiral staircase. Most of the Kings of France, from Charles VIII. downwards, resided for a time within its walls. The powder magazine is said to have been the Chapel in which Anne of Brittany was married to Louis XII. (?), thus becoming for the second time Queen of France. She certainly was born here, and made the castle her residence. In this castle Henri IV. signed the Edit de Nantes for the protection of the Protestants in 1598, revoked, to the injury and stain of France, by Louis XIV. In 1654 it was the prison of the Cardinal de Retz, who escaped by letting himself down by a rope from the bastion de Mercœur into a boat moored in the Loire, which at that time, and until the present quai was formed, washed the castle walls. The attention of the sentinel meanwhile was taken off by a bottle of wine given him to drink, and his eye was deceived by the cardinal's red cloak and hat slipped off and hung over the battlements. De Retz, reaching the shore by means of the boat, instantly mounted a horse provided for him by his friends, which, however, quickly threw him and dislocated his shoulder. In spite of this accident and the pain it caused, he rode to a place of safety, the Château de Beaupreau, whence he effected his escape through Spain to Rome. Madame de Sévigné describes her visit to the castle in 1648, shortly after. In 1800 the powder magazine, in the second tower, i. e. of the entrance, blew up and destroyed much of the castle. When the railway was made, in order to widen the road, one of the bastions was pulled down, and within it was found one of the old towers, which has since been exposed and repaired, and now forms the S.W. angle.

The Duchess of Berri, after having long encouraged disaffection and fermentation in Brittany and La Vendée, was finally detected, after a concealment of 5 months within the city, which had eluded the vigilance of the Police, Nov. 1832, in the house No. 3, Rue Haute du Château, facing the castle, which belonged to two ladies, named Du Guigny, zealous partisans of the Bourbon cause. Her presence in this house had been betrayed to the government by a Jew, named Deutz, previously a confidant of the duchess and her friends, and a party of soldiers and police were despatched thither instantly. They searched the whole building from top to bottom, but found her not. Confiding, however, in their information, a party of gendarmes was left behind to keep watch. Some of them, posted in a garret, remained a whole day beside a fire which they had lighted, when on a sudden they were startled by voices and the sound of kicks, proceeding from an iron door which formed the back of the chimney, and, to the surprise of the soldiers, out scrambled four persons—the duchess, a lady, and MM. de Menars and Guibourg, who had passed 16 hours in a secret hole or hiding-place, entered by a door 20 inches wide. Not only this oppressive confinement, but even the heat of the fire, was endured patiently, and without the slightest noise, until they were nearly suffocated, and the duchess's dress, entirely scorched by the iron door being heated red hot, was on the point of catching fire.

Nantes possesses a Museum of Paintings, far above the average of provincial collections, though a large portion are copies; situated in the upper part of the Cloth Hall, Rue de l'Érail. The greater part were collected by M. Cacault, and many more are the bequest of the Duc de Feltre. Among the best are heads of Isaiah and Jeremiah, Perugino; Landscape, Salvator Rosa; Vierge aux Rochers, Salvator Rosa; Portrait of a lady, Ingres; Studies by Paul de la Roche; Bull-fight, and other cattle-pieces, by Brascassat, a modern artist, good.

Travellers who have leisure to devote any time to a Library will find that of Nantes, above the Halle aux Grains, Quai Brancas, an especially rich collection of 48,000 volumes. A MS. copy of the Cité de Dieu of St. Augustin, of the year 1375, is remarkable for its beautiful miniatures.

The Archives, deposited in the Préfecture, contain a mass of curious documents relating to the history of Brittany; many ancient charters of Abbeys, &c., and the trial of that most infamous of criminals, Gilles de Retz, Maréchal de France, who was burnt on the Chaussée de la Madeleine (Rte.

59). It is in Latin, and will not bear translation.

In the Musée d'Histoire Naturelle, Rue du Port Communeau, may be seen a collection illustrating the geology of the department, formed by the late M. Dubuisson; besides several fragments of antiquity found in the neighbourhood, and a mummy, presented by the Egyptian traveller Caillaud, who is a native of Nantes. On the wall of the staircase is stretched the skin of a republican soldier killed in battle, who (like Zisca) wished it to cover a drum, and so terrify his enemies after his death.

The Jardin des Plantes, beyond the ch. of St. Clément, contains an avenue of magnolias, probably the finest in Europe.

A handsome Palais de Justice was finished 1852. The series of archives is very curious. Amongst them are the minutes of the Revolutionary Tribunal of 1793, kept with great accuracy. On many days appear the name and professions of 100 to 150 men sentenced to death, "pour avoir porté les armes contre la patrie;" on other days 40 or 50 women receive the same sentence "pour avoir suivi les brigands." It is remarkable that Carrier's name does not appear.

An Arcade called Passage Pommeraye leads by a flight of iron steps from Rue Crébillon to Rue de la Fosse.

The Quais, lined on the one side by handsome houses, and on the other fringed with shipping, present a lively scene, and form a noble promenade about 2 m. long, injured by the passage of the Railway. An Englishman, in traversing them, may remember with some interest that it was at this port that the young Pretender embarked on the expedition of 1745, in a fast-sailing brig, the Doutelle, provided by one Walsh, a French subject settled at Nantes, who accompanied him. He was disguised as a student of the Scotch college at Paris, and for better concealment had allowed his beard to grow. On the quais are situated the Halle aux Grains and the Bourse, which is not remarkable for excellence of architecture. The Quais were formerly in part planted with trees, forming the general promenade, but the trees have been cut, and the general effect destroyed, in order to allow of the passage of the railway, which actually runs along the open quay, and cuts off the town and road from the river. Near the lower end is a building, insignificant in itself, but remarkable for its associations, and they are melancholy, called Salorges, built as an entrepôt for colonial merchandise, and still serving as a warehouse. Who has not heard of the Noyades and republican marriages; the invention of Carrier, the most detestable, perhaps, of the monsters of the revolution, when sated with single murders by the guillotine, and thirsting for more blood, and the excitement of executions on a large scale? It was in front of the Salorges that they took place, and that building served as a temporary place of confinement for the miserable victims, who were dragged hence and put on board barges (gabares) furnished with a sliding valve (soupage) or trap-door in their bottom. These boats, when towed into the middle of the river, and deserted by the crews, were sunk with their load of 20 or 30 human beings, by pulling from the shore a cord attached to the valve. To prevent the possibility of escape for the strong swimmer, or poor wretch who might be cast ashore alive by the current, armed men of the bloody band called Compagnie de Marat, composed of the most abandoned wretches whom the lowest dens in Nantes could pour forth, were stationed on the banks to fire on those who rose to the surface, while others, armed with swords, cut off the hands and fingers of such as struggled to reach the boats. As many as 600 human beings perished on one day; the total number of persons thus destroyed has never been correctly ascertained, but 25 of these Noyades or executions by water are known to have taken place, and the number who perished has been variously estimated at 6000 or 9000! At first the wholesale butchery was perpetrated at night, but, emboldened by impunity, and supported by a portion of the citizens, almost exclusively of the class of little tradesmen, the tyrants did not hesitate to immolate their victims in broad day. The most atrocious feature in these massacres is the number of women and of young children who were thus consigned to eternity, without the possibility of having committed any offence, by the exulting savages who then ruled the people's destinies. When a remonstrance was made against the murder of the children, "Ce sont des louvetaux, il faut les détruire, — Ce sont des vipères, il faut les étouffer," were Carrier's answers. The experiment of the Noyades was first tried on 24 priests condemned to transportation (déportation). "Le décret de déportation a été exécuté verticalement," was Carrier's boast. The Mariages Républicains, as another refinement of cruelty was called in mockery, consisted in binding together a man and woman, back to back, stripped naked, keeping them exposed for an hour, and then hurling them into the current of "la baignoire nationale," as the bloodhounds termed the Loire. That river, as it were indignant at crimes scarcely paralleled in the history of the world, threw back upon its banks, at each returning tide, the corpses with which it was choked, until the air became pestilential, and its very water and fish poisonous. When Carrier was at length called to account for his crimes, which, however, had been connived at, if not approved, by the Convention a short while before, and asked for proofs of the accusations against him, he was answered, "Vous me demandez des preuves? faites donc refluer la Loire." But these are only a part of the revolutionary atrocities committed at Nantes: to the victims of the Noyades must be added those who perished by the guillotine, by disease, famine, and terror in the prisons, and, above all, by the fusillades, which took place day after day on the Plaine de Sainte Mauve, where, at one time, 500 children, the eldest not more than 14, were mowed down by musketry, and where deep ditches, dug for the purpose, were filled with corpses heaped confusedly one over the other. The population of Nantes, which amounted in 1790 to 81,000, was reduced to 75,000 in 1800, and would have been further reduced if the surviving population of La Vendée had not taken refuge there. The number who were slaughtered in 1793 belonging to the town and surrounding country is estimated at 30,000. It is painful to describe these horrors, but they form an integral part of the history of Nantes, and that which is here detailed is only a sample; they might be greatly expanded. The writer had an opportunity in 1859 of conversing with several of the older inhabitants of Nantes: one who had been on duty as a national guard at an execution. But though no one doubted the facts, the writer was not able to meet with any one who had seen, or had spoken to any one who had seen, a Noyade.

The Vendéan war has also left some sad souvenirs at Nantes. In the attack of the town by the Vendéan forces on the 29th June, 1793, their leader, the gentle Cathelineau (the carter), was mortally wounded in penetrating into the Place Viarme, now the cattle-market, and his fall was the cause of their retreat. Not far from this spot another of their generals, Charette, was shot, at the corner of the Rue de la Miséricorde, April, 1796.

Fouché, the police minister, Duc d'Otrante, Marshal of France, regicide, and minister of Louis XVIII. in 1814, was born at Nantes.

The New Quarter of the town, the West End of Nantes, was commenced 1784, by M. Graalin, ancien fermier-général, after whom the Place containing the theatre is called. He seems to have exhausted the Biographie Universelle for names to the adjoining streets; among them appear the Rue Jean-Jacques, Rue Racine, Rue Franklin, Rue Crébillon, &c. The houses are built of white stone from the neighbourhood of Saumur, and are exceedingly handsome, but the effect is much injured by the narrowness of the streets. The old town extended very little way to the W. of the Erdre, and was completely walled round down to the close of the 17th centy.

The commerce of Nantes suffered terribly during the war, and did not return after the peace, on account of the loss of the principal French colonies. Of late years, however, it has more than revived, and Nantes is one of the most thriving and wealthy towns of France. In 1856, 641 vessels, measuring 104,000 tons, belonged to the port, and 523,000 tons were entered inwards: custom-house duties in 1857 nearly 1,200,000. The construction of docks at St. Nazaire (Rte. 47) will probably increase the prosperity of Nantes.

The principal business is sugar-refining. There are 5 large sugar-houses; the largest (N. Cézard) can refine 60 tons a day. One fourth of the vessels built in France are built at Nantes, close to the town and on some of the islands. There are also some cotton-mills and iron-foundries. Preserved meats, fruits, &c., are also prepared here, and the sardine-curers, though their works are on the coast, have their stores and establishments at Nantes. Much wheat is exported to England; and wine and hemp are exported largely.

The suburb of Nantes on the S. side of the Loire is spread over a series of islands, formed by the branches of that river and the Sèvre, connected together by no less than 6 bridges in one line, 2 m. long, over all of which the roads to Bordeaux and Clisson pass. The bridge at Nantes is the first over the Loire, and the river is very shallow just here. No steamers go through the bridges.

Consuls from Great Britain and the United States reside here.

There is a new French Protestant Ch.

The Poste aux Lettres is in the Passage Pommeraye.

Petitpas, Rue Crébillon, No. 20, has a number of views, maps, guides, &c., relating to Nantes: a capital plan of Nantes, price 1 fr.

Fiacres stand for hire in the principal squares.

Diligences daily to Bordeaux; to Napoléon Vendée.

Railways to Tours and St. Nazaire.

(Rte. 47); to l'Orient and Quimper, on the way to Brest; to Angers. In progress, to Napoléon Vendée.

Steamers ascend the Loire to Angers in 7 or 8 hrs., starting from the Quai du Port Maillard. Steamers down the Loire to St. Nazaire; to Bordeaux 3 times a month; to Lorient and Quimper once a week.

Steamer on the Erdre to Nort starts from the Quai Céneray, behind the Préfecture (Rte. 41)—a pleasant excursion of one day there and back. The Erdre for the first 10 m. is very pretty, bordered by country houses, and is the usual resort of the Nantes pleasure boats, sailing or rowing.

Environs of Nantes.—The immediate vicinity of the town displays great marks of opulence and prosperity, in its numerous and neat white villas, many of them quite in the English style, and in the great number of factory chimneys, many of them new; and in almost every direction the country resembles the S. of England.

About 5 m. S.W. of Nantes extends the Lake de Grand Lieu, the largest lake in France: the shores are flat and marshy, and it is quite uninteresting.

The excursion most commonly recommended to a stranger is that to Clisson, the Richmond of Nantes, 18 m. S. of the town, on the borders of La Vendée, described in Rte. 60. It is a pretty spot, though its beauties have been considerably exaggerated by local enthusiasts. You may go thither by the omnibus in the morning, visit the castle and all its curiosities, and return by the same conveyance at 7 P.M.

ROUTE 47.

NANTES TO CROISIC.

	Miles.
Nantes to St. Nazaire (Rly.)	40
St. Nazaire to Guérande	13
Guérande to Croisic	7

This excursion, though out of the usual range of English travellers, can be made with great facility, and exhibits a series of curious and interesting objects in a very primitive region.

St. Nazaire may be reached from Nantes—a, by railway; b, by steamer. From St. Nazaire well-appointed omnibuses reach Croisic in less than 3 hours.

a. Nantes to St. Nazaire, by rly. This route is perhaps prettier than that by the river. There is a stat. on the quay in the middle of Nantes, for passengers only without luggage. The rly. passes along the quay, as described in Rte. 46, and under two flights of steps up to the suburb St. Anne; then leaves the town, and passes through pretty fields and beautiful meadows to Savenay, a place celebrated for the final defeat and destruction of the royalist army of La Vendée, under La Roche Jacquelin and Stofflet; 22nd Dec. 1793. After leaving Savenay the rly. approaches the river, and passes over beautiful level meadows of immense extent, dotted with cattle, to Donges, on the river. A little above Donges is a menhir. Beyond Donges the meadows are of still wider range, and on the N. is a vast peat-field, called la Grande Brière, which has been worked for ages by a peculiar race of men. The peat is cut and put into boats on the little river Brivet, and thence carried to Nantes. Near Montoir Stat. is a dolmen, estimated to weigh 20 tons.

St. Nazaire. This place was until lately an insignificant village, but the government, abandoning all attempts to improve the Loire, has now constructed here a basin or floating dock of 25 acres, with the view of making this the port of Nantes. The works are very solidly executed in granite, and there is never less than 22 feet water in the dock. The larger dock entrance is 25 mètres = 82 ft. wide, and is, or was until lately, the widest dock entrance in the world. There is a good and safe roadstead close to the dock entrance, and there are no dock dues. Another basin and a dry dock are projected. The present church is a very curious old edifice, now destined to be rebuilt. There are perhaps 2000 Inhab., but the number is rapidly increasing. Close to the rly. stat. is a very large dolmen, consisting of several stones upright in the ground and a large flat stone upon them. A single stone lies at a short distance from the others.

b. Nantes to St. Nazaire, by the river. Tolerably good steamers start from near the Bourse, and perform the voyage in 4½ hours with tide. The river is very broad and shallow, and intersected by islands: the channel is curiously crooked and difficult, and the attempts to improve it have not met with much success. The banks of the river, though not high, are very green and well wooded, and there are numerous villages on the banks. About 5 miles below Nantes stood the nunnery of Les Couets, where none but noble ladies were admitted. During the revolution a mob of women stormed the nunnery and flogged the nuns. At Roche Maurice 12 skeletons were found in 1856, supposed to have been those of some of Carrier's victims, and a procès verbal now extant shows that 74 bodies were in the An II. collected and buried here by one man.

About 10 m. from Nantes, on an island in the Loire, is the vast government steam factory of Indret, probably the most extensive establishment of the kind in the world. The works consist of a large shed for heating, bending, punching, and cutting boiler-plates, and a large shed or house adjoining for fitting and riveting the boilers; a very handsome and lofty foundry, with the usual furnaces, pits, and appliances; carpenters' shops, &c.; two exceedingly large tool-sheds, with planes, lathes, drills, slotting tools, fashioning tools, &c., of every size and pattern, and in incredible numbers; a large fitting shed; and a fine range of forges, with steam-hammers, &c. About 3000 men were employed here during the war; at present about 1500. The establishment is capable of turning out in a year steam-engines complete to the amount of 6000 horse power. There is, however, neither coal nor iron in the neighbourhood, and the place is not well situated for shipping the machinery, which is conveyed in barges to St. Nazaire, and there shipped. The river below Indret is pretty, though the scenery is not striking, and the country houses of the Nantais are continually seen near the banks. At Buzay, half way between Nantes and Paimbœuf, a lofty tower, the only remains of the abbey, is seen on the left,

Paimbœuf l. A small town situated on a rocky point at the entrance of the narrow part of the Loire, 30 miles from Nantes, formerly a place of some importance, as large vessels used to discharge part of their cargoes here before going up to Nantes. It is now nearly deserted for St. Nazaire. The river below this point widens into an estuary, with numerous shallows and rocks, marked out by stone towers. The steamer crosses over to Donges (see above), and soon reaches St. Nazaire (see above).

The road from St. Nazaire is exactly like an English turnpike road, with hedges on each side, and the fields are surrounded even too closely by hedges and hedge-rows. Escoublac, about 8 miles from St. Nazaire, is a new village, the old village having been gradually buried in the adjoining sand dunes during the last century. A shorter road has been opened to Croisic, but the traveller should always take the old road by Guérande. There is a remarkable view over the salt-works and towards Batz and Croisic before reaching

Guérande (Inn tolerable), a very curious old town, still surrounded, except on one side, by the ditches and walls built by Duke John V., about 1431. The four old gateways still remain; that of St. Michel, on the E., is the finest. The town formerly contained 6000 Inh., now reduced to about 2000. The streets and most of the houses in the town remain unaltered from the 15th century, but the effect is much marred by the liberal use of whitewash. The church is one of the gloomy damp granite churches of Brittany. The pillars of the nave are said to be of the 9th cent.; the rest of the building seems to be of the 15th cent. In one of the buttresses at the W. end is what appears to have been an external pulpit, reached by an interior staircase. On Sundays the assemblage of Bretons from the N., peat-diggers from the E., and salt-makers from the W., is very striking. Soon after leaving Guérande the road descends into a wide plain covered with pits and salterns. This plain is of great extent, below the level of the sea, and protected by dykes. The water is admitted at high water, by channels or rivers, into reservoirs called vasières, from which it is passed into shallow irregularly formed receptacles called fares. In these a considerable portion of the water is evaporated, and the brine is allowed to run into square basins called coillots, where the sun finally evaporates the water and leaves a layer of salt. The salt is scraped off to square patches between the coillots, and is thence carried to a conical heap on the high ground, where it is left without protection from the rain until the autumn, when the heap is covered with mud, and so left until it can be sold. The men engaged in the work are called paludiers, and receive one-fourth of the salt, the owner of the salterns taking the other three-fourths. The paludiers and their assistants, called saulniers, inhabit Batz, Poulliguen, Saillié, and other villages, and form a most peculiar class. Their usual dress is an enormous black flapped hat, a long white frock or waistcoat, huge baggy white breeches, white gaiters, and white shoes. The men of Batz are a magnificent race of large stalwart evident Saxons, and the contrast between them and the surrounding Bretons cannot fail to be remarked. If the traveller should be fortunate enough to see a wedding (usually on Tuesday) or any religious festival at Batz, he will see these magnificent men and their splendid costume to the greatest advantage. Though a very hard-working race, they have been always very poor, and it is much to be feared that their salt trade will prove continually less profitable. The ch. of Batz is a granite structure of ancient date; the huge steeple, 200 feet high, was built in 1657. The choir inclines to the l., which is not uncommon, and said to be symbolical of the Saviour's head falling on his shoulder on the cross. The ch. of N. D. de Murier near it has gradually fallen into ruin. A little beyond Batz is a menhir about 8 ft. high. 2 m. beyond Batz we reach Croisic (le Croisic) (Inn: Etablissement des Bains). This old town has now become a popular watering-place, especially since the new road from Guérande was made in 1840, before which the only access to it was by mules or across a ferry to Pembron. Croisic was formerly a place of some importance, was fortified, and had a castle, and reached its greatest prosperity in the 16th cent., when it sent vessels to the cod-fishery, and had some 6000 Inhab., but, like many other towns, was ruined by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. There are now but 3000, and the walls of old houses may be seen surrounding what are now gardens. There are many old and curious houses in the town, and the granite ch., built in 1507, is of the usual gloomy character: the tower, 180 ft. high, was built about 1700. There is a chapel of St. Goustan to the W. of the town, with a miraculous well near it. When there is a storm from the S. the sailors' wives pray at St. Goustan, when from the N. at the chapel of the Crucifix at the E. of the town. About half a mile due N.W. of the ch. is a menhir, 8 feet high, situated on a mound overlooking the sea. The rocky cliffs on the sea shore near it for about a mile have been worn by the waves and weather into the most extraordinary and fantastic shapes, and are well worth a visit. Two artificial mounds at the ends of the town form a sort of promenade, and in the summer there are sometimes 150 bathers at the dismal-looking Etablissement. This is one of the principal ports for the sardine fishery, and about 80 boats belong to it. A long jetty has lately been built to protect the port. On the opposite side of the harbour is a long dyke, called Chaussée de Pembron, constructed at the beginning of the 18th cent. for protection of the salterns. The harbour is rocky and difficult to enter, and but few vessels are to be seen there.

SECTION III.

ORLEANOIS. — TOURAINE. — RIVER LOIRE. — LA VENDEE.— POITOU. — SAINTONGE.

ROUTE	PAGE	ROUTE	PAGE
48 Paris to Orleans . . .	172	59 Angers to Nantes—The Loire
49 Paris to Orleans, Branch to		(D)—RAILWAY . . .	206
Corbeil—RAILWAY . . .	172	60 Nantes to Poitiers, by Clisson .	208
51 Paris to Sceaux—RAILWAY .	179	61 Saumur to Niort . . .	212
52 THE LOIRE (A).—Gien to Orleans	180	62 Nantes to Bordeaux, by Na-
53 THE LOIRE (B).—Orleans to		poléon Vendée, La Rochelle,
Tours, by Blois and Amboise		Rocheftort, and Saintes .	212
—RAILWAY—Chambord and		64 Tours to Bordeaux, by Poitiers
Chénoucaux . . .	181	and Angoulême—RAILWAY .	216
54 Chartres to Tours, by Vendôme	195	65 Poitiers to Châteauroux, by St.
56 Tours to Loches & Châteauroux	195	Savin—Montmorillon . .	225
57 Tours to Saumur, by Chinon .	197	66 Poitiers to Rochelle and Roche-
58 THE LOIRE (C).—Tours to		fort—RAILWAY . . .	226
Angers, by Saumur—RLY. .	199

INTRODUCTORY SKETCH OF THE COUNTRY.

ARRIVED on the borders of the Loire, which divides France nearly in the centre, the traveller already finds himself amidst sunny landscapes, under the influence of the more genial climate of the south. The provinces bordering on that great river—Touraine, Orléanois, Anjou, Poitou—have been styled “the garden of France;” and the golden vineyards, the blooming orchards, the yellow corn-fields (especially those of La Beauce, the granary of France), and the acacia hedges bear testimony to the facile bounty of Nature. But little pains have been taken to improve her gifts; an ornamental garden or pleasure-ground is rarely seen: the earth seems to bring forth abundantly with less than the average amount of painstaking: “c’est le pays de rire et de ne rien faire.” The Loire, which forms its chief feature, is decidedly inferior in beauty to the Seine. In Touraine its banks are flat and monotonous, and it is only after passing Tours that it becomes really picturesque. Near Saumur it is a romantic stream; and from thence, with slight interruptions, nearly all the way to Nantes, the “considerable boldness of its banks, the richness of the culture, the wooded islands, and the animation derived from the swelling canvass of active commerce, conspire to render it eminently beautiful: but for the rest of its immense course it exhibits a stream of sand, and rolls shingles through the valley instead of water.”—A. Young. “Quel torrent révolutionnaire que cette Loire!” was the expression of Barrère the democrat: and the unbridled impetuosity of its course, its sudden inundations and changes of bed, justify the epithet, and are as detrimental to the utility as to the beauty of this main artery of France. The inundations of the Loire in October (18th and 19th), 1846, were most extensive and disastrous. It burst through the Levée or dyke in several places above and below Orleans, spreading over the plain round Orleans to an extent of 39 kilomètres; while in the streets of Orleans the water rose 5 mètres. 100 barges, with bargemen, were sent from Paris to assist the inhabitants of the city and neighbourhood, isolated by the flood. The inundations of June, 1856, were still more terrible. The country was laid under water, and the crops destroyed, for hundreds of square miles. Houses were destroyed, and fields either stripped of their soil, or covered with shingle and rubbish. In winter and spring the Loire rages, and swells, and has too much water, just as in summer it has too little. Its broad shoals greatly disfigure the landscape; its shallows and sandbanks render the passage of steamers intricate. Navigation is limited to very small vessels, and is frequently arrested in the dry months. The cave dwellings excavated in the cliffs of soft chalk (craie tufeau) along the river banks, and the long Levéé or dyke raised to protect the right bank between Blois and Angers, a distance of 96 m., from inundations, will be remarked as peculiar features in the borders of the Loire. The course of the Loire from Orleans to Nantes is productive of much interest, partly derived from its venerable cities, gloomy castles, and the great events in French history which have passed upon its banks.

These provinces of France, especially Touraine, were the chosen residence of her kings (les Valois) down to Louis XIV., and they afford a hundred sites preferable to the sands and morasses of Versailles. The vast and castellated Chambord, bristling with turrets and pinnacles, studded with Diana's crescent, where the Emp. Charles V. was entertained by his good-natured enemy Francis I.; the gloomy Blois, haunt of bigotry and scene of the deep-plotted assassination of the Guises; Amboise, the favourite abode of the warrior Charles VIII., and also witness to conspiracy and wholesale massacre; Chénonceaux, the retreat of Diana of Poitiers; Plessis, the den of the timorous bigot Louis XI.; Chinon, where passed the careless revelry of the indolent Charles VII., and the opening scene of the wondrous career of "the shepherd girl of Domrémy;" Fontevrault, the last resting-place of the lion-hearted Richard; Loches, with its dungeon of sighs and tears, a provincial Bastille, contrasting with more agreeable recollections of the beauteous and gentle Agnes Sorel; Dampierre, where Margaret of Anjou's life and sorrow ceased; and Nantes, which saw Henri IV. put his hand to the edict of toleration, and in later times witnessed the heroism and frailty of a daughter of Bourbon, his descendant:—all these are national monuments—integral portions, as it were, of French history. It is a region of interesting associations and recollections: here Joan of Arc first unfurled her victorious banner; here the chief events of the contests of religion in the 16th century occurred; this soil is watered with the blood of Guise and Condé; the fields of La Vendée are fattened with the unburied bones of the thousands who fell in the cause of loyalty, and in opposition to revolution and irreligion.

All the places above named or alluded to well deserve to be visited by the traveller. Orleans, though retaining few traces or relics of the Maid; Blois and Amboise; Tours, a fine city, though seated on a flat, amidst dust and glare; Saumur, once the stronghold of Protestantism; Loches, for its architectural remains and historical souvenirs, and pleasing situation in the charming valley of the Indre; black Angers, cradle of our early Plantagenet monarchs—all abound in specimens of ancient architecture, all possess more or less claims to attention. Chénonceaux is a charming specimen of the old French château, with turrets and extinguisher towers; without, all crinkum crankum—and within, lined with tapestry and armour; preserved unimpaired, and well kept up. Aizy-le-Rideau is nearly as perfect and beautiful, but with less interesting associations.

S. of Nantes, between the Loire, the sea, and the Sèvre Niortaise, lies La Vendée, celebrated in the history of the wars of the Revolution for its adhesion to royalty and opposition to innovation. The framework or foundation of that country is composed of the elevated plateau of the Gatine, whose crest is in no wise distinguishable, and which presents a series of hills, furrowed by narrow glens or valleys, through which run a few muddy streams. "It is an inextricable complication of heaths, brooks, heights, hollows, and little plains having no connection with one another, and apparently no general water-shed. It is covered with trees, yet has no forests; every field, every dwelling is surrounded by quick hedges, abounding with close-set trees, and surrounded by ditches, forming complete natural redoubts. The original lines of communication from place to place are hollow ways, cut so deep below the surface of the ground that a man's head in walking along them will not appear above it, and their vertical sides are surmounted by hedges. They are narrow, shady, and muddy or rutty, according to the season, and intersect one another so as to form a multitude of crossways, looking all like one another. Previous to 1840 there were few high roads, no large towns; the villages are scattered and thinly inhabited, estates very much subdivided, houses concealed by trees and bushes, and a peasantry of primitive and rude manners. These were the combination of circumstances which made this district a complete labyrinth, perfectly adapted as the theatre of the civil war which so long and so fearfully desolated it. It can easily be understood what a complete stronghold such a district as this would become when defended by a brave peasantry, fighting close to their own homes, and thoroughly acquainted with all its intricacies. It must be remembered that, for many years after the July Revolution, only two high roads, properly so called, existed in La Vendée—that from Nantes to Bordeaux, and from Tours to Poitiers—and these were 70 m. apart. The peasantry were all accustomed to the use of the gun; many were old poachers and capital marksmen. The tactics which they adopted was a species of skirmishing, never attacking the enemy but to advantage, themselves choosing time and place, when and where they found him entangled in the toils. At the word of command from their chief, these rude hands assembled at the place of rendezvous—scattered themselves on the enemy's approach, lining every hedge and copse, from which a murderous fire opened on all sides, the Vendéan marksmen picking out their men, while they themselves were invisible or unassailable. It is divided into three parts: the Marais, comprising the sands, salt marshes, and ponds bordering the sea-shore, intersected by dykes and canals, abounding in pastures, destitute of drinking-water; the Bocage, covered with thickets and heaths, rough and bristling, much cut up and well cultivated; and the Plaine, very rich and highly cultivated, abounding with corn and vines."

Englishmen will find it difficult at present to realize the ruin and devastation of the Vendean war. The country was literally ravaged and depopulated. Every mile almost is marked by some tradition of blood or battle; and quite independently of tradition, mere inspection will show that there is not a single house more than about 60 years old, and will show numerous ruins of the old houses, every house having been burnt. The inhabitants were all either killed, or driven into the large towns.

The traveller disposed to visit the theatre of the Vendéan war may do so from Nantes by way of Clisson; but the character of the country and its inhabitants is fast changing under the system pursued by Napoleon and Louis-Philippe; and intersected, as it has been by them, with a network of high roads, it has lost much of its primitive character.

The Railways to Rennes, Nantes, Brest, Orleans, and Tours bring this interesting country in a manner to the gates of Paris, and open the readiest line of communication between Paris, Lyons, Tours, Bordeaux, and the South of France.

ROUTE 48.

PARIS TO ORLEANS.

119 kilom. = 74 Eng. m.

This high road (now superseded by the Railroad—see Rte. 49) quits Paris by the Barrière d'Enfer; it passes through Bourg-la-Reine, where Condorcet, proscribed by the Convention, arrested and placed in jail, put an end to himself by poison concealed in a ring, 1794. It leaves about 1 m. to the rt. the town of Sceaux. (Rte. 51.)

12 Berny. Chatenay, about a mile to the rt. of Berny, was the birthplace of Voltaire, 1694. He was born in a house which belonged to the Comtesse de Bôignes.

8 Longjumeau, a small town on the Yvette.

Beyond this the road skirts the hill of Montlhéry (Rte. 49).

12 Arpajon. The Marolles Stat. of the Rly. is about 1 m. to the l. of this town (Rte. 49).

12 Etrécy, a walled town.

Morigny, on the l. of the road, beyond the river Juine, has a fine Ch.

8 Etampes, a Stat. on the Rly. (Rte. 49.)

Beyond this the road enters the monotonous plain of La Beauce, famed for growing corn.

9 Montdésir.

At Méreville, on the l., about midway in this stage, is the Château of Comte de Laborde.

10 Angerville.

14 Toury.

14 Artenay. Here the road from Chartres falls in.

6 Chevilly.

We here enter the Forest of Orleans; Cercolles is a small hamlet in the heart of it, inhabited by woodcutters. The suburb Bannier, more than  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. long, precedes the town of 14 ORLEANS (in Rte. 49).

ROUTE 49.

PARIS TO ORLEANS, AND BRANCH TO CORBEIL.—RAILWAY.

121 kilom. = 75 Eng. m.

Trains go to Corbeil (30 kilom. = 19 Eng. m.) in 1 hour, 6 times a day.

Trains to Orleans 7 times a day, in  $2\frac{1}{2}$  and 4 hours. Fares: 13 fr. 55 c., 10 f. 15 c., and 3rd class uncovered 7 fr. 45 c. Carriages 62 to 82 fr.

The railway was completed to Orleans in 1843. There is nothing remarkable on the road, and the scenery after the first few miles from Paris is ugly and uninteresting throughout.

Terminus in the Boulevard de l'Hôpital, near to the Jardin des Plantes. The line, at first skirting the walls of the Hospital of the Salpêtrière, is carried through a pretty country, at the foot of the slopes which border the l. bank of the Seine. It approaches the river closely at each curve which the Seine makes, and commands pleasant views of it. There are many pretty villas and country-houses on the river banks, and villages are numerous.

It skirts the forts and village of Ivry, and of Vitry, famed for its nursery-gardens, on the rt.

10 Choisy Stat. is close to a viaduct of 8 arches, which also support the towing-path along the Seine; 4 of the arches are left open to allow a passage between the Seine and the town. Choisy is a very thriving manufacturing town, whose population has increased within a few years to more than 3000. It was called Choisy-le-Roi, because Louis XV. made it one of his residences; the Château which he built for himself and Madame de Pompadour is demolished, except a fragment, now turned into a china manufactory. There are also manufactories of morocco leather (the largest in France), of glass, and of beetroot sugar, and a chemical work. Close to the station the Seine is crossed by a bridge of 5 arches, built 1802. The château and village of Orly are seen on the height to the rt. The rly. skirts the parc of Villeneuve-le-Roi. A bridge over the Seine gives access to it. We approach the vine-clad slopes bounding the valley of the Seine.

5 Ablon (C. Stat.). Ablon is composed almost entirely of neat villas. One of the 3 Protestant churches which the reformers of Paris were allowed by the Edict of Nantes to possess stood here.

9 Juvisy Stat., situated at the foot of a hill on the rt., is remarkable for its antiquity. Its bridge over the Orge anciently formed the boundary between the kingdoms of Paris and of Orleans. Isabella of Bavaria was arrested here as she was carrying off the Dauphin.

[At Juvisy the Branch Rly. to Corbeil separates from the main line to Orleans, turning off to the l., but continuing along the margin of the Seine, and running near the post road to Lyons (Rte. 105 A.). It passes through Châtillon, a little port on the Seine. At Viry is the fine garden of the Duchesse de Raguse.

Here is a suspension bridge built over the Seine by the late M. Aguado, the Spanish banker; and on the rt. the château of Romaud, the residence of De Thou.

The rly. cuts through a part of the park of Petit Bourg, broken up and parcelled out by its owner, the late M. Aguado. The Château, when it belonged to the Duc d'Antin, was often the residence of Madame de Montespan, who was visited here by Louis XIV.

3 Corbeil (C. Stat.) is a considerable manufacturing town of 3900 Inhab., on the Seine, here crossed by a bridge, at the influx of the Essonne. Here are very extensive Flour Mills and a corn warehouse (Magasin), belonging to Government, for the supply of Paris. The Ch. of St. Spire (Exupère), rebuilt 1437, after a fire, contains the tomb of Jacques de Bourgoïn, founder of the college of Corbeil, 1661, and the casket or reliquaire containing relics of St. Leu and St. Rembert. The little church of St. Jean en l'Ile was built by the Templars in the 13th centy.

Omnibus from Corbeil to Melun (Rte. 105). A continued street connects Corbeil with the village of Essonne, an industrious place, where the house of Bernardin de St. Pierre is shown.]

At Juvisy (19 kilom. from Paris) the Orleans Line, curving a little to the S.W., enters the valley of the Orge, the railway crossing previously the high road to Antibes. It traverses the gardens of

2 Savigny Stat., a village with a castle, fortified 1486 by Etienne de Vesi, chamberlain to Charles VIII. The handsome Château occupying its place is now the property of the Princess Dowager of Eckmühl. A great hemp market is held here. A viaduct of 3 arches over the Yvette leads to

2 (rt.) Epinay Stat., which is  $2\frac{1}{2}$  m. distant from Longjumeau on the post-road (Rte. 48). The quarries near this furnish paving-stones for the streets of Paris. Another viaduct of 5 arches carries you from Epinay Stat. You next skirt on the l. the forêt de St. Geneviève: on the rt., beyond the Orge, you see the château of Vacluse; Villiers, and its villas of Paris citizens; and Longpont, whose church of the 14th centy. is the sole relic of its ancient abbey. A portion of the parc of the handsome château d'Ormay is traversed before reaching

5 St. Michel-sur-Orge Stat. Montlhéry is about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. on the rt. Its ancient castle, of which the Donjon tower 100 ft. high remains, built (1012) by Thibaut-File-Etoute, forester of King Robert, was the terror of the kings of France in feudal times, and has been made famous by Boileau in the poem of the Lutrin:—

“ Ses murs dont le sommet se dérobo à la vue,
Sur le cime d'un roc s'allongeant dans la nue,
Et présentant de loin leur objet ennuyeux,
Du passant qui les suit semblent suivre les yeux.”

A bloody but indecisive battle was fought between Montlhéry and Longpont, 1465, between Louis XI. and the troops of the so-called “ Ligue du Bien Public,” commanded by the Comte de Charolais, afterwards Charles the Bold, of Burgundy. The spot still goes by the name of Cimetière des Bourguignons.

The line passes through the midst of the collection of hamlets called

2 Brétigny Stat., beyond which the rly. attains a summit level, and descends into the valley of the Juine shortly before.

6 Marolles Stat. The village and château lie a little on the l.; Arpajon (2400 Inhab.) is about 1 m. off on the rt. Beyond Cheptainville we pass through the park appertaining to the château of Mesnil Voisin, the property of the Duc de Polignac, a building of brick and stone on the borders of the Juine.

3 Lardy Stat. Farther on to the l. is the château Chamarande, built by Mansard, now the property of the Comte de Persigny, and magnificently furnished. The rly. skirts the walls of 6 Etréchy Stat. It here approaches the post-road, which passes through Etréchy, a walled town, and the two run parallel for some distance.

7 Etampes Stat. Buffet. (See Indicateur des Chemins de Fer.) Close to the Stat. rises a ruined tower called Guinette, the only remains of the royal castle and palace, built in the 11th centy. by King Robert, and dismantled by Henri IV. It is formed externally of 4 segments of circles.

Inn: H. du Bois de Vincennes.

This interesting ancient town, of 8000 Inhab., carries on a considerable trade in flour, the produce of its 40 water-mills. The main street is about 4 m. long from octroi to octroi. The Ch. of Notre Dame is distinguished by its very elegant spire, with tall pinnacles, of the period of transition from the Romanesque to Early French style. St. Gilles is another fine transition Ch. The tower, square, but curiously raised on an octagon base, has 4 gables with crockets, of the end of the 12th centy. St. Martin has a detached W. tower built at the time of the Renaissance in imitation of St. Gilles: it leans considerably, from its foundations having given way. The royal castle, resembling in its ground-plan that of Clifford's Tower, York, was given as an apanage to various remarkable personages, among others to the mistresses of the three French kings, Francis I. (Anne de Pisseleu), Henri II. (Diana of Poitiers), and Henri IV. (Gabrielle d'Estrées). The town consists of one long street, and retains several picturesque old houses of the age of the Renaissance: one of them is attributed to Diana of Poitiers. The H. de Ville is an antique building with turrets.

A high embankment, a bridge over the Louette, and a steep incline carry the Rly. from Etampes.

4 Monnerville Stat. The Rly. crosses the stream of the Chalonette on a viaduct, and ascending the valley of l'Hémery reaches the upland plain of La Beauce and a second summit level. It crosses the post-road on a bridge shortly before reaching 5 Angerville Stat. Coaches run hence once a day to Chartres.

14 Toury Stat. [Omnibus twice a day to Pithiviers, 15 m., famed for pâtés d'aloettes, for almond cakes, and for its trade in saffron.]

From this point the post-road and railroad run side by side, within a short distance of each other, so that the description of the one will serve for both.

14 Artenay Stat. Here the road from Chartres falls in. A little to the W. of the road, near Rouvray, an English detachment of about 2000 men, under Sir John Fastolf, escorting a convoy of provisions to the army besieging Orleans, defeated a force 4000 strong, consisting of French and Scotch, commanded by Dunois and the Count of Clermont, who endeavoured to intercept them. The French left 500 dead on the field, among them Sir John Stewart, constable of Scotland. This engagement, fought February 10, 1409, was called "The Battle of Herrings," from the salt fish for Lent, which formed the bulk of the provisions intended for the English.

A few months later, June 18, and nearly on the same ground, at Patay, the English forces under the same commander, retreating dispirited from Orleans, were put to flight at the first onset by the French, led on by Jeanne

ORLÉANS.

1. Notre Dame.
2. Préfecture.
3. Palais de Justice.
4. Hospital.
5. Jeanne d'Arc's Statue.

6. Maison de Diane.
7. " Agnes Sorel.
8. " Jeanne d'Arc.
9. " François Premier.
10. St. Pierre le Puellier.

11. St. Paul.
12. Evêché.
13. Museum.
14. Theatre.

d'Arc. Fastolf ran away, and the brave Talbot, who never turned back on an enemy, being left to fight almost alone, was made prisoner together with Lord Scales.

6 Chevilly Stat. Hence the rly. runs in great part through the Forest of Orleans, until it reaches the declivity of the valley of the Loire. Fossil remains of gigantic quadrupeds (Deinotherium) have been discovered in the freshwater limestone, near Chevilly.

5 Cercottes Stat.

Les Aubrais Junct. Stat. At the Buffet here the express trains to Tours and Bordeaux stop 20 min. Passengers for Orleans diverge here along a branch railway to 8 ORLEANS TERMINUS a little to the E. of the Porte Bannier.

ORLEANS.—Inns: H. d'Orléans, near the railway, good; H. du Loiret; H. de la Boule d'Or.

Orleans (the Roman Genabum, named afterwards Aurelianum, from M. Aurelius, who rebuilt it in the 2nd centy.) occupies an extensive level area on the rt. bank of the Loire; it contains 47,600 Inhab., and is chef-lieu of the Dépt. of the Loiret. In a town so important for its situation, nearly in the centre of France, midway on the course of the sunny-but shallow Loire, of consequence in a military point of view as commanding the passage over that river from the N. to the S. provinces of the kingdom, and conspicuous in history from a very early period—the traveller will probably expect more of interest than he will find. Orleans is not conspicuous for trade or manufactures, and is deficient in tangible historical memorials, chiefly owing to the cacoethes of pulling down for the sake of what is called improvement, which has prevailed to a most destructive extent during the last 50 years in the town council. The town gates and walls have been destroyed, several of the latter since 1830, and above all, nearly every memorial of the heroine of Orleans, Joan of Arc, has been swept away. The population is said to be increasing at present, but the town is dull and presents an appearance of having once been more populous and thriving.

A tolerably handsome street, Rue Royale, leads from the bridge over the Loire to the irregular Place du Martroy, which occupies nearly the centre of the town, and the street is prolonged from it under another name (Rue de Banier) to the Barrière de Paris and the rly.

A wide and handsome street (Rue Jeanne d'Arc) has been driven through a dense mass of old houses from the Rue Royale to the W. front of the Cathedral (St. Croix), the chief building of the town. The exterior was rebuilt in the 17th centy., at a period when Gothic architecture was not only on the decline, but had fallen into disuse, yet the style is tolerably pure Flamboyant. Henri IV. furnished the funds, to atone for the destruction by the Calvinists of the former church, to ingratiate himself (vain hope!) with the Jesuits, and to liberate himself from the pope's excommunication. He laid the first stone 1601, and the building, unfinished at his death, was continued under Louis XIII., XIV., and XV. The design of the W. front was made, 1764, by the architect Gabriel, and modified by his successor, M. Paris. It consists of 3 somewhat plain pointed portals, surmounted by 3 rose windows flanked by 2 towers of equal height (280 ft.). Over the W. portal are some incongruous coats of arms, supported by cherubs, including the shield of the old Bourbons, now lilyless. The S. porch is a Grecian abomination. The nave is flanked by double aisles. The magnificent effect of the interior depends in a great degree on the large size of the clerestory windows (double that of the side aisle windows).

A portion of the former cathedral, blown up 1567 by the Huguenots, who had previously turned it into a stable for their cavalry, in spite of the remonstrances of the Prince de Condé, still remains in the N. choir aisle: the choir ends in an apse. The chapels round the choir and one in the N. transept are in the best style of the 14th centy. and very elegant. The columns and arches of the nave (except that nearest the W. end) are also old and of Flamboyant character, and the roof was probably reconstructed from the old groinings.

The other churches are either modern or so mutilated as scarcely to deserve notice. St. Aignan is the finest; its much injured portal is in the florid style. It consists of choir and transepts, with deep apsidal chapels. Under it is a Romanesque crypt. The houses Nos. 2 and 4 in the Place adjoining this ch., formerly the Convent of St. Aignan, were built and inhabited by Louis XI. They are of plain red brick, with high pitched slate roofs, having dormer windows, and resemble closely the remaining fragment of the château of Plessis les Tours (Rte. 53). St. Pierre-le-Puellier (Petrus Puellarum) has a Norman N. porch and an ancient apse; and the beautiful ruined Ch. of St. Jacques has a splendid Flamboyant doorway.

The Hôtel de la Mairie, to the N.W. of the cathedral, is well deserving of a visit. It was formerly called the Hôtel Grosnot, built in 1530, and was the residence of the intendants of the province, but had fallen into great dilapidation, when it was purchased in 1853 by the town and restored in excellent taste at an expense of 23,000*l.* The ceilings and chimney-pieces in the Salons des Mariages and Salle des Conseils are magnificent. In one of these rooms François II. died. The chandeliers and chimney-piece in the Salle de Reception are said to be old and genuine. The sculptured caryatides are attributed to Jean Goujon. Round some of the rooms are the armorial bearings of the ancient échevins of the town commencing from the 14th centy., and it is remarkable that the families of several of those échevins still inhabit the town.

In the Rue des Hôtelleries, a narrow street on the S. of the Rue Jeanne d'Arc, is the Musée (the ancient Hôtel de Ville), a picturesque edifice of the time of Charles VIII. and Louis XII. Here will be found, in addition to a considerable number of ordinary pictures, a curious collection of local antiquities, carvings in ivory, wood, and stone, which once ornamented the houses and churches of Orleans, chiefly of the 15th and 16th centy. Amidst old furniture, cabinets, chimney-pieces, bas-reliefs and statues, is an elaborately carved chest, bearing the history of Solomon and David in relief; another, which came from St. Aignan, is ornamented with a representation of the coronation of Louis XI. A Massacre of the Innocents in stone, an enamelled triptic, and some elaborate iron-work, locks, &c., with Gothic patterns, chefs-d'œuvre of the hammer and anvil, also deserve notice.

Not far from the Musée, in the Rue des Albanais, and Rue Neuve No. 22, is the house of Diane de Poitiers, so called because she is supposed to have been laid up in it with a broken leg; but it appears to have belonged to the Bishop of Orleans, and was built 1552. The inner front facing the court is a good specimen of Italian architecture, such as we see in the works of Inigo Jones.

The Rue du Tabourg contains some interesting specimens of domestic architecture, as the house of Jeanne d'Arc (No. 35), and that of Agnes Sorel (No. 15), which is well worthy of examination, on account of its carved wood and stone work, its doors, the reliefs round the galleries facing the court, and the very curious and handsome staircase, in five flights, two above ground and three below ground in the cellars. The style of architecture and ornament, and the coats of arms, fleurs-de-lis, &c., render it probable that it was erected by Charles VII. for his mistress previous to 1470.

No. 23, Rue de la Recouvrance, called Maison de François Premier, is supposed to have been built for the Duchesse d'Etampes, 1540. No. 60, Rue St. Catherine, and a house in Rue de la Pierre Percée, are old and curious.

An ancient statue of Jeanne d'Arc, erected on the bridge soon after her death, was broken to pieces by the Revolutionists of 1792, to melt into cannon! An equestrian statue of her, armed and riding on chevalier, was erected on the Place du Martroy in 1855. We have reserved to the last the enumeration of the few remaining memorials, souvenirs, and relics of the heroic Maid of Orleans. A careful inquiry has discovered only the following:—

In the Salle du Conseil of the Hôtel de la Mairie is a portrait of her, painted 1581, from an older picture, it is said; it represents her in a theatrical attitude, and in a female costume of the time of Francis I., and apparently deserves little confidence as a likeness. A view of the town, hung up here, shows its ancient configuration about the time of the siege. King Louis-Philippe presented to the town a bronze cast of the statue by his gifted daughter, by far the worthiest representation of the inspired Maid.

The Maid entered the city on Friday, April 29th, 1429, in the teeth of the English army, which was vastly superior to the French force. She had convoyed a supply of provisions from Blois to the famished townsmen, who, as she rode in triumph through their streets on her charger, in full armour, bearing her sacred banner, looked on her as their guardian angel sent from heaven. She was lodged in the house of Jacques Bouchier, treasurer of the Duc d'Orléans, which she had selected, with that sense of modesty which always actuated her, because she would there be under the protection of a matron of good repute, his wife. It stood close to the Porte Renard (long since removed), and only in part exists in the house No. 35, Rue du Tabourg. The chamber which she occupied is removed, and a sort of pavilion of Italian architecture, erected in the latter part of the 16th centy., occupies its place.

The scene of the chief exploits of the Maid was the old bridge, which stood considerably higher up the river than the present one (b. 1761), and rested in the centre on an island. It was defended at its extremity, on the S. bank of the Loire, by a fort, or Tête du Pont, called Les Tourelles, which had fallen into the hands of the English before Jeanno's arrival, and, together with another tower in the centre of the bridge, formed a strong post, whence the English greatly annoyed the besieged by a battery of cannon planted on it. It was while reconnoitring the town from this battery that the English commander, the Earl of Salisbury, was mortally wounded by a shot from the walls, which drove a splinter into his head.

The Maid in her enthusiasm decided that this post should be first attacked; and though her design was opposed by the most skilful of the French commanders, they were obliged to yield, because she carried the people and soldiery with her. As the bridge had been broken between the Tourelles and the town, when that fort fell into the hands of the besiegers, a chosen band of troops with the Maiden at their head was pushed across the Loire in boats, and began the attack upon the Tête du Pont on the l. bank, which formed part of the Bastille des Tourelles. It was defended by a picked body of 500 English soldiers, under Sir Wm. Gladsdale, who for many hours kept their assailants at bay by their unerring flights of arrows and fire of cannon. At length the Maid, seeing her countrymen falter, snatched up a ladder, and planting it against the walls began to mount to the escalade, but an arrow pierced her corselet, and she fell as one dead into the ditch. She was with difficulty rescued by her own people from being made prisoner, and was borne to the rear. Here, however, after a few woman's tears called forth by the anguish of the wound, she received, as she said, the consolation of "her voices," and, encouraged by St. Michael, St. Catherine, and St. Margaret, &c., hurried back once more to the contest. Great was the dismay of the English when they beheld her, whom a few minutes before they had supposed mortally wounded, again leading the assault, and waving on high her magic banner. To the feeling of supernatural agency being exerted against them, was now added the failure of arrows and ammunition, and the hopelessness of aid from their army on the opposite bank. The spirits of the French proportionately increased, and they now began to assault the Tourelles from the side of the town, throwing beams over the

ROUTE 52.

THE LOIRE (A)—GIEN TO ORLEANS.

62 kilom. = 38½ Eng. m.

A Diligence daily.

The scenery of this part of the course of the Loire is not particularly interesting. The rly. from Paris to Lyons through the Bourbonnais passes from Gien to Nevers. The course of the Loire is described in Rte. 105.

Gien is a town of 5530 Inhab., on the rt. bank of the Loire, here crossed by a bridge, on the road from Orleans to Lyons. Its old church, St. Etienne, has been injured by repairs. Near it is a portion of the ancient Castle, now turned into the préfecture. It was at Gien that the Maid of Orleans crossed the Loire on her way from her native village, to announce her divine mission to "Charles the Dauphin" at Chinon.

1. A mound of earth, called Motte du Leon, is supposed to be a Celtic tumulus.

About 12 m. below Gien lies

1. Sully, a town of 2145 Inhab., possessing a wire suspension bridge, and an old Castle, resting its front upon the Loire, and separated from the town by a deep ditch. It is remarkable as the residence of the minister of Henri IV., Maximilian de Béthune, first Duc de Sully, who purchased it from its former possessors, the family de la Trémouille; and in the alterations which he made in the building everywhere effaced their arms to substitute his own, along with cannons, grenades, bullets, and similar ornaments. He passed here the latter years of his life, after his disgrace under Louis XIII., maintaining considerable state with his regiment of lancers, and occupying himself with the preparation of his work 'Sur les Economies Royales,' which he printed at a press established in one of the towers. It remained in the possession of his descendants down to 1807, when the last Duc de Sully died. One of them fitted up a little theatre in the château, and was visited by the literary men of his time, among them by Voltaire, who here commenced his Henriade. The building is now going to decay, and is no longer inhabited: in one corner a few bits of tapestry, old portraits, &c., have been brought together; also a statue of Sully.

rt. The Ch. of St. Benoît, one of the oldest and finest in the Dépt., was originally attached to a monastery, destroyed 1792. Its tower was lowered in consequence of a revolt of the monks against the royal authority under Francis I. It has a curious N. portal, some carved stalls, and one or two curiosities in the sacristy.

rt. Châteauneuf. Here are remains of a fine château.

The river is crossed by another suspension-bridge at

1. Jargeau, a town of 2358 Inhab., 12 m. from Orleans. It still retains a portion of its old walls, within which a few hundred English soldiers, with their commander, the Earl of Suffolk, shut themselves up, after the raising of the siege of Orleans, to resist the attacks of the French led on by Dunois and the Maid. She was struck down into the ditch by a stone while mounting a ladder to scale a breach made in the walls by the besiegers' cannon; but, recovering herself, instantly rose, and encouraged her followers by her voice and waving banner. The town was taken, and almost all the garrison put to the sword, in spite of the endeavours of the Maid to prevent the shedding of blood. Suffolk was made prisoner.

The Ch. of St. Etienne and St. Vrain, though injured by the Huguenots 1562, is still a fine building.

rt. A little below Checy, at Combleaux, is the opening of the Canal d'Orléans, which unites the Loire with the Seine.

rt. ORLEANS, Rte. 49.

broken arch to render it accessible. 300 men had fallen on the side of the English, but the surrender of the fort was at length decided by the death of their leader, whom a cannon-shot hurled into the river as he was crossing the drawbridge. That same evening the courageous Jeanne, whom but the day before the English had tauntingly desired to "go home and mind her cows," entered Orleans in triumph by the bridge which had remained many months closed; as she had herself foretold before she began the attack. Next day the English broke up the siege, burning the remaining bastilles which they had erected around the town to hem it in, and retreating from before the walls. Thus in seven days from her arrival in the town had the Maid accomplished its deliverance.

Opposite to the spot where the old bridge terminated, on the l. bank of the river, stands a small cross called Croix de la Pucelle; and the cellars, underneath the neighbouring cabaret called Le Bœuf, are part of the celebrated Tête du Pont included in the English bastille called Les Tourelles. They are now below the surface of the ground, but receive partial light from the old loopholes, which seem designed for the firing of cannon, and are furnished with rings above, from which it is probable that the guns were suspended by chains, as carriages were not then in use. The fort has two branches, and there is a vaulted passage from it, which the people say led to the river. In its present state the fort is nothing more than a damp, dirty, low cellar, possessing this interest alone, that it is perhaps the sole remaining contemporary relic of the siege.

The life of the Maid of Orleans has been admirably told in the Quarterly Review, No. 138, by one who has used the discrimination of the practised historian in sifting the true from the false, and has unravelled, for the first time, the mystery of her story, without depriving it of any of the charms of romance.

During the Wars of Religion, at another siege of Orleans, 1563, Francis Duc de Guise, the conqueror of Calais and defender of Metz, who commanded the Catholic army which invested the town, was assassinated before its walls by a fanatical young Huguenot, Poltrot de Méré. He was shot near the village Olivet, and died a few days after in the Château de Caubrai. Orleans was then justly regarded as the stronghold of the Protestant party, and continued so until the revocation of the Edict of Nantes banished those who followed the Reformed faith. Previous to that event its population amounted to 54,000.

Francis II., husband of Mary Queen of Scots, ended his insignificant life at Orleans, whither he had repaired to assist at the meeting of the Estates, in the building now the Mairie. In his last illness, at the instigation of his mother, Cath. de Medicis, he sent a deputation of pilgrims to Notre Dame de Cléry, promising to purge the kingdom of heretics if he ever recovered. The vow was accomplished not by him, but by Charles IX., at the instigation of the same wicked mother, in the St. Bartholomew's night.

Cæsar mentions Orleans in the following passage: "Carnutes Genabum concurrunt, civesque Romanos, qui negotiandi causâ ibi consisterant, interficiunt."

Promenades are formed round the town upon the line of the former ramparts.

Post-Office in the Rue d'Illiers.

Alphonse Gatineau, bookseller, has a shop well provided with guides, views, maps, and plans.

Railways to Paris, 7 trains daily; to Vierzon, Bourges, and Moulins; to Tours and Bordeaux (Rte. 53); to Nantes; and to Limoges.

Diligences:—to Gien; to Chateaudun.

Environs. The objects of interest in the vicinity of Orleans are—a. Notre Dame de Cléry, the burial-place of Louis XI. (Rte. 53.)

b. The Château de la Source, the residence of Lord Bolingbroke, is about 5 miles off; a cab costs 4 or 5 francs. Omnibus as far as Olivet, twice a-day. The way thither leads across the bridge over the Loire to the village of Olivet, whither omnibuses run every hour from Orleans, where the road turns to the l. The château is named from the little river Loiret, which here rises at once out of the ground in full flood, from a natural basin, but injured by art, close under the walls of the château, in the midst of the parc. After a course of only 10 m. it falls into the Loire, giving, however, its name to the department. With this exception, the grounds, laid out in the formal French style, have little interest; nor has the château itself any other than what it derives from having been the residence of Bolingbroke, who rented it from the proprietor during the latter years of his life when exiled from England. He was visited here by Voltaire. He wrote here his Reflections on Exile. It is a circuitous and tedious walk up to the source by land, owing to enclosures and ditches. There is a second and more copious source, produced, at the beginning of the last century, by the artificial means resorted to to confine the waters of the old source, which, in consequence, broke a new passage for themselves. Here Davoust signed the decree for breaking up the Army of the Loire, after the reverses of Napoleon in 1815.

Not far from La Source, near the road, is another handsome Château—de la Fontaine.

ROUTE 51.

PARIS TO SCEAUX—RAILWAY.

11 kilom. = 7 Eng. m. Trains in 26 min.

Terminus in Paris, Barrière d'Enfer.

The peculiarity of the line is, that, for the sake of economizing outlay, it is constructed upon steep slopes and curves of narrow radius, which are traversed in safety by railway trains called trains articulés, owing to the carriages being made to turn on their wheels like road carriages, the invention of M. Arnoux.

Arcueil. A pleasant village of 2700 Inhab., much frequented by the Parisians. In the valley is an aqueduct constructed by Mary of Medicis to take the waters of Rungis to Paris. There are also traces of the Roman aqueduct constructed by the Emperor Julian for a similar purpose. The ch. is of the 13th and 14th centuries, and fine.

Bourg-la-Reine Stat. (see Rte. 48) is situated in the valley, at the foot of the ascent on whose summit is the town of Sceaux. The intervening space is traversed by means of curves carried along the face of the slope in zigzags (lacets) of small radius.

Fontenay aux Roses, a village in the neighbourhood of which roses and raspberries are extensively cultivated.

Sceaux Stat. The town was once famed for its splendid Château, built by the Minister Colbert (1760), afterwards enlarged by the Duc de Maine, whose duchess assembled around her here a literary circle the most eminent in France. It was destroyed, except some of the offices and the menagerie, at the Revolution, and its park, laid out by Le Nôtre, ploughed up. A part of it has been made a public garden, and part belongs to the Duc de Trevisé (Mortier). The Terrace is a favourite walk of the Parisians. Sceaux is now celebrated for its large cattle-market, and has a considerable glass-manufactory. Florian, the novelist, who resided in the château and died here, is buried in its Cimetière.

In the neighbourhood is Chatenay, where Châteaubriand built a château.

A branch railway leads to Palaiseau, where are ruins of a very old castle, and to Orsay.

Beaugency Stat. (Inn: l'Ecu de Bretagne, good), an antique town of 4849 Inhab., prettily situated between two hills. Conspicuous above its old houses rises the square Donjon tower, of great antiquity (10th or 11th centy.) and solid construction, 115 feet high, adjoining the Castle built by le beau Dunois. The H. de Ville, designed by the architect Viart of Orleans 1526, has an elegant front ornamented with the arms of the Card. de Longueville and of the Comte de Dunois. The clocher de St. Firmin is the only remains of the ch. of that saint, and is now attached to the Hôtel Dieu. Beaugency gives its name to one of the best wines of the Orléanois.

Some miles off, beyond the Loire, is Eugene Sue's Sybarite château, the effeminate and selfish splendour of which was thought so inconsistent with his Republican professions.

The high road runs at the back of the town, skirting without entering it, and for the next 3 stages separates itself from the Loire, to avoid its windings, and passes the little town of

Mer Stat. The Château de Chambord (see p. 184) may be reached from this by a good road, crossing the Loire by a suspension bridge.

Menars le Château Stat., a village so called from the well-built but ill-kept château, which belonged to Madame de Pompadour, and under Louis XVIII. to the Duc de Bellune. It is now the property of the Prince de Chimay, who has established a college here.

Blois Stat. — Inns: Hôtel d'Angleterre, best; close to the bridge, comfortable, cheerful, and reasonable; civil landlord. H. de Blois, in the centre of the town. H. de la Tête Noire, bad.

This ancient and picturesque town, chef-lieu of the Dépt. Loire et Cher, containing 18,000 Inhab., is built upon a steep slope, crowned by its historic and gloomy castle at one end of the ridge, and by the cathedral at the other.

The quarter which reaches down to the river consists of modern houses, forming a handsome quay lined with rows of trees, and along it, between the town and the river, the high road passes. A bridge of 11 arches, surmounted by an obelisk in the centre, unites Blois with its suburb Vienne on the l. bank.

Numerous streets of stairs running up the hill, and winding narrow lanes lined with picturesque old houses, form the bulk of the town, and must be threaded to reach the very interesting **Castle*, for ages the residence of kings and princes, and the scene of momentous events, crimes, and murders. It has been degraded to a barrack, and was allowed to go to ruin until 1845, since which the government, with laudable zeal, has restored a part of it to its pristine condition, with excellent taste, under the direction of M. Duban. The interior is well worth visiting, on account of the splendid manner in which it is now decorated, or as they say restored. The joists and underside of the floorings are now gorgeously painted, and the walls covered with stamped canvas of brilliant patterns, said to be taken from those upon the leather originally used for the purpose. The E. front, of red brick, facing the square, is of the time of Louis XII., who rebuilt this edifice, in which he was born.

The fine Gothic portal, surmounted by a niche or oriel, is not in the centre of the façade: it leads into a court, the E. side of which is lined with a cloister, resting on pillars carved with a net-like panelling. In the N. corner tower is a grand turnpike staircase with groined roof, centering in a carved stone newal. On the rt. hand (N. side) is the pile raised by Francis I., corresponding in style (Renaissance) with part of Chambord, and overhanging the precipice behind. The W. side of the quadrangle was commenced under Gaston Duc d'Orléans from the designs of Mansard, but never finished, and is sadly out of character; that on the left (S.) is the most ancient and least like a palace, the work of the early Dukes of Orleans. An elegant winding staircase of stone, on whose rich roof the Salamanders of Francis I. have been replaced, leads into the suite of rooms in which the tragedy of the Guises was consummated. Tradition, it would seem, gloating over this deed of blood and deception, has preserved the memory of the minutest particulars connected with it; and, though the interior was stripped of almost all its decorations at the Revolution, and the walls whitewashed like those of a prison, points out the chamber and oratoire of Catherine de Medicis, the contriver of the plot,—the cabinet of Henri III., where he distributed with his own hand the daggers to his 45 gentlemen in waiting, who were to rid him of his rival, the hero of the barricades,—the Vieux Cabinet, at the entrance of which the victim, sent for by the king, was set upon by his assassins as he was turning aside the tapestry hung over the door, and fell pierced with more than 40 wounds,—the outer chamber where the body lay for 2 hours with a cloak and a cross of straw thrown over it, until the royal murderer, issuing from his den to look at the corse of the once mighty Henri le Balafré, spurned it in the face with his foot, saying, “Je ne le croyais pas aussi grand,” and then ordered it to be burnt, and the ashes thrown into the river. During the progress of the murder, prayers were being offered up for its success in the adjoining chapel, distinguished by the pendants which still ornament its roof. This happened Dec. 23, 1588:—on the following day the Cardinal de Lorraine, brother of the Balafré, was murdered in cold blood in another part of the castle.

The ground floor at the N.E. angle of the building is occupied by the Salle des Etats de Blois, to attend the meeting of which the Guises had been enticed hither from Paris, their stronghold. It was while seated at the council board in this hall, eating prunes de Brignolles, that the duke was summoned by the royal page to attend the king. This hall is supposed to be as old as the 13th centy.: a row of pointed arches supports its double, barn-like roof of wood. The king's throne was placed against the wall on one side.

One other memorial of that age of crime and superstition remains to be noticed,—it is a sort of pavillon raised upon an old tower, detached from the S. side of the castle, projecting over the Ch. of St. Nicholas towards the river: this was the Observatory of Catherine de Medicis, to which she used to retire, with her astrologer, to consult the stars. It bears the inscription “Uranis Sacrum.” A stone slab, like a tombstone, in front of the pavillon, served as a support for the astrolabe. The beautiful porcelain floorings in the rooms of Catherine de Medicis deserve notice.

A good general view of the gloomy château is gained by turning to the l., as you issue out of the great gate, through a vaulted passage into the Place du Collège, above which it rears aloft its sombre mass from a basement of grass-grown buttresses. Here we may remark the window from which Queen Marie de Medicis let herself down to escape when banished to Blois by the King her son, on the murder of Maréchal d'Ancre.

In the Eglise St. Vincent, now belonging to a sisterhood, facing this Place, is the tomb of Gaston d'Orléans, who passed here, in a sort of exile, the last 5 years of his insignificant life.

The **Ch. of St. Nicholas* is a very fine Gothic edifice, chiefly belonging to the 12th centy., surmounted by a central tower (pyramidal roof) and 2 W. towers (one rebuilt). The choir ends in a chevet of 7 arches resting on single shafts, and there are 3 apsidal chapels behind. The manner in which the capitals are executed, the regularity of the arches, and the elegance of the circular half Gothic half Byzantine dome deserve notice. This ch. has been restored.

The terraced Gardens attached to the former Evêché form a very agreeable walk, commanding a fine view of the town and river, extending to the distant towers of Chambord and Chaumont. The Cathedral, or Ch. of the Jesuits, said to have been built by Mansard, has been repaired. Not far from it a Maison des Fous, a handsome edifice, has been built. A vaulted sewer, partly cut in the solid rock, by some attributed to the Romans and called an aqueduct, runs under a considerable part of the town. It is known to the common people as the Pont de César.

The principal square has on one side the Préfecture, on another the Palais de Justice, and on a third the Halle au Blé.

In the old streets of Blois may still be found some interesting specimens of domestic architecture of the 16th centy. The H. d'Alluye retains an elegant portico in its inner court, and some rooms on the ground floor, but little altered. Miss Costello mentions a curiously-carved house in the Rue Pierre de Blois, leading to the Evêché; and there is an elaborately-sculptured staircase of wood representing St. George and the Dragon, with a central balustrade corded to the top, and compartments filled with various compositions.

Among the illustrious natives of Blois may be named the learned divine and chronicler, Peter of Blois, who died in England A.D. 1200; Louis XII.; and Denys Papin, for whom the French have claimed the invention of the steam-engine. A Statue of him has been erected here.

In 1814 the Empress Marie Louise, with the King of Rome, and the remnant of the Imperial court, government, and army, were despatched hither by Napoleon, who made his wife regent; and the last Imperial decrees were dated from hence.

[The interesting excursion to the Château de Chambord may be conveniently made from Blois, whence it is about 12 m. distant, a 2 hrs.' drive. Omnibus daily to and fro; a carriage with 1 horse 12 fr., with 2 horses 20 fr. The road thither runs up the l. bank of the Loire in sight of the Château of Menars on the opposite bank, on an embankment or Levéé, nearly as far as St. Dié, a village with a small Inn (au Grand Chambord), 1½ m. distant from the château. A cross road leads thence to Chambord. Inn, H. St. Michael, built by the Comte de Chambord, very good. The Forest of Chambord is badly preserved: there are more jays and magpies in it than partridges, and the deer have been kept down for the sake of the young wood. Guests at the inn readily obtain permission to fish in the streams, which abound with pike. Few fine trees remain in the forest, which displays now little sylvan beauty. Beware of ague.

* Chambord, the Versailles of Touraine, until Louis XIV. deserted that beautiful province to fix the royal residence in a swamp close to the metropolis. It has no beauty of site to recommend it, being placed in the midst of a sandy flat, surrounded by a park 21 m. in circumference, where the roe and deer cross the traveller's path. The château itself, though somewhat fantastic, is on the whole a grand edifice, surmounted by a vast group of turrets, minarets, and cones, which rise conspicuous at a distance from a solid basement, the chief features of which are 6 round towers of prodigious size, 60 ft. in diameter, which seem the types of all those which characterise French châteaux. Its architecture marks the transition between the fortified castle and the Italian palace, and is a fine specimen of the age and taste of Francis I., who built it, after his return from captivity in Spain, on the site of a favourite hunting lodge of the Counts of Blois, engaging Primaticcio to furnish designs for it. He laid the foundation of it 1526, and employed 1800 men constantly on its construction until his death. It was afterwards continued, though with less zeal, by Henri II. and Charles IX.; and even Louis XV. added the low screen at the back, which, though from Mansard's designs, is ugly, and of course inappropriate to the style of the original. It is at present the property of the Duc de Bordeaux, having been purchased for him and presented to him by public subscription. He has been confirmed in his possession, though the Bourbons have forfeited other estates in France, by the decision of the French law courts. Its 440 chambers, though uninhabited, are undergoing judicious repairs in capital style and in good taste, the rental of the estate, amounting to about 30000*l.* a year, being entirely spent by its present possessor on its restoration.

Enclosed within the building a central tower rises above all the rest, called Donjon, or Tour de la Fleur de Lis, from the lily of France, in stone, 6 ft. high, which surmounts it. After having escaped the hammer which defaced all its minor brethren so profusely scattered over the building, at the first Revolution, this monster lily was destined to fall at the second, but has since been restored.

This tower is filled with a very beautiful double spiral staircase, an architectural curiosity, so contrived that 2 parties may pass up or down at the same time without meeting, scarcely even seeing each other. It opens on each floor upon 4 corridors, branching from it like the arms of a cross, vaulted. The compartments of their roof were once filled with the Salamander and F. of Francis I. One of these corridors was converted under Louis XIV. into a theatre, for the first performance of Molière's Bourgeois Gentilhomme, in which Molière and his troop performed before the King, for the first time, 1670. The device of Henri II. and Diana of Poitiers, the H. and D. entwined with the crescent, are distributed over the parts which he built, but left unfinished.

It is worth while to mount to the terrace and top of the tower to examine the details of the building, its solid masonry inlaid with morsels of black slate cut into the shape of lozenges, crescents, &c. Its rich niches, its classic chimneys converted into ornaments instead of being eye-sores, its balustrades and flying buttresses, are all curious specimens of the style of the Renaissance, resembling somewhat the Elizabethan architecture of Burleigh. The roof is like the hull of a ship, and must contain a forest of timber. From the top of the tower you look down upon the wide forest and wilderness of a park with its avenues.

Since the commencement of the recent repairs and restorations, it is once more a pleasure to traverse the labyrinth of rooms, though showing no traces of the frescoes with which they were decorated by Jean Cousin. The well-read traveller, in imagination, can repeople their halls and corridors with the brilliancy and beauty of the courts of Francis I. and Henri II., recalling the time when Charles V. was entertained here on his passage through France, 1539, by his generous rival, or that when poor Mademoiselle de Montpensier here lost her heart to the fickle Lauzun.

Among the occupants of Chambord since it was deserted by its royal owners, was Marshal Saxe,—that veteran of a hundred fights, to whom it was given by Louis XV. He brought with him 6 cannon taken from the enemy, and a regiment of lancers, whom he reviewed daily from the terrace, although with one foot already in the grave. He died here 1750. It afterwards became the asylum of Stanislas King of Poland, and his queen Maria Leczinska. It was plundered and dismantled by the mob of 1792, and sold as national property. Napoleon bestowed it in 1809 upon Marshal Berthier, from whose widow it was purchased by a body of Loyalists, and presented to the Duc de Bordeaux, as already mentioned.]

[Another excursion may be made from Blois to Valençay by Selles, an old town on the Cher. The Château de Valençay, built by Philibert Delorme in the reign of Francis I., is interesting architecturally as a specimen of the style of the Renaissance, and historically as the prison-house allotted by Napoleon to Ferdinand VII. of Spain from 1808 to 1814, and still more as the residence of the late Prince de Talleyrand during the latter part of his life. The larger rooms contain portraits of monarchs (Napoleon and Louis-Philippe presented by themselves) and of statesmen, his contemporaries. His study and bedchamber remained in 1845 exactly as he left them: his shoes, one furnished with steel spring and bandages for a club foot, his walking sticks, his desk, writing materials, together with his robes, stars, and orders, in a glass case, may still be seen.

Talleyrand's last resting-place is in a vault beneath the chapel of a small nunnery, in a narrow street off the Place at Valençay. It is entered through an iron trap-door in the floor, and in one corner a dark stone sarcophagus contains all that remains of the wily minister of so many sovereigns. By the marriage of a niece of the Duchesse de Dino, it now belongs to the family Montmorency.

Returning to Selles, the traveller may proceed down the valley of the Cher by the town of Montrichard to Chénouneaux, and thence to Amboise. Between Selles and Montrichard, but on the opposite side of the Cher is St. Aignan, where there is a magnificent Château of various ages, formerly belonging to the Ducs de St. A. It is inhabited and kept up with beautiful gardens and terraces, fine trees, and profusion of flowers; the gardens open to the townspeople.]

At Blois begins the colossal dyke called La Levée, commenced in very ancient times under the Carlovingian monarchs, and augmented and improved by different kings of France, to restrain the furious Loire within its bed, and check its destructive inundations. It runs along the rt. bank as far as the mouth of the Mayenne, below Angers, a distance of about 100 m. It is faced with masonry kept in constant repair, and the high road is carried along its top. It is a considerable work, though vastly inferior to the dykes of Holland, and was burst through by the inundations of 1846, and 1856. There are other very extensive dykes on the l. bank in different portions of the river's course.

This high embankment conceals from the view of those who travel by water the wide and fertile plain beyond it; only now and then the tops of houses are seen rising above it.

The first part of the rly. beyond Blois is close to the Loire, and is rather pretty. Conspicuous is the

Château de Chaumont, opposite to Onzain, beyond the Loire, a conspicuous building picturesquely situated on a height, with machicolated towers, forming 3 sides of a square. It was the residence of Cath. de Medicis, whose chamber is shown, and who here spent her time in plotting and in reading the stars until the death of her husband, Henri II., when she obliged his mistress, Diana of Poitiers, to exchange her bijou château of Chénouneaux (p. 188) for this, which, however, Diana does not appear to have inhabited. It was the birthplace of the Cardinal George d'Amboise, 1460, the wise and popular minister of France under Louis XII. The arms, still visible, cut in the masonry, are a blazing hill,—chaud-mont.

The rly. then traverses an arid but fertile plain, the whole of which was covered with 4 ft. of water by the floods in 1856. Near Amboise whole fields were covered with 3 or 4 feet of gravel. The castle of Amboise, on the opposite side of the Loire, is seen from the rly.

Veuves: a little beyond this the rly. enters the province of Touraine, and the Dépt. Indre et Loire.

Amboise Stat.—Inns: Lion d'Or; cheap and homely. At the Cygne, on the rt. bank of the river, a good horse and cab costs to Chénouneaux 10 fr., or thither and to Loches 15 fr.

Amboise, an old and languid town of 4600 Inhab., stands on the l. bank of the Loire, here divided by an island, upon which the 2 bridges which cross the river rest. In the chapel of St. Florentin is a celebrated Holy Sepulchre, formerly in the chapel of St. Amboise. It consists of a group of figures as large as life, well executed in baked clay and coloured, representing the entombment of our Lord. The figures are said to be portraits of the family of an intendant of the palace named Babou, the three Marys being likenesses of his daughters, who were in turn mistresses of Francis I., as the story goes!! Marie de Beauvilliers and Gabrielle d'Estrées, mistresses of Henri IV., were daughters of 2 of these ladies.

The principal and most conspicuous object is the Castle, long the residence of the Kings of France, and late the property of the King of the French, Louis Philippe. Its buildings, flanked by round towers roofed with cones, reduced to a very small portion of their original extent, occupy the platform of a lofty rock, escarped in front and rear. Louis Philippe, who inherited the castle as the descendant of the Duc de Penthièvre, caused the old houses to be swept away from the base of the rock, so as to form an opening from the bridge to a tunnel which he bored through the rock and under the castle. It is vaulted with masonry. Two enormous towers, 90 ft. high and 42 in diameter, spring from the ground at the base of the rock, and rise to the level of the other towers. They contain 2 winding, inclined planes of so gradual a slope that horses and even carriages can ascend them to the summit of the rock. The one in front has been closed to form a saloon, but that behind, on the l. as you emerge from the tunnel, still gives access to the castle, and is remarkable for its elegant florid Gothic doorway and groined roof. This and most of the other existing buildings date from the time of Charles VIII., who was much attached to Amboise, having been born here, 1470; he also died here, 1498.

Down to 1847 the brave Arab chief Abd-el-Kader and his family were confined in the castle. He was released by Louis Napoleon, 1853.

In the interior of the château there is nothing worth seeing. The improving hand of the late possessor had pierced holes as big as the embrasures of a battery in its old and massive walls, to admit broad day into vaults once perhaps cachots or oubliettes, but now, by the aid of whitewash, ventilation, and stoves, converted into comfortable kitchens, larders, pantries, and cellars; while the upper rooms, papered, polished, and filled with cast-off furniture from the Palais Royal, preserve no traces of antiquity. Yet in them perhaps was decided the bloody doom of those 1200 miserable and misled Huguenot prisoners concerned in the well-known "Conjuration d'Amboise," which had for its object to extricate the young and simple king Francis II. from the clutches and influence of the Guises, 1560. The secret of the plot was betrayed to the Duc de Guise by one of the conspirators, and its leader, La Renaudie, seized and hung on a gibbet in the centre of the bridge. The remainder of the conspirators were dispersed and everywhere seized; the castle walls were decorated with the hanging bodies of the criminals, and the courts and streets of the town streamed with blood, until the wearied headsman, resigning his axe, consigned the remainder to other executioners, who drowned them in the Loire. Such was the extent of the carnage that the court was driven from Amboise by the stench of the dead bodies. This butchery formed the prelude to the still more horrible tragedy of St. Bartholomew. In 1470 the exiled Queen Margaret of Anjou and her son, through the intervention of the cunning Louis XI., were reconciled in this castle to her quondam foe, by whom her own husband had been dethroned, the Earl of Warwick, the king-maker. Hatred to Edward IV. became the bond of union, and they agreed in vowing vengeance on him.

The gardens are well kept up, and the view from their terraces is as good as that from the château itself, which is not worth entering, as it contains no paintings or architectural decorations, and is simply furnished as a country gentleman's house. Within the garden, however, stands the little **Chapel*, one of the most exquisite morsels of profusely florid Gothic in France, restored by Louis Philippe in a manner creditable to French taste. It is in the form of a cross, was built for Anne of Brittany, and is dedicated to St. Hubert, whose miraculous meeting with the stag, having a cross growing between its horns, is curiously carved over the rich doorway. This and the interior are panelled throughout, or decorated with foliage of the most delicate sculpture. The leaves, showing all their fibres, crisped and curled round the edges like kail, are cut behind in a style more common in ivory than stone. Interspersed among the foliage are singular and grotesque figures; along the wall runs a sort of frieze of stone-work; the roof is elaborately groined, and the pendants hanging from it carved with grotesques, the whole reminding one of the richness of Henry VII.'s chapel, without its arrangement.

The Ch. of St. Denis, restored, is interesting to the architect and antiquary.

In the cliff a little above the castle, and entered from the garden behind a private house, are very singular caverns called Les Greniers de César. They consist of a lofty, narrow excavation running in a direct line into the rock, evidently once divided into three stories, as the broken edges of the chalk vaulting which formed the roofs and floors still remain; and by their removal the three are thrown into one. The walls are covered with cement. At the extremity is a round, vaulted chamber lined with masonry; at one side runs a staircase cut in the rock, descending towards the river and ascending to a level with the roof of the high excavation, where it leads to three other similar vaulted chambers, constructed, it is supposed, to hold corn. There is a tradition that César, after conquering the Gallic confederation, reached the Loire at this spot, and formed a camp, traces of which still exist on the cliff above, together with these caves below it, to serve as store-houses. It seems likely that these caves had a much later origin, though their destination was probably for granaries or cellars.

Leonardo da Vinci spent the last 2 years of his life in the Château de Cloux-Luci, still existing on the skirts of the town, and died there 1519, not in the arms of Francis I. He is supposed to have been buried in St. Florentin's ch., of which only the foundation remains.

[A very pleasant excursion may be made from Amboise to **Chénonceaux*, 10 m. S. The road lies through the forest of Amboise (till 1852 a domain of the Orleans family), passing on the rt. the pagoda of the park of Chanteloup, whose magnificent château, the retreat of the Duc de Choiseul, discarded minister of Louis XV., when banished from the court to his estate by way of punishment, has disappeared. After the Revolution it belonged to le Comte Chaptal, the distinguished chemist and minister of Buonaparte, who established here a refinery of sugar from beetroot, which he first brought to perfection. The château was pulled down and sold about 1830 by the "bande noir."

At Bléré (Inn: H. de la Promenade), whose church has a good central octagon tower and spire of early date, we reach the valley of the Cher; and a road turning to the l. up the rt. bank of the river, covered hereabouts with black vines (gros noir), leads to the village of Chénonceaux (possessing a poor auberge), which is connected by an avenue with the #### Château de Chénonceaux.

In front of the building extends a stately terrace lined with stone balustrades set with orange-trees, approached by a flight of steps; and adjoining is a pleasure garden.

Château Chénonceaux has nearly as many souvenirs about it as Amboise, but not of so disagreeable a kind. It was built in the more joyous days of Francis I. Its picturesque round towers, bartizans, and bridged moat, though still preserving the shape of a castle, were not meant for defence; and its front is covered over with graceful and delicate Italian ornaments, such as are seen at Longleat, at Audley End, and in works of Inigo Jones. It stands on the river Cher: literally on, for it is built partly upon a bridge, and the river passes under it. At a distance it is most picturesque, with its green court, its single advanced round tower, occupied by the Concierge, and pretty formal gardens around. Its interior is almost unaltered since the day it was built, besides, what is so rare in France, being well and carefully kept up, retaining all its old furniture, old cabinets, old china, enamels, and glass. Its vaulted hall is hung with armour, its walls are covered with stamped cloth, its doors are screened by tapestry curtains which draw aside, and the rich ceilings are of blue ground studded with stars. You are shown the very glass out of which Francis I. drank; Mary Queen of Scots' mirror, &c. But its chief interest depends on the persons who have lived in it. It was given by Henri II. to his mistress, Diana de Poitiers, who enlarged it by extending the bridge, previously constructed over only part of the river, quite to the other side, and raising upon it a handsome, but less quaint and interesting building, of two stories. Hither her royal lover used to repair after hunting in the neighbouring forest of Loches. Her initial D is plentifully introduced combined with his H, thus [D]. She was, however, dispossessed of her fair mansion, on the death of Henri, by the unscrupulous Catherine de Medicis, whose bedroom, with the original furniture, is still shown. It was bequeathed by her to Louise de Lorraine, widow of Henri III.: her chamber is still hung with black. It descended to the Duchesse de Vendôme and the Condés. Nor does the list of distinguished inmates cease here, for near the end of the last century all the wits of the time used to assemble here, drawn together by the owner of the mansion, Madame Dupin, widow of a fermier général, who died 1799. In her time, Voltaire, the exiled Bolingbroke, Rousseau, and many others, were her constant visitors; and in the little, dusty, faded theatre, which occupies the end of Diana's gallery, Rousseau's opera, 'Le Devin du Village,' was performed for the first time. The collection of historical portraits, including all the persons who have lived here, is very curious; among them a whole-length portrait of Diana, said to be by Primaticcio, in the costume of her namesake, the goddess, with a dog in a leash, a bow at her back, and wearing a taffeta petticoat, embroidered with golden fleurs-de-lis. Here are also portraits of Henri IV., of Sully, of Rabelais, and a cast of the sweet face of Agnes Sorel from her monument at Loches. The most remarkable thing about Chénonceaux, perhaps, is that it escaped the ravages of the Revolution, owing solely to the respect which the character of Madame Dupin, its mistress, commanded. The Château without the estate was purchased, 1864, for 800,000 fr., by M. Pelouse, son of the famous chemist. Strangers are obligingly admitted to see the interior.]

[Loches (Rte. 56) is about 18 m. S. of Chénonceaux; the road runs partly through the forest of Loches. It is a dreary ride.]

After Amboise the country becomes exceedingly populous and fertile, and is admired by Frenchmen, and called a belle plaine, but to an English eye is arid and dreary. Many of the houses are partly excavated out of the rocks. Near Vouvray is Frillière. Near this the banks of the river rise into considerable heights; and on the top of a projecting promontory stands, conspicuous from afar, rt., the feudal beacon-tower, called Lanterne de la Roche Corbon, not unlike a great factory-chimney of modern times. It anciently communicated by telegraphic signals with the Castle of Amboise. It is about 50 ft. high, and stands on the very verge of the cliff, above the small village of Roche Corbon, remarkable because most of its habitations are cut out of the limestone (craie tuffeau). They are sometimes faced with walls, at others with partitions of the living rock, and are prettily festooned with vines. One mass of rock which must have slipped from above, and now lies in a nook, is turned into 2 cottages of 2 stories. These habitations seem comfortable, and are mostly provided with little gardens in front. Some large excavations which belonged to the castle of Roche Corbon, with fragments of masonry, remain. It is worth while to climb up to the top of the rock, beside the Lanterne, to look down upon the Loire from thence—a pleasing prospect. It is possible to scramble through the vineyards along the top of the cliff nearly to St. Radegonde, and so to reach Tours (4½ m.), but there is no path.

At Vouvray the rly. describes a great curve, and crosses the river to the l. bank on a fine bridge 42 feet above the water.

Mont Louis Stat. This village, composed partly of caves cut in the rocks, was the place of meeting of an ecclesiastical assembly, convened to witness the reconciliation of Henry II. with Thomas Becket only 3 months before his assassination,

The river Cher and the canal of the Cher are traversed by bridges, and the cathedral towers are seen.

St. Pierre de Corps Stat. Passengers for Tours here change carriages and are conveyed along a branch-line to TOURS Terminus on the S. side of the town. It is also terminus of the lines to Bordeaux (Rte. 64) and Nantes (Rte. 58).

TOURS.—Inns: H. de l'Univers, very good and clean, w. c.; H. de Bordeaux; both these are near to the railway terminus; Faisan, good; H. de Londres, comfortable; H. du Croissant, quiet; La Boule d'Or, in the Rue Royale.

Tours, chief town of the Dépt. Indre et Loire, and once capital of Touraine, is situated in the midst of the fertile but flat valley of the Loire, on its l. bank, and between it and the Cher, and has 33,500 Inhab. The old highway from Paris to Bordeaux and Bayonne here crosses the river by its bridge of 15 arches, 1423 ft. long, and traverses the whole extent of the town through its main street, the Rue Royale, a fine avenue running in a direct line from the bridge, near which a statue of Descartes is erected, and containing the principal cafés, shops, and offices of the diligences. At its entrance from the bridge stands on the rt. the H. de Ville, and on the l. the Musée, while in front run quays and planted platforms, serving as promenades. The town is no longer remarkable for the many objects of curiosity which it possessed before the sweeping convulsion of the Revolution; and the charms of its situation, in an unvaried plain, have been greatly overrated by the French. The Loire, though a fine river at certain seasons, contributes less to its beauty than might be expected, owing to a great part of its channel being left bare in summer, so that only three or four of the arches of the bridge bestride the shrunken stream, while the rest traverse wide, ugly beds of bare gravel. Owing to the flatness of the surface and the dust there are few interesting walks or rides in its immediate vicinity. The place is hot, dusty, and glaring in summer, and very cold in winter, and it is difficult to understand why it should have been so favourite a residence for English, except that there are an unusual number of good houses in the town. However, our description of the town shall assume the form of a walk which may occupy a long morning or a short day.

Starting from the main street, the Rue Royale, a turning on the l. (Rue de l'Archevêché) leads you to the Archevêché, approached by a handsome Italian portal, at the side of which rises the stately Cathedral of St. Gatien. The W. front, consisting of 3 lofty portals enriched with florid ornaments, niches, and foliage, surmounted by a window having a 4-pointed head, astonishes by its vastness: it dates from about 1510, and displays the character of the Flamboyant style. The 2 towers which flank it are 205 ft. high; their domed tops, carved as with scales, are somewhat later than the rest, and of a debased Italian style, not conformable with the lower part.

The interior, 256 ft. long and 85 ft. high, is in a mature and noble style of Gothic resembling early English, with varied capitals to the columns. The choir was begun 1170, and the nave carried on to completion in the reign of St. Louis; but the W. end is still later, of the 15th century. In the beautiful old painted glass surrounding the choir, and shedding a venerable gloom about the altar, may be seen the arms of St. Louis, of his mother, Blanche of Castile, and those of the town, a group of towers. The fine rose-window in the N. transept is injured in effect by a thick stone prop carried through the middle to support the roof. At the angle of the S. transept and aisle is the marble monument of the 2 only children of Charles VIII. and Anne de Bretagne, in consequence of whose early deaths the succession passed to the branch of Valois Orléans. Figures of the 2 princes, watched by angels, recline on a sarcophagus of white marble decorated with the arms of France, with dolphins, bas-reliefs, and ornaments in the style of the Renaissance: it is the work of 2 Tourain-geaux artists named Juste, contemporaries of Jean Goujon. Near the choir two ancient frescoes have lately been uncovered.

It is worth while to ascend the towers on account of the view, which includes Amboise, Plessis les Tours, and the course of the Loire and Cher. The woodwork of the roof, a masterpiece of carpentry, covering the stone roof, and the elegant, light, spiral staircase (Renaissance), resting on a crown of open groins or ribs, in the N. tower, should be seen at the same time.

Passing from the cathedral towards the quay, a circular and machicolated tower is seen on the rt., enclosed within the Infantry Barracks: it is the only remaining part of the Castle built by Henry II. of England in the 12th centy. From this tower Charles de Lorraine, the son of Henri Duc de Guise (le Balafre), imprisoned by Henri III. after his father's murder at Blois, escaped by letting himself down by a rope. Turning to the l. and following the line of the quay, you reach the iron wire Bridge (Pont Suspendu) erected by M. Seguin 1847, and lower down the stone Bridge (b. 1762) already mentioned: several of its arches have given way at different times, owing to the river undermining its foundations.

The Musée contains a collection of nearly 200 bad pictures, chiefly copies, and some casts; it is open to the public only on Sundays, 12-4. A Last Judgment, brought from the chapel of the castle of Plessis, may be mentioned as curious.

A little way up the Rue Royale, on the l. in going from the bridge, is the Ch. of St. Julien, until 1847 desecrated and turned into a remise and coach-house for diligences, but happily rescued by a subscription raised among a few private persons amounting to 80,000 frs., and again opened for divine service. It is a fine pointed edifice, date 1224, except the lower part of the W. tower, which is founded upon circular arches, with Romanesque capitals belonging to an older church.

The 2nd street on the rt. is the Rue de Commerce; and No. 35 (now Hôtel Gouin) is the handsomest old mansion in the town, and a perfectly preserved specimen of the style of the Renaissance (15th centy.) adapted to domestic architecture: its front is richly decorated with coats of arms, scroll-work, &c.; its dormer windows are terminated by crocketed gables; a turret projects in front, below which is the entrance, and round the bottom runs a light trefoil balustrade. It was built by Jean Xaincoings, Contrôleur des Finances to Charles VII., 1400, and has been lately restored by M. Gouin.

Continuing our walk along the Rue de Commerce we come to the Rue des Trois Pucelles, where the house No. 18 passes for that of Tristan l'Hermite, the ill-omened executioner of Louis XI. (see 'Quentin Durward'), though there is no authority for the designation. It is a brick mansion, apparently of the 15th centy.: its front terminates in a gable, and is flanked by a stair turret, 70 ft. high, curiously vaulted with brick, overtopping the neighbouring houses and commanding a view of Plessis. Its door and windows are enriched with florid canopies, that over the door supported on twisted columns; but the remarkable feature, to which alone the house owes its name, is that the string courses dividing the 3 stories are formed by ropes in relief, ending in fantastic knots so as to resemble the noose of a halter. The same ornament occurs on the tomb of Anne of Brittany, and on her chantry at Loches, and was adopted by her as an heraldic badge of her widowhood. This house may have belonged to her or to some of her retainers. On the wall may be read the motto, "Assez aurons, et peu vivrons," and "Priez Dieu pour—." The court-yard walls are similarly decorated, and on the ground floor is an elegant vaulted recess for a lavatory. In the same street, on the opposite side, is a house of evidently much greater antiquity (14th centy.), having a vaulted ground floor, and an arcade of pointed arches running along its first floor.

In going hence to the Vieux Marché, a corner house, now a shop, is remarkable for the carvings on the front, representing the Holy Family.

In the centre of the market-place itself is a white marble fountain, La Fontaine de Baune, of considerable elegance, in the Renaissance style, executed by the brothers Juste. Among its ornaments are the porcupine, the crest of Louis XII., and the ermine of Anne of Brittany.

Two Towers, rising on either side of the Rue St. Martin, are conspicuous objects in all views of the town: one, containing the clock, having a domed top, is called the Tour de St. Martin, or d'Horloge; the other, La Tour de Charlemagne, was so named, it is said, because his wife Luitgarde was buried below it. They deserve notice and mention as the only remaining relics of the vast Cathedral of St. Martin of Tours. The palladium of this celebrated building was the shrine of St. Martin, the first metropolitan of Tours (A.D. 340), which became to the barbarians of the dark ages what Delphi was to the Greeks—the oracle which kings and chiefs came to consult in the beginning of the 7th centy. The concourse of pilgrims to this shrine occasioned the old Roman town Cæsarodunum of the Turones to swell to ten times its original extent. The great ecclesiastical establishment, of which this church was the centre, spread civilization and religion through the country, and its archbishop became the patriarch of France and one of the most influential persons in the state. At the head of the chapter even the kings of France were proud to enrol themselves.

Its treasures in precious metals, jewels, &c., amounted to 575 marcs of gold and 2200 marcs of silver in 1562, when it was pillaged by the Huguenots, who broke the images, melted the lamps, and burnt the relics deposited here. After flourishing for 12 centuries, the church, an enormous edifice, was utterly destroyed at the Revolution, excepting two towers out of the five which adorned it. On viewing the space which now intervenes between them, some idea may be formed of its extent. One of these stood at the W.

end, the other at the N.W.; both seem from their style to date from the 12th centy. Attached to that of St. Martin may be seen Romanesque pillars and capitals of an earlier edifice. In 1861 the rock-hewn tomb of St. Martin (?) was discovered under a house which occupied the place of the high altar. A chapel has been built over it. Louis XI., through gratitude for supposed benefits derived from the Saint's intercession, surrounded St. Martin's shrine with a railing of solid silver which weighed nearly 6776 marcs. His needy follower, Francis I., had it taken down and converted into good crown-pieces, which were called "testons au gros bonnet."

Bishop Gregory of Tours, a native of the city, was buried within the walls of this church.

A florid Gothic portal, forming the front of a house in the street running from the market to the Rue St. Martin, was one of the residences of the chapter.

The Halle aux Blés is a secularised church, dedicated to St. Clement, gutted to a mere shell. It is a building of the 16th centy.; its florid N. porch, though mutilated, still retains portions of foliage cut with much delicacy. There is nothing to be seen within.

The ch. of La Riche contains some very old painted glass.

The Palais de Justice is a splendid building. There are extensive Barracks at the river-side near to the suspension bridge.

On the N. of the old Paris road, outside the town at the waterside, is a round tower, together with a gate-house and a few crumbling foundations of pillars and walls, the sole remains of the once magnificent Abbey of Marmoutiers (Majus Monasterium), one of the richest in France, founded by St. Martin, in which the sainte ampoule, or vessel of holy oil, given by an angel to St. Martin to rub a bruise which he had received, was preserved, an object of veneration with pilgrims. It was sent to Chartres to anoint Henri IV. at his coronation. A nunnery and ch. have been built within the domain. Two chapels have been fitted up in caves adjoining the ruins of the N. transept, dedicated to St. Martin and St. Brice.

Tours was long famed for its manufacture of silk, established 1480 by Louis XI., who brought over and settled here Italian weavers. This branch of industry, however, was ruined by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, by which the population was reduced from 80,000 to less than one half. This tyrannical act transferred 3000 families, with their wealth and industry, from France to Holland, and the manufacture dwindled away at Tours to take root at Lyons. Tours has now no manufacture of great importance, but receives some life from being a place of much passage, planted on one of the great high roads of France. The pruneaux de Tours, once so celebrated, are now far less esteemed in commerce than the dried plums of Gascony and Provence.

Tours is a city of some importance in history. The Turones, its ancient inhabitants, joined the league of the 64 Gallic towns under Vercingetorix against Julius Cæsar, and are mentioned by Lucan, "Instabiles Turones circum-si castra coerunt."

The Lande de Miré, about 9 m. to the S.W. on the road to Azay-le-Rideau, is supposed to be the place where the Saracens under Abderahmen were defeated by Charles Martel, and Europe saved from the Mahomedan yoke, A.D. 732.

One of the chief mints of France was established in the middle ages at Tours, whence come the liures Tournois, silverpieces (libra or as of the Romans), the equivalent of francs at present, which were coined here.

Le Roi Hugon, who plays the part at Tours of the Boghie of English nurseries, is said to have given the name of Huguenots to the Protestant party in France, who, being very numerous in the town, but checked and watched by their enemies, used to meet beyond the walls, issuing out stealthily through this gate at nightfall. A more probable derivation of Huguenot is from the Swiss Eidgenossen, i. e. Confederate. Another memorial of the days of persecution of the Protestants is retained in the name Rue Renard, persons suspected of heresy being pursued in the streets by the Romanists about 1562, hunted down with the cry "au Reynard," and often massacred.

[France.]

Touraine was bestowed as an apanage on Mary Queen of Scots and her short-lived husband Francis, and she is said to have drawn revenue from it, as Duchess of Touraine, even while in captivity in England, but it was afterwards given in her lifetime to the Duc d'Alençon, brother of Henri III.

There remains little else to describe at Tours. Under the mutilated church of Notre Dame la Riche (originally called La Pauvre) is a cave, vaulted, and having pillars in the corners, where it is said St. Gatien, the predecessor of St. Martin, first preached Christianity to the Gauls, A.D. 251, but it is now shut up.

In a handsome building erected 1862 is the Public Library of 40,000 volumes, including some curious MSS.; for example, a copy of the Gospels in gold letters on vellum (8th centy.), which belonged to the church of St. Martin, upon which the King of France took the oaths as premier chanoine of that church; Les Heures of Charles V. of France and of Anne de Bretagne; and numerous Missals, besides early printed books. The library is open Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, 12-4.

The most respectable Café is that of la Ville de Paris, Rue Royale.

The Poste aux Lettres is in the Rue de la Guêrche, and the Theatre in the Rue de l'Archevêché.

The English Church service is performed every Sunday at 11½ and 4½ in the chapel, Rue de la Préfecture, and at Rue Léveé, No. 5.

Railways.—To Angers and Nantes; to Poitiers, Angoulême, and Bordeaux; to Paris, by Orléans; to Le Mans.

Diligences daily, to Loches, Bourges, and Chinon; to Vendôme.

Steamers (?)

Plessis les Tours, the castellated den of the tyrant and bigot Louis XI., with which all the world is acquainted through the admirable descriptions of 'Quentin Durward,' is situated in the commune of La Riche, adjoining a humble hamlet of scattered cottages, on a perfectly flat plain, about a mile distant from the Halle au Blé, on the W. of Tours, passing the Barrière des Oiseaux, and beyond the Hospice Générale. Visitors to Plessis must not expect anything in the shape of a feudal castle, for it was built at a time when the fortress was giving place to the fortified mansion. When complete, it must have been somewhat like the older parts of Hampton Court and St. James's Palaces, which were built not many years after Plessis, with this difference, that the niggardliness of Louis, and his apprehension of danger, caused it to be built in so plain a style, and with so many defensive precautions, walls of enclosure, drawbridges, battlements, and wet and dry ditches, that its external appearance must have corresponded with that of a gaol much more than of a palace. The small fragment now remaining, so far from having about it the least trace or character of a castle, looks like a mean ordinary dwelling: indeed it formed part of the inner constructions, but was surrounded by three ramparts and fosses. It is of plain red brick, with quoins of stone and sash windows, surmounted by a high pitched roof, and almost all traces of the scanty ornaments have been destroyed. Beside it is a stair turret, recently raised 16 or 20 ft., with a wooden addition at the side, to convert it into a shot-tower! Originally a cloister ran along the front. The interior is modern, except the stair, and contains nothing worth notice. All traces are gone of the pitfalls, fosses, &c., which originally surrounded the castle; but on the l., as you approach the house, are seen the foundations of walls of masonry; and a door, below ground, leads into a range of vaulted chambers barely lighted by small windows, which may once have served for prisons, as they now do for cellars. It is evident that the palace was well supplied with dungeons. At the end of the small terrace walk in the garden is another vault, called the prison of Cardinal de la Balue, who was shut up for betraying his master's secrets to Charles of Burgundy: it has been repaired, but the lower steps of a stair, the lower part of the fireplace, the grated bars and shutters are old. At the back of a cottage, nearly facing the garden gates, is a small vaulted chapel, now filled with casks, said to be the Oratory of Louis XI., where he passed hours in abject prayer to the Virgin and Saints for cure of his complicated maladies. The present doorway has been broken through the wall where the altar stood; the two small windows are nearly stopped up. Louis ended his miserable life here, 1483. Plessis was converted into a Dépôt de Mendicité about 1778; it was sold and pulled down at the Revolution. Plessis lies on the tongue of land between the Loire and Cher, about 1 m. from the Cher, and 9 m. above their junction.

Between Plessis and the Hospice is an old house, called La Rabaterie, having a square turret at the back which passes for the residence of Olivier le Dain, the barber and minister of Louis.

The promenade du Mail on the old ramparts, now planted with four rows of trees, forms a favourite evening lounge.

The Colony of Mettray, about  $4\frac{1}{2}$  m. from Tours, a station on the railroad (Rte. 29) to Le Mans, established by two philanthropic French gentlemen, the Vicomte Bretonnières de Courteilles and le conseiller Demetz, deserves very high praise, and will be visited by all who take an interest in the improvement of their fellow-creatures. The objects which its founders and directors have in view are, the education, reward, and restoration to society of juvenile offenders who while in the public prisons have distinguished themselves by good conduct and by signs of penitence. This is sought to be effected by teaching them the mode of gaining an honest livelihood, chiefly by agricultural labour. The ground on which the establishment stands was given by the Vicomte; it is conducted by him and his friend in person, and is supported by voluntary donations and annual subscriptions.

More distant and highly interesting excursions may be made to Amboise, Chénouailles, 24 m. off, 4 hrs.' drive (both described in Rte. 53); Loches (Rte. 56); and to that curious and unexplained monument of antiquity La Pile de St. Mars (Rte. 58).

M. Souillé furnishes good horses and carriages.

ROUTE 54.

CHARTRES TO TOURS, BY VENDÔME.

139 kilom. = 88 Eng. m.

Diligences daily.

15 La Bourdinière.

16 Bonneval, near the Loir.

An ancient Benedictine convent here is converted into a cotton-mill.

14 Châteaudun, a town of 6500 Inhab., standing on the banks of the Loir. Its most conspicuous building is the ancient Castle of the Counts of Dunois, surmounted by a prodigious tower, 90 ft. high, built by Thibaut le Tricheur in the 10th centy. The ancient name of the town, whence comes the modern, was Castellodunum.

During the next stage the road descends by the side of the Loir, passing the Gothic castle of Montigny on a height beyond the river.

12 Cloyes.

17 Pezou.

11 Vendôme.—Inns: H. Gaillarde, good; Lion d'Or, not bad. A town of 9470 Inhab., on the Loir, at the foot of vine-clad slopes. Above it rise the picturesque ruins of the Castle of the Ducs de Vendôme, demolished at the Revolution, when the graves of Jeanne d'Albret, mother of Henri IV., and of several Bourbon princes, were rifled, and their tombs destroyed. Near the Lion d'Or is a fine flamboyant Ch., containing good painted glass, with elaborate and beautiful wood carvings in the stalls of the choir. It has an early Gothic tower and spire. Nearly opposite to it are very curious remains of a Norman Domestic edifice of unusually early-date. Several smaller churches will repay the notice of a lover of church architecture. There is a College here.

We now cross the Loir for the 4th time, and quit its valley to traverse a monotonous plain to 14 Neuve St. Amand.

12 Château Regnault, a town of 2500 Inhab.

15 Monnay (Indre et Loire).

St. Symphorien, nearly opposite Tours, forms a sort of suburb to that city; and not far from it is the pretty hamlet of St. Cyr, where a cottage, called La Grenadière, was long the retreat of the veteran poet Béranger.

15 TOURS, in Rte. 53.

ROUTE 56.

TOURS TO LOCHES AND CHÂTEAUBOUX.

108 kilom. = 67 Eng. m.

Diligences, daily, to Loches, in about 4½ hrs.

You continue along the road to Bordeaux (Rte. 64) for about 2 m. after crossing the Cher; then turn to the l. Several small villages are passed whose houses are caves cut in the soft rock, the fronts built up with masonry, the roofs covered with vines, from the midst of which peer the chimneys. After passing the prettily situated village of 19 Cormery (2 interesting Churches, and a detached spire of a ruined abbey) we reach the borders of the Indre, which flows through one of the richest and most fertile valleys of Touraine; in the midst of which stands

21 Loches. Inns: H. de la Tour; cheap, and obliging landlord; H. de France; H. de la Promenade. This is one of the most picturesque towns of Touraine, far more striking than Chinon or Amboise; its buildings are huddled together round the base of a lofty rock, from whose commanding top the romantic ruins of its historic and ill-omened Castle still frown over the landscape, forming the grand and striking feature in every view. In and around the town the number of religious houses, which clustered around the castle, is remarkable. Many of the buildings remain. The town still retains several of its old gates, grooved for the portcullis, and garnished with holes for stockade beams, and in its streets are some old houses. Pop. 5400.

On the opposite bank of the Indre lies the suburb of Beaulieu, connected with the town by a row of bridges. The river winding through the vale over-spreads its bottom with a carpet of the richest verdure, fringed with willows and poplars, and turns the machinery of one or two mills.

The * Castle of Loches, though long a royal palace, in which James V. of Scotland was married to Magdalen of France, and where Francis I. held his splendid court and received the Emperor Charles V. on his way from Spain to Ghent, is better known and has a more terrible reputation as a prison of state, especially during the reign of Louis XI., when "the sound of the name of Loches was yet more dreaded than Plessis itself, as a place destined to the workings of those secret acts of cruelty with which even Louis shamed to pollute the interior of his own residence at Plessis. There were in this place of terror dungeons under dungeons, some of them unknown even to the keepers themselves; living graves, to which men were consigned with little hope of further employment during the rest of their life than to breathe impure air, and feed on bread and water. At this formidable castle were also those dreadful places of confinement called cages, in which the wretched prisoner could neither stand upright nor stretch himself at length; an invention, it is said, of Cardinal Balue."—Scott. Louis appointed Olivier le Daim, the barber, who was also his prime minister, governor of the castle and gaoler. It is composed of a pile of buildings of various ages, partly in ruins. The most conspicuous of all is the tall white Donjon tower, rising at the extremity of the platform of rock to a height of 120 ft., and overhanging the verge of the precipice. Its walls of even and perfect masonry, supported by buttresses in the form of circular pillars, pierced by scanty round-headed windows above, and by mere slits below, mark it as a work of the Norman style, probably of the 12th centy., though some attribute its construction to Foulques Nerra, Comte d'Anjou, in the 11th. In its size, form, and arrangement of the entrance stair, within a projecting lower tower, it is not unlike the White Tower of London, and the castles of Newcastle or Rochester. Its walls, 8 ft. thick, are now empty, gutted of the four stories into which they were divided. It stands within the enclosure of the town gaol, a part of the castle having been converted into that ignoble purpose. Beside it rises a picturesque group of less ancient towers, in one of which, circular in form, are the terrible Cachots of Louis XI., extending downwards in four stories below one another. Two of them contained the iron cages invented by Cardinal Balue, who himself expiated his treasonable betrayal of his master's secrets to the Duke of Burgundy by a confinement of 8 years in one of them. In another, Ludovico Sforza, il Moro, Duke of Milan, the prisoner of Louis XII., was confined from 1500 until 1510, when death released him. Here Philip de Comines, the historian, was also shut up in 1486; the Duc d'Alençon, 1456; Charles de Melun, who was beheaded, 1468; and many more victims of tyranny. These dungeons are vaulted, and dimly lighted by small windows, whose deep recesses, in walls 10 or 12 ft. thick, are crossed by double iron gratings. The cages existed down to 1789.

At the other end of the castle platform, on the l. as you ascend from the town through the arched gateway, is a more modern pile of building, now serving as the Sous-Préfecture. At one end of the terrace behind it, within a small tower, is placed the monument of Agnes Sorel, mistress of Charles VII., who was born, 1400, in the neighbouring château of Fromonteau. Upon a base of black marble reclines the effigy of La Belle des Belles, well sculptured in white limestone, her hands uplifted in prayer, with two angels bending over her head and shielding her with their wings, and two lambs reclining at her feet. She is gracefully attired in long robes, and a simple circlet surrounds her brow; her countenance exhibits a refined character of beauty, modesty, sweetness, and gentleness, not unworthy of the Madonna of Raphael, and befitting one whose influence over a king was never exercised but for good. It has been proved, however, by an acute historian, that she could in no wise have contributed to stimulate Charles to the assumption of his dominions and the expulsion of the English, not having been seen by him until 1431, after the death of Jeanne d'Arc. When Charles died, the ungrateful monks of Loches, whom the bounty of Agnes had cherished and her bequests had enriched, were desirous of ejecting her remains and tomb from their church, on the score of some scruples as to the purity of her life; but even Louis XI., much as he hated Agnes, reproved such ingratitude, telling them that if they abandoned her body they must also resign her legacies: so the bones remained in their place until the Revolution, when the grave was violated, and the monument was preserved from destruction only by the interference of the préfet.

Between the Sous-Préfecture and the Norman keep stands the **Ch. of St. Ours*, a very interesting monument of ecclesiastical architecture, meriting in a high degree the attention of every student of Gothic architecture.* In its outline it presents 4 conical roofs, 2 of them raised on towers, and 2 intermediate, covering the nave with cupolas of stone. To the W. of the belfry-tower is a low square porch, protecting a large and very perfect Romanesque W. doorway, rich in mouldings and sculptured figures. Beyond the other steeple is the E. apse: the transepts are short. A pointed arch divides the nave into 2 square compartments, each covered with an octagonal cupola of stone. According to records, the building was completed, as it stands, 1180, but the E. apse and crypt are older, probably of the 11th cent. Observe the sculpture throughout—the capitals, the corbels in tiers supporting the domed roofs of the nave, the cylindrical font. The crypt, beneath the choir, was the place of devotion of Louis XI.

* This church is perfectly delineated in Petit's 'Architectural Studies in France.'

In the suburb Beaulieu, 1 m. E. of Loches, is a ruined Church, with a fine Romanesque tower. The view of Loches hence is very good. The Ch. of St. Laurent will interest the architect.

The rest of the road lies up the pretty vale of the Indre to 21 Châtillon-sur-Indre, a town of 2700 Inhab., in the Dépt. l'Indre, and the ancient province of Berry.

23 Buzançais, a town of 3800 Inhab., on the rt. bank of the river, whose branches are here crossed by several bridges.

23 Châteauroux, on the Limoges Rly. (Rte. 70.)

ROUTE 57.

TOURS TO SAUMUR, BY CHINON.

76 kilom. = 47 Eng. m.

The places on this route may now be most easily reached from stations on the Rly. to Nantes; Chinon from Port Boulet Stat.

Diligences daily.

This route issues out of Tours lined by avenues of poplars, and crosses at the distance of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. the river Cher, a little to the E. of Plessis les Tours (Rte. 53). The Cher runs for about 15 m. below this nearly parallel with the Loire, before uniting itself to that river. Along its N. bank runs a considerable levée or dyke constructed by Madame de Vermandois, abbess of Beaumont les Tours, to protect the land between it and the Loire from inundations.

After crossing the flat land, passing numerous white hamlets and villas, the road ascends and traverses an extensive table-land before entering the valley of the Indre, on whose banks stands.

24 Azay-le-Rideau, a small town prettily situated, 15 m. from Tours. On the l. of the road, nearly concealed by trees and surrounded by branches of the Indre, is the Château, one of the best preserved specimens in France of the semi-castellated manor-house, in the style of the Renaissance. It was built by Gilles Berthelot in the reign of Francis I., and over the chief portal, enriched with sculpture and combinations of three classic orders, may be discerned the emblem of that king, the Salamander, with the motto "Nutrio et extinguo," and the initials of Diana of Poitiers. The carving has been thought worthy of Jean Goujon; the entire façade and the staircase are very elegant, the wall partly panelled, and the compartments filled with diversified patterns. The interior has been preserved nearly unaltered, and contains old furniture and a collection of portraits. A bed, supported in the 4 corners by carved figures, is of very elaborate Gothic workmanship. A neatly kept garden surrounds the house. The present owner is M. de Biancourt.

A considerable tract of forest is traversed on the direct road from Azay, before it descends by the hollow way behind the castle of 22 Chinon.—Inns: H. de France, best, but miserable.—Chêne Vert, dirty. A deserted and dull town (6700 Inhab.), which yet deserves a visit, owing to its pleasing position on the rt. bank of the Vienne, and on account of the numerous and interesting historical associations attached to its utterly ruined Castle, the French Windsor of our Plantagenet kings, as it has been termed, where Henry II. breathed his last, uttering curses on his own sons, whose disobedience had hastened his death. It was the favourite residence, also, of the French monarchs, from Philippe-Augustus to Henri IV., and the scene of Joan of Arc's first public appearance. The remains are of vast extent, but too much demolished, and too white in colour, to be very picturesque. They occupy the summit of a lofty platform of rock, rising nearly 300 ft. above the town and river. A natural escarpment surrounds it on 3 aides; where the cliff was not naturally vertical, it has been cut away, and huge walls of smooth masonry have been built up from below to a level with the top of the cliff, so as to render it hopeless, before the days of gunpowder, to scale or batter such a fortress. Between the river and the rock crouch the buildings of the town. Behind the castle, in a deep hollow, runs the road to Tours, originally commanded by the castle embrasures; and a deep gully or fosse is cut through the rock on the 4th side, to isolate the promontory from the ridge of which it forms the termination.

Several of the tall flanking towers remain tolerably perfect; the rest is all crumbling wall. The 3 divisions into which the castle was separated by deep dry ditches may still be discovered. In the central division, above the entrance to which rises the tall Donjon, the only part now inhabited, are shown the royal apartments; and among them the very one in which Joan the Maid, the simple shepherdess of Domrémy,* recognised Charles the Dauphin, though disguised in plain attire, and, singling him out from among the crowd of courtiers, led him apart to the recess of the window, where she unfolded to him "secrets known only to himself and to God." The scene of that interview, and of the splendours of the court of the careless and luxurious Charles, whom even the loss of a kingdom could not recall from indolence and pleasure, is now a broken ruin open to the sky, with one or two transoms remaining in the windows, and a few traces of paint upon the walls. Close beside it is a very deep square tower, adjoining one of the ditches, and without openings, said to have been the Oubliettes down which prisoners were cast.

Crossing a bridge into the 3rd court, we find around it the towers of la Glacière, in which Jacques de Molay, Grand Master of the Templars, is said to have been confined; the Tour du Moulin, so called because it was surmounted by a windmill, standing at the farthest extremity, and of very solid structure; and the Tour d'Argentau, from which, as the story goes, a secret passage led beyond the wall to the Maison Robardeau, the retreat of Agnes Sorel, Charles's mistress. Among all these fragments, the only trace of the original Norman castle is to be found in the round tower du Moulin; the rest seems not older than the 15th centy.

* See Lord Mahon's Life of Jeanne d'Arc.

The view from the walls is very pleasing, extending for a long distance up and down the fertile valley,—“a glowing and glorious prospect; a green expanse of groves and vineyards all blending into one,”—with the winding Vienne sparkling and flashing among the green meadows, or foliage of poplars, walnut-trees, and vines, nearly as far as its junction with the Loire, which, however, is not visible. Fontevrault, the last resting-place of Henry II. and his undutiful son the Lion-hearted Richard, is concealed from view by intervening heights.

There is not much worth notice in the town of Chinon itself. No tradition is preserved of the hostelry in which the Pucelle was lodged on her arrival from her native village, and where she was kept two days before she could obtain admission to the king, until his councillors had ascertained whether she was a sorceress. Nor can the ch. be pointed out in which she spent the greater part of each day in prayer while she resided here. It was at Chinon that she first received from the king her suit of knight's armour, and an escort of a squire, a confessor, and 2 pages. Here she first girt on the mysterious sword found in the ch. of St. Catherine of Fierbois, and here unfurled her white banner sprinkled with fleurs-de-lis, made expressly for her under the direction of her mysterious “voices.”

The rocks behind the town, underneath the castle, have been quarried for ages to supply building materials, and these subterraneous excavations, called Les Caves Peintes, have attained a great extent. There is nothing worth seeing in them, nor is it a task of pleasure to explore them.

Chinon is the country of Rabelais, who was born 1483, in the farm-house called la Devinière, in the commune of Seully, a little way on the l. of the road to Saumur, on the opposite side of the Vienne. He commenced his education in the school of the neighbouring abbey, whose monks he afterwards ridiculed in his writings. An old house at the corner of the Rue de Lampraye at Chinon is pointed out as his residence.

At Champigny, about 9 m. S. of Chinon, is a chapel containing very remarkable painted glass, representing the life of St. Louis.

It is a very delightful drive from Chinon to Saumur, through a country teeming with fertility, amongst orchards, and walnut groves, and acacia hedges, while beneath the fruit-trees springs up a crop of corn, without exhausting the soil. The valley of the Vienne terminates at Candes, remarkable for its fine ch. (Rte. 58), where that river falls into the Loire; and our road, emerging upon its l. bank, is carried along it, through most pleasing scenery, to 30 Saumur, described, with the rest of the road, in Rte. 58.

At Montsoreau, close to Candes, our road passes within 3 m. of the Abbey of Fontevrault. The excursion thither is described in Rte. 58.

ROUTE 58.

THE LOIRE (C): TOURS TO ANGERS, BY SAUMUR—RAILWAY.

	Kil. Miles.
Tours.
Port Boulet . . .	44	27
Saumur . . . .	61	37½
Le Menitré . . .	82	51
Angers . . . .	105	65½
Trains in 2 h. 44 m., and 3 h. 44 m.

From Tours this rly. follows the l. bank of the Loire as far as Cinq Mars.

The prettiest part of the course of the Loire lies below Tours, in the neighbourhood of Saumur, and thence to Nantes. For some distance below Tours, however, its banks continue low, and its bed, everywhere too large for its stream, is left bare and unsightly in summer. In winter the river sometimes rises 20 ft. above its ordinary level; and from these irregularities it is unfit for the permanent establishment of water-mills or manufactories on its banks. It is confined on both sides by levées as far down as Angers.

The high road was on the rt. bank of the river, along the Levée, or river dyke, often on a level with the tops of the houses and cottages, which, together with the fertile fields, orchards, gardens, and vineyards, it protects from the inundations of the Loire, commanding, both on the river and land side, an extensive view.

Savonnières Stat. On the hill beyond the Loire is seen

Luynes, a small town at the opening of a valley into the Loire, backed by a limestone cliff, pierced with numerous cave dwellings, on the top of which stands the old Castle, commanding the country around. It was the residence of the seigneurs of Luynes, and among them of the first duke, the favourite of Louis XIII. and Constable of France, who gave his own name to the castle and town, previously called de Maillé, 1619. Not far off are the ruins of an aqueduct, said to be Roman, of which nearly 50 square pillars and 8 arches remain. Luynes is the birthplace of Paul Louis Courier, the celebrated political writer; he was found shot dead near his own residence, Veretz, on the banks of the Cher, not far from this, 1825.

The Rly. crosses the Loire on a bridge of 19 arches before reaching Cinq Mars Stat., or more correctly St. Mars, since the name is supposed to be a contraction of St. Medard. Near this village, whose ruined castle gave a title to another favourite of Louis XIII., who fell by the executioner's axe, under the relentless rule of Cardinal Richelieu, is the curious ancient monument called La Pile de Cinq Mars, a square tower of brick, 95 ft. high and 13 ft. wide on each face, surmounted originally by 5 pinnacles 10 ft. high, one of which was thrown down by a storm 1751. The origin, use, and age of the pile are equally unknown. Some attribute it to the Romans, others to the Celts. It is destitute of door, window, or other opening, and is perfectly solid. On the S. face the bricks are arranged in a pattern so as to form 12 compartments. It was probably a funereal monument.

The traveller continues to pass entire villages, cut in the yellow chalk rock, or tuffeau, whenever it rises into cliffs favourable for human habitations.

The Cher, after running parallel with the Loire for about 15 m., enters it a little above Cinq Mars, but sends off a branch which continues to run parallel with it until it joins the Indre, 9 m. lower down.

Langeais Stat., another little town, has also a Castle, in tolerable preservation, which is remarkable because the marriage of Charles VIII. with Anne of Brittany was celebrated within its walls—an event which united that important province to France. It is well preserved and furnished in antique style. The gate-house serves as a gaol. This castle was built, in the 13th cent., by Pierre de Broasses, minister of Philippe le Hardi, after having been barber to his predecessor, St. Louis. He ended his career on the gibbet of Montfaucon, being hung for high treason in poisoning his master's son, and accusing the queen of the crime.

St. Patrice Stat. Near this is the Château of Rochecotte, where the Chouan leader of that name was born; it belongs to the Duchesse de Dino, now Princesse de Talleyrand, who was often visited here by her uncle, M. de Talleyrand, of whom it contains some interesting memorials.

Nearly opposite this, backed by a wooded hill, is the Château d'Ussé, belonging to one of the family of La-rochejacquelin, but partly built by Vauban, its original owner.

Chouzé, on the confines of Touraine. Near this, if anywhere, the valley of the Loire exhibits its garden-like character, an exuberant vegetation, with trees of large growth, capable of furnishing some shade to the road,—among them the graceful feathery acacia, which also forms the hedges,—vines, Indian corn, and mulberry-trees, prevail.

Port Boulet Stat. Omnibus to Chinon, about 10 m. up the valley of the Vienne (Rte. 57).

The Loire is crossed by a wire suspension-bridge of 5 spans, leading to Candes, opposite to which place we pass out of Touraine into Anjou.

The river Vienne here pours itself into the Loire.

The approach to Saumur is marked by the number of windmills on the heights, below which stands the domed church of Notre Dame des Ardilliers. Beneath its cupola runs an inscription celebrating the suppression of heresy throughout his dominions, and the expulsion of its followers, by Louis XIV.; a subject rather of shame than of boast, on a spot which suffered in turn the massacre of St. Bartholomew, the atrocities of the Dragonnades, and finally ruin from the revocation of the Edict of Nantes.

The convent attached to this ch. is now the Hospice de la Providence, attended by charitable sisters: a portion of the patients, including the insane, are lodged in cells and vast dormitories cut in the cliff behind.

La Croix Verte, a suburb of Saumur, at the extremity of the bridge opposite to the town, contains the post-house and the rly. stat.

Saumur.—Inns: Hôtel Budan;—H. de Blois: both facing the river. H. de Londres. H. de France. A very pleasant light effervescing wine grown in the vicinity may be had here. Belvédère, on the quay.

This cheerful white town is one of the most picturesque on the Loire. Seen from the river or the bridge, its quaint Hôtel de Ville, near the water-side, surmounted by a tent-like roof and pinnaced turrets, its church spires and towers, overhung by the castle behind, have a very pleasing effect. The town itself, however, is torpid, though its population amounts to 15,000 souls, and it does not possess many curiosities. There are two very fine bridges across the Loire, each about 300 yards long.

On the handsome quay which lines the river stand a modern edifice which combines theatre and market-house, and the above-mentioned antique Hôtel de Ville, a square building of black and white stone, with a peaked roof as high as its walls, a cornice of trefoiled machicolations running under it, and turrets or bartizans in its corners. It was anciently included in the fortifications, and joined the town walls, and, therefore, has few openings in the lower part. The front towards the court-yard has not the same castellated character, but is enriched with florid Gothic ornaments, very elegant, and recently restored. The date of the building is probably the 15th cent., about the time of Louis XI. The upper story is converted into a Museum. The best part of its limited collection are the antiquities found in the department; such as Roman vases, statues, spear-heads, axes, &c., of bronze; a complete set of Roman carpenter's tools, Roman weights, glass, cinerary urns (30 of them dug up in one spot), pottery, &c. But its chief curiosity is a Roman trumpet of bronze, 5 ft. long. Among the Celtic remains are several stone axes, dug up under one of the Dolmens in the neighbourhood, and a Druid knife of flint, from that of Bois Berard.

St. Pierre, the principal Ch., in the centre of the town, is disfigured by a modern Italian façade, and its massy tower is surmounted by a recent spire. Its interior, originally built without aisles, in the Angevine fashion, has had side chapels added. It is in the pointed style.

More curious for its age and architecture is the Ch. Notre Dame de Nantilly, on the outskirts of the town. The oldest parts, the N. side, the nave, and E. apse, in the Romanesque style, have been supposed to date from the 5th or 6th, but cannot be older than the 11th centy. The S. aisle is an addition of the 15th centy., nearly as wide as the nave itself, and the pillars between are nothing more than the old buttresses. The roof of the nave is slightly pointed, with platebands running across from pier to pier. In the S. aisle is the oratory of Louis XI. Against one of the piers is a bas-relief of John the Baptist preaching in the wilderness, renewed 1830. The Ch. is hung with curious antique tapestries, probably of the 16th centy., productions of the looms of Flanders, if we may judge by the style of art. In one, representing the siege of Jerusalem, one soldier appears to be discharging an instrument like a match-lock, (?) but all the others are armed with bows and arrows. In this Ch. are buried Gilles Archbishop of Tyre, keeper of the seals of St. Louis, whose crozier is preserved here, and the nurse of King René of Anjou.

The Castle, standing conspicuously on the top of the ridge which rises like a wall above the town (Sous-le-mur is a fanciful derivation of its name), is only worth entering for the view, from its terraced bastions, over the Loire and the rich flat land on either side of it, not forgetting the pretty gardens at the base of the walls. The tall Donjon, circular below and octagonal above, and flanked by four turrets, is a magazine for powder and fire-arms, and is shut to strangers.

The wise Protestant leader, Duplessis Mornay, was appointed governor by Henri IV., and under his prudent and fostering care Saumur was a stronghold of the Protestants, and a flourishing town of 25,000 Inhab. The revocation of the Edict of Nantes annihilated its prosperity, by expelling the industrious Huguenots, and reduced its population to one-fourth.

One of the greatest exploits of the Vendéan army was the capture of Saumur, June 10, 1793, by storming the heights, on which the Republican army, 15,000 strong, had formed an intrenched camp, defended by 100 pieces of artillery. Henri de Larochejacquelin forced the intrenchments of the town from the side of the meadows of Varen, exciting his followers to the capture of a redoute by throwing his hat, conspicuous for its white plume, into the midst of the enemy, crying "Qui va me le chercher?"—an appeal not lost upon his followers, especially when enforced by his own example in taking the lead. Foremost of his band, with only 60 of his men to back him, he burst his way into the town, clearing the streets before him as far as the bridge. Here, seizing two cannon, he turned them against the enemy, drove them quite across the river, and on the road towards Tours, thus separating them from the garrison of the castle, which surrendered the day following. The Vendéans obtained this victory with a loss of only 60 killed and 100 wounded, and with a gain of 60 pieces of cannon, 10,000 muskets, and 11,000 prisoners, who were released after having one side of their head shaved, and promising not to serve against La Vendée—humane conditions, contrasting strongly with the atrocious system of massacring their prisoners, already adopted by the Republicans at the command of the Convention.

Detached from the town, to the S.W., on the rt. hand as you issue out of the main street, is the Ecole de Cavalerie, for the instruction, in all branches of information suited to their profession, of between 3000 and 4000 sous-officiers, who are drafted hence into different regiments to instruct their corps. There are large riding-schools, covered and open, in which the various exercises of the manège are performed with much precision. This establishment was transferred from Angers hither at the latter end of the last century.

Some remains of the old fortifications may be seen in the Rue du Petit Mail; they consist of two feudal towers and a prison-house. In the quartier des Ponts, the suburb which fills the island on which the bridge rests, is a house built by King René of Anjou, and called Maison de la Reine Cécile (de Sicile). Its once highly ornamented front, in the latest Gothic, not unlike that of the H. de Ville in style, has been so deplorably defaced that it retains little interest, but it may still be worthy to employ the artist's pencil.

a. Within about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. of Saumur, on the S., stands one of the largest, most perfect, and best preserved Druidical monuments in France, the Dolmen of Bagneux (§ 4). It is a chamber composed of huge blocks of unhewn stone set upright to form the walls, with others laid across them for a roof, in the manner of a house of cards. This rude cot measures 64 ft. in length, yet consists of only 14 stones, 4 on each of the sides and on the roof, one at the W. end, which is closed, another at the E., now thrown down, serving as a threshold over which you step to the present doorway, formed by bricking up the mouth. The largest stone measures 24 ft. by 21 ft., and  $2\frac{1}{2}$  ft. thick. The stones are set so close, that originally a man could not force his body between them. The blocks composing it are of the sandstone found in this district, but not near at hand, nor near the surface. Among the adjoining vineyards stands an upright stone, also of Celtic origin. Not  $\frac{1}{2}$  hour's drive from Saumur, on rt. of road to Poë in going to the larger Dolmen, you pass another pierre-couverte, formed of only 6 stones, in the manner of Kits Coity House in Kent.

The road to these Druidic stones, on issuing out of Saumur, crosses the small river Thoue by a handsome new bridge of 3 segmental arches, called Pont Fouchard, thence by cross roads proceeds to the village of Bagneux, beyond which they are situated.

b. The Abbey of Fontevrault is about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hrs. drive by a road along the l. bank of the Loire, passing through the pretty white town of Candès, where St. Martin of Tours breathed his last. It stands on the Vienne, just above its junction with the Loire. It has an interesting ch., of which the apsidal choir seems to be of the 12th centy., and the nave of the 13th (1215). Its S. porch is remarkable, though much mutilated; 14 statues in trefoil-headed niches adorn the façade, with smaller niches below them filled with heads. The porch itself is a vestibule supported by a light central column, in the manner of the chapter-houses of English cathedrals. The W. end is flanked on either side by a machicolated buttress, and includes a circular window, now stopped up. The tomb of St. Martin is shown in this ch. The possession of his remains was warmly contested between the Poitevins and Tourangeaux.

A small brook alone separates Candès from Montsoreau, whose castle, now parcelled out among poor people, was the seat of that cruel Comte de Montsoreau who became the executioner of the Protestants of Anjou by carrying out the infamous St. Bartholomew decrees of Charles IX.

3 m. up the little retired and wooded valley behind Montsoreau lies the Abbey of Fontevrault, one of the richest in France in ancient times, where 150 nuns and 70 monks submitted to the rule of an abbess, who was always a lady of high degree. This singular establishment, which thus combined members of both sexes, was founded by a Breton monk, Robert d'Arbrissel, 1099; who by his powerful preaching converted and led after him a multitude of followers of both sexes and all ages, amounting to 3000, whom he at length settled here, in a sequestered forest, on the borders of Touraine and Anjou. In spite of the scope for scandal, the convent maintained its existence for 9 centuries, down to the Revolution. It has an interest to Englishmen, from having been the burial-place of several of our Plantagenet kings. A tolerably good road leads to the poor village of Fontevrault, where the inn (Croix Blanche) does not look promising. It is about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hrs. drive from Saumur Stat.

The Abbey is now converted into a prison (Maison Centrale de Détention); one of the largest in France, covering 30 or 40 acres with its courts and ranges of building, occupied by 500 women, 1200 men, and 300 boys; the entrance is in the little place close to the inn,

The prison is not shown without an order from the préfet; and this is necessary now even to admit strangers into the ch. to see the tombs, which they can do without coming in contact with the prisoners. Above the abbey building rises a singular octagon, which was in fact the Kitchen of the monastery,* called Tour d'Evrault; it dates from the 12th cent.

The church, approached by a covered way, from which you look through loopholes into the prison-yards, is an interesting building of Romanesque architecture, ending in an E. apse, with apsidal chapels. It is supposed to have been begun by Foulques, 5th Comte d'Anjou, 1125. Its nave is now partitioned off, and, by the introduction of 2 floors, is converted into dormitories for the prisoners. The Royal monuments are transferred to the S. transept, enclosed by bolts and bars and grilles, in a dark corner, mutilated and broken by the Vandals of the Revolution, who rifled the graves of their contents, and scattered the royal dust. The effigies, in spite of the injuries they received, are interesting from the evident marks they exhibit of being portraits; they retain still a little of the colouring with which they were ornamented. They are recumbent statues of Henry II. and Richard Cœur de Lion, represented in their royal robes without armour; the drapery of complicated execution. Richard is remarkable for his lofty stature (6½ ft.) and broad forehead; he wears moustache and a beard; his hair is cut short. The two female effigies are in better preservation; they represent Eleanor of Guienne, queen of Henry II., and Isabelle d'Angoulême, widow of King John; the last a statue of considerable beauty. It is much to be desired that these neglected effigies of our kings should be transferred from their dark prison-house to Westminster Abbey, where they would form an interesting link in the series of British historical sculpture. There can be no longer any harm in separating them from graves rifled and empty, and from an abbey now become a prison. The French government owes us some return for our ready compliance with its wishes to possess the bones of Napoleon.

The body of Henry II. was brought hither from the neighbouring royal residence of Chinon, and laid in the sanctuary previously to interment. When Richard, his undutiful son, approached, the dead body is said to have shuddered convulsively, and to have sweated drops of blood while he remained in its presence; "the very corpse, as it were, abhorring and accusing him of his unnatural conduct." At a short distance from the abbey is a curious cemetery chapel, or Lanterne des Morts.

Souré, a little below Montsoreau, contains a castellated mansion, behind which are vast excavations in the rock, which is pierced through and through like a rabbit warren to furnish dwellings for people of the poorer sort.

Still lower down is the picturesque château of Dampierre, where Margaret of Anjou ended a life of ambition and sorrow, in misery and poverty, in a house granted to her by Louis XI., who had ransomed her at the price of 50,000 crowns from the hands of Edw. IV., after 5 years of imprisonment, dating from the battle of Tewkesbury.

Anne Lefèvre, who became Madame Dacier, the learned translator of Homer, was born at Saumur.

Diligences daily to Chinon and Cholet; to Niort and Saintes; Rochefort.

The old high road was on the l. bank of the Loire. The whiteness of the houses about Saumur is remarkable, and arises from the pure colour of the stone, which, being readily cut, is formed into smooth, nicely jointed masonry, and gives even to humble cottages the aspect of villas. They add much to the pleasing character of the country, peering from amidst the luxuriant foliage. Acacia hedges, vines, and walnut-trees, with orchards and rich crops of corn, cover this really beautiful district, upon which all the bounties of nature seem to have been lavished.

The village of Tuffeau receives its name from its quarries of tufa, worked into vast subterranean catacombs, which have furnished building materials for the surrounding district.

* It is described in Turner's 'Domestic Architecture.'

Trèves is conspicuous owing to its pretty Gothic tower, 100 ft. high. It was built by Foulques d'Anjou, 1016, and given by Charles VII. to his Chancellor, Robert-le-Maçon, for saving his life at the capture of Paris by the Burgundians: it is carefully kept up by its present owner. Not far off is the Ch. of Cunault, attributed to King Dagobert, and, though not of his time, at least of great antiquity: 11th to 13th century.

St. Martin Stat.

Les Rosiers Stat. 1. Nearly opposite, the very ancient Ch. of Gennes rises on the top of a hill: it is dedicated to St. Eusèbe, and is said to have been used by the early Christians. The ruined nave is built of small stones, alternating with bands of tiles in the fashion of Roman masonry. The N. door is arched with bricks intermingled with stones, and in the wall above is a row of small semicircular arches. Gennes lies in a remarkably pretty situation, on a streamlet called Avort.

On the opposite side of the Loire is St. Maur, the vast conventual buildings of which, with 16 windows on a row in front, deserve to be looked upon with respect as the retreat of those learned and laborious Benedictines who, in the 17th centy., under the patronage of Richelieu, 1621, compiled those ponderous folios—stores of learning and erudition,—‘L’Art de vérifier les Dates,’ ‘Gallia Christiana,’—the Collection of French Historians—the Monumental Antiquities, &c. “Works of general and permanent advantage to the world at large; showing that the revenues of the Benedictines were not always spent in self-indulgence, and that the members of that order did not uniformly slumber in sloth and indolence.”—Sir W. Scott. Among the most eminent names which distinguished this society of learned monks are those of Felibien, Montfaucon, Vaissette, Lobineau, and Mabillon.

A wire bridge of 5 spans has been constructed at St. Mathurin Stat., nearly opposite St. Maur. At Daguènière, a little lower, the Levées de la Loire terminate, after running by the river-side from Blois hither, a distance of nearly 100 m.

Near this the railroad to Angers and Nantes turns away from the Loire, to rejoin it about 20 m. lower down.

[Below this the Loire is split into a number of channels by considerable islands, which are connected together by a series of 4 bridges of more than 100 antiquated arches of wood and stone, equally inconvenient for boats which pass under, and for vehicles which go over them, measuring altogether about 4600 ft.]

Ponts de Cè. A town of 3520 Inhab., on the rt. bank of the Loire, which is here nearly 2 m. distant from the l. bank. It is about 4 m. from Angers (Rte. 46). Some antiquaries have attributed its origin to Cæsar, who, according to them, also bequeathed to it the first syllable of his name—a theory which is considerably thwarted by the fact that the name was anciently written Ponts de Scez. The bridges form an important passage over the Loire. A bloody engagement was fought here in the Vendéan war, 1793.]

[About 7 m. S.E. of Ponts de Cè is the Château de Brissac, seat of the noble and ancient family of that name, consisting of a handsome Italian palazzo, between two older castellated round towers, of such solid construction that it was found impossible to remove them when the centre was built, and they were in consequence amalgamated with it. It is conspicuous for the red colour of the stone. The general effect of its façade, though of a mixed character, is stately and good, but the details of carving have been destroyed by mutilations. The château was ransacked, stripped, and dismantled during the Vendéan war, and returned to the Duc de Brissac at the Restoration a mere shell. It is still uninhabited, but contains only a few articles of antique furniture.]

Angers Stat. (Rte. 46).

ROUTE 59.

ANGERS TO NANTES—THE LOIRE (D)—
RAILWAY.

Angers.	Kil.	Miles.
Chalonnnes . . . .	13	8
Ancenis . . . .	55	34
Nantes . . . .	88	55

Express trains in 2 hours.

ANGERS (Rte. 46).

The rly. after leaving Angers crosses the Maine (called Mayenne above Angers) near La Pointe, where are numerous white villas and walled gardens of the citizens of Angers.

[Below the junction of the Maine the Loire is sensibly augmented in expanse and depth, and its banks attain a more considerable elevation than above, rising into hills, often in abrupt precipices from the water's edge. One of these heights, called Coulée de Serrant, is clothed with vines, the growth of which is much esteemed. The Château de Serrant, the stately mansion of Count Walsh, is one of the finest on the Loire, and is situated 3 m. from the river, between it and the high road to Nantes. Its gardens, park, and orangery are said to be fine and well kept up. In the chapel is a marble monument by Coysevox to the Marquis de Vaubrun, killed at the passage of the Rhine. The family is of Irish origin, having emigrated with James II. A portrait of the Pretender, still in their possession, was a gift from him to their ancestor, who fitted out the vessel which conveyed Charles Edward from Nantes to Scotland in 1745.

The pretty wooded Ile de Béhuard contains a chapel of Our Lady, founded on a rock, whose uneven surface forms its floor, and projects upwards in a point 4 or 5 ft. high. It was for ages a place of pilgrimage, and was visited with superstitious veneration by Louis XI., whose faded portrait, a contemporary work in fresco, remains on the wall. Both he and his son lavished on it considerable gifts. By accident it was forgotten at the Revolution, and remains undespoiled, retaining many ex-votos, some church plate, &c. Its walls, still displaying the fleurs-de-lis and other coats of arms with which they were painted, are hung with the chains of Christian captives rescued from Algiers.]

The Ch. of Savenières, 2500 Inhab., has parts of extreme antiquity. The front and part of the S. wall of the nave, of singularly constructed masonry, consisting of black slate alternating with bands or layers of red tiles, arranged in fern-leaf pattern, intermixed with white tufa stones, are probably as old as the 6th or 7th centy. The doorway is more modern. The choir and E. apse, added in the 11th or 12th cent., display on their external walls and around the windows rich Byzantine ornaments and mouldings.

Chalonnnes Stat., near which picturesque town, surmounted by the square tower of its castle, is a small coal-field, which has been worked to a considerable extent of late, though it produces only an inferior quality of coal. This bed, extensively developed throughout the Dépts. Maine and Loire, occurs at the bottom of the true coal formation, and is fit only for burning lime; but that lime, being employed as manure, has converted much barren ground into corn-land, and converted this part of France, since 1849, into a granary for supplying Great Britain with wheat.

At Chalonnnes another suspension-bridge has been thrown over the Loire, connecting it with Savenières.

The eminence on the l. bank crowned with a modern-looking ruin, through whose numerous windows and roofless walls the sky appears, is Mont Jan; whose name, according to etymologists, has something to do with Janus—though they cannot exactly agree what the connection is. The ruins are those of a convent of Cordeliers: it had been converted into a sort of state prison, of which the monks were the gaolers, when it was burnt during the Vendéan war.

Champocé, a little village opposite Mont Jan, and situated on the post-road, which here again joins the Loire, is surmounted by the imposing ruins of a feudal castle, celebrated from the crimes of its owner in the reign of Charles VII., Gilles de Retz, Sieur de Laval, a monster in human shape, the bugbear of the surrounding country, called Barbe Bleu, and the original of our well-known Blue Beard; who, although clothed by us in a turban, in reality comes from the banks of the Loire. His history affords a remarkable instance of the superstitions of the 15th centy., and of the impunity for his atrocities which a feudal seigneur enjoyed in that dark age. Having run through an enormous fortune by extravagance, and impaired by excesses his constitution in early youth, the Sieur de Retz sought to renovate both by magic. He kept in his pay an Italian alchemist and magician, who induced him to believe that a charm could be produced from the blood of infants, which would restore him to health and fortune by using it as a bath. For this end children and young persons were spirited away and murdered in the deep dungeons of his castles or in the solitude of his forests, to the number, it is said, of more than 100; he himself, in most cases, plunging the poignard in their breasts. At length the whole country rose up against the tyrant; and his suzerain, Duke Jean V. of Brittany, having heard the charges against him, caused him to be seized and tried; he was found guilty, condemned, and burnt at the stake in Nantes in 1440, after making full confession of his misdeeds. The peasant still regards with horror the ill-omened walls and vaults in which the monster raised the devil, and sold himself to Satan, according to the popular belief.

Ingrande Station, a long line of houses raised upon a terraced wall stretching along the strand, is placed exactly on the boundary of ancient Brittany and Anjou, and between the modern Départements of Loire Inférieure and Maine et Loire. The name was originally "Ingressus Andium," the entrance of the country of the Andes, i.e. the Angevine.

At Montrelais are extensive coal-mines, some of the pits extending under the river. The coal, of inferior quality, is used chiefly for burning lime.

The heights of St. Florent are marked by two piles of building; the vast but not picturesque ruins of the Abbey of Montglonne, whose foundation is traced to Charlemagne, burnt down and destroyed by the Republicans in the Vendéan war; and a little below it, the church of St. Florent, surmounted by a modern-looking tower, by the side of which rises a Pillar to the memory of the brave Vendéan general, Bonchamps, but now surmounted, as if in insult and mockery, by the symbol of revolution, which he died in combating, the drapeau tricolor. Wounded mortally in the fatal fray of Chollet, he was brought hither by the routed Vendéans to die. He closed his career with an act of mercy in rescuing the lives of 4000 Republican prisoners, who had been taken and shut up in the church, and against whom the irritated Vendéans were already pointing their cannon, worked up to madness by defeat, by the mortal wound of their general, and by terror for their wives and families. The commands and entreaties of the dying hero, and nearly the last words he uttered—"Grâce aux prisonniers"—had the effect of saving them from military execution, when nothing else could have rescued them. Bonchamps expired in a miserable hovel, in the village of Meilleraye, on the opposite side of the Loire, but is interred within the ch. of St. Florent, and a monument of marble by David is erected to his memory. St. Florent was the scene of the most memorable event in the war of La Vendée, which all who have read Madame Larochejacquelin's touching Memoirs will remember—the passage of the Loire by the Vendéan army after their rout at Chollet, 1793. They reached the narrow strip of level ground at the base of the semicircle of heights on the l. bank, in number nearly 100,000, half of them unarmed, old men, women, and children; the enemy pressing on in the rear, the country behind smoking with the conflagration of their homes by the Republicans, who, to use their own words, "left behind nothing but ashes and piles of dead." The tumult of such a multitude crowding down to the 25 small barks which alone could be mustered to ferry them over, the cries of children seeking parents or relations, the groans of the wounded, the alarm caused by the enemy, formed a scene of pain, confusion, and despair, which Madame de Larochejacquelin compares with the awful spectacle that the world must behold at the Day of Judgment. The whole multitude, however, were transported across in safety before the arrival of the enemy, whose advanced posts reached the river the day after.

rt. Ancenis Stat. (Inn : H. de France; small, but comfortable), 4000 Inhab. Here is a suspension-bridge of wire, supported by wire shrouds or stays, erected 1839, of 5 arches, more than 1300 ft. long, which leads to La Vendée. There are remains of an old castle of the Duc de Béthune at the waterside, above the bridge, now reduced to a few strong walls and towers. The large barracks are formed out of a ci-devant convent of Ursuline nuns.

Here a broken remnant of the Vendéan host, which had crossed at Varades, endeavoured to recross a few weeks after, shattered by the recent defeat of Le Mans. Larochejacquelin, on this occasion, volunteered to cross the river in the only boat which could be found on the l. bank, to bring over some hay-barges attached to the opposite shore; but while so engaged he was attacked by the enemy and driven into the woods. A gunboat of the enemy sunk the barges destined to transport his followers, and thus cut off all communication between them and their general.

On the top of a hill covered with brushwood on the l. bank of the Loire stand the ruins of the castle of Champ-toceaux, in which Jean de Montfort was kept a prisoner by Marguerite de Clisson; and at the foot of the hill a bridge or pier of 2 arches projects into the river, designed by the owner of the fort above to facilitate the levying of toll on the vessels which passed, in feudal times.

The tall black octagonal tower of Oudon (Stat.), 5 stories high, surmounted by machicolations, overlooks the flat land and a series of islands which here intersect the river. It was built probably in the 13th centy.

After passing a group of pseudo-castellated modern constructions, worthy of a tea-garden, and called after their founder, a citizen of Nantes, Les Folies Siffait, we approach the

Clermont Station, the Castle, on the top of an abrupt and lofty escarpment, yet not destitute of foliage, forming one of the most picturesque scenes on the Loire, but unendowed with any historical interest.

La Seilleraie, at a little distance from the river, was several times visited by Madame de Sévigné, who dates some of her letters hence, and its gardens were laid out by Le Nôtre. The apartment and portrait of the Sévigné are preserved, and the mansion contains other portraits by Mignard, Le Brun, &c.

Mauves Stat., on a flat monotonous plain, out of the midst of which, in the distance, the towers of the cathedral of Nantes are seen to rise.

NANTES STATION. (Rte. 46.)

ROUTE 60.

NANTES TO POITIERS, BY CLISSON.

178 kilom. = 110½ Eng. m.

Diligence daily in about 19 hours (though the rly. by Tours is generally taken), and several from Nantes to Clisson.

Our road, before it gets clear of the suburb of Nantes (St. Jacques), is carried over the different branches of the Loire on a series of 7 bridges, united by causeways, about 2 m. long, lined with houses. Beyond the last bridge the road to Bordeaux (Rte. 62) branches off to the rt. About 2 m. S. of Nantes we find the country, though nearly level in surface, covered with vineyards.

13 Tournebride.

The little village Le Pallet is celebrated as the birthplace of Abelard; the crumbling brier-grown foundations of a square tower on a hillock above the stream of the Sanguéze are called the remains of the house of his father Béranger. Hither he brought Eloise, and here she bore him a son.

The stream of the Sèvre Nantaise runs nearly parallel with our road, a little on the rt., as far as Clisson. The road traverses several elevated plateaux and deep ravines or gullies separating them, and gives some notion of the difficulties in road-making in the Vendean country.

A small bridge carrying the road over a valley is stated in an inscription to have been built "l'An 2 du Règne de Napoléon le Grand."

15 Clisson.—Inns: Poste, beyond the bridge, fine view; H. de France.

This small town (18 m. from Nantes) is celebrated for its very romantic situation at the junction of the Maine and the Sèvre, on one side of which towers the stately old Castle. The scene has a somewhat Italian character, the houses having been all built under the influence of the architect Cacaault and in the Italian style. The town was burnt and destroyed during the Vendean war, and utterly abandoned for some years, until the brothers Cacaault obtained the land and rebuilt the town. Remains of the former houses in the shape of mouldering walls are abundant. A handsome Bridge of 12 arches, 54 ft. high in the centre, rising on very lofty double piers, now spans the valley, carrying the road to Poitiers across, without descending the very steep slope which leads to and from the river. The perspective of the interior of the bridge from below, through its arched piers, forms a vista like that of a cathedral. There are now some huge mills in the valley of the Sèvre, which injure the beauty, but no doubt add to the prosperity, of the town.

The Castle of Clisson, the cradle of that illustrious family from which sprang the famous Olivier de Clisson, the fierce and successful antagonist of the English in the wars of the 14th century., who was thought worthy to succeed Du Guesclin as constable of France, stands on the l. bank of the Sèvre. It is based on the rock, or, where that was wanting to furnish a foundation, huge sustaining walls have been raised from the bottom of the valley, on a line with the escarpment of the rock, to support its towers and bastions. Where not protected by an escarpment, it is surrounded by a fosse. On the l. of the grass-grown courtyard, after entering by the gateway of the Tour des Pèlerins, so called from the crusader Clisson, who built it after his return from Palestine, is a vast pile separated by ditches from the rest, entered by several gates in succession, containing the great hall, the tall donjon, of which one side only remains, and the kitchen, with its wide fireplace. From some of the windows a fine view is obtained over the two valleys of the Moine and Sèvre. All this part of the building is in a state of complete ruin, occasioned by the civil war of La Vendée. Before that broke out the castle belonged to the family of Rohan-Soubise, and had fallen into neglect, but its destruction was completed by the Republican army in 1793. When the town was set on fire and destroyed by them, a number of its unfortunate inhabitants, chiefly old men, women, and children, sought refuge within the castle walls, and remained in its gloomy vaults and dungeons, whither they had conveyed some of their cattle also, for a little time unnoticed. But no sooner was their retreat discovered by the army of Kleber, than they were dragged forth from their hiding-place, and hurled alive down a deep well in the second court of the castle, now stopped up, and marked by a cypress planted near it. For many hours the feeble and half-stifed cries of these unfortunate creatures were heard issuing from its depths, before they utterly perished. The number thus destroyed is variously stated from 30 to 405; the latter, it is to be feared, is nearest the truth. The story of the well of Clisson is one of the blackest spots on that page of atrocities. In the old part of the castle are shown the feudal prisons, one for men and one for women; gloomy vaults with iron hooks in the arch above, said to have been used for hanging the prisoners. Altogether the castle of Clisson inspires nothing but gloomy and melancholy associations; and though it is a noble ruin, most visitors are glad to emerge from it. The castle was formerly of great extent, but a great part has been cut off by the new road into La Vendée.

The pretty grounds of La Garenne, once highly extolled, perhaps too highly, as "a show-place," are indebted for the considerable beauty which they possess to the stream of the Maine, which flows past them, to the fantastic rocks piled one above another rising near its margin, and to the fine trees dipping their branches in its waters, alternating with rich flat meadow land, which here gives variety to the valley, and to the glimpses of the old castle seen at certain points. Winding walks are carried through the park, decorated at intervals with monuments and statues, a temple of Vesta, a grotto called after Heloise, and a Roman milestone of the age of Antonine found on the road to Poitiers. The Garenne owes its artificial embellishment to the brothers Cacault, who deposited their collection of paintings here, and to M. Lemot, a sculptor; successively its owners, who began the unfinished mansion on the height.

The Villa Valentin is part of a convent now modernised: the grounds are pretty and are shown.

Close to it is the ch., a very ancient building, remarkable for the unevenness of the pavement.

On leaving Clisson you pass on the top of the hill the little Chapelle de toute Joie, so called by a lord of Clisson who received on this spot the joyful news of the birth of a son, and built it in consequence.

The road from Clisson to Poitiers, made since 1840, is part of a network of lines of communication formed to facilitate not only commercial intercourse, but the passage of large bodies of troops; they will contribute more than anything else to alter the primitive state of society in this part of France. Clisson is on the very verge of La Vendée, which begins on the l. bank of the Sèvre; but our road, running parallel with the river, skirts, but does not enter it. (See Intro. to Sect. III.)

14 Tor fou, a village almost exclusively composed of new houses, the old having been destroyed in the civil war. One of the greatest victories of the Vendéan peasantry was gained near this over a Republican army superior in numbers by 10,000 men, including the terrible garrison of Mayence,—veterans and reputed the best soldiers in France, and commanded by Kleber. A pillar set up on the post-road, about a mile beyond Tor fou, at the junction of four highways, marks the scene of the battle, which occurred Sept. 19, 1793. Its four sides bear the names of Charette, D'Elbée, Lescure, and Bonchamps, the four Vendéan leaders who took part in it. The day would have been lost for the cause of the Royalists, soon after the action began, had not Lescure rallied around him 1700 peasants of the village of Echanbrogues, who stood the brunt of the assault for two hours, until the division of Bonchamps came up.

About 3 m. from Tor fou in a direct line, and more than 4 by the post-road, passing the column (where turn to rt.), is the Castle of Tiffauges, an extensive ruin on a high table-land between the l. bank of the Sèvre and a small rivulet (la Crume) falling into it. The donjon stood on the rocky height overlooking and commanding the gap through which the high road to Les Herbiers is carried. The inner courts, now separated merely by a few foundations of wall, are converted into productive corn-fields; but behind two cottages, built in the midst of them, runs a pile of building skirting the brow of the cliff, originally occupied by the seigneur, and more perfect than any other part. The most picturesque bit is a round tower projecting over the rivulet, containing a fine vaulted apartment and a spiral stair, probably of the 16th centy. Round the top runs a covered gallery, resting on the corbels of the machicolations. These chambers now serve as store-rooms for hay, corn, and other farm produce, and the inner wall is prettily draped with vines. By a little postern you may descend into the valley of the Crume. This castle is said to have been one of the residences of the wicked Gilles de Retz, the Bluebeard of the Loire (Rte. 59); it was dismantled by Card. Richelieu.

The part of the valley on which the village Tiffauges stands is rocky and somewhat bare of grass. A cotton-mill has been built under the castle. There is no good inn.

[About 10 m. N.W. of Torfou is Chollet, conspicuous in the annals of the Vendean wars. Near St. Aubin is Larochejacquelin's castle La Durbellière, now deserted and partly ruined, having been burned by the Republicans. Henri Larochejacquelin was born here 1772. He and his brother Lewis, and their brave friend Henri de Lescure, are buried in the ch. of St. Aubin, where a marble monument bears medallion portraits of them, and is further ornamented by 3 graceful statues, the work of Rauch and Tieck, and the gift of certain Prussian officers.]

15 Mortagne (Vendée) on the Sèvre was burnt down, like Torfou, in the Vendean war, and has been since rebuilt. It was long the headquarters of the Royalist army. At Chollet, 8 m. N.E. of this, a manufacturing town of 8897 Inhab., entirely rebuilt since its destruction in the civil war, two actions were fought in 1793; in the first of which the Vendéans lost one of their bravest leaders, M. Lescure, who was shot through the head, and in the second suffered a more fatal defeat, which, in fact, decided the war, and drove them across the Loire (see Rte. 59). Before this battle began, on the 13th of October, 1793, the whole Vendéan army heard mass by torchlight, performed by the curé of this parish. On the first attack, the peasants, who here, for the first time, marched in close column, succeeded in driving back the enemy, and a party, headed by Larochejacquelin and Stofflet, even captured a park of artillery; but a charge of the Republican cavalry, and an attack from the garrison of Mayence, the so-called "invincibles," turned the scale; the Vendéans were utterly routed, and their best general, the brave and generous Bonchamps, was carried off the field mortally wounded.

At a short distance from Nouaillé, on the road from Chollet to Saumur, a third leader of the Vendéans, Henri Larochejacquelin, fell, March 4, 1793. For a long time after the wreck of the Royalist cause, he had carried on a successful partisan warfare, issuing out from the fastnesses of the Forest of Vezins at the head of a few determined followers, and spreading dismay among the Republican outposts. He was shot by a grenadier, while in the act of offering him quarter. At his death, the Convention could, for the first time, with safety and truth, proclaim that La Vendée had ceased to exist. An apple-tree is pointed out as marking the spot where he fell.

18 Châtillon-sur-Sèvre, destroyed also, except three houses, in the civil war, is now rebuilt. It was called Mauléon down to 1737. At the wind-mill, S. of the town, the peasants surprised and vanquished Gen. Westerman with 10,000 men.

22 Bressuire (Inn: H. de France), a new town built on the ashes of one ruined by the same disastrous war. The ch. has a fine tall spire. 5 m. off is Clisson, once seat of the Lescures, now of the Larochejacquelines. A modern château replaces that burned down by the troops of the Republic under Westerman. A small Gothic chapel only is old.

We are now on the verge of the Bocage.

31 Parthenay (Inn: H. des Trois Piliers), a poor town of 4024 Inhab., though carried by storm by the Republican forces under Westermann, escaped annihilation, and retains some fragments of antiquity, in the ruins of its castle, the gate of St. Jacques, and the Ch. of St. John, said to be a structure of the 9th centy. The town stands on the rt. bank of the Thoue, a tributary of the Loire, in a hilly district.

25 Ayron.

25 POITIERS. (Rte. 64.)

ROUTE 61.

SAUMUR TO NIORT.

Montreuil. Here is rather a fine church and conventual establishment.

Thouars. Road rather hilly, but good. Thouars is beautifully situated on a hill, with the river Thoue running round it at a very considerable depth, so as to give it the appearance of an island. Here is a very fine old château, which originally belonged to the ancient family of Tremouille. It was sold at the Revolution, and was to have been broken up, but the town authorities purchased it, and it is now the Mairie. Here is also an old and curious Romanesque church. The front has been handsomely decorated with images of saints, but they are all mutilated or badly preserved. To Parthenay (Rte. 60), a poor town, the country hilly.

St. Maixent. Here is a very fine church of the early Gothic, and a curious old chapel under the principal altar, where are deposited the remains of St. Maixent and St. Leger; the former founded the church, &c. To it is attached a fine originally Benedictine monastery, which is now a seminary for priests. There is a very fine staircase in the convent. There are in the church some very beautiful wood carvings.

Niort. A station on the Rochelle Rly. (Rte. 66.) Inns: H. du Raisin de Burgogne, good and clean; the best;—H. de France, fair (Rte. 66). The country in the immediate neighbourhood of Niort is very picturesque and very rich, growing vines which produce a very fine vin ordinaire. The adjacent plain is famed for its breed of mules.

ROUTE 62.

NANTES TO BORDEAUX, BY NAPOLEON VENDÉE, LA ROCHELLE, ROCHEFORT, AND SAINTES.

About 345 kilom. = 214 m. Diligences (?). It is an uninteresting road.

Railroad in progress.

On quitting Nantes by the six bridges at the extremity of the Faubourg St. Jacques, our route turns to the rt. out of that to Clisson (Rte. 60), and crosses, on a handsome bridge, the Sèvre Nantaise, just above its junction with the Loire.

21 Aigrefeuille.

A little beyond this the road enters the department of la Vendée, and thenceforth traverses the centre of the district which was the theatre of the terrible civil war of 1792-93.

13 Montaigu, prettily situated on a height above a small stream called the Maine, in the midst of the Bocage of la Vendée, has fallen from the condition of a town to a village since the war, when two-thirds of its houses were burned, and a large part of its inhabitants massacred. The terrace of the château, not now inhabited, commands a good view.

After crossing the Maine, a wild, open, heathy country succeeds, producing furze, broom, and a little barley or buckwheat, as far as 24 Belleville.

13 Napoléon—once Bourbon—Vendée (Inns: H. des Voyageurs; H. de l'Europe—both slovenly and comfortless), a town of right-angled streets and ugly fresh-looking houses, founded by Napoleon in the very centre of the rebellious province la Vendée, called by him Napoléon-Vendée, altered under the Restoration to Bourbon-Vendée, and now again called Napoléon-Vendée, is now the chef-lieu of the Dépt. La Roche-sur-Yonne, an ancient appanage of the Bourbons, occupied nearly the same site, and now, united with it, forms a suburb. It has not quite 5060 Inhab. Destitute of commerce or manufactures, in a situation deficient in any advantages required to render a town flourishing, in the midst of a district of barren open heath, it stands about the dullest town in France, and a melancholy example of the folly of establishing a town by word of command. "It is exactly what one might expect it would be from the hasty and arbitrary manner of its creation. A huge oblong 'Place' forms the centre and principal part of it. From the sides and corners of this 8 or 10 streets branch off at right angles. The buildings which compose this square are almost all public edifices, each looking more mesquin and meagre than the other, and all having the appearance of being stretched out at the least possible expense to the greatest possible extent of front, for the purpose of making them go as far as possible towards the composition of the proposed town. A theatre, on the steps of whose portico the grass was growing, forms part of one side. A huge Hôtel de Ville, which seems deserted and shut up, stands opposite to a great barn of a church. A préfecture, a court-house, a mairie, and enormous barracks, surrounding a court in which a dozen regiments might manoeuvre at once, occupy the most of the remaining space. The barracks have been constructed so much in haste and with so little solidity that they are already beginning to fall to ruins—new ruins, the most unsightly spectacle. They are deserted, and apparently abandoned to their fate."—Trollope, W., France.

Conveyances go from this to Nantes, Bordeaux, Saumur, and Les Sables.

About 4 m. to the W. (2 of them not fit for carriages, but only for the pedestrian) are the ruins of the Abbey of Fontanelles; a Gothic chapel remains in excellent preservation.

Les Sables, 20 m. W. of Napoleon Vendée, on the sea, is a town of some interest, curiously placed on a narrow sand-ledge, at the margin of a bay forming a large and beautiful crescent. The sands are smooth and extensive. A fleet of 70 fishing-vessels may be seen at times entering the roads in one hour, sweeping from the wide sea into a deep narrow channel between two piers, and so entering the large harbour at the back of the town. There are two peculiarities in the female costume here,—a small bell-shaped laced cap, and an enormous blue hood of cloth-shreds or wool, giving to their upper figures the shape of a huge beehive.—Inn: H. de France, fair, and civil people.

The same dreary, unenclosed, and heath-clad land extends to 22 Mareuil, beyond which a fine corn country commences.

Between Les Sables and Luçon (25 m.) is the Castle of Talmont, a lofty picturesque feudal ruin.

10 Luçon, a dull and dirty small town, in a situation which is unhealthy on account of its vicinity to the marshes, connected with the sea by a canal, and having a population of about 3000. Luçon was the episcopal see of Cardinal Richelieu, having been a sort of family living, into which he, though bred up for a soldier, was inducted at the age of 22. Its Gothic cathedral, surmounted by a tall spire of open-work, is the principal building.

[About 18 m. N.E. of Luçon is Fontenay le Comte (Inns: H. de France; H. du Chapeau Rouge), a handsome town, 10,000 Inhab., on a narrow plain separating the Bocage from the Marais. In the heart of the old town rises the Ch. of Notre Dame, surmounted by an elegant spire of open work—a very fine Gothic edifice; rich portal.

In the Ch. of St. Nicolas the Cardinal de Bourbon was buried 1590.

The Hôtel de la Trompille (Duc du Thouars), built 1563, contains a grand hall, with a carved chimney-piece in the Renaissance style.]

10 Moreilles. Our route now lies across a district which may be called the Fens of France, a series of marshy flats, traversed by numerous rivers, the chief of which are the Vendée and Sèvre Niortaise; it is intersected also in all directions by canals, and, notwithstanding the drainage effected by them, is unhealthy from malaria. A solitary conical mound rising out of the flat on the l. of the road is crowned by the village of Chaillé. The limits of la Vendée and the stream of the Sèvre Niortaise are crossed shortly before reaching 17 Marans, a town of 4000 Inhab., 9 m. from the sea, which exports corn from la Vendée and flour from Niort.

Before half the next stage is traversed the road crosses the canal from la Rochelle to Niort. Near this the marshes of la Vendée terminate, and the marly lands of the Aunis begin. At 15 Grolaud the canal is crossed.

A picturesque group of towers and spires, visible from a considerable distance, announces the approach to

La Rochelle (Rte. 66) Railway.

An uninteresting tract of flat marshy land intervenes between Rochelle and Rochefort. Near the village of Passage stood an ancient town, Châtelailon, which preceded La Rochelle, and has long since disappeared, owing to encroachments of the sea.

Rochefort (Rte. 66).

A Steamer runs 4 or 5 times a-week from Royan, a small port on the N. bank of the Gironde, 29 m. from Rochefort to Bordeaux: the voyage takes 7 hours. Coaches convey passengers between Rochefort and Royan, fare 4 fr. 25 c., and total to Bordeaux 8 fr. In going to Royan (a small watering-place opposite the lighthouse of the Tour de Cordouan [Rte. 74]), the Charente is crossed by a ferry. The road traverses an uninteresting flat, only redeemed by drainage from the state of a pestilential marsh, called Les Marennes.

A Steamer ascends the Charente to Saintes (35 m.) every morning, returning in the afternoon: the passage takes 4 hours.

The voyage up the Charente is agreeable, though somewhat monotonous, from the windings of the river and the unvaried nature of the green flat pasture-lands on its banks. Near to Saintes it passes the ruined Castle of Taillebourg, on an isolated rock, near which St. Louis defeated the English in 1242.

Those who travel by land from Rochefort to Bordeaux cross the Charente by a magnificent suspension bridge, in the place of the old ferry, close under the town of Tonnay-Charente, which Louis XIV. had fixed upon for the site of his dockyard, a design which was defeated by the enormous demands of its owners for the purchase of the ground. The Gothic Castle, having a park and gardens attached to it, is the ancient seat of the family of Mortemart. A great quantity of brandy is exported from hence, almost all the vineyards on the banks of the Charente being cultivated for the manufacture of eau-de-vie (see next page): 6000 casks, a large part of the produce of Cognac, is annually shipped here for England.

11 St. Hypolite.

13 St. Porchaire.

On the l. bank of the Charente stands

14 Saintes (Inns: H. du Bateau à Vapeur, best and very good; H. des Messageries) — 11,500 Inhab., — formerly capital of the province Saintonge: it betrays in its name the antiquity of its origin, as chief city of the Santonnes, and has many traces to prove its importance under Roman rule.

The principal and best preserved ancient monument is the Roman Arch of Triumph, upon the bridge over the Charente, serving for a principal entrance into the town, constructed of a coarse limestone, originally very plain, and now, after the lapse of ages, much injured by the weather, which has rounded the angles of the stone, and converted the joints of the masonry into gaps. It is a heavy pile of masonry, pierced by two arches, and destitute of all architectural beauty, 38 ft. high. Five inscriptions upon it, now half effaced, record that it was raised (in the reign of Nero) to the memory of Germanicus, of Tiberius his uncle, and of Drusus his father, by Caius Julius Rufus, priest of Roma and Augustus. It was saved from destruction in 1665 by Blondel the architect, who at that time rebuilt the bridge; and it was repaired in 1844, when the arch was pulled down, but the separate stones were marked for re-erection. It is said to have been built originally on dry land, and that the river has since altered its bed, and isolated the arch; but this seems doubtful.

There are also considerable remains of a Roman Amphitheatre, near the church of St. Eutrope, in the faubourg. Though nearly equal in size to the grand circus of Nîmes, it is very inferior in an architectural point of view, being built of small stones squared, and destitute of ornament, and it is now reduced to a few fractured vaults and arches. The oval of the arena measures 70 ft. in its greatest length, and 57 ft. in width. The dens destined for the wild beasts still remain, and there are fragments of an aqueduct, contrived, it is supposed, to convert the arena into a naumachia for aquatic spectacles. (?) Many antique fragments, capitals, inscriptions, sarcophagi, &c., are preserved in the garden of the sous-préfecture. Such are the few traces of the former magnificence of the ancient Mediolanum Santorum, one of the most important cities of Aquitaine.

The Ch. of St. Eutrope is a structure of the 11th centy.: its huge crypt is the most curious part of it; some of the capitals of columns have quaint carvings. The spire was built in the 15th centy.

The detached tower of the Cathedral, a fine Flamboyant structure, conspicuous from the pinnacles which surmount it, occupies the site of the church built by Charlemagne in fulfilment of the vow of his father Pepin, after defeating on this spot Gaiffre Duc of Aquitaine. The portal is ancient.

The public Library contains Fénelon's Bible, with notes in his own hand.

Saintes is the country of Bernard Palissy the potter, a sort of French Wedgwood.

[About 18 m. to the E., higher up the river, on the road to Angoulême, is the town of Cognac (Inn: H. d'Orléans, poor outside, very comfortable, but dear), which gives its name to the best brandy in France, produced from vineyards in its vicinity, and along the banks of the river near Jarnac and Angoulême (Rte. 64), in the department of La Charente. The quantity produced annually does not exceed 6000 butts (tierçons), but the number sold under the name "les fines Champagnes," by which the best quality is distinguished, exceeds 15,000 butts. Cognac contains numerous distilleries, and is the staple place for the brandy produced in the surrounding districts. The vines cultivated for its manufacture are allowed to grow to greater luxuriance than those used for wine-making, and run along the ground, whence they acquire strength, while the earthy flavour which is inseparable from wine produced from creeping vines is dissipated in the process of distillation.

Francis I. was born at Cognac, while his mother Louise de Savoie, Duchesse d'Angoulême, was residing in the castle; but, according to tradition, he first saw the light under an elm-tree, where his mother was unexpectedly brought to bed. A stone now marks the spot.]

A Diligence runs from Saintes to Mortagne on the Garonne, to meet the steamer to Bordeaux.

The road from Saintes to Bordeaux is carried through

12 La Jard.

9 Pons, a town of 4000 Inhab., picturesquely seated on the l. bank of the Seugne. Its castle, distinguished by a keep-tower, 100 ft. high, built in the 11th century, is now a prison. Théodore Agrippa d'Aubigné, grandfather of Madame de Maintenon, and a favourite of Henri IV., was a native of Pons.

11 St. Genis.

12 Mirambeau.

17 Etauliers, Dépt. de la Gironde.

The road reaches the banks of the Gironde at 13 Blaye, described in Rte. 74.

Steamers ply daily between Blaye and Bordeaux.

15 Gravières. There is a direct road from Etauliers to Gravières, avoiding the détour by Blaye round two sides of a triangle; but not long since this road was impracticable for carriages for want of repair.

14 Cussac is on the high road from Paris to Bordeaux. (Rte. 64.)

10 Carbon Blanc. } (Rte. 64.)
11 BORDEAUX.

it is carried over the valley of the Indre on a long viaduct of 59 arches, 30 ft. span, 65 ft. high, 2624 ft. long.

Monts Stat. 2 m. rt. is Montbazou, a small town, with a castle-keep on a rock, a fief of the house of Rohan; and not far from it is Miré, the supposed site of the victory of Charles Martel over the Moors.

Villeperdue Stat. A mile or two on the l. is the Chapel of St. Catherine de Fierbois, whither Joan of Arc sent from Chinon to fetch the sacred sword, "marked with 5 crosses, lying in a vault," which she afterwards bore in all her battles. She had previously passed through the village, however, on her journey from Lorraine to Chinon, and had doubtless then remarked the weapon; but the vulgar belief attributed its discovery to divine inspiration. Near this is a handsome modern Gothic château, built, 1850, by the Marquis de Lussac.

Ste. Maure Stat.; here roads to Chinon and Loches branch off (Rte. 58), passing Ile Bouchard (6½ m.), whose interesting Ch. has a flamb. hexagon tower and spire, and an early pointed chancel. Here are ruins of a Castle which belonged to the family of Craon. The plain around Ste. Maure is thought to be the site of the battle between Charles Martel and the Saracens under Abderahmen.

The river Creuse is crossed at Port-de-Piles Stat., about ¼ mile above its junction with the Vienne. [Higher up, on the rt. bank of the Creuse, and 3 m. to the l. of our road, is the village of La Haye, the birthplace of Descartes. The house in which he was born (1596) is preserved.]

[About 7 m. S. of La Haye, also on the Creuse, is the Château de Guerche, built by Charles VII. for Agnes Sorel, his mistress, where she resided when the king was at Loches, and where he used to visit her on his way to and from the chace in the neighbouring forest. It is a massy pile, rising 100 ft. above the water-side, flanked by 4 towers at the angles. It retains in its interior some traces of fresco painting, and the punning initials of his mistress's name, an A

ROUTE 64.

TOURS TO BORDEAUX, BY POITIERS AND ANGOULÊME—RAILWAY.

Tours.	Kil.	Miles.
St. Maure Stat. . .	34	21
Châtellerault Stat. .	65	40
Poitiers Stat. . .	98	61
Ruffec Stat. . .	164	102
Angoulême Stat. . .	211	132
Coutras Stat. . .	293	183
Libourne Stat. . .	309	193
Bordeaux Stat. . .	344	215

Tours to Poitiers was opened July 1851. Poitiers to Angoulême opened 1853. Angoulême to Bordeaux was finished 1852.

This railway passes through pretty country and within view of numerous châteaux old or modern; and in the first part of its course crosses 4 or 5 rivers, tributaries of the Loire, in succession, on viaducts, and the ridges separating their respective valleys in deep cuttings. Soon after quitting Tours it passes the Cher, and the rich green pastures bordering on it, on an embankment and a bridge of 6 arches, 590 ft. long; next

1. Les Arènes { Roman Amphitheatre.
2. Evêché.
3. Hôtel de la Préfecture.
4. " de Ville.

5. Palais de Justice.
6. Temple St. Jean.
7. Post.
8. Notre Dame.
9. Moutiersneuf.

10. St. Hilaire.
11. St. Pierre.
12. St. Porchaire.
13. St. Radegonde.

over L (A-Sur-Elle). In the chapel is placed a statue of Agnes.]

4 Les Ormes Stat., on the Vienne. —The château belongs to the family d'Argenson, and has fine gardens.

The railroad runs parallel with the Vienne to Châtellerault Stat. (Inns: H. de l'Espérance, good; Tête Noire, fair dining-place), a smoky town of mean houses, on the rt. bank of the Vienne, is one of the chief seats of the Manufacture of Cutlery in France, which gives employment to about 600 families, out of its 12,433 Inhab., who work for large houses. There is also a royal manufactory of swords and bayonets (armes blanches), established 1820.

The Duchy of Châtellerault was bestowed by Henri II. upon James Hamilton, 2nd Earl of Arran, Regent of Scotland, 1548, to induce him to consent to the projected match between his ward, the infant Queen Mary, and the Dauphin Francis. The duchy was forfeited to the crown, and has never been restored.

The Vienne is navigable for a short distance higher up. A portion of a gateway flanked by turrets, erected by the Duc de Sully, stands at the extremity of the bridge over it.

Clain Stat. For the last 3 stages the railroad has continued to ascend the valley of the Clain. That stream traverses a rocky and wooded ravine, of much picturesque beauty: a bridge and viaduct are crossed before arriving at POITIERS JUNC., STAT. nearly a mile from the town by the road, but much less by the pathway. —Inns: H. de France, excellent; —H. de l'Europe, good; —Trois Piliers.

Poitiers, the capital of ancient Poitou, an early possession of the kings of England, who were its dukes down to the time of Charles V. (1371), stands on a rounded eminence of considerable height, the summit of which is occupied by the Préfecture and Palais de Justice. From this its streets sweep down in steep slopes, or curve, in winding mazes, to the small river Clain, which encompasses nearly  $\frac{3}{4}$  of its circuit, while the smaller river Boivre encircles another part, so [France.] that they formed, in ancient times, a sort of natural fosse round its ramparts, now almost entirely swept away by town - council improvements. The number of Inhab. is 30,873, but it has neither commerce nor manufacture of any great importance, as might indeed be surmised from its dull and empty streets, excepting the market-place, which is a scene of much bustle and densely crowded.

It has an Ecole de Droit, numbering between 200 and 300 students, but of greater celebrity in former times than at present. Lord Bacon in his youth, it is said, studied here. The town still contains more than a dozen munneries, chiefly serving as boarding-schools for the education of young females.

The curiosities of Poitiers are chiefly of an antiquarian nature. It possesses a remarkably large number of churches, all more or less interesting to the lover of architecture and antiquity,—and, as some of them date from a very early period, and others were commenced later, and continued down to comparatively modern times, they form a very instructive series by which to study the progress and change of style in building.

Notre Dame de Poitiers, in the market-place, nearly opposite the Ecole de Droit, presents a remarkable example of the florid Romanesque style in its W. façade, which is nearly covered with sculpture from top to bottom. It rests on a triple arcade; the central arch forming the entrance being circular, the two side arches pointed, but all decorated with mouldings and capitals of the same character of richness and singularity. The rest of the façade, on each side of a tall window, is occupied by arcades filled with statues and bas-reliefs; and the usual pointed oval frame (vesica piscis) within the gable contains 2 statues. The whole is flanked by 2 round turrets. The probable date of this façade is the middle of the 12th centy.

The interior is of a more severe style, but sadly defaced by modern painting: it has an apsidal E. end, with circular arches and hooped vaulting, except the side chapels, one of which, in the S. aisle, an addition in the florid style of the 15th centy., contains a rich recess to include a somewhat grotesque group of sculpture meant to represent the Entombment.

The Salle des Pas Perdus, attached to the Palais de Justice (close to Notre Dame), which originally formed part of the palace of the Comtes de Poitou, is a vast hall, with an open wooden roof; its walls are decorated with arcades, circular on one side and pointed on the other, yet both perhaps nearly of the same date, the 12th centy. The fireplace, richly ornamented with sculpture and arms, conceals a fine flamboyant window. The front is said to have been built by Comte Jean de Berry. The Castle of the Counts, adjoining (rest'd.), bears much old sculpture on its exterior.

From the Place d'Armes a long crooked street leads to the Cathedral (St. Peter), founded by Henry II. of England. The choir, with its square E. end of transition Gothic, seems to be of his time, though the rest may be of later date. Obs. the handsome triple W. porch and its sculptures; the 2 towers, similar in style, but unequal in size; and the semicircular N. doorway, in which the capitals of the pillars are human figures, stiff, but good in style. The plan is nearly that of a Basilica; with 2 rows of columns extending from end to end, and forming 3 aisles, of which the central one is widest, and ends in a shallow apse, while N. and S. small chapels are thrown out, forming an incipient transept.

The vaulting is domical. The piers, composed of 4 engaged shafts, surmounted by sharply-cut capitals, are very elegant. There are several painted windows, and a fine rose at the W. end, hid, internally, by the organ. Very solid buttresses support the walls and roof.

A little way behind the E. end of the cathedral stands the Ch. of St. Radegonde; the lower part of whose elegant Byzantine tower, though masked by a florid porch, is probably of the 11th centy., as well as the white marble bénitier, shaped like a horse-trough within it. Above it is a curious niche, containing an antique bas-relief of our Saviour. The Romanesque choir is raised upon a very old crypt, perhaps older than any part of the upper structure, partly cut out of the rock. In this is deposited the black marble Coffin of St. Radegonde, resorted to, in the month of August, by thousands of pilgrims, chiefly of the lower orders, who throng the low vault to kiss the worn marble Sarcophagus (on which some curious ornaments of an early age may be discerned), and to bring their sick children to be cured, studding the walls with dirty tapers. The saint's empty coffin, it appears, still retains the virtue of healing possessed by her body, before it was burnt by the ruthless Huguenots in 1562. In the S. wall of the nave is a small chapel, fenced with iron bars, called "Le Pas de Dieu," because it contains the stone impressed by the footmark of our Saviour, who here appeared to St. Radegonde, according to the legend! It is covered over by an iron case to protect it. Part of the internal decorations of this ch. are, like the porch, of the 15th centy., and some of the sculpture is by no means appropriate to a church.

Close to the S. transept door of the Cathedral is the building called the **Temple de St. Jean*, originally a baptistery, then a church, next a Musée, restored 1860. It is, next to the Roman Circus, the oldest edifice in Poitiers, and one of the oldest Christian monuments in France, on which account, as well as from the style of its architecture, it deserves particular attention from those who take an interest in antiquities. It measures about 40 ft. by 25, its greatest length being from E. to W., and its walls on these sides terminating in obtuse gables. The masonry is very neat; on the W. end occurs opus reticulatum, and on 3 of the walls, inside as well as out, a sort of arcade is introduced, consisting of a circular arch, flanked and surmounted by small triangles resembling pediments. This debased style of building, not unlike our Saxon, arising from want of skill in the architects, and of funds in the founders, followed the Roman, at the fall of the Empire, and preceded the Romanesque, and it is probable, therefore, that the Temple de St. Jean dates from the 6th or 7th centy. It appears to have been a Baptistery, judging from the well in the centre of its floor, about 8 ft. deep, having a pipe running obliquely into it. The style of construction is decidedly post-Roman.

To convert it into a ch., a semi-circular apse was thrown out from the E. wall, and a sort of porch was raised before the W. The style of building in these alterations denotes a date probably not later than the 10th centy.; and the curious frescoes, still visible on the inner walls, are perhaps nearly as old. The bull's-eye windows by which it is lighted were originally round-headed windows, the lower part of which has been bricked up. This edifice was once condemned by the municipal authorities to be pulled down, because it stood in the way of the road to Limoges. Luckily there were found in Poitiers some admirers of ancient art to save it from destruction.

The following churches deserve the notice of the antiquary and architect, in addition to those already mentioned. **St. Hilaire*, finished 1049, has lost a portion of its original nave. The apsidal choir rests on 7 lofty columnar piers. In an open crypt under the high altar is the tomb of St. Hilary, the friend of Athanasius. St. Jean de Moutiersneuf, founded 1086 by Count William VII. of Aquitaine, whose monument restored is in the S. aisle, is also Romanesque, but has been much altered and spoiled since the Revolution. St. Porchaire has a Romanesque tower.

In the Public Library are some fine illuminated MSS.

The Romans have left traces of their settlement here, on the site of Gaulic Limorum, a city of the Pictavi, in the remains of an Amphitheatre, which is best approached through the Inn called Hôtel d'Evreux. At the back of the stable-yard is a tolerably perfect wedge-shaped vault, now filled with hay; and leading to it, a part of the vaulted corridor which ran round the building on the ground-floor. The oval interior of the Circus is now converted into the inn garden, and some houses have been built upon the sloping constructions around it which formerly supported the rows of benches. There is no doubt that other vaults and corridors remain under them. The hardness and regularity of the masonry, in the portions of the wall exposed to view, are such as characterise all Roman constructions.

M. Moitre, a chair-maker, No. 7, Rue St. Etienne, has a very curious collection of Emaux de Limoges, ivory-carvings, &c.

The town of Poitiers is surrounded by narrow valleys or ravines on all sides but the S.W., where a neck of land connects it with the high ridge whose extremity it occupies. In ancient times the town was defended on this side by strong walls and a deep ditch dug across the isthmus. The space immediately within these walls is now converted into a Promenade, called de Blossac, from an intendant of the province in the last centy.; a very agreeable walk, for the terraces, resting on the foundations of the old walls, command a pleasing view into the deep valley of the Clain below.

The Bains de Blossac, not far from this walk, are comfortable, and the charge moderate.

From the heights on the rt. bank of the Clain there is a very good view of the picturesque town of Poitiers, but no path runs along them. The writer of this took an agreeable but scrambling walk, issuing out of Poitiers by the Paris gate, crossing the bridge over the Clain, then ascending through vineyards behind the Faubourg, and keeping along the edge of the cliff as far as the road to Limoges, where he recrossed the Clain by another bridge, at the back of St. Radegonde.

About 1½ m. out of the town, a little to the l. of the road to Limoges, on a height, is a Dolmen, or Druidic monument, called Pierre Levée. It is a block of calcareous sandstone, about 13 ft. long and 3 thick, resting at one end upon upright stones. It seems perfect and well preserved. Rabelais attributes its erection to Pantagruel, "pour le divertissement des escoliers de l'Université," who resorted hither to carouse.

At about an equal distance from the town, in another direction, a little to the l. of the road to Angoulême, are remains of a Roman Aqueduct, which supplied water to the town and circus. 4 or 5 of its arches are still tolerably perfect, but they are neither imposing nor very ornamental.

Poitiers is historically very celebrated. The invading tide of the Saracenic hordes penetrated in the 8th centy. thus far into W. Europe, at a moment when the fate of Christianity seemed trembling in the scale. At that epoch, having already conquered Spain, they poured through the defiles of the Pyrenees, overspread Aquitaine, advanced up to the walls of Poitiers under their famed chief Abdelrahmen, and burned the Ch. of St. Hilaire to the ground. They were even threatening to pass the Loire, when they were met, somewhere between Poitiers and Tours, by Charles Martel, in 732. This contest between the E. and the W., between the Gospel and the Koran, ended in the defeat of the Saracens, 300,000 of whom, it is said, but on the doubtful authority of a single chronicler, were left dead on the field; and the remnant retired, never more to trouble Christendom in the W. The site of the battle-field has never been exactly ascertained, and no discovery of bones has been made, which would surely mark the scene of so enormous a slaughter. At an earlier period (507) the plains of Poitiers had been the scene of the defeat of Alaric King of the Visigoths, by Clovis.

Poitiers is distinguished in English history by the signal victory gained under its walls, in 1356, by the army of the Black Prince, consisting of English and Gascons, who early in that year had invaded the S. of France, and spread desolation through Languedoc, Limousin, and Auvergne, as far as the gates of Bourges in Berry. The prince's whole force did not exceed 12,000 or 14,000 men, and the expedition had no other design than that of a foray to "harry" the fair fields of France. On his way back to Bordeaux, however, suddenly and unexpectedly, on 9th September, he encountered the army of John King of France, amounting to 60,000 men, of whose vicinity, and even of their march to meet him, he had been entirely ignorant.

"God help us!" said the prince, "we must now consider how we can best fight them." The Pope's Legate, Cardinal Talleyrand, assuming the office of peacemaker, in vain endeavoured to prevent the impending strife and bloodshed; even Edward himself offered to acquiesce in any reasonable terms, consistent with his honour, to be permitted to go free. He offered to give up all the towns and castles he had taken, together with the prisoners, and not to bear arms against the French king for the space of 7 years. The French, however, confident in numbers, would listen to no conditions but the surrender of the Black Prince and 100 of his principal knights. The result is well known. The English owed the success of the day, under Providence, to their well-chosen position, to the deadly and skilfully aimed arrows of their yeomen, which availed more than the lances of their knights, and to the stout hearts of their leaders, the Black Prince and Lord Chandos, and of all the English under them.

On that day France beheld the flower of her chivalry laid low, while her king, John, was led into captivity. The noble dead were buried by the townsfolk in the churches of the Cordeliers and Jacobins within the town. The field of battle is fixed by Froissart near the village Maupertuis, about 5 m. N.W. of the town, near the road to La Rochelle.

Railway to Niort, Rochefort, and Rochelle. (Rte. 66.)

Diligences.—Daily to Limoges; to Les Sables, Châteauroux, Civray.

The railway to Angoulême was completed 1853. The country traversed possesses little interest. On quitting Poitiers, it leaves l. the old town walls under the church of St. Hilaire, and through a short tunnel returns into the valley of the Clain, which it crosses several times.

rt. is left the Rly. to Niort.

Vivonne Stat., passing another tunnel.

Civray Stat. The old town lies 2 m. l. It has a Romanesque Ch. whose façade is curiously ornamented with sculptures, including signs of the zodiac, somewhat like Notre Dame at Poitiers, but dating probably from the early part of the 12th centy. [At Charroux, 8 m. farther off, are remains of an Abbey, now reduced to a tower about 80 ft. high, rising from 2 circular arcades, one above the other, supported by piers formed of bundles of shafts. This was originally the central tower of a very curious church, consisting of a circular choir, preceded by a rectangular nave: but all the rest is destroyed. The abbey was founded by Charlemagne, but these ruins are not older than the 11th or 12th centy.]

A few miles N.E. of Civray is Geuçay (H. du Lion d'Or), where there is a very fine and picturesque Castle of the 12th or 13th centy., the walls in good preservation. And near it is the Ch. of St. Maurice, a Romanesque structure, central tower, apsidal chapels, and the other usual features of a fine ch. of the 12th centy.]

The Railway now enters the valley of the Charente, and passes the iron-work of Taizé Aizi.

Ruffec Stat.—Inns: H. des Ambassadeurs; the pâtes de perdrix aux truffes unrivalled.—Ld. B. Poste, very good. The church is old and curious; the porch of the 11th cent. Ruins of the castle of the Counts of Broglie. Pop. 3109.

At Mansle the river Charente is crossed, and the Castles of la Terne and la Titerne are passed.

The cultivation of the vine now becomes general. The wines produced about Angoulême and along the borders of the Charente are of inferior quality, but fit for converting into brandy. Between Pontouvre and Bourgets we cross the Touvre.

[A few miles up this picturesque stream is the Imperial cannon-foundry of Ruelle; charcoal is employed as the fuel for the smelting furnaces, and is abundantly supplied by the neighbouring forests.]

Farther on, in the same direction, is La Rochefoucauld, whose castle was the ancient residence of the family of that name, its most noted scion being François, author of the celebrated 'Maximes.' It escaped destruction at the Revolution, and still belongs to the same family, though no longer inhabited by them. It is a huge pile, flanked by round, cone-roofed towers at the angles, forming 3 sides of a square, and, with the exception of the antique donjon, was erected, 1527, by Antoine Fontan, in the style of the Renaissance. A range of arcades serves as a passage along the inner façade, and a curious and richly ornamented spiral stone staircase leads to the upper stories. Below the castle are very extensive Caves, not now entered, which served as a refuge to the Huguenots in the wars of Religion. There are similar natural caverns all along the valley of the Tardonère, the largest of which, les Grottes de Rancogne, are about 3 m. above La Rochefoucauld. They are traversed by a streamlet, and contain some stalactites.]

Angoulême Stat.—Inns: La Poste, best;—H. de France;—Croix d'Or, at the foot of the hill. Buffet at the Stat., originally the Naval School.

Angoulême, the ancient capital of the Angoumois, now of the Dépt. de la Charente, occupies a situation, not unlike that of Poitiers, on the top of a high hill, terraced round with remains of the ancient ramparts above, while below it is nearly encircled by the course of the Charente, and by another small stream falling into it. The town is distinguished by far more life, industry, and trade, than Poitiers, and possesses, with its suburbs, a population of 22,811. Though planted on the top of an isolated hill, more than 200 ft. above the Charente, it is most abundantly supplied with fountains of fresh water, pumped up by machinery. Its houses, being of a very white stone, easily cut, have a cheerful appearance: it has many new streets and a few old buildings. Its most pleasing features, however, are the series of Terrace-walks running round it, in the place of the old ramparts, and commanding a charming view of the industrious valley deep below, of the winding Charente fringed with verdure, of the suburbs, and the paper-mills on the river banks, which furnish the staple article of manufacture here. By far the finest portion of these terraces is the Promenade Beaulieu; and a series of walks and shrubberies extend down the slopes below it towards the bottom of the valley. In the midst of them stands a column dedicated, by precipitate loyalty, to the Duchesse d'Angoulême in 1815, rededicated, since 1830, "à la Liberté."

In the irregular Place, serving for the market, in the centre of the town, stands the old Castle, distinguished by its 3 picturesque feudal towers and tall donjon, now converted into a prison. It contains a number of vaulted apartments, but possesses nothing of interest, save the recollection that it was the residence of the ancient Counts of Angoulême; that Marguerite de Valois, Queen of Navarre, was born in it,—the most accomplished princess of her day, "La Marguerite des Marguerites," as her brother François I. called her; and that its walls gave shelter to Marie de Medicis. She retired hither, after her husband's assassination, under the protection of the Duc d'Epemon, governor of the Angoumois, who has been suspected of being the accomplice of Ravallac; while the queen-mother herself is not free from suspicion—"The death of Henry did not sufficiently surprise her."

The Cathedral is rather a curious than a beautiful edifice, in the Romanesque style, rebuilt from its foundations in 1120. It suffered at the Revolution; and till very lately bore over its frontispiece the ill-effaced inscription, "Temple de la Raison." It has been restored. It is surmounted by a fine tall tower, of 6 rows of semi-circular arcades, rising on the N. side. The W. front is in the style of the churches of N. Italy; almost the whole space being divided by circular arcades, resting on elegant columns, enclosing statues much mutilated, surmounted in the pediment by a statue of the Saviour (once supposed to be Jupiter), surrounded by the attributes of the 4 Evangelists. The nave has no side aisles, and its roof is formed of 3 vaulted cupolas, a style of construction not known to the N. of the Loire. At the cross rises an octagonal tower. The choir ends in an apse. Numerous additions and repairs were made to the interior, after the barbarous devastations committed by the Huguenots in 1562 and 1568.

Among modern buildings, the Palais de Justice is by no means contemptible. In the attic has been placed the public Library, containing 14,000 vols., and a small collection of Natural History.

Outside the town, to the N., in the escarped rock below the ramparts, is the Grotte de St. Cybard, a holy hermit, whose real name was Eparchus, who occupied it as his cell, and died here in the 6th century. By the sanctity of his life he caused the foundation of arch. and monastery, which extended from the cave to the Charente, and was once much frequented by devout pilgrims, but both are now swept away. In the grotto, which Charlemagne himself approached on bended knees in order to perform his devotions, mass was said daily down to the time of the Revolution. This oldest Christian monument in Angoulême is respected by its present owner, but no longer serves as a church.

Ausonius makes mention of this town under the name Icolisma, fancifully derived from "In collis summa," and gradually softened down, as some conjecture, into the modern Angoulême.

Angoulême and the surrounding province were governed, from the 8th cent. down to 1303, when they were united to France, by a long line of independent counts, 19 in number; first of the race of Taillefer, and, after 1180, of the house of Lusignan. It also belonged to the English, and was some time the residence of the Black Prince after the battle of Poitiers, 1360. One of the town gates, not pulled down until 1808, was named Porte de Chandos, from the brave English knight who built it, while Constable of Aquitaine for Edward III. A house in the Rue de Genève is pointed out as that inhabited by Calvin, who sought refuge here 1533, and taught Greek to maintain himself. The Place de Murier receives its name from a mulberry-tree which stood in the midst of it while it was the convent garden of the Jacobins. During the outrages committed by the Calvinist soldiery 1562, when they captured and sacked the town, the monk Michel Grillet was hung to its boughs, in the presence of the Admiral Coligny, whose death he is said to have foretold with his dying words, saying, "You shall be thrown out of the window, like Jezebel, and shall be ignominiously dragged through the streets."

Among the remarkable persons natives of this place are Ravalliac, the assassin of Henri IV.; Poltrot, who shot the Duc de Guise le Balaféré, before the walls of Orleans; and Montalembert, the inventor of a system of fortification.

The Naval School, established here at the suggestion of the Duc d'Angoulême 1816, was suppressed 1830, and transferred to Brest, and the building in the Faubourg l'Houmeau converted into the Rly. Stat.

The manufactures of Angoulême consist of paper, made in numerous (36 ?) mills in the neighbouring valleys, and brandy.

Capital pâtés de perdrix aux truffes are made here.

The Charente is navigable to the quay below the town. A Steamer runs to Saintes (Rte. 62) 3 times a week.

[18½ m. W. of Angoulême, on the way to Cognac (Rte. 62), is Jarnac, where a handful of Protestants, commanded by the Prince de Condé, engaged the royal army commanded by the Duc d'Anjou, doubling their force in number, and were defeated. Condé fell, after giving the signal for a third charge, which he led, with one arm in a sling, and his leg shattered. Young Henri, Prince of Béarn, his nephew, was a spectator of the bloody affray, but was not permitted to take part in it.]

A tunnel conveys the railway train entirely through the hill on which stands the town of Angoulême.

Many cuttings and embankments occur before we reach

La Couronne Stat., near to which the ruins of the Abbey of la Couronne are seen on the l., in the midst of a green valley abounding in paper-mills. After escaping destruction at the Revolution, it has been demolished for the sake of the material since 1808, and is now reduced to a mere fragment, including the W. front with a fine doorway, and part of a rose-window over it.

The Railway leaves the old post-road on the rt., and crosses on a lofty viaduct of 12 arches the valley of the Coutabière. The Castle of Laroche Landry, on the top of a rock, has been rebuilt by a banker of Angoulême. The viaduct of Couteaubières, 990 ft. long, of 12 arches, is on a curve. Beyond Charmant Stat. is the tunnel of Livernan, the longest on the line, measuring 1310 mètres.

Montmoreau Stat. Here is a fine Romanesque Ch. restored, and fragments of a Castle.

Chalais Stat. This town with its château (Renaissance) belongs to the family Talleyrand.

Contras Junct. Stat. Memorable for the battle between the Protestants and the Roman Catholics, fought on the plain near the confluence of the Dronne and l'Isle, 1587, when Henri IV., then King of Navarre, gained a bloody victory over the forces of the League under the Duc de Joyeuse. The Rly. to Périgueux and Limoges falls in here (Rte. 71). This opens another route from Paris to Bordeaux.

Libourne Station (Inns: H. de France; des Princes), a town of 13,552 Inhab., situated on the rt. bank of the Dordogne, here a tidal river, capable of receiving vessels of 300 tons burthen, and crossed by a bridge of brick, like that of Bordeaux, at the confluence of the Isle, which is traversed by an iron suspension bridge. It is neat and regularly built, and was chief of the "Bastides" or free towns founded by Edward I.* At the highest point on the Dordogne navigable for English wine-vessels. At one time it seemed likely to rival Bordeaux. S. of the town is Condat—"Condatius portus" mentioned by Ausonius, an ancient residence of the English kings.

From Libourne excursions may be made up the Dordogne to the very curious old town of St. Emilion (Rte. 71), and to Castillon (Rte. 71), scene of Lord Talbot's defeat, near Montaigne's château.

The Rly. quits Libourne by a bridge of 9 arches over the Dordogne, placed a little above that which carries the road to Bordeaux.

The viaduct of Arveyres over the marshes consists of 100 small arches, and is  $3\frac{1}{2}$  m. long. The Rly., following the Dordogne, makes a wide sweep before it arrives at St. Sulpice Stat., in a country of vineyards. A few miles from this, lower down the river, is [St. André de Cubzac, on the rt. bank of the Dordogne, here a broad estuary, formerly crossed in ferry-boats, in which passengers and carriages were embarked. The transit occupied from  $\frac{1}{2}$  to  $\frac{3}{4}$  an hr., and was sometimes attended with danger, and always formed a serious interruption to the communication between Bordeaux and Paris. For this disagreeable ferry an iron-wire Suspension-bridge, the longest in France, and indeed in Europe, is substituted. It was begun 1835, and finished 1839, at a cost of 3,000,000 fr., by the engineer Fortuné de Vergès. It is divided into 5 curves supported on 6 pair of piers, consisting of hollow open columnar shafts or towers of cast iron. The roadway of the bridge is raised 95 ft. above the water, so as to allow vessels of large size to pass under it; and the approaches to it, from either bank, are by a series of lofty stilted arches, 29 in number, on either bank, which have a striking effect. The bridge itself has much the appearance of the Brighton chain-pier, and is of slight construction, not being warranted to stand more than forty years. Besides the suspending wire cables, others are attached to the summits of the piers, in the manner of stays or braces, to steady them. The length of the central, or suspension-bridge, is 1788 ft., and the 29 arches, on either side, with the embankments and approaches, making a total length of 5070 ft., or very nearly a mile: it is  $25\frac{1}{2}$  ft. wide.

* See Pyrenees; Introduction, Section IV.

The Dordogne joins the Garonne 10 m. below this bridge, and their united waters form the estuary called the Gironde, after which the department is named.

The tongue of land which separates the Dordogne from the Garonne, across which our road lies, is a fertile district, chiefly laid out in vineyards and corn-fields, and scattered over with country seats. It is called the "Entre Deux Mers."]

La Grave d'Ambarès Stat. Dilligences to Cubzac. La Grave is centre of a district celebrated for its wines. Near this are 4 tunnels.

The approach to Bordeaux is very striking; the Railroad is carried along the rt. bank of the broad Garonne, over 3 viaducts and through 3 tunnels, to Lormont Stat., until the city of Bordeaux appears lining its opposite concave bank.

Bordeaux Bridge is one of the finest in Europe, consisting of 17 arches of stone, the walls and spandrels being brick, with stone quoins, 1534 ft. long, traversing the Garonne, from the little suburb la Bastide to the city of Bordeaux. Until 1821 the Garonne was passed by a ferry; and the want of a bridge has confined the city exclusively to the l. bank of the river. A bridge of wood was begun in the time of Napoleon, but was abandoned soon after for one of stone, which was completed, 1821, by a company of shareholders. The architects were MM. Deschamps and Bilandel.

A vaulted passage runs under the roadway, between it and the arches, for the whole length of the bridge: this gives a great height of wall between the crown of the arches and the parapet.

As the French are fond of comparing this bridge with that of Waterloo, the dimensions of both are here given in English feet.

	Length.	Width.	No. of Arches.	Width of Arch.
Bordeaux	1534	47	17	85*
Waterloo	1326	40	9	118

The view of Bordeaux from the bridge is very striking. Opposite the bridge stands the Porte de Bourgogne, erected to commemorate the birth of the Duc de B., grandson of Louis XIV.

The high tolls were removed by Emp. Napoleon III., 1861.

A bridge to carry the railway across the river has been constructed, 1861.

BORDEAUX TERMINUS (see Rte. 73). A Grand Junction Stat. for the Chemin de Fer d'Orléans et du Midi, on the l. bank of the Garonne.

ROUTE 65.

POITIERS TO CHÂTEAUXROUX, BY ST. SAVIN—MONTMORILLON.

119 kilom. = 73½ Eng. m.

This cross-road, not much travelled, leads to some interesting antiquities.

23 Chauvigny, a town of 1000 Inhab., occupies a commanding height on the rt. bank of the Vienne. It was, in feudal times, a strong fortress, and still possesses the ruins of 3 distinct Castles built on the same plan, a square flanked by turrets. The Donjon, on the top of the hill, shows on one side a breach in its wall, made by a battery of cannon in the 16th century, during the wars of Religion, and now filled up with bricks arranged herring-bone fashion. One of the castles, the most modern, probably of the 13th or 14th century, with pointed windows, now serves as a prison. There are many old houses in the upper town dating from the 15th and 16th centuries.

The Church, also in the upper town, is a very interesting Romanesque building, decorated with all the ornaments of Byzantine art externally, and also within; the capitals of its columns being carved with mermaids, monsters, &c., as well as with Scriptural subjects.

* Only the 7 central arches have this width, the rest are smaller.

19 St. Savin has a Church decorated in its porch, nave, and crypt, under the choir, with fresco paintings, representing Scriptural subjects from the Creation, the figures as large as life, and tolerably well preserved. Those in the crypt describe the legend of St. Savin and St. Cyprien, and are of smaller proportions. They are probably the work of Greek or Italian artists in the 11th, or at earliest of the 10th century, and are certainly very valuable as monuments of early art. It has been remarked, as a proof of the antiquity or the Eastern origin of these frescoes, that the horsemen are represented riding without stirrups. The whole ch. was originally covered with paintings; those in the choir have been effaced by whitewash. The ch. itself is a very ancient specimen of Romanesque architecture; it is entered by steps leading down into it, and the W. end seems to have been separated from the rest, so as to form a Narthex, like the Galilee of some English churches. The choir and shallow transepts end in apses.

[At Montmorillon, 12 m. S. of St. Savin, "in the courtyard of what was the baronial castle, and is now a college, there is an ancient and very curious chapel. Originally it must have been the domestic chapel of the lords of the adjacent castle, doubtless erected by them, and for their private use. It consists of a subterranean crypt, which probably was the family vault, and an octagonal chapel above it, with a conical roof. Part of this building is in the round style, and part in the pointed. That part which is in the round style may belong to the 11th cent. The pointed part cannot be older than the 13th. But the most remarkable feature in this building, and that to which it owes its celebrity, is a group of rudely sculptured figures which occupy a recess above the doorway. Various explanations of this singular group have been offered by the learned, but none of them are satisfactory, and the problem is more difficult to solve, as some of the figures are taken from ordinary life, and some are allegorical.—H. G. K. The most singular and inexplicable, perhaps, are two female figures, the one corpulent, having toads or scarabs hanging from her breasts; the other meagre, entwined by serpents, and suckling them. This Church has been repaired by the Government. Under an arch on the rt. is the tomb of Etienne de la Hire. "A few miles W. of Montmorillon is Lussac les Châteaux (Inn: Trois Pigeons), where there are a small Romanesque church, and the ruins of 2 castles, and of a bridge which connected them, the towers of which remain in the water, but the arches, probably of wood, have been destroyed. The scenery is very picturesque; there is a cavern in the rock."—J. H. P.]

18 Le Blanc. The abbey of Fronquambant is again taken possession of by the Trappists. The fine ruined Ch. of the 12th and 13th centuries is being restored by them.

18 Scoury.

11 St. Gaulthier.

15 Lothiers.

15 Châteauroux. (Rte. 70.)

ROUTE 66.

POITIERS TO ROCHELLE AND ROCHEFORT. (RAILWAY.)

Poitiers.	Kil.	Miles.
Lusignan . . . . .	26	16
Niort . . . . .	78	48½
Aigrefeuilles . . . . .	123	78
Rochelle . . . . .	141	88
<hr/>
Rochefort . . . . .	138	86

3 trains daily in 4 or 5 hrs.

Poitiers (in Rte. 64).

Lusignan Stat., on the Vonne (Inns: H. Ste. Catherine;—Lion d'Or), gave its name to the noble family which rescued Jerusalem from the Infidels and for some time occupied its throne. The castle was surprised and razed by the Catholics 1574, and a public walk occupies its site. The Church, a dilapidated building, has a curious portal, ornamented with the signs of the zodiac.

15 St. Maixent Stat. (Inn: L'Ecu de France—extortionate), an old walled town, 5500 Inhab., on a height above the Sèvre.

13 Niort Stat. (Inns: H. du Raisin de Bourgogne; H. de France—good), a modern town, chef-lieu of the Dept. of the Deux Sèvres, on the Sèvre Niortaise, 19,000 Inhab. The old Castle, surmounted by 2 keep-towers, each flanked by 8 turrets, remarkable as the birth-place, or at least the cradle, of Madame de Maintenon, whose profligate father, Constant d'Aubigné, was confined in it, is now the Maison d'Arrêt. There is a good artesian well and waterworks.

At Aigrefeuilles junction the rly. divides, one branch going to Rochelle, the other to Rochefort.

La Rochelle Stat.—Inns: Poste, very good; H. de France. This third-rate fortress, and commercial town of secondary importance, is situated on the sea, on the shore of a bay in front of which rise the Iles de Ré and d'Oléron. It was capital of the district of Aunis, and is now chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Charente. Before its memorable siege of 1628, it had a population of 27,000; at present it contains no more than 16,500.

Its little port is entirely enclosed by the buildings of the town, and consists of an outer tidal basin, and an inner wet dock, protected by a pier, and flanked at its entrance on either side by the round towers of la Chaîne and St. Nicholas, built 1418 out of the remains of the castle. A quay, planted with trees, runs round the harbour, and forms an agreeable promenade.

Its chief commerce consists in the exportation of the brandy made in the adjoining province of l'Aunis, the finest in France, of wine, corn, and flour.

At low water, the remains of the famous dyke, thrown out into the sea by order of Richelieu during the siege of 1628-29, and which contributed mainly to the surrender of the town, by interrupting all supplies and succour from England, are distinctly visible. This long pile of stones, stretching for a distance of 1640 yds. from the point of Coreille to that of Fort Louis, was built by the engineer Metezeau. Near it is Le Mail, a pleasant promenade, upon which are sea baths, and in front of them bathing huts for ladies and gentlemen.

In the Hôtel de Ville, a handsome building in the style of the Renaissance, of the time of Francis I., is shown the chamber in which the heroic Guiton accepted the office of mayor on the very eve of the siege, "on condition," said he, "that I be allowed to plunge into the heart of any one who speaks of surrender the dagger which I hold in my hand, which I insist shall be placed on the table of the council-chamber where we meet, to be used against myself first, should I be weak enough to propose a capitulation." Influenced by so obstinate a spirit of resistance, the citizens held out for 14 long months against the vast force brought against them, commanded by Cardinal Richelieu in person, and supported by the presence of Louis XIII. At length, when famine, which followed the vigilant blockade established on the land side, by throwing up lines 3 miles long, and by the dyke before-mentioned drawn across the harbour, had reduced the numbers of the besieged from 27,000 to 5000, la Rochelle, the bulwark of the Protestant cause in France, which had remained in the hands of the Huguenots since the first unsuccessful siege of 1573, was yielded up to the king, and its fortifications levelled, except the two towers at the mouth of the harbour. The ill success of the two expeditions fitted out by Charles I., whose favourite, Buckingham, contributed to the failure of the first by his incompetence, and who was assassinated by Felton while about to assume the command of the second, prepared the way for its fall. The town never regained its previous prosperity, though Protestants are still numerous here. By its capture, Richelieu destroyed the political influence of the Calvinists in France. The chair of Guiton, and the council-table of marble, are still preserved in the H. de Ville. His house, at the Rue Guiton, is also pointed out—a building in the style of the Renaissance, flanked with tourelles. Six or eight of the old town gates remain, and the Tour de la Lanterne, a conspicuous structure, surmounted by a spire, dates from 1445.

The Gothic Porte de l'Horloge, whose architecture announces it to be a work of the 16th cent., is another relic of the time of the siege, and there are some old houses still standing which must also have existed at that memorable event, when streets and houses were rendered infected by the dead bodies too numerous for the living to bury. Such was the extreme misery to which the inhabitants were reduced, that one of them declared that for a whole week he had kept his child alive solely by blood drawn from his own body. One of the articles of capitulation was, that the invincible Guiton should continue in the office of mayor, retaining all his dignities: he is lost sight of, however, after the siege.

The town was again fortified by Vauban in the reign of Louis XIV. The tower of the church of St. Sauveur, the loftiest in the place, now used as a shot-tower, commands from its top an extensive view. About 2 m. off the shore, is the Ile d'Aix, opposite the mouth of the Charente: the fort and batteries upon it, defending the entrance of the roads, were captured by the English 1757, but have been greatly strengthened since that time. An attempt was also made, 1809, by the English, under Lord Cochrane, to destroy the French fleet here by fireships, and was partly successful, as, out of 14 vessels, 4 ran ashore and were burnt, and 2 were captured.

For many years a singular plague of white ants (Termes lucifugis), originally imported from India, has infested the buildings of La Rochelle, especially the Prefecture and the Arsenal.

There is an Etablissement des Bains here, situated on a fine Promenade or Mall, a grove of trees stretching along the shore; nice gardens are attached. Much salt is made near the town, by evaporating the sea-water.

Rochelelle is the birthplace of Réaumur, after whom the thermometric scale is named, and of Billaud Varennes, member of the National Convention.

A few miles from the coast, opposite Rochelelle, is the Ile de Ré, well known to English cruisers. It contains about 17,000 Inhab. The town of St. Martin resisted successfully the attacks of the English under the Duke of Buckingham in 1628. At St. Martin are the ruins of an ancient abbey and two very old and curious churches. The strait between the Ile de Ré and the main land is called the Pertuis Breton, and that between the Ile de Ré and Oléron is called Pertuis d'Antioche. There is nothing remarkable on Oléron, which, however, was in early times celebrated for the enterprise of its traders.

Rocheport Stat. (Inns: H. des Etrangers; H. Grand Bacha), a fortress of 4th rank, but standing third in importance among the naval arsenals of France, is built on the rt. bank of the Charente, about 10 m. from its junction with the sea, and contains 24,000 Inhab. The river is deep enough to float vessels of the largest size abreast of the town, having 20 ft. water at ebb, and 40 ft. at the highest tides, and five forts at its mouth protect the dockyard from hostile approach. Its position is well chosen, owing to its vicinity to the roadstead formed at the embouchure of the Charente, by the protection of the islands of Ré, Oléron, and Aix. In order further to defend the roadstead, a fort is being constructed at their mouth, on a sand-bank called the Boyard, between the Ile d'Aix and Ile d'Oléron; and a million of francs was voted for the purpose 1840. Rocheport is quite a modern town, founded in 1644 for the establishment of a dockyard by Louis XIV., or rather by his wise minister Colbert, who saw the necessity for a second port and arsenal on the ocean besides Brest. Its streets are built at right angles, and the only buildings of consequence are those connected with the Port Militaire or Dockyard. Admission is given by the Major de la Marine, on application of the British consul, and on exhibition of the passport. The model-room contains some curiosities. To describe the sailmakers' shops, the cable-twisting loft, the workshops whose machinery is set in motion by a steam-engine, would be nearly to repeat what has been said of Brest and Cherbourg. The only novelty to an Englishman, acquainted with the British dockyards, will be the Bagne, or convict prison, capable of containing 2200 forçats, but occupied by only half that number.

The largest and most remarkable edifice here is the Hôpital de la Marine, outside the town, consisting of nine separate masses of building, containing 1200 beds. It is excellently arranged, and well kept up, cleanly in the extreme. There is a tolerable anatomical museum attached to it.

The town was originally very unhealthy, owing to its low situation among the marshes; but these have been drained, and fevers are become rare.

In the Grande Place is a fountain adorned with figures representing Old Ocean shaking hands with the Charente!

In 1809 Lord Cochrane penetrated into the Basque Roads, between the Ile de Ré and the Ile d'Oléron, with a small squadron, and burnt 5 vessels of the French fleet destined for the W. Indies, he himself steering the leading fire-ship, charged with 1500 barrels of powder and 400 shells, through the concentrated fire of 1000 guns!

On the 3rd July, 1815, Napoleon arrived at Rocheport, seeking to escape to America, and lodged at the Préfecture; but finding that the Bellerophon, an English line-of-battle ship, was at anchor in the Rade des Basques, and that there were no possible means of evading it, he went on board on the 15th, and sailed for England, after in vain attempting to obtain a pledge from Captain Maitland for safe-conduct.

SECTION IV.

LIMOUSIN—GASCONY—GUIENNE—THE PYRENEES—NAVARRÉ—BÉARN—LANGUEDOC—ROUSSILLON.

PRELIMINARY INFORMATION.

§ 1. Directions for Travellers in the Pyrenees, Approaches and nearest Routes, Starting-points. § 2. Scenery of the Pyrenees; comparison with the Alps; Forests, Meadows. § 3. Gaves, Lakes, Ports or Passes, Valleys. § 4. Cirques or Oules. § 5. A Dash into Spain. § 6. Inhabitants. § 7. Cagots. § 8. Sporting. § 9. History, the English in the Pyrenees, Froissart, the Black Prince, Wellington. § 10. Characteristics of the chief Watering-places, the Baths. § 11. Works on the Pyrenees. § 12. Skeleton Tours. § 13. Passports, Accommodations, Inns, Conveyances, Guides, Horses, Chaises à Porteurs.

ROUTE	PAGE	ROUTE	PAGE
70 Orleans to Limoges (RAILWAY).	241	Col de Peyresourde, and Val de l'Arboust.—Excursion to the Lac d'Oo . . . . .	316
70A. Limoges to Montauban, by Brives (Cahors) and Cupdenac .	244	87 Bagnères de Luchon to Lac d'Oo—the Frozen Lakes, Port d'Oo, and Venasque. . . . .	318
71 Limoges to Bordeaux, by Périgueux (RAIL) . . . . .	247	88 Pau to Bagnères de Bigorre, by Tarbes . . . . .	320
72 Toulouse to Montauban (RAIL)	249	89 Pau or Bagnères de Bigorre to Luchon . . . . .	324
73 Montauban to Bordeaux (RAIL)	259	90 Bagnères de Luchon to Venasque, by the Port de Venasque—Return to Luchon by the Port de Picade [Ascent of the Entecade]—The Maladetta .	330
74 The Garonne and Gironde from Bordeaux to La Tour de Cordouan.—Wine District of Médoc . . . . .	269	91 Toulouse to Luchon or Bagnères de Bigorre, by St. Gaudens (RAIL) . . . . .	333
76 Bordeaux to Bayonne (RLY.) [Arcachon]. The Landes . .	274	92 Montauban to Rodez . . . .	335
77 Bayonne to Biarritz, St. Jean de Luz, and Irun . . . . .	280	93 Toulouse to Narbonne and Cette, by Carcassonne (RAILWAY).—Canal du Midi . . .	335
78 Dax to Pau, by Orthez (RAIL)	284	94 Narbonne to Perpignan (RAIL), Port Vendres, and the Spanish Frontier . . . . .	338
79 Périgueux to Tarbes, by Agen and Auch . . . . .	289	95 St. Gaudens to Carcassonne, by St. Girons and Foix . . .	341
80 Bordeaux to Tarbes and Bagnères de Bigorre, by Mont de Marsan and Aire (RAILWAY) .	290	97 The E. Pyrenees:—Toulouse to Foix (RAIL) and Puycerda—The Valley of the Ariège—Videssos—Andorre . . . . .	341
82 Pau to Canfranc in Spain, by Oloron and the Val d'Aspe . .	291	98 The E. Pyrenees:—Perpignan to Mont Louis and Puycerda, by the Valley of the Tet—Ascent of the Canigou . . . . .	345
83 Pau to Eaux-Bonnes and Eaux-Chaudes.—Pic du Midi d'Ossau	292	99 Perpignan to Campredon, by Boulou—Pratz de Mollo—the Canigou . . . . .	347
83A. Eaux-Chaudes to Cauterets, by Panticosa . . . . .	298
84 The Col de Tortes.—Eaux-Bonnes to Cauterets or Luz .	299
85 The Pyrenees:—A. Pau, Eaux-Bonnes, or Eaux-Chaudes, to Cauterets. B. Cauterets to Luz. C. Luz to Gavarnie—Brèche de Roland. D. Luz to Bagnères de Bigorre or Luchon . . . . .	300
86 The Pyrenees:—Bagnères de Bigorre to Luchon, by the Hourquette d'Aspin, Arreau,

§ 1. DIRECTIONS FOR TRAVELLERS IN THE PYRENEES.—APPROACHES AND MOST DIRECT ROUTES.

Several lines of Railway now convey travellers, in a few hours, from Paris to the threshold of the Pyrenees. 1. The best and quickest route is—Paris; by Orleans; Tours; Bordeaux (13 hrs.); and thence by Dax to Pau (6½ hrs.). There is also a branch, rly. from Bordeaux to Tarbes and Bagnères de Bigorre, by Aire.

2. From Paris to Orleans, Vierzon, Limoges, Périgueux, Agen (15 hrs.), Toulouse, and Bagnères (7 hrs.). Total 22 hrs.

3. Paris to Lyons, Nismes, Montpellier, Toulouse, and Bagnères, by rly. This is a longer, but very interesting route.

Travellers are recommended to go by Bordeaux, and return by Toulouse and Lyons.

The best starting points for making the tour of the Pyrenees are Pau for those coming from the W., and Toulouse for travellers approaching from the E. Those who do not intend to make a permanent stay at any of the watering-places should dismiss their heavy baggage before they plunge into the mountains, sending it on by roulage, from the one extreme point of their intended tour to the other, from Pau to Toulouse, or vice versa.

The Brunnen of the Pyrenees, enconced each in its own beautiful valley, form good halting-places for the passing traveller who visits these mountains merely from curiosity to explore their beauties, and he may thus terminate almost every day's journey in a comfortable hotel, or at least in tolerable quarters. Almost every valley is accessible by a good carriage road, but it stops at a certain distance, without surmounting the mountain ridge, or penetrating into Spain, except the two extreme passes at the E. and W. ends of the chain. As there are few carriage roads over even the lateral ridges from one valley into another, those who travel only in carriages must retrace their steps down the valleys. Pedestrians and equestrians (and the only way to see the Pyrenees to advantage is on foot or horseback) may pass, in most instances, by foot or bridle paths, out of one valley into another across the minor ridges which separate them, and thus enjoy some of the finest scenery without going twice over the same ground. The great chain can only be crossed in the same way, by bridle or foot paths, over some of the many Ports or Cols, more than 50 of which are enumerated between the Bay of Biscay and the Mediterranean.

Pedestrians should be warned not to expect on the high mountains of the Pyrenees those Châlets to which they are accustomed to resort in the Alps. Cows are not kept in the upper pastures, nor is hay stored or cheese made. The few shepherds crouch under shelves of rocks, or make a shed of a few rough stones. As a general rule, the explorer must start from a low and hot valley, and make a long ascent to reach the points of interest. Those who would shorten their journeys must be prepared to bivouac out; and to enable them to do this, should provide a sack to sleep in, as the custom-house officers do.

The length of the portion of the chain of the Pyrenees running between the Mediterranean and the Bay of Biscay, and forming the boundary line between France and Spain, is estimated at about 270 m. The highest parts of the chain are near the centre, and it descends considerably towards the Mediterranean and the Gulf of Gascony. The highest summits do not occur on the central ridge or main chain, but on the buttresses running out from it to the S., and therefore belong to Spain. Only one summit within the French frontier, the Vignemale, attains an elevation of 11,000 ft., while 3 in the Spanish portion of the chain exceed that measure. The average length of the valleys running up from the plain to the crest of the mountains is about 36 m.

§ 2. Without doubt some of the finest scenery in France is to be found among the Pyrenees, which, though inferior in height, and on the whole in grandeur of scenery, number of snowy peaks, and area of glaciers, to the Alps, yet possess beauties peculiar to themselves, of which the Alps cannot boast. The sunny atmosphere, which they owe to their more southern latitude, gives a warmth or glow to the landscape which will in vain be sought farther to the N.; and this genial climate, while it banishes perpetual snow to a height of about 9000 ft. (i. e. 1300 ft. above the Alpine snow-line), also spreads a richness of sylvan decorations over these mountains unparalleled in Swiss scenery. Heights which in a more northern region would either be condemned to nakedness, or to a scanty growth of lichens, are here clothed in verdure to the very top; and precipitous rocks, elsewhere rejecting all vegetation, are tufted in every cranny and fissure with brushwood, especially with box, which thrives and spreads wonderfully.

But the pride and chief charm of the Pyrenees are their vast forests, the seas of undulating foliage which clothe their sides and tops, not merely of dark monotonous fir, but oak and beech: examples of these are presented in the upper part of the Val d'Ossau, near Gabas, in parts of the Val d'Argeles and Val d'Aure.

The meadows which carpet the lower slopes and bottom of the valleys equal if they do not surpass those of Switzerland in intense verdure produced by irrigation and sunshine, and approximate to the even surface of an English lawn; and while the plains of Languedoc and Provence are parched into a yellow desert, here the hues of spring are prolonged into summer and autumn, and the traveller is constantly refreshed by vernal gales. The valleys of the Pyrenees abound in glacier-marked rocks, which would lead the geologist to conclude that in comparatively recent epochs the glaciers must have been very extensive.

§ 3. The brawling rivers (Gaves is the local name, derived from the same Celtic root as our Avon) are remarkable, beyond those of almost any other country, for their excessive purity, and for tints resembling beryl and chrysoprase. The waterfalls are second rate, quite inferior to those of Switzerland; those above Caunterets are pretty, and perhaps the finest. That of Gavarnie, the loftiest in Europe but one (in Norway), though 1300 ft. high, is a mere thread of water. Lakes are almost entirely wanting, and here the inferiority of the Pyrenean mountains to those of Switzerland is most decided. The Lacs de Gaube, of Seculeijo (or Lac d'Oo), and the Lac Bleu, though very interesting from the adjuncts of scenery, precipices, and streamlets dashing into them, are mere mountain tarns, yet they are the finest and almost the only sheets of water.

The chain of the Pyrenees has in a considerable degree the character of a vast wall drawn from sea to sea, notched by frequent passes or cols, rarely more than 1000 ft. lower than the summit of the crest which surmounts them. From this reason, and also from the indolent nature of the Spaniards, and from the strong smuggling interest, only two high roads are practicable for carriages—the Pass of the Bidassoa, at the W. extremity, close to the Bay of Biscay, and that of the Col de Pertus, at the E., along the shore of the Mediterranean. There are however at least 50 passes known to, and used by, the shepherds and mountaineers, most of them practicable on horseback, and several easily convertible into carriage-roads. They are here called "Ports," a very expressive name, for in many instances they are literally doors cut in the crest of the mountains leading from France into Spain. The most striking of these, and well worth the traveller's attention, are the "Brèche de Roland," and the Port de Venasque, the passage of which reveals the grandest, and almost the only, view of the Maladetta, the monarch of the Pyrenees.

The valleys of the Pyrenees run nearly at rt. angles with the great dorsal ridge, descending from the central spine into the plain in a series of basins and gorges: the most considerable are the valleys of the Garonne and Ariège.

The most beautiful on the French side of the chain are the Val d'Argeles (which no one should omit seeing), Val d'Ossau, and valleys of the Garonne, Adour, and Lys, Val d'Aure, and Val d'Aran.

The most grand gorges are those leading from Pierrefitte to Cauterets and Luz, and that of Mahourat leading to Pont d'Espagne, and the approach to Eaux-Chaudes.

§ 4. Several Pyrenean valleys have a termination quite peculiar to themselves—in a Cirque or Oule (a local word, meaning pot, Latin olla), a vast circle or semicircle, excavated in the mass of the mountain, walled round by precipices of great height, surrounding two-thirds or three-fourths of the basin, and leaving no opening but that by which the waters escape. The finest of these Cirques is that of Gavarnie, at the head of the Val de Lavedan: its walls are loftiest and most perfect; that of Troumouse at the head of the Val d'Héas is larger, but not so deep: another occurs at the bottom of the Val Estaubé. The nearest approach to this peculiar formation of the vale head in the Alps is at Leuk; but the precipices of the Gemmi, which wall it round, want the semicircular arrangement, as well as the waterfalls, the towers, and cylinders of rock, which give the grand character to the scenery of Gavarnie.

The valleys of the Pyrenees are separated from one another by lateral ridges descending like ribs or buttresses from the great chain, over which the communication is maintained by numerous minor cols, called Portillons, or in some parts Hourquettes. Such are the interesting passes of the Tourmalet and of the Hourquettes d'Arreau and d'Aspin.

Most visitors to the Pyrenees make a point of ascending one of the high peaks in the vicinity of the baths, either for the sake of the view, or to say they have been on such or such a peak: hence, “Avez-vous fait quelques ascensions?” is a common inquiry. The mountain which may be ascended with least trouble, and which repays well by its prospect, is the Pic de Bergons, above Luz. The Pic du Midi de Bigorre, conveniently reached from either Bèrèges or Bagnères de Bigorre, is loftier and more difficult. Less easy still are the Pic du Midi d'Ossau, the Canigou in the E. Pyrenees, and the Brèche de Roland; while the still more lofty Vignemale is no easy task to surmount, and the Mont Perdu is both difficult and dangerous—an exploit for a practised mountaineer; and the Maladetta wears snow on its crest never trodden by human foot until 1842.

§ 5. A dash into Spain, of three or four days' duration, will add much to the variety and interest of a journey among the Pyrenees. The points whence it may be made with most advantage are either from Bayonne to St. Sebastian, the antique town of Fontarabia, the land-locked harbour of Passages, and the Pass of Roncesvalles, from Eaux-Bonnes or Cauterets to the Baths of Panticosa, from Gavarnie to Bujaruelo and Fanlo, or from Luchon to Venasque and the Val d'Aran. The scenery on the Spanish side of the Pyrenees is perhaps grander and wilder than on the French. Those who attempt to explore it must be prepared to “rough it;” they will encounter a wild people, rude villages, accommodations of the very worst kind, yet very expensive, paths scarcely passable, and cookery nauseous to those unused to it, owing to oil and garlic. The sudden transition from France to Spain, the total difference of people, language, manners, habitations, food, combined with the grander features of the mountain scenery, yield the chief zest to such a journey. It is scarcely practicable to travel in Spain without a guide or a servant who knows the country and language unless you speak Spanish yourself. N.B. In Spain always make a bargain on entering an Inn. The fare is not generally attractive, but you may generally count on sweet bread and good chocolate. An invitation to one of the Spanish Bullfights, which are held every year in all the large towns of the N. of Spain, may tempt some to penetrate farther into the country. (See for details the HANDBOOK FOR TRAVELLERS IN SPAIN.)

§ 6. The inhabitants of the Pyrenees, composed of various races, interesting for their antiquity, customs, costumes, &c., are worthy of the attention of the traveller. At the W. extremity of the chain, S. of Bayonne, you have the Basques, the aborigines of W. Europe, who have seen Carthaginians, Celts, Romans, Goths, Saracens, pass before them, and still remain in possession of their mountain home, part in France, part in Spain, speaking a language, the Euskarian, which has nothing in common with any other of Europe. (See Rte. 77.)

The peasantry of Béarn, who occupy the beautiful Val d'Ossau and its tributaries, the land of Henri IV., in the midst of which he spent the years of childhood, are a fine race, retaining, along with their very peculiar patois, much of their primitive simplicity of manners, along with their ancient costumes; the men wearing the berret or cap, like the Lowland bonnet of the Scotch, and a red sash round the waist; the women covering their heads with the red hood or capulet. In the E. Pyrenees the people of Foix and Roussillon have a considerable resemblance, in character, dress, and language, to the Catalans of Spain.

The greatest antipathy exists between the French mountaineers and the Spanish; and the guides relate numerous stories to the discredit of the Spaniards, who, however, seem to have all the carrying trade in their hands.

Independently of the Basque language, the inhabitants of the Pyrenees speak different dialects or patois, containing a large mixture of Spanish, and quite unintelligible. Most of them, however, can speak French. The French spoken S. of Bordeaux has a somewhat English pronunciation, and is pronounced much as Froissart spelt.

§ 7. The proscribed and outcast race called Cagots exist more in tradition than in reality at present among the Pyrenees. Individuals of this class are no longer to be identified, although there are still families who are descended from them, but the ban of caste no longer hangs over them. They are said to have been weak in body and mind, low in stature, sallow in countenance. In many of the village churches are separate entrances, and bénitiers which were made for the use of the Cagots; also squinches or low windows, to enable them to see mass performed. There are various theories to account for their origin and name, none of them satisfactory—for example, that they are the descendants of the Goths, dispossessed of Aquitaine by Clovis—"chiens de Goths," whence Cagots, by a somewhat forced derivation. 2nd. That they sprang from the Saracens who stayed behind in France after their defeat by Charles Martel. 3rd. That they were lepers, banished from human haunts for fear of infection; or, what seems probable, fugitives tainted with heresy and driven apart from the community by the prejudices and aversion of the Romish priesthood. They are now nearly lost through intermixture with the mass of the population.*

§ 8. The Sportsman may find occupation among the Pyrenees in the pursuit of the bear, the wolf, the ibex or bouquetin, and the chamois or izard, though these animals are growing rare. The bouquetin, especially, is almost extinct; if anywhere, he may be found on the Maladetta. The izard is not uncommon, and the best localities for enjoying this chase are Eaux-Bonnes, where are some capital guides (see Rte. 83), the snow-fields of the Vignemale, the Mont Perdu, and the Maladetta, or in the Spanish Val de Broto.

The izard is hunted either by stalking, in the manner in which the red deer is stalked, though with much more difficulty and danger, amidst precipices, glaciers, and snow-fields, until, after a tedious pursuit, the huntsman may have the chance of a steady shot, or by driving the animals by guides and mountain shepherds towards the spot where the chasseur is posted. Success in this case entirely depends on the perfect knowledge possessed by the guides of the habits and haunts of the izard.

* The best account of the Cagots is contained in the 'Histoire des Races maudites de la France et de l'Espagne, par N. Fr. Michel,' Paris, 1847; an excellent work, and reliable authority.

The rivers are so much netted as greatly to interfere with the sport of angling; a scientific fisherman, however, would doubtless find full scope for the exercise of his rod among its innumerable Gaves and mountain streams.

§ 9. History and Antiquities.—The passage of the Pyrenees by Hannibal, and afterwards by Cæsar, with large armies, are the earliest events of importance connected with these mountains. The pass by which they crossed was that of Pertus, at the E. end of the chain. Charlemagne's advance into Spain, in 778, was through that of Roncesvaux, where he received the memorable check so celebrated in history and romance, chiefly at the hands of the hardy mountaineers, the Basques, who fell upon his rear guard while entangled in the defiles, and killed many of his "paladins and peers," amongst them the renowned Roland, who has left his name upon the highest mountain ridge of the chain in the so-called Brèche, cleft through the rock, according to the tradition, by a swashing blow of his sword Durandal. The valleys and passes of the Pyrenees, like those of all other border countries, abound in castles and watch-towers, relics of feudal times, when war and rapine was the business of a great portion of the inhabitants, especially of all who claimed to be noble or gentle. Those who would know something of the history of these ruined hill forts, and of the mode of life of those who occupied them in the 14th century, of the marauding expeditions which went out from them on border forays, to harry the cattle or fair fields of some neighbouring chief, of ambuscades to rob the burgess of the neighbouring towns of his merchandise, or capture some wealthy ecclesiastic or seigneur of eminence, and clap him into the deep dungeon until a ransom was paid, must refer to the delightful pages of Sir John Froissart's Chronicles, the oldest and best handbook for the Pyrenees, which he traversed and threaded in various directions, picking up anecdotes for his history.

In his time many of these strongholds were held by English garrisons for the Black Prince, the province of Gascony, with Bigorre, having been ceded to the English as part of the ransom of the French king, John, captured at Azincour. The tradition of the country, indeed, attributes the building of some of the castles to the Black Prince.* He led an English army into Navarre, to reinstate Pedro the Cruel on the throne of Spain, through the pass of Ronceval, the scene of the "dolorous rout" of Charlemagne.

* The name of BASTIDES (applied to the citizens' boxes in the neighbourhood of Marseilles) was the name of the FREE TOWNS founded in the 13th and 14th centuries, which are very numerous in many parts of France. They are often called the ENGLISH TOWNS, and many of them were undoubtedly founded by the kings of England, especially that wise and politic monarch Edward I.; but many were also founded by the French kings and by the counts of Toulouse, and it is doubtful which had the priority. They are all readily distinguished by the regularity of their plan, the streets being in straight parallel lines, with narrow lanes at the back serving for mews, and usually a narrow passage between each house, so that each plot of ground was complete in itself, and each house independent of its neighbours. The cross streets are at right angles with the others. There is usually a central market-place with a covered way or piazza round it, the covered way being often high enough and wide enough for two carts to pass; and it is usually vaulted over, the vaults often retaining their original character where all the superstructure is modern. The church generally stands in one corner of the market-place. These towns were always fortified, and in many cases the old walls with their turrets and gateways remain perfect. From this circumstance, and from their regular military plan, they are commonly considered as military towns only, built during the wars between the French and English. But this is only a part of the truth; they often were so, but they also played an important part in the history of civilization. They were pre-eminently FREE TOWNS; all their inhabitants were freemen, and they were endowed with liberal privileges against the oppressions of the nobles or lords of the neighbouring castles; especially they had the important privilege of FREE TRADE. They may often be recognised at once on the map by the names of Ville-Franche or Ville-Neuve, of which there are some scores in all parts of France. Others had more specific names, as Libourne, Saint Foy, Montpazier, &c. &c. The original charters of nearly all the English bastides are still preserved among the national archives in the Tower of London.—J. H. P.

Four centuries and a half later the Pyrenees once more became connected with English history, and in a more glorious cause.

"Many of these romantic heights are endeared to an Englishman by the recollection of gallant deeds of British valour performed at the close of the Peninsular war."—S. To visit the scenes of the masterly passage of the Bidassoa, and of the Adour below Bayonne, the spot where the fatal sortie took place under the walls of that fortress, the heights of Orthez, and those where the hard-contested but decisive and final battle of Toulouse was fought, cannot but add to the interest of the journey. It will augment the satisfaction of an Englishman, on visiting the theatre of the war, to know that the British commander, so far from displaying the insolence of a conqueror on entering the French territory, took measures to repress rigidly all acts of plunder on the part of his troops, by careful discipline. No inconsiderable difficulty was at first experienced in restraining the Spaniards, smarting under the oppression and wrongs inflicted on their own fatherland by the soldiery of the country which they then entered in triumph, and expecting to avenge upon its inhabitants the injuries they themselves had suffered. The firmness of the British commander, however, succeeded in alleviating, as far as possible, the horrors of war to the French; and the two following extracts, one from a general order of the Duke issued after the passage of the Bidassoa, the other from a letter written by him to a Spanish officer, will show how great care he took to effect this.

General Order.—"The Commander of the Forces is particularly desirous that the inhabitants should be well treated, and private property must be respected, as it has been hitherto.

"The officers and soldiers of the army must recollect that their nations are at war with France, solely because the ruler of the French nation will not allow them to be at peace, and is desirous of forcing them to submit to his yoke; and they must not forget that the worst of the evils suffered by the enemy in his profligate invasion of Spain and Portugal have been occasioned by the irregularities of the soldiers, and their cruelties authorized and encouraged by their chiefs towards the unfortunate and peaceful inhabitants of the country.

"To revenge this conduct on the peaceable inhabitants of France would be unmanly and unworthy of the nations to whom the Commander of the Forces now addresses himself; and, at all events, would be the occasion of similar and worse evils to the army at large than those which the enemy's army have suffered in the Peninsula; and would, eventually, prove highly injurious to the public interests." * * *

To General —, a Spanish Officer.—"I did not lose thousands of men to bring the army under my command into the French territory, in order that the soldiers might plunder and ill-treat the French peasantry, in positive disobedience to my orders; and I beg that you and your officers will understand, that I prefer to have a small army that will obey my orders, and preserve discipline, to a large one that is disobedient and undisciplined; and that, if the measures which I am obliged to adopt to enforce obedience and good order occasion the loss of men and the reduction of my force, it is totally indifferent to me; and the fault rests with those who, by the neglect of their duty, suffer their soldiers to commit disorders which must be prejudicial to their country."

— Wellington Dispatches.

§ 10. Hot Springs—Character of the Watering-Places—Baths in the Pyrenees.

—The bounty with which Nature has poured forth, throughout the whole range of the Pyrenean mountains, mineral sources of healing quality, of various kinds, adapted to the various ills to which flesh is heir, is truly surprising, and an interesting natural phenomenon. It has been calculated that in the whole chain there are not less than 200 springs, many of them of a high temperature.

It has been observed, that they usually issue forth to light near the junction of the primitive rocks, as granite, gneiss, or slate, with some other formation, chiefly limestone.

The value of these natural medicines was not unknown to the Romans, traces of whose constructions have been discovered near more than one of the hot sources.

Of late years the French in vast numbers have resorted to the various watering places during the autumn, for pleasure merely. The English travellers are comparatively few.

Here follows a list and a brief character of a few of the principal watering-places, beginning from the W., with a notice of the nature of the mineral waters attached.

Eaux-Bonnes.—A fashionable resort, consisting of a row of eighteen or twenty fine tall houses, chiefly modern, and Parisian in their style, and rather expensive, in a wild mountain nook. The water is sulphureous. This place is now much frequented by persons afflicted with complaints in the lungs. Very good accommodation.

Eaux-Chaudes.—Water sulphureous, nearly like Eaux-Bonnes, from which it is only 3 m. distant; good but limited accommodation, romantic scenery around.

Cauterets.—Sulphureous water. A neat little mountain town, in an upland valley surrounded by colossal peaks. Plenty of accommodation, and good; also a place of fashionable resort. In autumn frequented by many Spaniards. Climate bracing, if not cold, from the elevation of its site. Excursions numerous. Its waters and site are considered efficacious in bronchial complaints and rheumatism.

St. Sauveur.—Feebly sulphureous. An attractive watering-place of a few dozen lodging-houses. Charming walks; fine scenery.

Barèges.—A complete hospital, thronged with miserable invalids; inferior accommodation; a poor village in a dreary gorge, which nothing but the hope of recovering health would render endurable beyond an hour or two; yet the efficacy of its waters is astonishing, and in a medical sense it deserves its celebrity, more extended over Europe than that of any other Pyrenean bath. It is often quite full in the season, and lodgings dear. A sharp atmosphere, owing to its great elevation.

Bagnères de Bigorre.—Saline springs; weak; one ferruginous spring. A considerable town, something more than a mere watering-place, seated just within the roots of the Pyrenees on the verge of the plain, and not much raised above it; warm climate. Various amusements; pleasant excursions. The tepid baths are efficacious only for slight complaints; the waters are not powerful remedies.

Bagnères de Luchon.—Seated in the bottom of a basin surrounded by mountains; resorted to for pleasure as well as cure. Its waters are sulphureous and hot—efficacious in rheumatic complaints or cutaneous affections. There are charming excursions in its vicinity.

At every French watering-place is a medical inspector appointed by the government, and invalids intending to take a course of the waters had better put themselves in communication with him. He will assist them respecting lodgings, and assign to them a fixed hour for bathing, which they will retain during the whole time of their stay, and it is said that without his order baths cannot be obtained: that may be the case with permanent bathers, but an ordinary traveller finds no difficulty in obtaining a bath.

The Bath Houses (Etablissements Thermals) of the Pyrenees are very far behind those of Germany in orderly and medical arrangement; the waters, in many cases, losing some of their properties in their passage from the source to the baths. But their chief inferiority is in want of cleanliness. The cabinets des bains are dark hot cells; the baths themselves, though of marble, mere troughs, calculated to inspire disgust in those who either do not need, or are not thoroughly convinced of their sanative power.

§ 11. Works on the Pyrenees; Map.—The best of all the descriptions of the Pyrenees are the works of Ramond (the Saussure of these mountains), 'Observations dans les Pyrénées,' and 'Voyages au Mont Perdu.' Joanne, 'Itinéraire des Pyrénées,' Paris, Hachette, 1858, is considerably indebted to the Handbook, which had preceded it 16 years. To both of these works the small 'Guide to the Pyrenees,' of Charles Pache, is under obligation; but it is a good book, based on personal observation, and likely to be useful to those bent on high mountain expeditions, and anxious to dispense with living guides. It has a good clear Map also.

The 'Carte de la Chaîne des Pyrénées,' drawn by Lezat, ingénieur, 1859, is a very distinct Map.

The very amusing 'Letters from the Pyrenees, 1843,' of Mr. Paris, a hardy and intrepid pedestrian, have shown the way into some of the remoter valleys.

§ 12. SKELETON TOUR OF THREE OR FOUR WEEKS, TO INCLUDE THE MOST INTERESTING OBJECTS IN THE W. PYRENEES.

PAU. Starting-point to—Eaux Bonnes and Eaux Chaudes.

- * Gabas.
- * Col de Tortes—new carriage road.
- * Val d'Auzun.

Argelez, or Pierrefitte.
Cauterets.

* Pont d'Espagne, Lac de Gaube
[or from * Eaux-Chaudes to Panticosa in Spain, and by Pont d'Espagne to Cauterets].

Gorge of Pierrefitte.

Luz, or St. Sauveur.

Gavarnie.

* Brèche de Roland, back to Luz
[or to Bujaruelo and Fanlo in Spain, and back].

* Val d'Héas.

* Vignemale.

Barèges.

* Tourmalet.

* Pic du Midi de Bigorre.

Bagnères de Bigorre.

* Lac Bleu.

Hourquette d'Aspin—carriage road.
Arreau.

* Tramesaigues and the Val d'Aure.

* Port de Peyresourdes.

Luchon.

* Lac d'Oo and Lacs Glacés.

Val de Lys.

* Port de Venasque, Venasque,
Viella.

* St. Beat, in Val d'Aran.

Toulouse by Rail.

N.B. This mark * denotes places which cannot be reached in carriages, but only on horseback or foot.

CARRIAGE TOUR BY POST-ROADS.

Pau, Eaux Bonnes and Eaux
Chaudes.

Col de Tortes, Arrens, Argelez,
Cauterets.

Pierrefitte, Luz, Barèges.

Lourdes, Bagnères de Bigorre, Valley of Grip, Arreau.

Port de Peyresourdes, Luchon.

Cierp, St. Beat.

St. Gaudens.

Toulouse.

N.B. Ladies may be carried up to most of the points of interest in a chaise à porteur.

FORTNIGHT TOUR.

Days.

- 1 Bordeaux to Dax and Pau by railway; 5 hours.
- 2 At Pau: visit castle, &c. Carriage to Eaux Chaudes, Val de Gabas.
- 3 To Panticosa: a long day.
- 4 Across Porte de Marcadaou to Cauterets.
- 5 To Lac de Gaube and back.
- 6 Carriage to Luz. Ride on to Gavarnie.
- 7 Go up to Brèche de Roland, and return to Luz in the evening.
- 8 Ride to Arreau: a long day.
- 9 To Luchon.
- 11 Ride to Port de Venasque.
- 13 Voiturier to Toulouse.
- 14 By Barèges to Bagnères de Bigorre.

ITINERARY OF THE FRENCH PYRENEES FROM BORDEAUX TO PERPIGNAN.

Days. Night Quarters.Objects of Interest.

- |    |                                     |  |
|----|-------------------------------------|--|
| 1  | Bayonne.                            | { Citadel (Sortie). Embankments to turn the course of the Adour.—St. Pierre d'Arruby.—Biarritz.  |
| 2  |                                     |  |
| 3  | St. Sebastian and back, by Rail.    | { Interesting scenery.—Irun and Hernani, curious Spanish towns.—See Citadel of St. S. and walk to Passages.  |
| 4  |                                     |  |
| 5  | St. Jean Pied de Port.              | { Inn : Soleil on the slope of a hill, crowned by the citadel.  |
| 6  | Roncesvalles, 15 m. from St. Jean.  | { Arrange about passport and procure a guide and horse at St. Jean. It will take a day to go, and the same to return.—A poor village.—The Abbey is tenantless; but there is an Inn.—A stone cross on the plain marks the spot where Roland fell. |
| 7  |                                     |  |
| 8  | Oloron.                             | { By Mauleon (Hôtel Vefour, good), a Basque town, and Tardetz.   |
| 9  | Val d'Aspe.                         | { Bedous, best sleeping-place, but bad.—Take provisions—at least white bread.  |
| 10 | Eaux-Chaudes; Val d'Ossau.          | { Cross from Escot by the Col de Marie Blanche, and Plan de Benou (the bed of a former lake), to Bielle in Val d'Ossau.  |
| 11 |                                     |  |
| 12 | Eaux-Bonnes.                        | Ascent of Pic du Midi d'Ossau.   |
| 13 | Pau.                                |  |
| 14 | Or if you do not wish to visit Pau, | { Cross Col de Torte and descend Val d'Azun to Argelez.  |
| 15 | Argelez.                            | Argelez—scenery around—St. Savin.  |
| 16 | Cauterets.                          | Ascend Monné; 10 hrs. up and down.   |
| 17 | Panticosa. Baths.                   | { Visit, on the way, the Pont d'Espagne and Lac de Gaube.  |
| 18 | Gavarnie.                           | Gavarnie and Brèche de Roland.   |
| 19 | Luz.                                | { Pic de Bergons.—St. Sauveur. If Val d'Héas also, sleep at Gavarnie and scale the Brèche next day.  |
| 20 | { Grip or Bagnères de Bigorre.      | { By Barèges, which may be seen en passant. Turn off at foot of Tourmalet, and ride up by the Lac d'Oncet to the top of the Pic du Midi. Sleep at Grip, if unable to reach Bagnères. Start early.  |
|    |                                     |  |

Days.	Night Quarters.	Objects of Interest.
21	Bagnères de Bigorre.	{ See marble-works.—Baths.—Walks.—Visit Lac Bleu.—Pic de Monné.
22
23	Arreau.	{ Ascend Penne de l'Hyéris. Cross Hourquette d'Arreau.
24	{ Aragnouet or Hospice de Coubise; miserable quarters.	{ Ascend Val d'Aure by Vielle, beyond which it splits into several branches. That called Val d'Aragnouet and Gorge de Couplan contains magnificent mountain scenery, forests, cascades.—Return to Arreau.
25
26	Bagnères de Luchon.	{ By Val de Louron, Port de Peyresordes, and Lac d'Oo. Ascend by l'Escala to upper Lake.
27	Bagnères de Luchon.	{ Val de Lys.—Go or return by Sopra Bagnères.
28	Luchon or Venasque.	{ Port de Venasque—Trou du Taureau—returning by Port de Picade, to Luchon. N.B. This excursion may be extended to Venasque, and round the Maladetta to Vitallez and Viella.
29	Val d'Aran; Lez.	{ By Port de Portillon to Œil de Garonne.—Castel Leon.—Bososte.—Sleep at Baths of Lez.
30	Cierp or Luchon.	{ Below Lez the finest part of Val d'Aran.—St. Beat.
31	{ St. Bertrand de Comminges.	{ See the church and remains of Lugdunum Convenarum below the town.—Ride up Val de Barouse to Mauléon. The mountains are pierced with caverns.
32
32	St. Gaudens.	{ Visit la Basse Grotte de Gargas, 5 m. from St. Bertrand, near Tyberan.—Cross the Neste to St. Gaudens.
33	Foix.	{ By RAIL, which, though a circuit, is the quickest.
34	Tarascon.	{ Visit Iron Mines of Vic de Sos.
35	{ Ax or Mt. Louis.	{ Cross to Puycerda and Bourg Madame by Port de Morens. Arrange with the Douane to take a horse across the frontier. Sleep at Bourg Madame or at Cabannes under the walls of Mt. Louis.
36
37	Prades.	{ Ride by Olette down Vale of Tet.
38	Prades.	{ Ascend Canigou: must start early.
		{ Next day to Perpignan and Narbonne.

§ 13. PASSPORTS—CONVEYANCES—ACCOMMODATION FOR TRAVELLERS.

Passports.—Those who mean to enter Spain should obtain a Spanish Consul's visa at Bordeaux or Bayonne, to prevent their being mistaken for refugees or smugglers, though passports are not often asked for in the mountains;—they should also provide themselves with the SPANISH HANDBOOK.

Diligences run regularly from Aire to Pau and from Tarbes, which is the point of concentration for conveyances in all directions. Public conveyances do not run, except between the larger towns, before the month of July, when the season begins. A constant communication is kept up between all the watering-places. The diligences, however, are ill appointed and very slow, and the routes they follow exceedingly circuitous. They are of use to the pedestrian in conveying his luggage from place to place.

Inns. The best are at Pau, Eaux-Bonnes, Cauterets, Luchon, and Bagnères de Bigorre; many of them have the fault of filth. The traveller must not expect anything like Swiss comfort.

The charges vary much, especially for rooms, according to the season, rising exorbitantly in July and August, when the places are full. Provisions are cheap.—Bed, 1 f. 50 c. to 2 f.; dinner (table-d'hôte), 3 f.; breakfast à la fourchette, 2 f.; tea or coffee, 1 f. 50 c. On ordinary occasions the traveller's expenses ought not to exceed 8 f. per diem; and if he stop a week or longer in an hotel, he may easily bargain for 6 f. The chance-traveller is often asked 3, 4, or 5 f. for the worst bedroom for a single night during the season.

		Fr. . . . . cent.
		Fr. . . . .	cent.
Expenses at Bagnères de Bigorre.	Board and lodging at an hotel for a month or 6 weeks, per diem . . . . .	8 to 10	0 .
	Calèche and 2 horses . . . . .	16 — 18	0
	A horse . . . . .	6 — 8	0
	A room in the town . . . . .	1 f. 50 c. to 2 f.
	Bath at a fixed hour . . . . .	1	0
	Warm linen . . . . .	0	10
	Chairmen ( porteurs ), each . . . . .	0	40

Izard venison, game, ortolans, truffles, mountain-trout, green figs, and strawberries, are to be found in the Pyrenees.

The remote valleys—Val d'Aran, Val d'Aurè, and all those on the Spanish side—are miserably off for inns; travellers should always take provisions thither, or at least biscuits, cold fowls, ham, and the like.

Riding horses, or rather ponies, not bad looking, hardy, capable of work, and well used to the mountains, are kept at all the watering-places. The charges for them used to be moderate, viz. 5 f. a day including the feed, or 3 f. paying the forage, which it is not advisable to do; but they have risen of late. For any excursion not lasting beyond the day horses can be hired for the ride, as at an English watering-place, without any attendant. It is the custom of the French visitors at the baths to unite in large parties, and invade some quiet valley, or interesting point of view, in troops of cavalry 50 or 60 strong, and to establish there a picnic. Very little regard is paid by these riotous assemblages to the beauties of nature. Awakening the echoes with the loud cracks of the whip with which they urge on their jaded hacks, they scour along the rough roads, up hill and down dale, attired in the most fantastic costume—men and women wearing the red sashes of the peasantry, and broad-brimmed felt hats; while even the ladies assume neat white pantaloons, sometimes set off with boots and spurs.

Guides.—There are trustworthy professional guides, well acquainted with the mountains, and many of them capital mountaineers and skilful sportsmen; though not, perhaps, so good as the guides of Switzerland or Savoy. The best are met with at Eaux-Bonnes, Cauterets, Luz, Bagnères de Bigorre and Luchon. A guide receives 6 or 7 f. a day, feeding and lodging himself. A horse must be provided for him, unless the traveller is willing to be retarded by his following on foot. Return-money, for horse and man, until the guide can reach his home from the place where he is dismissed, is always asked. A guide is almost indispensable in Spain, to supply the deficiencies in the inns and to procure food, &c.

It should be observed that the days are much longer, and the pace both on foot and on horseback much faster, than in Switzerland. The horses are good, and trot over the mountain paths wherever they have an opportunity. No pedestrian can hope to keep up with them for the whole day. Where an hour's walk is mentioned in the following pages, it must be understood to mean good walking.

Dogs, Wolves, Bears.—In the mountains wolves and bears are numerous, and the flocks are accordingly guarded by remarkably fine but savage dogs. These dogs not unfrequently attack strangers, and the wanderer on the mountains should be armed with one of the country whips or with a pocket pistol for his protection.

Chaises à Porteur.—There is scarcely an excursion off the high-road, however distant, or a mountain-top, or other spot, however difficult of access, which ladies may not reach by the aid of a chair on poles. Each lady will require from 4 to 6 chairmen; the cost is 15 f. a day, and 3 or 4 f. pour boire. This conveyance has been pronounced by a lady traveller "at once the gentlest, safest, and most agreeable mode of conveyance imaginable. The chairmen will go anywhere and everywhere; and instead of being rocked and jolted in a dislocating machine, those who cannot walk, and fear to ride, are carried about like petted children, without the risk of fatigue or the probability of danger."—Mrs. Boddington.

A great drawback to the Pyrenees is the liability of the traveller to diarrhoea, which is variously attributed to the food, the water, the wine, and the heat. Few travellers escape an attack of this depressing malady. It generally yields to the usual remedies, but is sometimes very obstinate and continues after the mountains have been left.

ROUTE 70.

ORLEANS TO LIMOGES, RAILWAY (CHEMIN DE FER DU CENTRE).

Orleans	Kil.	Miles.
Vierzon . . . .	79	50
Châteauroux . . .	142	88
Souterraine . . .	220	137
Limoges . . . .	279	175

Railway.—Orleans to Châteauroux 1854, to Limoges 1856. It nearly follows the line of the post-road traversing, as far as Vierzon, the district of la triste Sologne, noted for its barrenness; a large part of it being waste land, heath, and common; a dead flat of hungry sandy gravel, the surface slightly varied, and the scenery monotonous. The name Sologne (Segalonia) has been derived from "segale," seigle, rye, the crop chiefly produced on its unprofitable soil. (!)

The rly. crosses the Loire by a fine bridge, touching the île Charlemagne, and then the small Loiret, passing near numerous country houses of the inhab. of Orleans. It leaves the Château de la Source (Rte. 49) and Château de la Corme on the right.

La Ferté St. Aubin Stat. At the entrance of this village, on the l., stands the Château of Lowendahl, [Francos.] named after a Danish general who served in the armies of France along with his friend Marshal Saxe, and was made Maréchal de France for his share in the capture of Bergen-op-Zoom. It now belongs to the Prince d'Esling, son of Marshal Masséna. It is a low building, surrounded by water. The name Ferté, an old form of fortifié, denotes the existence, in ancient times, of a castle, embattled and fortified by royal permission, granted to the seigneur.

The Emp. Louis Napoleon has made extensive purchases of land, in order to try experiments for the improvement of the Sologne, and by scientific agriculture to reclaim it from its proverbial state of barren desert. He is supported in these efforts by many of the landowners: Duc de Mortemart, P. de Chalais, D. de Maillé, P. d'Aremberg.

Nouan. Up to this place the country is truly desolate in appearance, the only remarkable objects being the windmills. The Château of Mont Evraz is passed, and at Salbris the Sauldre is crossed.

Theillay Stat. The railway now enters a deep cutting, followed by the tunnel of L'Allouette, 1350 yds. long, to emerge into the valley of the Cher.

After which, through a pretty country, we reach

Vierzon Junction Stat.—[The railway to Bourges, Nevers, Moulins, and Vichy (Rte. 101), here branches l. from the line to Limoges.] (Inns: Croix Blanche; H. de Bœuf; H. des Messageries.) Vierzon, a town of the Dépt. du Cher, and of the ancient province of Berry, enlivened by the Canal de Berry, which passes through it, running side by side with the river Cher. By means of it the iron of Berry, manufactured in furnaces not far distant from the town, is exported; and coal is brought hither to smelt it. Pop. 6700. At Vierzon the valley of the Cher is rather cheerful, and on its borders are some vineyards. The Evre, the canal of the Loire, and the Cher are crossed on quitting Vierzon.

We now enter the ancient province of Berri, and leave sand and marsh for rock cultivation and vines: this district has been called the Switzerland of France. Near Chery is the village and castle of Lury. At St. Lisaigne are large ironworks.

Issoudun Stat. A town of 13,215 Inhab., in the centre of an agricultural district. It retains the ruins of a Castle, built in the time of Richard Cœur-de-Lion, inhabited by Chas. VII.

Châteauroux Stat.—Inns: La Poste (Ste. Catherine); H. de France. This town, chef-lieu of the Dépt. Indre (Pop. 16,000), is of little interest to the traveller, but of considerable industrial importance, owing to its extensive cloth manufactures, the sale of which is estimated at 4 millions of francs yearly. The wools of Berry are almost exclusively used in their fabrication. Some trade is also carried on in iron, there being more than 40 iron furnaces in the department. The Castle, on an eminence above the Indre, close beside the modern Préfecture, is a gloomy building, flanked by turrets, probably of the 16th centy. It was the prison, for 23 years, of the unfortunate Clémence de Maillé, Princesse de Condé and niece of Richelieu, who here ended a life of suffering, 1694. The Grand Condé, her husband, repaid her devotion to him, and ill-requited affection, by procuring from Louis XIV. an order for her imprisonment; and his last dying request to the king was, that she should never be set free. Her grave in the ch. of St. Martin was violated 1793. The town owes its name to an older château, built in the 10th century by one Raoul de Déols. One of the old town gates, a venerable structure, still remains.

General Bertrand, who accompanied Napoleon to St. Helena, was a native of Châteauroux.

At Bourg Dieu, or Déols, situated within 1½ m. of Châteauroux, are the ruins of an ancient monastery, and a ch. containing, in a crypt under the altar, a curiously carved marble sarcophagus.

Diligences to Tours by Loches. (Rte. 56.)

A dreary country of heath is suddenly terminated by a long tunnel, on emerging from which the rly. crosses the Bousanne on a lofty viaduct.

Argenton Station, a town of 4000 Inhab., on the Creuse: it had once a large castle flanked by 10 high towers, dismantled by Louis XIV., and farther reduced to ruin in recent times. Some Roman baths were discovered here in the construction of the railway. The Creuse is crossed on a handsome bridge of 3 arches, each 60 ft. span. We now enter the province of Marche, and the mountains of the Creuse are seen in the distance.

La Souterraine Stat. Here is a mill turned by a subterraneous river; hence the name of the place. 1 kilom. beyond this is the tunnel of Serephie, 1100 yds. long.

The great Viaduct of Gartempe, one of the largest constructed in France, consists of a double tier of arches, 4 below, 8 above, each nearly 50 ft. span, of granite. The roadway is 220 yds. long. It cost one million francs.

Bersac Stat. A tunnel, 865 yards long, pierces through the granite of the central chain of the Limousin, which divides the waters running into the Loire from those which belong to the Garonne. Here is the summit-level of the line.

Ambazac Stat. The long cutting of Nouvelle is 60 ft. deep. The fine Viaduct of Le Palais, over the valley, is 150 yds. long and 44 high.

LIMOGES Stat. (Inns: Boule d'Or, dirty; H. Richelieu, not much better; H. de Perigord), the capital of the ancient province of Limousin, at present chef-lieu of the Dépt. Haute Vienne, is a commercial and manufacturing town, situated on the rt. bank of the Vienne. Pop. 41,500.

It is very picturesque in its ancient street architecture, but has few curiosities to show to the passing stranger. The Revolution swept away the greater number of its churches, many of which were curious from their antiquity. Those which remain are distinguished by peculiarities which would go to prove the existence of a local school of architecture: such is the peculiar construction of the 3 towers, a tall octagon, set anglewise on a square base, with 4 round turrets on the alternate angles. The most interesting are

The Cathedral of St. Etienne, begun in the 13th centy., and slowly continued down to the 16th, when the work came to a stand; and the building has since remained a mere fragment, consisting of the Choir, the N. transept, and two compartments of the nave, now blocked up by a common partition wall, while at the spot to which it ought to have extended rises an isolated belfry, now in a very insecure condition, separated by a wide gap from the rest of the edifice. Under this tower is a Romanesque porch belonging to an older cathedral. The ch. is built of granite, and terminates in an apse. The interior is not remarkable in itself, but contains a Jube, or roodloft, removed without reason, 1789, from its proper place between the choir and nave, to one side of the nave. It is a curious jumble of flamboyant Gothic ornaments and tracery, with sculpture in the style of the Renaissance (date 1543). It has been seriously mutilated, and its niches robbed of their statues, but contains curious bas-reliefs, among which are represented the Labours of Hercules. Its construction is attributed to Bishop Langeac, whose Tomb is remarkable for the richness and elegance of its decorations, far superior to those of the Jube. It was prepared for him before his death, 1541, and includes some admirable bas-reliefs, well worth examination in spite of their mutilations; among them one, representing "Death on the White Horse," is much praised. Two other monuments, that of Bishop Regnault de la Porte, of the 14th cent., and of Bernard Brun his nephew, deserve notice.

St. Michel-aux-Lions is the most conspicuous object in the town, owing to its tall and graceful tower and spire, planted on the highest ground, surmounting the other buildings. This ch., erected 1364, is named from the rudely sculptured figures of lions which ornament its porch; the lightness and height of the 8 lofty pillars supporting the roof are alone remarkable in the interior.

In St. Pierre is a very fine stained glass window, of the Death and Coronation of the Virgin, good in composition and arrangement of colours—perhaps the work of some local artist, an enameller of the 15th centy.

An old Cross of granite, in front of the ch. of St. Aurelian, deserves mention for the elaborate workmanship bestowed on it, which has recently been concealed under a coat of oil paint.

The Episcopal Palace is a handsome building of granite, with a fine Garden attached to it.

Although Limoges was an important place in Roman times, under the names Lemovices and Augustoritum, there are no remains of Roman buildings, but there is a milliary column, and there are several Roman tombstones in the garden of Bardy, Place d'Orsay. The only trace of the amphitheatre, to which Molière alludes in M. de Pourceaugnac, Act I., Scene 6, is the name Les Arènes given to a burial-ground. Its site is nearly covered by the Place d'Orsay, on one side of which runs a terrace, whence there is a view over the valley of the Vienne. A Latin name, "Aqua lenis," is said to be retained in the Fontaine Aigoulène, and its water is supplied through a Roman conduit.

Singular caves and excavations run under the greater part of the city.

The ancient fortifications of Limoges have been thrown down, planted, and converted into boulevards and public walks; nothing therefore remains as a relic of that terrible siege (1370) and capture by assault of the place by the Black Prince, who, irritated at its revolting from him, through the treachery of its bishop, swore by the soul of his father that he would have it back again. Too ill to ride on horseback, he directed the operations from a litter, and, having forced a breach by blowing up a tower, entered through it, and, denying quarter to its wretched inhabitants, allowed 3000 men, women, and children, to be massacred—a blot on the fair fame of his heroic career, the verge of which he had already reached, for the hand of death was upon him, and he breathed his last six years after.

Limoges is distinguished by having been the birthplace of the upright chancellor d'Aguesseau, born 1688. Vergniaud, the Republican orator, the leader of the Girondins, beheaded by Robespierre 1793, Marshal Jourdan, the conqueror at Fleurus (son of an apothecary—to whom a statue was erected 1860), Marshal Bugeaud, and Dupuytren the surgeon, were also natives. Limoges likewise produced in the 15th and 16th centy. a series of artists, among whom the names of Laudin, Noel, Leonard, Courtois, Rexmore, are conspicuous, eminent for the beautiful paintings in enamel which they produced, still so highly esteemed all over Europe. Nayllier, the last master in this genre of art, died 1765, and the art died with him. It appears to have originated as early as the 12th centy., and was brought hither by Greeks from Byzantium, but was at its acmé in the time of Francis I. The private cabinets of M. Germeau and M. Maurice Ardent, of Limoges, contain some very remarkable specimens of enamels.

The Manufacture at present most prevalent here is that of porcelain, due to the discovery, in 1768, in this neighbourhood (at St. Yrieix), of the kaolin, or pure white porcelain earth, consisting of the decomposed felspar of the granitic rocks and the pure white undecomposed felspar, or Petunsee, employed in the white transparent porcelain, which furnish fit materials for the manufacture. Sèvres is supplied hence with these substances, and nearly 2000 persons are employed in and about Limoges in making china. There are also some cotton and woollen mills.

The Limousin horses are a celebrated breed, in much request for the French cavalry; they are reared in the prairies bordering on the Vienne.

Near St. Yrieix is Chalus, at the siege of which Richard Cœur-de-Lion met his death wound (Rte. 71).

[At the town St. Junien, 18 m. from Limoges on the way to Angoulême, is a very curious ch. of the 11th centy., containing at the back of the high altar a curious sarcophagus of white marble, adorned with reliefs in the Byzantine style of art. It contains the relics of the saint, much visited by devout pilgrims. In the lower part of the town near the bridge is a chapel of the 15th centy., of Notre Dame; and 1 m. out of the town, on the borders of the Vienne, are the ruins of St. Amand. M. Mérimée observed in its transept a basin hollowed out of the rock, supplied by a spring of running water, into which little pieces of bread had been cast by the peasants, as offerings to St. Amand, who is believed still to work miracles, though his shrine has been destroyed for ages.]

7 m. S. from Limoges is the ruined Castle of Chalusset, a curious example of the art of fortification in the middle ages, situated on an isolated rock at the junction of two streams. It must have been very strong both by its natural position and its outworks. It has been referred to the 12th centy.

Railway. Limoges to Périgueux and Bordeaux (Rte. 71).

ROUTE 70A.

LIMOGES TO MONTAUBAN, BY BRIVES (CAHORS) AND CAPDENAC.

Railway direct to Brives in progress. This line branches E. out of the rly.

from Limoges to Périgueux (Rte. 71), near Nexou Stat., and it passes near St. Yrieix.

Arthur Young praises much the beauty and variety of the country to Brives, hill and valley, a quick succession of landscapes.

18 Uzerche, a picturesque little town on a conical hill, converted into a peninsula by the bend which the Vézère makes round it. It has a curious Romanesque ch. on the crest of the hill, surrounded at the E. end by 5 apsidal chapels, partly destroyed. Under it is a crypt, containing the tomb of St. Coronat, in a niche, closed in front by a wooden railing. Insane persons are shut up within it for a night, in the belief that they will thereby recover their reason!

The road to Tulle here turns off l.

[Tulle (Inn: H. de Lyon), a town of 10,748 Inhab., singularly placed in the fork of a deep narrow valley of the Corrèze, a fresh bubbling stream, which runs through it, bordered for a considerable distance with houses, many of them ancient and picturesque. The Cathedral had a slice cut from it, in Revolutionary times, to make way for a public walk. The nave only remains, of granite, in a severe and early style of Gothic.

The town has an important manufactory of fire-arms.

Diligence to Clermont by Ussel, and to Mont Dore les Bains.]

About 10 m. W. of Uzerche is the Château de Pompadour, anciently the residence of a noble family, several of whom were governors of the province of Limousin, whose name was never sullied, until, after the extinction of their line (1722), it was bestowed upon the mistress of Louis XV., the daughter of the bankrupt butcher Poisson.

25 Donzenac. Picturesque varied country; groves and forests of chestnut.

10 Brives Junct. Stat. (Inn: H. de Bordeaux, clean, comfortable, and a good cook, who makes capital pâtés) enjoys a fine situation in the valley of the Corrèze; but its favourable appearance at a distance is not realised in its interior, which contains nothing remarkable but an ancient Gothic house attributed to the English: it is said to have been the residence of the governor. Brives is birthplace of Card. Dubois, son of an apothecary, who became tutor and afterwards minister to the Regent Duke of Orleans; and of Marshal Brune, one of the generals of the Republic, assassinated at Avignon 1815. Pop. 8413.

Rail to Périgueux, 72 kil.

The culture of the vine and of maize flourishes near this.

The road has now reached a hilly country: it passes within a short distance of the castle de Noailles, cradle of the noble family who derive their ducal title from it, now in ruins; a modern château has been built not far off.

Turenne Stat. The old feudal Castle of Turenne, on the Tourmente, a tributary of the Dordogne, gave a name to another great family, illustrious by deeds as well as by descent: the Ducs de Bouillon obtained the domain and viscounty of Turenne by alliance. Within its walls the wife of the Great Condé, a fugitive with her son from the pursuit of Mazarin, was received amidst a crowd of enthusiastic partisans of the Fronde, in 1650, and sumptuously entertained for 8 days; during which, taking counsel with the Ducs de Bouillon and de La Rochefoucauld, she planned the memorable rising in the South which was called the civil war of Guienne. She here summoned her vassals and retainers to mount the fawn-coloured scarf, and to rally round her for the rescue of her husband from prison. At the order of the Duc de Bouillon the tocsin was sounded in the 400 villages of his vicomté of Turenne. and the peasants at once flew to arms and flocked round his standard.

Quatre Roules Stat.

Montvalent Stat.

Rocamadour Stat.

Assier Stat.

Figéac Stat. (Rte. 114.)

Capdenac Junct. Stat. Here a rly. branches to Rodez (Rte. 114). A town of 1600 Inhab., on a height nearly surrounded by the Lot. It is supposed to be the Roman Uxellodunum.

mentioned in the 8th Book of Cæsar's Commentaries as the last retreat of the Gauls. A gateway of Roman masonry still exists; and the fountain which Cæsar cut off from the town, in order to compel it to surrender, is pointed out. Scanty remains of mediæval fortifications; also the mansion to which Sully retired after the death of Henri IV.

Naussac Stat.

Villeneuve Stat.

Vülefranche Stat. (Rte. 114).

[The very distant outline of the Pyrenees, 150 m. off, may be distinguished in clear weather near Cahors. (Inns: H. des Ambassadeurs, not very clean, but excellent cook; Trois Rois; de l'Europe, good.) Cahors, the chef-lieu of the Dépt. le Lot (Pop. 12,050), is situated on the top and round the base of an escarped rock, on a wide sweeping bend of the river Lot. It is a very ancient town of narrow streets, full of antique edifices, to which a new quarter has been added. The name comes from its ancient appellation, Divona Cadurcorum, and there still exist the scanty remains of a Roman amphitheatre, and of a conduit, which conveyed water to it from the village St. Martin de Vern, through La Roque, where are vestiges of the arches of an aqueduct.

The Cathedral, a truly fine edifice, consists of a large nave, surmounted by two hemispherical cupolas, in the Byzantine style; a portal and the choir are Gothic. The Bishop's Palace is now the Préfecture. The bishop originally bore the title of count, and enjoyed the privilege of wearing a sword and gauntlets, which he deposited on the altar when he said mass. When he took possession of his diocese, he was received at the gate of the town by his vassal, le Vicomte de Sessac, bareheaded, without cloak, with one leg bare, and the foot in a slipper, and was conducted by the count in that guise to his palace, and waited on by him there at table. This curious tenure had fallen out of use before the Revolution.

The surprise and capture of Cahors in 1580 was one of the most brilliant exploits of Henri IV. (when King of Navarre). He reached the town by a forced march of 30 m. under a burning sun, and, posting his men in ambuscade among the walnut-trees, awaited the nightfall; when, silently approaching the gate, he blew it up with a petard, and entered himself the seventh, followed by 700 men, and leaving 700 outside to check the arrival of reinforcements to the garrison. The bursting of the gate had alarmed the town, which was strongly guarded, and a shower of stones and tiles from every housetop assailed the Navarrese troops and their general. The combat was carried on throughout the night, and yet, when dawn appeared, the assailants had gained but a very small footing. Henri was strongly advised to retire, especially when intelligence was brought of the arrival of succour to the town; but the king, setting his back against a shop, persisted in fighting on, exclaiming, "Ma retraite hors de cette ville sera celle de mon âme hors de mon corps." The reinforcements were driven back, but Henri still had to struggle step by step, to lay siege to every street, and almost to every house. It was not until the fifth night that Cahors submitted. Henri's soldiers, irritated by the resistance made by the garrison, put a great many to the sword.

On the open promenade de Fossé, in front of the college, is placed a statue of Fénelon, who was a student here. One of the bridges over the Lot, built in the 14th and 15th cents., is curious, being surmounted by 3 gate-towers, to defend the approach to the town. Cahors is the native place of Pope Jean XXII., whose name was Jacques d'Euze; his Castle is pointed out near the entrance to the town, on the side of Paris; also of Clement Marot, the poet, author of sonnets, ballads, &c. (1495), and page to Marguerite, sister of Francis I.

The country around produces a good deal of wine, which is not much known, but is not bad, and truffles in abundance.]

Montauban Junct. Stat. On the rly. from Bordeaux to Toulouse (Rte. 72).

ROUTE 71.

LIMOGES TO BORDEAUX, BY PERIGUEUX.
RAILWAY.

Limoges.	Kil.	Miles.
Perigueux . . . . .	95	59
Coutras . . . . .	80	50
Bordeaux . . . . .	130	80

The railway, opened 1861, between Limoges and Perigueux, has been made with prodigious difficulties.

Through a hilly country

Reynac Stat.

Nexon l., direct line to Brives Stat.

Lafarge Stat.

Bussiere Galand Stat.

[Chalus. This little town is only remarkable for its Castle of Chabrol, rising above it in picturesque ruins. Beneath its walls Richard Cœur de Lion received his death-wound from the arrow of a youth named Bertrand de Guerdon. The tamer of the infidel, and hero of the Crusades, thus ended a chivalrous life of nearly constant warfare, before the petty fortress of a vassal, the Viscount of Limoges, which he had besieged in consequence of a quarrel about the division of a treasure found in the viscount's domain, of which Richard claimed the whole, or a larger share than had been conceded to him. The castle was soon taken, and the garrison of only 38 men were hung by the king's order, except the bold archer who had sped the shaft so fatal to him. The youth avowed, when brought before the dying monarch, that revenge for the death of his father and two brothers, slain by Richard, had prompted him to free the country of its oppressor. His life, though magnanimously spared by Richard, was taken after his death; and he is said to have been flayed alive by order of Richard's minister. The most conspicuous part of the castle yet remaining is a circular donjon, entered by a doorway high up in the wall, and no longer accessible without a ladder. The tower is entirely gutted. Around it are grouped some shattered fragments of buildings, including a portion of a chapel. A little conical stone, rising out of the meadows in the front of the castle, in the valley below it, is pointed out as the spot where Richard had placed himself to reconnoitre the fort, when the arrow struck him in the l. shoulder. The stone is called Maumont.]

La Coquille Stat.

Thiviers Stat.

Negronde Stat.

Agonac Stat.

Château-l'Évêque Stat.

Perigueux Junct. Stat. (Inns: H. de France; good;—H. de Perigord, famed for its Pies, turkeys stuffed with truffles, &c.;—du Chêne Vert), the chef-lieu of the Dépt. Dordogne, contains 13,500 Inhab., and is situated on the rt. bank of the river l'Isle, which was canalised in 1837. The town, composed of streets narrow, tortuous, and dirty within, is fringed by green alleys externally.

Its **Cathedral of St. Front* is a very remarkable ch., the type of the ecclesiastical architecture of the neighbouring provinces of France, and undoubtedly Byzantine both in its character and origin. It consists of 5 domed compartments, the choir, nave, transepts, and crossing, each being covered by a separate stone cupola or dome. It is very worthy of note that St. Front is an exact copy, in plan and dimensions, of St. Mark's at Venice, with which it is nearly contemporary in age. At the W. end is a vestibule of earlier date, surmounted by a tower 197 ft. high, in stages, while at the E. end is an apsidal chapel of the 14th or 15th centy. The arches supporting the domes are pointed, and this is said to be the earliest instance of the use of the pointed arch in France. In 1863 St. Front was subjected to repairs amounting almost to rebuilding. The N., central, and S. domes have been removed.

St. Etienne is also a domical ch. In a chapel is a bas-relief in wood, representing the Assumption of the Virgin, of elaborate execution.

The Préfecture is a handsome modern building.

The first ancient name of this city was Vesuna, retained in the Tour de

Vesune, a circular tower of Roman construction, 100 ft. high, its walls 6 ft. thick, hooped with brick bands at intervals, without doors or windows. It is supposed to have been a tomb, and is situated in a suburb called La Cité, which contains other ancient remains of a Roman amphitheatre (very picturesque) and arch. At a later period the name Vesuna was changed to Petrocorii, mentioned by Cæsar, whence Perigueux. The Château de la Barrière is a most curious building, raised on Roman foundations, which themselves show evidence of hasty construction. Other portions date from the 10th to the 17th centy. Part is inhabited by the Comte de Beaufort, being his paternal inheritance recovered after the Revolution.

The streets of Perigueux contain some curiously ornamented houses of the 16th century: one at the corner of Rue l'Aiguillerie bearing the date 1518; 2 others in Rue Taillefer, Nos. 31 and 37; and a 4th at the end of the Rue de la Sagesse, ornamented with arabesques and carvings, merit notice. There are some buildings and vaults which are as old as the 12th and 13th centuries.

The celebrated pâtés de Perigueux, well known to all gourmands, are made of partridges combined with truffles, and form an article of considerable export.

Railways to Bordeaux and Agen, to Brives, Montauban, and Toulouse.

Rly. Perigueux to Coutras, opened 1857.

Ruzac Stat.

St. Astier Stat.

Mussidan Stat.

Beaupouyet Stat.

Montpont Stat.

St. Médard Stat.

The road descends the valley of the Ille.

The rly. from Poitiers to Bordeaux is entered near

Contras Junct. Stat. The road hence to Libourne and Bordeaux is described in Rte. 64.

[An interesting excursion may be made from Libourne up the valley of the Dordogne to St. Emilion, a deserted town of 3100 Inhab. (6 m. distant), celebrated for its wines, and one of the most remarkable in France for the antiquity of its buildings. It was one of the Bastides, or Free Towns, founded by our Edward I., and continues to this day a town of the middle ages; with its crenellated ramparts, watch-towers, and 6 gates still perfect. There is not a house in it less than 3 centuries old. It is seated in a sort of ravine or quarry, and many of the dwellings are caves hewn in the rocks. It has a ruined Castle, le Château du Roi, built by Louis VIII., surmounted by a square keep-tower, in a style resembling the Norman, most singular; in fact unique. A very singular rock-hewn church of great age. It consists of a nave (barrel-vaulted) with aisles, and piers formed of square masses of the sandstone left standing. Over it, on the top of the rock, an early Gothic steeple has been erected, and a rich portal of the 14th cent. is applied to the face of the rock. A round Gothic church, called the Rotonde; the Parish or Collegiate Church, a very fine building, limited to 3 bays of a Transition nave, attached to an early Gothic choir, and W. portal, of the 12th cent. On the S. side is a curious Cloister, and at the W. end rises a graceful tower, octagonal above, square below, commanding from its top a very fine view; the ruins of several other churches and convents; and a handsome building, the Palais du Cardinal de Cantarac. The Girondins Guadet, Pétion, and Barbaroux sought refuge for a time in the cave dwellings here, but were captured and slain here, 1794.]

[About 12 m. S.E. of this is Castillon, under whose walls was fought, in 1453, the battle in which valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury,

"The Frenchman's only scourge, Their kingdom's terror, and black Nemesis," hemmed in by a French force greatly superior to his own, was slain, at the age of nearly 80 years, gallantly fighting, along with his son, the Lord Lisle, whom his father in vain counselled to depart out of the field, seeing that all was lost,—a real incident, which has furnished Shakespeare with a fine scene. The result of Talbot's defeat and death was the capture of Bordeaux from the English, and their final expulsion from Guienne. Near Montraval, on the rt. bank of the Dordogne, a tomb was formerly pointed out under the name of Talbot's; but it is known that his body was transported by his friends to England. 3 m. from Castillon, on the l. of the road, but accessible only by rough cross-roads, is the Château of St. Michel de Montaigne, the birthplace of Montaigne, the philosopher essayist, Shakespeare's favourite author. It is a considerable building, never fortified, and remains nearly as described by him in his Essai des Trois Commerces. The room which was his library is preserved in the gate tower, over the entrance, and its roof is inscribed with Greek and Latin sentences; among them some from Ecclesiastes also—“Homo sum: humani à me nihil alienum puto.” There is a pleasing view from the terrace. The ch. is near the house.]

BORDEAUX itself will be found in Rte. 73.

ROUTE 72.

TOULOUSE TO MONTAUBAN.—RAIL.

Toulouse.	Kil.	Miles.
Montauban Stat.	51	32
Bordeaux . . .	256	160

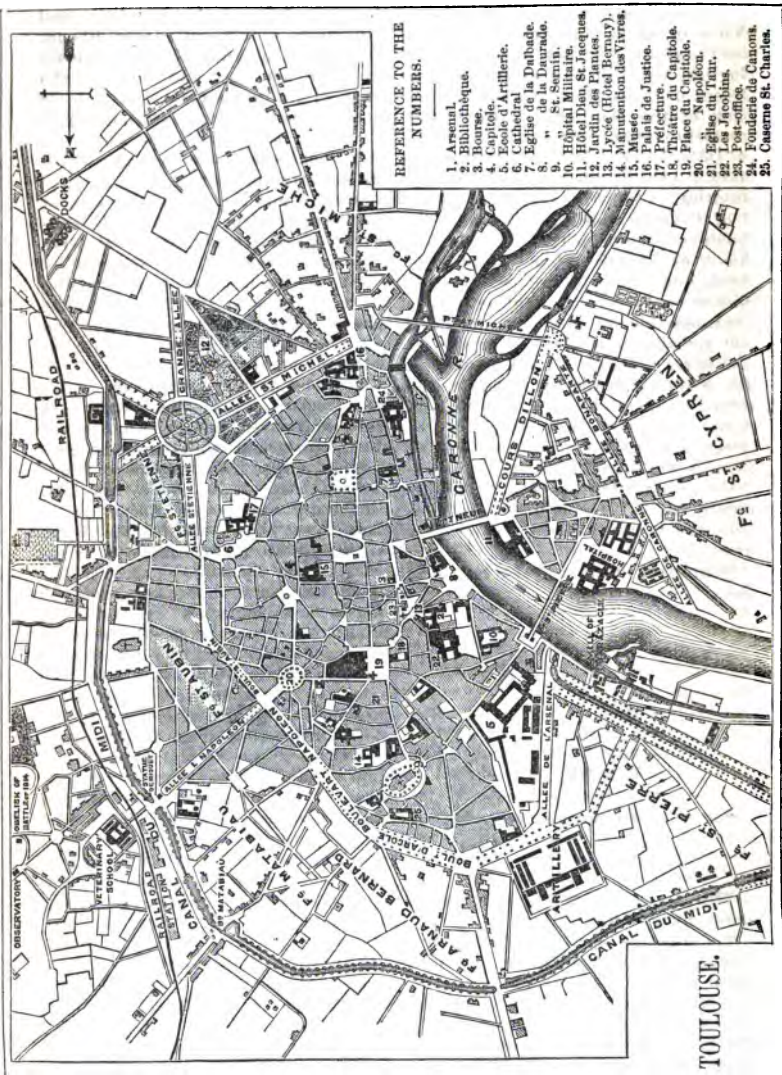

This is a part of the great rly. from Bordeaux to Cette.

TOULOUSE.—Inns: *H. Souville; a first-class hotel, excellent, and not dear, Place du Capitole. H. de l'Europe, kept by Bibent, Place Lafayette, good situation and comfortable. H. des Empereurs (Vidal), Place du Capitole. H. de France. H. du Midi (Pourquié), good, a very worthy landlord. H. Casset.

In the midst of the great plain of Gascony and Languedoc, beginning at the very foot of the Pyrenees, and stretching from them nearly 100 m. N., stands Toulouse, the ancient capital of Languedoc, and now of the Dépt. of Haute Garonne. It is built on both banks of the Garonne, just above the point where the Canal du Midi, connecting the Atlantic with the Mediterranean, falls into it, after winding round the N. and E. sides of the town. On the l. bank is the suburb St. Cyprien, containing 2 extensive Hospitals, connected with the city by 2 bridges, one of brick, still retaining the name of Pont Neuf, which might now be more properly applied to the other, a Suspension Bridge of iron wire, with horizontal stays.

Toulouse is very irregularly built; its streets winding, but many are wide, well paved, and lined with good shops, furnished with trottoirs and water supply. There is one good and straight street, Rue Louis Napoleon, connecting the square Place de la Capitole with the round Place Napoleon, whence a wide Allée, lined with trees, leads to the rly. stat. There is not much architectural beauty, and the houses and churches are built of brick; but it ranks as the seventh city in France, from the number of its inhabitants (103,144), and the extensive trade and commerce of a provincial capital which it enjoys. It is interesting from its historical souvenirs, as the capital of the kingdom of the Visigoths from 413 to 507, when it was destroyed by Clovis on the battle-field of Vouillé near Poitiers; as the place where the art of the Troubadours was encouraged at the gay court of its counts; as the scene of the papal crusade against the Albigenses, headed by an English leader, and as the seat of the ancient Parliament of Toulouse. But the Revolution has, as usual, done its worst to extirpate all tangible relics of by-gone days.

The Place du Capitole (once Place Royale), a handsome square of regular modern buildings (one of which is an exceedingly sumptuous café), is the chief market-place, and the point of departure of 9 main thoroughfares. It is named from le Capitole, or Hôtel de Ville, so called either from the tradition that in the time of the Romans the Capitol of the Tolosates may have stood here, or from the meetings of the civic chapter (capitolium), whose members were also called capitouls on this spot. The Toulousans are very proud of this building, but the interior is modern, very ugly, and not worth a visit. It presents externally a modern front, finished 1769, with eight columns of red Pyrenean marble in the centre, and includes, besides the municipal buildings and the archives, the Theatre in the l. wing. The principal apartment, running along nearly the whole length of the first floor, is the Salle des Illustres, or hall of the worthies of Toulouse, so called from 38 terra-cotta busts of men of note, born in and near Toulouse, or connected with it, each with a pompous Latin inscription below it, filling as many gilt niches in the walls. In real truth, a great many—as Riquet, engineer of the Canal du Midi, Pope Benedict XII., &c.—have no connection of birth with the town; and many more, though really citizens, have no claim to renown beyond its walls. Among those of most general celebrity may be mentioned Raymond St. Gilles, Count of Toulouse, one of the leaders of the first crusade; Cujas, the lawyer ("cujus merum nomen plus laudis ampletitur quam quælibet oratio potest"), who was rejected by the university here when a candidate for the professorship of law; and P. Fermat, the mathematician, inventor of the integral calculus, b. 1608.

In this hall are held every year the meetings of the Société des Jeux Floraux, deriving its origin from the ancient troubadours, but founded, it is said, by one Clémence Isaure, a Toulousan lady, who revived the science of the "gai Scavoir" in the 14th centy. (1333). Her very existence, however, is not a little doubtful, as there is no mention of her in the archives of the town, though her statue is preserved in the Capitole.

In spite of these doubts, the society has adopted her as its patroness and founder, and every year at the beginning (3rd) of May, after making a pilgrimage to the church of the Daurade in which her tomb once was, it distributes, to various competitors, prizes consisting of golden and silver flowers, the violette, amaranthe, eglantine, souci, and lis, for the best original compositions in verse, and essays in prose, for which the directors give the subject. The society maintains about equal importance, and the prize compositions have nearly the same literary value, as those of the bardic meetings held in Wales. Although the existence of Clémence is uncertain, there is no doubt of the antiquity of the society, and it claims for itself to be the oldest literary institution in Europe, dating from 1333. Indeed, it appears that in that year a number of Troubadours, or Mainteneurs du Gai Scavoir, citizens of Toulouse, met in a field near the town to distribute prizes to the composers of the best verses.

In the same room with the statue of Clémence Isaure is preserved the ars with which Henri Duc de Montmorency, the victim of the implacable Cardinal Richelieu, and one of the last of the great vassals of the crown of France, was decapitated. It is a sort of huge carving-knife, and was made in the town. The execution took place 1632, in the first court of the Capitole, at the feet of the statue of Henri IV., in whose reign that part of the building was erected. The old courts at the back of the building are better worth a visit. In the 2nd court on the rt., two barred windows mark the dungeon in which the duke was confined, and belong to the oldest portion of the building. Here also is the old Salle de Consistoire, with ornamented roof and chimney (? if still existing), and a staircase of very curious masonry. The council chamber of the senators of the town, or capitouls, equivalent to the échevins elsewhere, no longer exists.

The antiquity of the municipal privileges of Toulouse, and of the meetings of the magistrates, who were elected by the people themselves, and who were recognised by Raymond V. as far back as 1152, deserves notice. These rights, of 5 centuries' duration, were infringed, in spite of the remonstrances of the citizens, by Louis XIV., who caused the capitouls to be appointed at Paris by royal ordonnance.

The Place du Capitole is a good starting-place from which to visit the chief curiosities of the town. Leaving it by the Rue du Taur, we pass the

The Church of St. Taur, so named from the wild bull to whose horns the body of the martyr St. Saturnin was bound by his heathen persecutors. The struggles of the furious animal having detached it from the cords on this spot, a ch., was in consequence erected. That at present existing is remarkable for its flattened fronton belfry, surmounted by angular arches, and the numerous pictures and mottoes on the walls. Its doorway is also worth notice.

Following Rue St. Taur to its termination, we come to * L'Eglise St. Sernin (Saturnin), the largest, oldest, and most perfect ecclesiastical edifice here, is a building of brick and stone in the Romanesque style, finished and consecrated 1090, by Pope Urban II. It was tolerably well restored under Charles X., and is a very curious and impressive monument of antiquity, unlike the cathedrals on this side of the Alps. It is conspicuous for its lofty octagonal Tower, formed by 5 tiers of arches, each story less in size than that below it. The upper part is of the 14th cent., the lower corresponds in style with the church below. Of its 2 S. porches, one is distinguished by a curious early Byzantine bas-relief over the door, and by the capitals of its columns representing the murder of the Innocents, expulsion of Adam, &c.; the other, a double portal leading into the S. transept, bears carved capitals of the 7 deadly sins. By the side of it, within a modernised chapel, open to the air, are several tombs of early counts of Toulouse. The interior is remarkable for its very long Nave (not unlike that of St. Albans, but flanked by double aisles), barrel vault. It was rebuilt in the 15th centy. on the original Romanesque plan. The E. end is semicircular and its arches round; close-set columns support the vault above the high altar, painted with the colossal figure of Christ and the symbols of the 4 evangelists. From the aisle behind it project 5 apsidal chapels, decorated with curious carvings of saints and legends in wood. Here also is a model of the church as it stood before the Revolution, showing that it formed an isolated fortress, apart from the town, walled in by towers and battlements. Some curious Byzantine bas-reliefs in white marble, said to have belonged to the old church of St. Sernin, built by Charlemagne in the 8th centy. (?), are let into the wall of the aisle behind the choir; they represent our Saviour, angels, and saints. The transepts have aisles and apsidal chapels. The Crypt under the choir, modernised in the 15th centy., was the place of deposit of relics in great number and esteemed of immense value. Before the Revolution this church indeed boasted of possessing the bodies of no less than 7 of the apostles; that of St. James was, it is true, a duplicate, another of his bodies being preserved at Compostella! This motto is blazoned over the entry—"Non est in toto sanctiro orbe locus." The ancient shrines in metal-work and the carved presses (whatever the authenticity of the relics they contain) at least deserve attention. Among them is the coffin of St. Thomas Aquinas.

The wooden stalls of the choir are well carved in the style of the 16th centy.

The Church of the Cordeliers, a brick building of great loftiness, erected in the 14th centy., is now turned into a magasin de fourrage, and filled with hay; that of the Jacobins, surmounted by a conspicuous brick tower, rising in arches having straight-angled heads, is of vast size, and of brick, like the other churches. It has become a barrack, and is divided by floors, the lower story serving as a stable for artillery horses.

From the Place Napoleon, the Rue

St. Antoine, the Place St. George, and the Rue Bourbon, nearly a line, though not a straight one, lead to the Cathedral, or Eglise St. Etienne, remarkable for the irregularity and want of concord in all its parts. The large and beautiful rose window is out of the line of the centre of the main portal immediately below it; the centre of the nave is parallel with the side aisle of the choir, and its two walls do not correspond. The nave was built by Raymond VI., Comte de Toulouse, in the 13th centy., at a time when he was favouring the heretical Albigeois, and was excommunicated in consequence by the Pope. Raymond was besieged within the walls of Toulouse by Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, appointed by Innocent III. head of the crusade against the heretics. He met his death in one of the suburbs of the town, from a stone discharged by a mangonel, whilst he was endeavouring to repel a sally of the citizens, in the 9th month of the fruitless siege, on St. John Baptist's day, 1218. Count Raymond's construction is the oldest part of the church, and was doubtless intended to be removed by those who raised the very elegant Flamboyant Choir. It was begun 1272, but not roofed until 1502, by the Cardinal d'Orléans, son of the brave bastard Dunois, who built also the clocher and the singular isolated column called Pilier d'Orléans, which fronts you as you enter the nave. There is some good painted glass in the choir. The tower is singular from its form, having two broad sides and two narrow.

The plastered and stuccoed church of La Daurade derives its name from the gilt mosaics of a former church, of which no traces are now left: the monastery attached to it, on the quay, a little below the bridge, is now the Manufacture Royale de Tabac.

Leaving the Place du Capitole by the corner opposite to the Rue du Taur, we pass down the Rue de la Pomme, to the Rue des Arts, where, in the desecrated church of the Augustins, is the **Musée*, one of the most interesting provincial collections in France, the worst part of which consists of a large number of bad paintings, copies, &c., filling two rooms, one of them being the old church itself, which has been re-roofed and re-floored. The best pictures are a Perugino, St. John Evangelist and St. Austin; a Vander Meulen, Siege of Cambray; and a curious painting of the eight capitouls forming the town council of Toulouse in 1645. A good collection of casts from the antique is placed in the chapterhouse, an elegantly vaulted and groined apartment of the 14th centy., supported on light pillars. The Collection of Antiquities in this museum is the most interesting sight in Toulouse; it is placed under the admirable direction of M. du Mége, who may be considered its founder. The locale which it partly occupies is the elegant Gothic Cloister of the old church, the tracered arches of which are supported on pillars of marble in pairs, producing an effect not unlike the Campo Santo at Pisa.

In addition to a small series of Egyptian sculptures, and a few Greek bas-reliefs (Clarac cabinet) there are numerous inscriptions, Roman and Gallic, votive altars, &c., with fragments of statues and of marbles, from various places in Languedoc and the Pyrenees, showing that the quarries of the Pyrenees were worked by the Romans. The most remarkable part of the collection, however, is the three following series, forming an almost uninterrupted chain in the history of art, from the Gallo-Roman period to the Renaissance or cinque-cento through the Gothic period.

1st. A very large collection of antiquities dug up near the small town of Martres, on the l. bank of the Garonne, a little below St. Gaudens, and proved by M. du Mége to be the ancient Calagorris. In consequence of the excavations undertaken at his suggestion, it has become a Gallic Pompeii. The discoveries consist of a series of about 40 busts and medallions of Roman emperors, and of members of their families, from Augustus and Claudius down to Gallienus, forming a tolerably complete portrait gallery ; of a number of small statues of gods and goddesses, of good execution, especially in the drapery, including Isis, Venus, Diana, Jupiter, Serapis, Esculapins, Harpocrates ; a series of bas-reliefs, much mutilated, representing the Labours of Hercules ; a mosaic of the head of a river god ; a number of Corinthian capitals, friezes, and other architectural ornaments. Among the bronzes are a pair of wheels and the pole of a Roman chariot, very rare and interesting objects, dug up at Fa, near the Bains de Rennes. Two bas-reliefs, with inscriptions relating to the two Emperors Tetricus, have given rise to much discussion among antiquaries. They were found at Nérac.

2nd. A collection of works of art of the middle ages, consisting of bas-reliefs, statues, monuments, portals, and a long series of curiously carved capitals of columns obtained from ecclesiastic edifices and Christian monuments destroyed or desecrated at or since the Revolution, beginning with early Christian tombs, sarcophagi, and coffins, covered with sculpture rude and debased in point of art, but showing Roman influence, bearing Christian symbols combined with heathen subjects, the cross, X, P, the vine-branch, &c. One of these, brought from the outer wall of the church of La Daurade, where it went by the name of Tombeau de la Reine Pedauque (pes aucae, queen goose-leg), bears six bas-reliefs of the multiplication of loaves and fishes, the raising of Lazarus, and other Scriptural events, which were adopted as types symbolical of the goodness of God, and of the resurrection, by the early Christians. Another sarcophagus from St. Orens, at Auch, displays, with similar symbolical allusion, the sacrifice of Isaac, and Lazarus deplored by Martha, with Adam and Eve. Others of these tombs come from the very ancient cemetery of St. Saturnin in Toulouse. Several bas-reliefs which ornamented a portal of that church are preserved here ; one represents 2 females seated, their legs crossed ; one holds a ram, the other a lion : the names of these two signs of the zodiac being written at the side, and below one of them, "Hoc factum est in tempore Julii Caesaris." They are supposed to have formed part of a Zodiac, or Julian Calendar, attached to that church. It is not improbable that they were executed in the time of Charlemagne. From St. Sernin also comes a carving of a hawk, with a human head, treading under foot a monster, inscribed "Crocodilus :" the allegory seems derived from Egypt. A pedestal in white marble, bearing 4 figures in relief, 2 of them saints with palms (St. Justus and Rusticus), the Virgin, and a crowned king, supposed to be Charlemagne, holding a lotus-headed (!) sceptre, and wearing a cross on his breast, was brought from the Cathedral of Narbonne, of which he was the founder. The curious Portal of the old Church of La Daurade, pulled down in 1812 when the monastery attached to it was converted into a tobacco manufactory, has been re-erected here, as nearly as possible in its original condition. Its circular arch is supported by statues, instead of pillars : attached to it are 4 figures in bas-relief,—David playing on the Harp, and the Virgin and our Saviour, with a king and queen, founders or benefactors of the church.

In like manner, the Portal of the Cathedral Chapterhouse at Toulouse, decorated with figures of the Apostles in bas-relief, has been removed hither.

Here are numerous statues, partly coloured and gilt, of Christ, the Virgin, Apostles, and Saints. A series of more than 60 capitals of columns, almost all differing in form and decoration, the greater part ornamented with subjects minutely carved from the Bible or Legends of Saints. The casts of sculptures from the church of St. Victor at Marseille, and from that of Moissac, merit attention, as well as many monumental effigies of noble knights and high-born dames, and holy ecclesiastics, mitred abbots, bishops, and several archbishops of Toulouse, here deposited.

The museum also boasts of possessing the ivory horn of the renowned Roland, richly carved—formerly preserved in the treasury of the church of S. Sernin.

A third division of the museum contains Monuments of the Renaissance, including casts from a portion of the carved wood screen-work in the Cathedral of Auch, and church of St. Bertrand de Comminges. A Pietà, in white marble, from the Eglise des Carmes at Carcassonne, several fragments of statues, bas-reliefs, &c., by Bachelier, a sculptor of Toulouse, and pupil of Michael Angelo, 1485-1567. A relief, in white marble, of boys dancing, by Pierre Paul Puget, is very clever.

There are numerous specimens in the streets of the grand but exaggerated architecture of the Renaissance; one, perhaps the best, is attributed to Primaticcio's design, and is situated near the bridge over the Garonne.

If the stranger will continue past the bridge, up the street, on the rt. bank of the Garonne, called Rue du Couteliers, he may view the Hôtel St. Jean, of Italian architecture, that called Hôtel Daguin, or more commonly Maison de Pierre, a gaudy specimen of the style of the Renaissance, and nearly opposite an ornamental portal, in much better taste, designed by Bachelier, already mentioned.

Still farther on is a large brass cannon foundry, occupying the ancient nunnery of Sainte Claire; and a little beyond it Le Couvent de l'Inquisition, an obscure edifice retaining its old ill-omened name, but now belonging to the Jesuits engaged in education. It is memorable for crimes which stain the annals of Toulouse. Here alone, in France, was that accursed tribunal allowed to take root. Here, as in Spain, it brought with it its usual train of tyrannous atrocities, torturing, imprisoning, roasting at the stake the living, tearing up the dead from their graves, or refusing Christian burial to persons deceased. It was first established here, in the time of Count Raymond VII. (1221), by the ecclesiastical council assembled to exterminate the heresy of the Albigenses, which, at the beginning of the 13th centy., had overspread the entire S. of France, under the connivance or encouragement of Raymond VI., of Toulouse, one of the wealthiest and most powerful princes of his time. St. Dominic himself, the founder of the Inquisition, visited Toulouse to water the thriving offset from his own terrible foundation; the cell which he occupied was shown until 1772.

The Place de Salin was the scene upon which the French Autos da Fé were enacted.

The house No. 50, Rue des Filatiers, was in 1762 occupied by a respectable Protestant family, named Calas. The father, Jean Calas, carried on the trade of a draper, and prospered, in good repute with his neighbours, and in contentment at home. The only exception to his domestic happiness was the conversion, by a priest named Durand, of his third son, Jean Louis, to the Roman Catholic faith. The youth had, in consequence, been sent from home, receiving a small allowance from his father.

On the night of the 13th-14th October, 1761, cries were heard issuing from the house of Calas, and the chief of police, with an escort of soldiers, on entering it, found near the door the dead body of the eldest son of Calas, Marc Antoine by name.

A procès verbal was prepared, declaring that he died, hung by himself; which there can be no doubt is the truth, for he was of a melancholy temperament; but a malicious cry was raised in the crowd by a voice unknown, that he had been strangled by his father, to prevent his abjuring Calvinism as his brother had done, and the report spread, and was partly believed by the fanatic Toulousans. The elder Calas was in consequence accused of the murder of his own son, before the Parliament of Toulouse; and that ancient and venerable assembly, without listening to one-tenth of the evidence which had been prepared, and without any proof of his guilt, sullied its reputation for justice by condemning him, at the age of 63, to be tortured and broken on the wheel, and his remains burnt and scattered to the wind.

The act of condemnation, in virtue of which this atrocious judicial murder was committed, runs as follows:—"La Cour le condamne à être livré aux mains de l'exécuteur de la haute justice, qui, tête, pieds nus, et en chemise, la hart au col, le montera sur le chariot à ce destiné, et le conduira devant la porte principale de l'Eglise de Toulouse; où, étant à genoux, tenant entre ses mains une torche de cire jaune allumée, du poids de deux livres, il fera amende honorable, et demandera pardon à Dieu, au Roi, et à la justice, de ses crimes et méfaits; ce fait, le remontera sur le chariot, et le conduira à la Place St. George de cette ville, où, sur un échafaud, qui y sera à cet effet dressé, il lui rompra et brisera les bras, jambes, cuisses, et reins; ensuite l'exposera sur une roue qui sera dressée tout auprès du dit échafaud, la face tournée vers le ciel, pour y vivre en peine et repentance de ses dits méfaits, servir d'exemple, et donner de la terreur aux méchants, tout autant qu'il plaise à Dieu de lui donner la vie; et son corps sera jeté dans un bucher préparé à cet effet sur la dite Place, pour y être consumé par les flammes, et ensuite (ses cendres) jetées au vent. Préalablement le dit Calas sera appliqué à la question ordinaire et extraordinaire, sera le dit Calas père étranglé, après avoir resté deux heures sur la roue. Jugé le 9 Mai, 1762.—Cassan, Clairac, rapporteurs." He bore the torture inflicted on him in the Hôtel de Ville with the greatest firmness, answering all questions with the utmost clearness, and giving no advantage to his interrogators, but persisting in maintaining his innocence. On the scaffold, after suffering with the most patient resignation the agonies of his punishment for 2 whole hours, during which he was subjected to the mental rackings of a Romish priest, being still fully alive, the signal was given to the executioner to inflict the "coup de grâce."

"De faux témoins ont égarés mes juges," exclaimed he, before breathing his last breath; "je meurs innocent: Jésus Christ, qui était l'innocence même, voulut mourir par une supplice plus cruel encore." The very Dominicans who attended Calas exclaimed as he expired, "Il est mort un juste!" With his murder an end was put to the martyrdoms and cruel persecutions of the Protestants which had disgraced the South of France for almost a century, and chiefly owing to the praiseworthy exertions of Voltaire in defending Jean Calas and exposing his persecutors. His sentence was reversed and his innocence proclaimed by the Conseil Royal at Paris.

Though it is difficult to conceive anything more clearly established than the innocence of Calas, of late years it has become the fashion amongst the ultra Catholics in France to maintain his guilt.

The Palais de Justice, totally modernised externally, and for the most part a new building, was the seat of the Parliament of Toulouse, where its sittings were held. The fine ceilings ornamenting its interior have been retained in two apartments: one, carved with reliefs in compartments, representing the Labours of Hercules, is by no means contemptible; the other is richly gilt.

At a short distance below the bridge the navigation of the Garonne is interrupted by a weir thrown across it to supply water to the large corn-mill of the town, called le Basacle, rebuilt 1814.

Between this mill and the church of La Daurade is the mouth of the Canal de Brienne, constructed by the archbishop whose name it bears, to remedy the interruption in the navigation caused by the mill-weir. It runs nearly parallel with the Garonne for about  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile below the Basacle, and then falls into the Canal du Midi. A fine avenue of trees leads to this junction. Here the 2 canals are crossed by small bridges, between which, on a level with the water, is stuck a large piece of sculpture, in high relief, of white marble, representing some unmeaning allegory, without allusion to the founder of the great work, Riquet, and contemptible in execution.

A few hundred yards below this, the Canal du Midi (Rte. 93), after sweeping round the E. and N. sides of the city of Toulouse, enters the Garonne through a basin provided with double locks, and guarded against ice by a sort of pier. The Garonne is at this point 144 mètres, or 473 feet, above the level of the Atlantic. The navigation of the Garonne, though carried on by barges, is very difficult, owing to rocks and stems of trees in its bed, from Toulouse to the junction of the Tarn; and a magnificent canal, in continuation of the Canal du Midi, runs parallel to the Garonne to Agen (Rte. 73).

At the battle of Toulouse the inner bank of the canal, towards the town, was lined with French troops, and every bridge over it strongly defended by têtes de pont and intrenchments. In an attack made by the British Light Division upon the bridge nearest the embouchure of the canal, designed by Wellington merely as a feint, but converted by Picton, in disobedience to orders, into a hopeless assault, the British were repulsed with a loss of 400 men.

A monument has been erected, in the grounds of the Château Gragnague, on the N. side of the canal, to a British officer of great merit, Colonel Forbes, of the 45th regiment. Several other English monumental tablets are also placed in the Protestant Church of Toulouse.

The best point of view for surveying the field of the Battle of Toulouse (April 10, 1814), as well as for viewing the town, is the Obelisk of brick, erected by the city, "Aux Braves morts pour la Patrie," occupying the site of one of Marshal Soult's redoubts, taken by the English, on the height of Calvinet. It is reached by traversing the fine oval place, and the broad Avenue, Allée L. Napoleon, once Lafayette (originally d'Angoulême), crossing the canal at the flying bridge, or Pont Matabiau, and ascending at the back of the Ecole Vétérinaire. The view owes its chief interest to the distant chain of the Pyrenees, occupying the horizon, whose peaks may be discerned, in fine weather, from the Canigou on the E. to the Pic du Midi de Bigorre on the W., with the Maladetta, Crabioules, and Mt. Perdu in the centre. The city itself is not striking; the country around is very flat and monotonous, and the Garonne runs in too deep a bed to form a feature in the landscape.

Marshal Soult's position was along the heights called La Colonne (by Napier Mont Rave), composed of two plateaus, Calvinet (on which stands the obelisk) and Sympierre, both of which had been fortified, several weeks beforehand, with 5 redoubts, and entrenchments between them, mounted with a great many guns. The action was rather the storming of an entrenched citadel than a battle. The hill of Colonne is a natural citadel and the bulwark of Toulouse, entirely insulated except at its S. extremity. The position was supported by the canal, and by the ramparts by which the town was then surrounded in the rear of the canal; and in front the position was covered by the Ers. That stream was at the time unfordable, and all the bridges over it were blown up, or strongly guarded, except that of Croix Daurade, taken by the British Hussars the day before the battle. General Beresford's division, which achieved the victory, had to make a flank movement, marching for 2 m. up the rt. bank of the Ers, under the fire from the heights, over ground naturally very difficult, marshy, and intersected by watercourses and deep sunk road, but rendered almost impassable by artificial inundations. After passing Calvinet, the British troops formed, and, charging up the height, took first the redoubt on Sympierre, and afterwards those on Calvinet. Here, however, a terrible struggle took place: the British "clinging to the brow of the hill," in spite of the masses opposed to them, stood fast on the ground they had gained; and though the French made desperate efforts from the canal, they never retook Calvinet. A previous attack on Calvinet, made in the early part of the day by the Spaniards, had been very different in its result; so quickly, indeed, did they retire, that the Duke of Wellington said of them,

"he never before saw 10,000 men running a race;" 1500 of them were slaughtered on the slope of this hill, chiefly in a hollow road upon its flank, raked by a battery from the Pont de Matabiau on the canal, which "sent its bullets from flank to flank, hissing through the quivering mass of flesh and bones," to use the words of Colonel Napier. No traces of the entrenchments remain.

At 5 o'clock P.M. Soult withdrew his whole army behind the canal. The next day he remained inactive, and on the night of the 11th was "forced to abandon" Toulouse, leaving behind 1600 wounded and 3 generals, to fall prisoners into the hands of the allies. They lost in this battle 4659 men and 4 generals; the French nearly 3000, and 5 generals killed or wounded; a useless waste of human life, since Napoleon had abdicated on the 4th April, some days previously, though that event was unknown to either of the commanders. There can be no doubt that the charge brought against Marshal Soult of fighting this battle though aware of what had happened at Paris is unfounded, and the Duke of Wellington himself has nobly vindicated him from it. The forces of the allies amounted to 52,000 men; but of these only 24,000, and 52 guns, were actually engaged in the battle; the French had 38,000 men, with from 80 to 90 guns. This is the estimate drawn out with the utmost fairness by Colonel Napier.

The country immediately about Toulouse is generally flat and uninteresting, and, being besides arid, and burnt up in summer, the want of shade and verdure, and the excessive dust, offer no inducements to explore. Its fertility, however, is very conspicuous.

The principal Cafés are in the Place du Capitole. The market held here is very abundantly supplied: fruit, vegetables, poultry, and wine are very cheap; butter and milk dear; ortolans, truffles, figs, pâtés de fôies de canards, are the delicacies which await the gourmand here.

Diligences—daily, to Tarbes, Pau, and Bayonne; to Auch and Bigorre; to St. Gaudens and Luchon; to Foix, Ussat, and Ax; to Villefranche (Aveyron); to Perpignan by Limoux; to Alby.

Railways to Bordeaux; to Cette and Marseilles; to Perpignan. The Railway Station is close to the canal, at the extremity of the Allée L. Napoléon, not far from the Observatory, and not far from the Obelisk on the battlefield.

The first part of the road from Toulouse is a dreary continuation of the plain of Languedoc. The rly. runs near the Garonne and near the magnificent Canal de la Garonne, which is a continuation of the Canal du Midi, and was made necessary by the difficulties of the Garonne. It is however rather singular that this canal should have been constructed within the last few years and almost simultaneously with the rly. which will supersede it.

Grisolles. The Garonne runs parallel with our road, at a little distance on the rt., through a plain of unequalled fertility. The British army, under the Duke of Wellington, passed the river, before the battle of Toulouse, by 2 pontoon bridges above the small town of Grenade on the l. bank nearly opposite Castelnaud, 15 m. below Toulouse. The capture of the bridge over it at Croix Daurade, by a gallant charge of the 18th hussars, on the day before the battle, secured a communication between the columns of the allied army, part of which marched up the rt. and part up the l. bank of the Lers, to attack the strong position of Marshal Soult.

Montauban Junction Station—Buffet (Inns: Hôtel de France; de l'Europe; clean and comfortable)—chef-lieu of the Dépt. de Tarn-et-Garonne, is a town of 25,000 Inhab., with clean and wide streets, on the rt. bank of the Tarn, here lined by a fine quay, and crossed by a brick bridge of the 13th cent., but modernized, at the end of which stands the Préfecture, a square building with 4 turrets at its angles. There is not much to be seen in the town. The Cathedral is a large modern building of Italian architecture, with a frontispiece at the W. end. In it and in the ch. of the suburb of Tapiac are 2 paintings by Ingres, who was born here.

"The Promenade of Les Terrasses on the borders of the Trescon, and on the highest part of the ramparts, commands that noble plain, one of the richest in Europe, which extends on one side to the sea, and in front to the Pyrenees, whose towering masses, heaped one upon another in a stupendous manner, and covered with snow, offer a variety of lights and shades from their indented forms and the immensity of their projections. This prospect has a sort of oceanic vastness, in which the eye loses itself; an almost boundless scene of cultivation; an animated but confused mass of infinitely varied parts, melting gradually into the distant obscure, from which arises the amazing frame of the Pyrenees, rearing their silvered heads far above the clouds."—A. Young.

Montauban is a flourishing manufacturing town, producing various kinds of woollen cloths, hair stuffs (cadis, molletons), which are exported to the colonies. It has 24,660 Inhab., nearly one-half of them being Protestants, and there is a Protestant College here for the instruction of pastors.

In the 16th and 17th cents. Montauban was a stronghold of Protestantism, its inhabitants having early embraced the Reformed doctrines, and being prepared to defend them. It endured in consequence a very memorable siege in 1621, from the royal army led on by the favourite Luynes, who brought hither his master Louis XIII.; but, instead of witnessing its fall, after nearly 3 months of fruitless assault, Louis and his minister were forced to withdraw, such was the obstinate bravery of the inhabitants and the skill of their governors. Under the reign of Louis XIV., and the influence of Madame de Maintenon, the Protestants of Montauban were singled out to suffer the direst persecutions, inflicted by the so-called Dragonnades, or quartering of regiments of soldiers on them, who exercised every species of licence, inquisitorial tyranny, and cruelty, with the design of forcing them to become Roman Catholics.

ROUTE 73.

MONTAUBAN TO BORDEAUX (RAILWAY).

Montauban.	Kil.	Miles.
Moissac . . . . .	29	18
Valence d'Agen . . . . .	44	27
Agen . . . . .	70	43
Tonneins . . . . .	110	68
Langon . . . . .	164	103
Bordeaux . . . . .	205	128

Railway open 1855 to Valence d'Agen —to Toulouse 1856.

See Rte. 72 as far as

Montauban Junct. Stat. The country is still admirably cultivated, but hideous and dreary—the abomination of cultivation.

Castel Sarrazin Stat., a town of 7000 Inhab., carrying on some trade in the corn grown on the fertile plain around. Opinions differ as to the origin of the name; some deriving it from the Saracens, who may have built the castle, of which scanty remains exist, to secure themselves in this part of France; others, from Castel-sur-Azin, the name of the small stream running through it. It has a curious ch. of Transition date, with a massive W. octagon.

The river Tarn is crossed by a tubular bridge close to an aqueduct on which the canal is carried.

Moissac Stat. (Inn: Grand Soleil), a town of 10,295 Inhab., on the rt. bank of the Tarn.

Its Ch. of St. Pierre and St. Paul, once attached to a celebrated abbey founded by Clovis, or more probably by St. Amand of Maestricht in the 7th centy., has a very remarkable portal, which was added in the early part of the 12th centy. to the still older church. It is a deeply recessed porch, preceding a pointed arch, the mouldings and tympanum of which, over the door, are enriched with the most fantastic sculptures, designed with the utmost boldness and fancy. Figures of apostles, saints, angels, bas-reliefs, fanciful patterns and mouldings, have been dashed off with wonderful freedom. The central pier, supporting the doorway, and the side walls, under the porch, are similarly adorned. In the interior are some very early mosaics.

The cloisters, a range of pointed arches, resting on twin pillars with singular capitals, were constructed in 1110, as is recorded on one of the pillars.

An ancient fountain in the town merits notice.

Malause Stat., a prettily situated town, whose ancient castle has been destroyed since the first Revolution. The flat land ceases here, and the country around is more pleasing: the Garonne, which the road now approaches more closely, is a charming feature in the landscape.

Valence d'Agen Stat. The Rly. at this little town runs partly along a sort of terrace or quay by the side of the Garonne.

Agen Junct. Stat.—Inns: H. du Petit St. Jean, comfortable; good cuisine, famed for its Terrines de Nérac and pâtés aux truffes; pretty garden;—H. de France, good and cheap.

Agen, chef-lieu of the Dépt. de Lot-et-Garonne, is a very old town, chiefly of narrow streets, with 15,000 Inhab., agreeably situated on the rt. bank of the Garonne, between it and the gently sloping height, covered with trees, vineyards, and country-houses, called Côte de l'Ermitage. The Garonne is here crossed by a bridge of stone, and also by a Suspension-bridge, between which and the town runs a beautiful avenue of trees, forming an agreeable promenade called Les Graviers. The old Ch. of St. Caprais is a fine Romanesque building, very broad, with numerous apses, and has been well restored. There are a few scanty remains of the cathedral of St. Etienne, destroyed at the Revolution, and its site is now become a beast-market.

The Prefecture was originally the episcopal palace, and is a handsome edifice.

The Canal is carried over the Garonne here, on a 3rd Bridge or ponderous stone Aqueduct of 23 arches, of good architecture.

The town was known to the Romans under the name Aginum. The early Christians suffered severe persecution here from the Roman prætor; and St. Vincent, the 2nd bishop, and many followers, underwent martyrdom, being torn to pieces on the spot now occupied by the Fontaine St. Vincent. Agen suffered much from the fortunes of war, especially in the 14th century, when, by sieges and assaults, it passed repeatedly from the hands of the French to the English, and vice versa. During the wars of the League it was taken by the Maréchal de Matignon, with the aid of an engineer, who blew in one of the gates with a petard, 1591. Marguerite de Valois, who was in the town at the time, had great difficulty in securing a horse, with a pillion, for herself to escape, and post-horses for a portion of her maids of honour, many of whom were compelled to decamp "on foot without masks, others without riding-habits."

Those who have time should walk to the top of the rocky height of L'Ermitage, on the way to Villeneuve, for the sake of the view over the beautiful valley of the Garonne and the distant Pyrenees. In a pretty gorge or recess in the slope of the hill is the curious house of the erudite Julius Scaliger, whither he retired, in the reign of Francis I., after migrating from his native city, Verona. He died here 1558, and here his no less learned son, Joseph Julius Scaliger, was born. Agen is also the birthplace of Bernard Palissy, inventor of a beautiful species of earthenware, the Wedgwood of the 16th century, and not less scientific for his age; also of Lacépède, the naturalist. Here was born, and still dwells and sings, a rustic poet named Jasmin, a perruquier by trade, the last representative of the Troubadours. His songs are very popular throughout the S. of France, in the country of the Langue d'Oc.

A great number of plum orchards clothe the neighbouring slopes and fields, and produce the celebrated prunes d'Agen, which form an article of considerable export.

The country between this place and Tonneins is much prettier than the previous part. It is also exceedingly fertile, and round the fields are seen the apricot, plum, greengage, and cherry trees which supply all Europe with preserved fruit. The fruit is dried in stoves on the spot.

Steamers (!) navigate the Garonne as far up as Agen, when the river is of proper height: the descent hence to Bordeaux requires 8 hours, the ascent 11 or 12.

Railways to Montauban and Toulouse; to Périgueux and Limoges; to Pau by Tarbes and Auch.

Near the village of St. Côme, on the rt. of the road, the remains of a tower, called Tour de St. Côme, constructed of small square stones, and supposed to be of Roman origin, are worthy of notice. It stands at a short distance from

Aiguillon Stat., a town of nearly 2000 Inhab., on the l. bank of the Lot, about a mile above its influx into the Garonne. Its principal building is the large château on an eminence, left unfinished by the Duc d'Aiguillon, minister of Louis XV. by favour of Mad. du Barry. But it is said to include portions of older construction. The duchy was created by Henri IV. 1599, to bestow it upon the Duc de Mayenne. The old castle, so stoutly defended by the English in 1346, when besieged for 5 months by Jean Duc de Normandie, son of Philippe de Valois, with an army of 60,000 men, no longer exists. Although the prince directed against it 20 assaults in 7 days, and though he had sworn not to move until it was taken, he was compelled to retire from before its walls without having succeeded, being called off by intelligence of his father's defeat at Crecy.

Tonneins Stat. (Inn: H. d'Angleterre), a cheerful-looking town, chiefly of modern buildings, remarkable for the beauty of its situation, on the rt. bank of the Garonne, containing 6500 Inhab., half of whom are Protestants. The population of this part of the country, particularly in the villages, is principally Protestant. There are extensive manufactures of rope here, and a royal manufactory of tobacco, large quantities of which are cultivated around Tonneins, and throughout the Depts. Lot and Lot et Garonne, under the inspection of the excise. There is a suspension-bridge over the Garonne here.

Marmande Stat. (Inns: H. de France; —H. de la Providence;—a town of venerable aspect, many of its houses being timber-framed, but possessing no objects of interest to the traveller. Pop. 8257.

The railroad avoids the windings made by the river below Marmande, being carried in nearly a straight line.

The lofty old ruined tower of Meilhau remains long in sight of those who travel by water, owing to its position at the extremity of an acute angle or elbow made by the river.

A fine suspension-bridge of a single curve, 558 ft. wide in the opening, spans the river at

La Réole Stat., a town of 4200 Inhab., retaining the ruins of an ancient castle, which Froissart says was built by the Saracens. The vast Benedictine convent, rebuilt in the 17th century and suppressed at the Revolution, has been converted into a nunnery. The Gothic church attached to it has been allowed to go to decay.

The ancient town of St. Macaire, retaining its feudal walls and possessing a fine Romanesque church, is passed shortly before reaching the bridge, 656 ft. long, which carries the road over the Garonne into

Langon Stat. (Inns: H. de France; Poste), a miserable town of 3745 Inhab., partly surrounded by old walls, on the l. bank of the Garonne, which could be crossed only by a ferry-boat down to 1831, though Langon lies on the great line of traffic between Bordeaux and Toulouse.

The tide runs up as far as this.

[About 10 m. S. of Langon is Bazas, an ancient town of 4300 Inhab., which existed in the time of the Romans, and is mentioned under the name Vesates by Ausonius, whose father was born here. It has a Gothic Church, once a cathedral, without transepts. The sculpture on the 3 portals of its façade is much defaced. Bazas retains on its outskirts fragments of the old town walls.]

The banks of the river are here clothed with vineyards, whose produce, chiefly white wines, enjoys some reputation and fetches a considerable price, being known by the name of Vins de Grave. Sauterne and Barsac are both grown in the commune of Preignac Stat., not far from Langon. Bertrand de Gout, who became pope under the name of Clement V., was born in the very picturesque castle of Villandraut, about 8 m. S. of Preignac, and is buried at Ureste.

Barsac Stat., whence comes the white wine named after it, is a town of 2896 Inhab.

Cardillac was the seat of the Duc d'Épernon, governor of the province of Guienne in the 17th century; the first duke, who was the favourite of Henri III., but died in the prison of Loches, built the Château (1598), which is now converted into a female Penitentiary. His splendid monument, attributed to Girardon, erected by his son in the parish church, was destroyed at the Revolution, except one statue now in the Louvre. There is a great manufacture of wine-casks here.

Cérons Stat., an old castle.

Podensac Stat., 15 m. from Bordeaux.

At Langoiron, at the foot of the slope, are ruins of a castle built apparently in the 14th century: near this l'Ami des Enfants, Berquin, was born.

Portets Stat. is the place where the inhabitants of the Landes embark their rosin and timber, the produce of that sandy district, which stretches S. from the Garonne near this to the Adour.

About half-way between Langon and Bordeaux is

The Château de la Brède, the birth-place and family seat of Montesquieu. It is a low many-sided castle, probably of the 15th cent., surmounted by a circular donjon entirely surrounded by the waters of the Guémort, which forms a broad fosse around it, and served anciently to defend it from foes, since it can only be entered by three bridges (once drawbridges). It is far from imposing, either without or within; but retains its primitive condition nearly unaltered, together with some old portraits of the family Secondat, and, above all, the chamber of Montesquieu, with his simple bed, arm-chair, &c., nearly as he left it. The wainscoting on one side of the fireplace is rubbed by the motion of his foot resting against it, a habit attributed to him when seated in his easy chair, lost in thought, meditating on his works. It was here that he composed his work 'Sur la Grandeur et la Décadence des Romains,' while it is reported that the dark feudal cachot beneath the castle, which is entered by a stair from his room, was his resort while he was preparing his reflections 'On the Liberty of the Subject.'

The country now becomes open and healthy, and is in fact the border of the Landes. Near Bordeaux a succession of vineyards and country houses are passed. Here, however, the vines are trained on sticks, and not along the ground, and produce a wine black as ink, and very strong, from which brandy is distilled.

The Rly. Stat. at Bordeaux for the Southern Rly. is a long way from the hotels and the centre of the town.

BORDEAUX.—Inns: H. de France, Rue l'Esprit des Lois, first-rate, but dear;—*H. de Nantes, on the Quai Louis XVIII.;—H. du Midi, good;—H. de Paris, frequented by English, good, but very dear;—H. de la Paix, very fair; good cuisine;—H. de Richelieu, good situation; no table-d'hôte;—H. des Américains, commercial, good table-d'hôte.

Bordeaux, the second seaport-town of France, chef-lieu of the Dépt. Gi-ronde, containing 149,928 Inhab., is placed on the l. bank of the Garonne, on a spot where its voluminous stream, deep enough for vessels of 1200 tons burthen, makes a very regular curve, which, being lined with handsome buildings of varied architecture, chiefly Italian, forms a noble crescent, lined with quays not less than 3 m. long, surmounted by several Gothic towers and antique spires in the background. No city in Europe can display a more splendid quay than this. The river abreast of the town, 2000 ft. wide, and 18 to 30 ft. deep, is filled with shipping up to the magnificent Bridge, the handsomest in France. (See Rte. 64.) This noble exterior, equally striking to the stranger whether he approaches by water or by land from the side of Paris, is borne out by the aspect of a large part of its interior, which has a courtly rather than a commercial air. The Rues du Chapeau Rouge and de l'Intendance, running E. and W. through the heart of the town, nearly separate the old town, of narrow and insignificant though very populous streets, from the N. or more modern quarter, consisting of wide openings, broad streets, extensive places, and avenues, and gardens running into one another, which render Bordeaux a sprawling city, difficult to get over on foot, but omnibuses and neat fiacres are fortunately very abundant, though the fiacres are very dear.

The Place and Allées de Tournay are so named from an ancient intendant of the province, who in 1750 led the way in improving the city.

Some of the finest streets and rows of houses, and the open Place des Quinconces terminating at the river side with 2 lofty rostral columns, occupy the site of a citadel called Château Trompette, built by Vauban for Louis XIV. to overawe the Bordelais, dismantled under Louis XVI., and removed since the Restoration. The construction of this new quarter has united with the town of Bordeaux the vast Quartier des Chartrons (so called from a convent of Chartreux), stretching down by the river side, and once a distinct faubourg.

One of the most conspicuous, and at the same time handsomest buildings, is the Theatre, of good Italian architecture, faced with a Corinthian portico of 12 arches and isolated on all sides; it is situated in a very central part of the town. It was erected 1780, under the direction of the Duc de Richelieu, by the architect Louis.

The Cathedral of St. André is distinguished by its 2 elegant spires, 150 ft. high, at the end of the N. transept, said to have been erected by the English, who held possession of Bordeaux for nearly 300 years, and flanking a pointed portal, enriched with statues and bas-reliefs, above which is a fine rose-window surmounted by a gable. The nave, partly in the round Romanesque style, partly, towards the W. end, repaired in a bungling manner in the 15th centy., after the destruction of a part of the church by an earthquake, is destitute of aisles, and remarkable only for its breadth—56 ft., which, being out of all proportion with its height, deprives it of the chief merit and characteristic of Gothic architecture—elevation. The choir is more elevated, and in a more truly Gothic style, with a triforium gallery and lofty clerestory windows; it is probably of the same age as the spires, and is also said to be by English architects. The Porte Royale is said to have been built by Henry II. and Queen Eleanor. Our Richard II. was christened, and the marriage of Louis XIII. with the Infanta of Spain, Anne of Austria, was solemnized in this church, 1615.

This ch. has no W. façade. The entrance from the W. is by an archway between 2 dwelling-houses, nearly opposite the Hôtel de Ville.

Near the E. end of the cathedral, but quite detached from it, is the Tour de Peyberland, a noble structure 200 ft. high, square below, and supported by buttresses, but gradually diminishing from its base until it terminates in a circular top. It was originally surmounted by a spire, which rose to a height of 300 ft. It is named from Pierre Berland, who rose from being the son of a poor labourer in Médoc to be bishop of Bordeaux; he caused it to be erected in 1430. During the Reign of Terror it was condemned to destruction; but the spire alone suffered, the rest resisting all attacks, owing to its solidity. Its handsome windows, however, were stopped, and it was converted into a shot-tower, but it has been repaired and reconsecrated as a belfry once more.

L'Eglise Ste. Croix, situated quite at the S. extremity of the town, near the quay, considerably above the bridge, is supposed to be the oldest church here, though a much earlier age has been assigned to it by some than it can claim, as its oldest parts cannot date farther back than the 10th or 11th centy. Its W. front, quite without uniformity, owing to its partial destruction and subsequent repairs, is a specimen of richly decorated Romanesque architecture, and from its age and quaint ornaments deserves some notice. Its semicircular portal and 2 lateral closed arcades are surrounded by mouldings elaborately carved, some with singular and unexplained naked groups of figures, intermixed with cable mouldings. In the tympanum above the door are 3 rows of bas-reliefs, in a style curiously resembling the Egyptian. The rest of the façade, and the wall of the tower rising on the one side, are occupied by arcades; groups of twisted or grooved pillars flank the portal, and 3 tiers of 4 small pillars, placed side by side one above the other, serve instead of buttresses to the tower.

The interior is of later date and inferior interest; its clustered roof rests on clumsy drum-like piers, partly plain, partly surrounded by shafts, some of them surmounted by curious stiffly-carved capitals. It contains a handsome canopied tomb of an abbot, in decorated Gothic. In a chapel on the l. as you enter, the panelled walls of which are decorated with tolerable paintings from the life of the Virgin by an old Italian artist, Vasetti, is an oblong baptismal font, bearing on 2 sides well-executed bas-reliefs of the Last Supper, with decorated ornaments.

In descending the quay from Ste. Croix, you pass, a little above the bridge, near the church of St. Michael, situated near the bridge, distinguished by its lofty detached tower. Its W. front is a superb Gothic elevation in the florid style (15th centy.). It has an elegant rose window framed within a richly decorated arch, whose mouldings are curved back below it. Under it is a florid porch. Over the N. door are a pair of bas-reliefs representing the Sacrifice of Isaac and the Paschal Lamb, dating from the 16th centy.; above is a charming group of wonderful expression, representing Judas's kiss. Within the church, at the back of this portal, over the door, is another group, an "Ecce Homo," of the same period, and a century earlier than the bas-reliefs on each side of it, which represent St. Michael destroying the Dragon, and Adam and Eve. The nave and choir are nearly uniform, and of noble pointed Gothic; the choir (about the 13th centy.) has a triforium and clerestory running behind the high altar, so that the E. end is like any compartment at the side, except that the space below, behind the altar, is filled with a shallow apse.

There are a few good painted windows, and in the N. side of the nave St. Joseph's chapel, furnished with an altar in the richest and most overlaid Renaissance style. Within its niches are 3 graceful statues—the Virgin and Child, St. Catherine, and St. Barbara; and below them, arranged as a predella, some curious marble bas-reliefs (14th or early 15th centy.?).

Near the W. end stands the elegant detached hexagonal belfry, 178 ft. high, originally surmounted by a steeple, and rose to a height of 300 ft. It is supported by elegant buttresses, and was built between 1472 and 1480; restored 1864. From the top is a very fine view. In the vault beneath it are shown from 40 to 50 human bodies. They were formerly buried in the churchyard which surrounded the belfry; but shortly before the Revolution the churchyard was closed and the bodies dug up. The bones and decayed bodies are in the vault beneath, but those shown were preserved by the dry and antiseptic qualities of the earth, until they are now like leather, or salt fish,—a disgusting sight.

St. Severin (St. Severin), situated beyond the Place Dauphine, in the Allées d'Amour, is remarkable for a finely carved triple S. porch, consisting of a trefoil-headed door, enriched with statues of good workmanship, well-executed draperies, and dating from 1267. They represent the 12 Apostles and 2 more sacred personages.

The W. front is modern, but is a tolerable attempt to follow the Romanesque style. The W. porch consists of 3 detached low vaults, one within the other, supported on pillars with curiously carved capitals.

Within this church, on the rt. hand or S. wall, is a curious bas-relief within a pointed arch above a doorway, now walled up, representing a pope saying mass (supposed to be Clement V., Archbishop of Bordeaux), assisted by a cardinal. On the opposite wall is another bas-relief of 7 figures in niches. The Gothic woodwork of the choir is curious, but sadly bedaubed with paint. Under the seats are numerous grotesque groups. The high altar is decorated with 14 curiously carved bas-reliefs of marble, framed, representing the legend of St. Severin, Bishop of Bordeaux in the 5th centy. On the one side of the chancel stands the Bishop's Throne, a curiously carved seat, under a canopy, all of marble, richly sculptured. This church was the cathedral before St. André. Under the choir is an early crypt with 3 aisles and semicircular arches. At the W. end rises a tower surrounded by a double row of circular arcades.

In the Chapelle of the College, an ordinary modern structure, is the monument of Montaigne, the essayist, a native of Montaigne St. Michel in Périgord, who was mayor of Bordeaux in 1553. He is represented in full armour, according to the custom of the period, laid on his back, with his hands joined in prayer. At No. 17, in the Rue des Minimes, stood his modest mansion, in which he lived and died, 1592, now pulled down.

These are the most remarkable ecclesiastical edifices of Bordeaux, but it [France.]

retains still a monument of the Roman city Burdigala, in the fragment of an amphitheatre, now called **Palais Gallien*, not quite accurately, because, though possibly built in the reign of the Emp. Gallienus, it was not a palace, but a circus, capable of containing 1500 persons. It is supposed to have been built by Tetricus, one of the so-called 30 tyrants, who assumed the purple here. It was condemned to destruction 1792, and has been since gradually pulled down to build houses, so that it is now reduced to mere fragments, interesting to the antiquary alone, of an oval wall formed of small stones with layers of tiles between them, interrupted by the broken archways which lead into it. The interior is occupied by houses and workshops, and 2 streets cross in the centre of it: so that you may stand in the midst of its area and scarcely recognise these ancient remains.

The bridge across the Garonne is described in Rte. 64.

Bordeaux has preserved 2 of its feudal town gates: one, La Porte du Palais or du Cailhau, originally formed an entrance to the Palace in which the Dukes of Aquitaine and the Seneschals of England resided, and where Louis XI. established the Parliament of B.; destroyed 1800: the tower is seen on l. in going from the bridge along the Quai de Bourgogne. The other, Porte de l'Hôtel de Ville, is one of the 4 towers which stood at the angles of the old H. de Ville: it is surmounted by 3 turrets; the lower part dates from the 11th centy. The old Bourse, in the Place d'Aquitaine, now an office of roulage, but built as a palace for Charles IX., and the old Evêché in a narrow street near it, are picturesque examples of the architecture of the 16th centy.

Bordeaux, like almost every other chef-lieu de Département in France, has a Gallery of Paintings. They are placed in the numerous saloons of the Mairie (once Archbishop's Palace); but, with the exception of one masterpiece by Perugino, and one painting of Palma Vecchio, they are in no wise remarkable, and the less said of their merits the more true the description. There are, however, some tolerable works of the French school. Obs. a collection of arms and weapons of all ages and epochs, inlaid fire-arms of the middle ages, celts, flint instruments from Old and New World.

The Musée, situated in Rue St. Dominique (or Rue N. Dame), a street leading out of the Chaussée de Tourny, contains a collection of antique fragments, scarce worth notice, chiefly Roman, found in the vicinity of Bordeaux; also parts of the marble bas-reliefs, representing the battle of Fontenoy, and the capture of Port Mahon from the English by the Duc de Richelieu, which ornamented the pedestal of the statue of Louis XV. in the Place Royale, destroyed at the Revolution. In the Musée d'Histoire Naturelle are tolerable collections of shells, of the fossils of the neighbourhood of Bordeaux, marked by blue tickets, and of the marbles of the Pyrenees. A specimen of a sea-eagle was shot at La Teste. These museums are open daily to strangers.

The valuable archives, including letters of Montaigne, were destroyed by fire in the H. de Ville, 1862.

In the same locality, Rue St. Dominique, is the Library of more than 100,000 volumes, partly the bequest of a member of the old Parliament of Bordeaux, partly the remains of conventual libraries forfeited at the Revolution. A copy of Montaigne's Essays with marginal notes in his own hand, and the first French translation of Livy illuminated, are among its curiosities.

A fine Jardin Public, with a large glass conservatory, has been completed near the Place des Quinconces.

The Bourse, the centre of the commerce and trade of the city, is situated on the quay at the extremity of the Rue Chapeau Rouge, between it and the Place Royale. The merchants meet here daily, under a glass dome which covers the inner court of the building, 98 ft. long by 65 broad.

The speech of Louis Napoleon, "L'Empire c'est la paix," is engraved here on marble.

In the Cimetière de la Chartreuse are interred the remains of Moreau, who fell at Dresden.

The commercial importance of Bordeaux is due to its situation on a fine navigable river, where the rise and fall of tides amounts to 20 ft., in which vessels of more than 1000 tons may ride at anchor, at a distance of about 70 m. from the sea. There are no docks, and few quays, and the vessels lie in the stream, and either discharge into lighters or wait for their turn at the quays. They are not moored in tiers, but lie very thick, and it is difficult to understand how collisions are avoided when the wind is strong. Bordeaux is connected by the same river, through the Canal du Midi, with the Mediterranean. Its commerce is carried on chiefly with South America and Mexico, the United States, French colonies, and Great Britain. There is a good deal of shipbuilding, the ship-yards being above the bridge. The principal articles of trade and exports consist in wines, known in France as vins de Bordeaux, and in England as claret, a name of doubtful origin. From 50,000 to 60,000 tuns of wine are exported annually. Nearly half of the best quality and highest price is sent to Great Britain; very little is consumed in France. The Quartier des Chartrons is the focus of this trade; here the principal wine-merchants have their counting-houses and cellars.

The Cellars of M.M. Barton and Gues-tier, leading bankers and wine-merchants, 35, Pavé des Chartrons, are among "the lions" of Bordeaux. They are 2 stories in height, and commonly contain from 8000 to 9000 casks (barriques) of wine, never less than 4000 or 5000. The duty paid by this house in one year alone to the British government has amounted to 300,000*l*.

For an account of the wines of Bordeaux see Route 74.

Among the delicacies furnished by the Bordeaux markets to the table are Royans, a species of sardines caught in autumn; Ceps, a sort of mushroom cooked in oil; Muriers, small birds something like beccaficas; and Ortolans, caught in August, near Agen and the Pyrenees.

The Café de Paris is a tolerable Restaurant.

Consuls reside here from the chief powers of Europe and America; Great Britain is most respectably represented by Mr. Scott, No. 7, Place du Champ de Mars.

The English Ch. service is performed on Sundays at the English Protestant Ch., 10, Cours des Chartrons, at 11.30 a.m. and 3.30 p.m.

There is a rowing and sailing club (Cercle Nautique), where English amateur visitors are always welcome.

The Poste aux Lettres is at No. 5, Rue Porte Dijaux.

Public baths on a very extensive scale, in two fine buildings on each side of the Place des Quinconces.

Newspapers of all countries, English, French, German, Spanish, &c., may be found in great abundance at the Cercle, 7, Place de la Comédie, opposite the theatre.

The only resident English physician is Dr. Coppinger, Place Dauphine, 43.

Paul Chaumas Gayet, the bookseller, 34, Rue Fossé du Chapeau Rouge, keeps a number of topographical works, maps, &c., besides the newest French publications.

Besides the Grand Théâtre, mentioned already, open commonly three times a week, there is a smaller Théâtre Français or des Variétés, near the extremity of the Rue de l'Intendance, adjoining the Place Dauphine.

Omnibuses run along the quay from one end to the other, and in a direction across the town, from the river to its outskirts.

Fiacres stand for hire in the principal places: they are more expensive than those of Paris, charging 2 f. for the course, or, by time, 2 fr. for the first hour, and 1 f. 80 c. for every hour after.

Railways to Paris in 14 hours, via Libourne, Angoulême, and Tours; Terminus on the l. bank of the Garonne;—to La Teste;—to Bayonne by Dax, the quickest way to Pau and the Pyrenees (Rte. 73);—to Limoges;—to Toulouse, Montauban, Narbonne, Cette, Marseilles, and the Mediterranean; Terminus on the l. bank of the Garonne: above the bridge a combined terminus near the centre of the city is projected.

Steamers to Nantes twice a week.

Steamers on the Garonne.—Down the river, to Blaye and Pauillac daily, starting from the quay abreast of the rostral columns; to Royan. Coaches thence to Rochefort 29 m. several times a week in 7 hours.

Up the river, (?) to Langon, Marmande, and Agen (Rte. 73), starting from the quay just above the bridge; but it takes 12 or 14 hours to reach Agen by water, and only 1½ by rail.

Environs of Bordeaux.

An excursion by rly. to La Teste and Arcachon, 35 m. in 1½ hrs. (Rte. 76), will give the traveller some notion of the nature of the sandy district called Les Landes.

The banks of the Garonne below Bordeaux, and the wine district of Médoc, which produces the claret, are described in Rte. 74.

The Garonne above Bordeaux, in Rte. 73.

The excursions to the Château de la Brède, the birthplace of Montesquieu, 2 hours' drive (see above) or to Blanquefort, the castle of the Black Prince.

Passages in the History of Bordeaux.

The earliest mention of Bordeaux is in the geography of Strabo, who calls it Burdigala, under which it was known to the Romans, and described in some pretty verses by Ausonius the poet, who was born here in the 4th centy.:—

"Impia jamdudum condemno silentia quod te,
O patria, insignem Baccho, fluvioque, vir-risque,
Non inter primas memorem. * * * *
Burdigala est natale solum, clementia coeli
Mitis ubi, et rigus larga indulgentia terræ;
Ver longum, brumæque breves, juga frondea
subeunt,
Fervent æquoreos imitata fluentia meatus."
AUSON. Clara Urbes.

Hadrian created it the capital of 2nd Aquitania.

Bordeaux belonged for nearly 300 years to the kings of England, who obtained it along with the duchy of Aquitaine by the marriage of Eleanor of Guienne, sole heiress of the last native duke, with Henry II., in 1152, and her inheritance became the fruitful cause of strife between England and France.

The Black Prince, having been invested by his father with the government of Guienne, resided many years at Bordeaux. Hence he set forth on that adventurous foray into the centre of France which led to the battle of Poitiers. Here he held a brilliant court, to which Don Pedro the Cruel repaired, when driven out of Spain, with his two fair daughters, who were here married to the English Princes John of Gaunt and the Earl of Cambridge.

Here the Black Prince's son, Richard II., was born, and surnamed from his birthplace Richard of Bordeaux. At this time, according to Froissart, the English sent every year a fleet of 200 sail to Bordeaux to be freighted with wine.

The Bordelais retained their affection for the English long after the downfall of our sway in the rest of France, in the reign of Henry VI.; revolting from the rule of Charles VII. to receive within their walls the valiant Talbot (1453), but his speedy defeat and death forced them again to submit to the French monarch.

Bordeaux was the seat of one of the provincial Parliaments of France, or high court of justice, composed of laymen and ecclesiastics, who registered the royal decrees and transmitted them to the lower courts. George Buchanan was sometime professor in the college de Guienne.

One of the most momentous events of the civil war of the Fronde was the siege of Bordeaux, undertaken by the royal army, with Mazarin, young Louis XIV., and his mother, at its head, while the city held for the Princess de Condé, the Dukes of la Rochefoucauld and Bouillon, at the head of their vassals, assisted by the townspeople and backed by the Parliament of Bordeaux. The heroic wife of the Great Condé, having escaped the clutches of the Cardinal, who already held her husband in prison, and wished to transfer her and her son to like durance, traversed the country from Chantilly, and after a series of adventures and escapes threw herself into this city, where the interest of the Condés was strong. Her beauty, eloquence, and forlorn position enlisted in her favour the enthusiasm of the magistrates and townspeople, and upon her persuasion they agreed to admit her allies and resist the force of Mazarin. She captivated all hearts, and became as it were queen of Bordeaux, then the second city of the empire; and Condé, while shut up in Vincennes and employed in watering his pot of violets, learned with surprise that his feeble princess was acting the part of a general, conducting the defence of a town, and exposing her life on the walls. The defence was conducted with such obstinacy, that, at the end of several weeks, Mazarin, having made little progress, was happy to offer fair terms to the Frondeurs. The citizens of Bordeaux were right glad to be released from the blockade just at the approach of the vintage, for their warlike enthusiasm had begun to cool at the prospect of being shut out from their vineyards.

A great impulse was given to the French Revolution by the inhabitants of Bordeaux. At the beginning of the reign of Louis XVI. the Parliament of Bordeaux, having refused to acknowledge the edict of the king, was banished to Libourne, and in consequence contributed largely to the clamour for the assembling together of the States-general. Many of the persons of greatest eloquence and talent sent as members to the Legislative Assembly, including Vergniaud, Gaudet, Gensonné, Ducos, &c., were returned by the department of the Gironde, whence the party which they composed was called the Girondins; but having themselves brought on all the evils of the Revolution, they were swallowed up by the monster they had created, and guillotined for the most part by the stronger party of the Montagne, which succeeded them in the Convention. Bordeaux had a Reign of Terror of its own; the guillotine was erected in the square near the centre of the town, called Place Dauphine (in honour of the Dauphin, afterwards Louis XIII.), but then named Place de Justice, and some of its best citizens were sacrificed. No less than 500 persons suffered death here, whom either envy of their merits, or cupidity for their wealth, caused to be condemned under the false charge of conspiracy against the sovereignty of the people.

The names of some of the streets afford a curious commentary on the history of the town, and a proof among many of the mutability of the French nation. The Place des Quinconces, formerly Place Louis-Philippe, was Place Louis XVI. down to 1830: a statue of that king had been prepared, and its pedestal actually erected, when the July Revolution broke out. The Cours de Douze Mars was the name given to the row of houses now called Trente Juillet, because on the former day, in 1814, the Duc d'Angoulême made his triumphant entry into Bordeaux, at the invitation of the Mayor Lynch (whose name has also been erased from a street which bore it), and amidst the acclamations of a part of the inhabitants.

On the 8th March in that year 2 divisions of the British army, under Marshal Beresford, marched upon Bordeaux; where the presence of the dauntless Duchesse d'Angoulême, who had thrown herself into the town to revive the dormant spirit of loyalty towards her family, and the intrigues of the Duc d'Angoulême, contrary to the advice and wishes of the Duke of Wellington, caused the premature proclamation of the Bourbons by the royalist mayor. The Duke had expressly declared that "he could not interfere to produce any declaration in favour of the Bourbons, nor to support their measures by military force."

ROUTE 74.

THE GARONNE AND GIRONDE FROM BORDEAUX TO LA TOUR DE CORDOUAN
—THE WINE DISTRICT OF MÉDOC.

100 kilom.=62 Eng. m.

Steamers daily to Blaye and Pauillac—4 or 5 times a week to Royan; fare, 15 and 8 frs.

Railway in progress.

Diligences daily along the S.W. side of the river to Château Margaux and Lesparre, through the midst of Médoc, and along the rt. bank to Blaye. The road on the W. side of the Garonne passes Bouscat and Bruges, so named by Flemish settlers established here by Henri IV. to drain the marshes, and Blanquefort, whose picturesque castle, a favourite residence of the Black Prince, still preserves part of its outer circuit walls, round towers, and fosse, and some of its apartments entire. The leopards of England are only half effaced from the walls. It is a picturesque object. Thence the road runs to Margaux.

Bordeaux Wines.

The long tongue of land stretching N. from Bordeaux, between the sea on the one hand and the Garonne and Gironde on the other, is called Médoc (quasi medio aquæ), because nearly surrounded by water. It is the N. termination of the extensive district of sand hills and sand plains, called Les Landes, extending from Bayonne north, which changes to a bank of gravel on approaching the l. bank of the Garonne, and forms a narrow strip of land nowhere more than 1 or 2 m. broad, raised from 50 to 80 ft. above the river, which is planted with vines, and contains some of the most precious vineyards in the world. The transition is abrupt from this gravel bank near the river to the mere Landes or sandy waste running to the W. and S. of it, producing nothing but firs, furze, and heath. The soil of Médoc is a light gravel, and indeed, on the spots where some of the best wine is produced, it appears a mere heap of white quartz pebble, rolled, and about the size of an egg, mixed with sand. The best wine is not produced where the vine-bush is most luxuriant, but on the thinner soils, where it is actually stunted—in ground fit for nothing else; in fact, where even weeds disdain often to grow. Yet this stony soil is congenial to the vine, retaining the sun's heat about its roots after sunset, so that, in the language of the country, it works (travaille) in maturing its precious juices as much by night as by day. The accumulation of sand and pebbles, of which this soil is composed, is apparently the spoils of the Pyrenean rocks, brought down by the torrents tributary to the Garonne and other great rivers, and deposited in former ages on the borders of the sea. At the depth of 2 or 3 feet from the surface occurs a bed of indurated conglomerate, called alios, which requires to be broken up before the vine will grow, as it would stop the progress of the roots, being impenetrable to their fibres. The vine is trained exclusively in the fashion of espaliers, fastened to horizontal laths, attached to upright posts at a height not exceeding  $1\frac{1}{2}$  or 2 feet from the ground, running in an uninterrupted line from one end of the vineyard to the other. Manure is scarcely used in the culture, only a little fresh mould is laid over the roots from time to time; but the plough is driven between the vines four times every season, alternately laying open and covering its roots: this is performed by oxen, who, with steady and unvarying pace, thread the ranks without treading on the plants. Manure destroys the fine quality of the wine, and moisture or standing water is most injurious to the plant. The vine begins to produce at 5 years of age, and continues productive sometimes when 200 years old, provided its roots have found a congenial soil to insinuate (pivoter) their fibres, which they sometimes do to a distance of 40 or 50 ft., when the soil is dry and deep enough to protect them from the sun. The wines are classed into growths (crues), according to their excellence, and only a very small part of the strip of land before mentioned is capable of producing the "premiers crus;" indeed so capricious is the vine, that within a few yards of the finest vineyards it degenerates at once. The following list will show the classification of Bordeaux wines, or clarets as we call them in England (though whence the name, or what its meaning, are unknown in Médoc), together with the average quantity of each produced in one season. The tun, or tonneau, contains 4 hogsheads, called barriques.

First Growth.	Château Margaux . . .	140—160	Tuns.
	Château Lafitte . . .	120
	Château Latour . . .	100
	Haut Brion . . .	60—80

The last is properly a vin de Grave, grown on the Garonne above Bordeaux, yet is classed with Médoc wines; it is less in repute now than formerly.

Second Growth.	Mouton (Lafitte) . . .	120—146	Tuns.
	Léoville, the best of the wines of St. Julien . . .	145—186
	Rauzan (Margaux) . . .	75—95

La Rose Gruau, Pichon Longueville, Durfort, Degorse, Lascombe, Cos-Destournelle, in all about 800 tuns.

It is needless to enumerate those of 3rd, 4th, and 5th rate growths, many of which are produced in the vicinity of the first-rate vineyards, at the villages or in the communes of Margaux, Lafitte, Latour, without partaking in their excellences. The goodness of a season will sometimes give an excellence to second-class wines, while in bad years those of first-class sink to mediocrity, and are not fit for exporting to England (such is the importance of maintaining the character of these wines there), but go to Holland, or are retained in France. This is so well understood, that some years ago the proprietor of the vineyard of La Rose used to hoist, on a flagstaff above his house, the English flag in good years, the Dutch in middling, and the French in bad years. England consumes more than one-half of the premiers crus, and very little of inferior sorts; Russia takes a good deal, Paris little of the best; Holland is the great mart for wines of second quality; and the third-rate sorts, or vins ordinaires, are chiefly used in France. An erroneous notion prevails in England that clarets are prepared for the English market by a certain mixture of brandy. This is not the case; brandy would destroy the wine. A mixture does take place to adapt the wines to the English palate; but they are doctored with strong-bodied (corsés) Rhône wines, and chiefly with Hermitage, the principal consumption of which is for this purpose. The practice of mixing is very general. The characteristic of the good wines of Bordeaux is their aroma or bouquet; spirit they have none, and will distil away into nothing, yet the aroma will be retained and penetrate even through the Rhône wine, when it is judiciously added. The average price of a hogshead (barrique) of genuine wine of first growth, in the cellar of the first houses at Bordeaux, was 50*l.*, which, with carriage, duty, bottling, &c., amounts to 80*l.*, rather more than 70*s.* a dozen. A first-growth wine of a fine vintage is scarcely to be had at a less price; indeed, the whole produce of Château Margaux has been sold on the spot for 1000 francs the hogshead, in the case of a very first-rate vintage. The price has, however, risen considerably of late years; the vintages prior to that of 1858 having been diseased and bad. Very great skill is shown, and much experience required, in the making of the wine, in the compounding of various growths and qualities, and in the preservation of it: a promising vintage often disappoints expectations, while a bad one sometimes turns out excellent; indeed, all that can be said of the premiers crus is, that they are the wines which most often succeed. The total produce of Médoc, in average years, is from 150,000 to 170,000 hogsheads, of which about 6000 go to England.

Travellers desiring to visit the principal vineyards of Médoc may take the steamer to Pauillac (which may be reached in 4 hrs., or 6 against tide), which is not far from Lafitte and Latour, or the coaches which run daily will convey them to Margaux. The high road thither, and thence to Pauillac, traverses the centre of the narrow strip of land forming the wine district. For some distance out of Bordeaux it passes a series of country houses.

The Garonne below Bordeaux is a fine broad tidal river, but very much charged with mud, having few features of interest, its banks being chiefly low, while an intervening fringe of marsh and meadow land, grown over with willows, separates the river from the vineyards, little of which can be seen from the deck of the steamer.

Nothing can be finer than the view of the long crescent quay of Bordeaux, and the broad river crowded with shipping, many of them 3-masted vessels, as the steamer casts off from the quay, opposite the rostral columns, and skirts the long Faubourg des Chartrons.

rt. Lormont is a picturesque eminence, covered with wood and vineyards, interspersed with some neat country-houses on its top and below its steep side. In a recess under the hill stands the village, with a domed church, surmounted by a château.

rt. Below Montferrand, a small village hid by poplars, is a large Château, the residence of the late M. de Peyronnet, one of the ministers of Charles X. who signed the ordonnances.

rt. The tongue of land between the Garonne and Dordogne, called Entre Deux Mers, which produces a vast quantity of wines of inferior quality, draws to a termination at the low point called Bec d'Ambés. The union of the two rivers forms the broad estuary of the Gironde, whence the department is named. The monsters of the revolutionary Mountain, after overwhelming in 1793 their antagonists the Girondins (so called because the leaders came from this part of the country), swamped even the name of the department, which for several months bore that of "Ambés." A long line of low hills, faced towards the water with cliffs, lines the l. bank of the Gironde and Dordogne. Looking up the Dordogne, you perceive, on an eminence, Bourg, a small town of 3855 Inhab., where Louis XIV., when a child, resided with his mother, Anne of Austria, for nearly a year (1649-50), during the continuance of the siege of Bordeaux. Mazarin, in order to superintend the operations and watch the leaders of the Fronde within the city, had repaired in person to the S., dragging with him the King, the Regent, and the Court. The ladies in waiting complained bitterly of the want of a theatre to enliven the ennui of their residence, and the cardinal got angry with the mayor because the whole place could not furnish a sedan-chair to carry him through the steep and dirty streets. The extensive vineyards around Bourg produced the wines (claret) esteemed the best in the district 200 years ago, before the cultivation of the vine in Médoc had commenced, which does not date farther back than 250 years.

rt. The steamer stops to set down or take up passengers at the Pain de Sucre, a landing-place at the mouth of the Dordogne, close under the Bec d'Ambés, and about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. below Bourg. Two large islands are here formed in the middle of the Gironde.

l. Nearly abreast of the Pain de Sucre a glimpse may be obtained of the mansion of Château Margaux, situated some distance inland: it is an Italian villa, the handsomest in Médoc, and belongs to the heirs of the Spanish banker, the Marquis d'Aguado, though rarely inhabited, owing to the malaria which prevails around it. It stands in the midst of the vineyards producing the celebrated wine of Château Margaux, the most esteemed growth of Médoc. The grape which yields it is small and poor to the taste, with a flavour slightly resembling that of black currants. The Château is about  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. from the village of Margaux, which abounds in neat whitewashed villas, seated in little gardens, amidst acacia hedges and trellised vines. It is about 20 m. distant from Bordeaux. At Delas is a tolerable Inn.

rt. The yellow cliffs along the river-side are pierced to form cellars, in which is deposited the wine grown above them: and for a considerable extent near Gauriac they are excavated in quarries of building-stone. At the base of the cliffs are several small villages.

rt. Blaye. The dead walls and gloomy-looking modern bastions of the citadel of Blaye are seen projecting over the river at a height considerably above it. In the midst of them stands a fragment of the old feudal fortress, whose towers may be seen surmounting the turfed ramparts. This citadel was chosen as the prison of the Duchesse de Berri, who was confined here in a double sense after her capture in La Vendée (see Nantes), having been brought to bed of a daughter in 1833. After a detention of 7 months she was sent back to Naples. The body of Roland the Brave was, according to tradition, transported hither from Roncesvaux by Charlemagne, and interred in the Church of St. Romain, with his sword Durandal at his head, and his famous horn of ivory (Oliphaunt), with which he had awakened the echoes of Fuentarabia, at his feet. The body was afterwards transported to St. Sernin, at Bordeaux.

Opposite Blaye several islands have been formed in the middle of the river by the deposits brought down by the Dordogne and Garonne, and are constantly increasing. On one of them is planted the little fort du Pâté, so called from its round shape. It crosses its fire with that of the fortress of Blaye on the rt. bank, and of Fort Médoc on the l., and thus commands the passage of the Gironde.

To the N. of Margaux the vines decline in quality; and it is not until after an interval of several miles of inferior vineyards that we reach others, producing wine of reputation, in the vicinity of

l. Beycheville, lying within the commune of St. Julien, a name of note on account of the wine grown in it. The Château de Beycheville, situated on the height in the midst of valuable vineyards, is the seat of M. Guestier, ancien Pair de France, and one of the first wine-merchants of Bordeaux.

Here begin some of the most renowned vineyards of Médoc, which lie crowded together in almost uninterrupted succession, within a narrow space, stretching about 6 m. N. of Beycheville.

About  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. off is Château Léoville, which produces one of the best second growths, nearly equalling the first growths. The estate is divided between Mr. Barton and M. de Las Cases. In the same commune is the vineyard of La Rose, a prime second growth; and in the adjoining one of St. Lambert is the vineyard of Château Latour, yielding a well-known wine, premier cru. The estate, which does not exceed 330 acres, was sold a few years ago for 60,000*l.* The second growths, Pichon-Longueville and Mouton, come from the same quarter.

1. Pauillac (Inn: H. de France), a small seaport, behind which, at the distance of about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m., is the vineyard of Château Lafitte, producing one of the three best wines of Bordeaux; it is the property of Sir Claude Scott, and does not yield more than 400 hogsheads yearly. The region of good wines extends N. as far as Lesparre, but the wines are far inferior to those of the commune of Pauillac.

The aspect of the vine district of Médoc is that of an undulating country, slightly raised above the Garonne, affording here and there peeps of the river between the gentle hills and shallow gullies which intersect it. It abounds in marshes and stagnant pools, which render it unhealthy, so that the châteaux which occur in it are inhabited only for a small part of the year by their proprietors. Yet the district is populous, a group of cottages being attached to almost every vineyard, and inhabited by the peasants who cultivate it. The vineyards are open fields; even those of greatest value being for the most part unprovided with walls, or even hedges, in order to avoid the loss of any space of ground which must be left round the margin to allow the plough to turn. When the grapes begin to ripen, a temporary fence is formed round the vines, of twisted boughs interwoven with furze, to keep out the dogs, which are most destructive consumers of grapes. Further to deter both bipeds and quadrupeds from committing depredations, guards armed with guns are posted on the watch, day and night, while streaks of paint, and bits of white paper stuck upon poles, announce that the vineyard is strewn with poisoned sausages, and that the grapes themselves are smeared with some deleterious mixture. The vines are planted in quincunx order on ridges (about 3 ft. apart): they are trained to espaliers, and not allowed to rise more than 2 ft. above the ground. In the best vineyards they barely cover the soil, but allow the singular mass of pebbles, of which it almost exclusively consists, to appear between the rows. The growth of the vine is confined within a narrow line of demarcation, and the transition is most abrupt from the most precious land to an uncultivated sandy desert. The distance of a few feet makes all the difference. The vintage takes place in the month of September, and it is then that Médoc presents a scene of bustle, activity, and rejoicing. The proprietors then repair hither with their friends and families to superintend the proceedings and make merry: vigneronns pour in from the l. bank of the Gironde, to assist in the gathering. Busy crowds of men, women, and children sweep the vineyard from end to end, clearing all before them like bands of locusts, while the air resounds with their songs and laughter. The utmost care is employed by the pickers to remove from the bunches all defective, dried, mouldy, or unripe grapes. Every road is thronged with carts filled with high-heaped tubs, which the labouring oxen are dragging slowly to the Cuvier de pressoir (pressing-trough). This is placed usually in a lofty outhouse, resembling a barn, whence issue sounds of still louder merriment, and a scene presents itself sufficiently singular to the stranger. Upon a square wooden trough (pres-soir) stand 3 or 4 men with bare legs all stained with purple juice, dancing and treading down the grapes as fast as they are thrown in, to the tunes of a violin. The labour of constantly stamping down the fruit is desperately fatiguing, and without music would get on very slowly; a fiddler, therefore, forms part of every wine-grower's establishment; and as long as the instrument pours forth its merry strains, the treaders continue their dance in the gore of the grape, and the work proceeds diligently. The next process is to strip (égrapper) the broken grapes and skins from the stalks, with an instrument called dérappoir, and to pour the juice and skins into vats to ferment. The skin rises to the top, and the wine is drawn off into hogsheads as soon as fermentation is carried to the proper extent, in judging of which the utmost experience is required, as on it depends much of the quality of the vintage.

At Trompe-Loup is the Lazaretto, where vessels perform quarantine.

1. The cultivation of the vine ceases to the N. of Castillon, and the extreme point of Médoc, towards the mouth of the Gironde, consists of rich pasture-land, famed for its breed of cattle, and some corn-fields. It lies on a level with the surface of the sea, and was redeemed from the condition of marsh by a colony of Flemings, invited over to France by Henri IV., who surrounded it with sea-dikes like their own country.

rt. Mortagne. A diligence runs hence to Saintes in communication with the steamer.

rt. Royan (Inns: H. de Bordeaux, best; d'Orléans) is a neat small seaport town in the Dépt. of the Charente, about 25 m. from Rochefort, whither a Diligence runs. (Rte. 62.) It is a station of pilots, and is resorted to for sea-bathing. Steamer to Bordeaux in summer, in about 8 hrs.

On an isolated rock outside the mouth of the Gironde, which is beset with dangerous sandbanks, rises the lighthouse called La Tour de Cordouan, whose beacon guides mariners entering or quitting the river. It is a circular structure of three stories, the central one being domed like a church, from the midst of which rises a sort of pepper-box turret. It was designed in the reign of Henri II. by Louis de Foix, one of the architects of the Escurial, 1611, who is said to have died here, and to have been buried within it. It replaced a lighthouse founded by the English 1362-71, while the Black Prince was governor of Guienne. (See Rymer.)

ROUTE 76.

BORDEAUX TO BAYONNE—RAILWAY.

Bordeaux.	Kil.	Miles.
Lamotte junct. . . .	40	25
Morcenx junct. . . .	109	68
Dax . . . . .	148	92
Bayonne . . . . .	198	124

The most expeditious route to the Pyrenees from Paris is by Morcenx junct., Aire (Rte. 80), and Tarbes, to Bagnères de Bigorre, Rail; or by Dax to Pau, Rail.

A Rly. was formed to La Teste, 31 m., in 1841, and is partly followed in going to Bayonne. The line to Dax was opened 1854, and was completed to Bayonne 1855. The rly. stat. is a long way from the hotels. A bridge carries the Paris Rly. across the Garonne, connecting it with this line to Bayonne, and also with the rly. to Toulouse. A central stat. will embrace all 3 lines.

Soon after quitting Bordeaux the rly. to Toulouse and Cette diverges (1.), and we enter on the monotonous sandy district extending S. nearly to Bayonne, and known by the name Les Grandes Landes. It is but sparsely inhabited, and its chief production consists of vast black forests of fir (Pinus maritima).

Lamothe Junct. Stat.—Buffet.

[Near this the Bayonne rly. diverges S. out of the line to La Teste and Arcachon.

La Teste de Buch Stat. Inn: H. du Chemin de Fer (Pop. 3891). No trace remains of the Castle of the "Captaux de Buch," in the middle ages leading captains of Aquitaine. Froissart describes the battle between one of them, who was in the service of Charles le Mauvais King of Navarre, and Duguesclin, in 1364. La Teste has been saved from being swallowed up by the moving sandhills by the planting of the fir upon them, and it has become a prosperous place since the rly. was opened.

ARCACHON. — (Inns: H. Legallais, best; H. Gaillard; H. des Empeureurs), a pretty and peculiar bathing village, rapidly increasing, on the S. shore of the salt lake, called Bassin d'Arcachon, 68 m. in circumference, which is connected with the sea by a narrow opening on the S.W. It is lined with beautiful broad and smooth sands, admirably suited for sea-bathing, and encircled by downs (dunes) of sand covered with fir-woods, extending S. 40 m. nearly as far as Bayonne, which shelter it from inclement blasts, to which it is exposed. It is much resorted to by patients suffering from weak lungs, but is principally occupied by bathers in search of amusement. M. Emil. de Pereyra is resident physician. The only old building is the Chapelle, lined with ex-votos of the fishermen; and there were about half a dozen fishermen's huts until 1854, when it suddenly became the fashion, and there is now a population of some 5000 in the summer. The village consists of one straight street, 1½ m. long, skirting the "Dunes" and backed by the pine woods; the houses are mostly of wood, and, like an Indian bungalow, have no upper story. A few stone houses have been built, in a style which may be called Swiss, Chinese, or Florid Cockney. There are a few wretched saddle-horses, but the principal amusement is bathing. Ladies and gentlemen wear fancy bathing dresses, and in them parade the sands at all hours, sometimes in the water, sometimes walking about and talking to their friends. The native fishing-boats are most extraordinary and primitive.

Ascend the mound called Le Buet, for the view over the Atlantic and the ocean of firs on the S. An excursion to the Lighthouse on the other side of the "Bassin" will yield a fine sea view. There are no bathing-machines, but before every house on the shore one or more sheds, like sentry-boxes, in which bathers change their attire].

On entering the singular district of the Landes, fields give place to heaths and pine-woods, interspersed with a few patches of barley and a little maize; for these crops will grow wherever manure and industry can be employed upon the soil. The surface of the ground is of a dull grey or ash-coloured sand. A few flocks of lean, tattered, ill-conditioned sheep wander over this waste, tended by shepherds renowned for walking on stilts (échasses). By the aid of these they are not only enabled to stalk over the prickly bushes, and avoid the inconvenience of filling their shoes with sand, but they gain an elevation not afforded by the even surface of the ground, from which they can overlook their flock, and prevent their sheep straying. They carry a long pole, which, when stuck into the ground, forms a sort of stool, and on it they can rest and knit stockings all the day through. A stranger, unprepared for the sight, would have some difficulty in explaining the nature of the extraordinary tripod thus formed; and the sheepskins worn by the peasant would not diminish the mystery. The peasants of the Landes are all accustomed to the use of stilts, and with a very slight exertion, and not a very quick movement, will clear the country at a pace which would keep a horse at a hard trot, by the aid of these wooden legs. "The inhabitants are rather diminutive in size, and not a very long-lived race. They endure severe privations—among them, the want of water. Even the lower animals must here change their nature to accommodate themselves to the soil. I saw large flocks of ducks which, I was assured, had never seen a pond!"—F.

The pine (Pinus maritima) is peculiarly at home among the Landes, and flourishes in robust vigour. Nearly  $\frac{1}{2}$  of the Dépt. des Landes is covered with dark forests (Pignadas) of this tree, all planted in shifting sands within the last 50 years, at the instigation in the first instance of M. Bremon tier, Inspecteur de Ponts et Chaussées. Owing to the value of the timber and of the rosin which it produces, and the facility with which it is grown, large districts have been planted by the government. To obtain the rosin, a slice is cut off the bark, and a hole made in the ground beneath, into which the rosin flows from the incision, and is thence collected by the workman; when the incision begins to heal, a fresh incision is cut above it, and so on to a great height, and then another incision is begun. The old trees will be seen thus converted into fluted columns. One of the chief evils is the want of good water, all the streams of the Landes being brackish. It is said that the Moors, when expelled, asked leave to occupy the Landes. Numerous schemes have been proposed for reclaiming them, and it is understood that the present Emperor is about to undertake the task.

The Raily. through the Landes was made by the English engineers Conder and Goode. The workpeople during its progress were lodged in tents and in a sort of travelling village, placed on trucks pushed forward on the rails day by day as fast as the line advanced. Food and water were sent to them a distance of 40 or 50 m.

Caudos, Salles, Labouhere, and Sabres are stations between Lamoethe and Morcenx Junct. Stat.—Buffet.

[Here a branch rly. goes to Mont de

Marsan, Tarbes, and Bagnères. (Rte. 80.)]

[About 20 m. N. of Morcenx, in the midst of the sandy Landes, is an obscure and wretched hamlet, called Labrit or Albret. It was the cradle of the Sires d'Albret, one of the oldest families of France, from whom sprang the illustrious Henri IV., the son of Jeanne d'Albret.]

Buglose Stat. This village, formerly called Pouy, was the birthplace of the philanthropic founder of the order of Sœurs de la Charité, and of founding hospitals, St. Vincent de Paul. When a boy he tended his father's flock in the sandy heaths near the Lazarist convent. On the site of the cottage in which he was born a small chapel was begun, but remains unfinished. Here is a miracle-working statue of the Virgin; the pilgrims halt to say their prayers under the oak-tree of St. Vincent.

The rly. approaches the bank of the Adour shortly before reaching

Dax Junct. Stat. (pronounced Daks) (Inns: Hôtel de l'Europe, in the Faubourg Sablar; H. Figaro, in the town; H. du Commerce), a town of 6000 Inhab., which lies on the l. bank of the Adour, about 1 m. from the stat. A handsome stone bridge connects it with the Faubourg of Sablar. Its name comes from its hot springs (de aquis), which are one of the curiosities of Guienne, and doubtless induced that bath-loving people the Romans to found here their settlement Aquæ Augustæ Tarbellicæ. They rise nearly in the centre of the town, and are received in a large square basin enclosed with porticoes, whence rise such clouds of steam as in a frosty morning to envelop all the town. The temperature is 212° Fah., a scalding heat. The water is nearly tasteless, and, though only partially used medicinally, is much employed by the washerwomen. The old fortifications, resembling Roman masonry, but said to be a mediæval imitation of it, existed more complete than anywhere else in France, probably in Europe. They enclose a nearly square area, measuring 440 yds. by 330, flanked by 40 semicircular towers, surrounded by a moat on all sides except the N.W., where flows the Adour. The demolition of this curious and perfect specimen of masonry was commenced by the barbarous townsmen in 1858. The Castle, a building of the 14th century, occupies the angle between the stone bridge and the old wooden bridge.

At St. Paul de Dax, 1½ m. distant, is a church of 15th centy., with a Romanesque apse of 12th centy., furnished with recessed seats for the chapter, covered with paintings.

The tertiary strata near Dax abound in fossil shells.

Railway. Dax to Pau, 50 Eng. m., and the Pyrenees (Rte. 78.)

The road beyond Dax quits the Landes and traverses numerous forests of cork-trees, which, being stripped of their flaky bark to stop bottles, have a singular effect from the dark brown colour of their naked trunks. A new skin speedily repairs the loss of the old.

The Pyrenean range now forms a grand feature in the landscape. They are not unlike some views of the Grampians, in which sharp peaks here and there surmount intervening round-backed hills: the most conspicuous and picturesque peaks seen from this are the Rhune in France, and the Quatre Couronnes in Spain.

The rly. approaches within 1 m. of the Adour, near its entrance into the sea, through moving sand-dunes, now confined by plantations of pine.

Boucaut Stat., a small town at the mouth of the Adour, furnishes pilots for entering the port.

The rly., ascending the rt. bank of the river, in view of the Allées Marines on the l. bank, passes under the walls the Citadel, the strongest of the military works, and not far from Le Cimetière Anglais, a simple enclosure between 4 walls, planted with trees, which contains the remains of many brave British soldiers and several officers of the Coldstream Guards, who fell in the sortie from Bayonne, April 14, 1814.

BAYONNE Stat., in the Faubourg St. Esprit, on the rt. bank of the Adour. —Inns: H. St. Etienne, good, civil hostess, fair cuisine à la carte—the servants are Basquaises, obliging and intelligent; H. St. Martin; *H. du Commerce, very fair; H. de l'Europe.

Bayonne is entered by the Faubourg of St. Esprit. The town itself is reached by a stone bridge over the Adour, and, after crossing the angular strip of land between the rivers, by a stone and iron bridge over the Nive (1857).

Bayonne (Pop. 19,178), a strong fortress of the first class, commanding the Passes of the W. Pyrenees, and one of the two high-roads leading from Spain into France, has an agreeable situation at the junction of the Nive with the Adour, and is divided into 3 parts by these fine broad rivers, which are lined with quays, and always include a small quantity of shipping. The suburb St. Esprit, on the rt. bank of the Adour, lies within the Dépt. des Landes, and alone includes 7000 Inhab. (more than the chief town of the dépt.), among whom are 2000 Jews, descendants of those expelled at different times from Spain. On an eminence rising above this suburb, just at the lower end of it and commanding with its batteries the town, both the rivers, and the plain to the N., rises the Citadel, the most formidable of the works laid out by Vauban, and greatly strengthened, especially since 1814, when it formed the key to an intrenched camp of Marshal Soult, and was invested by a detachment of the army of the Duke of Wellington, but not taken, the peace having put a stop to the siege after some bloody encounters. The last of these, a dreadful and useless expenditure of human life, took place after peace was declared, and the British forces put off their guard in consequence. They were thus entirely taken by surprise by a sally of the garrison, made early on the morning of April 14th; which, though repulsed, was attended with the loss of 830 men to the British, and by the capture of their commander, Sir John Hope, whose horse was shot under him, and himself wounded. The French attack was supported by the fire of their gunboats on the river, which opened indiscriminately on friend and foe. 910 of the French were killed. Admission to the citadel is obtained by a ticket from the commandant; but, except to a military man, it possesses nothing of interest. Steep approaches, resembling inclined planes, lead up to it, deep fosses surround it, nearly vertical walls, 40 feet high, and numerous bastions flank and enfilade every access to it; visitors are not allowed to mount the ramparts.

Bayonne Proper occupies the triangular space between the two rivers, and stretches for a considerable distance up the bank of the Nive, which is crossed by 3 bridges. Many of the streets have a half Spanish character from the piazzas running under the houses. The handsomest quarter of the town is that adjoining the theatre, consisting of fine tall houses—the Place d'Armes, Rue du Gouvernement, where are situated the chief hotels. Bayonne is afflicted with most foul and offensive stench.

The only building of consequence is the Cathedral, ugly externally, but within a fine lofty church in the best Pointed Gothic of the 14th centy., with choir and apse a centy. earlier, and transepts very short. The arms of England are still visible on its roof. The cloisters behind, in the florid style, nearly the largest in France, and the S.E. portal of the transept, deserve notice. From the top of its tower there is a good view of the distant Pyrenees, of the town, rivers, and citadel, and of the spot a little below it, at the extremity of the long avenue of trees, where a part of the British army under Sir John Hope crossed by a bridge of boats furnished from the fleet of Admiral Penrose, and transported with much difficulty over the bar, Feb. 23-27, 1814, in order to invest the citadel.

As some unjust accusations have been spread by French writers respecting the conduct of the Duke of Wellington's army in France, it may not be amiss to refute them by the unexceptionable testimony of one of their own writers, and an eye-witness, the late M. Vayse de Villiers, author of the Itinéraire de la France.

He traversed the theatre of the war only a few months after the occupation by the Duke of Wellington, and states that, so far from laying waste the country to a distance of a league around Bayonne, as a French writer had asserted, "Il avait établi une telle discipline qu'il était accueilli partout comme libérateur."—Route de Paris en Espagne, p. 91.

The Duke's own immortal Dispatches show with what severe discipline he prevented the troops, Spanish and English, under his command, imitating the cruel injuries which the French army had inflicted on Spain and other countries invaded by them.

The construction of the bridge over the Adour below Bayonne, and the passage of the Allies across it, display the genius of Wellington in conceiving, combining, and executing a measure deemed impossible by his opponents; and is styled by Colonel Napier "a stupendous undertaking, which will always rank among the prodigies of war." The impediments consisted in the breadth of the river, the rapidity of its current, the height to which the tide rises (14 feet), the difficulty of procuring and transporting the materials of the bridge: since, if sent by land, through bad and difficult roads, they must have alarmed the enemy; if by water, the bar, passable only at high water, and surf at the river's mouth, rendered the entrance of boats next to impossible. The latter measure, however, had been decided on by the Duke; and to effect this purpose a little flotilla of chassemarées had been prepared in the Spanish harbour of Passages. But the long prevalence of storms and contrary winds had rendered its approach impracticable; and the gallant Sir John Hope, to whom the execution of this measure had been intrusted by the Duke of Wellington, at last on the 23rd of February, 1814, began to push his troops across upon a raft attached to a hawser; and thus, in the teeth of a strong fortress and garrison of nearly 15,000 men, 600 men of the Guards gained the opposite bank; the French gunboats which guarded the river being silenced by rockets, three of them burnt, and a sloop of war driven up the river under the guns of Bayonne, while the same effective weapons kept the garrison at bay. Next morning, in spite of the tempestuous weather and the raging surf on the bar, which was so furious as to leave no strip of black water to point out the passage, without pilots, with no landmarks on the shore, the little fleet made for the mouth of the Adour. Each vessel had an engineer on board, and a supply of timber, cables, &c., and, aided by men of war's boats from the fleet, they boldly dashed into the midst of the breakers, blindly seeking the entrance. Several of the foremost, mastered by the wind and the waves, ran aground or were dashed ashore, and their crews perished. This did not deter the others, however; one more fortunate boat discovered the only safe channel, and the rest, following in its wake, gained smooth water within the bar—a glorious and gallant exploit. The 26 chassemarées thus introduced were moored head and stern by ropes stretched over the dykes which line the river at a spot where it is 800 ft. broad, at a distance of about 3 m. below Bayonne. Platforms of loose planks were laid between the boats, and the ropes were left slack, so as to allow the bridge to rise and fall with the tide; yet this seemingly frail structure was strong enough to bear the heaviest artillery, and it was finished by the 26th. This deep-laid scheme entirely foiled Marshal Soult, whose attention had been drawn off by the British general to an attack among the Gaves, the tributaries of the Adour high up the country, at the very moment when the passage of that river was effected close to the sea.

Bayonne is a town of commerce as well as of war, though its port is of comparatively small use, on account of the shifting bar at the mouth of the Adour, which can only be passed at high water, and not without danger at some seasons, though the employment of tug-steamers now diminishes the risk. In the 14th or 15th centy. the Adour changed its bed, owing to its mouth becoming obstructed by shifting sands or dunes blown up by the winds, and running N. parallel with the coast within this sand-wall, until it found an outlet either at Cape Breton or at Vieux Boucaut. This lasted down to 1579, when the engineer, Louis de Foix, restored it to its old channel, called Boucaut Neuf. In 1684, however, it broke a fresh channel for itself to the l., in the direction of the Chambre d'Amour, but was brought back again shortly after to the bed by which it still finds a passage to the ocean through a waste of sand-hills.

The commerce of Bayonne consists chiefly in Spanish wool, which is largely imported, and in an extensive smuggling trade carried on with that country.

Excellent chocolate and eau de vie are made here; but the Bayonne hams, so called because largely exported hence, are reared and cured among the Pyrenees, near Orthez and Pau. Some ships are built here.

From what has been said, it will be perceived that Bayonne has few sights to amuse the passing stranger. The well-supplied markets, abounding in fruit and vegetables, sold at the cheapest rates, are worth a visit; and these, or the promenades, will afford an opportunity of seeing the Bayonnaise ladies, who are remarkably pretty, as well as the Basquaise peasants, who are also distinguished by pretty faces and good figures, and contrast with the inhabitants of the Landes to the N. of Bayonne.

There is a Bull-Ring in the suburb St. Esprit, where, at certain seasons, the Spanish diversion of a bull-fight may be seen.

Those who desire a pleasant shady walk and fresh air should repair to the Allées Marines, an avenue of trees more than a m. long, on the l. bank of the Adour, below the town and opposite the citadel, reaching down almost to the bend of the river, near which the Duke threw his army across.

A little way outside the town is the dilapidated Château de Marrac, destroyed by fire in 1825 and gutted. It belonged to Napoleon, who here received the degraded sovereigns of Spain, Charles IV. and his queen, and her minion Godoy likewise. The Emperor also brought hither to meet them Ferdinand Prince of Asturias, whom, by false pretences, he had entrapped from Madrid in 1808: and in this château, under threat of death or imprisonment, they resigned to him their hereditary rights to the crown of Spain.

Bayonne was the capital of the ancient district, enclosed within the Adour and Bidassoa, called Pays de Labourd (from Lapurdum), by which it was known down to the 10th centy. The name Bayonne is merely the Basque Baia una, a port. The men of Bayonne were famed in early times as armourers (see Moreri). Hence comes the word Bayonnette, said to have been invented in this neighbourhood (see Rte. 77), and first made here. The gloomy old Castle opposite the Sous-Préfecture, now a barrack, was probably the residence of Catherine de Medicis when she dragged hither her weak son, Charles IX., to that secret conference with the Duke of Alva, in 1563, at which, it is now known, the massacre of the St. Bartholomew's night was suggested and decided on. Yet Bayonne has the rare credit of refusing to execute the bloody orders of Charles IX. to slay all the Protestants in the town, owing to the firmness of the governor, Dapremont, Vicomte d'Orthez, who told the king that the town of Bayonne included only good citizens and brave soldiers, but not a single executioner.

The chief place of resort for the inhab. of Bayonne out of the town is the little watering-place of Biarritz, described in Rte. 77. Railway, omnibus, or chars-à-bancs, &c. The route thither may be varied by driving through the Allées Marines and the pine-wood.

Cambo, in the vale of Nive, is also a pretty watering-place, with mineral baths. Inn: H. des Etrangers.

A short but interesting excursion into Spain may be made by rail to St. Sebastian, 35 m. See HANDBOOK FOR SPAIN.

A British Consul resides at Bayonne (Captain Graham).

In the inns at Bayonne will be found hung up advertisements of approaching Bull Fights, to be held at Vittoria, Tolosa, Saragossa, and other places in the N. of Spain, in the vicinity of the French frontier. Bull-fights sometimes take place at Bayonne itself.

Railway—to Paris in 18 hrs.; to Pau by Orthez; to Madrid by Irun and St. Sebastian, in about 26 hrs.

At the village of Anglet is an Orphan Asylum and Refuge, tended by nuns (Servantes de Marie). Ladies' work of all sorts is executed by the inmates. Not far off is a Bernardine convent.

See HANDBOOK FOR SPAIN.

ROUTE 77.

BAYONNE TO BIARRITZ, ST. JEAN DE LUZ, AND IRUN.—RAIL.

Railway to Biarritz, St. Jean de Luz (20 kil.), and Irun (38 kil.). 3 trains daily in 1½ hr.

The Southern Road quits Bayonne by the Porte d'Espagne, through which Napoleon poured so many gallant armies in succession into the Peninsula. The country is hilly the whole way to the frontier; see from time to time glimpses of the sea on the rt. You pass a number of country-houses, amongst which, at a little distance on the l., stands the Château de Marrac (Rte. 76).

Biarritz Stat. (Inns: *H. de France, clean and comfortable; H. Grande Maison, same landlord, terms high, but best situation; Casino Hotel, no table-d'hôte; H. des Ambassadeurs, best table-d'hôte; H. d'Angleterre, moderate.)

This once secluded watering-place, about 5 m. from Bayonne, has risen into fame and fashion and is increasing in size (Pop. 2410) since it has been honoured as the sea-side residence of the Imperial family. It consists of groups of whitewashed lodging-houses, cafés, inns, traiteurs, cottages, &c., scattered over rolling eminences and hollows bare of trees, on the sea-shore, here fenced with cliffs 40 or 50 feet high, excavated by the waves into numberless quiet coves and curious caverns. In these the sea at times roars and chafes, perforating the rock with holes, and undermining huge masses, which are detached from time to time; and some of them, left like islands at some distance from the shore, still project above the waves. From the tops of these cliffs, especially that which bears the ruins of an old fort or lighthouse, you look over the wide expanse of the Bay of Biscay, bounded on the rt. by the French coast, on which rises the Phare, showing the way into the mouth of the Adour; and on the l. by the shore of Spain beyond St. Sebastian, with peaks of distant Sierras rising behind it. The limpid purity of the sea and the smoothness of the sand render bathing in the sheltered bays most agreeable, the chief resort being the Port Vieux. French ladies and gentlemen "en toilette de bain" consume hours in aquatic promenades. The ladies may be seen floating about like mermaids, being supported on bladders, corks, or gourds, attired in woollen trousers covering the feet, and overshadowed by broad-brimmed hats. The geologist will be interested to recognise in the rocks of Biarritz the fossils of the lower chalk and greensand, though the rock here assumes an external character very different from that we are accustomed to in England. Omnibuses and chars-à-banc are constantly plying between the baths and the Porte d'Espagne of Bayonne. The ancient mode of conveyance hither, which is peculiar to the spot, but is now becoming obsolete, was to ride "en cacolet." In this mode of conveyance, the rider, seated on one side of a hack, in a wooden frame fitting to a horse's back, as a pair of spectacles does to a human nose, occupies the place of a pannier on one side of an ass's back, while his conductor, usually a stout and buxom lass, fills the opposite division, and by her weight the balance is preserved. Some little skill is required in mounting, for, unless both parties jump into their seats at the same moment, he who reaches it prematurely runs the risk of destroying the equipoise and of being capsized into the dust, and the same in dismounting. It is chiefly peasants and market-women, now-a-days, who ride en cacolet. Close to the shore, on a terrace beaten by the waves, is the Villa Eugénie, built by Louis Napoleon as a marine residence for the empress, who was a constant visitor here while simple Madlle. Montijo. It is a plain brick mansion, constructed of English bricks, which have cost, it is said, at the rate of 6*d.* apiece. It is nevertheless but "a modest mansion;" small, and standing close to the sea.

An English Church was built here 1860. Service is performed by a clergyman of the Ch. of England.

Dr. Charles Girdlestone and Dr. Chapman, of the University of Edinburgh, practise here. Dr. Taylor, of Pau, is here during the autumn.

There is a casino with café and reading-room.

Excursions to Cambo, Roland's Pass, the Cavern of Ustaritz, Hasparren.

Those who wish to see a real Spanish town may make the excursion to Fuentarabia by taking the rly. to Irun, whence it is a walk of  $\frac{1}{2}$  an hour.

There are 3 lines of custom-houses on the road from Bayonne to the Spanish frontier. The 3rd, or innermost, is not more than 5 m. from Bayonne.

Guéthary Stat.

We now enter the Pays Basques, inhabited by that peculiar race who speak a language having no relation with any other in Europe. They occupy in France only a small part of the S.W. corner of the Dépt. des Basses Pyrénées, but are much more widely disseminated in Spain, where they form the mass of the population of 5 provinces. The French and Spanish Basques are distinguished by their speech, and also by their costume, consisting of the red beret, a cap resembling that of the lowland shepherd in Scotland, a red sash round the waist, and sandals made of hemp, called Espartillas, on the feet, and a stout stick in the hand. They are supposed to be the descendants of the "Cantabrum indoctum ferre jugam nostram," who sided with Hannibal in opposing the Romans, who contributed mainly to the defeat of Charlemagne and Roland in the pass of Roncesvaux, and whose boast is that they were never conquered. In France they are confined to portions of the arrondissements of Bayonne and Mauléon, which formed part of the ancient kingdom of Navarre.

St. Jean de Luz Stat.—Inns: H. de France, very good; Poste; St. Etienne. A frontier town of France, at the mouth of the Nivelle, where it falls into a small creek or bay, over which a bridge has been thrown. The inroads of the sea for some time past have washed away parts of the town, breaking through the dykes thrown up to protect it, and the shifting sands at the mouth of the Nivelle have almost entirely blocked up its port. The town is distinguished by its narrow street and whitewashed houses, some of considerable antiquity. Here is the 2nd Douane. The suburb on the l. bank of the river is called Sibourre. The marriage of Louis XIV. with Maria Theresa, Infanta of Spain, was celebrated here 1660, in the church. In honour of the event the magistrates walled up the door by which the bridal pair entered, and it remains so to this day! The houses which they occupied are still pointed out.

In Nov. 1813, the British army, under the Duke of Wellington, crossed the Nivelle close to this town, after attacking and carrying the very strong intrenched position occupied by the French army upon the heights on the l. bank of the river.

The forms of the mountains are picturesque, especially of that called Montagne de la Rhune, rising above Urugne, which is visible even on the other side of Bayonne. Before reaching this point the traveller finds, contrary probably to what he could have expected from books, that the mountain chain of the Pyrenees by no means terminate in France, but stretches W. in lofty ridges and bare peaks tossed about in wild confusion, traversing Spain to its farther corner, and ending in Cape Ortegal in the Asturias.

Hendaye Stat., on the rt. bank of the Bidassoa, here crossed by a viaduct opposite to Fuentarabia.

The French frontier custom-house is at Behobia, a small village (Inn: H. de la Bidassoa), on the rt. bank of the Bidassoa, which here separates France from Spain. The baggage of travellers entering France is strictly searched; and after it has undergone the process, they will do well to have it plombed, to save themselves from a repetition of the same twice between this and Bayonne. 10 sous is the charge for plombing each package.

The wild and lofty mountains around and behind Behobia, called Montagne Verte and Mendele, now so solitary, were strongly fortified by Marshal Soult in 1813, to defend the Passage of the Bidassoa, which the Duke of Wellington effected nevertheless, in the face and in spite of them. In the course of several months preceding, intrenchment behind intrenchment had been thrown up by the French; every weak point had been strengthened, and the whole line of slopes and precipices, from the sea to the Rhune mountain, bristled with ramparts and batteries, defending the fords of the river; the bridge of Behobia being then broken down.

From the middle of the existing wooden bridge, which unites France to Spain, the stranger looking up the stream will perceive the green knoll or mamelon of St. Marcial; on this a strong battery was planted by the Allies, which covered the passage, by the ford higher up, of one division, consisting of Spaniards, under Gen. Freire, who won from the French the heights of Mendele. The most formidable part of the French position was the Montagne d'Arrhune, not only from its elevation, steepness, and tremendous precipices, but from the redoubts, intrenchments, abattis, &c., thrown up on it, wherever there appeared the least facility of approach, and from the strong body of troops who held every commanding point, sweeping the slopes and ravines with their cannon and musketry. The Duke of Wellington employed nearly 20,000 men in the attack of this mountain, which was gained, as it were, inch by inch, the enemy being driven from one work after another up to the very summit, where they occupied a rocky height called the Hermitage. This was nearly impregnable, and they defended it for some time merely by rolling down stones upon their assailants. The bones of many a brave man are probably even now whitening among the dells and clefts of that rugged mountain: many who were wounded were left to perish where they fell, from the difficulty of discovering them among these vast solitudes.

A lower ridge, or projecting buttress, of the Montagne d'Arrhune, is called La Bayonnette, from that weapon of war, invented extemporaneously, it is said, on this spot, by a Basque regiment, who, having run short of ammunition, assaulted the Spaniards opposed to them by sticking the long knives which the Basques commonly carry into the barrels of their muskets, and thus charging the enemy. This must have occurred some time in the 16th or early in the 17th century. The ridge of the Bayonnette was stormed and carried by the Allies 1813, before they gained the Arrhune.

Behind St. Marcial opens out the Valley of the Bastan, the cradle of the Bidassoa. Close below the bridge of Behobia is a little island, reduced by the washing of the current to a narrow strip of earth, tufted with grass and willows. This is the historically celebrated Ile des Faisans, on which the conferences were held between the French Minister Mazarin and the Spanish Don Louis de Haro, which led to the famous treaty of the Pyrenees, 1659, and the marriage of Louis XIV. with the daughter of Philip IV. Each party advanced from its own territory, by a temporary bridge, to this little bit of neutral ground, which then reached nearly up to the bridge. The piles which supported the Cardinal's pavilion were visible not many years ago. The death of Velasquez, the painter, was caused by his exertions in superintending these constructions; duties more fitting to an upholsterer than an artist.

The Bidassoa forms the line of demarcation between the two kingdoms only for about 12 m.: it enters the sea about 5 m. below Behobia, between Hendaye on the French side, and the picturesque and interesting ancient walled town of Fuentarabia (accent on the i) on the Spanish, after passing near

9 Irun, first Spanish station and town. (See HANDBOOK FOR SPAIN.)

Between Irun and Fuentarabia are the 3 fords discovered by the Duke of Wellington, on the information of Spanish fishermen, by which he carried one division of his army across, and, gaining the first permanent footing in the French territory, turned the rt. of the French position, and the strongly defended heights near Andaye (once famed for distilling brandy). These fords were practicable only at certain states of the tide, and for 3 or 4 hours, being covered by the sea, to a depth of 14 ft., at high water. Soult was therefore perfectly unprepared for an attempt to cross at this point, and his troops were deceived by the tents of the British camp being left standing as though still occupied. At the close of a fierce thunder-storm, early on the morning of Oct. 17, the allied army, formed into 7 columns behind banks and ridges, issued forth at a given signal, and winding slowly, like snakes, across the broad sands, effected the passage before the enemy became aware of their intention.

Passing rt. Passages and its singular land-locked harbour, the rly. reaches a strong fortress, since modern artillery commands its sea-girt citadel from the surrounding heights. Ascend the citadel for the sake of the view, sea and landwards.

St. Sebastian Stot. (Inns: Parador Real, best; Sant' Isabel), no longer

ington in the critical moment of pursuit contributed to save the French from greater loss. They attribute their defeat to a superiority of force on the side of the Allies, but the impartial estimate of Col. Napier sets down the numbers of Soult's army at 40,000 (including 4000 or 5000 raw conscripts), and that of the Duke at 37,000. The British cavalry outnumbered that of the enemy by 1000. The French lost nearly 4000 men killed, wounded, and prisoners; the Allies, 2300.

46 Orthez Stat. (pronounced Ortez) (Inns: H. La Belle Hôtesse; H. Bergerot—all poor) is a somewhat dull town of 7000 Inhab., though situated at the junction of 6 roads,—to Spain, by St. Jean Pied de Port, to Dax, to Bordeaux, to Oloron, to Pau, and to Bayonne. It has a modern bridge of a single arch, and an old Gothic Bridge of 4 arches, which resisted the attempts of the French to mine it and blow it up, surmounted in the centre by a tower from which, according to tradition, the Calvinist soldiers of the army of the Comte de Montgomery, after taking the town by assault, 1569, and putting to the sword most of its defenders, precipitated into the river the Roman Catholic priests who were found with arms in their hands, and who refused to abjure their religion. Jeanne d'Albret, Queen of Navarre, mother of Henri IV., established here a Protestant College. The little Inn La Belle Hôtesse was Froissart's "La Lune."

Orthez was once a place of greater importance, as residence of the Princes of Béarn down to the end of the 15th centy., when they removed to Pau. The Castle de Moncada, built by Gaston de Foix, IV., 1240, after the pattern of a Spanish castle of that name, is reduced to a few ruined walls, overtopped by one stately tower, left to attest its former splendour, on a height above the town. It is mentioned by Froissart, who paid a visit to Gaston Phœbus Comte de Foix, 1388, and was received into the household, in order to obtain, from the Count's own mouth, information for his history respecting the wars in Gascony and Spain. He describes the death of Gaston de Foix,

ROUTE 78.

DAX TO PAU, BY ORTHEZ—RAIL.

Dax.	Miles.
Orthez . . . . .	25
Pau . . . . .	51

Dax on the Bordeaux and Bayonne Rly. (Rte. 76.)

To Pau, 83 kilom. = 51 Eng. m.; 3 trains daily, 2½ and 3½ hrs. There is nothing remarkable between Dax and 31 Puyoo Stat., a rivulet which anciently formed the boundary-line between the kingdoms of France and Navarre.

The fertility of the plain, the abundant watercourses, the luxuriant festoons of the vines, and the magnificent views of the Pyrenean range, give some interest to this portion of the route. At Berenz, Sir Stapylton Cotton's division of cavalry, and Picton's 3rd brigade, crossed the Gave before the Battle of Orthez. That victory was achieved, Feb. 27, 1814, by driving the French from a very strong position on the heights above Orthez, extending from the town to the high road to Dax and the village of Boés. The retreat of the enemy ended in a flight, and they were pursued by the British, the same night, as far as Sault de Navailles. A wound received by the Duke of Well-at the neighbouring village of Riou, on his return from hunting the bear, and the celebration of his funeral in the Church of the Cordeliers at Orthez, where he was buried in front of the grand altar. The Castle of Orthez was the scene of unparalleled crimes during the life of the brutal Gaston Phœbus, who filled its dungeons with the victims of his unbridled passion; among them his own kinsman, the Viscomte de Châteaubon, Pierre Arnaut, the faithful governor of Lourdes, who, because he refused to betray his trust and surrender the fortress, was stabbed by Gaston's own hand, and thrust into a dungeon to perish; and, finally, his own son and only child, whom he killed with his knife, in the dark cell into which he had caused him to be thrust.

The very picturesque Pic du Midi d'Ossau is visible near this.

Artix Stat.

Lescar Stat. The curious old and decayed town Lescar, supposed by some to be the ancient Beneharnum, whence the district of which it was originally the capital was called Béarn. The town was sacked and ruined during the wars of Religion, 1569, by the troops of the Comte de Montgomery. On a detached eminence, rising above the town, stand the Castle, of brick, and the Ch. of Notre Dame, a decayed edifice of the 12th cent., partly in the Romanesque style, retaining fragments of mosaic pavement under the flooring. The early princes of Béarn, including Henri d'Albret, grandfather of Henri IV., and his wife, the Marguerite des Marguerites, were buried in it; but their tombs were destroyed either by the Huguenots or the Revolutionists. There is a fine view of the mountains from the cathedral terrace.

The Jesuits' College, founded here by Henri IV. after his conversion, has been turned into a manufactory.

Still nearer to Pau, on the l. of the road, is Bilhère, where Henri was nursed by a peasant, whose humble dwelling is still preserved and pointed out with some pride to strangers. The eminence rising on the opposite bank of the Gave, its slopes covered with verdure and vineyards, is the Côte de Ju- rançon, which produces the best of all the Pyrenean wines.

The road, before entering Pau, skirts the woody ridge which forms its beautiful Parc; and which, intervening between the river and the road, conceals the view of the mountains.

PAU STATION.

PAU.—(Inns: H. de France, at the corner of the Place Royale; very good, attentive and civil landlord;—La Poste, Place de Henri IV.;—H. de l'Europe, Rue de la Préfecture, improved;—H. de Daurade, ditto.) Good lodgings may be had at the Bains de la Place Royale, but apply at Bureau Syndical. The charges for board and lodging are higher in winter than in summer. Try here the white wine of Jurançon, which, when good, deserves commendation, but it is very strong.

Pau, ancient capital of the little kingdom of French Navarre and Béarn, now chef-lieu of the Dépt. des Basses Pyrénées, stands on a lofty ridge, forming the rt. bank of the river, or Gave de Pau, and has 15,171 Inhab. Its situation is perhaps scarcely surpassed by that of any town in France, if we consider the magnificent view over the chain of the W. Pyrenees, which expands in front of it. The English have shown their good taste in having chosen it for their residence, especially in winter. The View, reminding one somewhat of that from the platform at Berne, though far inferior to it, is well seen either from the Castle and its terrace, or from the extremity of the oblong, formal, gravelly promenade near the centre of the town, called the Place Royale, or from the Parc. This Parc is a fine natural terrace, running along the rt. bank of the Gave, thickly covered, on its top and sides, with noble trees, affording a grateful shade in the heat of the day, and provided with seats wherever, through gaps in the foliage, the different parts of the view appear to advantage. This spot formed part of the domain anciently attached to the old castle, and a communication between the castle and the Parc, through a formal square planted with rows of trees, called Plante, has been established by a handsome bridge of two arches, thrown over the high road.

The range of the Pyrenees, as seen from Pau, presents a strikingly beautiful and varied outline of peaks, cones, and ridges, often cut like a saw, rising against the S. horizon. Among the mass of summits, and precipices, and bold forms, are two pre-eminent from their elevation and shape—the Pic du Midi de Pau to the W., a peak with sides nearly vertical and cloven crest, rising at the extremity of the beautiful Val d'Ossau; and to the E., the Pic du Midi de Bigorre. These members of the great central range are disclosed to view through the gaps of a subordinate chain of round-backed and wooded hills forming the middle distance; while in the foreground appear the venerable Castle of Pau, the torrent, or Gave, its banks beautifully fringed with trees, the picturesque bridge, and the ruins of another bridge destroyed by its inundations. Within the scope of this view appear Jurançon, a village famed for its wines, and Billère, where Henri IV. was nursed. It is a glorious prospect, to be dwelt upon and seen over and over again.

Pau owes its chief renown to its having been the birthplace of the "Bon Roi" Henri IV., who drew his first breath (Dec. 13, 1553) in its ancient, time-honoured, historic Castle, the most conspicuous and interesting building in the town. It stands statelily upon the ridge above mentioned, overlooking the river and bridge, at the point of a sort of promontory formed by a small rivulet which cuts its way through the town, and behind the castle walls at the bottom of a deep ravine, to throw itself into the Gave, just below it. The five towers of the Castle, and the outer wall which unites them, and serves to support the upper stories, are the oldest part, and supposed to date from the time of Gaston Phœbus Comte de Foix, who founded the castle about 1363. The tallest tower, or Donjon, named after Gaston, rising at the E. end to a height of 115 ft., is of brick, furnished with loopholes. The windows have been stopped up in modern times. A copy of the contract for erecting it (dated 1375) still exists, and in it the Count himself engages to furnish the bricks from the Tuileries de Pau. In the gutted and half-ruined Tour de la Monnoye, rising on the side of the castle next the river, from the bottom of the eminence on which it stands, to a level with the terrace, Margaret de Valois, it is said, gave an asylum to Calvin and other persecuted Reformers, and took great delight in listening to their discourse, although she never actually abandoned the Roman Catholic faith. This tradition, however, requires confirmation. The tower was used as a gaol until the Restoration (1814). The little oblong courtyard of the castle is destitute of architectural beauty; but the Tour de Montauzet, on one side of it, contained, according to popular belief, the oubliettes. It is about 80 ft. high, and its walls, to a height of 40 ft., were originally destitute of any opening, the gate at the bottom having been broken through in 1793, when the castle was sacked and despoiled by the Revolutionists. It stands within, and detached from, the outer wall of the castle, from which a small drawbridge, thrown over the gap, gave access to it through a little door. Within the thickness of its walls 7 or 8 confined dungeons exist, lighted by very small apertures, barred. The upper story only is provided with a window, looking into the court, and with a fireplace. Its wall, on the side of the court, is spotted with the marks of the shot fired by the Biscayans when they assaulted the castle during the troubles or civil wars in Béarn (1569), in the absence of Jeanne de Navarre.

Opposite the tower of Montauzet is the grand staircase, the vaulting of which, divided into squares, contains rich carvings, among which may be observed the letters H. M., the initials of Henri II. of Navarre and Margaret, the grand-parents of Henri IV., by whom it was built. The entire restoration of the interior was undertaken by Louis-Philippe, with very good taste and splendour. The King revived, as far as possible, the ancient decorations, injured by the Revolutionists, who first stripped and ruined this ancient palace, and then degraded it to a barrack, and he replaced those which they destroyed by others as far as possible in accordance with the age and style of the edifice. The walls of the chief apartments have been covered with tapestry, and the rooms filled with ancient furniture of the period, collected at vast expense.

In an apartment on the first floor is preserved a very interesting relic—the **cradle* in which Henri IV. was rocked, consisting of a large tortoise-shell, inverted and suspended by cords, like the scale of a balance. It is at present surmounted by a trophy of flags, embroidered by the Duchesse d'Angoulême, the staves of which serve to support it. When the castle was sacked in 1793 by the Republicans, bent on destroying all traces of royalty, they would certainly not have spared this; but, luckily, another tortoise-shell was substituted in its place, which was broken and burnt with every insult. The persons who preserved the original shell were M. d'Espalunge d'Arros, commandant of the castle, who devised the pious fraud; M. Beauregard, the possessor of a collection of natural history, who exchanged a tortoise-shell of the same size for the cradle, which he afterwards concealed for many years in the roof of his house; and M. Lamoignon, concierge of the castle, who, at great risk, conveyed away the true cradle, and substituted the false in its place. A contemporary statue of Henri IV., preserved here, represents him leaning on his truncheon, after the battle of Ivry; it has little merit as a work of art. In front of the state apartments projects a balcony, commanding a view of the chain of the Pyrenees unsurpassed for its beauty. In the second story of the castle, in the room adjoining the Tour de Mazères in the S.W. corner, Henri IV. was born. Here his venerable grandfather, Henri d'Albret, taking in his arms the new-born infant, after his lips had been rubbed with garlic, according to the custom of Béarn, poured down his throat some drops of Jurançon wine, the best which the country affords, to give him a strong constitution! On the day of Henri's death, in 1610, there is a tradition that the castle was struck by lightning, which broke in pieces the royal escutcheon! Jeanne d'Albret was also born in the castle, 1528. It was alternately the prison of Reformers and Romanists during the religious wars and troubles of Béarn; and was the refuge of Theodore Beza and other Protestant teachers whom Jeanne de Navarre protected from persecution.

Among the costly and curious articles of old-fashioned furniture collected by Louis-Philippe to decorate the castle, and restore it to its ancient splendour, may be mentioned the bed, in the chambre-à-coucher du Roi, said to be that of Henri IV.; it is curiously carved with medallion heads of the kings of France: in an adjoining room is the bed of Jeanne d'Albret, and a state chair, richly carved, bearing her arms, presented by Marshal Soult. The chapel has been newly fitted up, and has a painted window of Sèvres glass. The apartment leading to it contains some magnificent presents made by the late King of Sweden to the town of Pau, his birthplace. They consist of vases of porphyry of large size, superb tables of various kinds of porphyry, conglomerate, &c., and a chimney-piece of serpentine, all the produce of Sweden, and of great value and beauty.

The moat and the ground round the castle have been laid out in pleasant walks.

Bernadotte, King of Sweden, son of a poor saddler in Pau, was born in a house Rue de Tran, No. 6. He quitted his native town, 1780, as a drummer boy in the Régiment Royal de la Marine. Some of his relations still remain in very humble situations in the neighbourhood.

It is a somewhat remarkable coincidence, that of the two most eminent men and sovereigns who first drew breath at Pau, the one abandoned the Protestant faith, the other the Roman Catholic, in order to secure a throne.

The low ugly Ch. of St. Martin is only remarkable because in it Jeanne d'Albret, the most sagacious and accomplished princess of her age, after our Elizabeth, first received the communion according to the form of the Reformed church, on Easter-day, 1560. Viret, the Reformer, preached from its pulpit.

A Statue of Henri IV. has been set up in the Place Royale; the bas-reliefs on the pedestal represent events of his life.

The College, at the E. end of the town, was originally a convent of Barnabites, founded by Henri IV., after he had abandoned the faith of his mother, in order to conciliate the Roman Catholics.

The Poste aux Lettres adjoins the Prefecture, where is deposited a very curious collection of old records, deeds, &c., relating to the ancient state and history of Béarn, including the Fors (fueros, privileges) of Béarn; autographs of its most illustrious Béarnois sovereigns, and a list of the contributions collected in Béarn towards the ransom of Francis I. from captivity.

There are Hot Baths (for 75 c.) at the extremity of the Place Royale and also in the Basse Plante.

There is a Musée devoted chiefly to the natural history of the Pyrenees, above the Halle, where the markets are held. There is a collection of marbles of the Pyrenees, and a picture, by Deveria, of the birth of Henri IV.

The town of Pau in itself is not very handsome or remarkable. Its chief street is the Rue de la Préfecture, which on market-days presents a bustling scene; here are the chief shops, such as they are.

Many English, as before observed, make Pau their residence, chiefly for the winter months, when its mild and dry climate, and the stillness of atmosphere peculiar to it, are a great recommendation.

Pau has been greatly resorted to of late by the wealthy Parisians also; good houses are consequently difficult to procure, and though provisions are cheap, house-rent is enormously high; a moderately good suite of apartments costs more than a similar set at Paris. A number of new houses have been built. Strangers may receive, gratis, all kinds of information about lodgings, servants, &c., at the Bureau Syndical, 14, Rue Serviez.

There are 2 Protestant Churches—one in the Rue des Cordeliers. The English Church service is performed in them every Sunday by resident clergymen at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. There is also a Scotch Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Church acts as H.B.M.'s vice-consul and English banker.

A Circulating Library of English and French books is kept by Lafon, Rue Henri IV., an intelligent and respectable bookseller, whose shop is a Bureau de Renseignements, very useful to strangers. Bassy's shop, Rue du Collège, is furnished with prints, views, &c. Here may be obtained Maxwell Lyte's admirable Photographic views of the Pyrenees.

A pack of hounds is kept up by subscription, for hunting during the season.

Railways to Toulouse (Montrejean); to Auch and Agen, to Dax, Bayonne, and Paris. Diligences daily: to Aire Stat. 35 m. in 5 hrs., on the way to Bordeaux; to Barèges, Luz, and Caunterets; to Bagnères de Bigorre, 36 m.; to Tarbes; to Oloron in 3 hrs.; to Eaux-Bonnes in 6 hrs.

Commerce.—From the swine reared near this and at Orthez are derived the so-called Jambons de Bayonne; they are said to owe their excellent flavour to the abundance of acorns in the woods where the swine are herded, and to the salt of Salies with which they are cured. There is a considerable manufacture of chequered handkerchiefs here.

EXCURSIONS.

a. Pau, situated at the termination of the plain, and at the roots of the Pyrenees, is excellent head-quarters for travellers intending to explore those mountains and the valleys which penetrate into their recesses. Of these, no one surpasses in beauty of scenery the Val d'Ossau, which opens out to the S. immediately in front of Pau, and terminates in the magnificent Pic du Midi d'Ossau. A carriage and pair of horses may be hired for this journey to the Baths at the rate of 20 frs. a day.

For the excursion to Eaux-Chaudes and Eaux-Bonnes, about 26 m. distant, situated at the head of the valley of Ossau, near the base of the Pic, see Rte. 83.

b. To the Val d'Aspe, in Rte. 82.

c. The Ch. of Ste. Foi, at Morlaas, 6 m. N.E., in the Romanesque style of the 11th centy., is interesting, but much dilapidated. It has a splendid W. portal with much carving (12th cent.), and a rich chapel containing an altar-piece of the 16th cent. Morlaas was capital of Béarn down to the 13th cent.; it is now a village of hovels.

d. Lescar, an antiquated town, 4 m., and Bilhère, 1 m., where Henri IV. was nursed, are mentioned in Rte. 78.

Cauterets is about 45 m., and Bag-nères de Bigorre 36 m., from Pau (Rte. 85).

ROUTE 79.

PERIGUEUX TO TARBES, BY AGEN AND AUCH.

Railway to Agen, 152 kil. =
Eng. m. Rly. in progress thence to Tarbes.

Niversac Stat.

Versannes Stat. La Gélise Stat.

La Bugue Stat. Le Buisson Stat.

Siorac Stat.

Belvès Stat.

Le Got Stat. Villefranche Stat.

Monsemprone-Lebos Stat.

Trentels Ladignac Stat.

Port de Penne Stat. Pont du Casse
Stat.

[France.]

Agen Junct. Stat., in Rte. 78.

Rly. from Agen to Auch in progress.

To the W. of the road lies Nérac (Inn.: Tertres; famous for its pâtés, or terrines de perdrix), a town of 7090 Inhab., pleasingly situated on the Baise, once capital of the duchy d'Albret. It was an ancient possession of the family d'Albret, who built and resided in the venerable Castle, which remained nearly entire down to the Revolution, but is now demolished, excepting one wing, and its fosses turned into gardens. Yet even this fragment is interesting, because within its walls Marguerite d'Angoulême, Queen of Navarre, held her court, assembling around her the men most distinguished by learning and literary genius of the time; among others, Calvin, Beza, Clement Marot, here found an asylum from persecution down to 1534. At a later period, the "Bon Roi Henri," whose mother resided in the castle to within four months of his birth, passed here a portion of his youth. His chamber is pointed out at the W. end of the building. Here, in 1579, Catherine de Medicis held a conference.

The promenade called La Garenne was once the park of the kings of Navarre, planted by Marguerite de Valois. A bronze statue of Henri IV. has been erected to his memory by a private individual, inscribed "Alumno, mox Patri Nostro Ho. IV."

The Fontaine de St. Jean is overshadowed by 2 elms, planted by Henri IV. and Marguerite de Valois.

Corks are manufactured here for the wine-merchants of Bordeaux.

We enter the Dépt. de Gers before reaching

Condom (Inns.: Cheval Blanc; Lion d'Or), a town of 7144 Inhab., and of considerable trade. It has a handsome Gothic Ch.

Castéra Verduzan. Near this village are mineral springs, one sulphureous, the other chalybeate, and baths.

Lectoure, a town of 6200 Inhab., is the native place of Marshal Lannes, to whom a Statue has been erected.

Auoc (Inns.: H. de France; best, and very good), the chef-lieu of the Dépt. du Gers, a town of 12,000 in the face of the cliff, explain, to those who are prepared for it, the nature of this outpost of France, which is the work of 10 years of excavating, and is capable of holding a garrison of 3000 men. Access is gained to it through a lateral gorge, after clearing which the road is carried in zigzags to the edge of a precipice, connected by a draw-bridge spanning the abyss, with the rock on which the fort stands.

17 Urds (tolerable little Inn), a poor village of 300 Inhab.

[Excursion to the Lac d'Estaes, on a plateau about 6000 ft. above the sea, overhung by grand mountains called Pic d'Aspe.]

La Fonderie is a copper-smelting furnace, supplied with ore from the neighbouring rocks. Here the carriage-road ceases.

11 Paillette (small Inn) is the last place in France, near the summit of the pass called the Col de Somport, and the frontier of Spain. The journey hence, as far as Jaca (32 m. from Urds), must be performed on mules. Very fine scenery on the descent to 11 Canfranc, a whitewashed village, with a poor Inn. The highest summits in this part of the chain belong to Spain: 1. rises the fine mass called Peña Colorada.

A voiture may be hired at Pau for the journey at the rate of 20 fr. a day: 30 fr. is the outside to Eaux-Chaudes.

The road is very good, but up hill most of the way. For those who travel only in carriages it leads into a cul-de-sac; and to prosecute their journey to other parts of the Pyrenees they must return nearly to Pau.

After crossing the bridge over the Gave du Pau, the village of Jurançon, distinguished by its groves of fine oaks, is passed on the rt.; it is famed for its wine, perhaps the best grown in the Pyrenees. The vineyards producing it extend along the slopes from this to Gan. One of the houses near the road was occupied for many years by Lord Elgin, when released from the dungeons of Lourdes by Napoleon, as prisoner on his parole. The well-wooded, verdant, shady valley, up which the road runs, is watered by the Nééz, or Neiss, a clear stream rushing over the limestone rocks, whose slaty foliations, crossing the direction of its current, resemble a flight of steps. At the village of Gan, on the l., also locally famous for its wines, is seen an old castellated house, in which Pierre Marca, the historian of Béarn and Archbishop of Paris, was born 1594. Here the road to Oloron (Rte. 82) turns to the rt. Above Rébénac rises its château on a hillock; and a little beyond, on the l., the copious source of the Neiss bursts out of the rock. A long and toilsome ascent leads up to the village of Sévignac, situated on the top of the ridge separating the Neiss and other streams flowing into the Gave de Pau from the tributaries of the Gave d'Oloron, flowing out of the Val d'Ossau, which we now enter. It here expands into the form of a basin, round which the Gave takes a wide turn, passing by the village of Arudy. In descending the wooded slope from Sévignac, several glimpses are afforded of the Pic du Midi d'Ossau, a grand object; but near the bottom of the hill, and as far as the Pont de Louvie, his cleft crest and precipitous cone appear in full majesty, filling up the vista at the extremity of the Val d'Ossau. This is a magnificent view on a clear day, and

ROUTE 83.

PAU TO EAUX-BONNES AND EAUX-CHAUDS.—PIC DU MIDI D'OSSAU.

41 kilom. = 26 Eng. m. to The Eaux. Several diligences go daily from June to middle of Sept. in 6 hrs., returning in about 4 hrs.; very slow.

in advancing up the valley it is soon lost. Rocks and precipices of limestone now line the road, which is partly cut out of them. On their smooth surface, or in their narrow chinks, the box delights to fix itself. They furnish the slabs of black and grey marble with which the door-posts and lintels of even the humblest cottages are here adorned. The Gave d'Ossau is crossed at the end of the village of 27 Louvie. Here the road from Oloron (Rte. 82) to Les Eaux falls in, at the H. des Pyrénées, at the end of the bridge; also a road by Lestelle and Bruges to Lourdes and Cauterets.

The great transverse Val d'Ossau, which we are now about to ascend, and in which the Eaux are situated, is one of the most interesting among the Pyrenees, for its picturesque beauties, and for the people who inhabit it. They still retain much of their ancient customs and costumes. The women are distinguished by the scarlet capulet, a sort of monk's hood, serving at once for bonnet and shawl, descending as far as the shoulders. Whether sitting or walking, and even when carrying burthens on the head, the spindle and distaff are never out of their hands. They are inferior in stature and features to the men, which may perhaps be owing to the hard and unfeminine labours which devolve upon them; it is common to see them holding the plough, and carrying sacks of manure on their heads, or spreading it over the land. The men, however, are not idle; they are absent on the high mountain pastures tending their flocks and herds, or following the hardy trade of wood-cutters and charcoal-burners a great part of the year.

The men are chiefly distinguished by the wide cloth cap or berret, properly and most commonly of brown colour, which, overhanging the brow and assuming very picturesque folds, sits very becomingly on a head of hair allowed to grow thick and of even length all round the neck, but cut short in front. They wear short jackets and knee-breeches, also brown, the colour of the undyed wool of the sheep, and round the waist a brilliant red sash of silk or woollen is tied. To defend them from rain or cold they carry the white or brown capa, which resembles a sack, unseamed, on one side, pulled over the head.

Izards (chamois) are sometimes met with in the mountains around, the Pics d'Arcizet, de Gazie, and de Sesque, but their diminished numbers of late offer limited chances of sport. Bears, though not common, are sometimes killed, also wolves.

Flocks of sheep form the chief wealth of this valley; but as they are led up to the mountains in April, and do not return till the end of summer, they are seldom seen, except by those who traverse the high mountains. They are guarded by a remarkable breed of dogs of large size, very courageous, but often savage (see Introd. § 14), called chiens de garde, who protect the flocks from wolves and bears, whilst other dogs drive the flock, as the shepherd's dog of England and Scotland.

The rustic fêtes, dances, &c., still kept up in some parts of the Val d'Ossau, especially at Iaruns (Aug. 15), are well worth seeing, as they collect some of the finest specimens of the men of the valley, and of its primitive costumes. They have a peculiar musical instrument called tambourin, a lyre or zithern of 6 strings, struck with a stick by one hand, while the other holds the rustic mountain flageolet.

The part of the valley which we first enter is shut in by lofty mountains of bold forms and steep sides, separated by a plain of considerable breadth, through which winds the torrent, and it is scattered over with numerous villages. It is cultivated in patches to a considerable height, and covered below with large fields of maize, or with meadows deriving their bright verdure from well-managed irrigation, and producing, by means of it, three crops of hay in a year.

Within a mile of Louvie you pass, on the opposite bank of the Gave, the ruins of Castel Jaloux, or Gelos, occupying the top of one of two little hillocks; the other, also anciently enclosed within its ramparts, is now crowned by a small chapel. This stronghold was the key of the Val d'Ossau, and residence of its viscounts in early times, while the valley formed a separate state, independent of Béarn.

In the Ch. of the village of Bielle, the finest in the valley in the pointed style, are 4 columns of marble, which, it is said, were so much admired by Henri IV., that he begged them of the inhabitants, but was met with this ingenious reply in the negative: "Nos cœurs et nos biens sont à vous, disposez en à votre volonté; quant aux colonnes, elles appartiennent à Dieu, entendez-vous en avec lui." The pillars themselves seem too poor to have excited the admiration of the king, but it was probably in the days of his boyhood, when wandering among his native mountains, that they struck his fancy.

A little before reaching the village of 38 kil. Laruns (Inn, H. des Touristes), one of the most considerable in the valley, a snow-white gash or scar, high up on the mountain-side to the l., marks the situation of the white marble quarry of Louvie Soubiron. It has been employed at Paris for the statues in the Place de la Concorde, and for the bas-reliefs on the outside of the Madeleine.

The situation of Laruns, encircled by high peaks and ridges, which impend on all sides above it, is very striking: among them the distant Pic de Gers raises his conspicuous head. The Church appears originally to have had no windows much larger than loopholes, though wide ones have been broken through in modern times: its font or bénitier, of the white marble mentioned above, is carved outside in the fashion of a basket, and within bears the inappropriate figures of mermaids.

On issuing out of Laruns you might suppose that you had arrived at the termination of the valley, so completely is it blocked up by the mass of the mountain Hourat; but after crossing the furious and injurious winter torrent, the Larienzé, and reaching the mountain foot, two roads are found to diverge; that on the l. to Eaux-Bonnes (2 m.), the pretentious watering-place, that on the rt. to Eaux-Chaudes (2½ m.), the retired village, well fitted for making mountain excursions. It is best to visit Eaux-Chaudes first, and take on your conveyance to Eaux-Bonnes, where means of transport are abundant, whereas at Eaux-Chaudes they are rare.

The shoulder of the mountain, which, as it were, laps over, and conceals from the view of those below the upper part of the Val d'Ossau, has been cut down, and scooped out, by the aid of the auger and of gunpowder. The road, completed 1849, a very laborious work, is carried to Eaux-Chaudes directly through this gorge into the valley, and thus avoids the steep and awkward ascent and descent of the Hourat. After passing this gloomy portal of the valley, a sudden change of scene takes place. Before you opens out a lofty ravine of mountains, almost precipitous, rising from 1000 to 1500 ft. above your head, and approaching so close to one another at their base as to leave only space for the torrent, below, here called Gave de Gabas, which chafes and tumbles from rock to rock, boring the limestone, by its whirlpools, into cauldrons and pits. The deep fissure, at the bottom of which it takes its course, is well seen near the bridge, which transfers the road from its l. to its rt. bank.

The approach to the Eaux-Chaudes is grand; the height and steepness of the mountains, now robed from top to bottom in box-bushes, now starting out in lofty precipices of bare limestone, scarred by the course of torrents, which at times descend in long falls like white ribbons, and the variety imparted to the road by the projecting shoulders round which it winds, give interest to this part of the journey. At length the last projection is doubled, and a view opens of the secluded group of houses called fast, or tea, 1 fr. 50 cents.; beds 2 fr.: H.de Londres (Etablissement des Bains). There are 6 or 7 other lodging-houses.

17 Eaux-Chaudes. — Inns: H. de France; H. Baudot: both very good. Dinner at 5; table-d'hôte 3 fr.; break-

Eaux-Chaudes lies wedged in, as it were, in the midst of the long trough of the valley, between lofty precipices. The houses are founded upon granite, which makes its appearance jutting up in a round boss behind the village. In its rise it has considerably elevated the limestone above it, as may be perceived by the remarkable curve in the strata, visible on the face of the precipices on the l. bank, opposite the baths. Many of the rocks are glacier-marked or moutonnées. The hot springs burst forth out of the granite, close to the junction of the limestone. This phenomenon of the outbreak of hot sources near the points of contact of granitic or trap-pean rocks is of usual occurrence among the Alps and Pyrenees.

In spite of the name, Eaux-Chaudes, the temperature of the waters is not so high as at many other Pyrenean springs, the hottest not exceeding 95° Fahr.; and one of them is cold. The principal sources are Lou Rey (le Roi), named from Henri IV., a frequent visitor, 93°, and L'Esquirette, 95°, the most sought after, and most highly mineralised. The waters are sulphureous, and are supplied from 6 springs, 3 of which, used for bathing, are conveyed into the bath-houses; the others, used for drinking, partly burst out from the rock into rude little basins, whither invalids resort to fill their glasses. The handsome Etablissement des Bains, including pump-room, billiard-room, café, reading-room, and baths, chambers for the resident physician, and some sets of rooms for guests, has been constructed, at the expense of the Government and of the town of Laruns, on the platform of rock below the hotel. Into it the waters of 3 of the springs are conducted. The Eaux-Chaudes baths are resorted to, both by the real invalid in search of health, and the passing traveller attracted by the beauties of nature. The season is over by the first week in Sept.

Eaux-Chaudes is about 2200 ft. above the sea. Horses 5 fr. a day; if to cross the Pyrenees 7 fr. Guides the same. Back fare is charged. Guides—Jacques Dannée is an intelligent fellow; Pierre Cami is also a good and civil guide; Biraben and Sanchette are good chas-seurs.

Excursions.—a. One of the first sights which travellers are invited to see at Eaux-Chaudes is the Grotte, situated in the rock on the l. side of the valley, 2 hours' walk above the baths, rather steep. 'Tis well worth the trouble, and the lighting up of the subterranean cascade a very striking sight.

b. To Gabas and \\*Biaux Artiques*, 8 m. Carriages to Gabas 10 or 12 fr. The valley of Ossau is a frequented passage between France and Spain, along which 15,000 mules pass annually. Its scenery, above Eaux-Chaudes, is far grander and more varied in its mountain outlines and vegetation than be low; and the whole range of the Pyrenees presents few more interesting rides than that to Gabas (6 m.). The fine near view obtained, in proceeding thither, of the Pic du Midi, which is out of sight at Eaux-Chaudes, would alone well repay the trouble. About  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. beyond Eaux-Chaudes the Gave is crossed by a bridge of wood, called Pont d'Enfer, above which, on the rt., a small cascade, named from the neighbouring but elevated hamlet of Goust, descends the mountain. In this portion of the valley the limestone has entirely given place to granite, which forms the substance of the mountains, and the vegetation which covers them is of a beauty and variety unrivalled. It is at this point that we pass into the zone of fir-trees, whose dark files, covering the mountain tops, descend half-way, mixing like mourners in the crowd of trees of lighter foliage—birch, beech, hazel, alder, and oaks, which rise from amidst an undergrowth of box, mixed with a wonderful profusion of wild flowers. At times the road mounts to a great height above the torrent; and there is a fearful pleasure in looking down, over the tree-tops, upon its waters, writhing, struggling, and serpentine in the dark depths below.

Gabas is a poor hamlet, the last in France, having a small cabaret, which will furnish a very tolerable dinner to a sharp appetite, and where Malaga wine may be had good. At the extremity of the hamlet is the French Douane.

A steep mule-path turning to the rt., and following the S.W. branch of the valley, keeping the Pic du Midi on the l. hand, leads to the Plateau of Bioux Artiques, which commands so grand a view of the Pic du Midi that it is worth while to come all the way from England to enjoy it alone. It is only 1½ hr. from Gabas.

From Gabas also the ascent of the Pic du Midi is made, following the rt. hand branch of the valley above Gabas. It takes 11 hrs. to go and return, over rocks extremely steep. It is an expedition for practised mountaineers only, and requires a thoroughly good guide: he expects 15 to 20 frs. A bridle road leads in 3 hrs. walking to the base of the bare rocky crag. Hence to the top is 2 hrs. constant climbing, in part up rock nearly perpendicular, requiring active limbs and steady head. The mountain view is fine, but the giants of the range are not seen, except the Vignemale. The S. side of the granite peak is a sheer precipice. It is well to sleep at Gabas.

c. Should the traveller be disposed to take a peep at Spain, he may go from Les Eaux-Chaudes to Panticosa, an Arragonese watering-place. (Rte. 83A.) d. Eaux-Bonnes may be reached in 4 hrs. by the Col de Gourzi, a steep mountain path, commanding fine views. Keep well to the l., and beware of taking the paths striking off to rt.

A fine road, opened 1861, leads direct from the bridge of Laruns to Eaux-Bonnes. A gradual ascent, carried up in a terrace along the mountain side, does not terminate till the road reaches Eaux-Bonnes. On the l., low down, lies the castle of Espalunge; and higher up, on the shoulder of a mountain, the village d'Aas looks down upon our road. The stream flowing at the bottom of the valley is a tributary of the Gave d'Ossau, called the Valentin. At the very entrance of Eaux-Bonnes a narrow, rocky gully, with a torrent at its bottom, is crossed by a wooden bridge. This stream is the contribution sent forth by the confined nook in which Eaux-Bonnes stands, partitioned off, as it were, from the vale of the Valentin by a ridge of rock of no great height, and concealed from view until you are about to enter it. Beyond the bridge above alluded to is the fashionable and much-frequented watering-place 17 Les Eaux-Bonnes, consisting of a street of 20 or 30 hotels and lodging-houses, of large dimensions and many stories, which would not disgrace a German watering-place. On one side of the street is an open space, laid out as a shrubbery, and planted with trees, named Jardin Anglais. The village is cradled in the lap of the mountains, niched in a complete cul-de-sac, with precipices rising all around close to the houses, so that the rock has been blasted in order to make room for some of them. Above these cliffs, to the S.E., towers the majestic Pic de Gers, the grand feature in all the views of this neighbourhood; while nearly due E. rises the serrated ridge of the Col de Torte.

Inns: H. de France et de l'Europe, chez Taverne Atné (good, and civil landlord);—H. des Princes, larger rooms, but dearer;—H. Richelieu, good and clean;—La Poste;—Quatre Nations;—H. des Etrangers. The charges vary according to the season. In spite of the number of lodgings, rooms are frequently not to be had, unless ordered beforehand. The apartments are not well furnished. Meals are supplied, even in the hotels, by traiteurs, at the rate of 4 fr. per diem, including breakfast and dinner at table-d'hôte; or 5 fr. if sent into the visitor's private apartments; children 2 fr. 50 cents., and servants 3 fr. Visitors usually pay at the rate of 10 fr. a day for board and lodging. The season opens in June and lasts till October, being at its height in July and August. Guides are under no rule, and are exorbitant in their demands. Horses, 4 to 5 frs. the day. Carriages, 18 to 20 frs. the day; 8 to 10 frs.  $\frac{1}{2}$  a day.

There are 4 or 5 springs here of warm sulphurous water, stronger than those of Eaux-Chaudes, but of lower temperature, the hottest not exceeding 91° Fahrenheit. The principal ones rise at the foot of the craig called Butte du Trésor, and are conducted into the Bath-house at the extremity of the village. The water of one source is subjected to artificial heating to fit it for baths. The cold spring alone is used for drinking. Caution is necessary in using the waters: bad consequences have arisen from a stranger taking even a glassful to taste. It is usual to begin with a table spoonful and a half. Dr. Daüralde, the resident Govt. Inspector and physician to the Empress, has a high reputation for his treatment of consumption and spine complaints. The waters are considered good for complaints of the lungs, and very efficacious in the early stages of consumption. Their reputation is of long standing, for the Béarnais soldiers of Henri d'Albret, wounded in the battle of Pavia, repaired hither for the cure of their injuries, and first gave the water the name of Eau d'Arquebusade.

The walks around Eaux-Bonnes cannot be too much praised: they have chiefly been made by M. Eynard of Geneva. The Promenade Horizontale (so called to distinguish it from the others, chiefly steep ascents) is admirably conducted on a level, and therefore suited for invalids. It is well shaded by trees from the summer heat. It forms one of the approaches to the Col de Gourzi (6000 ft.), by which Eaux-Chaudes may be reached in a walk of 4 or 5 hrs. It commands noble views of the Valleys d'Aas and d'Ossau.

The well-wooded cliffs around have been rendered accessible for invalids by zigzag paths and terraces. The summer-house on the top of the Butte du Trésor commands a view of Laruns and the Val d'Ossau. The Montagneverte takes  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hr. to ascend by the zigzags—a pleasant walk. Other paths lead down to the pretty but trifling waterfalls of the Valentin. The finest fall is that named Du Gros Hêtre, from a beech-tree, now cut down, about 3 m. distant. Another very delightful walk of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hr., at first under the shade of the beech-trees, leads to the Promenade Jacqueminot, so called from a general who caused it to be cut.

Salanave is a guide to be recommended, and has good horses.

Persons residing at Eaux-Bonnes should not omit to explore the Val de Gabas above Eaux-Chaudes, with its luxuriant forests and its noble Pic du Midi, the grandest mountain in this district (see above). Bioux Artiques is the point to make for. It is a drive of an hour (Omnibus several times a day; carriage to and fro 20 frs.), or a walk of 2, to Eaux-Chaudes by the road.

The ascent of the Pic de Gers is steep and laborious, requiring 10 or 12 hrs., and hardly to be done without a guide, as the track is not well marked. The view from the top, 8573 ft., is far finer than that from the Pic du Midi d'Ossau, comprising nearly the entire western Pyrenean chain, and including Pau, Tarbes, and other towns in the plain.

The mountain-road over the Col de Tortes from Eaux-Bonnes to Argeles forms Rte. 84.

ROUTE 83A.

EAUX CHAUDES TO CAUTERETS, BY
PANTICOSA.

Eaux Chaudes.	hr.	min.
Gabas . . . . .	1	30
Broussette . . . . .	2	0
Col d'Ancou . . . . .	1	20
Sallent . . . . .	3	0
Panticosa . . . . .	1	50
Baths of Panticosa . . . . .	1	40

11 20

From Eaux Chaudes to the Baths of Panticosa takes the muleteers from 12 to 14 hrs. It will take a good walker 10 hrs. at least, excluding stoppages. Those who carry provisions may halt at the Case de Broussette, and so avoid Sallent, where the inn is dirty and extortionate.

From Eaux Chaudes to the Baths the road is quite easy, and not difficult to find, but a guide or servant is always convenient in Spain. The pass is about 4600 feet high, and presents no difficulties whatever to the construction of a carriage-road. It is said that the smuggling interest is so powerful in Spain as to prevent a road from being made, as it would be cheaper to pay the duties on the road than to smuggle on men's backs.

The road passes Gabas (Rte. 83), and then turns l. towards the S.W. and follows a level and green valley to Case de Broussette, a solitary house and farm, the last in France. Bread and wine may be procured here. Part of the ascent to the Col is rather steep, but the Col or Port d'Ancou is hardly noticeable, and the path winding to the S.E. crosses a small brook, the boundary between France and Spain. Soon afterwards the Spanish custom-house, with its hungry and villanous-looking occupants, is reached, who seem to expect a franc for not detaining you.

The inn, or Posada, at Sallent, in the valley of Roumigas, watered by the Gallego, affords excellent chocolate, but nothing else good. There is a bed in the only sitting-room: charges exorbitant. The valley of the Gallego soon opens out into the larger one of the Tena, in a contraction of which lies the wretched village of Panticosa, (no inn). From this you turn aside to the W. and N. The ascent is steep, though a good mule-track has been made up the fine rocky gorge of El Escalar, to the Baths of Panticosa. They are about 5400 ft. above the sea, and are situated in a wild treeless basin, surrounded by naked rocks and tremendous precipices, and nearly occupied by a small lake. The Baths consist of a huge barrack-like hotel, with baths and large outbuildings, and their appearance, in this solitude, with many Spaniards, peasants and others, stalking majestically about, is very striking. Up to the end of August the baths are frequented by the upper classes of Spaniards, and the hotel is often too full. The charges are very high, but the accommodation pretty good, and French is spoken.

Diligence daily in summer to Jaca; good carriage-road thither.

[From Panticosa village, the Bendefiera or Tentenera Pass leads E. to the Hospice of Boucharo or Bujaruelo, where is very poor accommodation: ascent steep and almost trackless: scenery wild rather than grand. Hence there are paths over the Port de Gavarnie N., and to Torla and Broto, in whose vicinity the Bouquetin it is said may be found. It is more than a day's journey to reach either place.]

Baths.	hr.	min.
Port or Col de Marcadau . . . . .	3	30
Pont d'Espagne . . . . .	2	30
Caunterets . . . . .	1	45

7 45

From the Baths of Panticosa to Caunterets is about 9 hrs. rough ride or walk, stoppages included. Though mules do cross, it is not safe to ride for the first 4 hrs. over the granite rocks smoothed by ancient glaciers. There is no regular track up to the Col; and as the Col cannot be seen from the baths, it would scarcely be possible to find it without a guide. There is not a more desolate or rugged pass in the Pyrenees. The ascent begins immediately behind the hotel, and thence to the top is an almost continuous scramble over rocks steep as a staircase. About two-thirds of the way up a little lake is passed, and in the hollow near the Col snow is crossed. Many of the rocks are glacier-marked or moutonnées. The Col or Port de Marcadau is a small depression in the range, the threshold of which is sharp as the ridge of a house, so that you literally step across it into France. The Col is probably 8000 ft. above the sea: the view from it is wonderfully wild and desolate, but is not very extensive. The descent is very steep, but not so rugged as the ascent. About half an hour from the top is a delicious spring, at which it is usual to rest. After about an hour's descent, comparatively level ground is reached, and the Val de Jarret is pursued; and in half an hour more some sawmills, the only habitation between the Baths of Panticosa and Pont d'Espagne. A steep descent and another level brings us to Pont d'Espagne, the road from which to Canterets is described in Rte. 85A.

ROUTE 84.

THE COL DE TORTES.—EAUX-BONNES TO CAUTERETS OR LUZ.

Originally there was only a difficult mule-path from Eaux-Bonnes to Argeles, by the Col de Tortes; and carriages were forced to go round by Louvil to reach Canterets. In 1863-64 a finely engineered carriage-road was made, by a more sweeping circuit, to connect these 2 watering-places. It crosses the ridge considerably to the N. of Col de Tortes, and then bending S. is carried for more than a mile along the precipitous face of the Pic de Gabizos. It is cut sheer into the side of the mountain; a mere shelf, from which you look down thousands of feet into the valley below. It is a wonderful work, rivalling many Alpine roads, and most creditable to the reign of Napoleon III. Next, avoiding the old passage of the Col de Saucède, it descends in many zigzags upon Arrens (Inn not good), 30 m. from Eaux-Bonnes.

Those who choose the old bridle-path will require 6 hrs. to Arrens over Col de Tortes and Col de Saucède, and 3 thence to Argeles. Send round the baggage, and take provisions for the day. There is not a single auberge as far as Arrens. Beware of the shepherds' dogs, which are very savage.

On leaving Eaux-Bonnes, by the road near the source, you traverse part of the mountain called Le Trésor. Keep the upper path, and, leaving the first bridge and cascade on your l., you come to a second bridge; pass it, keeping the torrent on your rt. The road is as yet well marked by horses, &c., and sufficiently steep. In 2 hrs. thence, on horseback, you can make the Col de Tortes; and, although the path is not always very distinct, you may know the Col by a remarkable rock which elevates itself on the l., and is like the root of an eye tooth. The descent on both sides is exceedingly steep, and would induce most persons to descend from their horses. Leaving the valley of Louzon on your l., keep under the Pic de Gabizos till you come to some chalets. The second Col (Col de Saucède) is then right before you—a steep heathy mount. The descent from Col de Tortes and ascent of this Col takes 1½ hr. Instead of descending at once from this Col to Arrens, it is best to keep for ½ an hour along the l. or N. side of the valley of Arvase, and not begin to bear downwards until the ridge rises; descending then to the village of Marsous. This path being on a terrace commands for about an hour noble views of the valleys of Azun and Argeles. If you descend at once from the Col de Saucède, you pass

The Chapel of Poey le Houn (hill of the fountain), about 10 minutes' walk from Arrens. Fine views S. of the mountains at the head of the Val d'Azun, and especially of the snows of the Pic de Balatons, or Murmuret, which rises on the W. of the Port d'Azun, leading to Sallent and Panticosa.

Arrens is a village of 1000 Inhab., 2720 ft. above the sea, and the chief place in the Val d'Azun. The ch. is surrounded by a battlemented wall, and its doorway is curious. Hence there is a good road by Marsous and Aucun, leaving Biurn on rt., to Argelez, about 8 m. = 13 kil., or Pierrefitte, at least  $\frac{1}{2}$  more.

Argelez (H. de France, very good). (See Route 85A.)

It would be making a toil of a pleasure to attempt to reach Cauterets in 1 day from Eaux-Bonnes, at least on foot; especially as the road from Argelez to Cauterets is so magnificent, so pleasing, and so varied, that it alone deserves a day.

ROUTE 85.

THE PYRENEES.

- A. PAU, EAUX-BONNES, OR EAUX-CHAUD-ES TO CAUTERETS.
- B. CAUTERETS TO LUZ.
- C. LUZ TO GAVARNIE — BRÈCHE DE ROLAND.
- D. LUZ TO BAGNÈRES DE BIGORRE OR LUCHON.

A daily communication of diligences is kept up in summer between all the principal watering-places of the Pyrenees.

Distances from Pau—to Cauterets, 68 kilom. = 42 Eng. m.; to Luz and St. Sauveur, 71 kilom. = 43 $\frac{1}{2}$  Eng. m.; to Barèges, 76 kilom. = 46 $\frac{1}{2}$  Eng. m.; to B. de Bigorre.

This route includes some of the most interesting objects and places in the Pyrenees; and the drive from Lourdes to Luz and Cauterets in particular is a continued succession of the most beautiful scenery.

- A. Pau, Eaux Bonnes, or Eaux Chaudes to Cauterets.

A railway is contemplated from Pau to Lourdes. It is open from Lourdes to Tarbes.

These journeys, each about 40 miles, can scarcely be accomplished in one day by voiturier, but easily by posting. From Pau the road ascends the rt. bank of the Gave du Pau, through a plain of considerable width, nearly covered with maize and flax, and passes between festooned vines slinging their tendrils between the apple and cherry trees. One village rapidly succeeds another, but they contribute little to the cheerfulness of the drive, as the houses turn their backs on the traveller, whose gaze is met by dead walls. He has, however, something more interesting to occupy his attention in the varying forms of the mountains which he is gradually approaching. But there is one exception in the village of Courrasse, where the Gave is crossed by a bridge; for its old tower, crowning a mound on the rt. bank, is part of the castle in which the Bon Henri IV. was confined from his early years to the care of Susanne de Bourbon, Baronne de Mis-sans, and by the wisdom of his mother brought up in the rough fashion of the peasants of his native country, dressed like them, fed like them, sharing in their sports, and traversing the rugged rocks with bare feet; thus acquiring the vigour of body and strength of mind which enabled him to surmount in after-life so many hardships, dangers, and difficulties. Beside the ruin a modern château has been built.

[The road from Eaux Bonnes or Eaux Chaudes descends the valley to Louvie (Rte. 83), then crosses and joins the road from Pau at Lestelle.]

24 Lestelle.—Inns: H. de France; Poste: good country inns. The Gave, running in a contracted rocky bed, is here spanned by a bold arch most picturesquely draped with ivy. Just outside of this village, at a spot where the road is hemmed in between a fine wooded hill, spotted with chapels or stations, and the river, stands Bétharram, a Séminaire for the education of young priests, beautifully situated. The bridge is a favourite subject for artists. The Church is an ugly modern building, containing a statue of the Virgin reported to have miraculous powers, which attracts a multitude of devotees from a distance in the month of September.

Traversing a narrow defile again on the rt. bank of the Gave, which is hemmed in between barren bracken-covered hills, we pass into the Dépt. des Hautes Pyrénées, and from ancient Béarn into Bigorre, shortly before entering the little manufacturing town of St. Pé. It is chiefly inhabited by nailers, who obtain iron from the forges of Asson, and by comb-makers, who supply the Spanish ladies with combs of box-wood for their hair. It has a curious Romanesque church with apsidal terminations, and sculpture over the door. Much roofing slate is exported hence.

Lourdes (Inns: H. de France, Poste; Laïtte) consists of a picturesque but somewhat gloomy-looking hill fort, seated on a rock, around which the town of narrow dirty streets and shabby houses group themselves. This Castle was once the key of the valley of Lavedan, or of the Gave de Pau, commanding the 4 roads which unite here from Tarbes, Bagnères, Argelez, and Pau. It is reached by flights of stairs, and entered by a small drawbridge, and a door 4 feet high and only wide enough for one person to squeeze through; but, not being strong according to modern rules of art, is rather of use as a barrack than a fortress. It was long a state prison, and in 1804 Lord Elgin was incarcerated within it by Napoleon, who caused him to be seized in his passage through France from Constantinople. Far different was its importance in ancient times; it was held for the English monarchs, and the Black Prince, as part of the country of Bigorre, which was yielded up to the English by the French king John as part of his ransom, in conformity with the treaty of Brétigny. Froissart gives a very long account of its varied fortunes, which render this feudal fortress interesting for all who are acquainted with its history. In 1369, not very long after the visit of the Black Prince, Lourdes was actually attacked by the French army commanded by the Duc d'Anjou, and at the end of 16 days the town, defended only by a palisade, and much injured by the machines which the duke brought to bear against it, was won; but the enemy made no impression on the citadel above, which bade defiance for six weeks longer to all efforts to take it. The governor remained true to his oath sworn to the Prince of Wales to guard his stronghold, and resisted the offer of a large sum from the Duc d'Anjou to deliver it up. Another attempt was made to induce this faithful châtelain to betray his trust, by Gaston Phœbus, who invited him to his castle of Orthez. Before setting out, however, Pierre Arnaut confided his stronghold to his brother Jean, who took the same oaths of fidelity. Gaston, irritated at the steadfast honesty of Arnaut in refusing his proposal to yield up the castle, in a brutal fit of rage stabbed him in 5 places with his poignard, and thrust him into a dungeon, where he perished. The atrocious crime availed him not; for Jean, the brother of his victim, proved as trusty a governor and skilful a captain as the murdered Pierre.

There is nothing to be seen here, but the artist-traveller may probably get a sketch of the castle and its picturesque donjon. The sides of the valley are very bare and uninviting near this.

Railway, Lourdes to Tarbes and to B. de Bigorre.

The direct post-road from Pau to Bagnères branches off from Lourdes, whence it is distant 21 kilom. (Rte. 88.)

When Lourdes is left behind we are in the heart of the mountains, but the valley continues for some time stern, rocky, bare; showing marks in its gashed sides and rock-strewn bottom of the fury of the torrents.

This unpromising vestibule, however, leads into what has not unjustly been called the Paradise of Argelez, where the valley of Lavedan (for so this part of the watercourse of the Gave de Pau above Lourdes is called) expands into a wide basin renowned for its picturesque beauty, fertility, and cultivation, and ranking among the finest in the Pyrenees. This altered scene opens out to view after passing the widely conspicuous dismantled tower of Vidalos, which, rising in the midst of the valley upon a monticule, conceals the village behind it.

Rich maize crops or verdant pastures occupy the bottom, interspersed with orchards; but the tilled land extends far up the slopes, and the grand mountains around are clothed with forests, the whole scattered over with houses and villages. In the midst of this lies the pretty village or small town of Argelez. (Inn: *H. de France, first-rate; clean and reasonable.) Argelez stands 1575 ft. above the sea-level, but, from its sheltered situation, enjoys a climate where winter tarries so short a while that its presence is scarcely perceived. In summer, however, it is intensely hot. The maladies of gottre and crétinism are very prevalent about Argelez.

[The Val d'Azun, opening out on the W. opposite Argelez, and extending up into the central chain between the mountains called Pic du Midi d'Azun and Pic de Gabisot, includes some very fine scenery, and is well worth exploring. A path leads up by Anzisans, a beautiful spot, to Arrens, the highest village (8 m.); but beyond it stands the pilgrimage chapel of N. D. de Pouey la Hun, a picturesque building on a pedestal of rock overlooking the valley. From Arrens a very remarkable carriage-road (1864-5) runs to Eaux-Bonnes (Rte. 84) in 5½ h., crossing the Col de Tortes.]

A pleasant walk or ride on pony, from Argelez to Ges, Serres, Salluz, and Ouzous, will unfold most beautiful mountain scenery.

6½ m. S.W. lies the desolate but romantic Lac d'Estaing.

Beyond Argelez the ch. and scanty remains of the ancient abbey of St. Savin, long ago sequestered, but now restored, are passed high up on the hill to our right. The view from the convent-garden is beautiful, and the church, said to be as old as Charlemagne, is very curious. The valley of Argelez terminates at 19 Pierrefitte — Inn: La Poste, excellent and reasonable. This village, whose population seems to live by begging, much to the traveller's annoyance, is the centre from which the roads to Caunterets and to Barèges separate. The old church of the village of Soulom, on the opposite bank of the Gave, has a curious covered gallery at its W. end, intended for defence. Pierrefitte is seated at the foot of a lofty and conspicuous mountain, which seems to block up the passage, and which, in fact, gives rise to 2 minor valleys. The road to Luz, Barèges, and St. Sauveur runs up that on the l., and the way to Caunterets is on the rt. of the mountain. The highest point of the ridge dividing the valley of Caunterets from that of Luz is named the Pic du Midi de Viscos: it is 7030 ft. above the sea-level. The whole way to Caunterets lies through a narrow gorge, where the cheerful beauty of the lower valley gives place to savage grandeur. A good carriage-road, which took 4 years to complete, is carried through it, rising immediately behind Pierrefitte, before it penetrates into the defile, in well-contrived zigzags, either elevated on terraces of masonry or cut out of the hard rock: it is a fine work of engineering. A portion of the old way remains, and serves as a short cut for the pedestrian, whence he may survey to advantage the mouth of the narrow gorge, in the depths of which the torrent struggles along. It is a rent burst through vertical strata of slate, yet, except where its sides are absolutely perpendicular, they are either carpeted with bright patches of green meadow or covered with trees and brushwood, among which the hazel thrives. At a short distance from the mouth of the gorge, the view, looking back upon the vale of Argelez, is peculiarly beautiful, from the contrast of rugged, gloomy wildness in the foreground, with the sunny richness beyond of groves, pastures, and corn-fields. Near the middle of the pass, which, longo intervallo, may recall to the Swiss traveller some features of the Via Mala, the road surmounts in a series of graceful curves a bed of limestone or marble, called Buite du Limacon, which stretches across the valley like a dam. Over this the Gave tumbles in a long rapid, which frets its waters into foam as white as snow. To this succeeds a slight opening in the valley, and a tall pointed mountain appears at its extremity, clad in fir: at its foot lies Cauterets; though intervening hills conceal it from view until you are close upon it.

11 Cauterets.—Inns: H. de France; H. des Ambassadeurs; H. Richelieu; H. du Lion d'Or; H. du Parc.

There are tables-d'hôte twice a day at the chief inns, and families may be supplied with meals in their rooms by a traiteur. Cauterets, though in a spot so remote and elevated (3254 ft. above the sea), with savage mountains encircling it in an amphitheatre, and overhanging its roofs with their peaks and pine forests, has a perfectly townish air, with an ootroi at its entrance, paved streets of inns and lodging-houses, and in the centre an irregular market-place. It is one of the chief

Brannens of the Pyrenees, containing 1300 permanent Inhab.,—abounding in agents, guides, horse-jobbers, and itinerant marchands, who beset the traveller the moment he sets foot within it. The number of houses is about 200; most of them have the door-posts, window-sills, and thresholds of grey marble, and over every other door is emblazoned "Chevaux ou voitures à louer." Invalids repairing to Cauterets to take the waters must address themselves to the inspector, who will inscribe their names in a book, and allot to them an hour for taking the bath; to remain fixed during the whole of their stay, with a chaise à porteur to convey them if required. This is a bath of ancient resort with the Kings of Navarre; Queen Marguerite, sister of François I., repaired hither with her court and poets, and here she wrote her 'Heptameron,' after the manner of Boccaccio. Rabelais also came hither.

Omnibuses four-in-hand take the bathers and drinkers to the Raillère.

The chief building is the modern pump-room or Etablissement des Bains built near the foot of the hill, to receive the waters of the source called les Espagnols, one of the most powerful and hottest in the Pyrenees. It is so named from its having at an early period, according to tradition, cured the ailments of a king of Arragon, or from being much frequented by Spaniards, who cross the mountains in great numbers to repair hither. The new building is supplied with water in pipes carried down the slope of the hill de Perraute, from the source, situated at a considerable elevation, where the old bath-house stands. The bathing apparatus and accessories are constructed on the most approved plan dictated by the experience of modern science. The older bath-houses in the same direction are little better than wretched sheds, approached by paths so steep and stony as to require much exertion on the part of the robust to surmount; yet up them the invalid was formerly compelled either to toil on foot or be carried in a chaise à porteur.

The Mineral Springs here are sulphurous and hot, varying only in the quantity of the same ingredients, and in warmth from 102° to 122° Fahr. There are about 16 distinct sources, six of which rise on the hill of Peroute, above the town to the E., and the remainder are situated higher up the valley, on the banks of the Gave, from 1 to 1½ m. distant. They are said to present, in their strength, warmth, and qualities an epitome of almost all the sulphurous sources scattered over the Pyrenees; some of them being even more powerful than those of Barèges, others as mild as St. Sauveur. The chief of the springs on the banks of the Gave, and the one most resorted to, is the Raillère, whose waters are received in a building of some pretensions, faced with a portico, on a raised terrace, at the foot of a granitic mountain, destitute of trees or verdure, but covered over with fallen blocks of stone, which descend its slopes in dreary ruin. From 6 to 8 in the morning all the world of Cauterets repairs to this desolate spot, and during the dense season bathers assemble here at a much earlier hour, even at 4 in the morning. The road is thronged with sour-faced invalids; open sedan-chairs upon poles, covered with a canvas hood, of which 50 or 60 are kept in the town, hurry to and fro, occupied by muffled females; peasant women in red capulets mingle with Paris dandies in white berrets and red Béarnais sashes (la mode des Bains): black ecclesiastics in broad-brimmed hats, Capuchin monks in brown sackcloth and hoods, and Spaniards of swarthy olive-coloured visage and stately gait, their heads swathed in mottled handkerchiefs, their persons muffled up in the embozo of their cloaks, which are often no better than horsecloths, offering a singular combination of dignity and poverty,—such are the component parts of the motley and picturesque crowd which repairs daily to La Raillère. There are 23 Cabinets des Bains at La Raillère, with 2 douches and a fountain for drinking.

Above the Raillère is a group of other springs and a cluster of little bath-houses, built one above another against the hill-sides: the principal are the Bain du Pré, beneath a stream of fallen rocks, grown over with lichens, Petit St. Sauveur, Mahourat, B. des Eufs, and des Yeux. The Source de Montmorency is a sort of grotto, whose waters, too hot for the hand to bear, deposit a white, greasy slime; and the Bain du Bois, the highest in this direction, contains 4 cabinet baths, with a douche in each, and beds for the invalid who may desire to encourage the perspiration produced by the bath, and 2 piscines or large baths: the charge for one is 20 sous.

July and August are the season when Cauterets is most visited: lodgings are then very dear; poorly furnished apartments sometimes costing as much as 4 or 5 fr. each per diem.

There is a subscription reading-room or club here, called Cercle.

Several formal avenues and alleys on the outskirts of the town, by the side of the road to Pierrefitte, and the Parc on the margin of the Gave, satisfy the wants of French visitors as promenades, but must appear wearisome to English: indeed, except in the society of friends, or with the inducement of illness to make one tarry, the attractions at Cauterets are few.

The Grange de la Reine, an humble farm, so called from Queen Hortense having once been belated in crossing the mountains, and having passed the night there, is a good point of view for the basin of Cauterets, about 600 ft. above it. The mountain called Peak of Monne commands a far more extensive and very striking view, but is a serious mountain to climb; 5½ hrs. up and 4 down.

The sportsman may be thankful to know that the rivers abound in trout, and that the chace of the izard and the bear may be pursued on the neighbouring mountains between the Vignemale and the Pic du Midi d'Ossau, with some prospect of success at the latter end of spring. These wild animals are, however, becoming rare even in these their last retreats. Jean Destapins is a capital guide and chasseur.

Chaises à porteur cost 15 fr. a day, and 3 fr. pourboire to the porteurs, who are very agile and sure-footed; ladies are often carried by them as far as the Lac de Gaube. Good horses may be hired here, and are let out by the day without a guide at 4 or 5 frs.

Nobody thinks of quitting Cauterets without making the excursion to the **Pont d'Espagne* and ***Lac de Gaube*. There is a bridle-road all the way, well marked, but steep at its farther extremity, and the excursion may be performed without a guide and on foot, though those who wish to save time will mount on a horse. It requires about 2 hrs'. good walking to reach the Pont d'Espagne, and 1 hr. more thence to the Lac de Gaube: the return may be effected in less time.

Passing the source of la Raillère, and other springs and baths already mentioned, and winding between the mountains Perraute and Peyrénère, whose sides are strewn with rocks fallen from above, the road ascends by the margin of the Gave, through a wild narrow valley, the lower parts of the mountains bounding it wooded at first with trees and bushes, and afterwards with pine forests, while the upper parts rise in bare precipices, serrated peaks, and pointed aiguilles of granite.

The torrent leaps down from the upper to the lower slopes of the valley in several fine falls, the best of which is the cascade de Cerizette, where travellers usually dismount and scramble down into a rude scene of rocks, wood, and water. Before this, the road winds through a wild spot called "Le Grand Chaos," consisting of immense blocks of limestone fallen from above.

About 6 m. from Cauterets (2 hrs. walk) is the Pont d'Espagne (5150 feet above the sea ?), in itself a simple structure of pine trunks thrown across the torrent, here confined in a narrow chasm between rocks, just below the junction of the Gave descending from the Lac de Gaube with that from the Marcadaou. The streams unite by leaping together into the chasm under the bridge, in picturesque Falls, but of no great magnitude. They are best seen about 20 or 30 yards on the path leading into Spain. These are but accessories to the sublime scene around, which, from the predominance of black fir forests, surrounded by granite cliffs shooting upwards in spires and pinnacles, somewhat like a scene in Norway.

[The valley above the Pont d'Espagne, called Val de Jarret, continues of great grandeur, and is traversed by a path on the l. bank of the stream leading by the Marcadaou pass to the baths of Panticosa in Spain. (See Rte. 83A.) It is well worth while to ascend the Marcadaou Pass (3 to 3½ hours' walk from Pont d'Espagne), even if you do not cross into Spain, as far as the frontier, as the view towards Spain is magnificent. It comprises 4 chains of snow-clad mountains.]

To reach the Lac de Gaube you must turn to the l. close to the Pont d'Espagne. Immediately above it you turn aside over another small wooden bridge, called Pont de Joseph, and, alighting at a small hut or cabaret, you gaze down from a green knoll upon a magnificent fall, "La Cascade," the whole body of water discharged from the Lac de Gaube, tumbling from a considerable height. Returning over the bridges, you take the l. hand very steep path, which strikes up the mountain side through the pine wood, and at first by the side of a torrent, and over some patches of boggy ground. After about ¼ hour's walk (2 m.) over trunks and roots and shattered stones, you reach this lonely basin of green water. It is not more than 2½ m. in circumference, yet is the largest lake among the Pyrenees, and lies at an elevation of 1788 mètres = 5866 ft. above the sea-level, and is 300 or 400 (?) ft. deep. The steep precipices on either side are bare, except where seamed with lines of straggling black firs, alternating with streams of fallen rocks; but the entire centre of the picture is filled with the noble mass of the Vignemale, one of the highest mountains in France, white with eternal snow, crowned by crags and by glaciers which feed the lake through a small fall. The fisherman's hut which serves as a restaurant (furnishing lake trout for the hungry traveller's breakfast at a high rate) is planted upon a ridge of granite, stretching across the valley, and damming up the waters of the lake. A better restaurant has been built by the town of Cauterets. A bed may be had here. On a projecting rock a little monument of white marble, railed in, is the record of the melancholy fate of a young Englishman, named Pattison, and his wife, who, within one month of their marriage, were drowned in the lake. They had trusted themselves in the wretched and barbarous skiff to row across the lake; and it is supposed to have been accidentally upset, for no human eye beheld the accident. Their bodies were conveyed to Witham in Essex. A detestable, lying romance, grafted on their sad story, destitute of all truth, is sold on the spot—let no one buy it.

The ascent of the Vignemale is sometimes made from the lake, which is either crossed in the boat, or skirted by the path on the l. The clue to the ascent is the Gave, which forms the waterfall at the extremity. Following its bank, you ascend in succession, in the course of 1½ hour's walk, 5 different stages or steps of the mountain, each of which the torrent clears by a leap. The mass of the mountain is alpine limestone, which here overlies the granite prevailing from La Raillère to the Lac de Gaube. The Gave has its origin in the foot of a glacier stretching nearly up to the top of the mountain. Its crest is topped by 3 peaks detached from one another. The highest, the Pic Longe, is 11,001 ft. above the sea-level, surpassing every other in the French Pyrenees. The view is said to extend into Spain and over a large part of the French chain. This excursion cannot be performed without the aid of approved and experienced guides. It was made by the Prince de la Moskowa in 1838, who has described it in the 'Revue des Deux Mondes.'

[There is a difficult mountain path among broken rocks and the débris of glaciers, from the Lac de Gaube over the shoulder of the Vignemale, keeping that mountain on the rt., through the Col or Port d'Ossoult and down the Val d'Ossoult to Gavarnie. It requires 8 or 10 hrs., and should not be undertaken without good guides, being one of the most difficult expeditions in the Pyrenees.]

B. Cauterets to Luz.

m. Cauterets.

6 m. Pierrefitte (good Inn).

8 m. Luz.

1 m. St. Sauveur.

The course usually taken by persons proceeding to Barèges, or Gavarnie, from Cauterets, is to retrace their steps down the valley as far as Pierrefitte (see Rte. 85A), and thence ascend the gorge leading up to Luz, a drive of about 3 h. (carriage and 2 horses, 15 fr.).

The defile leading from Pierrefitte to Luz is truly magnificent, differing from that of Cauterets, being rather less gloomy, but scarcely inferior. It abounds in rich foliage throughout. The modern road, made with much engineering skill, is alternately a shelf cut with vast labour out of the rock, or a terrace built up with masonry; with an abyss under foot, and towering masses over head. It crosses the Gave by bridges 7 times before reaching Luz. At length the gorge opens into a basin-shaped vale, remarkable for its rich carpet of verdure, cultivated in patches, having little villages planted a considerable way up its sides, until fields give place to forests. The mountains by the separation leave space for a small plain nearly in the form of a triangle, entered by a narrow defile at each of its angles. On the S.W. opens that of Gavarnie, at the mouth of which lies St. Sauveur, on the S.E. that of the Bastan leading to Barèges, guarded at its mouth by the Castle of St. Marie. From both of these issue Gaves which, meeting in the midst of the plain, escape by its third or N. angle through the defile leading to Pierrefitte, and traversed by the carriage-road. [rt. A road branches off direct to St. Sauveur.] At the upper end of the plain between the defiles of Gavarnie and Barèges, at the foot of a lofty mountain called Pic de Bergons, lies the little village of Luz. An avenue of formal poplars traverses the verdant flat meadows, gushing with rills of water, to which they owe their emerald tints and rich crops of grass, and leads into Luz (Inns: H. de l'Univers; chez Payotte, excellent in all respects; H. des Pyrénées or Poste, Mad. Cazeaux). Luz is the best head-quarters for an expedition to Gavarnie and Barèges. Grandet's lodging-house is recommended.

Luz is a cleanly village, situated on a Gave of rapid flow: to the refreshing stream of one of its tributary brooks, under the inn windows, horses and pigs repair to bathe all day long. The pigs in particular seem to have acquired unwonted habits of cleanliness in this country, and to enjoy excessively the ablutions of their sides administered by the swineherd, who bastes them with a wooden ladle.

The Church of Luz, enclosed within a castle furnished with battlements and loop-holed walls, is a great curiosity, bearing as it does the mixed character of the order of the Templars,—half monks, half soldiers,—by whom it was founded. They were planted here to guard the frontier in troublous times, forming an outpost of Christians against the Saracens at first, and Spaniards afterwards. The church, entered by a machicolated gate under a projecting turret, is a Romanesque building probably of the 11th centy. The carved doorway, and the arcade of straight-sided arches, running round the E. end on the outside, deserve notice; also a small doorway on the S. side, now walled up, through which alone, according to tradition, the proscribed race of Cagots were allowed to enter the church, where they occupied a chapel apart from the rest of the congregation. Crêpe de Barèges is made at Luz.

The knoll behind Luz crowned with a modern chapel, founded by the empress, and called Chapelle Eugénie, dedicated to St. Peter of Solferino, commands a very pleasing view, looking down into a valley on either hand, and is easily accessible. A path may be found to descend on the opposite side to St. Sauveur.

It is not more than 1 m. by the level road from Luz to the Baths of St. Sauveur, a narrow street of white Inns (*H. de France; H. des Princes; H. de Paris) and lodging-houses planted on a narrow terrace or ledge, on the top of a rocky cliff, about 200 ft. above the Gave on its l. bank, and just within the jaws of the romantic and beautifully wooded defile leading to Gavarnie. A handsome Gothic Church has been built since 1860, and, in combination with the graceful Bridge, has greatly improved the aspect of the place.

In the middle of the village are the Baths (Etablissement Thermal), one of the handsomest in the Pyrenees, containing 14 or 16 baignoires, supplied from springs of sulphurous water, resembling those of Cauterets, but less warm, and less rich in gas. They are considered efficacious in female complaints, for nervous affections, &c. Thus the greater number of invalids here are ladies, while at Barèges the male sex abounds. Being weaker than those of Barèges, a course of them is recommended as a good preparation for the stronger waters of Barèges.

The name St. Sauveur is said to be derived from an inscription set over the healing source by a bishop of Tarbes, at what period is unknown:—"Vos haurietis aquas de fontibus Salvatoris."

The carriage-road up the valley from St. Sauveur has, since 1861, been carried across the ravine by a Bridge of a single arch 300 ft. above the stream, a noble work of engineering, and a very picturesque object. The Emperor Napoleon laid the first stone 1860.

At St. Sauveur, as well as at Luz, guides and horses may be had at the usual charges. Martin is a capital guide, has good horses, and is most humane to them. Jacques St. Laur, of Luz, who may be heard of at Madame Cazeaux's, is an excellent guide, moderate in his charges for horses: Pic de Bergons 34 frs.; Gavarnie 4 frs. and horses' feed. This obliging and well-informed guide deserves and expects to be paid rather higher. Bernard Cousté, and Pierre Sanio, who made the ascent of the Maladetta in 1842, are also recommended. A Tariff for Guides and Horses has been fixed on by the authorities of this valley, and should be asked for.

The summit of the Pic de Bergons, the hill behind Luz and opposite St. Sauveur, 8238 ft. above the sea, is one of the best points of view among the Pyrenees, and one of the most accessible, since even ladies may ride up without difficulty, or be carried in a chaise à porteur. About 3 hrs. are required to reach the summit, and 2 to descend. From the top may be seen the Cirque of Gavarnie, the Brèche de Roland, and Tours de Marboré, and the more distant and loftier Mont Perdu to the S.; to the W. the Vignemale; to the E. the sterile valley of Barèges, and the Pic du Midi; to the N. the Vale of Lavedan and the plains beyond it.

There is a path, not easy to find without a guide, over the mountains from St. Sauveur to Cauterets: the journey takes 5 hrs. on foot; but the high road (already described) is much grander in scenery, and good all the way, though it makes a wide détour.

C. Luz to Gavarnie—Brèche de Roland—Mont Perdu.

13 m. to Gavarnie: carriage-road to the village, thence horse-path: to the Cirque 2 m.

The road runs up the rt. bank of the Gave, and, leaving St. Sauveur on the rt., is soon joined by the road from that place which crosses the Gave by the magnificent Bridge of one arch.

The valley of the Gave de Gavarnie, at whose mouth stands St. Sauveur, contains some of the most striking scenery in the Pyrenees, and terminates in the most remarkable of those Oules or Cirques peculiar to the Pyrenees, and already described, § 4. It takes 4 hrs. to walk; no guide is needed to Gavarnie, only thence up to the Brèche one is indispensable. The grand scenery of the defile begins at once:—umbrageous woods alternating with precipitous rocks—mountain peaks of picturesque form rear their heads aloft; below gapes a confined chasm. The road is cut in the face of a rocky precipice, down which the eye gazes 300 or 400 ft., sheer into the green and frothy river, within the half-opened fissure below. One difficult pass around an angular shoulder of the mountain is called Pas de l'Echelle, because, before the present road was cut, it could only be traversed by a hazardous stair, descending on one side and ascending on the other. Here the peasants of Bigorre defeated a force of Miquelites (Spanish troops), who invaded the frontier for the last time in the wars of Louis XIV., 1708. There are ruins, down in the hollow, of an old fort called Escalette, the vestiges of which are nearly gone. Many small falls are passed and torrents crossed by high and narrow bridges, suspended over deep gulfs; many of the watercourses are bestridden by mills, not much larger than boxes; a row of such, close together, seen on the hillside, look like beads on a white string. At Pont de Sia 3 bridges cross the stream, the highest and newest of stone, erected 1858.

Twice the valley expands, into the basins of Pragnères and Gèdre, and it is more often throttled (étranglé) by narrow defiles. On approaching the village of Gèdre, from the hill above it, you have a fine view, for a short space, of the snowy mountains called Tours de Marboré, and of the Brèche de Roland, a gap in the wall of rock which crests the mountain, looking like a notch made in a jaw by the loss of a single tooth. It was cut through, according to the legend, by Roland, the brave Paladin, with his trusty blade Durandal, to open a passage in pursuit of the Moors. To the rt. of it the false Brèche, a similar gap, is seen. They both lie immediately above the Cirque of Gavarnie, and are soon lost to view behind intervening mountains, as the valley curves, and they are invisible from the Cirque itself. At Gèdre there is a small Inn, and a sight scarcely worth notice, though travellers are invited to see it and pay, called Grotte de Gèdre. It is an imperfect arch, formed by the torrent scooping out the rock, partly grown over with creeping shrubs.

[The opening on the l., behind Gèdre, through which the torrent issues, is the mouth of the Val d'Héas, one of the largest and deepest valleys which penetrate the granitic region of the Pyrenees, containing fine wild scenery, and terminating in the Cirque de Troumouse, situated a little to the E. of that of Gavarnie. In coming from Luz the valley is entered by a road turning to the l., on the height which precedes the village of Gèdre. It keeps up on the slope for some distance, then ascends along the rt. bank of the Gave, under the shade of fine trees, ashes and sycamores. The torrent descending on the l. from the Cambiel is next crossed on a bridge; a sombre gorge succeeds, leading to the 5 m. village of Héas (Inn: chez Paget; homely and small, 2 beds). Héas is remarkable for its chaos of granite blocks, about 4 m. from Gèdre, which have fallen from the mountain above, across the valley, and resemble that of Peyrada, described farther on. This land-slip took place in 1650, blocked up the torrent, and formed a lake behind it, which lasted until 1788, when its waters broke out, inundating the valley below.

Here is the Chapelle de la Vierge d'Héas, 4910 ft. above the sea-level, resorted to yearly between the 15th of August and the 18th of September, by hosts of pilgrims from afar, who come to worship and kiss her miraculous image, which is dressed in gold-embroidered stuffs, and hooded with the red capulet of the country.

Excursions.—a. Nearly due S. of Héas opens out a valley which ends in the Cirque de Troumouse, a semi-circular wall of precipitous mountains, enclosing a verdant plain. It is larger than Gavarnie, but not so imposing, yet deserves to be seen. It takes 2 h. 30 m. to go, and 1 hr. 30 m. to return; part of the way is a bridle-path.

b. The Mont Perdu may be ascended from Héas by the Cirque d'Estaubé and the Port de Canaou (about 5 hrs.). It will occupy a day.]

The road to Gavarnie from the prettily situated village of Gèdre skirts the flanks of the mountain Coumélie, between hedges of box, and reaches in a little space the Chaos of Peyrada, an éboulement or slip of masses of gneiss fallen from above, so extensive that it looks as though a mountain had tumbled to pieces. It is a grand and savage scene. The road winds in zig-zags through a perfect labyrinth of blocks, many of them as big as a house, and far larger than the Cumberland Bowder stone, piled one above another in extreme confusion, forming mysterious cavities and sheds between them. These fragments sweep down to the Gave, and partly conceal it; their fall must have occurred long ago, from the lichens which cover their surface, and was probably produced by the action of the atmosphere, especially of frost, so powerful an agent in fracturing and disintegrating the slaty structure of the gneiss. Beyond the Chaos the road passes under the base of the Pimené, a picturesque mountain, rising on the l. to a height of 9384 ft.

In passing the Pont de Barregui the peaks and glaciers of the Vignemale are disclosed to view for a short time, at the extremity of the Val d'Ossoué (Rte. 85A), up which runs the mountain path to Cauterets by the Lac de Gaube.

Gavarnie is a poor small village, 4623 ft. above the sea-level, with a tolerable Inn, which will be found good head-quarters for several excursions; it is kept by civil people, and is a convenient sleeping-place for those who ascend the Brèche. Best Guide, Laurent; he receives 10 fr. a day when employed several days together; more for a single excursion.

The Pimené, more than 9000 ft., may be ascended from this in 4 hrs.

The modernized and uninteresting Ch. contains the skulls of 12 Templars (?) beheaded in the reign of Philip le Bel; such is the tradition, and the Order certainly had a commandery in this desolate spot.

Behind Gavarnie rise the black walls of the Cirque, surmounted by eternal snow shutting in the valley. It appears close to the village, and the stranger will scarcely believe that he has 3 m. to trudge or ride, which will take nearly an hour, before he can reach its farther extremity. The scenery of the Cirque is considered by some the most striking in the Pyrenees, and the most peculiar. 3 shallow, basin-shaped hollows, partly strewn with stones, partly carpeted with grass, seemingly at one time lake basins, are passed, before you surmount the small projecting wall of rock which masks the entry to the Cirque, and once, doubtless, dammed up the waters of the Gave. Here, shut out from the world, and, as it were, arrived at its end, you gaze up to the vast semicircle of rocks around, the tall rampire of a kingdom, at the base of which France terminates. The precipices forming its sides, varying in height from 1000 to 1400 ft., are divided into 3 or 4 steps or stages, upon each of which a glacier, covered with white snow, is heaped: not a scrap of vegetation relieves their bare sides. Down the vertical faces of the rocks stream 12 or 15 thin cascades, like white threads; but there is one on the l. hand, where the precipice is least interrupted, which falls in one white cord, only twice broken by ledges, nearly 1266 ft. high: it is reputed the highest fall in Europe, and is the head water of the Gave de Pau; but so small is it in volume that it dissipates into spray before reaching the bottom. These streamlets are the drainage of the glaciers above, and all, joining the Gave, escape from the Cirque by the only opening, that by which the traveller enters. The floor of the Cirque is an uninterrupted and irregular heap of rubbish and blocks of rock, the ruins of the neighbouring mountains, which have fallen from above, very toilsome to walk over; and in the midst are one or two patches of dirty snow, nearly consolidated into ice, under which the Gave flows in a hollow vault. It takes nearly  $\frac{1}{2}$  an hr. from the entrance to reach the foot of the high waterfall, where the geologist may find specimens of the fossils contained in the rocks of the Cirque, which have been ascertained by M. Dufresnoy to be identical with those of the chalk. An English traveller would certainly not recognize, otherwise, that formation, in the dark cliffs around, so unlike in colour and texture to the white chalk of England.

The mountains rising above the Cirque, but not visible from within its enclosure, are to the E. the Cylindre, 10,050 ft., so called from its shape, whose base is embedded in the great glacier, whence springs the high fall; the Tours de Marboré, 9964 ft., forming part of the Mont Perdu; and on the W. the Brèche de Roland, and farther on the Fausse Brèche.

There is a small hut within the Cirque (Baraque de la Cantine), where the horses are put up.

The ascent of the Brèche de Roland is made from the Cirque of Gavarnie: it is fatiguing and difficult, but not dangerous. Some provisions, and a wine or brandy flask, should be taken; and it would be almost impossible to find the way without a guide. A good walker can make the ascent from the hut in  $2\frac{1}{2}$  hrs. and the descent in  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hr.; but 4 hrs. should be allowed for the ascent, and  $2\frac{1}{2}$  for the descent. The ascent commences at the rocks of Saradetz, from the corner of the Cirque on the rt. hand, opposite to the high fall. A stranger would scarcely find the spot; no path leads to it, and there is no apparent break or interruption in the perpendicular wall of the Cirque. The strata of the limestone are here vertical, and a buttress of it slightly projecting from the mass furnishes the means of scaling the precipice along the abrupt and shattered edges of the slaty rock, here divided like the leaves of a book, set on end, but shivery on the surface. The broken angles and splinters serve as steps, in which one may insert the toes and fingers, but it is as abrupt as the ascent of a ladder. Next you wind round some smooth projecting shoulders of rock, and round the edges of 1 or 2 cliffs, which alternate, higher up, with steep slopes, covered less with grass than with fallen stones. These steep grassy banks form a pasture, called Las Serrades, for the flocks of some Spanish shepherds, who rent them from the commune of Gavarnie. There is no intermission to the steepness of the ascent, no flat interval between the slopes; it takes more than 1 hr. of "treadmill work" to rise above the high cascade. It is a glorious sight to look down from this upon the precipices and waterfalls, and the great glacier which feeds them, at which, shortly before, you gazed up with aching neck. Hence the Tours de Marboré are well seen; and at this height, about noon, the roar of avalanches succeeds to the monotonous dash of waterfalls, which before alone interrupted the solitude. The Cirque is soon after lost sight of: above your head rises an expanse of snow and glacier covering a steep slope, inclined like the roof of a house, surmounted by the wall of rock, in the midst of which is Roland's Breach, and another similar embrasure on the rt. of it, called Fausse Brèche. The path is now tolerably level for some distance, till it reaches the foot of the glacier. As the glacier is too abrupt to ascend, you leave it on the l. hand, and begin to climb a less steeply inclined snow-clad slope, which at some seasons is denuded down to the slaty rubbish below the snow; it is a work of some fatigue. When two-thirds of the acclivity are surmounted the guide turns to the l. across the glacier, whose surface is so highly inclined that it is not possible to scale it from below; and even to cross it with safety it is necessary to cut notches in the ice, and to drive the Alp pole well into it. A false step would send you at once to the bottom. A few paces beyond the glacier brings you to the Brèche. That insignificant notch in the mountain brow seen from Gèdre has now expanded into a colossal portal 800 ft. wide, 350 ft. high, and 50 ft. thick—9337 ft. above the sea-level. The ridge or crest in which it is formed is literally a wall of rock, varying in height from 300 to 600 ft., which here divides France from Spain, escarped on both sides, and not more than 50 or 80 ft. thick. Through this singular opening—as it were a window in the mountain, nearly square in its angles, and not much wider above than below—Spain is seen; a most uninviting prospect of rugged and bare mountains and valleys, filled with stones and snow in the foreground, while the distance is formed by the wave-like Sierras of Arragon rising high up against the horizon. On the French side the view is contracted by intervening mountains; only part of the Vignemale is visible. An extensive panorama is gained by ascending the Marboré,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hr. above the Brèche.

The Brèche is said by Raymond to be visible from Saragossa and Huesca; and a practised eye, knowing where to search for these cities, might, with the aid of a telescope, in a clear state of the atmosphere, be enabled to discern them from hence.

The threshold of the Brèche is angular, like the roof of a house, and the frontier line runs directly along it, so that one may sit astride of it, with one leg in France and the other in Spain.

All along the front of the Brèche, on the French side, the glacier is scooped out into a deep fosse or cavity, by the action of the sun's rays pouring from the south, through the opening, as Raymond has well explained, so that it cannot be approached directly, but only by skirting the edge of the cavity. The ascent was accomplished by the Duchesse de Berri in 1828, but it is not fit for ladies in general.

Ascent of the Mont Perdu.—The Brèche de Roland is used by the inhabitants of several villages on the Spanish side as a pass into France, and especially by smugglers. Through it lies the way to ascend the Mont Perdu, whose top may be reached in 6 hrs. from the Brèche, descending at first some hundred ft., and skirting the crumbling slopes of the Marboré on the l. Travellers usually pass the night in a poor hut (Cabane de Gauthie), 2 hrs. from the Brèche, cold quarters, and a desolate spot, frequented by shepherds, at the foot of the mountain, on the high table-land called Millaris.

scattered over with slaty débris, and traversed by rents and deep fissures. Mont Perdu is composed of 4 stages or terraces, faced by abrupt escarpments, each receding farther back than the one below. The 2 lower steps are easily ascended by means of a talus of marly débris fallen from above. The 3rd and 4th are very difficult to scale, especially the 4th, which can only be reached through a sort of an outlet for the melting snow. The summit of the Mont Perdu is 11,168 ft. above the sea-level, second in height to the Maladetta alone among the Pyrenees; and it was first surmounted in 1802 by Ramond after two dangerous and fruitless attempts. It is not to be tried without the aid of a skillful guide. One may ascend from the Gaulis hut on the Millaris, and descend from the summit to Héas, on the same day.

The Port de Gavarnie, 7500 ft., is a direct path into Spain. From the village of Gavarnie you enter the Val d'Ossone, and soon turning l. reach the port in 2 hrs. of ascent. Down a steep slope you reach Boucharo (Bujaruelo,—a poor Inn), in the Val de Broto, whence there is a pass to Panticosa, and another to Cauntereta. Boucharo is 5 hrs. from Broto, and 8 hrs. from Fanlo (a genuine Spanish Venta). This route commands magnificent scenery.

These excursions require a guide who speaks Spanish, or rather the dialect of the Spanish peasants; and it is necessary to make a bargain at every Spanish inn. See HANDBOOK FOR SPAIN.

D. Luz, by Barèges and the Tourmalet, to Bagnères de Bigorre or Luchon.

Luz.	hr.	min.
Tourmalet } bridle-	2	40
Grip . . . . .	0	50
Arreau . . . . .	3	40
Luchon . . . . .	5	0
	12	10

The times above mentioned were those actually taken on good horses, and more time should generally be allowed. In going from Luz to Luchon it is best to sleep at Arreau, and to start early for Luchon, in which case only three days should be charged from Luz to Luchon, back fare included.

From Luz to Barèges is a continuous ascent of about  $4\frac{1}{2}$  m. A well-constructed carriage-road now shortens what was once a very tedious drive; the old road being constantly washed away by the torrent.

The accommodation at Barèges is so very inferior that the traveller bound for Bagnères by the Tourmalet had better lengthen his day's journey by starting from Luz than put up at Barèges.

On quitting Luz you pass on the l. the ruined castle of Ste. Marie, one of the last possessions retained by the English in the S. of France, since it held out for the Black Prince nearly as long as Lourdes. It stands on a mount, at the point where the valley of Barèges, or of the Bastan, opens into the plain of Luz. This is one of the least attractive valleys of the Pyrenees; the mountains around it are not picturesque in their forms, and the fissile and easily disintegrated shale composing them, crumbling down and filling up the bottom and sides of the valley, has been cut through by the Bastan and other furious torrents which seam the mountain's sides. From time to time vast masses of débris are washed down, and éboulements ensue, which stop up the watercourses until a débâcle occurs, and spreads desolation below it. Such catastrophes are of frequent occurrence; and the main torrent, the Bastan, is a very scourge. The great elevation of the valley above the sea contributes to its cheerless and forbidding character; and it is in such a situation, at a height 4180 ft. above the sea-level, confined by gloomy mountains which almost seem to overhang it, that

Barèges stands, a watering-place better known by name, perhaps, in distant countries, than any other among the Pyrenees, and in great repute with those who are really ill and in earnest to get well, on account of the cures effected by its waters, but void of all other attractions, destitute even of a tolerable inn (H. de l'Europe, best; —H. de France, uncomfortable, cuisine bad; —H. de la Paix, worse still). There is nothing to see here, so that our advice to travellers for amusement is, pass through, and tarry not. Being the loftiest of the Pyrenean baths, its atmosphere is chilly and variable even in the height of summer. It contains about 70 houses, chiefly lodgings, with two miserable cafés, arranged in a long dull street, running by the side of the Gave. The buildings next the stream, which are meant to last, are based on huge buttresses of masonry, without which precaution they would long ago have been swept away by the inundations of the torrent. A wide gap, however, is left in the midst, upon which only a few temporary booths and huts of wood are raised, for the winter avalanches sweep down from the mountains Ayré on the S. and Midau on the N., through the wide gaping gashes in their sides, which open out opposite the vacant space, and bury this part of the town under the snow for several months of the year. In consequence Barèges is inhabited only during summer and autumn, and is abandoned for the rest of the year, except by a few persons, who take care of the houses, to the wolves and bears, which often come down and prowl about the streets. An Englishman, who came hither in the midst of winter, found the entire population reduced to 30 men and women, collected around the great public bath for the sake of the heat of the water, all busily employed knitting. At the beginning of summer the owners return and dig out their houses from the snow, which covers them up to the first floor. An attempt has been made to arrest the avalanches by driving into the mountain-sides iron bars with chains attached. The triste air of the place is greatly increased by the number of cripples, sick, and invalids you encounter at every step. This may be called the Hospital Brunnen of the Pyrenees, being visited yearly by 1000 or 1200 genuine invalids, to whom the prospect of regaining health is a sufficient attraction. The French government have established here two military

[France.]

Hospitals, capable of receiving 500 or 600 men and 200 officers. The cures effected by the waters are wonderful: their efficacy is greatest in gunshot and other wounds, in curing sores, in relieving rheumatism, stiffness of the joints, and scrofulous complaints. They cause old wounds, or ill-cured ulcers, to open afresh at first, then relieve them by discharges, drawing to the surface extraneous bodies long imbedded in the flesh, and promoting the exfoliation of carious portions of bone, and finally close the wound in a healthy manner.

A new Bath-house was erected by the government, 1864. The mineral water is very strong, its principal ingredient being sulphuret of sodium, with portions of carbonate, muriate, and sulphate of soda, azote, sulphuretted hydrogen, and animal matter. It is derived from 6 to 7 different springs, the most potent being that called Le Tambour, but the supply is scarcely adequate to the demand. They are conducted into the bath-houses, where they fill the various baths, for the use of which 1 fr. 25 c. is charged, and into 3 piscines or public baths capable of holding from 12 to 20 persons each. One of these is appropriated to the soldiers, another to the civil service, the 3rd to the poor. Admission to them is settled by order of precedence, and they are in use all day and all night. Indeed so precious is the fluid, that the water from the bath-houses is said to be turned into the piscines. The piscines are horrid vaulted dens below ground, their roof serving as a promenade, filled with vapour; and the water has a greenish-yellow tint. The waters have a strong smell of rotten eggs, and a nauseous oily taste; after standing they are covered on the surface with a film of glairy unctuous substance, which they also deposit on the sides and bottom of the bath, called Barégine by French chemists. These valuable medicinal springs rise (as usual in the Pyrenees) near a junction of the slate rock with the granite, and force their way to the surface through a mass of débris composed of the neighbouring rocks. They were first brought into notice by a visit which Madame de Maintenon paid to them 1676, by advice of the royal physician Fagon, for the sake of the young Duc du Maine, natural son of Louis XIV., and her pupil. The "gouvernante" dates several of her letters from hence; and after a protracted residence she had the satisfaction of bringing back the little cripple so much better that he could enter the room to meet the king walking. She reached this place by crossing the Tourmalet, the road by Lourdes not being then made, and lodged in the Maison Maraquette. Barèges was once nearly swept away by the bursting of the Lac d'Oncet.

A scanty and stunted wood of firs and alders is planted on the hill above Barèges on the S. It serves as a partial protection from avalanches, and below is converted into a promenade by walks cut along the slopes.

The fine tissue called crêpe de Barèges is not made here, but at Bagnères de Bigorre and Luz.

Diligences go daily in the season to Lourdes, where they correspond with those to Pau, Toulouse, and Bagnères.

The distance from Barèges to Bagnères de Bigorre across the Tourmalet is about 18 m. Including a halt to rest the horses, it takes up from 7 to 8 hours. A good bridle-road, which might be made passable for charrs, leads up the Bastan valley on the l. bank of the torrent. The valley looks very dreary from the barrenness of the mountain tops, and the deep gashes cut in their crumbling sides by the avalanches which rush down them in spring. Yet the course of the falling snow is so regular, that on the very margin of these gashes cottages are built, each protected by a tuft of trees, and along their slopes a few cultivated patches of corn stretch upwards. Two torrents descend from the rt., out of the vales of Lienz and Escabous, at whose head lie nearly a dozen small tarns, or lakes. After passing these, the Bastan is crossed, and the main ascent begins.

[About 1½ hr's. walk from Barèges you pass on the l. a path striking N. up a small valley towards the Pic du Midi de Bigorre. That majestic mountain, which, though 9553 ft. above the sea level, is free from snow in summer, rises on the l. of the pass of the Tourmalet, and is accessible, even on horseback, in 3 to 4½ hrs. from Barèges. The path is steep, and in many places dangerous, there being scarcely room for a horse to step. It is possible to ride to within 100 yards of the summit. The way lies by the margin of the Lac d'Oncet, a picturesque tarn at the foot of the peak, nearly closed in by precipices, about 2000 ft. below the summit. On its margin is a Cabane, furnishing a bed, where travellers may pass the night. The view from the top is magnificent. The Pic stands at the outer verge of the Pyrenean range: it descends with only one break to the plain, and affords a view towards Bordeaux and Toulouse, bounded only by the limit of vision. It comprises on the N. the plains watered by the Adour and Garonne; on the S. the great chain, including the step-like mass of the Mont Perdu, the Cylindre, Tours de Marboré, Brèche de Roland, and Vignemale, covered with glaciers; while among a multitude of peaks to the E. rises the Maladetta, the loftiest of the Pyrenees, forming a conspicuous point in this immensesemicircle of mountains. There is another way down through the Hourquette de Cinq Ours and the ravine leading from the Lac d'Oncet to Trames Aigues in the valley of Grip. See below.]

The Tourmalet is a low curved ridge, such as would be called a col in the Alps—an isthmus uniting the Pic du Midi with the main chain of the Pyrenees; over which lies the passage from the valley of the Gave de Pau into that of the Adour. The old and shorter road is carried up to the col in a series of sharp zigzags, over heaps of shivered shale: the pedestrian will save time by taking it. The new path is longer, and runs more on a level, round the shoulders of the hills. Those bound for the Pic du Midi take this path. On the rt. rise three bristling mountains of fine form, the Caubère, the Campana, and the Pic d'Espade. The summit of the Pass is 7141 ft. above the sea-level: the view from it is limited and not very striking; but as you look back the Monné and mountains above Caunterets are visible beyond it. The vale of Grip opens out far more pleasingly than that of Barèges, carpeted with beautiful pastures; it is the cradle of the infant Adour, which rises near the base of the Pic d'Espade. After a mile or two of gradual descent, the valley makes an abrupt dip, down which the path is carried, by a series of very steep zig-zags called Escalette, to a hamlet occupied by shepherds, called Trames Aigues, at the mouth of a gorge through which the pyramidal mass of the Pic du Midi appears in full majesty. This is the finest object on the pass: its bare precipice, when lighted up by the sun, exhibits the most singularly contorted strata, imitating the lines on an agate. It remains in sight only for a short distance, but from no point does this mountain appear to greater advantage. The summit of the Pic is reached from Bagnères by ascending this valley.

Near Artigues, a hamlet on the rt. beyond the river, is a cascade formed by one of the tributaries of the Adour, and a little lower down is another, the Garret, in the course of the Adour itself, beneath a black fir forest, which covers the shoulder of the mountain like a bear-skin, above the village of Grip. Grip is a prettily situated group of scattered cottages, including a tolerable country Inn, famed for its trout (H. des Voyageurs, chez Cazères): 4 hours' walk or ride from Barèges, and 3 from Bagnères de Bigorre. Grip is much frequented by visitors from both baths, on account of its waterfalls and its pleasing position, precisely in the part of the valley where trees flourish, corn begins to grow, and pastures become most verdant. The Pic du Midi may be reached in 5 h. from this, descending in 3 h. (See last page.)

[From Grip to Bagnères de Bigorre there is a good carriage-road (about 10 m.), which, at Ste. Marie, falls into the valley of Campan, and the route to Luchon by Arreau (Rte. 86). The aspect of the Val de Campan from this point, and in descending to Bigorre, is less attractive than in ascending, owing to the arid, bare, and stained escarpments of the limestone cliffs (Jura limestone) on the rt. bank of the Adour; but there are some fine views on the l., looking up the tributary valleys towards the Pic du Midi.

The valley of the Campan has been celebrated, perhaps beyond its deserts, from the time of Arthur Young to the present time, for its beauty. It is certainly very fertile and is generally of a most brilliant green.

Ste. Marie,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  m. from Bagnères, lies near the point of junction of two valleys, up one of which runs the road to Grip and the Tourmalet, and up the other, that to Luchon by Arreau. The village of Campan, lower down, which gives its name to the valley, is not remarkable, but every traveller is pestered as he passes to visit the grotto, which is not worth seeing.

16 The Pics du Midi and de Mont-aigu are well seen below this through the fine opening of the vale of Lesponne to the l.: near its entrance stands the mansion of St. Paul.

At Baudéan, a small village a little lower down, Baron Larrey, the army surgeon and favourite of Buonaparte, who accompanied him on his various campaigns, was born 1766, in a humble house marked by a marble tablet. The precipitous mountain rising on the rt. is the Penne de l'Hyérès, often ascended on account of its view. The Pont de Gerde, over the Adour, leads to it.

2 m. short of Bagnères, close to the road, is Médous, a sequestered and abandoned Capuchin convent, reduced to uninteresting ruins. A copious source of clear water rising here serves to turn a marble mill. On the outskirts of Bagnères, the road passes close under the promenade called Allées Maintenon.

BAGNERES DE BIGORRE (Route 88).]

The regular road from Grip to Luchon descends the valley to Ste. Marie, and then turns up the Val de Séoubé (Rte. 86). There is, however, a short cut from Grip, usually taken by the guides, over the shoulder of the mountain, cutting off the angle and falling into the other road a mile or two above Ste. Marie. See Rte. 86 for the rest of the road to

LUCHON.

ROUTE 86.

THE PYRENEES—BAGNÈRES DE BIGORRE TO LUCHON, BY THE HOURQUETTE D'ASPIN, ARREAU, COL DE PEYRESOURDE, AND VAL DE L'ARBOUST—EXCURSION TO THE LAC D'O.

70 kils. = 43½ m. Carriage road, but in places very bad, though traversed by diligences in summer. It includes the ascent and descent of 2 passes:—

7½ m. Ste. Marie . . . .	} 5½ hrs. ride or or walk.
2½ m. Paillole . . . .
5 m. Hourquette d'Aspin . .
8 m. Arreau . . . .
8½ m. Loudervielle . . . .	} 6 hrs.
4 m. Col de Peyresourde . .
4 m. Cazeau . . . .
4½ m. Luchon . . . .

The journey may be made in one day, say 14 hours, allowing 2 hours for rest, but it is best to divide it by sleeping at Arreau. The charge for a carriage and pair of horses, including the use of leaders for the steep ascent of the pass, is 60 fr. The total distance may be about 42 m. The excursion to Lac d'Oo is about 12 m. to and fro, off the direct road. The route abounds in picturesque beauties; it ascends the Val Campan (described in Rte. 85D) as far as the village of 7½ m. Ste. Marie.

We here leave, on the rt., the road to Grip and the Tourmalet, and, crossing the Adour, ascend gradually along the bank of its E. tributary, up the Val de Séoubé, and, passing through a scattered and picturesque village, reach (in 2 hours' walking)

Paillole, a group of cottages, with a small Inn where an omelette and trout and beds may be had, in the midst of green pastures, encircled by noble forests, which seem to have suffered little diminution from the woodman's axe. In the mountain on the E. side of the valley, composed of transition limestone, are the quarries of Espiadet, yielding the marble called of Campan. At Campan itself, where the rocks are of the Jura limestone, no marble is obtained.

The ascent to the Col, or Hourquette d'Aspin, is carried up from the farm cottages of Paillole, at first in zigzags, entirely through forests of fir, of ancient growth, covering the hill sides far and wide. Through gaps among the trees, the bare Pic d'Arbizon (?) is seen, from time to time, on the rt., at the head of the valley. The trees thin out before reaching the top of the pass, whose open curved slopes are covered with turf. The Hourquette d'Aspin (1½ hour from Paillole) commands one of the finest views in the Pyrenees. Look back, and the Pic du Midi de Bigorre and the Pic d'Arbizon rise majestically above the pine forests; forward, and the billowy forms of many mountains, and the junction of many valleys, peaks, ridges, and hollows, one behind another, are presented to view, and the horizon is closed by the snowy top of the Maladetta, or at least of the Monts Maudits. The slope of the hills, on the side of Arreau, is so steep that the descent upon that town, which appears lying in a hole, as it were, no more than a rifle-shot off, is only effected by complicated zigzags too abrupt for a heavily-laden carriage to attempt.

Arreau (Inns: H. d'Angleterre—improved, best, and tolerable; H. du Commerce; H. de France) is a small and triste town, nowise remarkable except for its situation, nearly in the midst of the picturesque Val d'Aure, which runs up into the Pyrenees, between the Val de Campan and the Val de Luchon, at the junction of the Nestes (or torrents) de Luron and d'Aure, which turn several saw-mills: the number of Inhabitants is about 1600. Here is a curious castellated Church of the Templars.

Lower down the valley, near Sarrincolin, are the marble quarries of Beyrède and Camous.

[The upper part of the Val d'Aure unfolds scenery whose extreme beauty and magnificence will well recompense the pedestrian disposed to explore it, and prepared for the wretched accommodation which is to be found. Indeed it is advisable to take provisions of some kind, or at least white bread. Gedres may be reached in one very long day from Arreau by starting early. It is best to sleep at Aragnouet, bad as the quarters are. A char-road as far as St. Lary, along the l. bank of the Neste, leads through the villages of Cadéac ( $\frac{1}{2}$  hr.), Ancisan, Guichen, all ancient settlements of the Templars, to

5 $\frac{1}{2}$  m. Vielle (Aure), chief village with a wretched inn (H. d'Espagne). Over this part of the valley the Pics d'Arbizon and d'Azet rise in great grandeur. The road crosses the river, to 7 m. St. Lary—French Douane. Here the road ends. Good mule-path along rt. bank of stream, to Tramesaigues (2 m.), a village having sulphureous springs, a very picturesque ruined castle on a height, and a curious Ch. of the Templars, with a wooden clock tower, and a singularly ornamented door. It is one of the most romantic spots in the Pyrenees. You may cross here by a bridge and return to Vielle by the rt. bank (1 hr.). The upper part of the valley, however, is well worth exploring by any one who can rough it. A ruined arch above the village is a relic of the defences by which the Spaniards barred the valley. At Tramesaigues the valley divides, and 2 paths strike off into Spain, one due S. by the Port de Plan, the other inclining to S.W. by the Port de Bielsa, passing Aragnouet. From this wretched village (7 m. from St. Lary) a path mounts over the Port de Cambiel to Gèdre, at the mouth of the Val d'Héas (Rte. 85 c.). The Port de Cambiel is a depression between the mountains of Cambiel and the Pic Long, nearly 8000 ft. high, whence the Vignemale and M. Perdu are well seen.]

There is a mule-path from Arreau to Luchon, by the Port de Pierrefitte (20 m., 7 hrs. walk), which is loftier and finer in point of scenery than the Col de Peyresourde, but a bad road; a guide is useful at least up to the Col, as it is difficult to find. A carriage road is begun.

A tolerable carriage-road, but narrow, and steep in parts, very circuitous from its windings and zigzags, has been made from Arreau over the Port de Peyresourde to Luchon (6 hrs.). It runs up the valley of the Neste de Louron, which, at first narrow, widens out, and becomes populous higher up, and is studded with a number of feudal castles, now in ruins, but which once defended the passage into Spain, perched on conical rocks. That of Bordères, on the l. bank, was the stronghold of the Counts of Armagnac, owners of the valley, the last of whom, John V., in the reign of Louis XI., 1475, on account of his infamous union with his sister, was excommunicated by the pope, and deprived of his princely domains by Louis. Below this, looking back, there is a good view of the windings of the road to the Col d'Aspin and of the town of Arreau, which looks well only at a distance. Passing Avejan and Adervielle, near the slate-quarries of Genos, the road crosses the river, and quits the valley by a rapid ascent: leading through the narrow street of the village Loudervielle (poor Inn). It then crosses to the rt. bank, and, gradually ascending by narrow lanes flanked by trees and hedges, through the villages Estravielle and several others, reaches Loudervielle, distinguished by its square feudal watch-tower projecting over the valley, and confronted, on the opposite side, by a rival fort, based upon a rock.

[Above Genos the vale of the Louron divides into 2 branches, terminating in the Ports de la Pez and de Clarbide, leading into Spain, but difficult, if not dangerous, and little used; and between them rises the grand Pic de Génos.

The ascent above Loudervielle is by zigzags, short, numerous, and abrupt. The beauties of the valley of Louron are soon hid from view, and by a steep pull you reach the Col de Peyresourde, 4452 ft. above the sea, which separates the Val de Louron from that of l'Arboust, covered with coarse pasturage dotted over with a few fir-trees. The view from the summit is limited. Cultivation is carried up very high in the opposite valley; but the woods (arbusta), from which, doubtless, it derives its name, are greatly diminished. Before descending, a narrow path, difficult for horses, strikes off on the rt. direct to the Lac d'Oo (Rte. 87). The carriage-road to Luchon makes a considerable détour, descending the valley nearly as far as an ancient, half-ruined, solitary ch., planted on a singular mound, by the side of which rises the brand or split fir-tree set in readiness to be lighted on "The Eve of St. John."

Cazeaux village has a curious Romanesque Church of 12th centy., containing rude carvings and mural paintings. Here the path to Lac d'Oo from Luchon turns rt. St. Aventin, another old ch., contains the relics of that saint, who was martyred here, after being shut up in the ruined Castle-Blancat. His body was discovered, 300 years after, by a bull lowing and pawing up the earth, and was placed in a rude shrine behind the altar of the ch. See the S. porch, and 3 Roman altars built into the walls.]

After crossing the minor stream of the Oueil, the fine avenue called Allée des Soupirs leads into LUCHON (Rte. 89).

ROUTE 87.

BAGNERES DE LUCHON TO LAC D'OÛ— THE FROZEN LAKES, PORT D'OÛ, AND VENASQUE.

This is one of the most interesting excursions in the Pyrenees; no spot in the whole chain surpassing in beauty the Lac d'Oo.

	hr. min.
St. Aventin . . . . .	1 0
Cazeaux . . . . .	0 25
6 m. Oo village . . . . .	0 35
Granges d'Astau . . . . .	1 0
4 m. Lac d'Oo (cabane) . . . . .	0 35

In order to reach the beautiful Lac d'Oo you turn to the S., i., at the village of Cazeaux, on the road to B. de Bigorre; and by a very narrow and stony bridle-path, through the fields and along the slopes of a hill which drops down upon the village d'Oo, you enter the Val d'Astos, as this branch of the Val de l'Arboust, at whose upper end lies the Lac, is called. It is very narrow and deep, closed in by impending mountains, and at its head by glaciers. The horse-path up it crosses the clear stream of the Oo, outside of the village, and following the rt. bank, threads stony lanes between pastures of vivid green under the shade of ash-trees. Next, it emerges upon open meadows. Beyond the Granges d'Astau (see rt. the fall called Chevalure de la Madeleine) it begins to mount in earnest, by a long series of zigzags, a high step stretching across the valley, which from below or above appears a precipice, yet is made accessible for horses, but is very toilsome to surmount. We now enter the fir-woods; the mountains, sternly grand, rise beetling over the path. On arriving at the top, the valley is seen to be traversed from side to side by a natural dam of slate rocks, whose strata are vertical. Behind this the little oval basin, called Lac d'Oo, or de Seculéjo,\* lies snugly cradled, shut in all round, save on the side of the dam, by precipices of great height, which, though vertical, are tinged green by partial vegetation. In front, a very fine cascade forms the centre of the picture, and is reflected in a white streak upon the dark mirror of the lake below. The waters of the lake escape in a fall over a gap in the slate-dam already mentioned, upon which also stands a hut (Cabane) where horses may be put up, and refreshment (trout, &c.) obtained. The hut contains 5 or 6 beds, and will be found desirable quarters for a mountaineer wishing to explore the scenery around. The lake is about  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. in diameter: it is worth while to row across it, and approach the waterfall and thoroughly enjoy the grandeur of the scene. The lake abounds with trout. Here a small toll, 25 c. for every horse and person, is paid for keeping up the path, which higher up ceases to be practicable for horses.

* The situation of the Lac d'Oo is very like that of the Upper Gosau lake in Salzburg.

By the Frozen Lakes and Port d'Oo to Venasque in Spain from Lac d'Oo.

	hrs.	min.
Lac d'Espingo . . . . .	1	15	} Take a guide and provisions for the way.
Lac Saounsat . . . . .	0	20
Lac Coume de la Baque . . . . .	2	0
Lac Glacé . . . . .	2	0
Port d'Oo . . . . .	0	50
Val d'Astos, in Spain . . . . .
Venasque . . . . .	5	30

*.* It takes about 4 hrs. to descend from the Port d'Oo to the Lac d'Oo, and 1½ hr. thence to Luchon.

There is a great charm in the frozen lakes which occur in this part of the Pyrenees—bedded in glaciers, and at times to be seen with icebergs floating on their surface.

The waterfall of the Lac d'Oo is fed from a still higher reservoir, the Lac d'Espingo, drawing its supplies from the contiguous glaciers. It may be reached either by a narrow path along the l. or E. margin of the Lac d'Oo, or by crossing it in the boat kept to convey people to the foot of the fall, and then by clambering up at the side of it through a rent in the slate rock, whose broken laminations serve as steps (l'Escala); next, passing above the cascade, it reaches the lake d'Espingo, 1½ hour's walk from Lac d'Oo. The savage wildness and awful stillness of this scene render it very impressive. There is a third lake a little beyond it, called Saounsat, in which fish cannot live, lying at the foot of the Pic de Spijole, amidst scenery far more savage than that of the lake d'Oo. The rest of the way is pathless, and for some distance over beds of snow, and difficult to explore without a guide. The course usually taken is to leave on the l. the 3rd lake and also a 4th, a mere tarn, called Coume de la Baque. Above this the stream divides. Ascend by the rt.-hand branch, and 2 hrs. of hard climbing, and 1 of fatiguing scramble, succeed. Some rounded summits of rock and snowy banks are next crossed, until the summit is reached, the rocky edge of a basin filled with snow, in whose depths lies a 5th lake (Lac Glacé), which remains ice-bound nearly throughout the year, fed by an extensive glacier. A walk of 1½ m. across this snowy basin leads to the col called Port d'Oo, 9850 ft. above the sea-level, the loftiest pass in the Pyrenees, and exceeded by very few among the Alps, leading to the Spanish town of Venasque (Rte. 90). There is here no gap or opening in the rocky wall, only a narrow ridge, 20 ft. wide, commanding a scene of extreme wildness. The view is not very extensive. The Pic de Posets is the chief object on the Spanish side; its glacier is the second in extent, next to that of the Maladetta, among the Pyrenees.

It is 5 hrs. walk from the Port d'Oo to the Spanish town of Venasque, descending the rocks S.S.W., leaving on rt. a small lake, and following a tributary of the Essera into the Val d'Astos, passing the Cabane de Tormes. (Rte. 90.)

ROUTE 88.

PAU TO BAGNÈRES DE BIGORRE, BY
TARBES.

60 kilom.=39 m.

Diligences to Tarbes. Railway to Bagnères de Bigorre.

A high table-land, in part uncultivated, is traversed both before and after reaching

16 Bordes d'Expouy.

The village passed on the rt., shortly before entering Tarbes, distinguished by its lofty ch., is Ibos.

23 Tarbes.—Inns: H. de la Paix, good (try coquille aux champignons);—H. du Grand Soleil;—H. del'Europe. Sir John Froissart put up at the Star, and commended his hostel. Tarbes, chef-lieu of the Dépt. des Hautes Pyrénées, is pleasantly situated on the clear Adour, in the midst of a fertile plain, in full view of the Pyrenees. It has 14,743 Inhab. and some manufactures, but contains few objects of interest. Several public walks contribute to the public health and recreation, the principal and most striking of which is the Place Maubourguet, where are the principal inns and cafés. There is also a pleasant walk by the side of the river. The buildings are not remarkable. On the Place Marcadiou the markets and extensive yearly fairs are held. The market-people, in their various costumes, are worth seeing. There is a fine bridge over the Adour, and a portion of its water is distributed in canals through the town. The French government has a stud (Haras) here for improving the breed of horses. The officials are very civil. The chief building is a modern Cathedral, said to occupy the site of the Castle of the Counts of Bigorre, of which Tarbes (the city of the Tarbelli) was the capital. The English monarchs retained possession of Bigorre, which, with Guienne, formed the dowry of Queen Eleanor, for 300 years, down to the reign of Charles VII. The Black Prince kept his court at Tarbes; Froissart describes his visit to the Count d'Armagnac.

The distant view of the Pyrenees is scarcely equal to that from Pau, but the Pic du Midi de Bigorre here forms the prominent object, and the mountains about Luchon are also visible. Tarbes was the birthplace (1755) of the infamous Bertrand Barrère de Vieusac, member of the National Convention, the meanest and most dastardly as well as the most cruel of the monsters of the Revolution. (See Edin. Rev. 1844.)

A smart action was fought at Tarbes, in the interval between the battle of Orthez and that of Toulouse, in which the British army drove the French from their position, and compelled them to retreat. One French brigade was attacked by the 3 rifle battalions:—"The fight was short, yet wonderfully fierce and violent; for the French, probably thinking their opponents to be Portuguese, on account of their green dress, charged with great hardiness, and being encountered by men not accustomed to yield, they fought muzzle to muzzle, and it was difficult to judge at first who would win. At last the French gave way." But out of the 120 men who fell on the side of the British, there were 12 officers and 80 men of the Rifles.—Napier.

Tarbes is the key to the communication with all parts of the Pyrenees.

Railway to Bordeaux, by Aire and Mont de Marsan, to Lourdes, also to Bagnères.

Diligences go to Barèges; to Auch, Agen; to Luchon, by Lannemezan, a long stage of 20 Eng. m.

From Tarbes the railroad ascends the l. bank of the Adour; gradually advancing within the embrace of the mountains, which rise in height in proportion as we advance. The country is richly cultivated, copiously irrigated, and thickly peopled; no less than 8 villages being passed on this stage. A little off the road lies the Château d'Odos, where Marguerite Queen of Navarre, sister of Francis I., died, 1549. Near Montgaillard, the road from Lourdes, Barèges, and Cauteerets, to Bagnères, falls in on the rt. At Trebons, the Val d'Ossouet opens out on the rt., and runs up towards the Pic de Montaigu.

A little below Pouzac occurs a church, walled round like that of the Templars at Luz. About 2 m. below Bigorre, on the rt. bank of the Adour, near the farther extremity of a wooden bridge over that river, the geologist will discover a knob of hornblende or trap rock (ophite), which appears to have affected the rocks about it, since a little lower down, the granite is found decomposed, intermixed with a limestone which has assumed a large granular structure.

The knoll passed a little behind the village of Pouzac, before reaching the town, is the Camp de César, so called from an intrenchment upon it.

21 BAGNÈRES DE BIGORRE, OR BAGNÈRES STAT.—(Inns: H. de France, most respectable landlord (M. Uzac); comfortable; persons making some stay may board and lodge for 6 fr. per diem; —H. de Paris; —H. de Londres; —Frascati, a large establishment, including mineral baths and springs, a concert room, billiard and coffee rooms; —H. du Grand Soleil; du Bon Pasteur, good; de la Paix.)

Bagnères is the most town-like of the Pyrenean watering-places in extent, amusements, shops, &c., having a permanent population of 8335, often augmented by 6000 or 8000 strangers intent upon pleasure as well as health, during the season, which lasts from the end of June to the end of September. It is a cheerful town of white-washed houses, set off with blue marble window-sills and door-jambs, delightfully situated, just where the plain of Tarbes begins to contract into the vale of Campan, and the slopes which bound it to change from hills into mountains, whose noble peaks and masses rising to the S. form the background of all the beautiful views in and about the town, while undulating slopes, trees, fields of maize, vines, and villas fill up the foreground. It stands at a height of only 1852 ft. above the sea-level; and its fault is the fervid heat, dust, and glare during part of the summer, unfanned by the mountain breezes. The Adour, on whose l. bank it is built, is here greatly reduced in breadth and volume by the numerous artificial cuts and canals, which borrow its waters for the purpose of irrigation, and to turn marble, paper, and other mills. A large part of these streams also is made to circulate through the streets; and thus they contribute to clean them, while they freshen the air. Every street and lane has its own clear gutter, at which the housewives wash their linen and domestic vessels before their own doors; while to the deeper canals, horses, asses, and pigs repair twice a day, and after wading knee deep, are ladled over with water thrown upon their backs by a wooden scoop.

Montaigne preferred Bigorre above all the Eaux-Thermales which he had visited, "comme celles où il y avait plus d'aménité de lieu, commodité de logis, de vivre, et de bonne compagnie;" and on almost all these heads it still continues to deserve praise. The climate is warmer and less variable than that of the mountain baths; the cost of living and price of provisions are moderate, lodgings being very numerous, since almost every householder in the town lets either part or the whole of his domicile.

To the passing traveller its chief attractions are the picturesque beauties of the valleys and mountains around, which afford endless resources: in the town itself are scarcely any curiosities or sights.

The tall, octagonal, Gothic tower, rising near the H. de France, belonged to a church of Jacobins, suppressed at the Revolution. The church of St. John, which belonged to the Templars, but is now converted into a playhouse, retains a fine pointed doorway, enriched with mouldings. One or two feudal towers remain of the ancient fortifications, relics of the days when Froissart describes Bagnères as "une bonne, grosse ville, fermée," whose peaceful citizens suffered sorely from a neighbouring den of thieves, or castle, or, to borrow Froissart's words, "Ceux d'icelle ville avoyent trop fort temps, car ils estoient guerroyés et harriés de ceux de Malvoisin qui sied sur une montagne." (See Rte. 89.) Bagnères was given up to the English by the Treaty of Bretigny; and, as a border fortress on a line of passage into Spain, it was taken by Henry of Trastamare by storm, after the death of his brother Don Pedro the Cruel. One of the towers, called de Malfourat, still stands opposite the Thermes.

Bagnères de Bigorre owes its reputation as a watering-place to its warm saline springs, varying in temperature from 87° to 123° Fahrenheit. They are good for disorders of the digestive organs, and resemble those of Baden-Baden, but contain a smaller quantity of saline substances. They were known to the Romans, as inscriptions found in and near the town prove; indeed the name Bagnères is not improbably traced to the Latin "Balnearia." The sources rise, to the number of about 40, within the space of 3 or 4 hectares, out of a shaly, calcareous rock, supposed to be the equivalent of the Jura limestone.

The Public Bathing Establishment, or Thermes, situated at the extremity of the town, under Mount Olivet, is the largest building in it, and the handsomest and most cleanly in the Pyrenees, though the arrangements for conducting the mineral waters to it are said to be defective, and to deprive them of a part of their medicinal properties. The six springs, La Reine (named from Jeanne de Navarre, mother of Henri IV., who used it 1567), Le Dauphin, Roi de Lannes, St. Roch, Foulon, and Des Yeux, are conducted into the building and distributed among its 29 baths and 4 douches. The water is previously received and cooled down in open tanks; and it is in this situation that the substance called by French chemists Barégine, but whose nature, whether animal or vegetable, conferva or oscillatoria, has not yet been ascertained, collects on the surface.

There are about 20 other private establishments in and around the town; indeed it is only necessary to bore into the ground to a certain depth to obtain with certainty a warm saline spring. The most fashionable and frequented bath, and the water apparently most efficacious, is that of Le Salut, rather less than a mile out of the town, in a great recess in the flank of the Monné hill. The bath-house is a solitary building, approached by a long avenue of poplars, winding through the pretty green valley, crowded at all hours, but chiefly in the morning, by bathers on horseback or foot, or in sedan chairs. It contains only 10 baths, so that, during the season, they are in request at all hours. The water of the Salut is saline, with a sulphureous smell; and it has the property of blackening silver. It has scarcely any perceptible taste, only a sort of milky feel in the mouth.

Bagnères also possesses a chalybeate spring, Fontaine Ferrugineuse (or d'Angoulême), almost the only one in the Pyrenees, situated on the E. flank of the Mount Olivet, in the direction of the village of Pouzac (p. 321). Granite is stated to have been found by digging, within a few feet of the spring, which doubtless originates in that rock.

The vale of Campan above Bagnères abounds in the beautiful marbles for which the Pyrenees are famed: they are much used in Paris, and the working of them gives employment to many persons here. The Marbrerie of M. Gêruzet is on a very extensive scale, and the modes of cutting, turning in the lathe, and polishing large blocks, by machinery moved by the river, are well worth seeing. Tables, chimney-pieces, buffets, pillars, slabs, as well as vases and other articles, are made here; and no less than 20 varieties of marble are employed. The prices are not extravagant: a list of the different varieties is printed with the cost. The most beautiful are the green and flesh-coloured marbles of Campan, the blood-red or Griotte, filled with fossilized shells of the nautilus, whose spirals are disclosed in cutting. The quarries whence they are derived occur in the transition limestone formation. M. Gêruzet is also banker and agent of Coutts.

The knitting of the fine wool of the Pyrenees, derived from Spain, gives employment to the greater part of the females, young and old, in and about the town, who may be seen sitting at their cottage-doors, in the roads and streets, hard at work. The articles made here are counterpanes, mittens, aprons, caps, work-bags, besides shawls and scarfs of woollen gauze, rivalling in thinness fine lace. The so-called crêpe de Barèges is not made at that place, but here and at Luz. The principal dépôt for this kind of articles seems to be chez Mademoiselle Lafourque.

The English service is performed on Sunday, in a Church built for the purpose, by an English clergyman. There is a permanent Protestant French service throughout the year.

There is a Theatre here in a deserted church.

Concerts and balls, during the season, are given at Frascati's, a superb establishment, which was formerly a gambling-house. There is good fly-fishing in the Adour between B. and Tarbes.

Diligences—4 or 5 daily to Pau, Auch, Agen; daily to Luchon, to Caunterets, Luz, Barèges (nearly 40 m. distant by the post and coach road, 20 by the Tourmalet). (See Rte. 85D.)

Railways to Bourdeaux by Tarbes—to Toulouse.

Guides and ponies for excursions in the mountains are very numerous. The landlords of the H. de France or other inns will recommend the most trustworthy.

Chaises à porteurs, or sedan-chairs, are much used by invalids to go to the bath. To be carried to the Bain de Salut and back costs 1 fr.

The Promenades most frequented in and near the town (besides the Avenues de Salut already mentioned) are the Coustous (? Côteau), a long platform in the midst of the town, lined with houses and cafés; shaded with trees, under which a sort of fair is kept up throughout the season, in temporary booths occupied by itinerant marchands. It is crowded in the cool of the evening.

The Allées de Maintenon, a row of trees planted along a bank above the road leading to Campan, are named from the lady who became the wife of Louis XIV., but who visited these baths in the capacity of gouvernante to his deformed child, the Duc du Maine, for the benefit of the waters, in 1675, 1677, and 1681.

The pleasantest walk in the morning is along the slopes of the Mont Olivet, the wooded hill rising behind the Thermes. Numerous shady paths are cut through the trees, whence you may survey the vale of the Adour. One path skirting the flanks of the hill leads to the chalybeate spring.

In the rear of Mont Olivet and of the Bains de Salut rises the loftier cone-topped mountain Bédât, which takes more than half an hour to ascend, but is accessible on horseback.

By crossing the two bridges over the two main arms of the Adour, by which the road to Toulouse quits the town, and turning to the rt., after passing the second, up a steep road in zigzags, the Palombière is reached; a row of trees on the top of the hill, between which the fowlers stretch their nets in September and October, to catch the migratory flocks of wild pigeons, aided by boys hoisted aloft in a sort of cradle at the top of a pair of poles 130 to 150 ft. high above the ground—a position which seems terrific, owing to the bending of the poles beneath their weight. On the approach of the birds the boy throws down a piece of wood somewhat in the shape of a pigeon, which making a whizzing noise causes the birds to stoop in their flight, so as to come within the reach of the net, which the fowler allows to fall on them by loosening the cords. There is scarcely a better point than this to look up the valley of Campan and survey the magnificent mountains at its head, bounding it on the S.W.; the Pic du Midi and the Pic de Montaigu, with the Penne (Pen or Ben, Celtic, head) de l'Hyéris rising on the l. In the midst, the white buildings of Bagnères are spread out, backed by the dark masses of the Mont Olivet, the Bédât, &c. The Adour makes little figure in the view, so much are its streams frittered away; but below the town to the N. its wide, cultivated plain expands to view for miles and miles, until it unites with that of the Garonne.

More distant excursions, of great beauty and interest, are to the Valley of Grip and its cascades; to Trames Aigues, on account of the fine view thence of the Pic du Midi, described Rte. 85D.

The most beautiful scenery of the Vale of Campan is to be found within the branch of it called Val Lesponne, opening out near the Château de St. Paul, between Baudéan and Campan, and running up between the Pic du Midi on the S. and the Pic de Montaigu on the N. Its lower portion has chiefly the pastoral character of rich verdure, alternating with cultivated fields. Beyond the village Lesponne it contracts in width, its aspect alters and becomes wilder; bare rocks and rugged crags succeed to dark forests of beech and pine: the forms of the mountains are very striking. About 2 m. above Lesponne a gorge, opening on the rt., displays the entire mass of the Montaigu, a noble spectacle; and the streamlet traversing it descends the steep rocks in a pretty fall. Half an hour's walk farther, and the valley divides: the branch on the rt. leads, in 3 h., over the pass called Hourquette de Baran by Villelongue, to Pierrefitte in the Val d'Argelez; that on the l., disclosing the noble form of the Pic du Midi, leads up to the Lac Bleu, in which the stream of the Val Lesponne takes its rise. The ascent to it is very steep and fatiguing, though achieved by ladies: it is cut through the mica slate rock, covered at first by a wood, beyond which are extensive pasturages. The lake itself "is an oval basin, or tarn, about 2 m. long, at the top of a mountain, surrounded by bare craggy peaks of the most curious formation, within whose declivities the snow always remains. It is a solitary spot, with no house, or tree, or living thing to be seen in its vicinity, a stillness almost death-like reigning around. It might be dreary, but for the rich warm colouring of the rocks, the depth and stillness of the water, and its intense blue, whence it takes its name."—Ellis. It takes 6 or 7 hours, on foot, to reach Lac Bleu from B. de Bigorre. Higher up is another smaller tarn, difficult to approach, distinguished as the Lac Vert, another of the head-waters of the Adour.

ROUTE 89.

PAU OR BAGNERES DE BIGORRE TO LUCHON.

The road from Pau to Luchon is the same as that to Bigorre, as far as Tarbes (Rte. 88). It then keeps to the E. until it reaches Capbern, whence it is the same as that from Bigorre to Luchon.

The shortest and most romantic way to Luchon from B. de Bigorre is the road by Arreau over the Hourquette d'Aspin, at the head of the Val de Campan, and through the Val de Louron, described in Rte. 86. A Railway will soon supersede the circuitous post-road (78 kil. = 48 m., 7 hrs. posting) which doubles round the mountains, and skirts their roots between the valley of the Adour and that of the Garonne, as follows. It quits Bagnères by crossing the Adour, and for the two first stages is identical with the Rly. to Toulouse.

12 Escaladieu. The post-house occupies part of the buildings of the ancient Abbey, now in ruins, charmingly placed on the borders of the Arros. It now belongs to a gentleman of Bordeaux, who has fitted up a portion of the building as a dwelling. The chapel remains, with some fragments of Gothic sculpture. A little beyond it the ruins of the Castle Mauverin (i. e. Mauvais Voisin, a name given by the inhabitants of the neighbouring towns, who suffered from the depredations of the bands of marauders sheltered in this stronghold) crown a detached hill. It witnessed many exploits during the occupation of this country by the English. It was besieged 1374, by the Duc d'Anjou, with an army of 8000 men; and the strength of the castle was so great that it would have held out for a very long time, but, the well which supplied it being without the walls, the besiegers cut off the communication, and as the weather was hot and the cisterns dry, not a drop of rain having fallen for six weeks, the garrison were obliged to come to terms. The Duc d'Anjou allowed them to depart, saying, "Get about your business, each of you to your own countries, without entering any fort that holds out against us; for if you do so, and I get hold of you, I will deliver you up to Jocelin (his headsmen), who will shave you without a razor." He also allowed them to carry off as much of their booty as they could convey in trunks on sumpter horses.—See Froissart.

Capbern, a little farther on the road, is a small village, on one side of which,  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. off, in a retired nook, are the Sulphureous Springs of Capbern, having a bathing establishment, 3 hotels (de France, des Pyrénées), and several lodging-houses attached to it. It is a place of increasing resort, owing to the virtue of its waters. Here we come into the direct road from Pau or Tarbes to Luchon.

14 Lannemezan (Inn not good). The little chapel shows an opening by which the Cagots might hear mass from the outside, not being allowed to enter. This was in use down to the end of the 17th centy. On quitting this small bourg, a road branches off, S., into the Val d'Aure, to Arreau (Rte. 86). There is a short cut for the pedestrian, or equestrian, to St. Bertrand by La Barthe, where is a good little country inn, opposite the ancient square tower, at the E. end of the village.

16 Montrejeau Stat. (Inn not good), a town of 3944 Inhab., in front of the opening of the Vale of the Garonne, whose vista is terminated by the grand peaks and ridges attached to the Monts Maudits, ranking among the highest of the Pyrenees; at whose foot, on the S., rises the Ebro, and on the N. the Garonne. It is a truly magnificent view. The stream of the Neste d'Aure falls into the Garonne a little above this. This is a Station on the Railroad from Bagnères to Toulouse (Rte. 91). The road to Luchon (24 m. distant), crossing the Garonne, begins to ascend its valley.

[On its rt. bank ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. off the road) lies the ancient and curious walled town of

St. Bertrand de Comminges (Inn: H. de Comminges) (Lugdunum Convenarum), situated at the opening of the Val de Barousse, upon and around a solitary rock, rising picturesquely out of the plain, and commanding a grand distant view of the Pyrenees. Its summit is crowned by a fine Gothic church, date 1304–52, including a Romanesque W. front and tower; a nave without aisles, 1304–52, and a choir with 11 chapels partly pointed, partly Renaissance, finished 1535. The choir and organ are ornamented with wood carvings of remarkable excellence. Obs. the 70 carved stalls, a tree of Jesse, the high altar, the roodloft (jubé), and the monument of Bp. Hugh de Castillione (date 1351) in white marble. Upon the walls are rude paintings of the Miracles of St. Bertrand; and some relics of the saint are preserved in the sacristy. Here is hung up the skin of a crocodile, which is said to have infested the neighbourhood and to have been destroyed by the saint! The interesting Romanesque cloisters are in the style of the 11th or 12th centy., with round arches on coupled shafts. This church was once a cathedral, and the town itself, now deserted (847 Inhab.), was the capital of a comté, and a bishop's see. The extent of the Roman settlement here is proved by the remains of buildings, sculptures, altars, discovered here. The Ch. of St. Just, on the N.W. side of the hill, between St. B. and Valcabrière, was built in the 11th centy., almost entirely of Roman fragments. Behind the altar is a curious stone shrine of St. Just. (See Rte. )

The Grotto of Gargas, 4 m. W. of St. Bertrand, by Nestier and Tiberan (? Tiberius), in the wooded hill extending between the Garonne and Neste, is the finest in the Pyrenees for extent and the beauty of its stalactites: the entrance is a hole so small that it is necessary to crawl through on one's hands and knees.]

The high road to Luchon, leaving St. Bertrand on one side, again crosses the Garonne, by the Pont de Labroquère, and pursues its l. bank, through scenery of great interest, in which well-cultivated fields, enclosed by festoons of vines, hanging from tree to tree, form the foreground, and grand mountains the distance, by 18 Esténos—to Cierp, where we quit the Garonne, and enter the Vale of the Pique, which becomes its affluent at Cierp, a picturesque village both on account of its antique cottages, and from its position, under cliffs which nearly overhang it, at a point where the vistas of 2 valleys, meeting, disclose noble views. There are quarries of a beautiful marble near this.

[A road runs from Cierp up the Valley of the Garonne (Vallée d'Aran), one of the most beautiful in the Pyrenees, to St. Béat, the last town of France, situated in a narrow gorge between high mountains. (See Rte. 89 g.) St. Béat is not more than 5 m. from the Spanish frontier.]

The Valley of the Pique, which is very picturesquely varied with wood, rock, human habitations, and cultivated fields, presents a succession of savage contractions, and smiling basin-shaped expansions, covered with verdure, the river alternately winding over the plain and dashing through the gorge; its upper end terminated by the grand snowy peaks contiguous to the Port de Venasque. The road, which now makes several awkward ascents and steep descents, is about to be carried on a regular terrace. When the iron furnaces of Guron are passed, we traverse, near Pont de Casaux, a defile which some have considered a work of art, and have attributed it to the Romans.

21 Luchon or Bagnères de Luchon.—Inns: H. Bonnemaison, and de Londres, best situation; H. des Bains, well spoken of; H. des Empereurs; H. d'Angleterre, good; H. Sacaron, 1861, charge 8½ frs. a day, but in July and August 9½ frs.; H. du Commerce. This is an expensive place in the height of the season—

August and September. Strangers about to stop some days here had better hire lodgings, of which there are enough to accommodate a large number of persons.

No place in the Pyrenees surpasses in beauty of situation, and in variety and interest of excursions, Bagnères de Luchon. The mountains are loftier than those of Bigorre, and entirely surround the flat, fertile plain on the edge of which it stands, forming a sort of oval basin in the very heart of the Pyrenees. On the W., close to the town, the Val de l'Arboust (Rte. 86) opens out; on the S., high among the clouds, rise bare, serrated ridges, destitute of vegetation, but contrasting grandly with the luxuriantly cropped plain near at hand.

Luchon is a town of 3085 Inhab. It is much improved of late by the construction of handsome houses, and is rising as a place of fashionable resort. Two of the principal streets are the Allée de la Pique, leading to the river, and the Cours d'Etigny, a triple avenue of limes, lined with buildings, including the chief inns and best lodging-houses. Another avenue stretches up the hill to the entrance of the Val de l'Arboust; and a third, of poplars, crosses the valley from the church towards the river Pique. These Allées enable the pedestrian to move to a considerable distance under shade, protected from the sun, and enjoying the view of the mountains which close the upper end of the valley. This range of peaks and precipices screens from view the Maladetta, the Monarch of the Pyrenees. In the middle distance rises the tower of Castel Vieil, which stops the mouth of the gorge to the S.

At the end of the Cours d'Etigny are the new Baths, built on the plan of those at some of the German Spas, to which the architects were purposely sent to obtain the best plan. The interior is handsome, but the architects have been singularly unfortunate in the exterior, and it is a pity that the Bath-rooms should be dark, damp, and deficient in comfort. The price of the bath depends on the hour at which you take it. The Baths stand at the foot of a precipitous wooded hill of slate, called Super Bagnères: the waters issue forth at the junction of the slate with the granite; they are sulphureous (except two, one saline, the other ferruginous?), and vary in temperature from 77° to 152° Fahr. The waters are good for rheumatic complaints, paralysis, and cutaneous disorders, but are injurious in nervous diseases, and to persons of sanguine temperament. They are taken internally as well as in baths.

The drinking fountains are at the back of the baths; others about 300 yards further up the valley. The waters are rendered palatable by the mixture of sirops and liqueurs.

The Ferruginous Spring rises 1½ m. up the valley, just above Castel Vieil, in a romantic spot, but the water may be had fresh in Luchon every morning at 50 c. the bottle.

The Romans were well acquainted with the hot springs of Luchon; many altars and inscriptions, now in the museum of Toulouse, have been dug up here, some of them dedicated Deo Lizoni, from whom the place would appear to be named.

A building has been appropriated to the English Ch. Service. Contributions for its support are much required.

M. Lambron has great reputation as a physician. (N.B. 5 fr. for a visit to a medical man, 10 fr. when he visits you, are ample.)

Zigzag paths run up the hill behind the baths, through the wood, and along the face of the hill; and have been extended to the English gardens lately laid out.

The chief season of these baths is June and July to the middle of September, when they are crowded with French visitors, whose delight it is to go out riding in large parties, and return charging in a body up the Cour d'Etigny, singing, shouting, and cracking their whips with the greatest glee.

About 200 horses and ponies are kept here for hire, at the usual charges, and are in constant request in fine weather. Guides: the following are experienced and trustworthy, and can furnish good horses:—Laffont; Jacques Sors Argarot, 53, Allée d'Etigny; Jean Tournen (H. Bonnemaison); Baptiste Ciert; and Bertrand Estrujo. Laffont, called Prince, is a good guide, and has very good horses: his wife is an English-woman, who has been exceedingly kind and serviceable to English travellers when taken ill, as they too often are.

N.B.—A necessary qualification for an excursion into Spain is that the guide should speak Spanish, which many do.

At Luchon the quality of the horse is often of more importance than that of the guide, except on very severe mountain excursions.

Diligences—daily to Montrejeau Stat. (24 m.) on the rail to Toulouse; 1 to Auch and Agen; 1 or 2 to Bagnères de Bigorre; to Tarbes Stat., and Pau.

The inhabitants of the valley of Luchon and its tributaries appear an inferior race to those of the valleys in the W.; not so well off, nor so well clothed. In their dress the berret gives place to an ugly night-cap, and the capulet, if retained, is black, instead of red. Beggars are very numerous, and goitres not uncommon; yet the lower parts of the valleys are fertile, producing two crops of corn in the year; the first of wheat or maize, the second, late in September, when the fields are literally white, for the harvest of buck-wheat. Many goats are kept, which find sufficient food in the luxuriant herbage of the rocks; and the tinkling bells of the scampering flock, as they enter the town at sunset, produce a merry sound.

The Cascade of Montauban, on the E. side of the valley, is a very romantic spot, and, though the fall is inconsiderable, forms an agreeable walk. It is approached through a garden made by the curé of the village, who devotes to his parish the douceurs left by visitors.

A farther scramble up the course of the stream will repay the hardy pedestrian by bringing him to another Fall; and still further on, after about an hour's good walking, he will come to an Oule or vast circular excavation in the rock. Fine views into the valley beneath. The summit of the mountain, called Su er Bagnères, rising 5000 ft.

above the town, and made accessible for some distance by paths from the village of St. Avenin, commands a nobly magnificent panorama of the flat land on the N., and of the mountains E., W., and S., including the Maladetta, whose glaciers appear through a gap in the chain. You may return to Luchon by descending from the top into the Val de Lys.

The Excursions to be made from Luchon are superior to those from B. de Bigorre, and are indeed the finest in the Pyrenees. a. That to the beautiful Lac de Seculejo or Lac d'Oo will be found in Rte. 86.

a. 1. That to the Port de Venasque, perhaps the grandest of all, is described in Rte. 90.

b. Ascent of the Pic de Monné well repays the visitor for the fatigue of a ride of about 5 hours, descent in 4. A guide is useful. Take provisions, and start early, 6 A.M. You follow the road to Arreau by Col de Peyresourde (Rte. 86) nearly as far as St. Avenin, before which you turn rt., N.W., into a bridle-road leading into the valley of Oueil, which you traverse through its whole length, through the villages of Benqué Debas and Benqué Dessus and Mayregne, to Bourg (3½ hrs.). Here the horses rest at a poor cabaret. From Bourg to the Port de Pierrefitte is 1½ hr. (11½ m. from Luchon), 5925 ft. above the sea, a grassy ridge, occupied by shepherds with their flocks; fierce dogs. There is a footway hence to Arreau, 8 m. in 3 hrs., leaving on l. the Lac de Bordères. From the port to Pic de Monné is 40 min. (7044 ft.). You may ride all the way except about ¼ m. below the top, where the mountain-path disappears. The panorama of mountains seen from this spot is magnificent, including the chief summits of the range, especially the Pic de Midi de Bigorre. The return may be made through the Val de l'Arboust, which lengthens the journey by 1 hour.

bb. The Bacanère (Black Cow) a mountain 12 m. N.E. of Lucon, rising between the valleys of the Pique and the Garonne, 7080 ft. above the sea, is an interesting 5 or 6 hrs. ride; a guide is needed. Take the road down the valley, through the villages Montauban, Juzet (see waterfall), where the steep ascent begins by the village ch. of Sode, turning rt. to Artigues on the mountain side (view of Maladetta), to Cigalère, a pointed rock, like a ruined castle. From the top, when the sky is clear, the Nethou, Maladetta, Vignemale, Pic du Midi, and mountains of Catalonia may be seen, with the valleys of Aran and Luchon under your feet. This is one of the most pleasing excursions and ascents. Descending a little from the summit, past a small lake and cabane, you may reach in 40 min. the Pales du Burat, another ridge further E., overlooking the valley of the Garonne.

c. The Val de Lys, so called, not from its lilies, but from an old or provincial form of the word eau, water, from the number of streams and waterfalls, is a ride of 2 h. or a walk of 3, the distance being 7 or 8 m. The road to it ascends the valley from the baths, having the Pique at some distance on the l.

35 min. It passes, also on the l., the picturesque border tower of Castel Vieil, perched on a projecting crag, before the mouth of the Gorge de St. Mamet, leading, by the pass of the Portillon, into the Spanish Val d'Aran.

25 min. The road crosses the Pique to its rt. bank. At Pont Ravi, leaving on the l. the road to Venasque, it recrosses the Pique, to enter the fine wooded gorge out of which the Lys issues to unite with it. After a mile and a half's pleasant ride through the wood, under the shade of beech and hazels, the gorge expands into a green basin-shaped valley, of a truly pastoral character; the pastures covered with herds occupying its bottom being overlooked by very lofty mountains, girt with fir woods, especially at its upper end. It is there shut in by the snowy peaks and glaciers of the Crabioules, rising above the fir-clad precipices, which look like a festooned curtain of black drapery drawn across the valley head. The centre of this curtain of foliage is streaked by the white lines of the foaming cascades which form the lions of this valley. The principal one leaps down into the valley, about 200 yards above the little Inn or Cabane (2 hrs.), where visitors put up their horses, and may obtain refreshments. The slate rock is cleft by a very narrow fissure or groove, called Trou d'Enfer, down which the fall, really a picturesque one, dashes. A part of the jet, in descending, strikes a projecting rock, which causes it to shoot forward and spread, something like the Cascade des P  lerins at Chamounix—a very pretty effect. The pedestrian may spend an hour or 2 in visiting the series of falls behind the Cabane, accessible by paths and foot-bridges. The fall to the W., called Cascade de C  ur, is less striking in character; it is fed by the glaciers of the Tuque de Maupas. The glacier of Crabioules, 2    hrs. above the Cabane, is very difficult of access, owing to its steep inclination and its crevices. It joins, on the W., the glacier of the Portillon d'Oo and the Port d'Oo. The pedestrian may go to the Val de Lys or return from it by Super Bagn  res, the mountain behind Luchon, whence he will enjoy a magnificent view.

g. The Val d'Aran well deserves a visit on account of its magnificent scenery, and on account of its truly Spanish character, having belonged to Spain from the year 1192. It is said that the valley was first inhabited by thieves and vagabonds (Moors) expelled from Spain. It was ravaged by the Carlists in the war, and now contains 32 villages, 69 churches, and 30,000 Inhab. There is a carriage road up it from St. B  t to Pont du Roi, 6    m.; thence to Viella, mule-path. From Luchon you may either follow the carriage road down the valley of the Pique by Cierp and St. B  t, or cross over from the valley of Luchon on horseback by the Pass of the Port de Portillon to Bosost in the Val d'Aran.

By road from Luchon :

13 m. St. B��t . . .	} Dusty road; best Inns, Lez Baths and Bosost.
12 m. Bosost . . .
4 �� m. Las Bordes . .
5 �� m. Viella . . .

At Cierp on the road from Luchon to Toulouse a road strikes off rt. to 13 m. St. B  t (Inn: Chez Forban, H. de France), a picturesque town in a gorge of the Garonne, which leaves barely space for the street and the river. Here is a curious little ch. E. apse partly of 10th cent. Ruined castle on height. Marble quarries.

3 kil. Arlos. On rt. rises the mountain called Pales de Burat. (See above.)

3 kil. Fos, town of 1727 Inhab., famed for fruit—grapes, &c.

4    kil. Pont du Roi, a bridge over a mere rent in the mountain, through which the Garonne passes. Here at the French frontier the carriage road ceases. About 200 yards above this the Maladetta may be seen. The valley here is narrow and grand in the extreme.

5    kil. Lez, 2 m. from Bosost, is a dirty village with a bathing establishment, and near it the Ch  teau de Les, where good accommodation may be had. High above is the village of Canejan.

3 kil. Bosost (Inn: H. de Commerce, chez Puch, dear, but decent food), a very old town, prettily situated on the Garonne. Here the mule-path from Luchon by the Port de Portillon falls in. The path skirts rt. the base of the Entecade, and at the end of 2 hrs. walk you reach

7 kil. Las Bordes. Castel Leon, at the junction of the 2 head-waters of the Garonne—E. the Viella branch (see below), W. the Garonne of J  ueou, descending from the Gorge of Artigues de Lin. Avoid the Inn. The river is here crossed by a bridge near the Castle, which was ruined by the French in the War of the Succession.

A walk of 3 hrs. from this, up the W. stream, passing (1 hr. 15 min.) the Hospice of Artigues de Lin, and through a grand gorge covered with dense intact forests of prim  val growth (   hr. further), brings you to a deep hollow at the foot of precipices, out of which rises one of the chief sources of the Garonne. It issues forth from a series of cavities encumbered with broken rocks called Gou  il de Dj  ueou, and by the Spaniards Ojos de Garonna, "the Garonne's eye." The copious stream which here bursts forth to day is the torrent whose cradle is the snows of the Maladetta, and which, after being lost in the Trou du Toro (Rte. 90), pursues its way under ground, through the caverns of the limestone mountains, as far as this spot, where it rises a ready-made river.

[From Castel Leon the E. fork of the valley may be ascended to Viella. The road is on the l. bank of the Garonne; the scenery is very picturesque, the mountain-side where it is not cultivated is covered with forest, and high up appear numerous curious villages and churches, all on the sunny side of the vale. The road crosses the Garonne 3 m. from Castel Leon, and 2 m. further reaches Viella (Inns: to be avoided,—dirty, vermin, &c.). This place is prettily situated, but contains nothing worthy of notice except the tower of the ch. Spanish scarfs, shawls, caps, and sandals are sold here and throughout the valley, but there is a duty on taking them into France. Above Viella is a pass into Spain by the Port de Viella (8322 ft.) and the Port de Castanèze, in 15 hrs. to Venasque. A mule-path.]

road is the same as that to Val de Lys as far as the 2nd bridge over the Pique above Castel Vieil. Leaving the opening of the Val de Lys on the rt., without crossing this bridge, you continue up the valley of the Pique, through park-like scenery, under the grateful shade of beech forests interspersed with firs and yews, between whose branches appear the rugged crags of the Pic de la Pique on the opposite side of the torrent. The ascent is gradual up to

The Hospice de Bagnères, the last habitation in France. Here the horses are commonly allowed  $\frac{1}{2}$  hour's rest. It is a large, massive, dirty stone house, like a Refuge on a Swiss mountain pass, belonging to the Commune of Luchon, farmed out every year to an innkeeper; and the guides use every influence to induce travellers to bait here both going and returning, which is not necessary. The accommodation is more to the taste of the guides than of their employers; but food, and even a bed, may be had in it. It is far better to return to Luchon, unless storm or darkness should compel a halt.

[2 hrs. ride up the valley of the Pique, above the Hospice (including 1 hr. of steep zigzags, leading to fine mountain pasture), conducts to the summit of the \*Entécade*, a mountain on the frontier of Catalonia, commanding superb views of the Maladetta, and other snowy peaks of the Pyrenean chain clothed in splendid pine forests; of the source and valley of the Garonne far below, including numerous Spanish villages. Horses can ascend as far as the small tarn or pool of Garees, near which is a shepherd's hut 700 ft. below the top—7417 ft. above the sea-level. No distinct path exists most part of the way, so a guide is needed. The whole excursion from Luchon and back on horseback takes up about 8 hrs.]

Opposite the Hospice, at rt. angles to the vale of the Pique, a colossal semi-circular recess, or natural cirque surrounded with bare precipices, opens out; it is a scene of dreary solitude, disturbed only by the hoarse raven or the howling blast. It is approached by a little wooden bridge crossing the

ROUTE 90.

BAGNERES DE LUCHON TO VENASQUE, BY THE PORT DE VENASQUE—RETURN TO LUCHON BY THE PORT DE PICADE [ASCENT OF THE ENTECADE]—THE MALADETTA.

Time.	Miles.
35 m. Castel Vieil
1 hr. 25 m. Hospice de Luchon	6 $\frac{1}{2}$
2 hrs. 30 m. Port de Venasque	3 $\frac{1}{2}$
Fountain of Penna Bianca
30 m. Port de Picade	1
Pas de l'Escalette.
Hospice	5
1 h. 30 m. Luchon

None of the excursions from Luchon surpass in beauty of scenery or interest that to the Port de Venasque. The Pique in front of the hospice, under the singular Pic rising on the l. hand.

On commencing the ascent, one would not easily conjecture that there was any means of exit for the path, much less in what particular point the outlet exists by which the mountains are to be passed. The path ascends constantly in zigzags. At a spot called Les Eulets a waterfall dashes down in summer and avalanches in winter; to escape which, the path crosses the stream. A recess called Trou des Chaudronniers is so called because a party of travelling tinkers were here overwhelmed in the snow. The sure-footed ponies climb up the staircase paths like kids, over rough stones or fallen débris alternating with solid rock. Higher up a strong gusty wind blows down upon you. About 3-4ths of the way up is a small ledge or recess in the face of the mountain, in which lie 4 small deep-sunken tarns or ponds, frozen over a great part of the year. The steepness and the shortness of the zigzags increase near the top, where the path turns abruptly at every 6 or 8 ft., and the ground is covered with loose splintery shale. The rocks in front hide all view until you enter the Port, a wedge-shaped fissure cut into the crest of the mountain;—a mere gate, not more than 14 ft. wide. On passing this, you step from France into Spain, the boundary mark being an iron cross. To tarry in the singular portal or port-hole is hardly possible on account of the wind, which threatens to blow you back again more quickly than you had entered. It is more convenient to descend the sloping rocks a little way to the fountain of Penna Blanca, there to halt and contemplate the scene. On reaching the mountain crest, a view, entirely concealed before, opens out—an enormous mountain, the highest of the Pyrenees, called the Maladetta, or Accursed, from the utterly barren and dreary air of it and everything about it. Its huge round top and ridges are covered with everlasting snow, except where one or two bristling black peaks break through it; its lower part is shrouded with scanty shattered fir-trees: a great gulf or deep ravine separates it from the bare slope on which you stand; not a sign of human habitation or cultivation; all around a desert. There are usually some Spanish carabineers watching the pass from the custom-house at Venasque. Horses are not allowed to enter Spain without a permit, but no difficulty is made to their returning through the Port de Picade.

The Port de Venasque is 7917 ft. above the sea level. On the W. of the port rises the Pic de Sauvagarde (9140 ft.), commanding a view on all sides, even to Luchon on the N. The ascent requires an hr., but caution must be used in passing over the slaty screes which cover its very steep N. face. An English clergyman (Archdeacon Hardwick) perished by losing his footing in this ascent, 1859.

In the depths of the hollow below the Port, within the Spanish territory, the Essera takes its rise, and a low ridge stretching across at its head unites the Maladetta with the main chain and the mountains of the Port de Venasque. To the E. of this ridge, on the l., lies the Trou du Toro, an oval basin or gulf without visible outlet, excavated in the limestone rock to a depth of 80 ft., which, swallowing up the waters descending from the N.E. slope of the Maladetta, is believed to convey them under the intervening mountains into the French valley of Artigues de Lin, where, rising again to light at the Œil de Joueou, they form the

Source of the Garonne. The Trou de Taureau may be visited by a détour of 3 hrs., returning to the Port de Picade.

---

The Spanish town of Venasque is about as far from the Port to the S.W. as Luchon is to the N., i. e. a walk of 4 hrs.; but the way is very rough, descending by zigzags the steep slope of the Penna Bianca, following the windings of the Essera, and threading the mass of rocks and rubbish fallen from the gigantic precipice on the rt.

1½ hour's walk from the Port on the rt. bank of the stream is the Spanish Hospice, "a vile posada," serving as a guard and custom-house, occupied by carabineers. Here baggage is searched, and passports and permits for the entry of horses into Spain are called for. Civility and a small fee may be resorted to advantageously. From this to Venasque, about 10 m., the path runs by the side of the Essera, and is very difficult. The scenery of the gorge is grand but savage, its striking feature being the number of its waterfalls, and rapidity of the torrents descending into it. Some way down you see l. on the hill-side beyond the river the Baths of Venasque. Below this the Essera is crossed by the bridge of Campamiento (3¼ hrs.).

The valley becomes clothed with box-trees before reaching the Pont de Cubère, which is left on rt. Over this bridge the path from the Port d'Oo (see Rte. 87) up the Val d'Astos.

Venasque—town and Castle—is suddenly disclosed to view by a bend in the valley. It is a wretched dirty and foul place, 19 m. from Luchon. Inns: Chez Brousseau, or Chez Pedro Ferras: board and lodging 8 or 10 frs. a day; bread excellent; ask for vin Rancion and for chocolate. Its most conspicuous feature is the gloomy Castle by which it is surmounted, originally a stronghold of the middle ages, converted by modern works into a fortress, which was besieged and taken by the French in 1809, and possesses no great strength. It is surrounded on three sides by deep ravines.

In the principal street, Calle Mayor, are several picturesque old houses ornamented with sculptured figures, coats of arms, &c., and some of these retain the towers which originally served for defence. The Church, at the end of the town farthest from the castle, is a Romanesque building, fitted up in the Spanish style, with carving, gilding, &c. Another church was destroyed by the French, who did much mischief here.

You may return from Venasque to the Spanish Hospice and over the Pommerau into the gorge of Artigues de Lin, visiting on the way the Œil de Garonne, to Bosost) unless the Inn at Viella be improved), and reach Luchon by St. Béal the 3rd night. Or

The excursion may be prolonged round the base of the Maladetta, from Venasque, through wild and magnificent scenery, sleeping the first night at Venasque, second at Vidalies, third at Bosost. This is a rough ride, but is practicable for ladies.

---

Port de Venasque to Luchon, by the Port de Picade.

The ridge of the Penna Blanca, or Poumero, through which the Port de Venasque opens, is traversed, about 1½ m. to the E. of it, by another pass, called Port de Picade, reached by turning to the l. across the white sloping rocks, from the spring mentioned above, and then scaling a steep ascent encumbered with rubbish, and not marked by any path. A path leads from the Port de Picade to the Œil de Joueou and Artigues de Lin. At the Port you pass out of Arragon into a corner of Catalonia, and look down upon a chaos of wild peaks and ridges. ½ m. further on, the ridge is again crossed by the Pas de l'Escalette. Here is a very narrow path carried along the shattered edges of the slaty stone, barely traced among shivers and splinters of rock upon the very ridge or crest of the Sierra, along the brink of the precipice. It is a grand wild spot. The gigantic Pic de Fourcade, rising over head, is the striking feature in the near view. From this you descend (in 1 hr. 20 m.) to the Hospice de Bagnères by a path marked with tolerable distinctness on the grassy slopes, and, though steep, much easier than that up to the Port de Venasque. Thus the traveller has passed from France into Spain through one door or gap in the great separation-wall between them, and returned through another.

---

Ascent of the Maladetta from the Port de Venasque, a 10 hours' excursion; hard work, requiring guides, ropes, and other aids for glacier work. Take provision. The following route is derived from Mr. Packe, who made the ascent more than once:—

	hr. min.
Port de Venasque . . . . .	1 0
Plan des Etangs . . . . .	0 40
Rencluse . . . . .	2 0
Portillon . . . . .	2 0
Summit of Néthou . . . . .	1 0
1 hour on summit . . . . .	6 30
Descent—1 hr. halt at Rencluse to P. de Venasque . . . . .

Cost.

2 guides, at 15 frs. a day, for 2 days . . . . .	60 frs.
3 horses, 5 fr. a day . . . . .	30 „
Food for ditto . . . . .	5 „

Say, total . . . . . 95 to 100 „

From the Port de Venasque you descend to a marshy flat called Plan des Etangs, extending to the wooded flanks of the Mont Paderne. From a cabin hut in the midst of it the ascent begins,—to the Rencluse (Enclos), a chasm in the rock, into which the waters of the upper Essera, descending from the W. or Maladetta glaciers, sink, and are lost for a time until they reappear near the Hospice of Venasque, just as the waters of the stream descending from the E. glacier of Néthou disappear in the Trou du Taureau. A little above this chasm (100 yds.), on the l. bank of the stream, is the cave of the Rencluse, marked by a few stunted firs. It is a mere shelter of rock where travellers usually pass the night, and light a fire to prepare their victuals. It takes 5 hrs. to reach the summit from the Rencluse cave, recrossing the stream, and following upward the rocky ridge (arête) which divides the glacier of Néthou E. from that of the Maladetta W., till you come to a gap or Portillon. Through this you descend upon the Néthou glacier. Here the party should be roped together to prevent their being lost in the crevasses, a fate which befell a guide named Barreau in 1824. Passing the bed of a glacier lake which ran out and disappeared 1837, you have a dome of ice to scale at a steep inclination, and then to pass a narrow arête of blocks of granite piled one on the other, extending 60 yds., with a precipice on either side, called Pont de Mahomet. This brings you to the Pic de Néthou, the highest summit in the Pyrenees, 11,168 feet above the sea-level, marked by a pile of granite blocks. This peak was first ascended by a Russian, M. de Tchihatcheff, with a French gentleman and 3 guides, in 1842.

ROUTE 91.

TOULOUSE TO LUCHON OR BAGNÈRES DE BIGORRE, BY ST. GAUDENS—RAIL.

To B. de Bigorre, 144 kilom. = 90 Eng. m.; to Luchon, 135 kilom. = 84 Eng. m.

Railway to St. Gaudens and Montrejean, 3 trains daily, 2½ to 3½ hrs.

The first part of the road, across the great plain of Languedoc, and along the l. bank of the Garonne, though seldom in sight of the river, is very monotonous. The population is dense, and every inch of ground is greedily cultivated. There is not a garden or a flower to be seen. The land, though very fertile, looks arid as a desert, and the towns are most dreary and melancholy. The Pyrenees are yet too distant to form an important feature, but the richness of the soil and abundance of the crops are very remarkable. The course of cultivation over most of the plain has been for many years as follows: wheat, sown in the autumn, taken off in July; buckwheat then sown, and taken off in October; a green crop is then sown, and taken off in May; Indian corn is then sown, and taken off in autumn; then wheat again, &c. There is a great abundance of fowls, turkeys, and geese; the geese are gigantic.

The Duke of Wellington attempted the passage of the Garonne at Portet, a village on the l. of the high road, 6 m. above Toulouse, but the width of the river proved too great for the pontoons provided, and the army consequently crossed lower down, below Toulouse. The confluence of the Ariège with the Garonne takes place opposite Portet. A few miles from Toulouse rt. a huge prison.

12 Port St. Simon Stat. Rail to Foix diverges.

21 Muret Stat. (Inn: H. de France). A dismal place. The army of the Comte de Toulouse, aided by Pedro II., king of Arragon, amounting to 40,000 men, was defeated under the walls of Muret by Simon de Montfort, who made a sortie with 14,000 men, and cut the besiegers to pieces, leaving Pedro dead on the field.

42 Carbonne Stat. Here Lord Hill crossed the Garonne with 18,000 men; but, finding the roads impassable, speedily returned to march along the l. bank, against St. Cyprien, the faubourg of Toulouse.

27 Martres Stat. (Inn: H. d'Espagne; fare good, accommodation bad), a small dilapidated town, with remains of old walls on a very small scale. In a field near this, interesting Roman antiquities have been discovered, consisting of an immense number of busts, statues, reliefs, inscriptions, &c., now deposited in the museum of Toulouse, marking this as the site of the ancient town Calagorris Convenarum.

The Castle of Monpezat in old times commanded road and river. The Rly. crosses to the rt. bank before 72 St. Martory Stat., which derives its name, like Martres, from the Christians here slain by the Saracens in the wars of the 9th centy.

Another bridge over the Garonne.

91 St. Gaudens Stat. (Inn: H. de France; good), an old and gloomy town of 5000 Inhab., at a little distance from the Garonne. It owes its origin to a monastery founded 1038 by a shepherd named Gaudens, who, after his head had been cut off by the Saracens, nevertheless ran off with it under his arm (like St. Denis) to the ch. The Church of the Convent is an unusually fine one. Its E. end dates from the 11th, and its

W. end from the 12th centy., while the N. porch is Flamboyant (15th). It has 3 apses at the E. end, small round-headed windows, and grotesque capitals to the columns in the choir.

The road from St. Gaudens, by St. Giron, to Foix and Carcassonne, is Rte. 95.

The Rly. continues up the l. bank of the Garonne to Montrejeau Stat. (Rte. 89). Travellers bound for Luchon here diverge S. Post carriage and horses 25 to 30 fr.; a drive of 3 hrs.

The Garonne is crossed by the road to Luchon, a short way out of the town; and from the slope leading down to it there is a fine view of its windings and of the distant Pyrenees.

At the distance of 6 or 8 m. farther the road passes abruptly from the plain into the midst of the mountains, by ascending an eminence, the extreme root or spur of the Pyrenees, to avoid a wide curve of the Garonne, but descends upon the river at the foot of the opposite slope. An uncommon view is here presented of the interesting town of St. Bertrand (Rte. 89), which our road leaves on the rt. "You break at once upon a vale, sunk deep enough beneath the point of view to command every hedge and tree, with St. Bertrand clustered round its large cathedral on a rising ground. If it had been built purposely to add a feature to a singular prospect, it could not have been better placed. The mountains rise proudly around, and give their rough frame to this exquisite little picture."—A. Young. The Garonne is crossed at the Pont Labrequere to 27 Estenos, described, with the rest of the road, to 21 Luchon, in Rte. 89.

ROUTE 92.

MONTAUBAN TO RODEZ.

197 kilom. = 122 Eng. m.

Railway opened 1860. 2 trains daily in 8 hrs.

Montauban Stat.	Kil.
St. Etienne Stat.	15
Négrepelisse Stat.	20
Bruniquel Stat.	34
St. Antonin Stat.	54
Najac Stat.	86
Montells Stat.	92
Villefranche Stat.	102
Villeneuve Stat.	112
Capdenac Junct. Stat.	132
Panchot Stat.	143
Aubin Stat.	150
St. Christophe Stat.	167
Marcellac Stat.	174
Salles-la-Source Stat.	188
Rodez Stat. (in Rte. 116).	197

ROUTE 93.

TOULOUSE TO NARBONNE AND CETTE, BY CARCASSONNE.—RAILWAY.—CANAL DU MIDI.

149 kilom. = 92½ Eng. m.

Railway opened 1857 in continuation of the Bordeaux and Toulouse line. 3 trains daily in 4 to 6 hrs.

The Canal du Midi, sometimes called Canal des Deux Mers, because it unites the Mediterranean with the Atlantic, was executed under Louis XIV., by the enterprising Paul Riquet, though the design is clearly sketched out in the Mémoires de Sully. It was commenced 1666 (100 years save 6 before Brindley, in England, began the Bridgewater Canal), and finished in 1681, the year after Riquet's death, from the Etang du Thau to Toulouse. The navigation of the Garonne below Toulouse was, however, very bad, and that of the Etang du Thau all but impossible, and in this condition it remained for many years. In fact, the canal from Toulouse to Agen, avoiding the difficulties of the Garonne, was only completed a short time before the rly. was opened! and the communication by the Etang du Thau with the Rhone and the Mediterranean was not finished until the beginning of this century. The canal is a wonderful work for the age in which it was executed, and, like most other foreign canals, is on a gigantic and to English eyes extravagant scale. It measures, from the basin where it joins the Garonne at Toulouse, to the Etang du Thau, near Agde, where it falls into the Mediterranean, 151 Eng. m.; it is 65 ft. 7 in. wide at the surface, and 32 ft.) at the bottom. It cost more than 16 million livres = 33 million fr. The summit level is 719 ft. above the Mediterranean, and there are 46 locks on the Mediterranean side, and 18 locks between the summit and Toulouse. The articles transported along the canal consist chiefly of corn, oil, soap, wine, brandy, &c.; it is navigated by barges of 100 tons, but the traffic is not very extensive, judging from the number of voyages yearly to and fro, which is only 960. It is closed for a month or 6 weeks once in 3 years for the "chômage" (stand-still), in order to be cleaned.

The railroad lies up the vale of the Lers, and across a rich corn country, but monotonously flat, which before the end of summer becomes parched, dusty, and arid. The canal, and the river Lers, run nearly parallel with it.

23 Baziège Stat.

Avignonet Stat. In the Church of this village of 2090 Inhab. is shown the seat of the inquisitors, by whose orders in 1244, all the Albigensian inhabitants were burned alive! A party of that persecuted sect, 2 years before, had burst into the castle and murdered the Grand Inquisitor Wm. Arnaud, 5 monks, and 6 servants of the Holy Office.

We pass from the Dépt. Haute Garonne into that of l'Aude. The canal is crossed, and not long after you see, l. on the edge of a hilly promontory beyond the town of Montferrand, the monument to Riquet, an obelisk, erected by his descendants 1825. It stands not far from the Bassin de Naurouze, an artificial reservoir formed for the supply of the canal, which here attains its summit level (point de partage). The water is derived from a still higher and larger reservoir, le Bassin de St. Féréol, measuring 5249 ft. by 2558 ft., situated on the flanks of the Montagne Noire.

Castelnaudary Stat. (Inns: La Flèche; Notre Dame), a town of nearly 10,000 Inhab., on an eminence, skirted at its base by the Canal du Midi. There are stone-quarries and lime-kilns near.

The name has been traced to "Castrum Novum Arianorum," the name given by the Visigoths to the town, which they refounded. It suffered severely in the crusade against the Albigenses, having been taken both by Simon de Montfort and the Comte de Toulouse: and in 1237 the inquisitors enacted an auto-da-fé here; in which, in their desire to root out heresy, they not only burnt many persons alive, but many dead bodies, dragged ignominiously from the grave for this purpose. The most memorable event in the annals of Castelnaudary is the battle fought here on the banks of the Fresquel, 1632, between the forces of Louis XIII. and of Gaston Duc d'Orléans, at which the unfortunate Duc de Montmorency was wounded and made prisoner, and soon after conveyed hence to Toulouse to be beheaded.

Bram Stat. The rounded outline of the Black Mountain bounds the view on the N.

CARCASSONNE Stat. — Inns: Hotel Bernard, very comfortable; H. Bonnet, baths hot and cold; St. Jean Baptiste, on the Boulevard. This chef-lieu of the Dépt. de l'Aude, a city of 19,915 Inhab., is traversed by the river Aude, and by the Canal du Midi, which, at first carried at a distance from its walls at the request of the inhabitants, has, in recent times, received at vast expense another direction, in order to bring it up to the town, where it now forms a large bassin.

Carcassonne itself is composed of two parts, the modern town on the plain and the old town on an eminence above it, forming a picturesque background with its venerable towers and commanding battlements. The lower and newer town, cheerful, and industrious, consists chiefly of modern-built houses, in streets ranging at right angles with one another, surrounded by boulevards, occupying the site of its ramparts, including squares planted with trees and furnished with marble fountains, and running with freshening rivulets. It contains several woollen factories, and not less than 7000 persons of the town and its vicinity are employed in the manufacture of cloth, formerly exported to the Levant, Barbary, and S. America, where it is esteemed for its brilliant dyes. From this and other sources of commercial prosperity it has increased, in the course of 4 or 5 centuries, from a suburb to be the town itself, while the original city on the height has dwindled down into an insignificant faubourg. Beyond this, however, it has no claim to detain the passing traveller. Its modern cathedral, and ch. of St. Vincent, whose tall tower stands on the line of the meridian of Paris, are not remarkable.

The avenue of trees planted along the margin of the canal, and embellished with a column of the red marble of the country to the memory of Riquet, its founder, leads to the aqueduct bridge by which the canal has been carried over the stream of the Fresnel in recent times.

** The Old Town, on the height beyond the Aude, deserves the notice of all who have artists' taste for paintable bits or take an interest in antiquities, as retaining unchanged, to a greater extent perhaps than any other in France, the aspect of a fortress of the middle ages. A traveller with such tastes must not be deterred from entering by odious smells, steep, narrow, and desolate streets, with the grass-growing in many of them, and the houses falling to ruin, for it has been abandoned entirely to persons of the poorer class and to artisans, pent up within its narrow enclosure. It is enclosed by double ramparts and towers: a portion of the inner line is attributed to the Romans and Visigoths with much probability; and the rest, including the castle, with its curious postern, seems to be of the 11th or 12th centy., while the outer circuit has been referred to the latter end of the 13th centy. The former are therefore the same defences which withstood for a time the assault of the army of Crusaders under the fierce Simon de Montfort and the Abbot of Cîteaux, who, reeking with the blood spilt at Beziers, laid siege to Carcassonne, 1210, where a vast number of fugitives, together with the Viscomte de Beziers, had taken refuge. At the intercession of the King of Arragon, his uncle, the papal legate promised to spare his life and those of 12 others with him; but the brave young warrior rejected these terms, declaring that he would sooner be flayed alive than betray one of those who had endangered themselves for his sake. Finding, however, that, owing to the number of men, women, and children who had poured in from the surrounding country, it was impossible to hold out, he managed to let them escape by a secret passage, and surrendered under a promise of safe-conduct for himself. He was nevertheless seized treacherously, and soon after died in prison, while of those who remained in the town 50 were hung and 400 burnt alive. In 1356 this fortress effectually resisted the Black Prince, who burnt the suburb below, and ravaged with fire and sword the whole of Languedoc. A curious sally-port, or barbacane, projects from the walls on the side nearest the modern town; and one of the towers has been split into two, but the one half, though fallen down, has not broken to pieces—such is the thickness and solidity of the masonry. The legend respecting it is, that Charlemagne, after in vain besieging for several years the town, which held out, though defended only by one Saracen woman named Carcas, was about to raise the siege in despair, when this tower gave way of its own accord, and opened a breach by which his army entered. The figure of this Saracen Amazon is still to be seen rudely carved over the Porte Narbonnaise, on the E. side of the town.

[France.]

The Ch. of St. Nazaire, formerly cathedral, in the middle of the old town, consists of a Romanesque nave, part of the ch. dedicated by Pope Urban II. in 1096, designed externally for defence, supported by massive piers round and square, and of a light and lofty Gothic choir and transepts added at the beginning of the 14th century (1321). In this part of the church are two fine circular windows, and some painted glass of great brilliancy of colour, though inferior in drawing. On one side of the high-altar a slab of red marble is said to mark the grave of Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, that cruel and ambitious warrior, who, steeled in the holy wars, in the school of the Templars and Assassins, turned at the bidding of the Pope the sword whetted against the infidels upon the heretical Christians, the unfortunate Albigenses. The marble monument of a bishop, date 1264, is placed in a side-chapel. In one of the side-chapels of the nave is a curious bas-relief, representing an assault of a besieged town, probably of the 13th centy. This church has been restored under the direction of M. Viollet Le Duc; it and the town walls are national monuments.

Near the centre of the town is a very wide and deep well, into which, according to tradition, the Visigoth kings threw their treasures.

Carcassonne was the birthplace of the Revolutionist Fabre, who called himself d'Eglantine because he had gained the prize of the golden sweetbrier in the floral games at Toulouse: he began his career as an actor, and ended it on the guillotine in 1793.

At Fonfroid, 4 or 5 hrs. from Carcassonne, is an old cloister, said to be superior to that at St. Elna (Rta. 94).

Railway to Narbonne, Montpellier, Nîmes, and Marseilles; to Perpignan; to Toulouse.

[At Caunes, 12 m. N.E. of Carcassonne, are the quarries of marble commonly used in churches and other public buildings in the S. of France. They are associated with slates of the transition series, and furnish 4 sorts: 1, flesh-coloured, much employed by Louis XIV. and XV.; 2, marbre cervelas; 3, grey marble containing encrinures; 4, Griotte, including nautili. One variety is called "œil de perdrix."]

On quitting Carcassonne the railroad crosses the canal, and soon after the river Aude, and runs for some distance by the side of the Aude. The canal makes a bend to the N., its new channel being cut through deep excavations. The cultivation of the olive begins near this, though the tree can scarcely be said to flourish hereabouts.

Near Barbeira, a little to the N. of the canal, is the drained lake of Marzeille, converted from a useless pool or morass into 2900 hectares of excellent arable land by the enterprise and capital of Madame Lawless, an Irish lady domiciled in France. The drainage was completed 1850, by the construction of a tunnel near a mile long, and the ground is now portioned out into 24 farms.

The rly. is conducted through narrow gorges between white naked rocks.

Marcorygnan Junct. Stat.

Narbonne Station, described in Rte. 126.

ROUTE 94.

NARBONNE TO PERPIGNAN, PORT VENDRES, AND THE SPANISH FRONTIER—RAIL.

Narbonne.	Kil.
La Nouvelle Stat. . . . .	21
Salces Stat. . . . .	46
Rivesaltes Stat. . . . .	56
Perpignan Stat. . . . .	60

To Perpignan is 62 kilom. = 40 Eng. m. Two trains daily in 2 hrs. to 2½ hrs. The rly. was opened in 1858.

The country is uninteresting, skirting on the rt. the low chains of the Corbières, consisting of bare rocks without trees or herbage; only a few bristly plants, and tufts of the heath which produces the Narbonne honey; and on the l., the salt lagoons, or shallow lakes, called Etangs de Bages, de Sigean, de la Palme, and de Leucate, which here line the shore of the Mediterranean, bordered with mud and sand. The district is unhealthy, owing to the miasma from this marshy tract. At intervals, when the road surmounts a slight eminence, a glimpse may be obtained of the open sea beyond the étangs.

Sigean, situated on the margin of the lagoon of the same name, was the scene of a victory gained by Charles Martel over the Saracens, 737.

La Nouvelle Stat., a seaport town of 1520 Inhab., which has risen into existence since the acquisition of Algeria by France. It is the only port between Agde and Port Vendres.

Fitou stands on the edge of the large étang, called de Leucate, from a half-deserted town on the tongue of land between it and the sea: a place of strength and importance during the period when Roussillon belonged to Spain, and Leucate stood on the frontier of France. The extremity of the chain of the Pyrenees, stretching into the sea, may be discerned near this.

Salces Stat. The fort on the rt., before entering this village, was built by the Emperor Charles V.; it is now a powder-magazine.

Rivesaltes Stat. This town (Pop. 4276), famed for its wine, lies about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. on the rt., upon a small stream often dried up, the Agly, which is crossed by the road half way between Salces and Perpignan.

The two branches of the torrent-river Tet are crossed in order to reach Perpignan; between them stands the suburb Notre Dame; and on the rt. bank the lofty and singular castle of Castellet, a double tower of brick, surmounted by machicolations erected by Charles V., now a military prison.

PERPIGNAN Stat.—Inns: H. de l'Europe; —des Ambassadeurs; —du Commerce; —Petit Paris, good; —du Midi.

Perpignan, chef-lieu of the Dépt. des Pyrénées Orientales, also a first-class fortress of great strength, defending the passage by the E. Pyrenees from Spain into France, is placed on the rt. bank of the Tet, about 6 m. above its termination in the sea, in the midst of the level plain of Roussillon, and contains 23,300 Inhab. As Roussillon, of which province it was the capital, was not permanently united to France until the Treaty of the Pyrenees, in 1659, it is not surprising that both the town, in its narrow dirty streets covered with awnings, its semi-Moresque buildings, its houses furnished with wooden balconies and courts (patios), and its inhabitants, especially the lower orders, should resemble those of Catalonia, on the S. side of the Pyrenees, in their physiognomy, language, dress, dances. Those to whom Spain is unknown will be struck with this novel character; but beyond this there is not much to interest the stranger here. Almost all the public buildings date from the Spanish period, and are of brick or rolled pebbles. The Cathedral was founded by Sancho II., King of Majorca, 1324; the choir was roofed and continued by Louis XI., during the time he held Roussillon in pawn from the king of Arragon. The nave was finished 1509, and the W. front erected by Philip II., 1577. The altar-screen, of carved work, partly wood, partly stone, in the style of the Renaissance; and the massy frame-work, gilding, tapestries, &c., are thoroughly Spanish in style. The font, of marble, in the form of a tub, is of 8th or 9th centy.; some attribute it to the time of the Visigoth kings. Adjoining this ch. are remains of a still older ch., now in ruins, called St. Jean le Vieux. Of the ch. and convent of the Dominicans, now a military store, a portion, in the Romanesque style, belongs to the edifice which St. Dominic, the Inquisitor, inhabited when he entered Roussillon. The building called La Loge (from the Spanish Lonja, exchange or bazaar) is a curious example of the mixed Moresque and Gothic styles of the end of the 15th centy. Its façade, exhibiting flamboyant ornaments, foliage and tracery, though much mutilated and injured by alterations, and the covered galleries round the court behind, merit notice. The ancient University contains the public library of 20,000 vols., and the commencement of a museum.

The Citadel, separated from the town by a wide glacis, and surrounded by a double line of works, is considered very strong, and commands the town. The inner ramparts were raised by Charles V., the outer by Vauban; and in the midst rises a tall square castle, or Donjon, built by the kings of Majorca, and the remains of a ch., whose façade is remarkable, and is said to resemble that on Mount Sinai. The portal is a pointed arch, faced with slabs of marble, red and white alternately, resting on columns whose capitals represent fighting dragons. On one of the ramparts, an arm carved in stone (dextro-chère), projecting from the parapet, was formerly pointed out as marking the spot where the Emperor Charles V., going the rounds at night, found a sentinel fast asleep at his post, and, pushing him into the fosse, himself took the musket, and did duty until relieved by the guard. This has been recently destroyed. From the citadel a view may be obtained over the plain of Roussillon, extending 15 m. on all sides, save that towards the sea not more than 6 m., and surrounded by a semicircle of mountains, the most elevated being the Pyrenees on the S., though they are still distant. The only mountain which makes a conspicuous figure is the Canigou, the highest of this portion of the chain.

Perpignan is more remarkable as a fortress than a place of commerce, but some trade is carried on in wines of Roussillon, also in cork from the mountains.

For information regarding passports on entering France from Spain, see INTRODUCTION, c.

Railway in progress to Port Vendres and Girona. Rail thence to Barcelona.

Arago, the democratic politician and astronomer (d. 1853), was born at Estagel, a poor village near Perpignan.

About 17½ m. S.E. of Perpignan is the seaport of Port Vendres; the road to it passes the decayed town of 12 St. Elne, the ancient Illiberis, mentioned by Pliny as "ingentis quondam urbis tenue vestigium," and by Livy as the place where Hannibal first encamped, after crossing the Pyrenees on his march to Rome, "Pyreneum transgreditur, et ad oppidum Illiberis castra locat." A.U.C. 556. It was rebuilt by Constantine, who gave it the name of his mother Elena. The Ch. of St. Eulalia, once the cathedral, and episcopal see of Roussillon before Perpignan, dates from 1019-1060, and is in the Romanesque style, but has a pointed roof; it is quite plain internally, but the little cloister adjoining, in progress from 12th to 15th cent., is very elegant, and is worth notice. It is entered from the ch. by a pointed doorway resembling that in the citadel of Perpignan. The ch. and cloister contain some monuments and many inscriptions and bas-reliefs are let into the walls; one of them is called the Tomb of Constans, who was assassinated at Elne by order of Maxentius. Elne is now reduced to a poor village. On quitting it the river Tech is crossed, and Argelez is passed. Beyond this the E. extremity of the Pyrenean chain, dropping down into the sea, forms, by its projecting buttresses and roots, a number of headlands and retreating coves or bays. On the shore of one of these lies

14 Collioure (Cauco-Illiberis), a seaport town of 3846 Inhab., on a semi-circular bay; it is defended by numerous forts, the whole commanded by that of St. Elme, between this and Port Vendres. At the entrance of the harbour rises a little rocky island bearing a Church of Pilgrimage, dedicated to the Virgin. The town is surrounded by vineyards: the rocks, bare as they are, suffice to maintain the vine, and even the aloe, and produce some of the best wines in the department. At the head of a cool and shady valley 1½ m. distant is the Hermitage and Chapel of N. D. de Consolation, a pleasant walk and pretty view.

½ hr's. walk will take you up to the lighthouse, Phare de Cap Béar, commanding a fine sea-view.

About 2 m. beyond Collioure is 3 Port Vendres (Inn: H. du Commerce), a town of 1305 Inhab., and a harbour of some consequence, as it is the only port of refuge between Marseilles and the Spanish frontier, and is accessible for frigates. It is defended by 4 forts and 4 batteries, but is entirely commanded by the heights behind. It has gained of late in prosperity, from its increased communication with Africa, most of the troops destined for Algiers being embarked here. 3 or 4 steamers, plying between Marseilles, Barcelona, Gibraltar, and Cadiz, touch here (?) every week. The marble obelisk, 100 ft. high, in the square was raised to Louis XVI., who caused the harbour to be cleared, excavated, and made useful, 1780. The ancient name of this place was Portus Veneris, from a temple of Venus, built here by the Romans. There is a mule-path hence into Spain, by the village and Col of Banyuls to Lanza, the first place in Catalonia.

The interesting road up the valley of the Tech, from Boulou, is described in Rte. 99.

The high road into Spain from Perpignan continues to cross the monotonous plain of Roussillon, but, as it gradually approaches the Pyrenees, commands a fine view of the Canigou on the rt.

22 Boulou lies at the foot of the mountains on the Tech, whose valley is described in Rte. 99. The stream is crossed as you quit Boulou, and about a mile farther the ascent begins, the road making considerable curves, up to the pass or Col de Perthus, which may be reached in 1½ hr. Half way, upon the l. of the road, is the ruined castle of L'Ecluse. At the summit on the rt. of the col, on a height above the little village of Perthus, stands the fort of Bellegarde, constructed by Louis XIV., in 1679, to command the passage into Spain. It is a regular pentagon with 5 bastions, in one of which, facing Spain, General Dugommier, killed in the battle of the Montagne Noire, on the road to Figueras, 1794, is buried.

This pass was crossed by the conquering army of Pompey, who erected upon it a trophy of his successes, inscribed with the names of 876 places which he had subdued. Cæsar followed not long after, and raised an altar by the side of the monument of Pompey, over whose lieutenants he had, in turn, been victorious. No traces of either now remain.

Junquiera, the first Spanish town, 15 m. from Boulou, and the road to Barcelona, are described in the HANDBOOK FOR SPAIN.

From Gerona to Barcelona Railway.

ROUTE 95.

ST. GAUDENS TO CARCASSONNE, BY ST. GIRONES AND FOIX.

189 kilom. = 117 Eng. m.; road good, and very pretty, but hilly. St. Gaudens is in Rte. 91, on rly. to Toulouse.

At St. Martory the road quits that to Toulouse, and crosses the Garonne by a picturesque stone bridge. Cross a stone bridge of 5 arches before entering Mane, a poor village. The fine old Evêché of St. Elize, perched on a steep rock, now a lunatic asylum, is passed about 1 m. before reaching 47 St. Girones (Inns: Chez Ferrière aîné;—H. de Biros;—H. de France, not good), a "dull and crumbling" town of 4005 Inhab., close to the junction of the Salat with the Lez and Baup. The walk along the river is delightful. The Church was rebuilt 1857, except its octagon tower, which merits notice. Good road, but against the collar, to La Bastide. A new, well-made road, avoiding hills, to

Foix Stat., in Rte. 97. Road hilly, but good, to 27 Lavelanet (H. chez Elanet).—Good road, chiefly descent, to 21 Chalabre (Inn: H. d'Espagne, not good). Very mountainous, but good road to 25 Limoux (Inn: H. Lion d'Or, good; H. du Parc), a small town of 7188 Inhab., pleasantly situated in a valley on the river Aude. The rich soil of the neighbouring vineyards produces the famous wine of Blanquette de Limoux. Diligences twice a day to Carcassonne, and once a day to Foix.

25 CARCASSONNE. H. Bonnet, good. (Rte. 93.)

ROUTE 97.

THE EASTERN PYRENEES.—TOULOUSE TO FOIX (RAIL) AND PUYCERDA.—THE VALLEY OF THE ARIÈGE.—VIC-DESSOS.—ANDORRE.

83 kilom. = 52 Eng. m. to Foix, 18 lieues thence to Puycerda = 50 Eng. m. 2 trains daily to Foix, in about 3 hrs. At 12 Port St. Simon Junct. Stat. this line turns to the l., away from that to Bagnères de Luchon (Rte. 91), and crosses the Garonne, and ascends the rt. bank of the Ariège.

6 Puis Justaret Stat.

Miremont Stat.

Cintegabelle Stat. Here Lord Hill passed the Ariège in 1814.

22 Saverdun Stat., a town of 4121 Inhab., was the birthplace of Pope Benedict XII.; he was the son of a baker or miller. At Mazères, a little to the E. of our road, Gaston de Foix, Duc de Nemours, the hero of the battle of Ravenna, was born 1489.

Vernet d'Ariège Stat.

15 Pamiers Stat. (Inns: Croix d'Or; Grand Soleil), a cheerful and pretty town. Pop. 7631. A Cathedral, surmounted by an octagonal Gothic tower of brick, spared by Mansard when he rebuilt the nave in the style of the 17th centy. A beautiful promenade de Castellat, on an eminence beyond the Cathedral, looks out upon the distant Pyrenees. About 12 m. W. of this the philosopher Bayle, author of the Dictionary, was born, 1647, in the obscure village of Carla le Comte.

The valley contracts in width and increases in beauty at Varilhès Stat.

Foix Stat. (Inns: Rocher de Foix;—H. la Coste, indifferent and dear), the ancient capital of the Comté de Foix, is now the chef-lieu of the Dépt. de l'Ariège, which is nearly coequal with the Comté de Foix. It is one of the smallest chef-lieux in France, as its population does not exceed 4110. It has a very picturesque site, at the junction of a stream called the Larget with the Ariège. It fills up the mouth of the valley, here narrow and bounded by precipitous hills, and lines either bank of the rapid river, whilst an isolated rock, Rocher de Foix, rising from amidst the houses, sustains the ancient castle of the Counts of Foix, who resisted with such invincible courage the attacks of the kings of France and Aragon, and whose line terminated with the chivalrous Gaston. It is known by the name of Les Tours, an appropriate one, as 3 lofty towers, built of a coarse whitish marble, and preserved unstained by the dryness of the climate, are alone standing. Part, also, of the ancient ramparts have resisted time's decay; and the antique character of many of the houses, together with "the magic of a name," have thrown a colouring over it that makes it, although now unimportant and remote, a spot interesting to the tourist.

The Castle, now converted into a gaol, and much injured by modern erections, is approached by a very narrow, steep path, bending, with very abrupt turns, along the edge of the precipice. Of its 3 fine towers, all of different ages and all anterior to the 15th centy., the tallest, or donjon, 136 ft. high, is also the oldest, having been built 1362 by Gaston Phœbus, Count of Foix: it commands a fine view from its top. Simon de Montfort in vain besieged this stronghold, in 1210, during the wars of the Albigenes; and at a later period, 1272, Philippe le Hardi, unable to take it by other means, began to undermine the rocky pedestal, with the intention of toppling it over, together with the fortress on the top of it! Such, at least, is the popular tale; and though there seems little possibility that such a threat could have been accomplished in days when gunpowder was unknown, it had the effect of inducing the garrison to surrender.

Excepting the castle, there is little in the town to attract notice,—but the country around is lovely.

The Préfecture was originally part of the abbey of St. Volusien, suppressed at the Revolution. The church of St. Volusien, rebuilt by Roger II., Comte de Foix, is a heavy Gothic building.

A considerable trade in iron, the staple of the Dépt. l'Ariège, derived from the mines of La Rancié, in the Vicdessos, is carried on here. The metal is embarked on the Ariège at Autrèrve, below St. Foix, for exportation.

Diligence to Ussat and Ax.

The valley above this is bare of trees, but productive in corn and wine; the vine itself being frequently planted on the heaps of boulder-stones cleared away from the fields, where they are otherwise so numerous as to hinder cultivation.

10 m. Tarascon, a smaller town than Foix (1555 Inhab.), having also its ancient castle on a rock above it, stands at the point of convergence of several valleys,—that of Vicdessos, in which the iron-mines of La Rancié are situated, traversed by a carriage-road as far as Sem, that of Saurat (near the entrance of which is the fine cave of Bédéillac), up which runs a carriage-road to St. Giron, by the Col de Portet and town of Massat (1000 Inhab.), and that of the Ariège.

[The valley of Videssos is rendered industrious by its iron mines and works. It is further embellished by the neat houses and gardens of the iron-masters and miners, and by several picturesque old castles, among which that of Méglos is very conspicuous. The mines of Rancie, situated 460 ft. above the village of Sem, reached by a difficult path in zigzags which takes an hour to surmount, have been worked for many ages, but without a proper system. They are falling off in produce, and it is supposed that the supply of ore will be exhausted in 20 years. The ore is chiefly the hydrate and carbonate of iron, and is very rich, often yielding 60 per cent.; but as it requires to be brought down from the mine on mule-back, and to be transported often 40 or 50 miles to the furnace, and as the fuel (charcoal) must be sought for in many situations from a like distance, the metal produced is very dear, in spite of the cheapness of labour. Yet nearly 60 furnaces are supplied from hence in the Dépt. of Ariège alone. The iron ore is found deposited in caverns, veins, and hollows within the strata of a limestone rock, belonging apparently to the lower Jura limestone (lias) formation, and within a short distance of the fundamental granite. The ore has been worked horizontally to a depth of 300 mètres, and vertically to a height of 600 mètres. Owing to the unskilfulness, want of concert, and heedlessness of the miners, the ore has been extracted without any regard to economy or safety of life; the roofs and walls of the galleries and chambers excavated, having no proper support, are constantly giving way in consequence, and serious loss of life has frequently attended these éboulements. Many of the galleries leading into the mines have been blocked up by the ruins. At the village of Videssos, which is surrounded by furnaces (forges), there is a clean Inn, H. de la Renaissance. There is a path up the Val de Sallix, over the mountain-pass called Port d'Aulus, into the Val d'Ercé, and by Aulus and Oust to St. Giron.]

A little more than a mile above Tarascon lie the Bains d'Ussat, a group of lodging and bath-houses, &c., including large and comfortable Hôtels: H. Cassagne; H. de la Renaissance; H. des Voyageurs, which the traveller may conveniently make his head-quarters when exploring the neighbouring valleys. They stand, shaded by trees, within a few yards of the river, at a point where the valley is closed by mountain-walls of limestone, barely allowing a few box-bushes to take root in their crevices, but traversed by numerous caverns, in some of which fossil bones have been found. The waters are warm, acidulous, and, when administered in baths, are said to have a calming effect over the nervous system, and are much used by females. The baths are hollows excavated in the ground, lined with marble, filled naturally by the water rising from beneath. The Grotto de Lombrive, a series of caves on the l. bank of the river, are of considerable extent, requiring an hour to reach the extremity, and worth a visit; also the Castle of Lordat.

The high road runs up the l. bank of the Ariège, but there is a path along the rt. from Ussat to Tarascon. Above Tarascon the vale of the Ariège makes an abrupt bend to the E., round the N. base of the Mont St. Barthélemy, one of the loftiest of this portion of the chain of the Pyrenees, whose top, surmounted by snows and glaciers, appears, from time to time, domineering over the upper valley on the l. The Pont de Gudane carries the road over the stream of the Aston, descending from the lofty and snowy range separating France from Andorre. Numerous old ruined castles, built originally to command the valley or defend the frequented passage through it into Catalonia, occur at intervals, rising on peaked eminences above the valley; but the largest and most lordly and picturesque of all is that of Lordat, near les Cabannes; its origin is attributed to the Moors or Goths. Iron-works in equal number alternate with these feudal remains; thus the romantic associations of former times combine with the active industry of the present to add an interest to a valley which derives so many attractions besides from the beauties of nature. Its ancient inhabitants were called Tectosages, from the sagum, or cloak, which they wore, which has descended to the present generation, who, by a curious coincidence, still designate it by the same name, in their patois, "un sayo."

Ax, 13 m. above Ussat.—Inns: H. Boyer; H. Sicre, best. Ax is a town of 1710 Inhab., prettily situated amidst granitic mountains, at the junction of 3 valleys, out of which issue 3 mountain torrents, whose streams combine, in or near the town, to form the river Ariège.

In the name Ax it is easy to discover the Latin Aquæ, derived from the hot sulphureous springs which burst out on all sides; indeed there appears to be a natural kettle of boiling water under the town. More than 30 hot sources issue forth in different parts of it, varying in temperature from 113° to 168° of Fahr.; and in order to obtain cold one must resort to the river; and even it, in some parts, is rendered tepid by hot springs rising in its very bed: the snow rests but a few instants on a soil so thoroughly heated from below. Besides the application of the waters to baths, of which there are 2 or 3 establishments, and for drinking, it is turned to various domestic and economic purposes by the inhabitants, who wash not only their linen, but a vast quantity of wool in its tepid streams. These springs rise at the junction of the slate and limestone with the gravels, and are the hottest in the Pyrenees. The town itself is a miserable collection of dirty lanes, the only considerable buildings being the hotels and hospitals, one of which has been constructed by government for military patients. Near the hospital is an ancient bath, established in 1200, and still called Bassin des Ladres, or Lepers' Basin.

The carriage-road up the valley ceases shortly before reaching Merens—a poor village; beyond it the mountains close in and form a long, gloomy defile; it afterwards expands into an open, stony, and uninteresting tract. A very rough and steep path leads to Hospitalet (12 m. from Ax), a journey of 5 h. on horseback. This is a poor hamlet, but has a small Inn. 1½ hour's ride above this is the pass or col over the mountain, called Port de Puy-maurins, upon which a custom-house is planted. [Close to this pass, on the W., begins the territory of Andorre, a small neutral state between France and Spain, which has been allowed by its powerful neighbours, partly through its insignificance and poverty, to maintain an independent existence, under a republican form of government, for six centuries since the days of Charlemagne, resembling in this respect the republic of San Marino in Italy. It is shut in by high mountains on all sides but the S., where the river Embalire issues out towards the Spanish town of Urgel. Its population amounts to about 8000. 5 hrs. from Hospitalet is Saldeu, and 1 hr. beyond is Canillo, the second village in Andorre, where persons coming from Ax usually pass the night. The capital, Andorre, numbers about 850. Its chief buildings are an old Romanesque Ch. and the Council House or Palais, an ancient semi-fortified and dilapidated edifice, in which the members of the Government have met from time immemorial. It is governed by a council of 24, a syndic, and 2 viguiers, or magistrates, appointed, one by the sovereign of France, who, as protector of Andorre, receives 960 fr. of tribute yearly, the other by the bishop of Urgel. It consists of 3 valleys, hemmed in by grand mountains of great elevation: its productions are limited nearly to wood and iron; and from the sale of these (and from smuggling) the inhabitants are enabled to purchase corn and other necessities, which their barren and lofty country refuses to yield. For the traveller there is no accommodation; and he that ventures thither, if he be not prepared to sleep in the open air, with some risk of starving, should carry letters with him from persons of authority at Ax to some of the wealthy proprietors.]

After passing the crest of the great chain by the Port de Puymaurins, the path descends the S. slope, through a very wild valley, strewn with rocks, passing the hamlets of Porté and Porta, near which a path strikes off to the rt. up a minor valley into Andorre. Between Porta and Courbassil is the old ruined castle, after which the vale is named, called Tour du Carol, built, according to popular tradition, by the Moors; but upon the conquest of this country and their expulsion from it by Charlemagne, the towers were christened Carol, after him. They occupy a very picturesque position on the top of an immense isolated mass of granite, rising in the midst of this narrow and rugged valley. Beyond Courbassil is the village called Tour de Carol, situated within a mile of the Spanish frontier, which is marked neither by stream nor mountain, but is a mere imaginary line at this point. About 2 m. within it lies the Spanish town of Puycerda, ancient capital of La Cerdagne, 13 m. from Hospitalet. See HANDBOOK FOR SPAIN.

The road hence to Perpignan, by Mont Louis and the Valley of the Tet, is described in Rte. 98.

ROUTE 98.

EASTERN PYRENEES.—PERPIGNAN TO MONT LOUIS AND PUYCERDA, BY THE VALLEY OF THE TET.—ASCENT OF THE CANIGOU.

About 60 Eng. m. A post-road as far as Olette, but not always provided with horses. Diligences to Prades and Vernet.

The vale of the Tet, up whose rt. bank our road ascends, is flattened down and absorbed in the great plain of Roussillon, near Perpignan, and it is not until after leaving behind, at some distance,

Ille, a walled town of 3260 Inhab., that the road enters fairly among the mountains. From Vinça, another town, the ascent is gradual to 42 kil. Prades. (Inn: H. Januari, good.) This town of 3074 Inhab. possesses natural warm baths, but is not otherwise remarkable, except for its pretty situation on the rt. bank of the Tet, in a valley abounding in corn, wine, and fruits, vineyards terraced up the hill-sides, maize and hemp fields: About 1 m. off are the ruins of the Abbey of St. Michel de Cuxa, which deserve a visit. Prades lies at the N. base of the Canigou, whose summit may be reached by 8 or 9 hours' walk up the vale of Lentilla.

Above Prades the plain of the Tet contracts into a valley; and, after passing the old castle of Ria, the cradle of a noble line, whence came the Counts of Arragon and Barcelona, narrows to a gorge at 7 kil. Villefranche, a town of 813 Inhab., fortified by Vauban, strengthened since 1849 by a fort built between the town and citadel, communicating with vast natural caverns in the mountain, reached by a flight of 132 steps. In order to visit them the permission of the military commandant is necessary. The neighbouring heights squeeze in the town as it were, and leave barely space for its two narrow streets, and the river below.

[3 m. from Villefranche in the vale of Cornella, which penetrates S. from this into the flanks of the Canigou (see the curious Romanesque Church of Cornella), lies

Vernet (Hotels: Thermes des Commandants;—Thermes Mercader), a watering-place, supplied by hot sulphurous springs bursting out of a slaty quartzose rock, which here composes the Pyrenean chain. They are useful in cases of rheumatism, paralysis, wounds, and ulcers. The place was visited by Ibrahim Pasha in 1846. The situation is very pretty, and the place is comfortable and not overcrowded. Above Vernet rises the ruined abbey St. Martin de Canigou, founded by Count Guiffred (whose tomb is removed to the modern village Ch. of Castell), to expiate the murder of his own son, who, hastily attacking the Moorish invaders of this country in the 10th centy., deprived his father of a complete victory over them. The ruins are those of the ch. and crypt beneath.

The Ascent of the Canigou may be made from Vernet in 5½ to 6 hrs. on horseback to within 1 hr. of the summit. Guides may be hired for 5 or 6 fr. Michel Nou of Castell is recommended by M. Joanne. Take provisions. The path leads from Castell near the ruined Abbey of St. Martin, and by an almost continuous ascent to the Granges de Cadé. 1 hr. above this you must leave the mules. The latter part of the ascent is likewise up a sort of fissure or cheminée to the summit, a small platform on which huts were raised for MM. Mauvais and Petit, to make their experiments on the variations of the magnetic needle in 1842. Hence the eye surveys the plain of Roussillon, and the coast of the Mediterranean, with Perpignan on its margin; the valleys bordering on the Tet; the mountain range of Catalonia on the S.; and on the W. the chain separating Roussillon from the Vale of Ariège. The descent may be made:—a. to Vernet in 4 hrs.; b. by Valmaires, a mining hamlet of a few houses and a poor cabaret, thence descending in 3 or 4 hrs. to Vinça, in the Valley of the Tet; c. to Pratz de Mollo. (Rte. 99.)

The high road crosses the Tet, by a bridge, on quitting Villefranche.

9 kil. Olette (Inns: Hôtel du Midi; de la Fontaine). Goat-skin sacks for wine are made here. The cultivation of the vine ceases; the valley becomes sterile and wild; the road, ascending more rapidly, traverses a narrow defile, guarded and closed, in ancient times, by walls, towers, and gateways, whose ruins still remain. A short tunnel has been formed to give passage to the road instead of the steep zigzags of the old mule-path called Graus (Gradus) d'Olette. Near this are mineral springs. To this succeeds an open expanse, a table-land of green meadow, a pastoral scene, surrounded by fir-clad heights; and in the midst, at a distance of 10 m. above Olette, stands 20 kil. Mont Louis (Inns: Jambon, in the town; Vaillant at la Cabanasse, under the Citadel), a frontier fortress (442 Inhab.), built 1684 by Vauban to guard the passage from Spain by the Col de la Perche. In the square is a monument to General Dagobert. It is a desolate town, consisting of 8 short streets, in straight lines, crossing one another at right angles, surmounted by the Citadel, whose casemates cut in the rock would receive several thousand men. A road runs N. from this to Carcassonne (Rte. 93), and a path over the mountains by Langles into the vale of the Ariège. On Mt. Odeille, a high mountain, is an image of the Virgin, to which pilgrimages are made 4 times a year by vast multitudes. The fête is worth the stranger's attention.

About 2 m. from Mont Louis, and at a height of 1150 ft. above it, 5114 ft. above the sea-level, is the pass over the mountains, called

2 kil. Col de la Perche. The path from it descends into the basin-shaped valley of the Cerdagne Française, traversed by numerous streams, the chief of which is the Seyre, or Segre, a tributary of the Ebro. The territory of France has here been pushed, for some distance, down the S. slope of the backbone of the Pyrenees, in the same manner that the Spaniards occupy the head of the vale of the Garonne, on the N. of the chain. 5 m. below the col is

8 kil. Saillagousa, a town of 400 Inhab.; 2 m. farther is Llivia; and 3 m. more carry the traveller across the frontier to the first Spanish town, 12 kil. Puycerda (10 m. from Mont Louis). See HANDBOOK FOR TRAVELLERS IN SPAIN.

The road from Puycerda to Toulouse is described in Rte. 97.

ROUTE 99.

PERPIGNAN TO CAMPREDON, BY BOULOU
—PRATZ DE MOLLO—THE CANIGOÜ.

The high road from Perpignan to Barcelona is followed as far as 22 kil. Boulou (Rte. 94), where a cross road diverges W. up the Valley of the Tech. At Ceret, 6 m. up, the river is spanned by an ancient bridge of a single bold arch, 144 ft. in the opening, whose construction is attributed to the Visigoth kings, but which in reality is not older than 1352. It is very narrow, and the arch thins out towards the keystone. Ceret, a town of 3488 Inhab., partly retaining its old walls, is about a mile farther; and 7 m. above it is the small fort of Arles-les-Bains, constructed by Louis XIV., on the top of an eminence, from whose base issue hot sulphureous springs of a temperature of 157° Fahr.

Amélie-les-Bains (formerly Arles-les-Bains). Here are 2 bath-houses (établissements thermales) where visitors are received. They were known to the Romans, and the vaulted chamber in which one of them is still received is of their building, but is remarkable only for its solidity. The walls of the Ch. are in part Roman, and there are remains of an aqueduct which brought water to the town. Between this and the town of Arles are some iron-forges, where the ore derived from mines situated high up on the N. flank of the Canigou, and brought hither on mules' backs, is smelted. The Tech is again crossed before entering the town; it has 2267 Inhab., more Spanish than French in language; old customs, old dances, &c., still kept up. The present church dates from 1157; the front and portal enriched with curious carving in white marble. On the l. of the façade, under a sort of shed, is a very ancient sarcophagus resting on 4 feet, filled with miracle-working water, which is never exhausted, and is sold at 20 sous the vial-full. It owes its virtues to the coffin having enclosed the relics of two saints, Abdon and Sennor, which were brought from Rome to free the neighbourhood of Arles from dragons, lions, &c., which then infested it! Adjoining the Ch. is a cloister, a range of pointed arches on slender pillars, of the 13th centy., without a roof.

About 13 m. distant among the mountains, and approached by steep paths, from which fine views are obtained of the Canigou, is the Romanesque Ch. of Coustouges (Costujus) on the frontier of Catalonia, which may interest the antiquary, as it is supposed to date from the 9th centy.

8 m. above Arles, in the Valley of the Tech, lies Pratz de Mollo, a frontier town of 4000 Inhab., surrounded by old-fashioned fortifications, but commanded on the height above by the efficient Fort Legarde, constructed from the plans of Vauban. A mule-path runs hence over the mountains to the Spanish town Campredon.

The ascent of the Canigou, which projects forward from the great chain of the Pyrenees, and rises, almost isolated, above the plain of Roussillon, to a height of 9141 ft., may be made from Arles, following the mule-paths leading to the iron-mines, as far as the old tower of Batères, standing on a ridge whence you look down upon both valleys of the Tech and Tet; and after 3 or 4 hours' scrambling from this ridge, "up steps, along precipices, and over snow-wreaths," you attain the summit.

SECTION V.

CENTRAL FRANCE—BERRI—AUVERGNE—VIVARAIS—ARDECHE—CANTAL—BOURBONNAIS—LYONNAIS—THE CEVENNES.

ROUTE	PAGE	ROUTE	PAGE
101 Orleans to Clermont, by Bourges, St. Germain des Fossés, Vichy (Railway) . . .	353	111 Mont Dore les Bains to Le Puy, by Issoire . . .	415
103 Bourges to Clermont, by Mont- luçon and Nérès les Bains . . .	359	112 Clermont to Montbrison , by Thiers . . .	416
104 Paris to Dijon , by Mehun and Fontainebleau : Paris and Lyons Railway A.—Burgundy Line . . .	361	114 Clermont to Toulouse, by the Cantal and Aurillac . . .	417
105 Paris to Lyons, by Fontaine- bleau, Montargis, Gien, Nevers, Moulins [Vichy], Briare —Line of the Bourbonnais . . .	375	116 Clermont to Toulouse, by St. Flour, the Baths of Chaudes Aigues, Rodez, and Alby . . .	421
106 Dijon to Châlons-sur-Saône , by Paris and Lyons Railway B . . .	379	118 Lyons to Nismes, by Aubenas and Mende .— Railway to St. Etienne .— Ardèche and Cevennes . . .	425
107 Nevers to Chagny Stat. (on the Lyons Railway), by Châ- teau Chinon, Autun, and Creu- zot . . .	383	119 Roanne to Valence on the Rhône, by St. Etienne and An- nonay .— Railway from Roanne to St. Etienne . . .	431
108 Châlons-sur-Saône to Lyons, by Mâcon .— Railway C . . .	384	120 Le Puy to Nismes, by Alais . . .	434
109 Paris to Clermont (Rail) and Le Puy .— Volcanoes of Auvergne . . .	396	121 Valence to Nismes, by Liv- rons, Lavoulte, Privas, Au- benas, the Volcanoes of the Ar- dèche, and Alais .— Railway from Alais to Nismes .— The Cevennes . . .	434
110 Clermont to Mont Dore les Bains . . .	411

CENTRAL FRANCE.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE COUNTRY.

AMONG the crowds of English travellers who annually roll along the hot and dusty railway from Paris to Lyons on their way to Italy, complaining of the dull monotony of France, how few have taken the trouble to ascertain what beauties and curiosities were presented by the districts which they almost skirted on their rapid passage—Auvergne, the Vivarais, the Ardèche, and Dauphiné! Auvergne, little known even to the French themselves, except among men of science, in whose works it is minutely described, may now be visited on the way to Lyons by taking the rly. through Orleans and Moulins, and ascending the valley of the Allier to Clermont. The road thither, and for some distance beyond, traverses a country contrasting remarkably with that left behind at Moulins in varied surface, fertility, and abundance of foliage. It is thickly inhabited, and sprinkled over with towns and villages, not hidden, but planted on the road side or on the top of conspicuous eminences, where they alternate with ruined castles. The chief source of interest, however, in Auvergne consists in its extinct volcanoes, which of themselves deserve to attract visitors from all quarters of the globe. Even the distant outline of these commanding mountain groups marks them as something uncommon, while on a nearer approach their structure and composition furnish undeniable proof of their extraordinary origin. Many of them swell into domes, showing that others are formed into craters as regular and perfect as those of Etna and Vesuvius, assuming the shape of a funnel or inverted cone. In many instances the lava streams may be traced from the very lips of the crater out of which they originally flowed for miles over the country, capping the hill tops and filling up the valleys.

“The earth hath bubbles as the water has;”

Castles of the feudal ages, dismantled by the levelling politician Richelieu, or by the unbridled fury of the Revolutionists, abound in Central France and contribute to adorn the landscape. In the volcanic country they are usually perched on a platform of basalt crowning some conical peak, which is the relic of a great bed of the same rock which once overspread the country. These ready-made pedestals, from their isolated position and precipitous sides, afforded security for property in troublous times, and impunity for violence and rapine.

The best head-quarters for exploring Auvergne are Clermont, at the foot of the Puy (or Pic) de Dôme, whence numerous excursions may be made over the Phlegrean fields of France, and Mont Dore les Bains, a very interesting spot, situated within another volcanic chain, the Monts Dore. Farther S. lie the volcanic groups of the Cantal, between Murat and Aurillac, whose scenery is striking and very peculiar; of Velay, in the midst of which stands the town of Le Puy, one of the most singular and picturesque in France; and of the Dépt. Ardèche or Vivarais. Both the Cantal and Le Puy are accessible by good roads from Lemde, but there is a want of communication between them, and a carriage can only proceed from one to the other by a long détour, while the Ardèche is accessible by good roads only from the Rhône. The pedestrian and geologist will find his way readily across the country.

Aubenas, in the Ardèche, has a good inn; Vals, too, which is even more central, affords very fair accommodation, where travellers may put up while exploring its basaltic causeways, its domes of ashes, and craters of scorïæ, on which the chesnut luxuriates. The pedestrian and equestrian can pass from Le Puy, by Langogne, direct to Thueys and Montpezat. (Rte. 121.)

The best mode of travelling through Auvergne is on horseback: the horses of the country are hardy, safe, and strong. The Inns are homely, but the fare is good and the people civil.

Bordering upon the Ardèche to the S. extends the wild mountain chain of the Cevennes, which may be termed a moral extinct volcano, the last stronghold of persecuted Protestantism in France, “Le Désert,” as its own inhabitants called it, while, further in allusion to the children of Israel, they styled themselves “Les Enfants de Dieu.” The Cevennes fill a large part of the departments of La Lozère and Gard; and, by tracing up to their sources on the map the rivers Tarn, Gardon, Vidourle, and Herault, the reader will ascertain the theatre of that dire struggle, in the course of which 30,000 Cevenols perished in battle or on the scaffold, and a much larger number of royal troops fell, between November 1702 and December 1704. The boundaries of the Hautes Cevennes are precisely marked by the lozenge-shaped outline formed by the head waters, or forks, of the Tarn, and the two Gardons, that of Andouze and that of Alais. The Basses Cevennes lie S. of this, between the Gardon d'Andouze and the Vidourle. These mountains are a natural citadel, an inextricable labyrinth of gorges and defiles well fitted for desultory warfare, where a handful of bold defenders could hold out against a host; with mountain peaks and ridges for camps; passes and gorges for ambuscades; forests to rally in, in the event of defeat; and for escape and refuge, mountain paths, trodden only by the wild goat, and caves haunted by the fox; but which the Cevenols converted into arsenals and storehouses. The best disciplined troops availed nothing in storming these bulwarks of nature; and army after army, sent forth by the bigot Louis XIV., at the instigation of the Jesuits, was annihilated by rude peasants, and their leaders were recalled with disgrace. But the miseries of war, the assassinations, burnings, pillagings, slaughter of females and infants, were not confined to these mountains: they spread far and wide down into the plain, to the ocean on the S., to the Rhône on the E., and N. beyond the Ardèche: the incursions of the peasants in their forays, pouring down from the hills, repeatedly spread consternation up to the very walls of Nîmes, Uzès, Alais, and Montpellier; and their leaders in disguise boldly penetrated into the interior of these towns when in search of provisions or intelligence. And who were these chiefs? Simple peasants, shepherds, labourers, carders of wool, and weavers, who exercised the double office of military leaders and prophets; a singular compound of psalm-singing and throat-cutting, combining the strongest religious fanaticism with much worldly vanity, love of fine dresses, and of plunder; and above all, the most dauntless courage. One or two had served as soldiers in the ranks, during the war of the Alps; but this could not have given them that skill in generalship which enabled them repeatedly to bring their wild hordes to face troops four, six, or eight times more numerous, not only in the mountains, in advantageous positions, but also in the plain, with so much skill as to call forth the admiration even of Marshal Villars. The story of the poor peasants of the Cevennes differs but little from that of the Covenanters in Scotland, except that the oppression which the Cevenols endured was more cruel. It affords a remarkable proof how fruitless are the efforts of bigoted persecution and tyrannic cruelty, even when backed by unlimited power, in procuring passive submission. When, in an evil hour for France, Louis XIV., listening to the advice of Louvois and Bossuet, backed by the Jesuits, revoked the Edict of Nantes, made it a crime to pray except according to his own religion, banished the Reformed pastors to distant lands, pulled down the churches, and let loose the Dragonnades to torture the people into conformity, a strange fermentation was produced in the public mind, heated by the perusal and misapplication of particular parts of the Bible. Prophets and prophetesses began to spring up among the Protestant community. That wild enthusiasm, bordering on insanity, which roused up the Maid of Orleans to resist the oppression of the English, here seems to have developed itself among a whole community. The disease of prophesying seems first to have broken out in Dauphiné, but soon spread, like an epidemic, across the Rhône, and a large proportion of the cases were mere boys and girls, and all untaught peasants. The ignorant peasantry, believing the extacies of these preachers to be inspired by the Holy Ghost, flocked from far and near to listen, and, deprived of the sober guidance of their own exiled pastors, imbibed the fervour of fanaticism. The spirit of resistance began to show itself, drawn forth by the recital of their wrongs, the denunciation of their tyrants, and the assurance of support from heaven: conventicles were held, in spite of the terrors of prison, torture, and the soldiery, in the open air among rocks and caverns. The desire of vengeance on the instrument of their suffering, a bigoted priest who had acted the part which Archbishop Sharp is supposed to have done in Scotland, and who was assassinated by a fanatic French Balfour of Burley, was the signal for denial of mercy on the part of the ministers of Louis, and of open rebellion on the side of the Cevenols. Hereupon commenced the insurrection of the Camisards, as the persecuted outcasts of the Cevennes were called by their enemies, it is supposed from the white shirt (in Languedocian, Camisa) which they wore over their clothes to distinguish themselves. The whole of the Protestant communities were organized, chiefly by the leaders Roland and Cavalier; troops were levied from the different parishes, and each furnished its quota to the ranks and the commissariat or a contribution of money; and losses in the ranks were filled up by fresh levies. The Cevenol force never exceeded 3000 in arms at one time, and was divided into three brigades under different chiefs, each of whom had his own post and district (generally near his own home) among the hills. Such troops and commanders, intoxicated by the wild harangues of prophets and prophetesses who accompanied the expeditions on horseback, and made their hearers believe that their bodies should be as stone against sword and musket, and who led them into action with some inspiriting psalm, produced acts of most dauntless daring and prowess, and a total disregard of the numbers brought against them. The seizures, tortures, executions, by breaking on the wheel and burning alive (the common modes of punishing a Camisard), led to reprisals on their part—to murders of priests, sacking and burning of popish churches. Yet, horrible as were the acts of vengeance and violence committed by the Cevenols, they were equalled, if not surpassed, by the crimes, plunder, and murder of women and children, perpetrated by the ruffian soldiery in the pay of Louis, especially by the guerrilla bands called Florentins. The royal troops carried fire and sword into every village; and the unscrupulous generals and governors of Louis acting in Languedoc resorted to the atrocious measure of devastating the whole of the Upper Cevennes; destroying by fire and axe 400 hamlets and villages, and driving away the inhabitants. The Camisards did not attempt to defend their homesteads, but retorted by carrying fire and sword over the fertile plain, and spreading terror into the cities of Nismes and Montpellier. The rebellion was at length arrested, less by any successes gained against the Protestants in the field, by the number of troops employed against them, and the skill and generalship of the four marshals of France despatched in turn to take the command, than by the cautious policy of one of them, Marshal Villars, in cajoling and bribing the Cevenol leaders.

Though the struggle of the Cevenols ended in failure—though the tolerance of their faith, according to the Edict of Nantes, the chief object for which they contended, was denied them—though the insurrection was followed, not by alleviation of their wrongs, but by persecution continued for half a century,—yet these misguided sufferers, who bled upon their native mountains, who were broken alive on the wheel, burnt alive on the pile, tormented in dungeons, or pined away their lives in gaol, gave a terrible lesson to tyranny and religious bigotry, and shook the “Grand Monarque” on his throne. Even at the present time their country has not recovered from the desolation inflicted by the destruction of its houses and temples. Many parishes, destitute of places of worship, meet for prayer in the open air, and the traveller in passing through them may be arrested by the distant sounds of psalmody, or in passing an abrupt turn in his road may come upon a congregation of peasants attentively listening to the pastor, who holds forth from the top of the rock, or from beneath the shade of a venerable tree. Many families trace their descent from the chiefs of the insurrection. The people are poor, and the greater part of their country, especially the Upper Cevennes, is not easily accessible for want of roads. There is but little traffic along the two highways from Mende to Nismes (Rte. 118), and from Aubenas to Alais (Rte. 121), which skirt or traverse it. Manufactures, however, are gradually creeping up its remote valleys from the S.; silk is largely cultivated; and the railway between Nismes and Alais, and the neighbouring coal-field, cannot fail to give an impulse to traffic and commerce. The traveller will find little picturesque beauty, owing to the bare aridity of the hills, the want of foliage and of verdure.

Its history and ancient associations form its chief interest. An Englishman may be willing to be reminded, as he traverses this district of former strife, that many of the Irish officers and soldiers who fought at the battle of the Boyne on the side of James II., and afterwards accompanied him to France, were employed here against the Protestants; that the Cevenol leaders were encouraged by the ministers of William III. and Queen Anne, and received promises of assistance, but promises only; that on two occasions British fleets, under Sir Cloudesley Shovel, approached the coast of Languedoc to support the insurrection with troops and arms, but failed in effecting that purpose; that the band of Cevenol insurgents expelled from France by the intrigues and negotiations of Villars was formed into a regiment under their chief Cavalier, and fought in the English army commanded by Peterborough in Spain, at Almanza, where they were almost cut to pieces by their own countrymen; and that Cavalier, their leader, died a pensioner in Chelsea Hospital.

A full account of the war of the Cevennes, and the events which led to it, will be found in Peyrat, Histoire des Pasteurs du Désert, Paris, 1842.

The Auvergnats are now a peaceable and poor but hardy and frugal race. Numbers of them in their youth go to Paris and other large towns, where they work as water-carriers, porters, &c., and hope to save up enough to enable them to return and live in comfort in their native valleys.

For the geology of Auvergne, Velay, and the Vivarais, there is no work so good as G. P. Scrope's Central France, with illustrations from the author's sketches. Consult also Desmarest's Map of Auvergne, Lyell's Geology, and the French works of M. Elie de Beaumont; those of MM. Lecoq and Bouillet, and of M. Bertrand de Doux. Miss Costello's Summer in Auvergne may also be referred to. Merimée's Notes d'un Voyage en Auvergne contains the most complete account of the monuments of that district.

SKELETON TOUR THROUGH AUVERGNE.

Clermont (rly. from Paris). See town and neighbourhood.

Ascent of Puy de Pariou (carriage and foot, and return to Clermont).

Ascent of Puy de Dôme (carriage and foot, and return to Clermont).

Valley of Fontanat and Royat (1 day's excursion from Clermont—can be seen returning from the Puy de Dôme).

Mines of Pontgibaud (1 day's excursion from Clermont).

Clermont to Mont Dore les Bains (diligence).

Ascent of Pic de Sancy (horseback—return to Mont Dore).

Mont Dore les Bains to St. Nectaire (diligence).

St. Nectaire to Issoire (diligence). See church.

Issoire to Clermont and St. Remy (rail), and to Vichy (rail). See Vichy.

ROUTE 101.

ORLEANS TO CLERMONT, BY BOURGES,
ST. GERMAIN DES FOSSÉS, VICHY—
RAILWAY.

Orleans.	Miles.
Vierzon Stat. . . . .	51
Bourges . . . . .	70
Le Guétin. . . . .	106
St. Germain . . . . .	163

3 or 4 trains daily to St. Germain; time, from Paris, 9 to 11 hrs.

This road is the same as Rte. 70 as far as Vierzon Junction Stat. About a mile out of the town, on the banks of the Canal, is the village Les Forges, consisting of extensive furnaces, where the iron from the furnaces of Berry is manufactured in large quantity.

Mehun Stat., near to the river Yèvre. A fragment, consisting of 2 machicolated towers, alone remains of the castle in which Charles VII. spent much of the early part of his reign in indolence, and at last ended his days; allowing himself to die of starvation, through the fear of being poisoned by his son, afterwards Louis XI., 1461. The demolition of the building has been chiefly effected since 1812, down to which time the chamber of the king, and that of his mistress, Agnes Sorel, were still pointed out.

BOURGES Stat.—Inns: H. de France, near the P. O., clean and comfortable; Croix d'Or.

Bourges, anciently capital of Berry, and now of the Dépt. of the Cher, is situated nearly in the centre of France, upon a considerable eminence, rising abruptly out of an uninteresting and flat country, watered by the river Auron, and has 22,465 Inhab. It has gained in life and prosperity since the Rly. was brought to it, and it has been chosen as the Military  Arsenal of France par excellence, on account of its central position and strategical importance. Great military workshops are being constructed near the Semmau and on the bank of the Cher. Eventually the establishment now at Metz is to be transferred hither. Some iron is smelted and some cloth is woven here. Its streets may be divided into those of ancient houses with gables facing outwards, many of them of timber; and of dead walls and portes cochères, denoting the habitations of families of independent fortune, and in easy circumstances, in which class Bourges abounds. The number of silversmiths is remarkable in a provincial town. The highest platform of the hill on which the town is built is occupied by the **Cathedral of St. Etienne*, a colossal and magnificent edifice, one of the finest in France, flanked by 2 solid towers; its W. façade presents a row of no less than 5 deeply-recessed portals, all ornamented, in a style of peculiar richness and originality, with sculpture; that in the centre, higher than the rest, is decorated, above the carved wood doors, with a bas-relief of admirable execution, representing the Last Judgment. In the centre, Christ seated amidst Archangels, and the Virgin and St. John on either side, on their knees: below, on his rt., the Good led to the Gate of Paradise by St. Peter; on the l. the Wicked seized by Demons and hurled into a fiery Cauldron, which divers Imps are exciting with the Bellows: 6 rows of niches, filled with figures of the Angelic Choir, Saints, Patriarchs, &c., line this deep porch on either side. The varied expression of the countenances, the elevated character of many, the easy flow of the drapery, and the good execution of the whole, bespeak the work of an eminent sculptor, but his name, as well as that of the architect of the building, is unknown. The portals have been restored with great care and skill. The other portals have smaller reliefs, from Scriptural and legendary stories, and fewer niches, but equally deserve examination. Those on the rt. of the spectator represent the Stoning of St. Stephen, and the Acts of St. Ursin; on the l. the Death of the Virgin, and St. Ursin and St. Just preaching the Gospel in Berry. The foliage between the mouldings can scarcely be surpassed for delicacy.

The oldest part of the ch. is the lateral doorways on the N. and S. sides; they are circular arches, adorned with florid Norman ornaments and statues, in the style of the 13th centy. The N. door is covered by a projecting porch of later date. The N. and most perfect tower was founded 1508, and finished 1538. Its builder was Guil. Pellevoisin: it is 199 ft. high; it is called the butter tower, because built with the money raised from indulgences to eat butter in Lent. It is worth while to ascend it for the sake of the view of the city, and the beauty of the staircase. The S. tower is inferior in elegance.

The interior consists of one long and vast parallelogram, without transept, but, to make amends, provided with double aisles on each side, those next the centre being 65 ft. high, and furnished, like it, with triforium and clerestory, worthy of a cathedral nave, extending all round the choir. Beyond the outer aisle are 18 chapels. The vaulted stone roof of the central aisle, 117 ft. high, is supported by 60 piers, with capitals in the Early English style, presenting the most varied and striking perspective.

The chapel, built by the jeweller Jaques Cœur, and his son John, Archbishop of Bourges, 1446, is now converted into a Sacristy, and defaced by wainscot. One of the chief boasts of this cathedral is the quantity, excellence, and good preservation of the painted glass of the windows of the choir and chapels. They include specimens of the art from the 13th down to the 17th centy. The chapels containing the finest examples of the later state of the art are those of Jacques Cœur, St. Loup, St. Denis: those in the chapels of Tullier and Coppin are the work of Lécuyer, an artist of Bourges (d. 1556). One of the most modern specimens is a beautiful Ascension of the Virgin, given, 1619, by the Maréchal de Montigny, whose portrait, with that of his wife, is seen in the corner below.

In the crypt, a very beautiful early Pointed structure, running below the choir, in a semicircle, is deposited the monument of Jean le Magnifique, Duc de Berri, son, brother, and uncle of kings, and nephew of Charles V. of France, erected by his own nephew, Charles VII. His effigy, in marble, of good execution, was brought hither from the Sainte Chapelle, which he built, now destroyed. Here are also effigies in marble of Maréchal Montigny and his lady, the statue of the Virgin, of good design, and an Entombment, life size, of some merit. Louis XI., son of Charles VII., b. at Bourges 1423, was baptized in the cathedral.

The Ch. of St. Bonnet contains 8 or 10 windows of good late painted glass by a local artist, Lescuyer, date 16th centy., and some painting, e.g. Education of the B.V., by Jean Boucher, a painter of Berry.

Adjoining the cathedral, on the S., is the Archevêché, a handsome edifice, in the Italian style, with gardens attached, traversed by fine avenues of limes. A little way from it the Caserne d'Artillerie, an immense building, formerly the Grand Séminaire, surrounded by numerous detached buildings, stables to accommodate the men and horses, of whom 800, with all their train and equipments, are commonly stationed here.

The city of Bourges is still surrounded by Remparts, converted, for the greater part of their extent, into a public promenade, and planted with trees. It was formerly defended by 60 watch-towers, all of which have been demolished. Joseph Scaliger and d'Anville are satisfied that Bourges is the ancient Avaricum (named from the river Avara, now Evre), chief town of the Bituriges (Berry), mentioned by Cæsar in his Commentaries (viii. 13), "Oppidum quod erat maximum munitissimumque, in finibus Biturigum, et totius Gallie urbs prope pulcherrima." On account of its importance and beauty it was the only city of the Celtic Gauls which they spared to burn to the ground, when, like the Russians in Moscow, they resorted to that expedient as a last resource to check the conquering armies of Julius Cæsar.

At the entrance of the Garden of the Préfecture, close to the Promenade de Seraucourt, is a Romanesque portal of the 11th centy., removed from the Ch. of St. Ursin, now destroyed. It is a circular arch, enclosing curious sculptures in relief, representing the 12 Months of the Year; a Boar Hunt, &c.; Scenes from Æsop's Fables, as the Stork and the Fox; a Fox drawn by Geese; of very good execution.

Next to the cathedral, the most interesting building is the **Hôtel de Ville*, originally the private mansion of Jacques Cœur, a citizen of the town, a great capitalist and successful merchant and jeweller, and finance minister to Charles VII., who, after lending his master 200,000 gold crowns, was torn from his palace, cast into prison, and condemned to death and confiscation of his property—a sentence commuted by the king into perpetual banishment. The cause of his accusation and condemnation remains a mystery. The building, begun 1443, is in the florid style, of great magnificence, yet not overlaid: the walls alone cost 130,000 livres. It has been purchased by the Imperial Government for 850,000 frs., and is to be restored. There is no uniformity of parts; no one wall or window corresponds with another—all is varied, yet all is harmonious. The entrance is flanked by a graceful tourelle, and is surmounted by a projecting balcony, or open oriel of elegant tracery. Two figures, sculptured in stone, on each side, are said to be the servants of Jacques Cœur, on the lookout to warn him of danger from the officers of justice, but are more probably a mere freak of the architect. This elegant palace is distinguished, like many other French domestic edifices of the 15th centy., by its circular cone-roofed towers, containing spiral staircases. Its windows, surmounted by flat arches, are ornamented below with open tablets of quatrefoils, among which is introduced the punning device of Jacques Cœur, the heart, and the scallop-shell of the pilgrim to St. James's Shrine. On a little Gothic balustrade between the outer gateway and its flanking turret the motto of Jacques Cœur, "A vaillants Cœurs rien impossible," is elaborately carved in tall Gothic characters of stone. Over the doorways in the court are singular bas-reliefs: observe that on the l. of the great entrance, and that over the kitchen. The chapel above the gateway deserves to be seen, but especially the upper part, divided from the lower by a modern floor, its groined roof being elegantly painted in fresco, probably by Italian artists, with angels in flowing robes of white upon a blue ground, representing the multitude of the angelic host, bearing scrolls, inscribed, "Gloria in excelsis Deo, et in terrâ pax," &c.: the figures are well foreshortened, and in good preservation. In the lower part of the chapel are 2 elegant niches, nearly blocked up. The rest of the interior has been sadly mutilated and altered, to fit it for conversion into law-courts, stripped of panelling, cornices, and chimney-pieces, so that the chapel alone is now worth entering. The back of the building is as well worth inspection as the front, and more ancient. This palace was appropriated as a residence to the youthful Condé, destined to become Le Grand Condé, while pursuing his studies at the Jesuits' College here.

The Caserne de Gendarmerie, in a street behind the Hôtel de Ville, not far off from it, was the house of Cujas, professor in the University, which existed here from 1465 to the Revolution. It is of brick, of very solid construction, built towards the end of the 16th centy., and displays about its doors, windows, and turrets, some fragments of elegant decoration. It will be remembered that Bourges had great fame as a school of law.

The Convent of the Sœurs Bleues, in the Rue des Vieilles Prisons, originally the mansion of the family Lallemand, and built probably about 1512-26, has an irregular front, flanked by tourelles, gracefully decorated with arabesque patterns, bas-reliefs, &c., in the style of the Renaissance, which will please an architect. It contains a little family oratory, about 10 ft. by 15, surmounted by a roof of 3 stone slabs, divided into 30 compartments, each filled with some device, as a Globe on Fire, a Hand gathering a Chesnut, or other pattern, rebus, relief, or ornament, alternating with the letters R E, often repeated, most elaborately carved, but of which the meaning is difficult to explain.

The house, said to be that of Charles VII. (Rue de Paradis), now part of the Lycée, has a beautiful staircase turret and a fine fireplace in the old hall. Bourges was his residence and refuge at a time when three-fourths of his kingdom of France belonged to the English, when he was little more, in fact, than "king of Bourges." Two specimens of mediæval domestic architecture in the Rue des Toiles and Rue St. Sulpice are worth notice.

Bourges has a Museum, a receptacle of antiquities, of various ages, and other curiosities, without order or arrangement. Obs. 6 weeping figures (pleureurs), in alabaster, from the monument of Jean Duc de Berri, in the crypt of the Cathedral; a model of the Saint Chapelle, mentioned above, now destroyed; an ebony cabinet, ornamented in the style of the Renaissance, from Agnes Sorel's castle, Bon-sire-aimé, and some portraits, including those of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, merit notice.

Bourges was the birthplace of Louis XI., and of Bourdalone, one of the first pulpit orators of the French Church.

There is nothing remarkable between Bourges and La Guerche Stat., where the Allier is crossed.

Le Guétin Junction Stat. [Here a branch Rly. diverges l. 11 kilom. to NEVERS Stat. (Rte. 105.)]

St. Pierre le Moutier Stat. Here the rly. leaves the ancient province of Nivernois and enters the Bourbonnais, now Dépt. Allier. In the village is an old Ch., and near it the ruins of the massy donjon tower of Langeron.

MOULINS Stat. (in Rte. 105). The rly. follows the line of the Allier, with the mountains of Forez on the E., by Bessay Stat.

Varennes Stat. 6 m. W. is St. Pourcain, where an Ecce Homo in stone has been praised.

St. Germain des Fossés Junct. Stat. Here one branch of the rly. goes to Roanne (Rte. 105), the other to Clermont (Rte. 109). There is also a short branch to VICHY Stat. 6 Eng. m.

[VICHY.—Inns: H. de la Paix; H. des Princes; H. Givois Prêtre (kept by Tullat), frequented by French; H. des Bains; H. Guillermin, still the most fashionable; H. Mombrun, facing the park, good—table-d'hôte, which English ladies may frequent; H. Britannique, comfortable, well suited to invalids (M. Leger, landlord); H. du Parc, new, 1864; and many others—all fair, but not equal to those in German watering-places. English Ch. Service at 12 on Sunday in the H. de la Paix until a ch. is built. The charges vary from 10 to 12f. per diem at the best inns; 5 to 7f. at the inferior; and 6f. for servants. It is usual for all the inmates to breakfast and dine together, but this rule is often departed from in the case of families who have their own servants who can wait upon them, or when returning after the ordinary hours for those meals from excursions in the country.

Lodgings may be easily obtained in private houses, with sitting-rooms, &c.; and arrangements made with the proprietors for furnishing meals, or by hiring servants—a system better suited perhaps for families, especially English.

English Pharmacy—chez Tabardin, 9, Rue Burnol.

Vichy, a town of 6000 Inhab., is situated in the valley of the Allier, a rapid stream here crossed by a bridge  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. long. Little eminences surmounted by round towers, of which the Vieux Vichy is one, rise along the l. bank of the river. To this has been added a new quarter or suburb, consisting chiefly of hotels and lodging-houses connected with the old town by a fine promenade, shaded by avenues of plane-trees. This is the watering-place properly speaking, now one of the most frequented in France, attracting 16,000 visitors in a season, and daily increasing in prosperity and reputation. The visits of the Emperor, especially, have given an impulse to improvement in the making of new boulevards and streets.

Vichy is a place strictly for invalids, not for passing travellers, for whom it has few attractions.

The mineral springs of Vichy, which belong to the French government, and are leased by them to a company at a high rent, are acidulous and alkaline. The water has been not inappropriately compared to heated soda-water, the principal ingredients being carbonate of soda and carbonic acid gas in excess.

This acid is combined with the soda, potash, and lime; but the important ingredient is the bicarbonate of soda resulting from this combination.

There are 8 principal springs, varying in temperature from 56° Fahr. (Les Celestins) to 113° (Puits Carré). The former therefore cannot be considered thermal.

Name of Spring. Temp.

Grande Grille . . .	89.5 . . 44	} Grains of bicarb. of soda in a pint Eng.
Puits Chomel . . .	104 . . 45
Puits Carré . . .	113 . . 45
L'Hôpital . . .	113 . . 45½
Lucas . . .	82.5 . . 45½
Lardy . . .	77 . . 39
Brosson . . .	74.5 . . 44	}
Celestins . . .	56 . . 50

Three of the springs—La Grande Grille, Le Puits Chomel, and the Puits Carré, rise under the foundations of the Bâtiment Thermal; three others, L'Hôpital, Les Sources Lucas et Lardy, in different parts of the old town; La Source des Celestins near the bank of the Allier, a short way from the town: the Brosson source has been procured by an Artesian boring. The Grande Grille is most used for drinking, from its vicinity to the Bath-house, and for exportation.

The Bath-house, called the Etablissement or Bâtiment Thermal, is a very handsome building, faced by a long colonnade, containing in the upper floor a reading and ball room; in the lateral ranges or wings are numerous baths tolerably well appointed, and 4 douches. Subscription, including balls and concerts, 25f. There is another new Etablissement equally good: each contains 200 baths. The water is received in stone basins, and has the appearance of boiling from the quantity of carbonic acid gas which bubbles up through it. Baths, including linen, 1f. 25c.

The season at Vichy commences as early as the 15th of May, and lasts until the end of October. The following is the routine observed by persons frequenting the waters for their health:—On arrival it is usual to consult one of the medical men attached to the baths; the most eminent physicians being Dr. Alquié, the Gov. Director, and Dr. A. Dubois, the Under Director, a gentleman who can be most strongly recommended. Although the legal fee is only 5f., visitors generally continue to consult them during their stay, and on leaving present such an amount as they may consider fair for the advice and benefit they have derived. English generally give 20f. on their first visit. This being arranged, the day is generally passed thus:—As early as 6 a crowd assembles to drink the waters, which occupies, with the subsequent exercise, an hour or two. 5 or 6 half-pints a day form a large dose. To this succeeds breakfast at 10; afterwards the bath, for those who are recommended to bathe. Owing to the number of applicants, persons may have sometimes a long time to wait. The table-d'hôte dinner takes place at 5, and in the evening the company assemble in the salon of their hotel. Precedence at the table-d'hôte is determined by the date of the visitor's arrival, as in the choice of bed-rooms; the longest resident occupying the head of the table and having first choice of apartments.

A course of the waters lasts generally 18 to 25 days.

The Etablissement Thermal, with its handsome saloons and reading-rooms, is the general rendezvous of the bathers.

The subscription for what is considered the course of baths, occupying about 6 weeks, was, in 1855, 30 f. for 2 persons, which admits the subscriber to all balls, concerts, &c. These are frequent, commencing at half-past 8 and generally ending before midnight, the physicians regulating the time. Collections are made at the several hotels and boarding-houses for charitable purposes; and on leaving it is usual for visitors to leave 5 f. or more for the charities and parish schools of the town.

The waters of Vichy have of late years acquired a well-merited celebrity throughout Europe, and have become more and more the rendezvous of English visitors. They are considered to be particularly efficacious in chronic complaints of the liver and digestive organs arising from acidity and from atony; but it is principally in enlargements of the liver, either produced by long residence in warm climates (as in India for example), and in hepatic obstructions that they are useful. The same may be said as regards obstructions of the spleen, in diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs (especially gravel of the most frequent kind, that produced by uric acid), in gout, and the glandular affections produced by it.

Vichy is now distant from Paris about 9 hrs. by rail, via Montargis, Monhur, and St. Germain des Fossés, which is shorter than the route by Orleans and Bourges (Rte. 105).

N. of the great Round Tower, the only one remaining out of 7 which defended the walls, stands the mansion which Madame de Sévigné occupied, and from which she wrote some of her Letters, 1676: see vol. v.

The Rocher des Célestins, at the foot of which the springs rise, so called from a convent, ruins of which still exist, on its top, presents a curious geological phenomenon, being composed of vertical strata of a tufaceous rock, almost pure arragonite, no doubt deposited from mineral springs, projecting in shattered slabs above the surface, and abutting at a short distance against horizontal strata of the same tufa.

A Park of 26 acres was formed, 1862, along the rt. bank of the Allier, opposite the Celestins, laid out and planted with trees and shrubs, and water-courses, so as to form a miniature of the Bois de Boulogne and a pleasant walk. A Digue,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. long, protects the town from inundations of the river.

A new Hôtel de Ville and Casino is projected.

The situation of Vichy is agreeable, but not striking, in an open and highly cultivated country, but the most frequented drive is along the road to Thiers. Pleasant excursions may be made in the neighbourhood; light calèches, by the hour and at a fixed rate, are always in readiness for hire, as well as donkeys.

a. To La Montagne Verte,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  m. on the other side of the Sichon: fine view.

b. Côte St. Amand, 2 m.; a pretty place and fine view.

c. Through the valley of the Sichon (good trout fishing) to Ardoisière.

d. Malavaux, a wild gorge, with ruins of a castle built by the Templars. Visit Puits du Diable, a rough walk of 2 m.

e. The Château de Bourbon Busset, belonging to a cadet branch of the Bourbon family; magnificently restored; commands fine views; drive of 10 m.

More distant excursions may be made to the Château d'Effiat (12 m.), which belonged to the Marechal of that name, the father of Cinq Mars, the favourite of Louis XIII., who was born here, and was executed at Lyons at the instigation of Cardinal Richelieu; to

The Château of Randan, 10 m., a modern mansion with pretty grounds, purchased by Madame Adelaide, the sister of King Louis-Philippe, from the Choiseul family, and bequeathed by her to her nephew the Duc de Montpensier. When the Orleans family were obliged to sell all their possessions in France, Randan passed into other hands, and is now stripped and unfurnished. On the way see Château de Maumont.

A visit to the Extinct Volcanoes of Auvergne, which will take up 3 or 4 days, may be profitably made from Vichy (Rte. 109).

Rail to Clermont.

St. Remy Stat. is 5 m.

Vichy possesses a large military hospital, whither soldiers are sent from every part of France. Since the occupation of Algeria, and the increase of chronic affections of the liver arising from a residence there, it has been found necessary to enlarge it.]

See Rte. 109 for the road to Clermont Ferrand Stat. (Rte. 109).

ROUTE 103.

BOURGES TO CLERMONT, BY MONTLUÇON AND NERIS LES BAINS.

Diligences daily. (?) Country flat and of little interest.

La Celle Bruere, a small village which was formerly strongly fortified, as it commanded the passage of the Cher. A gateway and some portions of the wall still remain. In the middle of the high road is a small column, situated as nearly as possible in the centre of France. The bisection of a line drawn from Dunkirk to Perpignan would strike this point.

A little on one side of the road is the ruined Abbey of Noirlac, so named from a dark pool near it. It is now converted into a China manufactory, including The Ch., a large and still perfect structure, and a good example of the transition Gothic of the latter part of the 13th cent., 1289. The kitchen and refectory, supported on pillars, still remain, as well as the cloister.

16 St. Amand Montrond (Inn: La Poste, good and reasonable), a neat town of 6636 Inhab., on the Marmande, about a mile from the rt. bank of the Cher. Only a few shapeless ruins remain of its Castle, once an important stronghold, belonging to the princes de Condé, in which the sickly infant who grew to be le Grand Condé was nursed and reared. His heroic wife, the Princess Clémence de Maille, after her escape from Chantilly, 1650, threw herself and her son into this castle, whence, after gathering around her the dependants and retainers of the house of Condé, she set forth to cross some of the wildest provinces of France in order to join the Dukes of Bouillon and La Rochefoucauld, and put herself at the head of the army of the Fronde, which kept possession of Bordeaux against Mazarin. Montrond was the birthplace of Gaston de Foix; it was fortified by the Duc de Sully, who wrote here his 'Adieux à la Cour,' after enduring a siege of a whole year's duration, 1652, from the royal forces, it was compelled to surrender to the Comte de Palluau, who levelled the fortifications. The last tower which remained standing has been pulled down, in order that the proprietor may make gardens and terraces on the site.

About 5 m. N. of St. Amand is situated the Château de Meillant, now the property, in virtue of his wife, of the Duc de Mortemart. This magnificent pile of building is of great antiquity. It was repaired and the fortifications strengthened about the year 1100, and at the commencement of the 16th centy. was again repaired and ornamented by Giovanni Giocondo, a celebrated Italian architect, for Charles d'Amboise, Seigneur de Chaumont. It is in the same style as the house of Jacques Cœur, at Bourges, but on a much larger scale, and the towers and the interior of the court much more richly decorated. Burning mountains, Chauds Monts, are profusely sculptured on the walls. It is probably the most splendid habitation of the kind in France, and is surrounded with large forests exceeding 20,000 acres in extent.

About 3 m. S. of St. Amand, on the l. bank of the Cher, is the Château d'Auray, belonging to the Marquis de Bigny, who has lately restored it. It is built round a quadrangle, and is surrounded by a moat. The style is similar to that of Meillant. A little lower down, on the high grounds above the river, is an old encampment, called "Le Camp de César."

The road from St. Amand towards Montluçon is very agreeable, running through vineyards, and near the rt. bank of the Cher. At Drevant, which lies between the road and the river about 2 m. from St. Amand, extensive substructions of a theatre, and other Roman buildings, have been laid bare.

A branch of the Canal du Cher runs parallel with the Cher and the high road from St. Amand to Montluçon, and the coal mines of Commentry, where it terminates.

18 Meaulne.

16 Reugny (Dépt. Allier).

15 Montluçon (Inns: H. de France, and de l'Ecu), a very ancient town of the province of the Bourbonnais, having 17,000 Inhab., picturesquely situated on the slope of a hill, whose base is washed by the Cher, and its summit crowned by a Castle. During the middle ages it was a strong fortress; and, from its position near the frontier of the French king's domains, had often to sustain the attacks of the English. A part of its old walls, and their flanking watch-towers, still remains, constructed with great solidity. The donjon, and a few towers on the summit of the hill, are all that remains of the castle of the Ducs de Bourbon, which commanded the town, as its ruins still command an extensive view. It is important from its Iron Works and plate-glass manufactories.

Railway to Moulins. Travellers may proceed by it to Clermont, but it is a great détour.

A hilly and uninteresting road to 8 Néris (Inns: Grand Hôtel;—H. Leopold), a watering-place of considerable resort within a few years, but well known to the Romans, who must have had a magnificent establishment here, judging from the architectural fragments—columns, friezes, foundations of walls—discovered from time to time. Yet it is only since 1821 that the French have begun a bath-house, which is not yet finished, and which, with several boarding-houses attached to a poor village of 800 Inhab., compose the place. The mineral waters are warm, 126° Fahr., alkaline, but nearly tasteless, so that the inhabitants employ them for culinary purposes and for drinking; they are furnished from 4 sources, one of which, La Source Nouvelle, burst forth, 1757, at the time of the earthquake at Lisbon. The latter are exclusively used for baths, being introduced into the houses.

They resemble the spring of Schlangenbad, have the same unctuous feel to the touch, the same smoothing effect on the skin, and sedative influence on the nerves. The latter are recommended in nervous and rheumatic affections; neuralgia, sciatica, &c. It is usual to go to bed after taking the bath, in order to promote perspiration. There are also douche and mud baths, and 3 piscines or public baths.

The very pretty promenade, or Jardin des Bains, occupies the site of an amphitheatre, built by the Romans for the recreation of visitors to these remote baths of Aqua Neri, as Nérès was anciently called. Concentric terraces mark the stages on which the seats were placed; and traces remain of one of the passages which divided them into cunei, or wedges. There are considerable fragments of walls.

The Church is a very ancient Romanesque edifice, in the form of a basilica, ending in 3 apses. The arches in the nave are pointed, those in the choir round. From the rude sculpture of the capitals, its date has been referred to the 11th centy.

The country around is pleasing, and the situation very healthy.

The road to Clermont is carried through a wild hilly district, passing through a country of primitive rocks shortly before reaching 18 Montaigut, a little town appropriately named from its site on a pointed hill, crowned by a castle, situated in the Dépt. Puy de Dôme.

At Menat is a Romanesque Church, restored by Government. Here also are quarries, whence tripoli or polishing slate is obtained: it is produced by the spontaneous combustion of iron pyrites acting on beds of bituminous shale, which contains impressions of fresh-water vegetables, fish, and insects. Near this the road ascends a long and steep hill, commanding a very extensive view over the volcanic ranges of Auvergne, and near at hand looks down upon the Castle of Blot, seated amidst rugged rocks. The river Sioule is crossed before reaching forms of the volcanic mountains of the Puy de Dôme cannot fail to arrest attention.

27 St. Pardoux. The very peculiar [France.]

We now enter the fertile plain of the Limagne d'Auvergne.

23 Riom } described in Rte. 109.
15 Clermont }

ROUTE 104.

PARIS TO DIJON, BY MELUN AND FONTAINEBLEAU. — PARIS AND LYONS RAILROAD A—BURGUNDY LINE.

Paris.	Miles.
Melun . . . . .	28
Fontainebleau . . . . .	37
Montereau . . . . .	49
Sens . . . . .	70
Tonnerre . . . . .	123
Montbard . . . . .	151
Dijon . . . . .	196
Lyons . . . . .	316

Terminus Boulevard Mazas, on the rt. bank of the Seine, not far from the Bastille. 6 trains daily to Lyons—fast in 10 hrs. 20 min., slow in 13 hrs. 10 min. halt for refreshment at Tonnerre, Dijon, and Macon. The first part of this railway, from Paris to Tonnerre, was opened 1849. It is carried up the valleys of the Seine, Yonne, Armançon, Brenne, and Oze. The country seen from the rly. is very dull and uninteresting.

The river Marne is crossed by a bridge of 5 arches, at Charenton Stat., a village of 1900 Inhab., containing a Lunatic Asylum, a large building. Two of the detached forts for the defence of Paris here guard the passage of the Seine, one on each bank.

Alfort Stat.; near this is a large veterinary college, the most celebrated establishment of the kind in France.

rt. flows the Seine. l. is the Forest of Senart.

Mongeron Stat. Viaduct of 9 arches over the valley of the Yères river.

At Brunoy is a

2nd viaduct of 28 arches 72 ft. high, over the Yères. It cost 60,000*l.* The table-land of La Brie is reached.

A handsome bridge of 3 arches of cast iron traverses the Seine.

Melun Stat. (Inn: H. de France) is a mile distant from the town of 11,600 Inhab., chef-lieu of the Dépt. Seine et Marne. It is mentioned in Cæsar's Commentaries under the name Melodunum. In 1420 it was besieged and taken by the armies of Henry V. and the Duke Burgundy, but the English were ejected 1430. There is a fine ch. at Melun.

FONTAINEBLEAU STAT., in the Forest, is about 1 m. E. of the town—omnibus thither.

[Fontainebleau.—Inns: H. de France, facing the Palace, good;—H. d'Angleterre, good;—Ville de Lyon, clean, comfortable, and moderate;—Aigle Noir;—H. de Londres, good, civil people;—Café du Balcon.

This town, seated in the midst of the Forest of Fontainebleau, has swelled, under the influence of the presence and smiles of royalty, to a population of 10,000, from a poor hamlet in the time of Louis VII., who first built a castle here (1162). It owes its consequence entirely to its **Château Royal, a palace of much historical interest, but not very imposing as an edifice, externally, in spite of its extent; the masses of building composing it, though they enclose 6 courts, being limited to low ranges of 2 or 3 stories, chiefly of brick. The oldest and the greatest part of the existing edifice dates from the reign of Francis I., excepting the chapel.

Time, neglect, and violence had greatly dimmed the splendour of this venerable seat of kings, when Louis-Philippe undertook to revive it; and his judicious and splendid restorations, following closely the style and character of the different periods at which it was originally constructed, have added greatly to the magnificence and interest of the palace.

The entrance is by the "Cour du Cheval Blanc," so called from a plaster cast of the equestrian statue of Marcus Aurelius at Rome, which Catherine of Medici set up in it, but it no longer exists. In the midst of this court, near the foot of the horseshoe stair, Napoleon took leave of the remnant of the Old Guard, who had followed him to the last, midst his reverses, previously to his departure for Elba, 1814, an event commemorated by the well-known picture of "Les Adieux de Fontainebleau."

The apartments first entered are those fitted up for the late Duc d'Orléans, on the occasion of his marriage; they had been originally occupied by Catherine de' Medici and Anne of Austria, whence they got the name Appartements des Reines Mères. Here Pope Pius VII. was lodged, rejecting all the magnificence and comforts prepared for him by his imperial jailer, who desired that his forced residence of 3 years should have the appearance of a visit rather than an imprisonment. Napoleon attempted in a private interview to wring from the old man his consent to the Concordat, by which he renounced temporal power. The ceiling of the salon, recently restored, is very gorgeous.

In the Chapelle de la Trinité, whose paintings are inferior and faded, the marriages of Louis XV. with Maria Leckzinska (1725) and of the late Duc d'Orléans (1837) were celebrated. The Galerie de François I. is one of the most striking in the palace; perfectly characteristic of the style of art of the period of the Renaissance; and it supplies specimens of some of the productions of the Italians attracted, at the king's bidding, to France, where they founded a school of art. Its roof is of walnut wood, its walls are richly panelled and covered with stucco, scroll-work, carvings, trophies, devices, among which the Salamander of Francis is often repeated alternating with terms, or Caryatid figures, medallions, bas-reliefs. These serve partly as frames to 14 pictures, in fresco, the work of Rossi (Maître Roux), a Florentine, and his scholars. One of Danaë, however, is attributed to Primaticcio, who is supposed also to have designed the ornaments. The paintings, now too much faded or injured to be appreciated, are chiefly mythological subjects, chosen for their allegorical reference to the life of Francis. In the first he is represented opening the Temple of Art and Taste to a crowd of blind persons; next comes a Triumph, in honour of the victory of Marignan, led by a caparisoned elephant; then the Rape of Europa; the Burning of Troy; Æneas carrying off Anchises, &c. In the centre is a bust of Francis. The paintings of the age of Francis I. were of so licentious a character, that Anne of Austria thought right to cause a great part of them to be effaced in 1653, when she became Regent, and this will account for the slight remains now existing. The Cabinet de Travail contains the little round mahogany table at which Napoleon, in 1814, signed his abdication, a fac-simile of which, blotted and scrawled, was suspended on the walls, but has been removed: the original, not being at the time considered of much value, was lost. His bed-room remains nearly as he left it. The Salle du Trône is of the age of Louis XIII. and XIV., but the throne was set up by Buonaparte. The Boudoir de la Reine was fitted up for the unfortunate Marie-Antoinette by Louis XVI., and the metal window bolts (espagnolettes) are said to have been wrought by his own hand, and are masterly specimens of his skill in smith's work. The Galerie de Diane is a long corridor, built 1600, but decorated with paintings relating to that goddess, by modern artists. Below it runs the Galerie des Cerfs, which was in 1657 the scene of the atrocious murder of an Italian, the Marquis Monaldeschi, by 3 assassins hired for the purpose by Christina of Sweden, at that time residing in the château as the guest of Louis XIII. The reason assigned by her for the crime was some alleged betrayal of her secrets by Monaldeschi, who was her high chamberlain, and had enjoyed her full confidence. She subjected him to a sort of mock trial, in which she acted as judge and jury. She sent for a priest to confess him before she gave orders for his murder, which was executed in the confessor's presence. Monaldeschi seems not to have been free from suspicions of his mistress, for he wore under his dress a coat of mail, which turned the first thrusts of the sword of the assassin. The French court was content to give a hint of displeasure at this atrocity, but the queen remained here until 1659. This gallery is now subdivided into small apartments, and is not shown.

The suite of rooms called Salons de Réception comprises one called de François I., containing Gobelins tapestries, of recent date, as brilliant as oil paintings, and a chimney-piece ornamented with Sèvres china. A second is named after Louis XIII., because he was born in it; and the Salle de St. Louis is ornamented with a high relief of Henri IV. on horseback, over the fireplace. The Salle des Gardes is admirably and most richly restored: the paintings on the walls are in the style of those of the Loggia of Raphael. The chimney-piece rests on 2 figures of Strength and Peace, and in the centre is a bust of Henri IV.

The Salle du Bal, or Galerie de Henri II., is the most splendid of the recent restorations, and one of the finest things in the palace. The paintings have been renovated with as much care as possible, yet, it is to be feared, retain little of the master pencils of Primaticcio, and his pupil, Niccolo del Abbate, by whom they were executed. The ceiling is most gorgeous and elaborate with ornaments; the walls are of consistent richness. Everywhere appears the crescent of Diana of Poitiers, and her initial D. linked with that of her royal lover, H. The chimney-piece, glittering with fleurs-de-lis, and resplendent with marbles, was the work of the sculptor Rondelet.

The Chapelle de St. Saturnin, on the ground floor, is said to be of the time of Louis VII., and the oldest part of the palace; but the repairs of Francis I., who found it in ruins, have disguised and altered it so that little of its primitive structure can be traced. It was originally dedicated by Thomas à Becket. In its windows is some good modern painted glass, from the designs of the late talented Princess Marie d'Orléans.

The Porte Dorée, a splendid portal, decorated with revived frescoes, originally by Rossi, leads from the Cour Ovale to the Allée de Maintenon, "named by the proudest and vainest king in Europe after his plebeian wife."

The Oval Court is also called Cour du Donjon, from an elevated pavillon on an archway in the style of the Renaissance, and includes the oldest part of the Palais. The other entrance to it is called Port Dauphine, because built at the birth of Louis XIII., 1601.

The gardens at the back of the palace are not, on the whole, very remarkable to one accustomed to those of England. That called Jardin Anglais is bordered by a triangular pond, in the midst of which rises a pavillon surrounded by water. The "Fontaine de Belle Eau," which gave the name to the place, rose, it is said, within the garden; but the source has been lost in forming the artificial ponds. In the ponds are some very large carp, very tame, and said to be 200 or 300 years old.

Philippe le Bel was born and died at Fontainebleau; the emperor Charles V. was lodged in the Salle des Poêles, and entertained here by Francis I., 1539; Henrietta Maria sought refuge here when the cause of Charles I. became hopeless, 1644; here the Maréchal de Biron, betrayed by his agent Mafin, was arrested for conspiracy against Henri IV., 1602, and conveyed to the Bastille; the Grand Condé died here 1686, and Louis XIV. here signed (1685) the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes.

The Sandstone quarries around Fontainebleau not only furnish paving stones for the chaussée high roads around the town, but are transported in quantities down the Seine to Paris. The rock sometimes presents very pretty groups of crystals, having the form of carbonate of lime, but composed of fine sand united by a calcareous cement, well known to mineralogists.

The band of the Cavalry Regt. stationed here plays every Thursday and Sunday afternoon in the Gardens of the Château.

Café Reillier, Place au Charbon, is the best. Post Office, Rue St. Merry, No. 49. Baths, No. 33 same street.

English Church Services in the Temple Protestant, Rue de la Paroisse, when there is a clergyman there, 3-30; French Service at 12-30.

Local souvenirs made of the wood of the juniper (Genévrier) are made and sold here.

Carriage hire with 2 horses, 12 fr. per diem; saddle-horse, 6 fr.; donkey, 2 fr.: may be engaged at any of the hotels.

It is scarcely possible to praise too highly the woodland scenery of La Forêt de Fontainebleau, the constant resort of French artists in summer, many of whom take up their quarters at the village Barbizon, on the skirts of the forest, at the homely Inn (Ganne), which is embellished with a curious gallery of sketches, by many hands, of different inmates, covering walls, panels, shutters, with arabesques and whimsies. It would take weeks to explore the forest thoroughly. An excellent Guide has been published by M. Denecourt, a veteran officer of Napoleon, who has devoted himself to "la Forêt." His map is essential in tracing the various picturesque routes which he has indicated, by the paths which he has cut through the wildest parts, making them clear to the wanderer by arrows painted on the rocks or trees.

The best plan for visitors is to hire a carriage and tell the driver to go to the most remarkable places. Some of the oaks and beeches are magnificent.

The forest of Fontainebleau extends over an area of about 40,000 Eng. acres. This attractive hunting-ground induced the monarchs of France, ardent lovers of the chase, to build a palace within it, and make it their favourite resort. At the Revolution of 1830, however, all the deer were exterminated, and have been but scantily replaced. There are, however, occasionally deer-hunts, with carted deer. Only a small portion of the forest is occupied with full-grown trees; but here and there it has preserved noble groves of oaks and beech, of majestic size and luxuriant foliage, which may have sheltered the jovial François I., the Bon Roi Henri IV., Louis XIV., and Napoleon. A large space is covered with broom, heath, and underwood, and with extensive plantations of black fir, from the midst of which picturesque ranges of bare sandstone rock (grès de Fontainebleau) very like the rocks at Tunbridge Wells, running E. and W., break through, and give great variety and picturesque-ness to the forest scenery. The points best worth visiting are—to the rt. of the road from Paris, the Gorges d'Apremont and de Franchard, above which are remains of a hermitage, as old as the days of Philippe-Auguste, destroyed by Louis XIV.; and to the l. of the road La Vallée de la Solle, La Gorge aux Loups, and Nid de l'Aigle.

"La Croix du Grand Veneur," an obelisk on the grand route, at a place where 4 roads meet, receives its name from a spectral Black Huntsman, supposed to haunt the forest, who appeared here to Henri IV., according to the story, shortly before his assassination. The forest is so intersected with roads radiating in all directions, that it is difficult to find one's way without a map or a guide.]

Railway continues to Changis, where is a very fine viaduct of 30 arches, 66 ft. high by 33 wide. In the old church of the village Avon, Monaldeschi, favourite of Christina Queen of Sweden, murdered by her orders, is buried. A small square stone in the pavement, near the bénitier, marks the grave.

Thomery Stat. Here on the borders of the Seine are grown the fine Chasselas grapes called Fontainebleau grapes. 5000 or 6000 baskets of them, packed in heather, are sent down the Seine every week in autumn, to supply the markets of Paris. The vines are trained along the houses and walls of the village, sheltered by narrow roofs from the rain. Even the streets are vineyards, and every foot of wall is covered with vines.

Viaduct over the Loing of 30 arches, 62 ft. high, 32 ft. wide.

Moret Junct. Stat.: rt. the Rly. of the Bourbonnais diverges here to Montargis and to Nevers. (See Rte. 105.) Moret is a picturesque old walled town on the verge of the Forest of Fontainebleau, with ancient Ch. and Castle.

Montereau Junct. Stat. (Buffet) (Inns: none good:—Grand Monarque) is a town of 6060 Inhab., occupying a pleasing situation, and one very advantageous for commerce, at the junction of the two navigable rivers the Seine and Yonne, whence it has gained the adjunct to its name Montereau-fault-Yonne—where the Yonne fails, or is lost in the Seine. The most considerable part lies on the l. bank of the Yonne. Both rivers are crossed by bridges, and the one over the Seine (or rather an older bridge in the same situation) was the scene of the murder of Jean-Sans-Peur, Duke of Burgundy, in 1419, in the presence and by the orders of the Dauphin (afterwards Charles VII.), during a conference between them, and in spite of the precautions which had been resorted to of erecting double barricades to divide the persons of the 2 princes. The blow was struck by Tanneguy du Chastel. The conference was designed to bring about a reconciliation, in order that the two parties might combine to resist the invasion of France by Henry V. That king, before the walls of Montereau, committed the atrocious cruelty of hanging 12 of the garrison whom he had made prisoners, in sight of their friends within the walls, in order to induce them to surrender.

"The traveller who approaches Montereau from the side of Paris involuntarily halts on the summit of the heights of Surville, which overhang the town on the N., to gaze on the lovely scene which lies spread out, like a map, beneath his feet: he would do well to remember that there, beside the little cross adjacent to the château, stood Napoleon during the last and not the least of his many victories, on Feb. 18th, 1814. On the evening of the 17th the French troops assembled in imposing masses on these heights (which they had gained only after a severe conflict), and which commanded the bridge and town beneath. The artillery of the Guard was placed on either side of the road near the cross, and the Emperor took his station, in person, amidst the guns, to direct their fire, for the enemy still held the road. Such was his eagerness to annihilate the dense masses of the enemy crowding over the bridge, that he himself, resuming his old occupation of a gunner, with his own hand, as at Toulon, levelled and pointed a cannon upon them."—Alison. The allies were so hotly pursued by the French cuirassiers, that they were driven over the Seine, and out of Montereau, having barely time to blow up the bridge over the Yonne, which checked the pursuit in the direction of Sens.

[At Montereau is a branch rly. to Flamboin, on the Paris and Troyes line. Rte. 162.]

The Railroad ascends the pleasant and fertile valley of the Yonne to Pont-sur-Yonne Stat., pleasantly situated on green banks fringed with tall poplars and silvery willows. The country is full of vineyards; and a larger proportion than ordinary of the châteaux of the old noblesse seem to be in existence near the churches of the villages, or peeping over the trees.

SENS Stat.—Inns: H. de l'Ecu; H. de Paris. This ancient capital of the Sennones is now but a small city, containing 10,488 Inhab., partly surrounded by its original ramparts. It is remarkably clean, with little becks of water running through the streets, supplied from a stream called the Vanne, which falls into the Yonne hard by. The **Cathedral*, dedicated to St. Stephen, though of the 2nd magnitude, is one of the finest of its style, simple early Gothic, or Transit. Norm., resembling Canterbury, whose builder was William of Sens; it has undergone a thorough repair. The original ch. dates from 1167; it has been largely renewed and finished in 1535. The N. tower is called Tour de Plomb; the S. tower, Tour de Pierre (date 1535), is most elaborately ornamented, as is the central doorway. On the 5th pillar rt. is an exquisite stone retable, much damaged. The tracery in front of the transepts is the perfection of flamboyant detail. The painted glass deserves peculiar attention. It was executed by Jean Cousin, a native of Soucy, a village near Sens, who attained great excellence in this as well as in other branches of art. The colouring is extremely harmonious. The tomb of the Chancellor Duprat has partly escaped the general destruction; the bas-reliefs around it are very curious.

(Temp. Francis I.) There is also a monument to the dauphin, son of Louis XV., and his wife, by Coustou. In the Treasury, among other curious relics, are shown the vests and mitre of Thomas Becket, his alb, girdle, stole, maniple, and chasuble, to all appearance genuine; they have been repaired. He fled to Sens 1164, when he escaped out of England from the wrath of Henry II. The altar of St. Thomas is said to be the same at which Becket performed his devotions, and is very ancient. He resided, while in this city, in the Abbey of St. Columbe, now occupied by the Sœurs de l'Enfance de Jésus. In the Treasury of the Cathedral is a collection of coffers, reliquaries, tapestry, &c. The Cathedral has 2 of the largest Bells in France; one weighs 16½ tons. St. Savinier is the most ancient church in Sens, but has suffered much from injudicious repairs.

The Officialité, a large building to the rt. of St. Etienne, was built in the reign of St. Louis, and, after having been neglected for many years, was restored 1860, at a great expense, under M. Viollet-le-Duc. On the exterior are 5 fine statues; in the interior are extensive dungeons; the Salle du Tribunal; and the large Salle Synodale, intended to receive an assembly of 800 priests. The old hospital in front of the cathedral is now used as Halles.

There are not many traces left of the old gates and walls, which have disappeared during the present centy., and have been replaced by the usual promenades of a French town.

[At Vallery, 12 m. to the W. of Sens, the Grand Condé is buried in the Ch., which contains a costly monument of marble. The Château was designed by Philibert Delorme.]

[The château of Fleury, 8 m. from Sens, is a fine specimen of the 16th century, with painted glass by Jean Cousin.]

An open chalky country follows Sens till you reach

Villeneuve-le-Roi (or sur-Yonne) Stat., a pretty and peculiar town, with much scope for the use of the pencil and sketch-book. The principal street is terminated by a gate at each end, of feudal times, yet apparently more for ornament than defence. The church, in the style of the Renaissance, is richly ornamented. Part of the bridge is of the time of Louis VII., and there is a curious tower of Louis Le Gros.

Joigny Stat.—Inns: Duc de Bourgogne; dear. This town (Pop. 6800) is also pleasantly situated on the Yonne. It derives its ancient name (Jovinacum) from Jovinian (see Reims). A fine quay, closed at either end by an iron gate, runs along the side of the Yonne, from one end of the town to the other. The old town, scarcely accessible, owing to its steep and numerous streets, contains 3 Gothic churches—St. Jean, which stood within the castle; St. André, attached to the priory; and St. Thibault.

From Joigny the Railroad is carried to

La Roche Junct. Stat., at the entrance of the Canal of Burgundy joining the Seine and Saône. It was commenced in 1775, finished in 1832 at an expense of 2½ millions. It is 150 m. long from La Roche on the Yonne to St. Jean de Losne on the Saône.

[A Branch Rly. diverges from La-roche Stat., crosses the river Armançon, and passes by Chemille and Moncleau Stats. to Auxerre. Trains in 35 min.

Auxerre Stat.—Inns: Léopard, on the quay; H. de la Fontaine. This city of 12,673 Inhab., very prettily situated on the l. bank of the Yonne, and chef-lieu of that Dépt., is seen to great advantage from a distance. The grand mass of the cathedral, and two or three other large churches, and a ruined spire, all rise finely above the houses.

The *Cathedral, St. Etienne, is a noble specimen of the best periods of the Gothic style, commenced 1215 by Guil. de Seigneley, 58th Bp. The high altar was dedicated 1334, and the nave finished probably before 1373. Thus the choir is Early Pointed, and the nave and transepts unimpaired Flamboyant. "The transepts are covered externally with the boldest flowing tracery, occasionally standing free from the wall. The doors and rose windows are magnificent."—Petit. The nave was finished about 1350. Within, it is beautifully proportioned; it is 330 ft. long and 92 ft. high. Here are the tombs of Colbert, a former bishop, and of Jacques Amyot, whilome bishop of this see, and celebrated for his racy translation of Plutarch, so excellent in its style as almost to form an era in the history of the French language. The clerestory of the choir and the aisle of the chevet retain their original glass of the 13th centy., which is very rich in colour and pattern. Fergusson points out the elegant junction of the square Lady Chapel and chevet. Under the choir is the crypt of a former ch. (1005). At its E. end is a rude painting (end of 12th centy.), representing the rider on the White Horse of the Revelation xix. The chapter of Auxerre was at one time one of the richest in France, but they freed themselves from most of their superfluous possessions by indulging in the luxury of litigation. The musical instrument called the serpent was invented for this ch. in 1590.

St. Germain, now attached to the Hôtel Dieu, on the height, is in a plainer style than the cathedral; it has lost part of its nave, but possesses a lofty choir, and transepts. Underneath are curious crypts, one below another; in the lower are some tombs of early counts of Auxerre. It has an ancient tower, which belonged to the W. front, but is now detached.

St. Pierre is a large and handsome specimen of Italianised Gothic, begun at the end of the 16th centy., and finished 1672. St. Eusèbe is a Romanesque church in its nave, and detached tower, with a later choir, begun 1530. It contains 4 altars of wood, beautifully carved with Flamboyant patterns (15th centy.).

The Prefecture is in the former bishop's palace, and contains a Romanesque gallery and other ancient remains.

There is a curious old clock tower over a gate-house, with an ugly skeleton spire of iron bars, in the Place du Marché.

The Boulevards, in the place of the ancient walls which surround the town on 3 sides, present a variety of prospects; the moats are filled with plantations of acacia, gardens, and vines; the fine old towers are covered with festoons of ivy.

Like many other towns in France, Auxerre has its tale of suffering from civil wars. It was pillaged by the English in 1359, and was plundered and the churches burnt in 1567 by the Huguenots, in revenge for the massacre of 150 of their persuasion.

A considerable quantity of wines (chiefly ordinaires), the growth of La Basse Bourgogne, are sent down the Yonne hence to Paris. Châblis, about 12 m. E. of this, on the road to Tonnerre, gives its name to a wine of superior quality, prized for drinking at breakfast or with oysters.

Excursions—to the grand old abbey churches of Pontigny, 6½ m. (see below), and to Vezelay, passing through Avalon. Diligence thither.

10 Champs. A good road, avoiding the hills and St. Bris, leads from Auxerre to Semur, keeping along the banks of the Yonne, through the pretty villages of Champs, Vincelles, and Cravaut-Vermanton.

15 Vermanton. Inn: Etoile.

19 Lucy-le-Bois (no Inn) stands in a sheltered and rather pretty valley. The rocks around, and the stone heaps at the road-side derived from them, abound in fossils of the lias and gryphite limestone.

About 6 m. from Vermanton, and 9 from Lucy-le-Bois, to the S., are the Grottes d'Arcy, a series of natural caverns in the limestone, many of vast extent, abounding in stalactites, and in bats, separated from one another by natural divisions, through which it is often necessary to crawl on hands and knees. The entrance to them is by a door inserted in an opening in the rock of a wooded dell, on the borders of the Cure. A guide, with candles, can be obtained at the village; the best time to visit them is during dry weather. The largest cavern is about 25 ft. high, 30 wide, and 400 long.

9 Avallon (Inn: Poste), a pleasantly situated town, nearly surrounded by the ravine of the Cousin. Around it runs its ancient rampart, and a broad terrace walk, under lime-trees, about 500 ft. above the bed of the Cousin. The Ch. is ancient, and may be taken as a specimen of Burgundian Gothic, with its peculiar pointed arches and rich sculptured capitals. The W. portal is round-arched and rich in ornaments. There is a pleasant walk down the ravine of the river Cousin, among woods and rocks, rising to a considerable height.

6 m. to the W., of Avallon is Vezelay, a decayed town, capital of the district of Le Morvan, situated on a hill 2000 ft. high, commanding a noble view, surrounded by embattled walls, and entered still by feudal gateways. It contains a very remarkable **Abbey Church*, dedicated to the Madeleine, finely seated on the summit of a hill. The entire length of the building is 404 ft.; the height of the choir 70 ft. The oldest part of the existing church is the nave, from the porch E., and the crypt; and they probably date from 1050, the previous church having been destroyed, “prope ad nihilum reductum,” in the middle of the 10th centy., and its restoration begun 1008. The W. front is probably of the 12th centy., and the choir of the early part of the 13th. Scarcely any remains exist of the domestic buildings of the abbey, which were so vast that kings, with their suite, could be lodged in them without discomfort to their monkish inmates. The W. front lost one of its towers by the attack of the Huguenots in 1569. It has 3 doorways; that in the centre a circular arch of noble proportions; above it is a later window of 5 lancets, with a colossal statue between each, all under one arch. Another tower rises from the angle between the nave and S. transept. The W. doors lead into a large Narthex, a feature common in Burgundian churches—used for the reception of penitents, catechumens, and strangers: 3 other doorways open out of this vestibule into the nave; that in the centre is very rich in sculpture, and supported by an ornamental shaft, on which rests a transom covered with a procession of figures, in relief. The tympanum of the arch above it is filled with a large bas-relief: the figure of the Saviour forms the centre, attended by groups of saints reading or writing. One of the archivolts above is carved with a zodiac, the signs of which are intermingled with monsters forming 29 medallions. The interior of the nave is very impressive from "its great length, its gloom, and the simplicity of design which pervades its Norman features." It has no triforium, and is surmounted by a cradle roof, spanning the whole width of the nave, and truly magnificent. These walls doubtless echoed to the voice of Becket in 1168, when he repaired to Vezelay on Ascension-day, when the church was crowded, and, mounting the pulpit, cursed by bell, book, and candle, all those who maintained in England "the Customs of their Elders." This proceeding so enraged Henry II. that he threatened to confiscate all the Benedictine abbeys in England, if the Order continued to shelter Becket in France. A flight of steps leads up into the choir, which, with the transepts, is a fine specimen of early complete Pointed Gothic. The apse is surrounded by 8 round pillars, each of a single stone, and it is lighted by lancet windows.

Attached to the S. transept is the Chapter-house, a low vaulted chamber, its roof resting on 2 central piers in the Romanesque style. Here, it is said, the monks assembled, with tears in their eyes, before their expulsion in 1154, through the rebellion of their vassals, the townsfolk, aided by the forces of the Comte de Nevers. This ch. has been well restored (1855) by the French Government.

Vezelay is now a poor wretched town; yet it possesses interesting historical associations. Here, on March 31, 1145, St. Bernard assembled a solemn Council of the Church, and preached in the presence of Louis VII., to a multitude assembled in the open field (the church being too small to hold them), the necessity of a new Crusade, with such impressive eloquence, that the universal cry for the Cross burst from the crowd around; and the supply of crosses not being sufficient, the Abbot of Clairvaux tore his own red robe to pieces to distribute among his willing hearers. The king, on his knees, first received the sacred symbol from him; the nobles followed his example; and the year following he set out from hence, with his army, for the Holy Land. In 1190 Richard Cœur de Lion and Philippe-Auguste repaired hither to assume the pilgrim's cross at the head of their armies.

Theodore Beza, the Reformer and Calvinist theologian, was born at Vezelay, of noble parents, 1519. On the way to Vezelay you pass the church of St. Père, whose tower is "an almost unique specimen of transition, or very early complete Gothic. The detached shafts, and canopies at its angles, and its several stages of open windows, give it an air of lightness and elegance such as I have never seen surpassed in later buildings."—Petit. The château de Bazoché belonged to Marshal Vauban, who was born in the village St. Leger de Foucheret, in Le Morvan. His room and bed and sword are still preserved in it—also 4 cannon used at the siege of Philipburg. His body is buried in the chapel, his heart is removed to the Invalides.

To the S.W. of Avallon stretches the extensive tract of woodland called La Forêt de Morvan, which supplies Paris with fuel, the wood being cut every 10 or 15 years, by portions at a time, and transported down the Yonne and Seine in rafts.]

After leaving La Roche the main line passes the reservoirs of the Canal of Burgundy, with the Auxerre branch rly. on the rt., and then crosses the Armançon on a bridge of 9 arches.

St. Florentin Stat., a pretty town at the junction of the Armançon and Armançon. Its Church, built about 1470, possesses fine painted glass and a curious double staircase; restored 1860. The walk of the Prieuré commands a view. [About 6 m. S. of St. Florentin Stat. on the road to Auxerre, lies the Abbey of Pontigny, remarkable as having been the residence of many English prelates, and the retreat of Thomas Becket during his exile, 1164-6. While here he carried the practice of the austerities of the Cistercian order to the very extreme, and while in prayer before one of the altars of the church had a divine vision, accompanied by the words, "Thomas, Thomas, my church shall be glorified by thy blood:" such, at least, is the legend. The Abbey was devastated by the Huguenots, who unroofed and burnt the ch. and Abbey, and broke open the tombs, 1567; and the destruction of the conventual buildings and confiscation of the revenues were effected at the Revolution. The Ch., however, still remains, and is a grand edifice, in a severe style of early or transition Burgundian Gothic, uniform throughout, erected 1150 by Theobald Count of Champagne. It is said to be the only ch. remaining perfect of the Cistercian Order, and although, like all their churches, plain externally, it has a most beautiful chevet, of 7 small bays. It is 354 ft. long and 68 ft. high, and is lighted by narrow lancet windows. Behind the high altar is the Shrine of St. Edmund Archbishop of Canterbury, a work of the early part of the 18th centy. The ch. was refitted and whitewashed 1630; in other respects it is as it stood in Becket's time.

Attached to the S. transept is a chapel, dedicated to St. Thomas the Martyr, who was driven from Pontigny by the threat of Henry II. to banish the Cistercians from England, if they sheltered him in France. It retains some traces of frescoes, executed 1520. Among the English refugees who found shelter here was Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury, when banished from England by King John, together with his suffragans. A religious brotherhood calling themselves "Pères de St. Edme," now occupy the ruins. They possess curious deeds and letters relating to St. Edmund (1243). Robert Grostête, Oxford University, Merton Abbey, &c.]

The railroad from St. Florentin follows the valley of the Armançon, and the line of the Canal de Bourgogne upwards, through Flogny Stat., where is a wire bridge, to Tonnerre Stat.—[Buffet—10 min.] (Inns: Lion d'Or; H. des Courriers; H. de Genève.) This is an old and interesting town, of 4670 Inhab., on a steep slope, on the summit of which stands the Ch. of St. Pierre, commanding a fine view of the town from its rocky platform. The Chapel of the Hospital is the only part remaining of the noble foundation of Marguerite de Bourgogne, Queen of Sicily. It is remarkable for its great length, its simplicity, the extent of its timber roof, and the gnomon (1786) on its floor. A sitting statue of Marguerite, of marble, in the costume of her time, adorns her tomb, replacing one destroyed at the Revolution. It was erected by the grateful inhabitants. St. Pierre is a ch. of the Renaissance style. See the exterior of the Hôtel d'Uzés; the imposing monument of Michel le Tellier, Marquis de Louvois, Minister of War to Louis XIV. It is the work of Girardon. Tonnerre is remarkable for its extensive and beautiful Lime avenues. At the foot of the hill rises la Fontaine Fosse Dionne (Fons Dionysi?), a source so copious that in a few yards it is capable of turning mills.

Tanlay Stat.—Here is one of the finest châteaux in Burgundy, tolerably well kept up by its owner. It is a good specimen of the style of the Renaissance, the oldest part having been begun, 1559, by Coligny d'Andelot, brother of the Admiral Coligny, the leader of the Protestants, and the chief victim of the St. Bartholomew's night. A chamber in the Tour de la Ligue is pointed out as the place where he and the other leaders of the party, the Prince de Condé, &c., were in the habit of meeting; and it is still covered with faded frescoes, representing, under the disguise of the gods of Olympus, the leading characters of the time; Catherine de Medicis as Juno (but with a double face?), and her son, Charles IX., as Pluto; Condé as Mars. The larger and more splendid portion of the château, including numerous additions to the original plan, was built between 1643 and 1648 by Particelli d'Emery, Surintendant de Finance under Mazarin, from designs of Le Muet, except the Petit Château at the entrance of the great building, which is a beautiful specimen of the Renaissance of the 16th centy. At the extremity of the grand Canal, flanked by avenues, beneath which Coligny and Condé may have walked, is the Château d'Eau, from which artificial streams burst forth.

About 2 m. from Tanlay are the ruins of the Abbey of Quincy. The canal and the Armançon are crossed twice before arriving at Ancy le Frano Stat. (1840 Inhab.) The Château was begun in 1555, from designs, it is said, of Primaticcio, and decorated with frescoes still existing. In 1688 it became the property and residence of Louvois, minister of Louis XIV., who owned besides the Comté de Tonnerre, and other vast neighbouring possessions brought to him by his wife, Anne de Souvré, the richest heiress in France. The Marquis de Louvois established iron-forges here. The château is well kept up, and surrounded by park and woods.

Aisy-sur-Armançon Stat.—Near this are the very curious ruins of the Château de Rochefort, built about 1500. Soon after quitting Aisy you enter the department of the Côte d'Or, so famous for its vineyards.

Montbard Stat. — (Inn: Point du Jour.) This unimportant and dirty town was the residence of the naturalist Buffon, who was born 1707, and lived in the Château, which still exists. The gardens attached to it are arranged in terraces along the slope of the hill, and decorated with orange-trees. In an isolated antique tower, rising in a corner of them, now going to decay, and stripped of its furniture, Buffon formed his study, and composed most of his works. Nothing but bare walls now remains. The gardens, now open to the public, were laid waste and destroyed by the Revolutionists, but one relic of their ancient condition was preserved in a small pillar of marble raised by the son of Buffon in front of the lofty tower which contained his father's study, and bearing this inscription,

"Excelsæ turris humilis columna, Parenti suo filius Buffon, 1785."

"The Château, now occupied by the widow of Buffon's son, who was one of the first victims of the guillotine at the Revolution, contains portraits of Buffon and his assistant Daubenton. Two of the rooms are lined with coloured prints from the Natural History of its great owner. His tomb, in the parish church, was destroyed at the Revolution, the lead of his coffin melted, and his bones scattered."—Costello.

[Fontenay is a sequestered abbey, a few miles from Montbard, whose founder was one Evrard Bishop of Norwich. It was devoted to monks of the Cistercian order. Its ruined buildings are now converted into a paper manufactory, belonging to the respected family of Montgolfier. The chapter-house and cloisters are still fine specimens of Gothic architecture. The church, converted into every-day purposes, is less striking; but it contains several mutilated ecclesiastical monuments.]

Les Laumes. 1. see the village of Aïse Ste. Reine, supposed to be the ancient Alesia, where Vercingetorix, besieged by Cæsar, in vain attempted to save Gaul from a foreign yoke. The Mont Auxois commands a view over the district.

The Tunnel of Blaisy is about 2½ m. long, and cost more than 10 million francs. Within it is the summit level of the Raily., 1328 Eng. ft. above the sea. It leads from the basin of the Seine into that of the Rhône. Numerous other tunnels and viaducts succeed.

The Rly. cuts through the bastions of the town, in order to reach

DIJON STAT.—a capital Refreshment Room (Buffet); 25 min. allowed (Inns: H. de la Cloche, v.c.; H. du Jura—both good—near the Rly.; H. du Parc, best; H. du Chapeau Rouge—N.B. Make a bargain at the Cloche and Parc)—the ancient capital of the Duchy of Burgundy, now the chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Côte d'Or, containing upwards of 33,493 Inhab., and 803 ft. above the level of the sea. It is situated in the midst of a fertile but arid plain, and, like many other towns similarly situated, it has been overpraised by the French for its beauty. The distant view of the town, with its spires, towers, and trees, and the outlines of the Jura visible in the distance, are, however, imposing. In spite of modern improvements there remains a good deal within the town deserving of notice. Dijon was formerly an opulent and important city; its most flourishing period being after Burgundy was united to France; but its importance was destroyed by the revolution of 1789, which reduced it to be merely the chef-lieu of a department.

Following a broad avenue from the rly. stat., passing l. the Castle, once Mirabeau's prison, you reach the Place d'Armes, a horseshoe in plan, a good centre from which to set out. Here stands the ancient Palace of the dukes of Burgundy, which, after the union of the duchy to the crown of France, became the Palais des Etats, and is now the **H. de Ville*. It has been so completely modernised in its principal front, that the great interest possessed by the building would hardly be anticipated. Parts of its interior, however, are old, such as the noble Hall and the low vaulted chambers beneath, which can be seen from the back, and the ancient kitchen, and it is still surmounted by a large and massy feudal tower.

"The style prevailing in this and the other buildings of the 15th centy. in Dijon, and which may be properly called the Burgundian style, has many of the features which we afterwards find in our Tudor architecture, and the aspect of the building softens down from the castle to the palace or mansion. Besides the Civic Offices, and the Oratoire, or Protestant Chapel, this building contains one of the finest provincial Museums in France. The ancient hall and adjoining chambers have been very judiciously chosen as the place of deposit for the very rich and important monuments of the middle ages which are there preserved. The following articles may be particularly noticed. The crozier of St. Robert, the first abbot of the Cistercian order (ob. 1098). The wooden cup of St. Bernard, undoubted relic of this truly great and pious man, whose memory cannot be, however, relieved from the atrocities occasioned by the Crusades. The ornaments were probably added after his canonization. Toilet furniture of the Duchesses of Burgundy; caskets and boxes of ivory, beautifully carved. A purse supposed to have belonged to Isabella of Portugal, third wife of Philip the Good, of leather richly embroidered, and apparently of oriental workmanship. The chief ornaments of the collection are the magnificent **Tombs* of Philippe le Hardi, the founder of the second race of the Dukes of Burgundy (1342—1404), and of Jean-sans-Peur, his son and successor (1371—1419). These tombs, the sculptures on which are perhaps the finest specimens existing of mediæval art on this side of the Alps, have suffered strange vicissitudes. Both were erected in the Chartreuse of Dijon, founded and endowed by Philip, and selected by him. Upon the suppression of the Chartreuse they were removed to St. Benigne, where they rested but a short time, as in 1793 the Council of the Commune decreed their destruction. The bases remained at St. Benigne, but the figures were dispersed: some were placed in the Museum, others in private cabinets, and some abandoned in a lumber-room. In 1818 the department determined upon their restoration. This labour, though costly, was comparatively easy, for, although pulled to pieces, these pieces were as little defaced as possible. We see them in a state very little different from the original splendour. The tomb of Philippe le Hardi represents him in a recumbent posture, in his full ducal robes. He is crowned with the ducal coronet, a plain circle without flowers, and his hand grasps the ducal sceptre. The sides of the tomb are ornamented with arcades filled with elaborately sculptured statuettes, in alabaster, of friars, represented as mourners, but with skilful variety of feeling. The draperies are admirable.

Claus Slater, a Dutchman, was the artist.

The tomb of Jean-sans-Peur, slain on the Bridge of Montereau, 1419, matches entirely with that of his father both in material and in design. His ducal robe is semé with the device which he adopted, the rabot, or carpenter's plane, assumed by him in opposition to the ragged staff of his political adversary, the Duke of Orleans. By his side is his consort, Margaret of Bavaria. Her robe is white, semé with the well-known little flower which bears her name. A Gothic altarpiece (retable), with folding-doors, filled with wooden statuettes of saints in great numbers, executed by Jacques de Baerze, 1391, came also from the Chartreuse.

The chimney-piece of the Great Hall is said to have been built in 1504, after a fire which destroyed the roof in 1502; but was probably only restored. It is a magnificent specimen of Gothic art.

The paintings in the Museum are numerous, but much of the usual kind found in provincial collections: some of the portraits are interesting, especially those of the Duchesses of Burgundy; also a carved Gothic shrine or altarpiece, the compartments of which are painted by Melchior Broederlein, 1398.

There is a fine staircase of 316 steps in the old tower, the summit of which commands a very extensive view. The kitchens in the right hand court form a curious specimen of architecture.

At the back of the H. de Ville is the Post-office, and in the rear of it the ch. of Notre Dame, a singularly fine ch. in the purest Gothic, somewhat like Ely, and remarkable for the boldness of its construction. The W. front, a flat wall, with 2 little towers behind, covered with arcades standing free, and a grand portico. The E. end, a beautiful specimen of Early Pointed, was finished 1229. At one corner of the façade, where it was intended a tower should rise, still stands the clock brought (1382) from Courtrai, by Philip le Hardi, an epithet which his general conduct deserved, though, in this achievement, the Cruel would have suitied him better, for he plundered and burnt the town, and massacred the inhabitants. Jacques Marques, a Flemish mathematician, was the maker of this clock, which, in the opinion of Froissart, was the most curious existing, whether in Christendom or in the heathen lands, and hence selected by the duke as his trophy. The bells are struck by two hammermen, and who are called Jacquemars by the badaud of Dijon—a corruption of their maker's name.

The Rue Rameau leads from the Place d'Armes past l. the Theatre, distinguished by a handsome Corinthian portico, and rt. the Halle au Blé, in the desecrated Ch. of St. Etienne, to St. Michel's Ch., consecrated 1529. Its front, flanked by 2 towers, is a splendid example of the Renaissance. The portal is composed of 3 circular arches, with a very fine frieze above. The ornaments of this front are generally Italian in their details, yet so put together that the whole has the effect of a perfect Gothic cathedral.

Returning through Rue de Condé to Rue Bossuet, you reach the Marché du Midi, once Ch. of St. Jean, a desecrated fragment of a fine Gothic edifice, with a pointed roof of wide span and good flamboyant windows. The choir was destroyed 1810. Bossuet was baptized here, and was born in the adjacent house, 10, Place St. Jean.

Further to the W. is St. Benigne, originally a conventual Ch.: it became the Cathedral after the Revolution, when it was much injured. It is a fine building of the 13th and 14th cent., with a bold W. front. Its spire enjoys local celebrity, but is an obelisk of wood (1742), on open legs, and its spiral leading lines add to its appearance of insecurity. Here have been discovered the remains of Duke Philip le Hardi and some fine brick slabs with effigies of Burgundian nobles. In the nave is the slab tomb of Udislaus King of Poland, 1388. The organ is large and fine.

There are many desecrated churches here, degraded into stables, coach-houses, warehouses, &c., though in tolerable repair, and worthy the attention of the architect; such are St. Etienne, a covered market; St. Philibert, cavalry stables.

The Theatre is distinguished by its noble octostyle Corinthian portico.

The Palais de Justice has a good Renaissance front, and a large Hall, both restored. There is a Public Library of 50,000 volumes, and magnificent collections of Archives of Burgundy and of the town.

Near the station is the ancient citadel, built between 1478 and 1512, a specimen of transition fortification, from the old walls to the modern ramparts. From the top of one of the towers a sufficient view of the dreary but fertile plain can be obtained. During the Fronde the town suffered severely from shot fired by the defenders of the castle. It afterwards became a state prison: the Duchesse du Maine, Mirabeau, General Mack, and Toussaint l'Ouverture, were imprisoned here. It is now almost in ruins.

Some curious relics of domestic architecture and early art are to be met with in the town. In No. 34 and 36, Rue des Forges, entered through a shop, not far from Notre Dame, is a Gothic staircase on the top of which stands the figure of a man with a basket on his shoulder, whence spring, in the form of a plant or tree, the vaulting ribs of the roof (a newel); these are foliated in a very bold manner. The whole is of good execution, though evidently late in the style.

Hôtel de Vogué, behind Notre Dame, No. 8, is a fine specimen of Renaissance, as is No. 28, Rue Chaudronnerie. Nos. 34 and 36, Rue des Forges, are said to have been the residence of the ambassador of England; No. 31, Rue de l'Ecole de Droit; and the authorities of the town have placed inscriptions on many of the ancient hotels.

The Public Walks are a leading feature in Dijon, surrounding the walls as with a belt of foliage, and there is perhaps no other provincial town in France so well provided. They run partly in the form of Boulevards outside of, and parallel to, the old ramparts, which themselves form elevated terraces. The Parc, about a mile out of the town, reached by the Cours du Parc, was laid out, 1610, by Le Nôtre, for the Great Condé, its owner, when governor of the province, who gave free admission to the public.

Dijon has the renown of being the native place of Bossuet, the divine, born in the house No. 12, Place St. Jean; of Crebillon; of Guyton Morveau, the chemist; and of Maret Duc de Bassano. St. Bernard was born in the village Fontaines, about a mile beyond the walls, and his father's castle is still in existence beside the curious church.

The trade in the wines of Upper Burgundy is concentrated in Dijon; the district which produces the most celebrated wines lies to the S. of the town, and is traversed by the Railroad to Châlons-sur-Saône, passing Vougeot, Nuits, and Beaune. (Rte. 106.)

10 min. walk from the town, by the Rly. Stat., stands the Asyle des Aliénés, formerly the Chartreuse, founded by Philip le Hardi, 1383, as a burial-place for the ducal house, many of whom were buried here, including Charles the Bold, until the Emperor Charles V. removed his body in 1550 to Bruges. The existing remains are scanty:—the entrance gate, part of a tower, the kneeling effigies of Duke Philip and his Duchess prefixed to the portal of the modern chapel, and the well or cistern known as Les Puits de Moïse (1399) executed by Claus Slater (the sculptor of the ducal monuments). It consists of figures of Moses, David, Jeremiah, Zachariah, Daniel, and Isaiah, hexagonally placed under a rich canopy, and upon elaborate pedestals. The figures are well preserved.

Railroads to Paris by Tonnerre; to Lyons and Marseilles; to Vesoul and Strasbourg; to Gray, Dôle (Rte. 148), and Besançon; to Neuchâtel, by Salins; to Belfort.

ROUTE 105.

PARIS TO LYONS, BY FONTAINEBLEAU, MONTARGIS, GIEN, NEVERS, MOULINS [VICHY], BRIARE.—LINE OF THE BOURBONNAIS.

	kil.
Fontainebleau . . . . .	59
Montargis . . . . .	118
Nevers . . . . .	254
Moulins . . . . .	313
St. Germain des Fossés . . . . .	355
[Vichy]
St. Etienne . . . . .	502
Givors . . . . .	528
Lyons . . . . .	549

549 kilom. = 341 Eng. m. 6 trains daily in 7½ to 5½ hrs. to Nevers, 9 hrs. to Vichy;—in 18 hrs. to Lyons. Terminus in Paris, Boulevard Mazas. This rly. opens a route to Lyons, but longer by 37 kilom. = 23 Eng. m. than the Burgundy line (Rte. 104).

22 Brunoy Stat.

26 Combe-le-Ville

38 Cesson Stat.

Melun Stat.

FONTAINEBLEAU STAT.

Moret Junct. Stat.

As in
Rte. 104.

75 Montigny Stat.

79 Bourron Stat.

87 Nemours Stat., a town of 3830 Inhab., deriving its name from the woods (nemora) which once surrounded it. The old Castle, the residence of the Ducs de Nemours, of the line of Savoy, still exists, flanked by 4 towers, and includes several institutions.

The Parish Ch., originally attached to the Priory of St. John, is a fine building. St. Pierre is the oldest in the town.

Mirabeau was born (1749) at Bignon, 15 m. from Nemours, on the road to Sens.

We continue in the vale of the small river Loing.

Souppes Stat.

108 Ferrières Stat.

118 Montargis Stat. (Inns : Poste ;—

H. de Lyon; not good), a town of 7757 Inhab., on the borders of an extensive forest, at the junction of the Canal de Briare with that of Orleans, by the side of which there are public walks. The vast castle, for a long time part of the domain of the crown, serving as a royal nursery, and called "le Berceau des Enfants de France," was sold, 1809, to a démolisseur, for 60,000 fr., and is entirely destroyed. Over one of the fireplaces in its great hall (for it had no less than 6) was a fresco painting, representing the combat between "the Dog of Montargis" and the murderer of its master, Macaire, which is said to have taken place, in the presence of Charles VI., in the lists of the Ile Notre Dame at Paris. The sagacity of the dog not only indicated the spot where his master was buried in the forest of Bondy, but also singled out the murderer; and the king, according to the spirit of the laws of the time, directed that the cause should be tried by a duel between the dog, as accuser, and the accused. After several attacks, the dog seized his adversary, who was armed with a club, by the throat, and compelled him to confess his crime. In 1652 the Grand Condé, then a rebel against the royal authority, arriving before Montargis with a small force, summoned it to surrender. The magistrate hesitated, but Condé, taking out his watch, declared he would sack the town and slay the inhabitants if it were not given up in an hour. This produced the desired effect, and gave rise to the saying, "que M. le Prince avait pris Montargis avec sa montre." At Triguères ruins of a Roman theatre have been found.

The country in which Montargis lies belongs to the district anciently called le Gâtinois; it has little interest. The road is carried in a straight line, through a dull district, to 136 Nogent-sur-Vernisson Stat.

[About 5 m. to the E. lies Châtillon-sur-Loing, in whose ancient castle the Admiral Coligny was born, 1516. After his murder on the Bartholomew's night his body was cut down from the gallows of Montfaucon, upon which it had been shamefully hung by his Ro-manist assassins, and conveyed by his cousin Montmorency to his wife, who concealed it for many months before she could venture to commit it to the tomb at Chantilly. Châtillon belonged to the family of Condé.]

On approaching Gien, the valley of the Loire bursts into view: the pleasing effect of the broad winding river, and its vine-clad banks, is much enhanced by the previous barrenness and monotony.

155 Gien Stat. (Rte. 52).

165 Briare Stat. (Inn: Poste), a town of 2730 Inhab., on the rt. bank of the Loire, has given its name to the Canal, begun by Sully, and completed 1642, remarkable as the first attempt to open a communication between 2 river basins by means of supplies of water stored up on the summit level (point de partage). It runs from the Loing at Montargis to the Seine at St. Mamet, thus opening a communication between Paris and the S. and centre of France.

170 Châtillon-sur-Loire Stat.

Bonny Stat.

183 Neuvy Stat. Inns: Poste, small, but the bed-rooms comfortable. H. de Nièvre, clean. The Château overlooking the station belongs to the Comte de Couëssin. On the opposite side of the Loire is the Château de Courcelles, the country seat of the late Marshal Macdonald. Across an undulating country, commanding, from time to time, peeps of the Loire, the road proceeds through 196 Cosne Stat. (Inn: Grand Cerf), where there are iron-forges; and a little way above which the town of Sancerre is seen on the opposite bank of the river.

[Diligence in 5 hrs. to Clamecy (Inn: Poste), prettily situated. Its ch. has a square E. end and ambulatory, and a rich flamboyant W. front.]

214 Pouilly Stat.

227 La Charité Stat. (Inn: Poste, pretty good), an ancient town of 5000 Inhab., still partly surrounded by ramparts, flanked by watch-towers, of the 14th centy. It is said to have derived its name from the benevolence shown to travellers by the monks of St. Benedict; and its arms are 3 open purses, on a field azure. Its Ch. (Notre Dame) must originally have been a very fine Romanesque building; but the nave is, in part, destroyed, and the aisles and other portions modernised. The choir, however, surrounded by pointed arches, on light piers with elegant capitals, and the front, are probably as old as the latter part of the 12th centy. The church, which had 5 doors (4 Romanesque and with bas-reliefs still remaining), 5 aisles; and 5 apses round the choir, was in great part destroyed by fire, 1204, and was restored by Philippe-Auguste. A ruined tower is the only remaining relic of the monastery, whose priors were so wealthy and powerful, that in the 16th centy. the Pope found it necessary to interfere and regulate the number of knights who should form their escort when they went abroad.

The road to Bourges here crosses the Loire on a stone bridge (Rte. 103): there is also a suspension bridge.

At La Marche are ruins of a Romanesque Ch., which, from the rudeness of its architecture and carved capitals, is probably as old as the 10th centy. Under its E. end is a crypt.

241 Pouges les Eaux Stat. There are mineral springs about a mile from this.

At Fourchambault Stat. there are extensive iron furnaces and forges, perhaps the largest in France, where the iron conservatories in the Jardin des Plantes, the arches of the Pont du Carrousel, the frame-work for the roof of Chartres cathedral, and the piers for the bridge of Cubzac, were cast. They employ between 2000 and 3000 workmen.

254 Nevers Junct. Stat. (Inn: H. de France), an ancient city of 17,085 Inhab., chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Nièvre, formerly capital of the Nivernais, is situated on the rt. bank of the Loire, at the confluence of the Nièvre. It is mentioned by Cæsar in his Commentaries, "Noviodunum oppidum Æduorum, ad ripas Ligeris opportuno loco positum." He deposited here his money-chest.

The oldest ecclesiastical edifice here is the Ch. of St. Etienne, very plain, both within and without. The date is proved by the charter to be 1063. It exhibits a union of the Burgundian style with that of the neighbouring province of Auvergne. A platform of masonry is raised at the intersection of the transept for the central tower, extending nearly the whole width of the ch., internally supported by additional arches in the transepts. 3 of the original apsidal chapels remain perfect. It is roofed with the barrel vault. Though gloomy, the ch. is pleasing from its elegant proportions. St. Sauveur, near the Loire, another Romanesque church, is turned into a warehouse; St. Genest, an example of the transition into the Pointed style, is also desecrated into a brewery.

The Cathedral of St. Cyr, on the hill top, somewhat heavy externally, consists of transepts and choir, built in the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries, with an apse at both ends; that at the W. is Romanesque, and together with the crypt and transepts dates from the 11th centy. The tower is flanked at the angles by colossal figures, in bad taste. The decoration of the interior is praiseworthy; the capitals of the columns sculptured with rich foliage, of admirable workmanship. All the statues were mutilated at the Revolution. In the S. transept is a rich Flamboyant doorway, leading to a fanciful spiral staircase, a remarkable example of what Mr. Willis calls "interpenetration," or the running of several series of mouldings into one another: these complicated interlacings pervade not only the canopy of the arch, but even the pinnacles.

The Palais de Justice, also on the height facing an irregular Place, formerly palace of the Dukes of Nevers, built by the princes of the line of Clèves, is an edifice in the flamboyant style, retaining several of its picturesque turrets and gables.

The old walls and towers of the 15th centy. still remain. One of the town gates, a relic of the fortifications erected by Pierre de Courtenay, Seigneur de Nevers, at the end of the 12th centy., rebuilt 1393, still exists in the Porte du Croux, black with age and dirt.

Another entry into the town is by a triumphal arch, erected to commemorate the battle of Fontenay, 1746.

At a short distance behind the Palace is a public garden, formerly the park of the dukes.

Nevers is a thriving, busy manufacturing town, now connected with Orleans and Paris by Rly.; its potteries are 8 centuries old, and employ 700 persons: in its iron-works chains and cables for suspension bridges are made; the iron used is that of Berry. There is a royal cannon-foundry, for the navy, where 125 pieces are cast annually. Not far from Nevers, the lateral canal of the Loire is carried over the Allier in an aqueduct called Pont Canal de Guétin, a work of magnitude, completed 1845.

Railways—to Bourges (Rte. 101); to St. Amand and Montluçon; to Moulins, Vichy, Roanne, and Lyons (Rte. 108).

10 Saincalze Stat.

Mars Stat.

The scenery between Nevers and Moulins is on the whole very pleasing, the country much enclosed with hedges, and generally fertile. The river Allier is seldom seen, concealed as it is by trees, in the flat valley through which it passes.

St. Imbert Stat.

Villeneuve-sur-Allier Stat.

St. Pierre le Moutier Stat.

Moulins Stat. (Inns: Hôtel de Paris, good; beds 2 frs. 50 c. to 3 frs., candle 50 c., service 50 c.;—H. d'Allier, moderate), a cheerful town, without the activity of much trade or commerce, pleasantly situated on the rt. bank of the Allier. It is chef-lieu of the Dépt. d'Allier, and contains a population of 15,398. The Dukes of Burgundy here kept their court in splendour not unworthy of sovereign princes in the 15th centy.

It is a comparatively modern town, and has no fine buildings. The castle is reduced to a square tower of the 15th centy., called La Mal Coiffée, and some buildings erected by Cath. de Medicis.

The Cathedral of Notre Dame consists merely of a lofty choir in the Florid style of the 15th centy.: its vaulted roof is elaborately groined. It contains an old painting of the Virgin and Child, the two shutters of which, now detached from it, and hung against piers, bear portraits of Pierre II., Duc de Bourbon, and his wife, Anne of France, attended by their patron saints, attributed to Ghirlandajo. Works are in progress for finishing this cathedral.

In the Chapel of the College, beyond the cathedral on the Paris road, is the monument of Henri Duc de Montmorency, who suffered, under the heavy hand of Richelieu, for having conspired against him and his master, Louis XIII., and was executed at Toulouse, 1632. His widow, Maria Orsini, conveyed his remains to this chapel, then attached to the Convent of the Visitation, of which she became superior, spending in it the rest of her days. The monument, attributed to an Italian sculptor, Agheri, consists of the reclining statue of the duke, in Roman armour, resting on his helmet, with his duchess beside him in an attitude of grief and resignation; the expression of profound sorrow in her countenance is perfect, and the draperies are very beautifully executed. On either side is an allegorical figure—Valour, a sort of Hercules, and Liberality, a coarse female. The fact of this monument being in honour of a man beheaded for conspiring against a king preserved it from demolition at the Revolution.

Marshal Villars, the opponent of Marlborough, and Marshal Berwick, natural son of James II. by Arabella Churchill (Marlborough's sister), who won the battle of Almanza from the English in Spain, were both born here.

Here Lord Clarendon wrote the greater part of his 'History of the Great Rebellion,' in exile.

Some cutlery, of an inferior kind, is made at Moulins; the manufacture has much fallen off.

At Moulins the very interesting road through the Limagne, Clermont, and the Volcanic district of Auvergne, strikes off up the valley of the Allier (Rte. 109).

[Railway to Montluçon (Rte. 103). The country is only remarkable for its collieries.]

No one will quit Moulins without thinking of Sterne and his Maria, the scene of her melancholy story being laid here.

[a. All persons who take an interest in Gothic architecture should visit Souvigny from Moulins. The Auberge de la Poste was the ancient Priors' palace. Diligences run daily from Moulins to the Baths of Bourbon l'Archambault in summer, and the road thither passes through Souvigny, a poor village 5 m. from Moulins. Its Abbey Church, though much mutilated, is one of the most remarkable Gothic monuments in the province for size, and the burialplace of the Ducal house of Bourbon, as St. Denis was of the Royal house. The central nave, the apses at the E. end, and the crypt below the choir, date from the 11th centy.; the more recent portions from 1446, when the church was rebuilt. The nave is flanked by double aisles, the outer ones nearly as broad as the centre. In the N. aisle is a curious fragment of an octagonal pillar covered with sculptures—signs of the zodiac, mythical beasts, &c.—in the Byzantine style. Here is the shrine of St. Menoux; an object of local adoration. The Chapelle Vieille (1441), on the S. side, is separated from the choir and transept by a stone screen, beautifully carved with flamboyant tracery. It encloses the monument of Louis Duc de Bourbon, and Anne his wife, bearing their recumbent figures, of white marble, sadly mutilated by the Revolutionists. A recess, or niche, in the wall opposite, displays, amidst rich flamboyant tracery, the word "Espérance," the motto of the Order of the Thistle, founded by the Duke. On the N. side of the choir is La Chapelle Neuve—date, end of the 15th or beginning of 16th centy.—similarly decorated, and even more injured by the Vandals of '93, containing the tombs of Duc Charles, and his wife Agnes de Bourgogne. Duke Peter, interred here 1503, was followed to his grave by no less than 1700 officers of his household. The Constable de Bourbon, who fell beneath the walls of Rome, was not buried here.

b. At St. Menoux, about 4 m. from Souvigny, N., is another ancient church, once attached to a Benedictine abbey. The choir is the most interesting portion, and a good example of the Burgundian style. It has a large Narthex, a characteristic specimen, which can hardly be later than the 10th centy. The watering-place of Bourbon l'Archambault, a town of 3017 Inhab., frequented on account of its mineral waters, is about 19 m. W. of Moulins. The waters are saline, and are supplied by a hot spring, and a cold spring called Source de Jonas. There is a bath-house in the middle of the town. It was first brought into notice by Madame de Montespan, who died here. There are very considerable and picturesque remains of the ancient castle of the early Sires de Bourbon, and a fragment of the apse of the Ste. Chapelle.]

The rly. continues on the rt. bank of the Allier by Bassay Stat.

Hauterive Stat.

Varennes sur Allier Stat.

St. Germain des Fossés junct. stat.

Branch railway—11 kilom. = 6½ Eng. m. to VICHY (See Rte. 101)—Rly. to Clermont (Rte. 109). Our line quits the valley of the Allier, and enters on a hilly country. The mountains of Auvergne appearing to the S.W., and those of Forez more to the E., form features in the landscape.

La Palisse Stat. Between this and la Pacaudière the railroad traverses a very hilly tract.

La Pacaudière Stat. Here we are once more in the valley of the Loire, though that river is not reached until near

Roanne Stat. (Inns—none good; H. du Centre; Poste, best; two call themselves H. du Midi), a town of 12,000 Inhab., deriving importance from its situation on the l. bank of the Loire, at the point up to which it is navigable against the stream as well as downwards. It has a great transit trade: the manufactures of Lyons, the iron and coal of St. Etienne, the productions of the S. provinces of France, and the imports from the Levant, conveyed hither from the Rhône by railway or canal, are transported hence, down the Loire, to Nantes, or through it, and the Canal de Briare, to the Seine and Paris. There are also considerable manufactures of cotton in the town and its neighbourhood. There is an old Ch., St. Etienne, rebuilt 1549, near the château, and a bridge over the Loire which cost 3 million francs.

The Railroad from Roanne to St. Etienne and Lyons is described in Rte. 119.

The old coach-road went over the Montagne de Tarare by a truly alpine road, carried up in a series of zigzag terraces, sweeping round the shoulders of the hills, and crossing the gorges on handsome bridges of masonry, protected, at the sides, by stone studs like milestones. The summit of the pass is about 3000 ft. above the sea. The road goes through Tarare, a thriving manufacturing town of 7762 Inhab., seated in a narrow valley. The weaving of muslins, remarkable for their fineness, is the staple branch of manufacture, and it is calculated that between 3 and 4 millions of pieces are produced annually. It is said that as many as 52,000 persons are employed in the town and surrounding country on this branch of industry. The weavers ply their trade in damp cellars, which are neither floored nor warmed by fire, in order to keep up the moisture necessary for weaving fine webs, and to prevent the breaking of the thread.

LYONS TERMINUS (Perrache), described in Rte. 108.

ROUTE 106.

DIJON TO CHÂLONS-SUR-SAÔNE.—PARIS AND LYONS RAILWAY B.

Paris.	Miles.
Dijon . . . . .	196
Châlons . . . . .	239
Lyons . . . . .	316

The Rly. from Paris to Dijon and the town of Dijon are described in Rte. 104. After leaving Dijon the railroad throws off 1. the branch to Gray, Dôle, and Besançon (Rte. 148), and carries the traveller along the skirts of the vineyards, producing the Burgundy wines, which rank amongst the best and most famous in France. The country, wherever it presents an advantageous slope, is entirely laid out in vines, and what it loses in picturesqueness it gains in richness. It is besides very populous; there are said to be 40 or 50 villages between Dijon and Beaune, a distance of 26 m.

"About 1 m. S.W. of Dijon begins the chain or district of hills which form the celebrated Côte d'Or, and average from 800 to 1000 ft. in height. It is a wall of hills, covered with vineyards, which ascend in terraces their sunny sides, and then spread along the table-land on the summit. The colour of the soil, as seen through the well-trimmed tufty vines, is of yellowish red; and it may be asked whether the name of the range arises from this prevailing colour of the ground, or from the richness of the product. Here the best Burgundy is grown. In richness of flavour and in perfume, and all the more delicate qualities of the juice of the grape, they unquestionably rank as the finest in the world; and it was not without reason that the Dukes of Burgundy were designated as the 'princes des bons vins.' The soils on which these valuable wines are grown consist, in general, of a light black or red loam, mixed with the débris of the calcareous rocks upon which they repose. The principal vineyards of the Côte d'Or are all situated between Dijon and Chagny, and describe an arc of a large circle exposed to the S.E. and protected from the N.W. by the range of limestone hills that stretches behind them. The vines are planted in trenches, at the distance of about 2 ft. apart, and are trained on poles to the height of 30 to 40 inches. In the best vineyards they are extremely old, and when old vines are replaced by others, a larger crop, but of an inferior quality, is obtained. The choice red growths of the Côte d'Or are the Clos-Vougeot, Nuits, Beaune, Volnay, Pomard, Chambertin, Richebourg, Romanée, and St. George. They are all distinguished by their beautiful colour and exquisite flavour and aroma, combining, in a greater degree than any other wines, the qualities of lightness and delicacy with richness and fulness of body. About 66,000 acres in the Côte d'Or are vineyards: of these about 60,000 acres are planted with gamets, and produce ordinary wines, at the rate of 440 gallons per acre in a good year; 6000 acres are planted with noiriens or pinots, and produce vins fins at the rate of 165 gallons per acre. The vineyards are called Clos or Chimats. Many other crops are intermixed with the vineyards,—potatoes, clover, and maize,—whilst cherry, almond, and walnut trees are dotted over the fields. One need not wonder that the Kings of France should have coveted this rich Burgundian territory. This is about the highest latitude N. where maize can be grown to any advantage."—F. P.

Gevrey Stat. Here is the vineyard of Chambertin, about 15 or 20 acres in extent, but divided among numerous proprietors.

Vougeot Stat. The enclosure (Clos) de Vougeot produces the prince of Burgundy wines. It originally belonged to the monks of the neighbouring Abbey of Cîteaux, who carried its culture to the highest perfection, never selling it, but making presents of what they did not consume themselves. At the Revolution it was bought by M. Focard, and afterwards came into the hands of M. Ouvrard, the loan contractor. Its recent proprietors have enlarged it by taking in some of the neighbouring land; but the present extent of the vineyard is only 120 English acres (50 hectares): the average annual produce is about 200 hogsheads. The soil near the top of the hill consists of small fragments of whitish limestone, mixed with shells, of which the hill is composed: in the lowest part of the vineyard it merges into a nearly pure clay. The vines nearest the top, in the dry soil, produce the best wine; on reaching the clay it falls off, and becomes the mere vin du pays.

"The vintage is in general soon over, the proprietor employing often from 400 to 450 vintagers at the same time. For the red wine, the grapes as they are brought in are thrown into large cases or troughs, and there trodden by a number of men, with large wooden shoes, till the grapes are nearly all broken. They are then taken up in baskets, with interstices wide enough to allow the grapes to pass through, when a portion of the stalks, generally about two-thirds, are taken out. If the whole of the stalks were taken out, the quality of the wine, as has been repeatedly proved, would be inferior. The whole is then put into the vat into which the must, as it ran from the treading, had been previously carried. A space of about 12 inches is left unfilled at the top, and a sliding lid is then put over, which floats upon the surface. As soon as the fermentation becomes violent, the swelling of the mass lifts the lid to the height of six inches above the mouth of the vat. As, however, the skins and the stalks had previously risen to the surface, none of the liquor escapes. A very small space, formed by the looseness of the lid, is considered sufficient to allow the gas to escape, until the rising of the lid allows a greater space; and it is perhaps owing to the confinement of the gas that the lid is raised to such a height. If the weather had been very warm when the grapes were gathered, and still continues warm while the fermentation is going forward, the wine is soon made. The fermentation is sometimes over in 30 h., at other times it continues 10, 12, and even 15 days. The best wine is always produced from the most rapid fermentation. When the fermentation slackens, the liquor begins to subside, and, when it is entirely over, sinks within the top of the vat, but not so low as when the vat was first filled, for the marc, or, in other words, the stalks and skins, are completely separated from the liquor, and float upon the top.

"As soon as it is known by the subsiding of the head, and by the taste and examination of the wine, that the fermentation has ceased, the wine is drawn off into large casks, which contain about 700 gallons each. Every 3 or 4 months it is pumped by means of the syphon and bellows into another vat of the same dimensions, when a man enters by the small opening left in the end of the vats, and washes out, with a brush and cold water, any lees which may have been deposited. The Burgundy of the Clos-Vougeot receives no other preparation, and it is treated in this manner as often as may be judged requisite, till it is disposed of. They commence selling it when 3 and 4 years old, but the wine of very favourable seasons is retained by the proprietor till it is 10 or 12 years old, when it is bottled and sold at the rate of 6 fr. a bottle. The price of the wine of ordinary vintages, from 3 to 4 years old, is from 500 to 600 fr. the hogshead, but seasons occasionally occur when the wine is not better than the Vin Ordinaire of the country."—Busby.

Between this and the next station is Vosne, where the Romanée, Richebourg, &c., are grown.

Nuits Stat., a town of 2700 Inhab. The vins de Nuits were brought into fashion 1680, by Louis XIV., for whom they were exclusively prescribed by the chief physician, Fagon, as a means of restoring his strength.

[6 or 7 m. E. of Nuits, 12 m. from Dijon, is the celebrated Abbey of Cîteaux, founded 1090 by Robert de Molesme, in which St. Bernard assumed the cowl 1113, which sent forth to assume the keys of St. Peter no less than 4 popes, and which numbered 3600 tributary convents of the Cistercian order, of which it was the head. Great part of the abbatial buildings (modern) still exist, and have been converted into a Reformatory, Religious, and Industrial Penitentiary for Juvenile Offenders, placed under the care of 6 priests, 18 Sisters of Charity, and 60 lay brothers. Near them is a large Agricultural College.]

Beaune Stat. (Inns: H. Brian; H. de France) contains 10,800 Inhab., and owes its prosperity to its being one of the chief seats of the wine trade in Burgundy, about 80 mercantile houses being engaged in it; the annual exportation amounts to 30,000 or 40,000 butts. The ch. of Notre Dame contains specimens of building of all ages from the 12th century. The nave and part of the choir are the oldest.

The Hospital (Hôtel Dieu), founded by Nic. Rollin, chancellor of Philip Duke of Burgundy, 1443, presents in its court some good bits of Gothic, and there is a fine Gothic hall. Here is a remarkable painting, a Last Judgment, by Roger v. der Weyden, his best work, and one of the finest pictures of the early Flemish school. The Bouzeoise, a limpid stream full of green weeds floating with its current, traverses the town.

Two huge round towers are all that remain of the castle, which was destroyed by Henry IV.

Beaune is the birthplace of the senator Monge, the mathematician and favourite of Napoleon.

[At Cussy la Colonne, 12 m. S.W. of Beaune, is a Roman pillar or monument, bearing bas-reliefs; but it is accessible with difficulty by cross roads. At Nolay, near it, Carnot, the republican general and engineer, was born.]

The country immediately about Beaune has much amenity, and in its neighbourhood are produced the wines of Volnay and Pomard, the former being characterised by its light and grateful aroma and delicate tint, the latter having more body and colour: they are sometimes mixed with the red wines to give them fire. Savigny, Beaune, Meursault, and several other vineyards in the neighbourhood, all produce excellent wines, and, generally speaking, all the growths of that district are remarkable for the purity of their flavour.

Chagny Stat. (H. de l'Artichant.) Coaches to Autun (Rte. 108.) This town is a central point, whence many roads diverge. The tower of the Church is curious; it is a perfect specimen of the transition into the Pointed from the Norman style.

On quitting Chagny the Rly. passes beneath the Canal du Centre in a short tunnel.

Châlons-sur-Saône Stat.—(Inns: H. des Diligences; H. du Parc; H. des Trois Faisans.) The Saône, which runs through this town of 10,011 Inhab., and which, from this point, becomes an important river, navigable for steamboats, gives it much water-side activity. The Canal du Centre, which joins the Saône to the Loire, commences here, and affords an outlet for a considerable traffic and transit of goods to the Mediterranean and Atlantic from the central departments of France. Châlons is the Cabillonum of Cæsar, whose Commentaries should be one of the handbooks of every traveller through the districts of Gaul. A fine granite column, standing, or rather raised, on one of the Places, is unquestionably a relic of the Roman age.

The town is dull, but clean, for France; and there is little worth seeing. But the quai, facing the river, is lined by good houses, and is the most lively portion. The Cathedral (St. Vincent), lately restored, in tolerably good taste, with the addition of 2 new towers, is in the early Gothic, when the peculiarities of that style were beginning to mix themselves with the older Romanesque. The Hospital of St. Laurent, on the island in the Saône, has some good painted glass, which, it has been suggested, should be removed to the cathedral. At present it is necessary to traverse the sick ward in order to see it. The date of this vaulted dormitory, and of the hospital itself, is 1528.

Abélard died (1142) at the Abbey of St. Marcel, about 2 m. from Châlons, now destroyed except the Ch.; he was buried there, but afterwards removed to the Paraclete.

RAILWAY TO LYONS, Rte. 108.

ROUTE 107.

NEVERS TO CHAGNY STAT. (ON THE LYONS RAILWAY), BY CHÂTEAU CHINON, AUTUN, AND CREUZOT.

101 kil. = 62½ Eng. m. to Autun. Diligence daily, but places cannot be booked beyond C. Chinon.

A Rly. projected from Nevers to Creuzot.

An interesting grazing country, varied by woods; the pastures studded with beautiful cream-coloured cattle. The towns passed are Roay, St. Benigne, Chatillon, Le Moulin Maugin. A long continued ascent carries the road into

Château Chinon (Inn, not clean, but good cuisine, and moderate).

The view on all sides is magnificent, extending 40 m.

No public conveyance to Autun. Postmaster has only a sorry patache to furnish.

27 m. from Chagny is

Autun. (Inns: La Poste; Chablis good here;—La Cloche.) In September a fair is held which lasts the whole month: the inns are then intolerable, and the town one scene of bustle and confusion. The first view of this interesting city is very pleasing. It is supposed to have been the ancient Bibracte, capital of the Ædui, mentioned by Cæsar as “oppidum maximæ auctoritatis apud eos,” but its name was changed, in the time of Augustus, into Augustodunum, modernised into Autun. Tacitus describes its importance as a fortress and great city, and states that the most illustrious of the youth of Gaul were educated here. “Autun, now a town of 11,094 Inhab., stands at the foot of a range of well-wooded hills. The Roman ruins, hoary-grey, situated low down near the river, distinguish themselves by their fine and peculiar forms. Amongst the masses of buildings, crowned by the cathedral and its lofty spire, is the Temple of Janus, as it is called, though without any sufficient authority, a square building, of which 3 sides are standing, near the river. It is denuded of ornaments, but imposing, from its proportions and its solidity. It probably dates from the time of the Lower Empire. The Two Roman Gates are beautiful and very perfect. They are both nearly on the same plan; double arches below, and ranges of smaller arches above, ornamented with pilasters. The Porte d'Arroux is Corinthian, the Porte Saint André Ionic. They are evidently of the Lower Empire, and the purist will find fault with the details; but if you will put away criticism, and enjoy the objects, the effect is most satisfactory. Nothing can be more charming than the appearance of the delicately-cut arches, coming off against the blue sky.”—F. P. The Roman walls of Augustodunum, within which the present city has shrunk, are very massive and curious, and large fragments still very perfect exist.

Just without Autun, upon the Dijon road, is a singular pyramidal mass of masonry, called the Pierre de Couars. It is about 50 ft. in height, and was probably originally much more lofty. The facing is entirely destroyed. It is quite solid, and is probably sepulchral: antiquaries suppose it to be the tomb of Divitiacus (?).

Autun had a noble amphitheatre. The ruins are now encircled by other buildings, but the general site of the Roman city is a perfect mine of antiquities. Many were collected by the late M. Jovet. Here also is a fragment of the tomb of the wicked Bruneault, who was buried at the abbey of St. Martin, a curious structure, now razed to the ground.

The Cathedral of St. Lazare, lately repaired, exhibits an interesting variety in its style of architecture. The lofty spire, covered with foliated crockets, is a masterpiece of Gothic; so also is the rood-loft, composed of delicate and elaborate filigree-work. But a large proportion of the building is in the Romanesque style, and displays the closest imitation of Roman art; indeed, it is copied from the neighbouring Porte d'Arroux. The elegant flamboyant decorations of the chapels in the nave, and especially of the door of the sacristy, a charming bas-relief of Christ and the Magdalene, in the chapel which serves as baptistery, the painted glass in the Chapelle St. Nazare, representing the genealogy of the Virgin, and the Martyrdom of St. Symphorien, by Ingres, deserve also particular attention.

In all parts of the city you may see the disjointed and lamentable fragments of the ancient edifices by which Autun was once adorned. There is a good collection of the geology of the district in the Petit Séminaire, of which the Abbé Landriot is superior.

St. Symphorien suffered martyrdom here for refusing to join a procession in honour of Cybele.

Autun, it will be remembered, was the see of Bishop Talleyrand.

Diligence to Beaune, to St. Leger Stat., or Rail from Chagny to Creuzot.

Not far from Autun are the two valuable coal-basins of Epinac (to the N.) and of Creuzot, which are worked by pits, in some cases more than 650 ft. deep. Mineral oil for lighting the mines is obtained by a distillation from the bituminous schists accompanying the coal. The Romans used these very schists to line the walls of their houses at Autun.

At Creuzot, 14 m. from Autun, are the most extensive Iron-works in France, employing 10,000 persons. Here are 10 blast furnaces and 150 coke-ovens; also foundries, locomotive factories, and copper-works. The Canal du Centre passes through Creuzot. The iron-ore is brought from a distance. From Epinac (where are considerable glass-works for making wine-bottles) the coal is transported on a tramway to the Canal de Bourgogne, thence by water to Paris and Alsace.]

From Creuzot to Chagny, Rail, by St. Leger.

Chagny Stat. (Rte. 106).

ROUTE 108.

CHÂLONS-SUR-SAÔNE TO LYONS, BY MÂCON: RAILWAY C.

Paris.	Miles.
Châlons . . . . .	239
Mâcon . . . . .	275
Lyons . . . . .	316

Paris to Châlons. (See Rtes. 104 and 106.)

Railroad from Châlons to Lyons opened in 1854; the tunnel into Lyons in 1856.

[Steamers to Lyons by the Saône? The voyage used to be performed in 5 or 6 hrs. descending, but since the rlwy. has been opened the river has not been much used. The banks of the river are in places pretty, but the most remarkable objects are the numerous light suspension bridges across the river.]

The Railroad runs along the rt. side of the Saône, sometimes close to it, at others out of sight of it, but little removed from it. From some of the eminences surmounted by the road, towards the E., you see the chain of the Jura, and, in favourable weather, the white snow of Mont Blanc, which may at first easily be mistaken for a cloud, distant as the crow flies about 100 m.

Immediately below Châlons is the mouth of the Canal du Centre, formerly called du Charolais, leading in 76 m. to Digoin on the Loire, and a basin or dock for barges entering or quitting it.

Tournus Stat. (Inn: H. des Trois Faisans), a town of 5613 Inhab., possessing a wooden bridge of 5 arches over the Saône. Its Church, formerly attached to a venerable abbey, now destroyed, is a very plain edifice, in the Romanesque style, but interesting to the student for its architecture and antiquity. It is surmounted by a central tower, flanked with Corinthian pilasters at the angles, and has 2 other towers at the W. end. Its nave, preceded by a narthex or vestibule supported on 2 rows of short thick pillars without capitals, is probably of the 10th centy. The nave is roofed with a series of cradle or barrel-vaults, placed transversely, separated by cross arches, so as to divide it into compartments.

In the Place de l'Hôtel de Ville is a granite column, reputed an antique.

The charming painter Greuse was a native of Tournus: the house where he was born is marked by an inscription: he died at Paris, 1805.

After this place the country and the towns begin to assume a southern appearance.

St. Albis has a curious early pointed Gothic ch.; windows lancet. The costume of the villagers is picturesque.

Near the river vineyards cover the slopes, which are a prolongation of the distant range of the hills of Charolois.

Mâcon Junct. Stat. (Inns: H. de l'Europe, on the Quay; Le Sauvage, a view of the river.) Mâcon was heretofore the capital of the country of the Mâconnois, and ruled by its own sovereigns from the time of Louis le Débonnaire until it passed to the house of Burgundy. The country was often settled as an appanage upon the younger branches of the family. It is chef-lieu of the Dépt. Saône et Loire. Pop. 16,546. The conjoint devastations of the Huguenots, who exercised the greatest cruelties and atrocities here, and of the Revolutionists, have nearly denuded Mâcon of all its ancient religious structures; hence the necessity of erecting a new church, which, until recently, was an unheard-of event in France. The towers of the Cathedral are standing, together with a very small portion of the body of the building, and have lately been restored. There is a Bridge of 13 arches. From it, but still better from a little Espanade planted with poplar-trees beyond it, a view of Mont Blanc may be obtained. In the neighbourhood of Mâcon are many very fine prospects of the ranges of hills of the Bourbonnois and Charolois, the latter being a continuation of the Côte d'Or.

Mâcon is the birthplace of Lamartine. His Château, St. Point, not far off, is sold.

[France.]

Mâcon is the centre of a great trade in the wine grown in its arrondissement, though at some distance from the town itself, and from our road; at the foot of the hills on the W. The best sorts are the growths of Thorins and Moulin à Vent, which are red, and the Pouilly, a white wine. Romanèche, situated in the midst of this wine district, 12 m. from Mâcon, possesses a mine of oxide of manganese.

[From Mâcon the Rly. to Geneva, Chambéry, and St. Jean de Maurienne, by Amberieu (Rte. 153), branches off, crossing the Saône below the town on a fine iron bridge.]

[22 kilom. = 15 m. N.W. of Mâcon is Cluny, a large place (Inn: H. de Bourgogne), once famous for its ancient and wealthy abbey, of the order of St. Benedict, which, before the Revolution, had 600 religious houses dependent upon it, and enjoyed a revenue of 300,000 fr. a year. It was so utterly destroyed in 1789, that of its noble Gothic church, which had 5 aisles and double transepts, only the 2 towers remain, with some fragments of wall, and the chapelle de Bourbon, 15th centy. The town, which has a population of 4152, and carries on some manufactures, is built on the site and with the materials of the abbatial buildings. The cloisters form a sort of public square, and a fragment of the Abbot's Palace is converted into a private dwelling. Here is a government stud (Haras).]

The country on the l. bank of the Saône formed part of the ancient divisions of La Bresse and Dombes.

The banks of the Saône acquire some elevation and picturesqueness below Mâcon; the Jura mountains being all along a feature in the view to the E.; the nearer hills studded with white châteaux and villages. The Château de Corielles, flanked by 4 round towers, stands at some distance off the road to the W.

Belleville. 3000 Inhab. The ch. of the 12th centy. is curious.

About 13 m. to the W. is Beaujeu, capital of the province of Beaujolais, in the midst of a district famed for its wines.

On the other side of the Saône is seen the tower of Montmerle.

Villefranche Stat., an industrious town of 11,686 Inhab., has rather a cheerful aspect. The church has been a beautiful specimen of the florid Gothic, though small.

Trévoux Stat. is an ancient town of 2749 Inhab. on l. bank of the Saône, on the slope of a concave hill, surmounted by the ruins of its old castle. It possesses now no interest beyond that connected with the recollection of its having once been capital of the principality of Dombes, and the place where the Jesuits compiled and printed the very learned works called the 'Journal de Trévoux,' 1701, and 'Dictionnaire de Trévoux,' 1704, a sort of Encyclopædia. Their house remains, marked by the shield of the Order of St. Ignatius.

Dombes was acknowledged as an independent state by the French kings (except Francis I.) from Philippe-Auguste down to Louis XIV., owing them only allegiance and aids of men in case of war. It had a parliament of its own, which met at Trévoux, and the right of striking money, down to 1762. It is supposed to have been the Roman Trivia, near which Septimius Severus beat the army of his rival Albinus, and thus secured the empire for himself. In the district of Dombes are 50,000 fishponds, formed by damming up the running streams; every 3rd year the water is let off, the fish caught, and the bed of the pond cultivated.

Through pretty scenery, between banks thickly scattered with habitations, the Saône, considerably contracted in width, passes under the richly-wooded heights called Mont d'Or, rising 1000 ft. above the river. On the rt., by Belle Ile,

Couzon Stat., connected by a wire bridge with La Roche Taillée, so called from the cutting which Agrippa is supposed to have made to allow the passage of one of the great Roman highways. But the fissure through which the road and the Saône pass is doubtless natural.

Lower down is L'Ile Barbe, the favourite retreat of Charlemagne, linked to either bank by a suspension-bridge over the Saône. Not seen from rail.

The country and buildings now present a very Italian appearance, dotted over with numerous villas. But the rly. is carried through tunnels and cuttings, so that little is seen of the suburbs of Lyons. After Collonges Stat. the tunnels and works on the rly. are very heavy, leading to the Vaise stat., on the rt. bank of the Saône, at Lyons. After leaving the Vaise station several streets are crossed on arches, and the rly. enters the tunnel of St. Irénée, 7134 ft., or nearly a mile and a half long, and 301 ft. below the summit of the hill of Fourvières. On emerging from the tunnel a tubular bridge over the Saône, built by Fox and Henderson, carries the line into the LYONS JUNCT. STAT., in the Quartier Perrache, on a high embankment in the Cours Napoléon.

LYONS (French, Lyon).—Inns: Grand Hôtel de Lyon, Rue Impériale, first class, comfortable, quite the best, but dear;—H. d'Univers, Rue de Bourbon, English landlord;—H. de l'Europe;—H. de Provence et des Ambassadeurs, opposite the Post Office, in the Place Bellecour;—H. du Nord, chiefly for bachelors, not far from the H. de Ville. —Restaurants: Maison Dorée, Place Bellecour;—Bavoux, Place de la Préfecture. Cafés: du Rhône; de la Jeune France; Baths du Rhône, in the Rue du Perrat, both good.

There are few more stately cities, in external aspect, in striking situation, seated as it is on two great rivers, the Rhône and Saône, or in the lively air of bustle and commerce diffused through its interior, than Lyons, the second city of France, the chief seat of manufactures, the focus where the commerce of the North and South converges. It is a fortress of 1st class, and chef-lieu du Dépt. du Rhône. Its pop. amounts to 300,000 including its suburbs. The lower part is 557 ft. above the sea.

The appearance of grandeur is no longer limited to its quais, bridges, and noble rivers, to the steep and commanding heights of Fourvières on the rt. of the Saône, and to the Places Bellecour, des Terreaux, and de Louis Napoléon. Few towns in France have more improved of late years. The construction in 1856-7 of a grand avenue—parallel with the Rhône—called Rue Impériale, and of another called Rue Centrale, has admitted light and air into the interior of the town, and has afforded two fine wide streets. The climate is rainy and foggy, and a cloud of smoke usually hangs over the town, and covers everything with dirt, exactly as in an English manufacturing town.

Lyons stands on both banks of the Saône and Rhône, but the largest part occupies the tongue of land between these two rivers, extending from the heights covered by the populous suburb of La Croix Rousse, the residence of the silk-weavers and the hot-bed of insurrection, down nearly to the confluence of the rivers, towards which the quarter of Perrache has pushed forward buildings. On the l. bank of the Rhône are the suburbs of Les Brotteaux, formerly the scene of revolutionary executions, now the most handsome part of the town; and of Guillotière, where a new town is rapidly rising;—on the rt. bank of the Saône, the suburbs of Vaise, through which you enter Lyons from Paris; of Fourvières, mounting up the face of a slope so abrupt as scarcely to be accessible for wheel carriages; of St. Irénée behind it; and of St. George, lower down, near the water-side. These dry topographical details will be best understood when the traveller has scaled the **Height of Fourvières, which he should do the first thing after his arrival, on account of the view it commands. To reach it you pass between the Palais de Justice and the cathedral, ascending the steep and narrow streets above the cathedral, which are often foul: about half way up is a path through some gardens, passage 1 sou.

You pass behind the huge straggling hospital of Antiquailles, occupying the site of the Roman palace in which Claudius and Caligula were born, now assigned to the reception of 600 patients, the most miserable wretches of this populous city, afflicted with madness and all sorts of incurable and disgusting diseases, to the care of whom 27 Frères Hospitaliers and 67 Sœurs devote their lives. Up narrow lanes, and steep stone stairs, partly in front of shops in which rosaries, medals, pictures, candles, and wax models of different parts of the body for suspension in the church, are displayed before the eyes of devout pilgrims, you reach

The Ch. of Notre Dame de Fourvières, whose lofty dome is crowned by a colossal gilt copper figure of the Virgin: it is only remarkable for the quantity of ex-votos, paintings, &c., to the number of 4000, with which its walls are covered, offered to the altar of the miracle-working figure of our Lady of Fourvières, whose intercession is stated, by an inscription over the entrance, to have preserved Lyons from the cholera. (Ascent of the dome 25 c.) Close beside the Ch. a speculator has built a tower (1 fr.), by way of observatory, 630 ft. above the Saône, and from it, or from the dome of the Ch., a most magnificent view may be obtained. The city of Lyons appears unrolled as a map beneath your feet, including the two noble rivers visible to their junction, the Saône crossed by 8 or 10 bridges, the Rhône by 7. Beyond it stretch fields, plains, and hills, dotted over with country houses, and the distance is closed (in clear weather) by the snowy peak of Mont Blanc, nearly 100 m. off, this being one of the farthest points from which it is seen. More to the S. the Alps of Dauphiné, the mountains of the Grande Chartreuse, and the Mont Pilas appear. The Ch. of Notre Dame is seated on the very summit of the hill, and is said to occupy the site, and retain the name, of the Roman Forum Vetus, built by Trajan. Numerous but inconsiderable Roman remains have been brought to light on the hill, the principal being an amphitheatre within the Jardin des Plantes, and some fine arches of an Aqueduct, partly included in the Fort St. Irénée.

In the faubourg St. Irénée, behind Fourvières, is the Ch. of St. Irénée, an uninteresting modern building, but erected on the grave of that saint and martyr, and upon subterranean vaults, in which, it is said, the early Christians met for prayer, and were afterwards massacred, by order of Septimius Severus, A.D. 202. In the midst of this crypt, an ancient Romanesque building, resting on plain columns, is a sort of well, down which the bodies of the Christians were thrown, until it overflowed with the blood of the 19,000 martyrs, for such is the number reported to have fallen, according to the legend, and a recess is filled with their bones. The upper Ch. was destroyed, and the crypt much injured, by the Calvinists, 1562; and the whole has been sadly modernized, much to the disparagement of historic associations.

The Cathedral of St. Jean Baptiste, on the rt. bank of the Saône, has 4 towers, two of which flank the W. front, and two, more massive, but shorter, from the transepts. The W. front is the most recent part, not having been completed until the reign of Louis XI.: its bas-reliefs and statues are curious, but they have suffered from the Calvinistic iconoclasts of the 16th centy.; these injuries have usually, but unjustly, been attributed to the infamous Baron des Adrets, since he was not in Lyons at the time when they were perpetrated. "The greater portion of the cathedral is of the age of St. Louis; but, though Gothic, the attentive observer will remark some curious imitations of Roman ornaments, particularly in an incrustated band or frieze of red and white marble, composed of masques and foliage, copied from the antique, with considerable exactness, running round the principal apse. The painted glass windows are remarkably fine. The centre tower, which opens into the cross, contains a rose window, which produces a peculiarly good effect. In a side aisle, on the floor, stands the once celebrated clock, made or built by Nicholas Lippeus of Basle, in 1508. It is very much like that at Strasburg, exhibiting various processions of little figures, the courses of the sun and moon, and the like; but it is quite out of repair; and to be called in action it requires the administration of half a franc to the sacristan."—F. P. "The clerestory presents an interesting series of windows, giving, in order, the gradations from plain lancets and circles, without foliation, or even a containing arch, to the perfect mullioned window, with flowing tracery" (Petit), a good lesson for the student. The Bourbon chapel, built by the Cardinal Bourbon and his brother Pierre, son-in-law of Louis XI., is remarkable for its ornaments, principally flowers and foliage of the most delicate sculpture. Amongst them the thistle or chardon is repeatedly introduced; a pun or rebus, allusive to the cher-don which the king had made to Pierre in the gift of his daughter.

"The see of Lyons, the religious metropolis of the Gauls, ascends to the era of the primitive church, its founders having been St. Pothinus, an Asiatic Greek, in the 2nd centy., and St. Irénæus, disciples of the apostles, both of whom suffered martyrdom here. Before the Revolution the cathedral enjoyed many high privileges. The canons had the title of Counts of Lyons: and in the service many ancient usages are retained; amongst others, yellow or native wax alone was used for the tapers, and no instrumental music was allowed. Adjoining the cathedral is a building, part of the ancient Archiepiscopal Palace, which seems to be of the 9th centy."—F. P.

Round the cathedral are numerous shops for the sale of church furniture and ecclesiastical robes.

On the quai, a little above the cathedral, opposite the Pont Seguin, destroyed by the flood of 1840, is the new Palais de Justice, a handsome building, faced with a colonnade of 24 pillars. Baltard is the architect.

On the opposite side of the Saône, about  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. lower down, at the end of a street running up from the Pont d'Ainay, is the Church of the Abbey of Ainay, a very remarkable monument, both of Pagan and Christian antiquity.

"The centre of the cross is supported by 4 ancient granite columns, supposed to have belonged to the altar erected at the confluence of the Rhône and Saône (which originally met close to the Ch.), in honour of Augustus, who resided for 3 years at Lyons, by the 60 nations of Gaul. In the representation of that altar existing on medals there are only 2 pillars, 1 on either side of the altar, each supporting a statue of Victory; but these lofty columns, each of a single shaft, having been cut in two, now form the 4 supporters, of somewhat low proportions, to the central lantern." The measurements of the diameter of the sections in each pair show how they were joined. Their capitals, an imitation of the Corinthian, are mediæval. The original capitals were Ionic. The Ch., as a building, was in existence before 937 (its foundation as a monastery was much earlier), and these are possibly of that era. The outer tower is probably Carlovingian; but the building has recently been restored, in some parts awkwardly, so as to prepare much perplexity for the antiquarians who are yet unborn. Beneath the sacristy are the dungeons in which Pothinus and Blandina were immured previously to their martyrdom.

"The sufferings of these witnesses for the truth rest upon a document of great authenticity, the Epistle of the Churches of Vienne and Lyons to the Brethren in Asia and Phrygia. Pothinus, chosen bishop of Lyons, and then 90 years of age, was sent back into this dungeon, where he expired after two days' confinement. For Blandina, who was a converted slave, greater tortures were reserved. After being scourged and exposed to the fire in an iron chair, she was delivered over to the beasts in the amphitheatre. These events took place during the persecution under Marcus Antoninus, the implacable enemy of Christianity, A.D. 177.

"These dungeons are gloomy cells, without light or air, below the bed of the adjoining river. The apertures by which they are entered are so low that you must creep into them upon hands and knees. They adjoin a crypt which, until the Revolution, was used as a chapel: traces of Roman work are here distinctly seen, and the walls are covered with modern frescoes of the martyrs, and the floor with fresh mosaics. It has been restored to use.

"The middle-age name of Ainay is Athenacum, and most of the historians of Lyons are unanimous in supposing that it is built upon the site of the Athenæum founded by Caligula, and the buildings of which joined to or included the Augustan altar. It was a school of debate and composition, in which pleaders competed for the prize. Great honours were bestowed upon the successful competitors; but those who failed were liable, according to the statutes of the imperial founder, to the most severe and humiliating punishments—to be chastised with a ferula, or thrown into the river, and to obliterate their own compositions by licking them out with the tongue: hence even the most gifted would approach the altar with trepidation and fear" (F. P.), and hence the line of Juvenal—

"Palleat, ut nudis pressit qui calcibus anguem, Aut Lugdunensem rhetor dicturus ad aram."

Some other remarkable churches, &c., have been spared:—St. Nizier, a splendid example of the flamboyant Gothic. Obs. the triforium, with foliated window arches, without mulions. The bosses of the arched roof are curiously pointed. The portal, in the style of the Renaissance, is a work of the architect Philibert Delorme, in the 16th centy. Several hundred of the insurgents in the insurrection of 1834 were pursued within the walls of this church by the soldiery, and killed there.

St. Pierre has a curious Carlovingian portal, in perfect preservation, though barbarously coated with oil-paint.

The square called Place des Terreaux, one side of which is occupied by the Hôtel de Ville, and another by the Museum or Palais des Beaux Arts, was the scene of the execution of Cinq Mars and De Thou: "they perished on the scaffold, the one like a Roman, the other like a saint;" thus atoning for their share in a conspiracy against the unrelenting Cardinal Richelieu. Here also, in 1794, the guillotine was erected, and actively kept at work until the square became so flooded with human blood, that the Terrorist chiefs, fearing to rouse the sensibility of the people, resolved on a wholesale massacre, by musketry and grape, in the Brotteaux, on the other side of the Rhône.

The Hôtel de Ville (1447-55), with its lofty roofs and bold projections, is not unworthy of the ancient consulate, who, before the Revolution, were a most influential and useful magistracy, though much reduced in authority by Henri IV. In this building sat the Revolutionary Tribunal which, under Challier before the siege of Lyons, and after it under Couthon, Collot d'Herbois, and Fouché, despatched so many thousand victims to perish by the guillotine and the fusillade. Collot d'Herbois, the chief of these tyrants, had been an actor, and in that capacity had been hissed off the stage of Lyons. He vowed vengeance against the town in consequence of this affront; and amply did the savage glut his desire for it.

The Palais des Beaux Arts, or Museum, in the ancient convent of St. Pierre, contains some very remarkable specimens of Roman antiquity. A Taurobole, or square altar, 5 ft. high. The Bronze Tables containing the speech made by Claudius, when Censor, in the Roman senate (A.D. 48), on moving that the communities of Gallia Comata should be admitted to the privileges of the citizenship of Rome—an act of the highest national importance. They are beautifully cut, and the letters are as sharp and as legible as if they had just issued from the engraver's hands. In these engravings we have probably the very words or composition of Claudius himself. They were discovered in the year 1528, on the heights of St. Sebastian. Claudius was born at Lyons on the very day when the altar of Augustus was consecrated.

In contemplating a relic of this description in the city to which it belongs, we become sensible how much of its interest would be diminished by depositing it in any situation out of its proper locality. A very fine mosaic pavement, representing the games of the Circus, in which the Spina, and the gates whence the chariots started for the race, are fully given, was found at Ainay, 1800. Several other pavements were found in or near the city, including one of Orpheus and the Beasts, brilliant in colour, with many sepulchral and other inscriptions.

The legs of a bronze horse, extracted from the bed of the Saône, are remarkable.

In the Picture Gallery are several paintings of celebrated masters. — * Pietro Perugino: The Ascension, the heavenly choir in the sky, the Apostles and Virgin below; one of the best works of the master, a magnificent painting; given to the city by Pope Pius VII. Rubens: St. Francis, St. Dominic, and the Virgin interceding for the world, against which the Saviour is about to launch his thunder; finely coloured, but coarse and offensive in the composition. Two saints, more pleasing in tone and quite as characteristic. The Adoration of the Magi. Spagnoletto: St. Francis after Death, as placed in the tomb by Gregory IV.; the ghastly glare of the eye and rigidity of the frame are truly, but somewhat painfully, represented. Palma Vecchio: Portrait of his daughter Violante (called a Titian), the same face by Palma existed at Dresden. Caracci: The Baptism in the Jordan. A Portrait of a Canon of Bologna. Guercino: The Circumcision, very fine. Teniers: St. Peter delivered from the Prison, or rather soldiers gaming in the guard-house; for what is called the subject is rendered merely an accessory. Perugino: St. Gregory and St. James. A. Dürer (?): The Empr. Maximilian and the Empress. A Portrait of Jacquart, inventor of the silk-loom named after him, by Bonnefonds. Portrait of Mignard, by himself. Portrait of William III. of England, Van Heem. Here are preserved Poussin's original drawings for the 7 Sacraments; also a small collection of majolica, porcelain, and Limoges enamels, Palissy ware.

A School of Design established at Lyons has been attended with remarkable success in improving the manufactures. A portrait of Jacquart, in imitation of an engraving, but produced by the loom invented by him, is both a monument to his memory and a proof of the skill attained by his townsmen.

In one of the apartments are placed the busts of some of the illustrious natives of Lyons, as Philibert Delorme, architect; Bernard de Jussieu, the botanist; Jacquart, inventor of the silk-loom; Suchet, marshal of France; Poivre, governor of L'Île de France, who introduced pepper.

The Museum of Natural History is very creditable to the town, by its extent; and most useful and instructive to the student, by its excellent systematic arrangement, according to orders, families, genera. It is tolerably well filled in all the departments of natural history; but where specimens of a genus are wanting, the place is supplied by a drawing.

Among the minerals are a very complete and valuable series of marbles, antique and modern, of Italy, France, &c.; a suit of the blue and green copper-ores from the mine of Chessy. The mineralogical and geological topography of France is illustrated in a collection of rocks and fossils from the different departments.

"The Bibliothèque Publique is the best provincial collection in France. The consulate of the city took great pride in this institution, which was originally annexed to the college. It contains many manuscripts, and about 80,000 printed volumes. Amongst them are many valuable and all but unique articles of the early printers—the delight and despair of the bibliomaniac. During the siege of Lyons in 1793, the library suffered greatly from the bombardments and the cannonade to which the city was exposed. The roof of the library was beat down, large heaps of the books were covered by the rubbish, and it might have been wished that they could have continued so during the reign of the Convention. Some were carried to Paris; others stolen. The foregoing were at least preserved for literature. But the library was turned into a barrack; the National Guard lighted their fires and boiled their coffee with the volumes, which they employed in preference to any other combustible; and a Juge de Paix in a different canton caused a cart-load to be brought to him every decade for the same purpose; for, said he, they are all books of devotion, and we do not exactly seek truth in the age of reason."—F. P.

In the suburb of Vaise, on the rt. bank of the Saône, on the line of the old fortifications, and just above the railroad leading to Paris and Châlons, rise the scanty remains of the escarped rock of Pierre Scise, or Encise, so called from its having been cut through by Agrippa, in order to open a military road. It is now used as a quarry, and the proprietors are carting off the picturesque and beautiful by wholesale. Upon this rock stood a castle of the Archbishops, demolished during the Revolution, perhaps in consequence of the odium which it acquired by having been a state prison, and also because it was offensive to the inhabitants from its domineering over the town. In it Ludovico Sforza, called Il Moro, was confined by Louis XII.; he was afterwards removed to the castle of Loches, where, being occasionally confined in an iron cage, he sank under the misery he sustained. Here also Card. Richelieu shut up Cinq Mars, for conspiring against his authority and corresponding with Spain; and De Thou, the son of the historian, for not betraying the conspiracy.

On the Quai near Pont Morand is a statue of Marshal Suchet.

The Palais du Commerce, including the Bourse, is a very handsome building (1861).

"The charitable institutions of Lyons are numerous. The principal one is the Hôtel Dieu, on the quay facing the Rhône, between the Pont de l'Hôtel Dieu and Pont Guillotière: it is the most ancient, perhaps, now subsisting in France, having been founded by Chilbert, and Ultrogotha his queen. The present edifice was built by Soufflot, architect of the Pantheon, but the front is recent. The plan of the building is that of a cross, and it is arranged upon the Panopticon principle. An octagon altar is placed under the central dome. From this the wards radiate, and the crucifix and the officiating priest can be seen from every bed in the hospital. The chambers are very lofty and spacious. Amongst other attendants are 150 sisters of charity."—F. P.

The building was destroyed during the siege of 1793, when filled with wounded, by shells and red-hot shot: a black flag, hoisted upon the building to avert the deadly shower, seemed only to attract towards it a larger share of the fire; and after the flames had been in vain extinguished 42 times, it was finally consumed.

From an inscription discovered in a courtyard of the Hôtel Dieu (once a Protestant burial-ground), it would seem that Mrs. Temple, daughter of Young, author of the 'Night Thoughts,' who died at Montpellier, 1736, was buried here. By the archives in the H. de Ville, it appears that 729 livres were paid for permission to inter her.

On the quay of the Rhône, below the Pont Guillotière, is the still larger Hospice de la Charité.

The Place Bellecour, one of the largest squares in Europe, perhaps too large, since it covers 15 acres, and only one side has any pretension to architectural merit, has been rebuilt since 1793-94. The bronze statue of Louis XIV. in the centre was restored by Charles X.

Lyons claims to have been founded by Greeks 590 years B.C. It was certainly an important Roman city, and underwent the usual fortunes of cities in the middle ages. The ancient city of Lyons, the Roman Lugdunum, founded, according to Dion Cassius, by Munatius Plancus (B.C. 40), occupied the heights of Fourvières. Here Augustus and Severus resided. The central fountain in the Jardins de Plantes stands in the arena of a Roman Amphitheatre. Here still exist traces of the vast Aqueduct, constructed, it is said, by the soldiers of Marc Antony, when his legions were quartered here, to supply the town with water from the distant mountains of La Forez. It may be still traced for miles, crossing the valleys on arches, of which the most considerable remains are at Bionnat (6 arches), Chapponost, Char-donniers and Oullins.

Remains of Agrippa's 4 great roads, which met at Lyons, radiating thence to the Pyrenees, through the Cevennes to the Rhine, to the Ocean through Picardy, and to Marseilles, may also be traced.

Lyons was possessed and governed by its archbps., who held it by a grant from the Emp. of Germany, during the 12th and part of the 13th cent., and was not restored to the French crown until the reign of Philippe le Bel.

The silk manufacture was established here in the middle of the 15th centy. by Italian refugees, and was nearly ruined by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, which dispersed most of its best workmen to Spitalfields, Amsterdam, Crefeld, &c.

The Roman Catholics and the Protestants in the 16th centy. alternately committed atrocities in the town, only to be exceeded by those of 1793. In that year the people of Lyons, who had originally embraced revolutionary principles, irritated by the vexations, and horror-stricken by the tyranny, of the club of Terrorists and the municipality, had risen up in arms against them, and made prisoner, tried, and executed their president, the infamous Challier, a Savoyard, and once an abbé. In consequence 60,000 troops were collected from all quarters against this devoted town. Its defence was intrusted to about 30,000 of her citizens, who cheerfully manned the walls, resolving that their oppressors should not capture the place without marching over piles of ruins and heaps of dead. After an heroic resistance of 63 days, during which acts of the utmost bravery and scenes of the direst misery were exhibited, after all the surrounding heights had been gained by the enemy, and 30,000 persons had perished within the walls, famine began to arrest the power of all further resistance, and the town was yielded, Oct. 9, 1793.

The total annihilation of the town, and of all its chief buildings, public and private, which had escaped the 11,000 red-hot shot and the 27,000 shells hurled against it during a bombardment of several weeks, was decreed by the National Convention, in order to humble the pride of the Lyonnais. The demolition of the houses of the Place Bellecour was directed by Couthon, who, borne on a litter, on account of illness, gave the signal by striking with a little hammer on the door of each condemned house, repeating the words "Je te condamne à être démolie au nom de la loi." A mob of discharged workmen and others of the lowest classes then hastened to carry into effect these commands. Lyons, the chief manufacturing town of France, was reduced to a heap of ruins, and the expense of merely pulling down amounted to 700,000*l.*—a sum larger than that which built the Hôtel des Invalides at Paris. Thus was fulfilled the decree of the Montagne, that "Lyons should no longer exist," that "even its name should be effaced," and that of "Commune Affranchie" substituted. This decree enacted also that a column should be erected on its ruins to bear these words:—

"Lyons fit la guerre à la Liberté;

"Lyons n'est plus."

The guillotine then proved too slow an instrument of slaughter of the accused or suspected victims, condemned, with or without cause, to suffer by the mandate of the revolutionary tribunal. The bloodthirsty and infamous tyrant Collot d'Herbois therefore conducted the prisoners, by 60 at a time, under the escort of soldiers, to a field beside the granary of La Part Dieu. Here, with their hands bound behind their backs, they were fastened by ropes to a cable attached to a row of willows; and at the end of the line two cannons, loaded with grape-shot, were so placed as to enfilade the whole. At the first discharge few fell dead; a second and third, directed against the poor wretches, mutilated, wounded, and deprived of their limbs a great number, but left the greater part still alive, rending the air with their agonizing shrieks, so that the soldiers were obliged to finish the work with their swords or the butt end of their muskets. So laborious was the task, and so imperfectly performed, that some were found breathing 12 hrs. after, when their bodies were covered with quicklime, and thrown into a hole for burial. These heart-sickening massacres were repeated, by the aid of grape-shot or musketry fired by platoons of soldiers, until the number of victims amounted to 2100. Collot d'Herbois and Fouché looked on while these deeds were done; and the former, when informed, on one occasion, that a band of prisoners about to be led forth to death exceeded by two the number condemned for execution, replied, "Qu'importe ! s'ils passent aujourd'hui, ils ne passeront pas demain."

The miscreant Collot d'Herbois, exulting in his atrocities, forwarded from time to time to Paris reports of his proceedings to the Convention, from which these are extracts. He says of himself and colleague, "The sword of the law is falling on the conspirators at the rate of 30 at a time; that they have already despatched 200, and they were occupied, in the most unceasing manner, in the discharge of their functions." 3 days after he writes, "I send you a second list; the number now amounts to 300. A more grand act of justice is preparing; 400 or 500, with whom the prisons are filled, are one of these days to expiate their crimes: the stroke of powder shall purge them from the earth by a single discharge." In a vault beneath the chapel are shown about 200 skulls and skeletons, the relics of the miserable sufferers by this tyranny.

After the fall of Robespierre there was a reaction, the prisons were broken open, and 70 or 80 Terrorists were murdered. Lyons was again the scene of frightful violence in 1831 and in 1834. In the latter year the weavers in the Croix Rousse rose and for several days held possession of the town, having expelled the military, until an army could be assembled large enough to put them down, which was only effected with a loss of more than 1000 lives. In these revolts (for they were far too serious to fall under the name of riots), this ill-starred and ill-conditioned city experienced a renewal of many of the horrors, the bloodshed, and misery of the first Revolution. Many workmen were obliged to quit the town for their share in these disturbances, and settled in Switzerland. Even under a Republican government Lyons required a permanent army of 30,000 to enforce order—to do the work of police!

Lyons has also suffered at different times from floods. The flood of 1711 is still recorded. In 1840 the suburb of Vaise was nearly destroyed by the waters which covered the Place Bellecour. But the floods of May, 1856, are the most disastrous on record. The Saône and Rhône both rose and covered the Brotteaux and la Guillotière, destroying many houses with their inhabitants. Many thousands were obliged to encamp for want of house-room.

The Suburb of Perrache, between the Saône and Rhône, receives its name from the architect who conceived and executed the plan of removing the confluence of these rivers, which, before 1770, were united a little below the church of Ainay, to its actual situation. He effected this by strong embankments; and the greater portion of the land thus gained is either built over, or is prepared for building. Here is the General Station of the Railways to Paris, Avignon, Marseilles, and St. Etienne. (Rte. 118.)

In the Place Louis Napoleon is a statue of Napoleon I. by Nieuerkerk.

Until the commencement of the present century the Rhône merely skirted the city, and Lyons may be said to have been confined to its rt. bank; or, as Gray in his letters humorously describes the confluence, "the Saône goes through the middle of the city in state, while he (the Rhône) passes incog. outside the walls, but waits for her a little below."

Since that time the l. bank of the Rhône has been covered over with houses, forming the suburbs of Brotteaux and Guillotière. Several streets of fine and lofty houses are built here, and a new bridge over the Rhône connects them directly with the business quarter of the city. At the back of these new constructions an embankment has been formed, and a military canal dug, protected by forts, so as to serve the double purpose of protecting the neighbourhood from the inundations of the Rhône and the attack of an enemy. In the Brotteaux, at the extremity of the street called Avenue des Martyrs, a monumental Chapel, in the form of a pyramid, perpetuates the memory of the miserable victims of one of the worst atrocities of the Revolution.

At the extremity of the suburb of La Guillotière is an ancient castle called Château de la Motte, in which Henri IV. was married to Marie de Medicis.

The Bridges. There are 7 over the Rhône:—the Pont Morand, of wood, opposite the Place des Terreaux, leading to Les Brotteaux, named after its architect, who perished by the hand of the revolutionary assassins; Pont Lafayette (formerly de Charles X.), of wood, on stone piers; Pont de l'Hôtel Dieu, a suspension bridge; Pont de la Guillotière, between the Hôtel Dieu and la Charité, leading to the Place Bellecour, is of stone, 539 yards long: it is the oldest of all the bridges, its foundation being referred to Pope Innocent IV., 1190, though no part of the present structure is of that age. The high road to Savoy passes over it. A very curious silver buckler, bearing a representation of the Contineuce of Scipio, in relief, was found at the base of one of its piers.

The bridges over the Saône, between L'Île Barbe and La Mulatière, are 10 in number. The principal are Pont de Tilsit, a beautiful stone bridge, leading from the Place Bellecour to the Archevêché; the Pont Seguin, a suspension bridge (destroyed 1840), named after its engineer, opposite the Palais de Justice; and higher up, the Pont du Change, an old stone bridge.

The Quartiers des Capucins, between the Place des Terreaux and Croix-Rousse, and of St. Clair, are chiefly inhabited by rich capitalists and manufacturers. The former stretches up the foot of the hill of Croix-Rousse, separated from the faubourg of that name by a line of antiquated ramparts and bastions.

The fortifications of Lyons consist of 18 detached forts arranged in a circle of 12½ m. around the town, crowning the heights of St. Croix and Fourvières, on the rt. bank of the Saône, and of Croix-Rousse, above the suburb of that name; and the circuit is completed round the faubourgs Brotteaux and Guillotière. They owe their origin to the fearful insurrections of the workmen and others which took place as a consequence of the July Revolution in 1831 and 1834; and they are at least as much designed to repress intestine revolt as to withstand invasion from without. A garrison of 6000 men would suffice to defend them. The chief work, the Fort Montessay, is so constructed that its guns entirely command, and could level with the dust, the faubourg of La Croix-Rousse, the St. Antoine of Lyons, a moral volcano teeming with turbulence and sedition; while a fortified barrack on the Place des Bernardines separates it, at will, from the rest of the city.

The Croix-Rousse is principally inhabited by silk-weavers, who live in densely crowded narrow streets, where 12 to 20 families are piled one above another in the lofty houses.

Silk is the staple manufacture of Lyons; in the extent of it she surpasses every other town of Europe. The manufacture of silk was first established in Lyons in the year 1450. In variety of design, in taste, in elegance of pattern, and in certain colours, the manufactures have a superiority over the English. "They can work 25 per cent. cheaper; but the hand-loom weavers of Lyons are nearly as ill off as those of Spitalfields."—Lamg. There are no huge factories here: the master, instead of having a certain number of workmen constantly employed in his own premises, merely buys the raw material, and gives it out to be manufactured by the weavers, dyers, &c., at their own houses, by themselves and their families. The patterns are produced by draughtsmen (generally a partner of the master manufacturer), and the laying or preparing of the pattern (mise en carte) is the province of another artiste. There are about 31,000 silk-loom in and about Lyons. The silk-weavers are, bodily and physically, an inferior race; half the young men of an age for military service are exempted, owing to weakness or deformity. Of late manufactories of cotton, hardware, &c., have been established in Lyons; it is also the centre of money transactions with Switzerland and Italy.

The Conseil des Prudhommes is a commercial tribunal, composed half of masters, half of workmen, designed to settle disputes, respecting wages and such matters, between the two classes, and between masters and apprentices, in a spirit of conciliation. It is of immense service, and exists in other manufacturing towns, and might, perhaps, be imitated with advantage in England. Every workman is provided with a "livret de bonne conduite," in which particulars of his ability, industry, and conduct are entered from time to time, so that it serves as a passport for him when in want of work, provided it shows a good and steady character.

The Condition des Soies is an establishment in which the quality and goodness of raw silks brought hither for sale is tried, by exposing them to heat, at a temperature of 72½° to 77° Fahr. The weight of the silk is then ascertained, and marked by a sworn estimator, and fraud is thus prevented.

A similar establishment has been created in London.

There are several Theatres, the chief one behind the H. de Ville, another in the Place des Célestins.

The Post Office is in the Place de la Charité, at the corner of Place Bellecour.

English Church, No. 2, Rue de Pavie, Quai de Bon Rencontre, opened 1854. Service is performed on Sunday at 11h. 30m. by a resident English Chaplain licensed by the Bp. of London. It depends on voluntary contributions entirely. Strangers are entreated to contribute to its support. There are about 150 resident English merchants and artisans in Lyons.

Omnibuses traverse the town from end to end; and cabriolets and fiacres stand in the Places des Terreaux and Bellecour, and on the Quai de Retz.

Railways to Paris, express in 11 hrs.; to Avignon and Marseilles, by Valence, Tarascon, and Avignon; to Grenoble; to St. Étienne and Roanne: general terminus Quartier Perrache. To Geneva, Chambéry, and Mont Cenis: terminus in Faubourg des Brotteaux.

Steamers on the Rhône start for Vienne, Valence, Avignon, and Arles, every morning at 4 or 5 A.M., from the Quai on the Rhône (see Rte. 125). They are now principally used for merchandise.

Steamers on the Saône for Châlons, starting from the Quai (Rte. 108) every morning.

The Environs of Lyons are correctly described by Gray the poet: "The hills around are bedropped and bespeckled with country houses, gardens, and plantations of rich merchants and bourgeois." These villas are much more numerous than in the vicinity of Paris, and are very Italian in style.

L'Ile Barbe, a high rocky island in the Saône, above Lyons, nearly surrounded by escarped rocks, and connected with the banks of the river by a wire bridge, was the frequent residence of Charlemagne; and at the upper extremity is a watch-tower, on which, according to tradition, the emperor sat and contemplated his Paladins, heading his army, as it marched along the banks of the river. This castle seems not older than the 15th cent., but the small Church has a tower which looks older than the 12th. Many curious antique fragments are dispersed in the island, which is wonderfully secluded, considering its near vicinity to a great city, and little frequented save on fête-days.

ROUTE 109.

PARIS TO CLERMONT (RAIL) AND LE PUY —THE VOLCANOES OF AUVERGNE.

Paris.	Miles.
St. Germain des Fossés . . . . .	240
Riom . . . . .	268
Clermont . . . . .	277
Brioude . . . . .	320

Railway, Paris to St. Germain des Fossés by Montargis, Nevers, Moulins, 355 kilom. = Eng. m.; express trains in 7½ hrs. (see Rte. 105). Opened 1855 to Clermont, and in 1856 to Lempdes and Brioude, and will be carried by Cantal to Toulouse and to La Puy.

This line of route is interesting from the natural beauties and rich cultivation of the country which it traverses; but, more than all, for the phenomena of the extinct volcanic mountains of Auvergne, through the midst of which it passes. It proceeds nearly due S. up the valley-plain of the Allier, the chief tributary of the Loire. The upper part of this valley above Aigueperse was anciently called La Limagne, and is believed to have been once a lake basin, in which were deposited the fresh-water marls, sands, &c., which now contribute so much to its fertility. The road is described in Rte. 101 as far as

St. Germain des Fossés Junct. Stat.

[Railways to Roanne, Rte. 105; to the Baths of Vichy, about 7 m. (See Rte. 101.)]

The road, leaving the Allier on the l. at St. Pourçain, ascends the vale of the Sioule.

Gannat Stat. There is a road hence to the Baths of Vichy (Rte. 101). [About 9 m. from this is the ancient and picturesque Castle of Veauce, an old inheritance of the family de Cadier. Its situation on a lofty rock, isolated on 3 sides by ravines, is most picturesque, and it commands noble views. It has been sumptuously restored and is surrounded by terraced gardens, and shows within and without the influence of an English lady, wife of its owner. It is readily shown to strangers.]

The hill rising on the l., about 1 m. N.E. of Aigueperse, is called La Butte de Montpensier, and is composed of yellow marly limestones. There is a fine view from its top. Between it and the road is a hole which exhales carbonic acid nearly pure, so that small animals which come to drink from the pool of water which often collects at the bottom are apt to be suffocated. The common people, attributing this to the water, called it La Fontaine empoisonnée.

Aigueperse Stat. (Inn: Poste; comfortable) is the first town in the Dépt. Puy de Dôme, and in the old province of Auvergne, and is celebrated as the native place of the Chancellor de l'Hôpital, born at the Château de la Roche: his statue may be seen in the Hôtel de Ville. Its name is derived from "acqua sparsa," from the streams around it. The choir of the principal church, attached to an ugly modern nave, deserves notice as a pure specimen of the Gothic of the 13th centy.; its lofty roof is sustained by long graceful columns. Here is a painting of the Nativity, attributed to Ghirlandajo, in a stiff style (the figures said to be portraits of princes and lords of the Bourbonnais), and a St. Sebastian (?), locked up. There is also a Sainte Chapelle here, founded, 1475, by Louis, Dauphin d'Auvergne, inferior to one at Riom.

The Abbé Delille, author of 'Les Jardins,' was born here 1738.

"O champs de la Limagne, ô fortuné séjour, J'ai revu les beaux lieux qui m'ont donné le jour."

The hill of Chaptuzat, on the rt. of the road, is quarried for building-stone; the rock is an oolite. Above it, and on many other eminences throughout the Limagne, beds of a tertiary limestone occur, entirely formed of the cases of insects resembling the caddis-worm, or May-fly, incrustured by carbonate of lime, and formed into a hard travertine, called "calcaire à friganes," or indusial limestone. The cases, or tubes, are coated over with shells of Paludina, often to the number of 100 around one tube, and 10 or 12 tubes are packed within the space of a cubic inch. These insects must have inhabited the lake which once covered the valley of the Limagne.

Near Riom the country becomes interesting, and exhibits the characteristic features of the scenery of Auvergne,—a rich vegetation and beautiful verdure, produced by the abundant irrigation; a varied outline of country, with towns, castles, and villages perched on the tops of eminences commanding the Limagne.

Riom Stat. (Inns: H. du Palais; Ecu de France) is a town of 12,500 Inhab., the second in the Dépt. Puy de Dôme, in a cheerful situation, but built of dark lava from the quarries of Volvic, and paved with volcanic stones. It is encircled by boulevards planted with trees, in one part widening out into a platform called Pré-Madame, where a monument of granite has been raised to the memory of Gen. Désaix. There are 3 or 4 interesting old houses, chiefly of the Renaissance period, the greater part of the town having been built, as it now stands, in the reign of Francis I.

The Sainte Chapelle, attached to the modern Palais de Justice, is, like that of Paris, a light and lofty lantern of stone, built 1382, the piers which support the roof forming the separations between the windows. It was long divided horizontally, by a floor, into 2 stories: one converted into a law court (Cour Royale). It has really beautiful old stained windows, and several new windows inserted.

St. Amable is a curious church, which will interest the architect and antiquary. The date of the nave, the oldest part, seems uncertain. The lower arches are pointed, and rest on piers, having engaged pillars on 3 sides, but plain on the inner face; above them runs a gallery of circular arches roofed with a demi-vault, which serves the purpose of a range of flying buttresses to support the roof of the central aisle. The little sculpture employed is very rude. The choir is in the Gothic style of the 13th centy. the arches alternately pinched up and expanding. The W. front and cupola above the cross are tasteless additions of the 17th centy.

About a mile from Riom, on the W., is the village of Mosac or Mosat, whose church has been attributed to Pepin; but the only part which can be referred to the 8th or 9th centuries is the W. porch, now walled up. The nave, in the Romanesque style, seems to belong to the early part of the 12th centy., and is remarkable for the beautifully executed capitals of its columns: the only windows are in the aisle. The choir and rest of the church are of the 15th centy., and uninteresting. In the sacristy is preserved a silver-gilt shrine, in the shape of a sarcophagus, ornamented with enamels in the Romanesque style, made in the middle of the 10th centy. It contained the relics of Saints Calmidius and Numadia.

For many centuries fierce rivalry prevailed between Riom and Clermont, and they usually took opposite sides in politics.

[At Volvic, a few miles farther to the W. of Riom, are the vast quarries of lava which have furnished the stones for building that town and Clermont. The lava current in which they are excavated has issued out of the extinct crater called Puy de la Nugère. They are partly subterranean, partly open to the sky; they have been worked since the 13th centy., and give employment to the whole neighbouring population. The stone is porous, resembling trachyte, and contains specular iron in its cells; it is easily worked, and the bed furnishes blocks 20 ft. by 6 ft. in size. When first extracted, it is of a grey or slate colour, but darkens by exposure to the air; it is used for rude works of sculpture. The church of Volvic is ancient.

Volvic is built at the foot of the volcanic cone called Puy de la Bannière, on the lava current which has flowed from it, and appears to have crossed and covered that from Puy de la Nugère.

On an eminence near Volvic stands the very romantic ruined Castle of Tournoëlle, in ancient times one of the strongest in Auvergne, so that it resisted long and stoutly a besieging army under Guy Dampierre and Renauld de Forez, Archbishop of Lyons, in 1213, and again 1590, when it was defended against the forces of the League by Charles d'Apchon. The remains are accessible by a steep path, and part of them are tolerably perfect: the oubliettes, or dungeon, entered only by a small hole from above, still exist under the round tower.

There is a footpath or horse-road direct from Volvic to Clermont.]

About a mile before entering Clermont, the suburb of Montferrand, a cluster of narrow streets conspicuously seated on a limestone eminence, crowned by an old church dedicated to Notre Dame de Prospérité, is passed. It was anciently an independent town and fortress, and was called Montferrand le Fort. It was surprised and pillaged by the English, under Perrot the Béarnais, 1388. Froissart, in his Chronicles, recounts at length the story of its capture.

CLERMONT, or Clermont-Ferrand
Stat.—Inns: H. de la Poste;—H. de la Paix;—H. de l'Ecu;—H. de l'Europe: all very fair. Other Inns at Royat, about 1½ m., but very dear.

Clermont, once capital of Lower Auvergne, now of the Dépt. du Puy de Dôme, is a cheerful town, which, in consequence of improvements, has lost the gloomy character which once distinguished it, its houses, built of dull grey lava, being now whitewashed. Its principal interest is derived from its situation on a hill, composed chiefly of volcanic tuff, in the fertile Limagne, in the midst of a mountainous country, at the foot of that extraordinary range of extinct volcanoes which rear their conic or crater-shaped forms around, surmounted by the mountain of the Puy (i. e. Pic) de Dôme, whence the department is named, which, though apparently overhanging Clermont, is nearly 5 m. distant. The population amounts to 32,427, including the suburbs.

On the outskirts of the town, nearly all round its circuit, except on the N.W., runs a line of boulevards, or "places," the chief of which are the Place de Jaude, a wide oblong dusty space on which fairs are held, surrounded by houses; the Place du Tau-reau, on which a monument has been raised to Gen. Désaix, a native of Clermont; and the Pl. Delille, by which the Paris road enters the town, named after the poet, who was also an Auvergnat.

Clermont is destitute of fine public buildings: the principal edifice is the Cathedral, externally an irregular pile of dark lugubrious hue, from the black lava of Volvic, of which it is built. It suffered serious injury from the frenzy of the Revolution, being stripped of its ornaments and monuments, and condemned by the mob to be levelled with the ground, but was saved by the exertions of a citizen and magistrate, M. Verdier Latour, under the pretext that it would be useful to hold popular meetings in. It is, notwithstanding, an interesting example of the mature pointed Gothic, begun 1248, and carried on till 1265, by the architect Jean Deschamps (J. de Campis), but never completed. The interior, therefore, is all of a piece, presenting one harmonious whole, remarkable for its lightness and lofti-ness, the vaulted roof (of tufa) being more than 100 ft. above the pavement. There are fine rose windows in the transepts. The painted glass is very beautiful; that in the choir is of the age of St. Louis (13th cent.), and displays his arms quartered with those of Spain: the glass in the large window of the nave is of the 15th and 16th cents., and inferior; it has, besides, suffered from a hailstorm in 1835.

In one of the side chapels of the choir is an ancient sarcophagus of white marble, adorned with sculptures well executed.

The N. portal suffered least at the Revolution, is very richly adorned with sculptures, and deserves notice.

From the top of the tower the stranger may survey to advantage the town, and the volcanic mountains, the valley of the Limagne, and the plateau of Gergovia, the scene of Caesar's discomfiture. (See Index.)

The most ancient and interesting church, in an architectural point of view, is Notre Dame du Port, a Romanesque edifice of the 10th or 11th cent., judging from the evidence of style, but said to date from 870, and perhaps portions of the very curious crypt may be of that age. It is encrusted externally with rude mosaics. The tower above the W. door is modern (1823), but in tolerable taste: the S. doorway is surmounted by curious bas-reliefs, much mutilated, and partly hidden behind woodwork; yet Christ between two six-winged cherubims, and the Adoration of the Magi, and the Baptism of Christ, may be distinguished below. The interior possesses some modern painted glass by a native artist, M. Thévenot; and in the crypt is a black image of the Virgin, said to have been found at the bottom of the well, which is supposed to work miracles, and is resorted to by pilgrims on the 15th May.

In the midst of the Cours Sablon has been placed a fountain of elegant design in the style of the Renaissance, with some mixture of Gothic, executed 1515, for Bishop Jacques d'Amboise.

On the l. of the road to Montferrand, is the Cimetière de la Ville, in whose chapel a curious antique sarcophagus, richly sculptured, has been converted into an altar.

In the Faubourg St. Alyre, to the N.W. of Clermont, and at the foot of the eminence on which it is built, rises a remarkable calcareous spring, called Fontaine pétifiante, issuing out of a volcanic tufa resting upon granite. It resembles that of Matlock, except that its deposits are more copious and quickly formed, from the larger quantity of calcareous matter dissolved by the carbonic acid with which it is impregnated. It has deposited in the course of ages a mass of travertine or limestone, 240 ft. long, 16 ft. high, and 12 ft. wide at its termination. It has formed over the rivulet a sort of natural bridge, Pont de Pierre, which is in fact nothing more than a huge stalactite, while a second bridge is in progress, and gradually increasing. So abundant is the quantity of lime held in solution in the water, that the pipes and troughs through which it passes would be choked up with stone, were they not cleared out every 2 or 3 months. By breaking the fall of a jet of the water, and allowing its spray to descend upon any object subjected to it, such as bunches of grapes, baskets, nests, eggs, hedgehogs, &c., they become encrusted with the calcareous sediment, or petrified, as it is vulgarly called; in this way also casts may be obtained from medals, &c.

The fountain and bridge are situated in a garden, within which is a bathing-house supplied from its waters.

The Musée, or Etablissement Scientifique, a building situated on the S. side of the town within the ill-kept but beautifully-situated botanic garden, contains—1. A collection of Local Antiquities and of Natural History, particularly rich in the mineral products of Auvergne, which may be studied with advantage by the geological traveller previous to penetrating into the country, as the specimens are arranged topographically. I. The Public Library of 15,000 vols., including some curious ancient MSS., and a folio Bible of the 12th centy., illuminated with vignettes.

Here is a statue of Pascal (b. 1623), and a bust of Delille, both Auvergnats.

In a corner of the Jardin Botanique, a number of antiquities, inscriptions, fragments of columns, &c., and a head in relief of the Gallic Mercury (?), dug up in the vicinity, have been deposited here, but are very little cared for, being exposed to the weather in the open air.

M. Lecoq has magnificent collections in Nat. Hist.

The terraced walks called Place du Taureau and Place de la Pôterne command fine views of the surrounding mountains.

Clermont has been the seat of several ecclesiastical Councils: the most remarkable was that held in 1095, which may be said to have lighted the spark of the crusades in Europe, the train having been laid by Peter the Hermit. It was convoked by Pope Urban II., who presided in person over the vast assembly at the head of his cardinals, of 13 archbishops, and 205 bishops. The place of meeting is supposed to have been an open space to the rear of the church of Notre Dame du Port. Here, from a throne raised in the midst, around which were grouped the tents of tens of thousands of enthusiastic hearers, the pope pronounced that eloquent discourse which melted all to tears, and was followed by the universal shout of "Dieu le veut" (Dieu le veut); when the cloaks of red cloth worn by the noble bystanders were torn into shreds, to form the badge of the cross, then first adopted and laid on the breast of all who took the vow.

Clermont is also celebrated for its Grands Jours. The country round was inhabited by small chieftains, who committed frightful crimes, and rendered the country unsafe; and in 1665 commissioners with sufficient force were sent by Louis XIV. to seize these chieftains and punish them. The trials lasted six months, and were called les Grands Jours, and the crimes then disclosed are almost incredible.

Clermont is supposed to be the ancient Augustonemetum.

Railroads open to Brioude, and in progress from thence to Le Puy and to Cantal.

Small carriages may be hired at a moderate rate, by aid of which numerous interesting excursions may be made in the

Environs, the beauties of which can be reached only by passing over a dreary intervening space of dusty road between high walls. It is not therefore advisable to make these excursions on foot. Moreover the paths are badly marked, and it is not easy to find the way without a guide. G. Plaigny, chief guide, knows the country well.

a. To the Baths of Royat, 1 m. Omnibus every  $\frac{1}{4}$  hr. in the season.

a. Royat (Inns: H. de St. Mart; H. des Thermes; H. des Bains—all pleasantly situated near the baths), until lately a poor and dirty village, 1 m. from Clermont, which has twice been nearly swept away by inundations of the torrent which flows past it. It is built on one of the branches of the lava-current which has issued from the Puy de Gravenoire. The torrent, flowing through the valley, has cut through the bed of basaltic lava to a depth of 65 feet, exposing, at the bottom, a sort of grotto, out of which gush numerous copious springs, some of which, conducted in an aqueduct to Clermont, supply the town with fresh water. Royat is rapidly being converted into a fashionable watering-place. New houses and a bathing establishment have been built, on account of its thermal waters—temp. 95° Fahrenheit. They were used by the Romans. The Roman Baths have been rediscovered by the curé. When the workmen first cleared them out, the waters rushed in so fast as nearly to drown and parboil them. The scenery of the vale of Royat is much praised by the French; indeed its situation is one of extreme beauty, and the views fine, especially that of the Puy de Dôme. The lava-current, one stratum of which is filled with burnt corn as thick as plums in a pudding, is highly curious. The church is remarkable for its antiquity (anterior to the 11th centy.); it has a crypt supported by low columns, and a spring rises in the midst of it. In front of the ch. is a cross. The ascent of the Puy de Dôme may easily be made on foot from Royat, ascending the valley from the baths, with springs gushing on all sides from unsuspected sources, to Fontanat, where the Puy is full in view. At the foot of the Puy is a hut where lemonade is sold, 4 m. from Royat.

b. The ascent of the Puy de Dôme, the highest mountain in the neighbourhood, 4806 ft. above the sea-level, is very interesting on account of the insight it affords into the geological phenomena of the district. From Clermont it may be performed in the following manner:—You may hire a char-à-banc for 8 or 10 fr. to go and return. No carriage can advance farther than to the foot of the cone, the rest of the ascent must be performed on foot; it is practicable on horseback if the beast be sure of foot: the distance is about 8 m. to the foot of the cone, about 2½ hrs. No guide is required. A steep, but well-engineered road, commencing at the barrier, passing at first over granite and black basalt, and afterwards the more modern lava, scorix, and calcined stones, which have issued from the Puy de Pariou, leads, in about 1½ hr., to the hamlet and cabaret of la Barraque, where the road divides, the l.-hand branch leading to the Puy de Dôme and Mont Dore, the rt.-hand to the Puy de Pariou and Pont Gibaud, and passing on the l. the ruined Castle of Montrodeix. A guide may be hired at la Barraque, and the carriage may proceed nearly to the base of the Dôme. Beyond the Barraque is a very steep ascent, partly over coarse grass, mixed with bilberry bushes, partly over the bare crumbling rock of which the mountain is composed; a variety of trachyte, called Domite by the French geologists, because peculiar to this locality. It is so porous, that it retains no water on its surface, and the mountain in consequence does not possess a single spring. The summit is most easily accessible from the S., where a sort of zigzag path has been carried up its side. The Puy (pic) de Dôme rises to a height of 1600 ft. above the table-land around; it is the largest in mass and the most central of the northern group of volcanoes of Auvergne. Viewed from the W. only has it the form of a dome, but its name is said to come from dumus, the thicket which once covered its sides. From the top the eye surveys the singular range of igneous mountains, craters, domes, lava currents (called cheires in the dialect of the country), and heaps of scorix, the produce of volcanoes, which, though extinct within the period of all human tradition, were once as active as Ætna or Vesuvius, and converted the surrounding district into the Phlegrean Fields of France. In many instances the vast lava currents, flowing across the country for miles, may be traced up to the funnel-shaped craters which poured them forth. The fertile Limagne lies expanded to view, traversed by the winding Allier. On the S.W. rises the central group of volcanoes of the Monts Dore; the remainder of the panorama is somewhat uninteresting over a monotonous country. The range of hills of the Monts Dôme rises from a granitic platform, and stretches "18 m. in length by 2 in breadth. They are usually truncated at the summit, where the crater is often preserved entire, the lava having issued from the base of the hill; but frequently the crater is broken down on one side, where the lava has flowed out. Had these cones of loose sand and ashes been in existence previous to the Deluge, they must have been swept away, or greatly altered, by the power of a current of water. Had these volcanoes, again, been in activity in the time of Cæsar, he would scarcely have failed to observe them when encamped on the neighbouring plateau of Gergovia, or to have mentioned them in his Commentaries."

The experiments instituted by Pascal, to determine the weight or pressure of the atmosphere, were made on the Puy de Dôme, within view of his native town, 1648.

A chapel, dedicated to St. Barnabe, formerly stood on the summit; and the blocks of basalt, brought from a distance to build it, still strew the mountain side.

In descending from the summit, every one should visit the crater called the Nid de la Poule, Hen's Nest, at the base of the Petit Puy de Dôme, a regular bowl-shaped hollow, 294 ft. deep, and nearly the same in diameter.

Still farther to the N., the Puy de Pariou (3 hrs. walk from Clermont,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hr. from road), deserves to be ascended, because it is one of the most beautifully regular and perfect volcanic cones and craters existing in Auvergne. The sides of this bowl-shaped hollow are composed of scoriæ and pozzolana, thrown up so regularly from below, that they taper upwards into a narrow ridge, little degraded by time or by the weather. The crater is 300 ft. deep, and 3000 in circumference, measured along the brim of the bowl. It has the figure of an inverted cone. "It is clothed to the bottom with grass; and it is a somewhat singular spectacle to see a herd of cattle quietly grazing above the orifice whence such furious explosions once broke forth. Their foot-tracks, round the shelving side of the basin, in steps rising one above the other, like the seats of an amphitheatre, make the excessive regularity of its circular basin more remarkable."—Scrope.

The lava from this crater flowed down in one undivided stream, bristling and rugged on its surface, like that of a river blocked up by floating masses of ice. After descending as far as la Barraque it encountered a small knoll of granite. The lava has accumulated against this impediment into a long and elevated ridge, "which still bears the appearance of a huge wave about to break over the seemingly insignificant obstacle; but an easier issue offered itself in two lateral valleys." The rt.-hand branch "entered the valley of Villar, a steep and sinuous gorge, which it threaded, exactly in the manner of a watery torrent, turning all the projecting rocks, dashing in cascades through the narrowest parts, and widening its current where the space permitted, till, on reaching the Limagne, it stopped at a spot called Fontmore, where its termination constitutes a rock, 50 ft. high, still quarried for building-stone. From the base of this rock gushes a plentiful spring, the waters of which still find their way from Villar, beneath the lava, which usurped their ancient channel."—Scrope.

The left-hand branch "plunged down a steep bank into the valley of Gresinier, replacing the rivulet which flowed there with a black and shagged torrent of lava; entered the limits of the Limagne at the village of Durtol; and, following the course of the stream, did not stop till it reached the site of the village of Nohanent. Here, as at Fontmore, an abundant spring bursts forth from the extremity of the lava current. The springs of the valley of Durtol find a passage beneath the lava concealed among the scoriæ, which always form the lowest part of a bed of lava, and flow on in these subterranean channels till they burst forth at the limits of the lava, in the same manner that the Arveiron and other Swiss rivers issue from beneath, under the termination of a glacier. Above Nohanent, consequently, is seen the anomaly of a valley without any visible stream; and the inhabitants of Durtol are condemned in seasons of drought to the strange necessity of seeking at Nohanent, a distance of 2 m., the water which flows below their own houses. A similar phenomenon is common throughout Auvergne, wherever a current of recent lava has occupied the bed of a mountain rivulet not sufficiently copious or violent to undermine the lava above, or open a new side channel through its former bank."—P. Scrope.

"A little to the N.W. of the Puy de Pariou is the Puy de Cliersou, whose form is most precisely that of a bell, and which is curious from the numerous perforations made on its sides in ancient times for the purpose of obtaining trachyte for sarcophagi."—T. J. T.

Instead of returning from the Puy de Dôme by la Barraque and the high road, you may strike down into the Val de Fontanat to Royat.

c. The Puy de Gravemoire is composed of scoriæ and pozzolana; the latter is used in the country to make mortar, and is commonly called "gravier noir," whence the name of this hill.

d. The conical basaltic summit of the Puy de Girou, 3 or 4 m. to the S. of Clermont, is an excellent point for obtaining an extensive view over a considerable portion of Auvergne.

e. Pontgibaud is 15 m. from Clermont, on the road to Limoges, which commands a superb view from the top of the hill. Here may be seen a feudal castle of the 14th centy., which once belonged to the family Lafayette, and was visited by Montaigne; and the smelting-houses, where the argentiferous lead from mines in this neighbourhood is refined and separated. The village and castle stand on a lava-current, which has issued from the base of the very perfect and regularly-conical crater called Puy de Come. The course of this current deserves observation: descending the granite slope, it has covered the ground on which Pontgibaud now stands; then, pouring in a broad sheet down a steep granite hill into the valley of the Sioule, it has usurped the ancient bed of that river for more than a mile, and, crossing the more ancient stream of Louchadière, near Pichadoire, terminates there. The river has, in consequence, worked out for itself a fresh bed between the lava and the granite of its W. bank, and in one place has laid bare a singular basaltic colonnade, formed of jointed pillars, partly vertical, partly twisted. "In the ravine between the smelting-house and the castle is a small isolated knob of granite which separates the two great lava currents of Louchadière and Come. The former continues a short way down the rt. bank of the river, and then crosses it."—T. J. T.

At some little distance to the N.W. of Pontgibaud are the ruins of the Chartreuse de Porte Sainte Marie, while in an opposite direction, a little to the S., near the margin of the lava current from the Puy de Come, is the Fontaine d'Oule, a hollow whence issues a rivulet of water, which is partly frozen in the hottest weather of summer, but in winter preserves a temperature considerably higher than that of the outer air. "Several of the more interesting Puy's are easily accessible from the road between Clermont and Pontgibaud; and of these two may be particularly specified, viz. the Grand Sarcouy, 3799 ft. above the sea-level, composed of domite, of a striking, flattened hemispherical form, and having on its S.E. side a large artificial excavation, about 70 ft. long, 30 wide, and 35 high, from which the trachyte was quarried in ancient times for sarcophagi; and the conical Puy de Chopine, 3910 ft. above the sea, of a singularly complicated and confused geological structure, and composed chiefly of domite, granite, and basalt: the view from it is very fine."—T. J. T.

The Puy de Louchadière may be visited from Pontgibaud by the cross-road leading to Volvic.

f. The excursion to the volcanoes and baths of Mont Dore is described in Rte. 110.

g. The Puy de la Poiz, about 3 m. from Clermont on the road to Lyons, is mentioned in Rte. 112.

The Limagne, or valley of the Allier, is far more interesting above Clermont, on the way to Le Puy, than below it. Here it is truly a luxuriant garden, teeming with the most varied productions.

h. The old road from Clermont to Le Puy by Isoire skirts a lava current from the mountain Gravenoire, called Plateau de Beaumont, a very characteristic specimen of a lava stream, which, although partly covered with vines, exhibits, even to the unscientific eye, in a manner not to be mistaken, compact and porous lava, and volcanic ashes (pozzolana). Beyond rises the singular peak of Montrognon, a basaltic dyke bursting through fresh-water strata, crowned by an old castle, built by the 1st Dauphin of Auvergne, and demolished, like so many other feudal fortresses, by the Card. Richelieu. The basaltic prisms on which it is founded are the most regular which occur in this district.

i. A good road leads from Clermont, in 1 hr. 40 min., up to the plateau of the Hill of Gergovia (4½ m. from Clermont), memorable as the site of the chief city of the Arverni (whence Au-vergne), so nobly defended by the Gauls and their chief Vercingetorix against Cæsar, who was more seriously worsted here than in any other of his numerous campaigns, having lost 700 men. The **Panoramic view* from the top is one of the grandest in Europe. The hill of Gergovia is as interesting for its geology as for its history: it is a table-land, composed on its sides of fresh-water marls, capped by a sheet of basalt, surrounded by steep escarpments, absolutely inaccessible on the N. and E., while on the S. and W. it presents a slope in the form of steps, occasioned by the horizontal strata of rock composing it. "The E. part of the hill is higher than the W., and separated from it (as Cæsar remarks) by a gentle depression. The Gallic city stood probably on this eminence, a noble position for a barbaric fortress, unapproachable on 3 sides. On the W. was probably the wall which Cæsar's centurion scaled."—G. B. A. Cæsar commenced the attack with a part of his army posted on the Puy de Jussat. At the base of the eminence flows a small stream, the Auzun, whence the Gaulish garrison are supposed to have drawn water, there being no springs upon the plateau itself; and one of Cæsar's first objects was to cut them off from this supply. The hill called La Roche Blanche, surmounted by a tower of the middle ages, though called Tour de Cæsar, is conjectured to be the Gaulish post seized by two Roman Legions in order to effect that object. Cæsar's camp is supposed to have been formed on a detached and lower eminence, called Le Crest.

Excavations set on foot by the Emperor Napoleon III. have laid bare a considerable extent of walls: some mosaics, Roman coins, and Gaulish axes of flint are found from time to time, and a rampart or agger of loose stones may be traced near the margin of the plateau. In the ravine above the village of Merdogne a section of the strata composing the hill is exhibited, consisting of beds of white and greenish marls, nearly 300 ft. thick, intersected by a basaltic dyke, which has greatly altered the marl in contact with it. In the flanks of this hill also are found extensive deposits of the limestone formed of the cases of insects mentioned before.

The road to Le Puy, unlike the monotonous chaussées of most other parts of France, winds and undulates between and over varied heights, sometimes crossing a lava current or basaltic dyke, and is generally shaded from the sun by luxuriant walnut-trees. Scarcely an eminence but possesses some interest, either from its volcanic origin, or from its picturesquely-placed castle in ruins, or village, which, in this district, is almost invariably perched on the hill-top. The country is very populous as well as fertile, and intersected by numerous roads.

"The Puy de Marman, a little to the N. of Vayre, is celebrated among mineralogists for the beautiful crystallized specimens of mezo-type contained in the volcanic tuff and basalt of which it is composed. In the same neighbourhood interesting fragments of charred wood, whose bark has been replaced by mezo-type, are met with in the tufa of the Puy de la Pignette, situated a little to the N. of Mouton."—T. J. T.

Continuing the Rly. from Clermont, Coudes Stat., situated on the bank of the Allier. The castle of Montpeyroux, on an adjoining eminence, now reduced to a round tower, and some fragments of walls, belonged to Philip Augustus. "Near Coudes a variety of sandstone conglomerate is quarried for millstones. Between Coudes and Montpeyroux veins of fibrous arragonite occur in travertine, and farther down the river Allier at Corent there are plaster of Paris quarries which afford fine specimens of fibrous gypsum."—T. J. T. From Coudes through a lovely country, which keeps the attention constantly alive.

In the ravine des Etouaires, near the village of Perrier, an interesting geological section is presented. Here fossil remains of extinct quadrupeds, mastodon, tapir, rhinoceros, elephant, &c., have been found in alluvial beds, covered by volcanic conglomerates, and alternating with them. Near Vayre and at Perrier the rock has been excavated to form cave-dwellings; above Perrier rises the tower of Maurifollet.

A view of the Monts Dores rising on the W. may be obtained near Issoire Stat. (Inn: Chez Roussard, Poste), an ancient town of 5990 Inhab., situated on the Couze, a short way above its exit into the Allier. The ch. of St. Paul will interest the architect and antiquary, as a characteristic specimen of Auvergnat architecture, as it prevailed in the 10th and 11th centuries. It is in the Romanesque style, ending in 5 apses at the E., surmounted at the cross by a tower, the upper part of which, and also the W. front, are modern. The exterior of the wall at the E. end is singularly decorated with rude mosaics, and with 12 medallions, representing the signs of the zodiac, let into the wall under the cornice. Under the window of the N. transept are 2 bas-reliefs, representing the Angel appearing to Abraham, and the Sacrifice of Isaac. In the interior the arches are semicircular, the side aisles and transepts being covered with a stone roof, forming the quarter of a circle, and thus serving as a buttress to support the tower and central walls of the nave. There is an extensive crypt under the choir. It has been restored with care and some taste since 1858.

The chancellor Duprat was born here. The chief manufacture is that of copper kettles.

After passing St. Germain Lembron, and leaving on the l. the coal-mines and steam-engines of St. Florine beyond the Allier, we quit the volcanic country, and the Dépt. du Puy de Dôme, to enter that of la Haute Loire, shortly before reaching Lempdes Stat. (Inn: Poste), situated on the rt. bank of the Alagnon. Here the rly. by Aurillac to Bordeaux and Toulouse will branch off (Rte. 114).

Massiac Stat. Coach to Aurillac.

Brioude Stat. (Inns: H. de Brioude, good cuisine; H. du Nord). The rly. does not at present extend beyond this.

The very fine Romanesque ch. of St. Julien is curious for its semicircular E. end, with chequered patterns in a coarse mosaic of particoloured stones on the outer walls, and round its 5 projecting apsidal chapels, of elegant design. The interior is lofty; the arches of the choir are pointed, and the capitals of the columns adorned with foliage: the arches of the nave are round, and the capitals of the columns supporting them are partly very grotesque, partly display a nearly pure classic character. At the W. end, which is almost bare externally, is a sort of inner vestibule, or narthex, supporting, on low arches, 3 chambers, one of which, the chapel of St. Michel, is decorated with curious antique frescoes of the 13th centy. The canons of the ch. of St. Julien the Martyr anciently bore the title of counts.

[The very curious Ch. of La Chaise Dieu is distant 18 m. from Brioude, nearly due E. The monastery of the Casa Dei, now ruined, and attached to a dilapidated little village (Cheval Blanc is the inn), is situated at a considerable elevation, on a high mountain. It was founded in the 11th century by St. Robert, a canon of Brioude, and became the most opulent convent in Auvergne. Of this original structure nothing exists, except, perhaps, an outer gateway. The monastic buildings were destroyed at the Revolution. The Ch. alone remains, and is a noble edifice in the pointed Gothic style, begun 1343, chiefly at the expense of Pope Clement VI., a native of Chaise Dieu, who laid the first stone, and is buried under a mutilated monument, surmounted by his effigy, wearing the triple crown. The carved woodwork of the 158 stalls in the choir is much and deservedly admired. On the N. wall, which encloses the choir, are traces, now nearly defaced, and obliterated by moisture, of a Dance of Death, painted in fresco, probably in the 15th centy. Here are preserved some most curious ancient tapestries, executed probably at the beginning of the 16th centy., woven partly with gold thread. The tomb of another pope, Gregory XI., and of an abbot, in the S. choir aisle, deserve notice. Two sides of the cloisters remain tolerably perfect, and are of a good style. Contiguous to the ch. rises a tall square donjon tower, the only remains of the ancient fortifications which surrounded the monastery. It is surmounted by a bold cornice.]

2 m. beyond Brioude, on the road to Le Puy, at the wretched village of La Vieille Brioude, the Allier, here running in a deep and rocky bed, is crossed by a stone Bridge of a single arch, which was long celebrated as being the widest in span of any known, measuring 181 English ft. and 90½ ft. in height, but now surpassed by the stone arches of Turin and of Chester (200 ft. span). It is a very noble arch, and constructed of Volvic lava. It replaces a more ancient bridge (b. 1451), of equal dimensions, which fell down in 1822. Immediately beyond the bridge, the road begins to ascend, and continues over a hilly and uninteresting country, almost constantly ascending, for many leagues. A little beyond the poor village of 21 St. George d'Aurat, the château de Chavagnac is passed, at the distance of 1½ m. on the l. of the road: it is remarkable as being the birth-place of Gen. Lafayette.

By a long, though gradual ascent, which the diligence takes 3 hours to surmount, the Montagne de Fix, separating the valley of the Allier from that of the Loire, is crossed. Measured at the village of Fix, this road is 3197 ft. above the sea-level, and one of the highest carriage-roads in France.

18 Limandre.

We are now again upon volcanic rocks, belonging to the basin of Le Puy. The small river Borne, which runs into the Loire below Le Puy, is crossed, and the road is carried down its valley, passing, at a distance of 4 m. from Le Puy, under the black rock of basaltic breccia, escarped and inaccessible on all sides but the N., which bears the ruined castle of Polignac, seat of that noble family, the elder branch of the name, whence sprang the Cardinal, a diplomatic servant of Louis XIV., and the Prince Jules de Polignac, the well-known minister of Charles X. in 1830. It was pulled to pieces during the fury of the Revolution, and all the lands sold; but the mouldering and picturesque ruins, which still bristle on the top of the rock, were repurchased by the family. They consist of rude but strongly built walls, often double and treble, with flanking towers at intervals, surmounted by a square donjon tower. Part of the pile of buildings which served as dwellings may be as old as the 12th centy. There is little to be seen except an enormous mask, rudely carved in granite, of a bearded human face, with a wide orifice for the mouth. According to the tradition, a Temple of Apollo occupied the summit of the rock before the castle, and from this mouthpiece (somewhat after the fashion of the Bocca della Verità at Rome) oracles were delivered: hence some have gone so far as to derive Polignac from "Apollinis Arx." (!) Sunk in the platform of the castle is a well, called Puit de l'Oracle, from a tradition that the oracles were delivered from it through the mask, which is said to have covered it. At a depth of 20 feet this well communicates with a vaulted chamber, supported on circular arches, resting on square piers, designed doubtless as a cistern, into which rain-water was conducted by pipes, now stopped up. About 25 paces from the well is the abyme, a hole about 40 ft. deep and 15 wide, cut in the rock, probably designed as a storehouse. The ch. of Polignac, at the foot of the castle rock, is an ancient Romanesque edifice.

Upon a sudden turn of the road, here bordered by basaltic columns, a very striking view is presented of Le Puy and its volcanic rocks; the "spiry pinnacle" of St. Michel's, resembling more an artificial obelisk than a natural eminence, and Corneille, starting up from amidst the masses of buildings, while on the rt. appears Espailly (see below).

19 LE PUY.—Inns: H. des Ambassadeurs, best, good and comfortable, but make your bargain;—H. de l'Europe, more moderate;—H. du Commerce. Le Puy, anciently capital of the Velay, and now of the Dépt. de la Haute Loire, with 14,924 Inhab., is, at a distance, one of the most striking, uncommon, and picturesque towns in France. Excepting the broad modern Boulevard, through which the high roads from Clermont and St. Etienne pass, which stands on level ground, the buildings and narrow streets of the old town are carried up a steep slope, impassable by carriages, surmounted by a towering, table-topped mass, called Rocher de Corneille. This rock is a volcanic breccia, resting on a calcareous base. Its summit, vertically escarped, and mouldering in the form of turrets, is crowned by a colossal bronze Statue of the Virgin of Le Puy, 50 ft. high, erected 1860. It is formed of 213 cannon taken at Sebastopol, given by the Emperor. It consists of 120 pieces fastened together; it weighs 150 tons, and was designed by M. Bonnessieux. A staircase runs up the interior. Light and air are obtained through openings in the drapery.

Far more remarkable, though less lofty, is the Rocher de St. Michel, an isolated rock of basaltic tufa, which, from its needle shape, gives the name de l'Aiguille to the suburb in which it stands. It rises from the margin of the stream of the Borne to a height of 265 ft., with a thickness of 500 ft. at its base, and 45 or 50 on its top. It is a fragment of the vast bed of volcanic rock once covering the country around. The rocks of Corneille and Polignac are also relics of it; and, because harder than the rest, all three have resisted the erosive processes of rivers and the atmosphere, which have scooped out into valleys the intervening portions, and washed away the débris. Faujas de St. Fond absurdly supposes the Aiguille of St. Michel to have been projected by a volcanic eruption from below, and consolidated in its actual form. The sides of this truncated cone, or sugar-loaf, are nearly vertical, and its top is surmounted by a small chapel, which just fills the platform, dedicated to Michael, the saint who loves such airy sites. This building, rendered accessible by a winding stair partly cut in the rock, is in the Romanesque style, and was constructed at the cost of a dean of the cathedral in the 10th centy. Its Moresque portal, a circular arch under a trefoiled arch, is ornamented with curious sculptured mermen, bas-reliefs, and chequered stone-work, composed of black scoriae, white sandstone, and red tile, in the style of marqueterie. The interior presents a low irregular choir, supported by short pillars with carved capitals.

From the top of the rock a good view is obtained of the vine-clad hills covering the slopes of the valley, dotted over with white country-houses, boxes, and pavilions, built in the midst of the vines, also of the white escarpments of the tertiary strata, laid bare here and there.

Near the foot of this rock stands an octagonal building which has long passed for a heathen Temple of Diana, though destitute of any pretensions to such a title, being, in fact, a Christian edifice in the Romanesque style, and perhaps originally a baptistery: some say a chapel of St. Claire. A small apse projects from its eastern side, and it is entered by doors on the N. and W. It has an octagonal roof, with a hole in the centre, resting on columns placed in the angles. It may have been built by the Templars, who had property in this suburb.

A road slopes upwards from St. Michel, under the Rock of Corneille, past the Hospital, and the little turning box, in which enfans trouvés are deposited after ringing a bell to announce their arrival, through the "Rue de la Raison," to

The Cathedral, which rears its singularly streaked W. front high over the other buildings. The regular approach to it is up the steep streets leading from the market-place to the long flight of steps under the huge cavernous vaulted portal, which is prolonged in a sort of corridor beneath the 3 W. bays of the ch. As the slope of the hill denied to the architect level ground sufficient to extend his church to the W., he was forced to raise an artificial platform for it upon these vast substructions. The doorway is flanked by 2 pillars of Egyptian porphyry. It is a heavy ungainly building, in the Romanesque style; its interior not improved by the repairs and stucco applied at the expense of Louis XVIII. The oldest parts of the church are the choir, including 4 compartments of arches on either side, and the transepts; each compartment is cross-vaulted; the probable date is the 10th or 11th centy. This church is chiefly remarkable for a miracle-working image of Notre Dame du Puy, which for many centuries has attracted thousands of devout pilgrims, who still repair hither, though in less number than formerly. Among its visitors in former times are numbered several popes, and the following kings:—Louis VII., Philippe Auguste, Philippe le Hardi, Charles VI. and VII., Louis XI., Charles VIII., and François I.: its visitors at present do not exceed 4000 annually, and are chiefly of the lower order of peasants. One cause for this falling off may be that the existing image deposited over the high-altar, a black group of the Virgin and Child with shining faces, is a modern work, executed by a sculptor in the town, whose name is well known, from recollection of the original, which was destroyed at the Revolution. The original Notre Dame du Puy, believed to have been made by the Christians of Mount Lebanon, or, according to some accounts, by the prophet Jeremiah himself, and brought to Europe at the time of the Crusades, was of cedar-wood, singularly swathed round with bands of papyrus glued to it, and partly inscribed. Upon this the features of the face, of negro tint, the flesh of hands and feet, and the draperies, were painted in distemper, in a rude style, probably by some artist who copied from Egyptian models.

A marble tablet on one side of the church records the names of 20 priests of the diocese slaughtered in the Revolution, 1793, 4, and 8.

The monument raised to the Constable Du Guesclin; whose body reposed some time at Le Puy, after his death at Châteauneuf de Randon, and whose entrails were buried here, has been restored in a chapel on the N. side of the Gothic Church of St. Laurent, in the lower part of the town. His effigy represents him in armour, except the helmet, lying on his back, his hands raised in prayer. The head is modern, but copied from a cast of the original, destroyed by the Baron des Adrets and his followers, and is considered to have some claim to be looked on as a portrait.
[France.]

The collections in the Musée are of considerable interest as local curiosities in art and nature. Besides some mediocre paintings (among them Henrietta Maria, queen of Charles I., a copy from Vandyke; a faint but curious portrait of Henri II., in the style of Janet; and a good landscape by Huysman), are some Roman antiquities, a bas-relief of a Stag and Boar Hunt, found on digging the foundations of the Evêché; also 3 Genii or Cupids fishing (one with 2 dolphins of very fair execution), from Margeaix; a cippus hollowed out into a sarcophagus, bearing figures of arms, cut in relief, among them a cross-bow (?); cast of a bronze hand, with a Greek inscription, recording a treaty of peace; a cast from the so-called Mask of Apollo, at Polignac (see p. 407); one or two groups of Gothic sculpture, nuns, female saints, &c.; carvings in ivory, in Byzantine and Gothic styles; a portion of the inscribed papyrus in which the image of N. D. de Puy was swathed, preserved at the time the image was burnt, at the Revolution; some old furniture; an abbot's seat, carved in the style of the Renaissance; and an arm-chair of Gothic work, bearing the arms of Polignac. Those who take interest in the geology and mineralogy of the district will find the collections here not only the best part of the whole museum, but one of the best arranged and best named cabinets which any provincial museum in France possesses, under the inspection of M. Bertrand de Doue, the able expositor of the geology of Velay. The formations of La Puy en Velay, the Vivarais, and the Ardèche may be studied in distinct series of specimens, topographically arranged, side by side with a series of the volcanic rocks of Vesuvius, for the sake of comparison.

Here are preserved the bones of rhinoceros, hyæna, deer, &c., found at St. Privat d'Allier, between two layers of basaltic lava; a discovery of great interest, as proving the recent date at which the volcanoes of the Velay were in activity; also fossil bones of Palæotherium, of Anthracotherium Velauum, so named by Cuvier from the locality where it was found; of hippopotamus, found in the terrain du transport near Polignac; and fossil fruits from the coal-measures at Longeac.

The manufacture of lace gives employment to the females of the lower classes in and about the town; and some specimens are shown at the museum of great beauty.

About 1 m. W. of the town is the village of Espailly, surmounted by another castle-crowned rock of volcanic breccia. Charles VII. was residing here during the occupation of France by the English (1422), when news was brought of the death of his father, and his scanty train of followers proclaimed him King of France in the ancient fashion, by raising him aloft on a shield, at the same moment that the infant Henry VI. of England was proclaimed, with all pomp, at Paris, the successor to the French throne. There are good displays of basaltic columns here, called Les Orgues d'Espailly; and on the opposite side of the river, in the eminence of Denise, several coarse varieties of precious stones, sapphires, zircons, and garnets, are found in the basalt, and in the sands of the neighbouring streamlet of Riou Pezzouliou. Fossil remains of Anthracotherium and other extinct animals have been found in the marly limestone near Espailly.

The Castle of Polignac is a walk of about an hour, not far from the road to Clermont.

The Roche Rouge, an isolated mass of basalt, rising abruptly out of the granite rock to a height of 60 ft., about 3

m. to the E. of Le Puy, will interest the geologist. Its name is probably derived from the colour of the lichens which grow on it. It is nothing more than the expanded portion (renflement) of a basaltic dyke, which, from superior hardness, has resisted the action of the weather, while the softer granite around has been disintegrated. The dyke is continued on either side in a vein often not more than a foot wide.

Diligences daily to St. Etienne, in 10 hrs., and to Langogne.

The views of the town from the surrounding heights from the roads to Espailly, Polignac, St. Etienne, are very striking. Mr. Scrope prefers the extensive panorama from the more distant Mont d'Ours, and observes, with some geological enthusiasm,—“There are, perhaps, few spots on the globe which offer a more extraordinary prospect than this. To the eye of a geologist it is superlatively interesting, exhibiting in one view a vast theatre of volcanic formation, containing igneous products of various natures belonging to different epochs, and exhibited under a great diversity of aspect.” The scenery on the banks of the Loire, between La Puy and La Poute, is very fine.

The traveller bound from Le Puy to the Volcanic District of the Vivarais and Ardèche may take the diligence to Pradelles, 5 hrs., and thence strike across the country, by very hilly but good roads, in 8 hrs., to Aubenas, by Thueyts (Rte. 118, 121), or, more directly, by a mule-road to Montpezat; in the course of which he may visit the Mt. Mezene, the highest volcanic mountain in Central France, presenting some wild and singular views. He may also pass the curious mountain called Gerbier des Joncs, at the foot of which rises the Loire. There is scarcely any accommodation on this route, which can hardly be performed in a day; and the people are rude and forbidding.

ROUTE 110.

CLERMONT TO MONT DORE LES BAINS.

a. Grande Route, 53½ kilom. = 33 Eng. m. Diligences creep, in 9 or 10 hours, miserably slow. 35 to 40 frs. for a carriage and pair.

b. Petite Route, hilly and not good for carriages, 42 kilom. = 27 Eng. m., 6½ hrs.

It is a hilly journey by either of these routes, beginning to ascend from the Barrière of Clermont to La Barraque (see Rte. 109), then leaving the Cone of the Puy de Dôme on the rt. and the ruined castle of Montroudeix, its walls formed of basaltic prisms, on the l.

c. Train to Coude or Issoire, thence omnibus to Champeix, and voiture to Les Bains, stopping on the way to see St. Nectaire and Murol.

d. For pedestrians in one long day, by Lac Query and Rochefort.

e. A new and better road by Lake Query, which passes the remarkable scenery of Les Roches de la Thuillière and Sanadoire.

a. The road reaches the summit-level of the chain of the Monts Dôme at a spot called Moréneau, between the Puys de Leschamps, covered with wood, and de Montchié, an extinct volcano, furnished with 4 craters, which has been cut away at the base to give passage to the road; and trunks of trees charred have been disclosed by the section of the trachytic rock. Descending the opposite slope, it crosses the stream of the Sioule, here in its infancy. Before reaching le Pont des Eaux, the turreted Castle of Cordés is for some distance conspicuous. At St. Bonnet a basaltic clinkstone is quarried, used for roofing slate, fences, &c.: the slabs ring like a bell when struck.

29 Rochefort.

The ruined castle, on the summit of a basaltic rock, once belonged to the Dauphins of Auvergne.

The road continues to ascend through a hilly and bleak country, often blocked up by snow in winter. About 3 m. beyond the village of Laqueuille the road to Mont Dore branches off to the l., out of that to Aurillac by Muriac, and, crossing another ridge, descends upon the village Murat le Queire, in the valley of the Dordogne, and proceeds up the rt. bank of that stream to 24 Mont Dore les Bains (see below).

b, la Petite Route, is the same as a, until reaching the village Laschamp, 3 miles beyond La Barraque; or, on foot, more directly and agreeably by Thadde. As there are few villages, the route may most conveniently be traced by the Puys which are passed, viz. Gravenoire and Charade on the rt.: La Vache and Las-solas, also on the rt., are extremely well preserved, and are completely thrown open on the S.W. side, towards which they have diverted their lava streams. There is here quite a circle of craters, among which the Mont Jughat and Mont Chat are conspicuous.

21 Randanne (a roadside Inn, with one bedroom). In the vicinity, at the foot of the Puy de Montchal, lived the patriotic philosopher le Comte de Montlosier, who settled himself down here, after his return from exile in 1816, in the midst of an unproductive wilderness, the home of his fathers having been destroyed in the Revolution, and, by the enlightened agricultural improvements which he introduced, redeemed a large tract from unproductive barrenness, and "bid the desert smile." He is buried in a small Gothic chapel, erected on a pretty spot within his estate; the Roman Catholic clergy having refused interment to his remains within consecrated ground, on account of his writings against the Jesuits.

A road just practicable for a char leads in about 3 m. on the l. to the sheet of water called Lac d'Aïdat, formed by the volcanic current from the Puy de la Vache, damming up the course of 2 rivulets. On its borders Sidonius Apollinaris lived, and an inscription on the wall of the curious early church marks the place of his interment. "To the rt. is the Puy de la Rodde, a fine crater opening to the S., and commanding an extensive view of the Puys, the streams of lava, and the mountains of Mont Dore. Abundance of fine crystals of augite are found on its surface."—T. J. T.

After attaining the table-land of Baladaud, which commands an extensive view, but is itself bleak and uninteresting, it is an uninterrupted and steep descent into the vale of the Dordogne. It is clothed with wood, and interesting. At Quereilh the traveller turns abruptly to the l., and enters the valley enclosing

21 Mont Dore les Bains. Inns: H. de Paris, chez Chabory, Gabriel:—H. Chabauy, kept by Chabauy aîné; both very good;—H. Bellon (Poste), good;—H. Boyer;—H. de Lyon (chez Baraduc), cheaper. Charge, living en pension, 8 to 10 frs. a day. There is a table-d'hôte at most of them at 10.30 and 5.30. The visitors, about 600 in number, are very sociable, but there are no regular balls or concerts. The rivers and lakes furnish trout, and the mountains roe venison. The people here, little accustomed to English, are disposed to make exorbitant charges, experimentally, trying to hit the mark of the standard which English are made to pay elsewhere. This small watering-place is a village at a height of 3412 ft. above the sea-level, in an upland valley, the cradle of the river Dor-dogne, surrounded by an amphitheatre of volcanic hills, their sides clothed with verdant meadows or black pine forests, but torn and gashed at intervals by ravines and gullies, down which numerous streams dash in small cascades from the bare table-land above. The village lies at the distance of about 2 m. from the Pic de Sancy, the highest summit in central France, and the culminating point of the Mont Dore, that vast volcanic excrescence which has broken through the fundamental granite rock, and, stretching from this point to a distance of 8 or 10 m., measures 18 leagues in circumference. It is seamed and fissured by deep valleys radiating in all directions from the common centre, the chief of them on the N. side being the valley of the Dordogne, or of Mont Dore. The crater from which this eruption burst forth is not distinctly marked, owing to the dilapidations in its sides caused by volcanic convulsions, by the wearing down of torrents, and even by the effects of the weather; but there can be no doubt that we see the traces and remains of the lava walls which surrounded it in "the elevated peaks which still bristle over the circus-like gorge occupying the very heart of the mountain. This was probably the site of its central crater, but now, branching off into deep and short recesses, it forms the upper basin of the principal valley, and the recipient into which 2 mountain rills, the Dor and the Dogne unite, at the source of the noble river which henceforward bears their joint names."—Scrope, 98.

The mineral springs, on account of which Mont Dore is resorted to from July to the beginning of September, are 8 in number, 2 being cold, the rest of a temperature of 116 to 113 Fahrenheit; they issue out of the trachytic rock, at the foot of the eminence called Plateau de l'Angle. They are alkaline, and are efficacious in complaints of the lungs, when unattended with inflammation, in disorders of the stomach, and in rheumatism. They are conducted into a very handsome bathing establishment, built, like the rest of the houses, of a trachytic lava, resembling that of Volvic, but obtained from a neighbouring quarry. Bath with linen, 1 fr. 50 c. The most copious source, La Madeleine, is also used for drinking, and large quantities are exported in bottles. It, as well as that called Le Bain de César, is enclosed in Roman masonry, proving that bath-loving people to have made use of these warm springs. Numerous architectural fragments, columns, &c., very curious, in a rich semi-barbarous style, have been discovered here, supposed to have belonged to a temple whose foundations exist, and go by the name of Le Panthéon.

The angler may catch some trout in the Dordogne below the Baths.

A char-à-banc holding 4 to 6 people costs 15 frs. a day. Lacombe has good horses. Capital, sure-footed mountain horses may be hired at the rate of 3 frs. a day; also guides, and chaises-à-porteurs, with bearers for ladies, for the numerous interesting excursions in the vicinity of these baths. In front of the bath-house is a pretty green promenade, encircled by the windings of the Dordogne, over which a suspension bridge has been thrown, conducting to a path which leads to the base of the Capucin, the isolated, cowl-shaped rock, conspicuous from all parts of the valley, named from a detached pinnacle, jutting forward on one side, said to resemble a monk in a hood.

The direction of the valley of the Dor from its head, at the base of the Pic de Sancy, to a short distance below the baths, is nearly due N. and S. In its E. side, not more than  $\frac{1}{2}$  an hour's walk above the baths, a singular breach or fissure is perceptible, worn away by the descent of a stream called La Grande Cascade, which has cut through the rock, and exhibits, in the face of the precipice, an instructive geological section of a series of beds of trachyte, tufa, and basalt. Vast blocks have been detached and hurled below, so that the stream, after its leap of nearly 80 ft., is almost hidden from view.

The Valley of Mont Dore is a region of woods and waterfalls; the latter, though not of any great elevation or grandeur, add an interest to the many pretty scenes around; by far the finest is the Cascade de Quereilh, shooting perpendicularly downwards; a miniature Staub-bach.

a. At the S. of the valley is the gorge called Vallee d'Enfer, excavated out of a volcanic rock, consisting of scoriæ and other fragments, bearing the marks of fire, over which rise the naked summits of the Pic d'Aiguiller.

The breccia is in many places penetrated by vertical dykes of dark porphyritic trachyte; and such a dyke forms the separation, called Les Fernes, between the gorges of Enfer and La Cour. Similar dykes are seen traversing the precipices of the Pic d'Aiguiller exposed to the view at the end of the Val d'Enfer.

b. The ascent of the Pic de Sancy may be made in 2 hours from the baths, on foot or horseback, or in a chair; proceeding to the head of the valley, past the gorges d'Enfer and de la Cour, and turning to the l., near the ravine of La Craie, where a steep ascent begins, through a fir wood, in the depths of which lies the Cascade du Serpent, passing the marsh in which the Dore rises. The Pic (6171 ft. above the sea-level) is reached by passing the high Col between it and the Puy Ferrand. The distant objects seen from it are the volcanic group of the Cantal to the S., and the Monts Dôme to the N., while near at hand yawns a labyrinth of valleys and gorges, with peaks bristling around on all sides; and numerous small lakes glitter in the depths, among them the crater Lake de Chambon.

c. To the Lac de Pavin. Following the path to the Pic de Sancy, as far as the Col mentioned above, but there turning l. From the Col to the lake is 5 hrs. to and fro.

Another very interesting excursion is to the castle of Murol, situated to the E. of the baths, crossing the mountains by the Puy de Diane and the pretty little Lac Chambon. There is a road thither directly over the Mont Dore by la Croix Morand, but, as it requires to be repaired every spring after the melting of the snow, inquiry should be made whether it is passable. Murol, the village, is built at the base of the red scoriaceous volcanic hill called Puy de Tartaret, upon a lava current which has issued from it, at a period long after the formation of the volcanic rocks of the Mont Dore. Homely and rustic accommodation at the public-house kept by Morin.

The castle, one of the largest relics of feudal times in France, and a very picturesque object, crowns the summit of a detached eminence topped with basalt, affording a platform just large enough to hold the fortress. It consists of a double enclosure, an outer wall flanked with bastions, dating from the 16th centy. and an inner circular wall, surmounted by machicolations of the 15th. In the midst rises a round tower, or donjon, commanding the country far and near, and affording a most interesting view of the plain and valley around, covered with lava vomited forth from the Tartaret. Some of the existing constructions of the castle are as late as the 18th centy., and none appear older than the 15th; the first mention of it occurs in 1223, when its seigneur was named Jean Chambre Chevarier.

The Puy de Tartaret deserves the attention of the geologist; it consists of loose scoriae, lapilli, and fragments of granite, which have been forced up through the fundamental granite rock. "It has 2 deep and regular bowl-shaped craters, separated by a high ridge, and each broken down on one side;" the lava current which they have furnished first spreads over the plain, then, contracting, confines itself to the valley, whose sinuities it follows as far as Neschers, a distance of 13 m., occupying the channel of the former river. Near Neschers and Champeix it assumes a regular columnar form. Neschers is a picturesque village, and the curé, the Abbé Croizet, has a collection of fossils.

Rather more than an hour's walk (4½ m.) from Murol, passing partly over the lava from the Puy de Tartaret, and near the waterfall Des Granges, one of the prettiest in Auvergne, lies St. Nectaire (Senneterre) (Inns: H. Mandon, best; H. Boette, near the Dilig. office), a village possessing hot Baths and an incrusting spring, much more remarkable than that at Clermont, which issues from the granite and deposits large quantities of lime. The curious Romanesque ch. is a very ancient and unaltered specimen of the style, no part of it apparently older than the 12th centy. It is surmounted at the cross by an octagonal tower, and terminates at the E. end in 3 apses. The capitals of the pillars in the choir, carved with bas-reliefs of Scriptural and legendary subjects, are curious. In this church are preserved a curious Byzantine crucifix of copper gilt, and a reliquary, in the form of a bust, of embossed copper gilt, also Byzantine, and probably of the 11th centy. The Castle of St. Nectaire, the cradle of a noble family, whence sprang 2 marshals of France, has been destroyed. Here are a curious natural grotto and remains of Roman Baths. On the rt. of the road to Neschers, a little way out of St. Nectaire, is the arch of a Roman bridge, the piers of which stand on the lava of Tartaret.

On the heights above the Bains de Boite, not far from St. Nectaire, are some Druidical remains, consisting of a dolmen or altar formed of the unhewn blocks of the granite found in the country. On the summit of the hill of Cornadore are extensive excavations supposed to be of great antiquity, formed, perhaps, by the Gauls as store-houses, or places of refuge; they are now used as sheep-sheds.

Another interesting excursion, especially for the geologist, may be made to the Roches de la Thuillière and Sanadoire, 1½ hour from Mont d'Or. They may also be seen from the splendid road to Clermont, by Randanne and Royat. The columnar feldspar porphyry of the Roche Sanadoire is curious, and the view fine. 1½ hour more takes the traveller to the Lake of Servières, from which he may gain the great road to Clermont by descending the valley of the Sioule by Vernines (old castle) and St. Bonnet.

ROUTE 111.

MONT DORE LES BAINS TO LE PUY, BY ISSOIRE.

The traveller who wishes to go from Mont Dore les Bains to Issoire, and thence to Le Puy or elsewhere, need not go round by Clermont. He may ride across the hills, a journey of about 7 hours, or of 10 hours if the ascent of the Pic de Sancy be taken en route, which is quite practicable. [“The horse excursion from Mont Dore to St. Nectaire, including the ascent of the Pic de Sancy, is very agreeable and interesting in moderately fine weather. I made it 1858; and had for guide Joseph Garrigue. I paid him 29 fr. 50 c. for a day’s service, his horse, mine, and return of himself and horses to Mont Dore. The ascent of the Pic de Sancy has been described (Rte. 110). Just at the summit it is very steep, and we had to mount the last few hundred feet on foot. There is an obelisk at the summit, facing due N., S., E., and W., which was one of the principal stations for the trigonometrical survey of France. There is also a large wooden cross. From this point we descended some distance, and then mounted the Puy Ferrand, of nearly equal altitude to the Pic de Sancy. Hence there is a beautiful view down the valley of Chaudefour. As you look along the green valley, with its walls of rock and mountain, gradually descending and opening out to the distant plain far off, you might think yourself surveying the valley of Grindelwald from the Wengern Alp. A long broad expanse of heath, and steep descent, lead to the Château de Murol (Rte. 110); and leaving the old Byzantine church and old town of St. Nectaire, perched on their high, bare rock, to the l., you come to the diligence road, and inn at St. Nectaire en bas (Rte. 110).”—W.] There is also a very fair road direct to Issoire, and a voiture may be hired at Mont Dore for the journey, which will take about 8 hours, including stoppages. Diligence, in summer, to Issoire. The road passes by the Château of Murol and the baths of St. Nectaire (Rte. 110), both of which may be visited, especially as the latter is the usual resting-place for the horses. After quitting St. Nectaire, the road passes through Sailhens, where there is a picturesque waterfall, and leaves Verrières on the rt., at which latter place it enters a defile called the Valley of Montaigut, about 3 m. in length, the scenery of which is very striking, the carriage-way being cut along the side of a torrent, and hemmed in by precipitous rocks of great height, on one side mostly covered with wood, on the other bare and rugged. The scenery of this pass is well worth the attention of the traveller, and, though perhaps not equal to some similar defiles among the Alps, is certainly of a very high order. About two-thirds down the pass, upon the top of the rocks to the l., stand the ruins of the Castle of Montaigut, and at the end of the pass the village of the same name. At the small town of Champeix the road turns to the S., and, ascending a hill, passes by Pardines on the l., where are visible the remains of a very remarkable landslip, which took place June 25th, 1737, destroying almost the whole village and many of the inhabitants. The vast fragments extend nearly a mile from the crag whence they fell. It is well worth the traveller’s while to mount to the top, and look down on the immense fragments and the fissures in the upper part of the rock, which did not actually give way. From this spot also a very beautiful panorama of all the Auvergne mountains, including the Puy de Dome and the range about Mont Dore, may be obtained. About 2 m. from Issoire the road passes Rouge Perrier, where, in the rocks to the l., are a great number of caverns, many of which are inhabited. The ruins of the tower of Maurifolet are seen above the village.

Issoire Stat. } Rte. 109.
Le Puy. }

ROUTE 112.

CLERMONT TO MONTERISON, BY THIERS.

Diligence daily. (?)

The road out of Clermont runs nearly due E., passing on the l. the Puy de la Poix, an eminence of basaltic tufa, having on the N. side a spring of bitumen, or mineral pitch, which issues out of the soil with a source of water.

15 Pont du Château, a prettily situated town, named from a bridge over the Allier, by which our road crosses it. "About  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. above the bridge, on the rt. bank of the river, there is an interesting geological display of fossiliferous freshwater limestone strata, alternating with calcareous beds containing volcanic substances."—T. J. T.

The Château of Beauregard, a little on the l. of the road, was formerly the country seat of the bishops of Clermont.

13 Lezoux, a small town on the verge of the Limagne, has an ancient church.

The Castle of Ravel belonged to Philippe le Bel. Our road is hilly, threading a part of the chain of the mountains of Forez, which separate the Allier from the Loire.

12 Thiers (Inns: Poste;—H. de l'Univers, ancien de l'Europe; not good), an industrious manufacturing town, built on the top and slope of a peaked granitic hill, at whose base the Durole flows in a deep rocky bed, turning many paper-mills and forges, where various articles of cutlery are wrought, the staple manufacture of the town, giving employment to a large portion of its 13,751 Inhab. The town, so picturesque at a distance, with its houses rising one above another, on nearer approach is found to consist of dirty lanes; but from the upper part of it, especially from the high terrace, fine views are obtained over the Limagne and the distant chain of the Monts Dôme. Here also is situated the antique church of St. Genes, a Romanesque building, chiefly of the 12th centy., though the vaults of the roof are newer: the end of the S. transept is ornamented with coarse mosaics. More curious to the antiquary is the church Du Montier, in the lower part of the town; the E. extremity of the choir has been referred to the 8th centy.

A portion of the old castle remains.

The road after threading a bold and steep gorge for about 4 m. is carried along the edge of a precipice called Le Cordon. The views over the rich plain of the Limagne, to the range of the Monts Dôme in one direction, and of the chain of the Forez in the other, are very fine.

14 La Bergière.

13 Noiretable, a village at the foot of the high Montagne de l'Hermitage.

12 St. Thurin. Through a narrow valley.

15 Boën (Inn: Poste; tolerable, clean beds), a dirty village.

Montbrison, (Population 7000), stands at the base of a lofty and precipitous rock, from the top of which, or from the tower of the neighbouring church, as some say, the ferocious leader of the Calvinists, Le Baron des Adrets, compelled his Roman Catholic prisoners to leap, to their certain destruction. When one of the condemned, after twice approaching the brink, faltered in taking the leap, the tyrant exclaimed, "Two chances are too much." "I'll wager that you will not do it in ten," was the ready reply; and, it is said, saved the waverer's life. The Cathedral is a Gothic building (1205), and contains the tomb of its founder, Guy IV., Comte de Forez. The Salle de Diane, once the chapter-house, is decorated with curious armorial bearings. (Inns: H. du Nord; du Centre.) From Montbrison it is 10 m. to Montrond on the Roanne and Lyons Rly. (Rte. 119).

ROUTE 114.

CLERMONT TO TOULOUSE, BY THE CANTAL AND AURILLAC.

Rly. to Lempde, 40 m. Coach to Capdenac, 65 m. Rly. thence to Montauban, 105 m.

The road is the same as Rte. 109. The Rly. may be followed as far as Lempde Stat., where it turns to the rt., ascending a long hill as it quits the town. By another hill, du Grenier, you descend in zigzags to 18 Massiac (Dépt. Cantal), where you turn to the left out of the St. Flour road, by a very pretty branch line carried up the vale of the Alagnon. This new road lies through scenery of uninterrupted beauty and interest, passing the picturesque castle of Merdogne, perched on a crag of basalt.

[Or the Rly. may be taken to Brioude (Rte. 109), the roads joining at Murat.]

22 Murat.—Inn: Chez Dolly; tolerable, excepting the dirt. Fine trout here and elsewhere in the Cantal.

Murat is a dirty and antiquated town of 2655 Inhab., in the upland valley of the Alagnon, here bare of trees, but surrounded by hills of uncommon appearance, capped by basalt. One of these rises immediately behind Murat, in a tall cliff called Roche Bonnevie, composed of lofty and regular basaltic pillars, 30 to 50 ft. long. The castle on its summit was razed by Louis XI., after he had put to death its owner, Jacques d'Armagnac, 1477.

Opposite the town is another remarkable hill, also topped with basalt, on which stands the pilgrimage chapel of N. D. de Bredom.

Soon after quitting the town, the convent of St. Gal, now an hospital, is passed on the l., and the Castle of Anterrosches on the rt. An excellent road is carried up the valley of the Alagnon, constantly ascending, amidst cliffs and precipices of granite. Near the Pont de Pierre Taillée, a bridge thrown over a stream which falls in a pretty cascade, a good geological section of the trachyte and tufa has been exposed. Above this, the fine fir forest of Lioran, which clothes the upper part of the valley, commences. The additional steepness of the valley near its head has hitherto been surmounted by a series of tourniquets or zigzags; but in order to avoid this, as well as the snow which blocks up the highest part of the road, frequently for weeks and months in winter and spring, a Tunnel is carried through a saddle-shaped ridge, which divides the waters of the Alagnon from those of the Cère, a little to the E. of the highest point of the old road, and about 400 or 500 ft. below it. This Tunnel is driven through the trachytic rock for a distance of about 4593 ft. (1400 mètres); it is nearly 18 ft. high, ascends slightly in the centre, and terminates a little below the village of les Chazes. On emerging from it, the Puy de Griou, a pointed, wedge-shaped peak of white rock, with a stream of débris descending from it, is seen on the rt.: and the Plomb de Cantal, a boss like a camel's hump surmounting a precipice, rises on the l. Those, however, who are content merely to pass through the tunnel will miss altogether the grand and striking scenery of the vast volcanic amphitheatre, through the midst of which the old road is carried, in proximity to the sources of the Alagnan and Cère.

The traveller, whether geologist or merely a lover of picturesque, will be well rewarded by making the ascent of the Puy de Griou, which may be effected in about an hour from the hamlet of les Chazes, even without a guide. It is fatiguing from the extreme steepness of the slope; but the only difficulty is in surmounting the bare crest of white clinkstone, covered with loose fallen masses, which rattle down under your feet into the depths below. But even here a sort of path has been formed, over the scanty grass tufts springing up between the stones. The summit itself is a mere crest only 3 or 4 ft. wide and 20 yds. long, plunging precipitously down on all sides. The Puy de Griou rises in the midst of an irregular circle of precipices, supposed by geologists to have been the fiery mouth or crater whence the volcanic rocks of the Cantal were erupted, and whence they spread for 15 or 20 m. around, from this centre as far as Aurillac, Murat, and St. Flour. It is also supposed that, at a later period, the volcanic forces acting from below, at the same point, burst through these deposits of trachyte, tufa, and basalt, fracturing the strata with radiating cracks like those in a starred pane of glass, and that these cracks, gradually widening, became the valleys of the Alagnon, Cère, Jourdanne, Dienne, &c. The circuit of precipices which composed the walls of this crater is broken by gaps formed by the openings of the different valleys radiating from this point like the spokes of a wheel. These walls are most perfect on the E. below the basaltic hump called Plomb de Cantal, the highest summit in the district, 6095 ft. above the sea-level; on the N. in the Puy Mary, 5459 ft.;

and on the W. in the Puy Chavaroche. Through the gaps between them the eye ranges down the vistas of the valleys over an extensive horizon of plain and distant hills. The dimensions of this crater greatly exceed those of any in Auvergne, as it is more than 6 Eng. m. in diameter. Within and beneath its bounding walls are rounded slopes, wooded or covered with turf, forming the lining of the crater, and presenting a pleasing picture. Quite at the foot of the Puy de Griou is a remarkable kettle-shaped hollow, covered with the brightest verdure, and dotted over with 2 or 3 cabins, and with herds, for it is the best piece of pasturage in the district. From its shape it might be mistaken for a minor crater, hemmed in by wooded eminences. It is called le Font du Vacher.

Quitting the volcanic amphitheatre at les Chazes, we commence the descent of the valley of the Cère, which is far more picturesque in its scenery than that of the Alagnon, but is best seen in ascending, as the forms of the mountains at its head lend to the views their most striking features. The first village, St. Jacques des Blats, produces excellent cheeses of goat's milk, called cabeçons. The numerous projections on either side of the valley conceal the villages from view until you are close upon them. The river cuts through a rocky bed, and the road, skilfully engineered, is carried in terraces hewn out of the trachytic rock along the edge of deep precipices, the most remarkable of which, called Pas de Compain, terminates within a few hundred yards of the village of 26 Thiézac, where the Poste (Tête Noire), though most forbidding externally, by reason of its dirt, can afford 2 clean beds and a tolerable supper, with trout; for which and a breakfast only 5 fr. are charged. Below Thiézac calcined flints shattered by heat, like unannealed glass, may be seen embedded in the trachyte rock at the road side.

The most strikingly picturesque scene in the whole valley is at a spot called Pas de la Cère, a little way above the solitary projecting rock (Rocher de Murat), rendered conspicuous by the single round-headed lime-tree which crowns its summit. Here the valley at once expands considerably, and makes a deep descent or step, and the river has forced for itself a passage, at a great depth below the road, in a fissure lined by smooth walls of rock, and nearly shrouded by a luxuriant growth of trees. The rocks towering above the road imitate the forms of old castles. The little town of Vic (Vic-en-Carladès, or Vic-sur-Cère) is the chief place in the very picturesque valley. (Inn: Chez Viallette.) Close to it there are mineral springs of acridulous water, received into a bathing establishment. 1 m. out of the town, at the roadside, stands the Château de Comblat, belonging to an ancient and loyal family settled here for ages, the present owner being the Comte Charles de la Baume. At Polminhac is a far more picturesque castle, towering over the road, a fit subject for the artist's pencil. The valley of Vic, here widening out into a small plain, covered with meadows and corn-fields, is yet enlivened by a pretty distribution of wood and hedgerows, amidst which rise numerous châteaux and modern country houses, indicating that the proprietors reside on their estates. At this point our road quits the vale of the Cère, gradually ascending in a sloping terrace cut through the white tertiary limestone, containing flints, in appearance closely resembling the upper chalk of England, though of a very different age, which has been disturbed and baked by the trachytic rocks. Turning the shoulders of the hills, we enter the valley of the Jourdanne, a tributary of the Cère, at the mouth of which stands

27 Aurillac (Inn: Trois Frères; best and good), chef-lieu of the Dépt. du Cantal, and anciently one of the 6 good towns of la Haute Auvergne, a dull town of 9886 Inhab., without objects of interest, in a tame and bare valley watered by the Jourdanne. The churches, convents, and palace of the abbot were destroyed by the Huguenots, who took the town, 1569, by assault, and kept it for a year: the existing public buildings are modern and commonplace. The Castle of St. Etienne, rising on a rock above the town to the W., is said to have belonged to the ancestors of St. Géraud (d. 918), the patron of the town: it was held by the abbots, and now belongs to the bishop of Clermont, but is not worth visiting.

The chief manufactures carried on here are of copper vessels and coarse lace.

The infamous Carrier, the author and inventor of the Noyades at Nantes, was born, 1756, in the village of Yolet, close to Aurillac.

The road to Figeac, crossing the level verdant valley of the Cère, and the river itself, mounts into a hilly district of gneiss and mica slate rocks, barely covered with heath. From the high ground fine views are obtained of the volcanic group of the Cantal.

27 Cayrols.

A very long and winding descent, doubling the shoulders of the hills, and diving deep into the recesses of the glens, leads down a wooded valley to 18 Mauers. Another hilly tract intervenes before we reach

24 Figeac Stat. (Inn: Poste), a town of 7197 Inhab., in the Dépt. of Lot, lying snugly at the bottom of a small valley, so shut in by steep hills that the high roads are obliged to make the most singular and circuitous contortions in order to reach it. The town, whose naturally obscure name has become familiar through its illustrious citizen Champollion, who was born here, and to whom a monumental obelisk has been erected at the water-side, contains a great number of antique houses and 2 curious churches. The abbey Church of St. Sauveur, in the lower part of the town, consists of a Romanesque basement, with a later pointed superstructure, of the 15th centy., and a modern front of the 19th. The choir, however, seems almost entirely of the 11th cent. Attached to the S. transept is a small chapter-house, resting on pointed arches.

On an eminence, above the town, stands Notre Dame de Puy, a church of the 11th centy., though much altered, in the form of a basilica, ending towards the E. in 3 apses. At the bottom of the choir is a very fine altar screen of wood richly carved and ornamented, a masterly work of the early part of the 17th centy., judging from its style.

The Château de la Baleine, now Palais de Justice, fortified and moated, also deserves attention.

The Rly. from Périgueux to Montauban reaches Capdenac, near Figeac, and there is a branch to Rodez (Rte. 92), by St. Christophe.

A high table-land of limestone, bounded by very abrupt slopes, separates Figeac from the valley of the Lot. After reaching its summit by a steep ascent, the old road to Villefranche passed near a singular stone pillar, or obelisk, rising on the brow of the hill above Figeac. Its use and age are equally unknown. Some consider it to have been a beacon: it was more probably a landmark to designate the boundary of some jurisdiction. There is a similar pillar on the other side of Figeac. From the high ground a view is obtained, on the l. of the town, of Capdenac, on the rt. bank of the Lot, supposed by Champollion to be the ancient "Uxellodunum," besieged by Cæsar, and mentioned in his Commentaries. The Dépt. Aveyron possesses a coalfield of some importance; also deposits of iron. It is worked at St. Aubin, Deceizeville, and Cranzac. In the pit of Les Etuves the coal occurs in a bed 50 ft. thick, and is quarried out in open day.

Villefranche Stat. (Inn: Grand Soleil). This town of 9540 Inhab., on the Aveyron, was one of the Bastides, or Free Towns, built in the 14th centy., and retains its original plan. Its principal building is the large Collegiate Church, in the pointed Gothic style of the 15th and 16th centuries, standing in a market-place surrounded by arcades. Its W. façade, though bare of ornament, is imposing from its proportions, and is surmounted by a lofty tower, supported by obliquely set buttresses, at the base of which a porch, furnished with triple arches, gives entrance to the interior.

There are many ancient houses of the 15th and 16th centuries, very picturesque in their architecture, in the principal street. "In the suburb beyond the river stands the Hospital, formerly a Carthusian convent, the buildings of which are preserved nearly entire, including a good flamboyant church and the refectory, with rich pulpit, and 2 cloisters—the smaller one very rich."—J. H. P.

[The coach-road went through Caylus (Inn: Poste), a town of most picturesque character, both in itself and in its situation, buried as it were in the deep recess of a valley. In the midst, its castle, rising on a rock, towers above the houses clustering round its base; and by its side rises the church spire. Opposite the W. door of the Ch. is a remarkable house of the 14th centy.; the front curious and well preserved.]

The Railway follows the course of the Arveiron.

St. Antonin Stat. (Inn: H. de Commerce; homely, but clean), a small town with a pretty H. de Ville, chiefly of the 12th centy., well restored under M. Viollet-le-Duc. There are a number of old houses.

[To the E. of St. Antonin is

Cordes (Inn on the top of the hill, good; not so the one below, H. de Commerce), a curious little town on the top of a steep sugar-loaf hill, which no antiquary should pass without ascending. The old fortification and gates remain, and within them a number of elaborate and well-preserved houses of the 13th and 14th centuries.]

Montricour Stat.

Negreplisse Stat., &c.

Montauban } described in Rte. 72.
TOULOUSE }

ROUTE 116.

CLERMONT TO TOULOUSE, BY ST. FLOUR,
THE BATHS OF CHAUDES AIGUES, RODEZ, AND ALBY.

385 kilom. = 238½ Eng. m.

Rly. to Rodez by Figeac, partly completed.

The route is identical with Rte. 114 as far as 18 Massiac (Cantal), where it turns to the l. away from the road to Aurillac, and reaches, by an ascent requiring 1½ hr. to surmount, an elevated plain called la Pageole, formed by a great basaltic plateau.

10 La Barraque is a solitary post-house, surrounded by a few farm-buildings, in a desolate spot.

About 5 m. short of St. Flour, a good view of it, and of the volcanic group of the Cantal beyond, is obtained.

19 St. Flour (Inns: Chez Aubertot, tolerable; supper, bed, and coffee cost 3 fr. 5 sous. H. de France).

St. Flour, the 2nd town in importance of the Cantal, is strikingly conspicuous at a distance, owing to its elevated position on the top of a table mount, whose platform is of basalt. The high road from Clermont to Montpellier passes through a suburb at its base; but the upper town is rendered accessible for carriages by a road carried in winding terraces cut into the basaltic rock, and laying bare a regular natural colonnade near the crest of the hill. Excepting its singular and picturesque situation, bounded on 3 sides by escarped precipices, the town, consisting of narrow streets and houses built of basalt, and containing 6464 Inhab., is deficient in attraction. Its Cathedral, the chief edifice, is a Gothic structure, not remarkable, dedicated 1496, but not finished till 1566; its towers, demolished in 1593, have been recently rebuilt. The roof is finely groined, and rests on piers without capitals.

From a little terrace behind the Cathedral, from another behind the Séminaire, and from the Promenade, or Cours Chazeret, occupying the neck of land by which the town is alone connected with the adjoining high ground of the Planèse, views may be obtained over the country and distant hills, but they are arid and bare, and over the contiguous valley watered by the Arder, on whose banks the suburb, the most busy part of the town, is planted. The basaltic rocks in the neighbouring mountains are covered with the lichen orchil (orseille) used in dyeing, which is collected and largely exported hence.

St. Flour was anciently a very strong fortress, and withstood many sieges from the English in the 14th centy.

At this point the road to Chaudes Aigues and Rodez separates from that to Montpellier; a malleposte from Clermont follows the latter through St. Chely, Marvejols, and Milhau.

The road to Chaudes Aigues traverses for a considerable distance the elevated basaltic plateau called la Planèse. The volcanic group of the Cantal mountains is visible for a long time on the W.

On the way to Chaudes Aigues, but considerably to the l. of the road, lies Alleuzes, mentioned by Froissart under the name Louise, a castle which belonged to the celebrated robber-chief of the 14th centy., Aymerigot Marcel, whence his band used to sally forth to pillage on the highways. A little f-ther in the same direction is Montbrun, another castle, which was taken and held for the English, 1357, by John Chandos, constable of Guienne.

The approach to Chaudes Aigues is by the steep hill called Côte de Lanneau, where the road has been terraced through rocks of gneiss and mica-schist, whose contortions are laid open in sections, at the edge of ravines and precipices. After passing the ravine called Saut du Loup, from a fanciful resemblance in the rock to a wolf's head, it descends into the valley or gorge of the Truyère, a tributary of the Lot. That river is passed on a handsome stone bridge.

33 Chaudes Aigues (Inns: the best is Chez Fabre, recently rebuilt. H. Felgère, furnished with baths).

This is an old but rustic-looking town of 2351 Inhab., planted in a narrow and picturesque gorge, which about 3 m. below opens into that of the Truyère. The mineral waters, from which it has obtained some resort as a watering-place, are almost pure warm water: they issue out of the slate-rock, and are 4 in number. That called Source du Par is the hottest spring in Europe, except the Geysers in Iceland, having a temperature of 177° Fahrenheit, and is one of the most copious sources in France; the others, de Felgère, du Ban, and de la Grotte, vary in heat between 135° and 162° Fahr. The waters are taken in baths, and are drunk, being considered efficacious in rheumatism, swellings of the joints, and some cutaneous disorders, though scarcely impregnated with any mineral particles. They are also turned to various domestic and economic purposes: they have the property of discharging most rapidly the grease from sheep's wool, and a vast number of fleeces are sent hither from the Dépt. Aveyron to be washed. From the month of Nov. to April the hot water is used for warming the town, being conducted in pipes into some of the houses, called in the patois of the country Maison Caudo; and it thus saves the inhabitants the cost of many tons of coal or whole forests of firewood: the equal distribution of the waters is watched over by the police. The hot streams are also partly employed for cookery, for boiling eggs, prepared soups, and scalding pigs. They have also been turned to the artificial incubation of chickens with considerable success.

There is no object of interest in or near the town except the waters. A ruin at a short distance, near the chapel, is called le Fort des Anglais; indeed, the English are said to have captured the town in the 14th centy., in the 2 incursions which they made, in 1357, under the command of Robert Knollys, and in 1387. A large portion of the inhabitants of Chaudes Aigues migrate every winter to Paris, to obtain employment in various menial offices, as water-carriers, décroisseurs, &c.—a practice common among the lower orders throughout Auvergne. From Chaudes Aigues it is possible to ascend on foot the Plomb de Cantal and descend on Thiézac (p. 418), but this cannot be accomplished in a single day.

Scarcely a human habitation occurs on the long stage from Chaudes Aigues, except the poor hamlet of Lecalme, where the road enters the Dépt. Aveyron; a hilly road.

32 Laguiole, built on the slope of a basaltic hill, trades in the excellent cheese made in this district.

The road skirts on the l. a valley, in whose recesses, once shrouded by forests, stood the venerable and wealthy Bernardine Monastery of Bonneval, now entirely swept away. The descent into the fertile and verdant valley of the Lot is very pleasing. Above the winding course of the river, which is bordered with wooded and vine-clad slopes, rise the escarped peaks crowned with the ruined castles of Caumont and of Roquelaure.

24 Espalion (Inn: Chez Aigalenz; tolerable) is a prettily-situated small town, residence of a sous-préfet, on the Lot. There is nothing of interest in the town itself, but in its vicinity the 2 castles already mentioned, and a curious chapel in the cemetery of the village of Perse. Pop. 4253.

The road to Rodez ascends out of the valley of the Lot after crossing it, under the castle-crowned height of Caumont. From a distance of many miles the traveller discerns the picturesque towers of 31 Rodez (Inns: H. du Midi; best. Ville de Paris; good. H. des Voyageurs. Des Princes), chef-lieu of the Dépt. Aveyron, a town of 9685 Inhab., and occupying a commanding site on an escarped peninsula, surrounded on 3 sides by a curve of the Aveyron, which flows at a depth of 150 ft. below. The tongue of land, which alone connects it with the neighbouring plain, is traversed by the road from Paris and Espalion; from all other sides the town is accessible only by steep ascents.

The Cathedral, so imposing and conspicuous at a distance, will probably not altogether justify the impression it has produced on a near approach, though it is of large size, and possesses some elegant details. It was founded 1274, but carried on slowly through the 2 following centuries, and never finished. The W. end is destitute of entrance, because fitted up internally with a high altar as well as the E. end. The entrances are at the sides, and, though mutilated, display some rich ornaments; near the N. transept rises the belfry, the pride and boast of Rodez, 265 ft. high, consisting of a square base supporting an octagonal summit, richly ornamented in the upper part with florid tracery. It is surmounted by a statue of the Virgin, and was finished 1531.

The interior of the church, 110 ft. high, rests on piers without capitals, and the style of its decorations resembles the perpendicular of English Gothic. At the entrance of the choir is a fine Jube (rood-loft), which, though mutilated, exhibits workmanship of surprising beauty, in the delicate sculpture of its curled foliage. A part of the screen intended to surround the choir is of like beauty. The woodwork of the stalls and bishop's throne in the choir are of good execution, and were well preserved until painted recently. One of the side-chapels contains a fine altar-screen of wood, elaborately carved with bas-reliefs, arabesques, and ornaments partly Gothic, partly classic, in the style of the 16th century. The whole is painted and illuminated. The partition screen to this chapel is of rich open work in stone, flamboyant in its style. The woodwork of the organ-loft, a tomb in the form of a sarcophagus, adorned with bas-reliefs of the 9th centy.; another tomb of Bishop Guirbert, 14th centy.; an altar-table of white marble, 6 ft. long, with Byzantine ornaments, 10th centy., now used as an altar-screen, and painted with a figure of the Virgin, —also deserve attention.

The town abounds in antique houses of the 15th and 16th centuries, and contains some of perhaps a still older date. In the Place d'Ômet there is a house charmingly decorated, in the style of the Renaissance, with arabesques, medallions richly framed, and in the upper story with a range of fantastic consoles.

Terraces run round the town upon the line of the old fortifications, and afford agreeable views, though the country round Rodez is not particularly attractive, the valley of the Aveyron being bare, and not very fertile.

Rodez was the Segodunum of the Romans, and capital of the Gaulish tribe the Ruteni, whence comes its present name.

Fromage de Roquefort, the choicest cheese which France produces, which was sent to ancient Rome, and was enthusiastically praised by Pliny, is made with ewe milk, in the mountains of La Lozère, about 28 m. E. and S. of Rodez, in the district around St. Rome, St. Afrique, St. Georges, and Milhau. About 10,000 cheeses are made annually. The village of Roquefort, where are the principal cellars, is situated near St. Afrique, in the midst of the pastures of Larza, which support more than 100,000 sheep. It occupies the summit of a steep hill—a perfect cheese citadel—honeycombed with caverns cut in the fissured limestone, in which the cheese is kept perfectly cool through the heats of summer.

Railway to Montauban by St. Christophe (see Rte. 92).

[The Valley of Marcillac, beginning at Salles Compteaux, about 5 m. N. of Rodez, forms an agreeable contrast to the barren district immediately around that town. This beautiful green dell, gushing with springs and waterfalls, covered with trees and orchards, is excavated out of a high plain destitute of vegetation, which must be crossed to reach it. At the head of the valley rises an old castle, near which a copious spring bursts forth. Following this valley past Marcillac (5 m.) along the banks of the Dourdou for about 12 m. below that town, you reach Conques, a small town half hidden in a rocky ravine, in the midst of the wildest mountains of the Rouergue, scarcely accessible at some seasons, owing to the badness of the roads. It owes its origin to an ancient abbey, whose site it occupies, but the buildings of which have all disappeared, except the Church of St. Foy, constructed to all appearance at the beginning of the 11th centy. by Abbot Odalric. It is entirely in the Romanesque style, with semicircular vaults and arches; it terminates at the E. in 3 apses, and is surmounted at the cross by an octagonal tower more modern than the rest (14th centy.). The W. end is flanked by 2 towers; the central portal is ornamented with a curious bas-relief in the tympanum, representing the Last Judgment, divided into 3 horizontal friezes; in the centre, Christ within the Vesica piscis; on his rt. the good, on his l. the wicked; above, angles; below, on one side, the gates of Paradise, with bolts and a huge lock, and the dead rising from beneath their grave-stones; in the centre, below Christ, an angel and devil weighing souls; on the other side, the gate of hell, an enormous open jaw, into which the devil is thrusting the condemned. Each group and portion of the relief is designated by inscriptions in Leonine verses. The figures are coloured.

The Treſor of the ch. contains the following curious and valuable relics of ancient art, which at the Revolution were intrusted to the care of different inhabitants of the town, and were most carefully preserved, and religiously restored by them when the political storm had passed away. An ancient reliquiary, called Charlemagne's A, from its triangular form, and the tradition that it was given by that monarch to the abbey; it is of silver gilt and partly enamelled, and set with polished gems and some antiques; at the base are 2 little figures of gilt bronze, supposed to be less ancient than the upper portion. A statue of St. Foy, 18 inches high, of silver gilt, and studded with precious stones and antique gems, cameos, &c.; a Byzantine enamel of the figure of a saint, on a plate of copper; a silver crucifix of beautiful workmanship; a square slab of red porphyry in a frame of silver, covered with heads of Christ, the Virgin, and Saints in niello. There are also some tapestries of the 16th centy.

About 3 m. below Conques the Dourdou falls into the Lot.]

The high road from Rodez runs through

26 La Motte. Inn: Chez Nave.

30 Farguette.

At Carmeaux a coalfield is worked, and a railway runs from it to 22 Alby (Inns: H. Desprats, very good and moderate; H. des Ambassadeurs; du Nord, good) — an ancient city, chef-lieu of the Dépt. of the Tarn, in the midst of the flat but fertile plain of Languedoc, watered by the river Tarn—has 12,594 Inhab. Its buildings are of brick, as is the case throughout the plain of Languedoc; the ramparts are thrown down and planted, and, especially on the side next the new Quartier de Vigan, there are extensive walks, avenues, and gardens, partly on the site of the ancient lists (les Lices), where tournaments were held.

The **Cathedral of St. Cecile* is the chief building in the town; it is a noble Gothic edifice of brick, founded 1282, and its choir not completed till 1512. The tower at the W. end, raised by Louis d'Amboise, 1475, is 290 ft. high and of curious construction. The S. porch, of 3 open arches, greatly enriched with mouldings and tracery, has lost the vaulted roof which covered it, but is a very fine late Gothic morceau. It is approached by a flight of steps. The nave, without transepts, and unsupported by pillars, is 88 ft. wide and 98 ft. high. The choir is separated from the nave by a rood-loft (jube) of extreme beauty of design, and elaborate delicacy of execution in its Gothic tracery, foliage, &c.; the enclosure of the choir is of equally rich workmanship. But the most striking feature of interest is the profusion of fresco paintings of scripture subjects,—Last Judgment, &c., covering the entire roof and walls, which escaped destruction at the Revolution; portions in the vaults are untouched, and of the utmost freshness and beauty, on an azure ground, the work of Italian artists, 1505. In some of the side chapels, and near the entrance, are paintings of a still earlier date (14th centy.), and in a style resembling that of the German schools. The stone carvings of the choir, consisting of elaborate tabernacle work with a profusion of statues, were executed for Cardinal d'Amboise by a company of itinerant masons from Strasburg.

The Préfecture, formerly the Episcopal Palace, but at a still earlier period the residence of the counts of the Albigeois, is, in part, a castellated edifice of brick with much Gothic enrichment, at the margin of the Tarn, on its l. bank. Its terraced garden, overlooking the river, is pleasing.

The Ch. of St. Salvi presents some architectural features of interest.

Some manufactures are carried on here of coarse linen cloths, candles, and tools, files, scythes; also of wood (pastel), which has been made here from a very early period. The chief commerce is in grain; the plain of Alby being one of the richest corn countries in France.

Alby has given its name to the sect of dissenters from the Ch. of Rome, the Albigeois, who abounded in the district during the 12th and beginning of the 13th centuries, and who were condemned as heretics by a council held here, 1254, and soon after nearly exterminated at the siege of Beziers. (Rte. 126.)

Alby is the birthplace of the unfortunate sea captain and circumnavigator of the globe, La Peyrouse.

The little Ch. of Lescures, on the opposite side of the river, is quite a model of the Byzantine style of the 11th centy. as it exists in this part of France.

Alby is now joined to Carneau by a short railway, which will be continued to Lexos on the line from Montauban.

At Saut de Sabot, about 3 m. off, the course of the Tarn is intercepted by rapids of considerable descent, by the side of which a furnace and forge for the manufacture of steel is established.

The Castle of Castenau de Levi, on the rt. bank of the Tarn, is a picturesque object. The Tarn is crossed at the village of Marsac.

21 Gaillac stands on the rt. bank of the Tarn, in a country producing abundance of wine. Pop. 8100.

23 Pointe-Sainte-Sulpice.

16 Montbert.

15 TOULOUSE. Rte. 72.

ROUTE 118.

LYONS TO NISMES, BY AUBENAS AND MENDE.—RAILWAY TO ST. ETIENNE.
—ARDÈCHE AND CÉVENNES.

220 kilom. = 136 Eng. m.

Railroad from Lyons to St. Etienne,

56 kil. = 35 Eng. m. Trains go 4 times a day in 3½ hours, returning in a little less; the line is not well made, the jolting is great, and the carriages are small and dirty; stoppages are frequent at the numerous villages near the line. It was opened 1837. It is carried through more than a dozen tunnels. Private carriages cannot be taken. Its chief use is to supply Lyons with coal from St. Etienne. Perrache terminus. The rly. is carried over the Gare, or safety dock for barges, opening into the Saône, and crosses the Saône itself just above its junction with the Rhône, by the Pont de la Mulatière, and thenceforth skirts the rt. bank of the Rhône as far as Givors, sometimes close to the river, sometimes separated from it by low meadows and rows of plantations of willows, which intercept much of the view.

See Map of Rhône, Rte. 125.

Oullins (Stat.) village is surrounded by country seats of Lyonesse manufacturers; in its churchyard Jacquard, the inventor of the loom named after him, is buried. The line is carried through several small tunnels and cuttings, past La Tour de Meilleraye Stat., the villages 7 Irigny, 3 Vernaison (Stat.), and Grigny, before reaching Givors.

5 Givors (Stat.), a dirty and smoky town, abounding in manufactories, especially of glass bottles, on the rt. bank of the Rhône, at the point where it receives the stream of the Gier and the Canal de Givors, which transports much coal and ironstone. Pop. about 5000.

Omnibuses go hence to Vienne (Rte. 125), 5 m., in about an hour, corresponding with the railway trains.

The railroad here quits the side of the Rhône, and ascends the valley of the Gier, keeping that stream and the canal on the rt. hand. Industry prevails everywhere; manufactories occur at every step, and envelop the country with their dense smoke.

A tunnel nearly 1 m. (1500 mètres) long is driven through a hill of the coal-measures.

5 St. Romain Stat.; 4 Burel Stat.; 4 Couzon Stat.

4 Rive de Gier (Stat.), a very flourishing and increasing manufacturing town of 12,000 Inhab., on the rt. bank of the Gier, at the commencement of the Canal de Givors, situated in a productive coal-field, which is the chief source of its prosperity. More than 40 coal-mines in the vicinity are provided with steam-engines. There are very large glass-works here, and a manufactory of steel carried on by Englishmen, Messrs. Jackson, which produces the best steel in France. Here are made beaks for iron-plated vessels.

Here are also manufactories of steam-engines and other machinery, and some silk-mills. Lyons is chiefly supplied hence with fuel; but Marseilles, and the towns on the Rhône and Saône and Muhlhausen, also receive fuel in large quantities from this coal-field, the most important in France, from its extent and position. Above this, owing to the steep inclination of the railway, horse-power was at first employed; but a new and more level line is now cut to admit of the use of locomotives.

4 Grande Croix Stat.

6 St. Chamond Stat., another manufacturing town, where ribbons and staylaces are made. More than 1200 frames (métiers à la poupée) are employed in weaving staylaces, which are largely exported. Here are besides numerous iron furnaces, foundries, and forges, and several silk-mills. Pop. 8246. This place has been much injured by the railway not passing through it. Between St. Chamond and St. Etienne runs the ridge separating the waters flowing into the Mediterranean through the Rhône, from those which go to the Atlantic through the Loire.

Another tunnel, about 1 m. long, traverses a hill under the considerable village of 7 Terre Noire (Stat.), immediately before reaching St. Etienne. It is very narrow and low, affording space for only one line of rails. The latter part of the line is an inclined plane, which the train descends by its own impetus in going to Lyons.

4 St. ETIENNE Station in Rte. 119.

The diligence takes 12 hours from St. Etienne to Le Puy. A railway is in progress. The road is very hilly and varied: crossing a long ridge out of the valley of the Furens, it continues to traverse a district very populous, and abounding in manufactures as far as the coal-measures extend. At Le Chambon are manufactures of cutlery, nails, saws, &c. At 12 Firmigny there are many coal-mines, some of them, worked after the fashion of quarries, open to the sky, in a coal-bed more than 32 feet thick; also glass-works, ribbon and silk mills. The valley is bristling with chimneys, coal-heaps, manufactories; but they cease before you reach St. Ferreol, just within the borders of the Dépt. de la Haute Loire. The road is admirably engineered, and partly cut through the granite rock in a terrace winding round the shoulders of the hills.

17 Monistrol: the château, formerly a country seat of the Bishop of Le Puy, is now a ribbon manufactory. Some ribbons are woven here, but the manufacture extends no farther. 4 m. beyond Monistrol our road approaches the Loire, and crosses, by a very long and steep descent and ascent, the deep and picturesque gorge of the Langon, which falls into the Loire about  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. below the bridge. The course of that river and its deep and wide valley may be traced for a considerable distance on the rt. from the heights beyond the Langon.

A road turns off rt. E. to Annonay and Valence on the Rhone, by St. Bonnet le Froid and the beautiful Val de Vocance. (See Rte. 119.)

20 Yssingeaux.—Inn: H. del'Europe; not good. A town of no particular interest; Pop. 7518.

Near this we enter the volcanic district of the Velay: on either side of the road rise hills of basalt and trachyte, and from the summit of the trachytic ridge of the Montagne de Pertuis, which it traverses by a long ascent, an excellent panorama is presented of the country. A part of Le Puy itself is visible. The hills generally assume a conic form, and are frequently capped with basalt. The top of the Mt.

Pertuis is of slaty porphyry, which is used for roofing houses.

On the rt. of the road is passed the ruined Castle Lardeyrolles, perched on the top of such a volcanic eminence.

Within 3 m. of Le Puy the Loire is crossed, here an insignificant stream, descending from its source near Gerbier des Jones, at the base of the Mont Mezène in the Dépt. de l'Ardèche. The pedestrian may proceed direct from Le Puy to Montpezat and Aubenas by the Source of the Loire.

A good view is obtained of the town of Le Puy in approaching it, though it is partly concealed by the Rocher de Corneille.

28 Le Puy, in Rte. 109.

The road to Mende is furnished with post-horses; it is good, but very hilly, being carried over part of the range of the Cevennes, in which some of the principal rivers of France take their rise. At first it ascends the valley of the Dolaison. From that stream as far as Pradelles the country is all volcanic.

19 Castaros.

About 3 m. W. of this is the Lac de Bouchet, a mountain tarn occupying the basin of an ancient crater, 91 ft. deep in the centre, without visible outlet.

[At the small and dirty, but elevated town of Pradelles (Inn, Trois Pigeons, by no means good), near which the granite rock shows itself, a cross road strikes off to Aubenas by Savilatte, over the mountains into the valley of the Ardèche, near its source, and follows its course downwards, by Mayras, to Thueyts. (Inn: H. de Voyageurs, best head-quarters for geological excursions.) Thueyts is built on a current of basaltic lava, which has flowed from a crater a little to the E. of it, and has occupied the bed of the Ardèche; but the river has cut for itself a passage on one side, laying bare a majestic colonnade of basalt 150 ft. high, stretching with a few interruptions  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. down the valley. Its situation and environs are most picturesque and interesting (see Rte. 121). About 4 m. below Thueyts, the river Alignon enters the Ardèche from the S. The course of that stream for about 3 m. up, lies at the base of vertical cliffs formed of columns of basalt 150 ft. high, the section of another lava current, made by the Alignon, which has gnawed for itself a channel between the granite and the basalt. This lava current is traced up to a large volcanic crater, called, from its regular cup-shape, La Coupe de Jaujac. It has been breached and broken down on one side. Its cone and slopes are covered with chestnut-trees, which grow in the greatest luxuriance. This crater of Jaujac has burst forth through a coal formation, which lines the bottom of a triangular-shaped valley, bounded by mountains of granite and gneiss. The village of Jaujac stands in a very striking and singular position, on the edge of the basaltic precipice, on the rt. bank of the Alignon, near the base of the crater, whence a mineral spring and copious jets of carbonic acid gas issue. Another lava current enters the Alignon about 300 yards above its junction with the Ardèche: its origin is to be sought in another volcanic cone, the Gravonne de Souillols. It has spread for a considerable distance down the valley of the Ardèche. Numerous picturesque ranges of columnar basalt are presented on the river banks from time to time. Some of the most striking occur near Pont de la Beaume, at the junction of the Fontaulier, which flows from Montpezat, with the Ardèche. The excursion to Montpezat, and the rest of the road to Aubenais, are described in Rte. 121.]

The road from Pradelles descends into the valley of the Allier, which it crosses before entering 21 Langogne, a town of 2720 Inhab., in the Dépt. de la Lozère. It has an ancient church, which belonged to a monastery founded in the 10th centy.

20 La Vitarelle. About 6 m. to the S. and E. of this the rivers Allier and Lot take their rise. A stone has been set up here to commemorate the death of the chivalrous Du Guesclin, who breathed his last while besieging a company of marauding mercenaries of the bands called "compagnies" in the petty fortress of Châteauneuf le Randon, a little on the rt. of the road, which still retains the ruins of its castle. The commander had promised to yield the place to Du Guesclin in a fortnight, provided no succour arrived; but the constable, who was adored by the compagnies as their father, who had spent his own fortune in ransoms for them when taken prisoners, died in the interval. The governor of the fortress nevertheless kept his word by placing the keys on the dead warrior's coffin on the appointed day.

The road is carried over a very high pass in the granitic range, a part of the Mont Margaride, often blocked up with snow, called in irony Le Palais du Roi.

29 Mende (Inn: H. de Commerce), chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Lozère, anciently of the province of Gévaudan, is a feudal and monastic town of 6345 Inhab., in a hollow, surrounded by mountains, on the Lot. It has a fine cathedral, surmounted by 2 spires.

The ancient Bishop's Palace is now the prefecture. On the slope of the Mont Mimat, above the town, is perched the Hermitage de St. Privat, over the grotto of that saint, the apostle of the Gévaudan.

Some considerable manufactures of serges and other coarse cloths are carried on here.

The direct road from Paris to Montpellier runs through Marvijois, about 12 m. W. of Mende.

About 6 m. S.E. of Mende rises the Mont Lozère, whence the Département is named, whose summit, 1490 mètres above the sea-level, is covered with extensive pastures occupied in summer by large flocks of sheep, to the number, it is said, of 200,000, which migrate in the winter to the plains of Languedoc; and its base is girt round with large forests, which still abound in wolves.

At 3 m. from Mende our road quits the valley of the Lot, and, crossing a calcareous table-land, utterly bare and arid, destitute of habitation, cultivation, and almost of soil, called Causse de Sauveterre, descends into the valley of the Tarn, and the country of the Cévennes. (Introduction, Sect. V.)

26 Molines.

The principal source of the Tarn is in the Plateau de l'Hôpital: on its borders lies Grisac, birthplace of Pope Urban V., and about 6 m. from its source the Pont de Montvert, a small village, deep sunk between the Mont Lozère and Bougès, the scene of some remarkable events in the war of the Cevennes. The insurrection in fact commenced here by the murder of the archdeacon Chayla, a cruel persecutor of the Calvinists, who had scoured the country backed by a troop of dragoons, seizing, imprisoning, and torturing women and men. On the night of July 24, 1702, the house, still standing at the N. end of the bridge, at that time occupied by Chayla and a party of priests and soldiers, was beset by a band of armed Camisards, headed by one of their prophets, Seguier, who, after breaking down the door with the trunk of a tree and releasing the prisoners, set fire to it, and slew those who attempted to escape.

A few of its inmates were allowed quarter, but Chayla, whose death was the motive for the assault, having broken his leg in letting himself down from a window, was discovered and killed without mercy. He fell, pierced with 52 wounds, 24 of which were mortal. The prophet and his companions, having perpetrated this act of vengeance, passed the night on their knees around the corpses, singing psalms, and did not withdraw before the morning. Seguier was captured shortly after, and expiated his crime by being burned alive on the 10th August, 1702. As Pont de Montvert was the cradle, so was it also the tomb of the insurrection: the last bold act of the Camisard chief Roland before his death was an assault upon the Miguelets or Spanish soldiers posted in the village, from which he was repulsed. Joani, one of the last of the Camisard leaders, having been made prisoner near this (1710), slipped off from behind the horse of the "archer" or policeman who was conveying him to a dungeon, as he was passing the bridge, like Rob

Roy in Scott's novel, and leaped down into the Tarn, a height of 20 ft. He was shot, however, by the captain of the archers, and perished in the river. Our road quits the Tarn to follow its tributary, the Tarnon, shortly before reaching

11 Florac, a town of 2200 Inhab., situated under a hill, whose bare cleft ridge rises in the form of castellated towers on the Tarnon, close to the influx of the Mimente. The 3 valleys of the 3 head-waters of the Tarn lead into the inextricable labyrinth of defiles composing the mountainous district of the Hautes Cevennes. The Mimente rises in the mountain of Bougès, whose N. summit is crowned by the forest Altefage, in the depths of which the murderers of the arch-priest Chayla had their rendezvous under 3 huge beech-trees, one of which was standing in 1837, reduced to a shattered trunk. At Cassagnas, a village near the source of the Mimente, 13 m. from Florac, many of the caverns which were converted into storehouses and arsenals by the Camisards still exist, and serve as habitations. They were filled with corn, wine, oil, chestnuts, and other provisions taken from convents and Romish villages, or contributed by the Protestants to their leaders. The provisions were conveyed thence to the spots where the insurgents met, either in conventicle for prayer, or in battle-array, and there distributed in rations. The corn was for the most part ground in hand-mills, the water-mills having been destroyed by the military commander of Languedoc, who, at the same time, laid waste and burned all the villages in the Upper Cevennes, to the number of nearly 400, driving away their inhabitants. Other caves were filled with living flocks and herds or with meat salted, while others again were used as powder magazines and mills; for the Camisards made powder for themselves from the saltpetre collected in their caverns, and the ashes of the willows growing on all the streams. Their principal supply, however, was purchased at Papal Avignon; so that the

Papists were shot chiefly by the Pope's own powder. The most airy and wholesome caverns were transformed into hospitals for the wounded, and stored with drugs from Montpellier—to such an extent was the commissariat organised by Roland and other leaders of that fearful civil strife. The mountains skirted by the road on the l., from Molines down to Ledignan, may be regarded as the citadel of the Camisard insurgents; but their ravages and incursions extended S. of the Gardon, and as far as the sea. Among these desolate solitudes they met, like the Cameronians of Scotland, with arms in their hands, in secret conventicles, where the harangues of their prophets and their hymns and prayers were often interrupted by an onset of the royal troops, and the congregation arose from their knees to do battle. After some miles we ascend out of the valley of the Tarnon, leaving it and the road to Montpellier on the rt., and, crossing the high land of Hospitalet, enter the valley of the Gardon, in which lies

23 Pompidou.

The road runs along a sort of hog's back or ridge, dividing the Dépt. de la Lozère from that of Gard, and traverses a sterile and dreary country.

30 St. Jean du Gard, on the l. bank of the Gardon, contains silk mills: 4128 Inhab.

Within this canton, 6 or 8 m. to the N.E., among the mountains, lies Mialet, a village of 1358 Inhab., the stronghold and head-quarters of Roland, chief of the Camisards, who was born at Massoubeyran, close to Mialet. It is also remarkable for the caves and grottoes around it, converted by him into arsenals and storehouses during the war of the Cevennes. Another position of strength held by him was Durfort, among the mountains on the rt. of the Gardon and considerably to the S. of Anduze.

To the S.W. of St. Jean rise the mountains of the Basses Cevennes, the chief of which is the Aigol, at whose base the river Herault rises.

Anduze (no post) is a town of 5554 Inhab., on the rt. bank of the Gardon, and protected from its furious inundations by a strong dyke forming a terrace and promenade. It is overhung by escarped rocks of the Monts Peyremale and St. Julien. It was the centre of the religious wars which followed the death of Henri IV., and the head-quarters of the Calvinist leader Rohan. A large portion of its inhab. are still Calvinists. During the Camisard insurrection this town as well as Alais was constantly beset by the Camisards up to its very walls.

Florian, the author of 'Gonzalvo de Cordova,' was born in the castle of Florian, between Anduze and St. Hippolite. The valley of the Gardon below Anduze, between Fornac and Ners, is called Vallée de Beaurivage, and is described in his pastoral romances Estelle and Némorin, but with so much exaggeration as scarcely to be distinguished.

Near Lezan our road quits the valley of the Gardon.

27 Ledignan, near the Nismes and Alais Rly.

Ribaute, a village situated among the hills to the N. of this, was the birthplace of Cavalier, who, having been bred a shepherd, and afterwards apprenticed to a baker at Anduze, was elected, at the age of 17, second in command of the Camisard insurgents, and proved himself a most able general, as well as powerful prophet or preacher. He died a pensioner in Chelsea Hospital.

18 NISMES, in Route 126.

ROUTE 119.

ROANNE TO VALENCE ON THE RHÔNE,
BY ST. ETIENNE AND ANNONAY.—
RAILWAY FROM ROANNE TO ST. ETIENNE.

Roanne is described in Rte. 105. Rly. to St. Germain des Fossés Stat. on the Rly. from Moulins to Clermont.

Railroad, 87 kil. = 54 Eng. m. long, from Roanne to St. Etienne.

From Roanne it is carried up the valley of the Rhins, a small tributary of the Loire.

Next it proceeds up the valley of the Loire along its rt. bank.

St. Cyr de Favières Stat.

St. Jodard Stat.

Balbigny Stat.

Near the village Pouilly the Loire is confined between huge dykes, faced with stones cemented and clamped together, called Mole de Pine, the original construction of which is attributed to the Romans. The rapids thus produced in the river prevent the ascent of boats.

Feurs Stat. Feurs occupies the site of one of the most important cities of the Gauls—Forum Segusianorum. In this name may be traced the modern one of Forez, given to the district of which it was the capital, during the middle ages. Extensive fragments of Roman walls, aqueducts, inscribed stones, &c., attest its ancient consequence. Pop. 2250.

Montrond Stat., a village on the rt. bank of the Loire,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. W. of the railway. Above it rise the majestic ruins of its old castle, burned at the Revolution by order of an itinerant representative of the people.

[Montbrison (Rte. 112) is 10 m. distant from Montrond.]

Large quantities of coal are conveyed from St. Etienne to Andresieux, to be embarked on the Loire for the supply of the centre and W. of France. Beyond Andresieux the line quits the side of the Loire, and ascends the industrious valley of its tributary the Furens, which, in the course of 9 m., sets in motion more than 100 forges and mills. The branch from Andresieux to St. Etienne was the first railway constructed in France: horses and not locomotives were at first used on it.

St. Galmier Stat.

La Fouillouse Stat.

St. ETIENNE Stat.—Rly. to Lyons (Rte. 118). Inns: H. du Nord, large and comfortable;—Poste, also good.

St. Etienne, the largest and most populous town in the Dépt. de la Loire, and since 1855 its chef-lieu, now numbering with its suburbs about 72,000 Inhab., is a remarkable example of a sudden rise, and of still increasing prosperity, owing to two very dissimilar but flourishing branches of manufacture—the making of fire-arms and the weaving of ribbons. To use the words of a French topographer, “ce sont les ateliers de Mars à côté de ceux de Vénus.” The town is advantageously situated on the banks of the Furens, which furnishes water-power to move its machinery, in the midst of one of the most productive coal-fields of France. It may be called a French Birmingham, and, like that of England, it is the “child of coal,” surrounded by mines, and even seated on coal-deposits, so that some galleries are driven beneath its very streets, though under strict superintendence of the authorities. It is by no means an inviting place to tarry in: little regularity is preserved in the building of streets so suddenly thrown up; and the fine white sandstone of its houses, many of them 5 and 6 stories high, is soon tarnished and blackened by the coal-smoke which constantly hangs in clouds over it. It has one fine broad street, divided into 2 “Places,” planted with trees, by the Hôtel de Ville, which stands in the centre of it and of the town. It is a building of no great merit, but of large size. It contains the Bourse and the commercial tribunal called Conseil des Prudhommes.

Within its walls is an incipient Museum (Musée industriel), containing specimens of the staple manufactures of the town, ribbons of all kinds, gun-barrels, locks, and stocks, engraved and carved by local workmen; also a collection of the minerals of the neighbourhood, and of the fossils of its coal-field, &c.

There are more than 200 master-manufacturers of ribbons here. The number of persons in the town and neighbouring communes employed in this branch of industry has been estimated at 40,000, and the number of looms at about 20,000. The weavers live chiefly on the outskirts of the town and in the adjoining villages, where they avoid the smoke, and live cheaper by escaping the octroi.

The beauty and varied invention shown in the patterns, and the delicate combinations of colours, are admirable. An English traveller should not omit to visit a ribbon-weaver's atelier. About 60 artists are employed in designing and drawing patterns. The total annual value of ribbons made here is estimated at 45 millions of francs.

The gunsmiths' shops are better at Birmingham, or even at Liege, both which places produce a larger quantity of arms. About 30,000 or 40,000 stand of arms are made here annually in time of peace, besides 30,000 fowling-pieces, and 1500 pair of pistols; and during the sway of Napoleon not less than from 60,000 to 100,000 were turned out; but it is stated that at a push 300,000 muskets might be produced in 12 months. A musket may be bought for 12 or even 10 fr.; but the price paid by government is from 24 fr. to 35 fr. apiece. About 500 men are employed in the Manufacture Royale des Armes, which is carried on by contractors, under the superintendence of artillery-officers; but many more out-labourers are employed. All the barrels made must pass through a trial at the proof-house (Maison d'Epreuve), open twice a-week. There are also considerable manufacturers of quincailerie (hardware) and cutlery.

The making of bayonets, gun-locks, gun-stocks of walnut-wood seasoned by steam, employs a great number of hands.

Its Cathedral exhibits in its choir an ancient specimen of Romanesque architecture.

There is a Theatre here.

Railway—St. Etienne to Lyons, in Rte. 118.

Diligences to Le Puy; to Annonay.

The road to Annonay, almost immediately on quitting the town, passes out of the coal-basin, and commences a long but gradual ascent through a rugged valley, over the high mountain-ridge separating the waters flowing into the Atlantic from those which run into the Mediterranean, and the valley of the Loire from that of the Rhône. These two rivers run parallel to each other, but in an opposite direction, for not less than 120 m. A short way below the summit stands 12 La République, the first relay, a solitary cabaret, which will furnish a tolerable meal and glass of wine. The ridge which our road crosses is a continuation of the granitic range of the Mont Pilas (pileatus), so conspicuous from the banks of the Rhône, near Vienne (Rte. 125), whose peak is visible on the l. near La République. The summit of the pass, and country around, is occupied by a vast forest of firs, le Grand Bois, on emerging from which, and beginning to descend, a fine view opens out, at the end of the valley, of the Alps of Dauphiné stretching along the horizon, of the minor chain running from them down the valley of the Isère, and more near, on the rt., of the mountains of the Ardèche.

The road is finely engineered, carried gradually down along the flanks of the mountains, following their sinuosities. It passes above the ruined Castle d'Argental, planted on a sort of promontory, where the rocks are naked and inaccessible. The Bourg, once attached to it, has prudently descended from this feudal platform, (16 Bourg d'Argental), and now occupies a more genial and sunny site lower down, in a part of the valley where the vine grows and the white mulberry flourishes. The white silk produced here is the best in France for the manufacture of blonde lace, and bears a high price.

A little below this town the road passes out of the Dépt. of the Loire into that of the Ardèche.

The valley of the Dieune, in which lie both Bourg d'Argental and Annonay, has no very striking features of beauty; naked rocks intermixed with formal mulberry plantations, with green meadows, aspens, and willows, are the components of its scenery. Lower down, the river is bestriden by several large paper-mills, chiefly belonging to the respected family Montgolfier. The road, carried high up, looks over slopes occupied by vineyards, beyond which rises the Alpine chain, and between which, in a deep ravine, runs the river. Numerous country houses, or boxes, among the vines announce the approach to Annonay.

15 Annonay. Inns: H. du Midi; H. du Nord. This active and increasing manufacturing town, the largest in the Dépt. de l'Ardèche (Pop. 10,000), is situated in the rocky gorges of the Dieune and the Cance, which join their streams in the very centre of the town. The houses are either crammed in between the rocks, or carried up their sides in tiers, or in ranges along their tops, so that its ground plan is very irregular, and from no point can the whole town be seen at once. It has no public buildings of the least interest, merit, or good taste. The Grande Place includes in its centre the Bascule, and on one side an Obelisk to the memory of the ingenious brothers Joseph and Etienne Montgolfier, natives of Annonay, the inventors of the air-balloon, and founders of the celebrated paper-mills near this; it was erected "par leurs concitoyens." Their first ascent into the air was made from this spot, June 1783, in the presence of the Estates of the province. The descendants of the brothers still reside in the neighbourhood, where the family is distinguished by its well-earned opulence and intelligence. Boissy d'Anglas, the firm and unbending president of the Convention, was also born here.

The chief manufacture of Annonay is that of paper, celebrated all over France, produced in 8 paper-mills on the neighbouring streams. The preparation of kid and other glove leather occupies 65 master manufacturers and 600 men: 350,000 dozen of skins are prepared annually, of which half are sent to England. The cultivation of the silk-worm, and the production of silk, chiefly the white kind, prized for blondes, is rapidly advancing in the neighbourhood. Vast quantities of mulberries have been planted within a few years, and numerous silk-mills (filatures) established.

[France.]

The name Annonay is said to come from the Latin annona, corn magazines, established by the Romans on this spot (?).

There is a good and interesting road from Annonay to Le Puy—penetrating the romantic Val de Vocance, and carried out of it by a series of zigzags, by which a great elevation is reached, upon which stands the miserable auberge and post-house St. Bonnet le Froid. It falls into the road to Le Puy (Rte. 118) near Yssingeaux.

A steep ascent leads out of Annonay: from the heights above it, and nearly all the way to the Rhône, the Alps form a fine feature in the view.

The borders of the Rhône are reached a little below la Tour des Martyrs, near Andance, picturesquely situated among granitic hills, on whose sides every inch of space opening to the sun is occupied by vines. A crag rising above the village is surmounted by a Calvary. Near this the sad effects of the inundations of the Rhône, in 1840, 41, 46, and 56, meet the traveller's sight, in fields and vineyards overwhelmed with sand, broken bridges, and ruined houses, until the Rhône is crossed, by a wire bridge, at 21 St. Vallier,	} described in Rte. 125.

32 Valence (Inn : Poste),

ROUTE 120.

LE PUY TO NISMES, BY ALAIS.

Diligence daily.

This Route is the same as Rte. 118 as far as

Langogne, whence a new line has been carried over the chain of mountains of Lozère, passing through scenery of truly Alpine grandeur. The country is desperately barren and cheerless until you cross the summit level and begin to descend, when a gradual change comes over the scene; bold, shivered precipices rising on either side of the bed which a mountain torrent, flowing at an immense depth below, has hollowed out for itself. In the scanty clefts of the rock chesnuts have taken root and flourish amazingly. Perched on the edge of a precipice stands the ruined Castle of Lagarde, below which extends a savage-looking rocky den. It is a marvellous feat of engineering to have conducted through it an easy carriage-road. By a series of zigzags the region of chesnuts is reached, and, after traversing woods of some extent, the valley is crossed and re-crossed several times on bold and substantial bridges, one consisting of 2 tiers of arches, 9 above and 3 below. A long tunnel bored through the granite, and another bridge, conduct to the romantic village of Villefort, with a venerable bridge, and quaint, decaying, picturesque houses. Another summit, the Mont Lozère properly so called, is next surmounted by zigzags. On its S. slope chesnuts begin to be replaced by mulberries, growing on a white sandy soil. Through vines, olives, oleanders, fig-trees, we reach

La Levade, on the Alais and Nîmes Rly. (Rte. 121.)

ROUTE 121.

VALENCE TO NISMES, BY LIVRONS, LAVOULTE, PRIVAS, AUBENAS, AND ALAIS—VOLCANOES OF THE ARDÈCHE.

184 kilom. = 115 Eng. m.

Railway from Livrons to Privas, 32 kil. = 21 Eng. m.

The Rhône is crossed by the wire bridge at Valence to the rt. bank; and the Eyrieu by another wire bridge to 19 Lavoulte Stat.; all which is described in Rte. 125.

The Valley of La Payre, up which the road turns on quitting the Rhône, is not remarkable for beauty; owing to the extreme aridity of the hills, which are of bare limestone, with a drapery of vines too scanty to cover their nakedness. There is some pasture in the low ground; but the district must properly be considered one vast grove of mulberries, for rearing the silkworm,—the source of wealth to the Ardèche. (See Rte. 125.)

The large white buildings which line the banks of the useful stream traversing the valley are, for the most part, silk-mills, for the moulinage (reeling) and filature (throwing) of the silk. They are very numerous near Chomeric Stat., the most considerable place in this valley. A low ridge separates it from that in which is situated 20 Privas Stat. — Inns: La Croix d'Or; tolerable, but dear;—H. du Commerce. In autumn the mosquitoes are troublesome.

Privas, chef-lieu of the Dépt. de l'Ardèche, 4619 Inhab., and one of the smallest chef-lieux in France, is situated on a steep ridge, a root of the range of the Coiron, projecting between the valley of the Ouvèze and that of a smaller stream falling into it, within an amphitheatre of rugged and arid hills. Its principal street running along this back-bone is prolonged, at either end, into terraces planted with trees, whence a good view is obtained of the valleys around, their slopes clad with vines and dotted with country houses; their depths, along the line of the streams, studded with silk-mills.

The town has an aspect of some pretension at a distance, with the Greek portico of its Palais de Justice, but contains nothing worth notice except its establishments for the reeling and throwing of silk. It was in the 16th and 17th centuries a fortress and stronghold of Protestantism, so that in 1612 a synod of all the Reformed Churches of France was held here; and in the reign of Henri IV. there was not a single Roman Catholic in the town or its territory. It has now quite a modern appearance, owing to its having been burned to the ground, and levelled with the dust, by Louis XIII., who assisted in person to besiege it, in the train of Card. Richelieu. The defence was conducted by the brave St. André de Montbrun, and a garrison of 1200 men, assisted by the inhabitants. At the end of 2 months a general assault was made by the royal forces, who were repulsed with a loss of 500 men; but the place being no longer tenable was abandoned by Montbrun, who retired to the Fort de Toulon, where the want of provisions compelled him soon after to surrender. The king caused him and all his companions to be hung; he confiscated the property of all the inhabitants of the town who were in it during the siege, and forbade, by an edict, any person living there without letters issued under the great seal. The site of this fort is marked by a conical hill, surmounted by 3 crosses, and a Protestant temple near the Esplanade marks the position of the old castle, which was razed to the ground. Privas had, in a previous war of religion, 1574, successfully resisted the royal forces, under the Duc de Montpensier, and had become a sort of metropolitan church to the Protestants: hence the exasperation of the Roman Catholic party against it.

The road to Aubenas surmounts the chain of the Coiron mountains, which traverse the Dépt. Ardèche from N.W. to S.E., by a steep ascent, requiring 2 hours to climb to the summit of the pass. It passes through large plantations of sweet chestnuts. The famed "marrons de Lyon" come chiefly from the Ardèche. The country is not interesting, the extreme nakedness of the hills being a great drawback. The mountains on either side of the gap or col over which the road passes are capped by basalt. From the slope and top of the pass the mountains of the Dépt. of the Drome beyond the Rhône are well seen. On the opposite slope, a little way down, stands 16 Les Moulins, a single house. On the descent towards Aubenas, the hills are not less parched and naked, nor more picturesque, than on the side of Privas. The vine grows very high up, and it is curious to see it flourishing upon the dry disintegrated débris of rock fallen from the tops of the mountains, streaking their whitened flanks with the faintest tinge of verdure. The descent is very long, and the road towards the bottom of the valley as bad as possible; not properly made.

The river Ardèche is crossed immediately before reaching Aubenas, in a suburb of that town composed chiefly of silk-mills. A series of zig-zags carried up the face of the hill are surmounted in order to enter 14 Aubenas.—Inn: H. de l'Union, tolerable, but very dirty, with capital cuisine, and not expensive. Truffles abound here; chestnuts, figs, ortolans are to be had in perfection. The house, being situated on the brow of the hill, commands a fine view from its terrace.

Aubenas (4685 Inhab.) is a town of very striking appearance at a distance, from the commanding height on which it stands, and the picturesque forms of its old Gothic castle, feudal walls, and other chief buildings. From this elevated platform, the foot of which is washed by the Ardèche, you command a view of some interest over its industrious and productive vale, clothed in its lower slopes with vines, fig-trees, and mulberry groves, surmounted in the distance by the usual bare arid mountains. You trace the river's course upwards to the point where it issues out of the more confined gorge of Vals, and, as it were rejoicing in riotous liberty, widens its bed, and overspreads the valley with gravel, bare at most seasons but winter and after autumnal storms, when the whole channel is covered by its muddy stream. It is nevertheless useful, serving to irrigate the fields, and turn the machinery of a long array of silk-mills which line its banks.

Aubenas is of importance as a place of trade, having become the staple for the silks of the Ardèche, Drome, Gard, and L'Hérault, which are deposited here in commission houses, sometimes to the value of 3 millions of francs, to be disposed of and distributed to the consumers in Lyons, St. Etienne, &c., who find here an assortment of all the different qualities of silk, suited to the exigence of the various manufactures. The canton of Aubenas furnishes about the 30th part of the silks sold in its market: in 1838 it possessed 60 mills for reeling and throwing the silk, which employed 1600 persons, chiefly females: the number has since greatly increased.

The Collège Royal was originally placed under the care of the Jesuits, established here in the 16th centy. for the conversion of the Protestants, who abounded in the Vivarais, as well as for the dissemination of learning. Neither the building nor its church merit notice.

The castle, an ancient and picturesque edifice, flanked by round and square towers, was occupied alternately by Romanists and Huguenots during the wars of religion: it is now converted into municipal and police offices; and the public scales for weighing all the silk brought to market are deposited in it.

Diligences daily to Privas and Valence; a courier to Bourg St. Andeol; and 3 times a week to Montélimart.

Although there is little worth seeing in Aubenas itself, it makes capital head-quarters (more especially considering the goodness of its Inn) for exploring the surrounding district of the Vivarais, so interesting in a geological point of view.

The course of the river Ardèche and its tributaries, above Aubenas, and within a range of 15 or 20 m., exhibits a series of interesting volcanic phenomena, which the geologist will not fail to explore, and which may be visited with interest even by the ordinary traveller, merely on account of the picturesqueness and singularity of the scenery.

Some of the valleys of the Bas Vivarais present an exquisite combination of beauty and magnificence. Their scenery has been compared by Mr. Scrope, in his excellent geological description of this district, to that of the Apennines, but with a more luxuriant vegetation. The rich glow of the chestnut forests, tinted by a soft and brilliant atmosphere, are admirably adapted to painting.

Excursions.—1. Antraigues and the Coupe d'Ayzac are distant about 8 m. above Aubenas. A good road leads thither, turning out of that to Le Puy at La Begude, and crossing the river Ardèche, by a wire bridge, to the village of Vals (H. de l'Europe; a good Inn, and convenient head-quarters for geological excursions), resorted to on account of its mineral baths, supplied by a spring of cold acidulo-ferruginous water. Vals lies on the l. bank of the Volane, a tributary of the Ardèche; and for nearly 6 m. above Vals the valley, which is very picturesque, and alternately well wooded or bounded by rocks of gneiss and granite, is studded at intervals by patches of basalt, forming platforms and regular colonnades, like those of the Giant's Causeway, but on a much smaller scale, although at times 30 or 40 ft. high. These fragments are all that remain of a lava current which once, undoubtedly, filled the bottom of the valley, but was cut away by the Volane, in forcing a passage for its waters. They appear to be composed of 3 beds, or stories, of which the lower one presents the most regular columns, and the upper is nearly amorphous. In places the current of the river, or of some minor rivulet, still saws through or undermines the basalt, and strews the bed of the Volane with detached pillars, mostly regular prisms of 5 or 6 sides. In some places you look down on the top of the lava stream, which presents the appearance of a gigantic tessellated pavement. The origin of this eruption is to be traced in a volcanic cone, called La Coupe d'Ayzac, rising on the l. bank of the Volane, opposite Antraigues, a picturesque village, which occupies a commanding platform on the top of a high rock of gneiss near the head of the valley. Around the base of this rock still cluster numerous groups of columns, corresponding with a much finer colonnade, on the opposite or rt. bank of the river, at the same level, which were doubtless originally united. Antraigues affords no accommodation but a miserable cabaret. To reach the Coupe d'Ayzac is a walk of  $\frac{3}{4}$  hour from the bridge over the Volane, leaving on the rt. hand the road up to Antraigues. It is a very regular crater, but slightly broken down on the N.W. side, facing the Col d'Ayzac; and from this breach the stream of basaltic lava which has flowed down the course of the Volane may be seen to issue.

The stout pedestrian may find his way over the mountains from this to Burzet and Montpezat, but the aid of a guide may be desirable; otherwise he must retrace his steps down the Volane to Vals.

2. To Montpezat, Thueyts, Jaujac It is a long day's excursion to Montpezat alone, which is probably 16 m. from Aubenas—a ride of nearly 4 hrs. by a bad road. The road to Le Puy, up the valley of the Ardèche, is followed; but, instead of crossing the bridge at La Begude, you continue along the rt. bank, leaving on one side the dirty village of Prades, where coal in small quantity is found, and, proceeding to La Baume (6 $\frac{1}{2}$  m. from Aubenas), a village picturesquely situated, under a mass of basalt, exhibiting in the face of its cliffs a fine architectural façade of columns, and occupying an angle in the valley, nearly opposite to the junction of the Fontaulier with the Ardèche. The top of this platform of basalt, called Chaussée du Pont la Baume, is covered with vines, and its mass is penetrated by a sort of grotto, lined and vaulted with natural pillars. This chaussée is probably the production of no less than 4 or 5 extinct volcanoes situated in the side valleys opening into the Ardèche, above this, whose lava streams united at this point, just as the waters flowing out of them now do. Between the two rivers, on the top of a domineering rock, its shattered towers and walls picturesquely draped with ivy, rises an old Castle, which once belonged to the Ducs de Ventadour: it is one of the finest feudal relics in the district.

The road to Montpezat (a bridle or cart road only) here quits that to Thueyts and Le Puy (see Rte. 118), crosses the Ardèche by the Pont de la Baume, and ascends the valley of the Fontaulier, having the castle on the l., and commanding a fine view of it and the 2 valleys. Ranges of basalt appear from time to time on either side of the valley.

On the rt., a little beyond the village of Meyras, the valley of Burzet opens out on the rt.; a bed of basalt occupies the bottom of it, and the river frequently flows over the tops of its columns, instead of cutting through them. About 6 m. up this valley is a village.

The vale of the Fontaulier expands as you ascend it; its lower slopes are covered with one vast forest of sweet chestnut, which flourishes in the congenial soil, composed of volcanic ashes, many of the trees being centuries old. The roads are strewn with their fruit in September, yet, productive as they are, and valuable to the peasant, who exports the best to Lyons or Paris, and feeds on the inferior fruit himself in winter, they are gradually giving place to the still more profitable mulberry-trees and the culture of silk. The higher slopes, nearly to the tops of the hills, are terraced to plant vines. The red ashes, or scorice, which compose the soil of the valley, have issued from a volcanic crater near its head, easily distinguished for some distance below by its red hue, called La Gravenne de Montpezat. It is a regular bowl-shaped orifice, composed of porous scorice, roasted like the slag of a furnace, or of puzzolana (here called gravier). The crater is slightly inclined on one side; and from the lowest edge of its rim the lava current which occupies the valley below Montpezat has been discharged, filling the beds of the streams to a depth of 130 ft., and for the width of nearly  $\frac{1}{2}$  a m. The road to and from the bridge leading to Montpezat passes under cliffs cut through this eruption of lava, and showing on their face columns of considerable regularity. A branch of the lava current from the Gravenne has descended, on the opposite side of the crater, towards Thueyts, into the Ardèche. Volcanic tears, bombs, black and white cinders, are among the productions of its lava.

Montpezat (Inn: Bertrand's, a mere cabaret, but the best; tolerable fare) is a poor and dirty town, composed of singular gloomy houses, in a narrow street, at the foot of the granitic range of the Coiron mountains. A carriage-road has recently been made from the town up the valley, and over the bridge behind, as far as the village Pal ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  hr.'s walk), beyond which, on the opposite slope, is the very perfect volcano of Pal, in the midst of which rise 3 cones.

About 15 m. N. of Montpezat, near Gerbier des Juncs, at the base of the Mont Mezene, is the source of the Loire, 4711 ft. above the sea-level. There is a bridle-path by it to Le Puy (Rte. 109).

It is possible to cross the mountain from the Gravenne of Montpezat direct to Thueyts; the only other way is to return to Pont de la Baume.

A short way above La Baume the Ardèche is joined by the river Alignon, in whose valley are situated the singular craters of Jaujac (in which the Republican Socialists held their meetings long undiscovered in 1848) and Souillols. (See Rte. 118.) There is a road from Jaujac down the valley of the Liane to L'Argentière.

Thueyts (Inn: Chez Burine; not better than that at Montpezat) lies on the l. bank of the Ardèche, surrounded by the most splendid volcanic scenery, about 4 m. above La Baume (see Rte. 118); it stands on a volcanic current, which has issued from the same ridge as the Gravenne de Montpezat, if not from that very crater. For nearly 1 m. below Thueyts the river is lined by the majestic colonnade of basalt proceeding from it. A stair, the steps of which are basaltic prisms, has been formed up the rock, and is called Escalier du Roi. A stream dashing down into a tremendous ravine called La Gueule d'Enfer forms a remarkable waterfall.

The road from Aubenas to Nîmes is that by which the silk produced in the S. is transported to the market of Aubenas, and thence transferred to the manufactories of Lyons and St. Etienne. It leaves the town of l'Argentière a little on the rt. before reaching 23 Joyeuse, a small town on the Baume, at the foot of the Cevennes. An excursion might be made hence by Ruoms and Vallons (famed for the caves in its vicinity) to the Pont de l'Arc, a natural bridge of limestone spanning the river Ardèche, open to a height of 90 ft. above it, and 160 ft. wide. It was once the common line of passage from the Vivarais into the Cevennes, and was fortified in the religious wars. Near this is Bessèges terminus of the Alais and Nîmes Rly., 50 m. from Nîmes.

The coal-mines of Bessèges, near which the road passes, are remarkable for the quantity and size of the fossil vegetables occurring in them.

St. Ambroix Stat., in the Dépt. Gard, a town of 3000 Inhab., on the Cèze, surmounted by an old castle.

The rivers Cèze and the 2 Gardons take their rise in the mountains of the Hautes Cevennes,—the wild theatre of the insurrection of the Protestant mountaineers, known as Camisards, or "Enfants de Dieu," as they called themselves; while they distinguished their native mountains, whose roots our road may be said to skirt on the rt. from St. Ambroix to Ners, by the name "le Désert." Their desolating irruptions and bloody contests with the forces of Louis XIV. spread far and wide over the country we are about to traverse, on both sides of our route, up to the very gates of Nismes and Alais; and almost every step will recall to those familiar with the history of that fearful contest some melancholy memorial of bloodshed and violence.

Alais Stat. (Inns: H. du Commerce; Lion d'Or), an important manufacturing town, containing 17,831 Inhab., in the midst of a productive coal-field, which has only recently begun to be worked to any extent, and which furnishes iron as well as coal. The chief collieries are at Grande Combe on the railway. They supply the French steam-navy at Toulon. Nearly 500,000 tons are extracted in a year. There are in the vicinity of Alais numerous iron-furnaces, silk-mills, glass-works, and many steam-engines hard at work. The rly. to Nismes (30 m.) has branches to Grande Combe, and extends to Bes-sèges.

The Place de la Maréchale is surrounded by low porticoes or arcades.

The town contains no fine buildings. It was taken by Louis XIII., as a stronghold of Protestantism, and its fortifications destroyed.

At la Tour de Bellot, a deserted sheep-farm and watch-tower to the W. of Alais, between it and Anduze, a band of 1500 Camisards, betrayed by a miller on the Gardon, who had supplied them with provisions, were surprised at night by the troops of Louis XIV., 1704. The Camisard outposts had barely time to sound an alarm, when they were cut to pieces, so that only the leader and a part of the band were able to issue forth from the tower before it was invested. The Camisard chief, Cavalier, made furious efforts to drive back the soldiery, and relieve his brethren in the tower, but in vain. Its garrison, however, blocked up every entry, pouring a deadly fire from every window and cranny, and were only subdued, after an obstinate resistance of 8 hours, by fire being set to the building, in which 298 of them perished, besides 100 left dead outside the walls. The loss of the king's troops was estimated at 1200 killed and wounded. Wild justice was soon after done by the Camisards on the traitorous miller; he was seized, condemned to death, and led out to execution in front of the insurgents, who, as was their custom, knelt around him the while, offering up prayers for his soul. His 2 sons, who served in their ranks, refused his parting embrace, and looked on unmoved during his punishment.

Vezénobre (Stat.) is frequently mentioned in the history of the Cevenol war; and the inhabitants of Euzet, a village a few miles to the E., were put to the sword, 1704, by a king's officer, Lalande. Entering the town suddenly, he found great store of provisions, heaps of bread, hams, sausages, and a bullock skinned, evidently destined for the Camisards, whom a brief search disclosed concealed in the neighbourhood. They were the remains of the force of Cavalier, defeated at Nages (Rte. 126), and were here again routed with a loss of 170 killed, including several prophetesses. Further evidence that the inhabitants of Euzet were aiding and abetting the rebels was furnished by the discovery in their vicinity of one of those caverns which the Camisards converted into hospitals and arsenals. It was filled with wounded, medicines, arms, and ammunition. This sealed their fate; they were all slaughtered, including the patients in the cavern, and Euzet was destroyed. Such was the system on which this exterminating war was carried on. The Camisard commissariat was supplied by requisitions upon towns and villages, both Catholic and Protestant: when not furnished with good will, a missive of this sort preceded their appearance, addressed to the chief men of the place:—"MM., vous ne manquerez point de nous préparer demain le dîner, sous peine d'être assiégé et mis à feu et à sang.—CAVALIER."

Ners (Stat.) is a village on the l. bank of the Gardon, at the angle formed by the junction of its 2 branches, the Gardon d'Anduze and d'Alais. The river in winter rolls down a flood of water with the force of a torrent, but in summer is dried up to a few rills or threads. Owing to its impetuosity and sudden rising, no attempt to throw a bridge across it has succeeded.

[Not far from Ners, on the W., is the Castle of Castelnau. It is remarkable as the spot where Roland, the chief and generalissimo of the Cevenol insurgents, ended his career, Aug. 13, 1704. His presence on the spot had probably been betrayed to Marshal Villars, for in the middle of the night, when Roland and his companions (including a female called Mademoiselle de Cornelli) were fast asleep, their sentinel on the tower heard the noise of horses' feet approaching at a gallop. He gave the alarm just as the cavalry were about to enter. The Camisards started up half-naked, rushed to the stable, and, mounting the bare backs of their horses, galloped off for their lives, but without saddles, belt, or spurs. They were soon overtaken, compelled to dismount, and, having been discovered trying to conceal themselves in a hollow way, were forced to face about. Roland, planting his back against the trunk of an old olive-tree, made a desperate resistance; answering to the summons, "Rendez-vous! Bas les armes!" by killing 3 of the dragoons with 3 successive shots of his blunderbuss, and he was drawing his pistols, of which he carried a row at his girdle, when a musket-shot brought him down. The wound was mortal, and his companions, seeing his fall, at once threw themselves on his body, and allowed themselves to be seized and bound like lambs. The body of Roland was publicly burned at Nismes.]

Uzès, a town of 7000 Inhab., half-way between Avignon and Alais. Under the Prefecture is a Terrace shaded with trees and commanding a fine view; once the resort of Racine, who lived here with an uncle, a canon (1662). The Ducal Palace, restored by the present Duke, and the Campanile, are worth visiting. In the vale of Gisors is the source of the Ure, which once supplied the Roman aqueduct to Nismes.

Boucoiron Stat. On a rock rises the tall tower of the modernized castle.

The road passes near the limestone quarries, whence the Romans obtained the material for the amphitheatre of

NISMES STATION. (Rte. 126.)

SECTION VI.

PROVENCE, LANGUEDOC, AND NICE.

ROUTE	PAGE	ROUTE	PAGE
125 Lyons to Marseilles, by Avignon, Arles, Vienne, Valence, Orange (Vaucluse), and Tarascon.—Railway. Descent of THE RHONE (B). . . . .	444	127 Avignon to Marseilles, by Tarascon, Arles, and St. Chamas.—Railway. The Rhone from Avignon to Arles . . . . .	477
126 Avignon to Narbonne (Pont du Gard), by Nîmes, Montpellier, and Béziers.—St. Gilles and Aigues Mortes.—Railway . . . . .	464	128 Marseilles to NICE, by Toulon, Hyères, and Cannes—Railway . . . . .	493
		129 Avignon to Nice, by Aix . . . . .	517
		130 Nîmes to Marseilles, by Beaucaire and Arles—Rail . . . . .	521

PRELIMINARY INFORMATION.

1. Features of Provence; Climate, People.—2. Mistral.—3. Mosquitoes.—4. Fertility and varied Productions.—5. The true Garden of Provence.—6. The Roman Antiquities.—7. Gothic Architecture.—8. The Rhône.

§ 1. THE Englishman who knows the S. of France only from books—who there finds Provence described as the cradle of Poetry and Romance, the paradise of the Troubadours, a land teeming with oil, wine, silk, and perfumes, has probably formed in his mind a picture of a region beautiful to behold, and charming to inhabit. Excepting, however, in a small and favoured district near Cannes, which is indeed a little paradise in climate and vegetation, these anticipations will not be realised on the spot, and at least it is not from this quarter that France deserves the epithet “La Belle.” Nature has altogether an arid character;—in summer a sky of copper, an atmosphere loaded with dust, the earth scorched rather than parched by the unmitigated rays of the sun, which overspread everything with a lurid glare. The hills rise above the surface in masses of bare rock, without any covering of soil, like the dry bones of a wasted skeleton. Only on the low grounds, which can be reached by irrigation, does any verdure appear. There is a sombre, melancholy sternness in the landscape of the South. The aching eye in vain seeks to repose on a patch of green, and the inhabitant of the North would not readily purchase the clear cloudless sky of Provence with the verdure of misty England. Neither the bush-like vine nor the mop-headed mulberry, stripped of its leaves for a great part of the summer, nor the tawny green olive, whose foliage looks as though powdered with dust, will at all compensate in a picturesque point of view for forests of oak, ash, and beech.

“After Nice, the austere South of France, silent, burnt up, shadeless, and glaring, with houses all closed, showed the misery of a hot climate, while in Italy its luxury had struck us. The sun had bleached everything, and the atmosphere was thickened with the perpetual dust of habitual drought, for here it is said not to rain for seven months together in summer. The roads were of a dusky buffy white; the farm-houses, built of the materials nearest at hand, of the same colour; roads, soil, houses, men, trees, animals, all partaking of the same hue of universal dust, as the caterpillar does of the leaf on which it feeds,

Now and then parched and scanty grass sprang up among the clodded earth, and long-legged sheep were feeding anxiously upon it, in the scorching sun, without a single tree of shelter. All the inns, however miserable, have large remises, to afford coolness and shade, during the middle of the day, for travellers and horses."—P.

The character of the people appears influenced by the fiery sun, and soil which looks as though it never cooled. Their fervid temperament knows no control or moderation; hasty and headstrong in disposition, they are led by very slight religious or political excitement, on sudden impulses, to the committal of acts of violence unknown in the North. They are rude in manner, coarse in aspect, and harsh in speech, their patois being unintelligible, even to the French themselves, not unlike the Spanish dialect of Catalonia. From the loudness of tone and energy of gesture, they appear always as though going to fight when merely carrying on an ordinary conversation. The traveller who happens to fall into the hands of the ruffianly porters at Avignon will be able to judge if this be an exaggerated picture.

Those who are prone to complain of the climate of England should be sent to try that of the South of France. If they expect an unvarying serene sky and warm temperature, they will be woefully disappointed. The variations between summer and winter are marked by the dead olive, and vine-trees killed by the frost; and the torrid influence of summer by the naked beds of torrents left without water. In many years not a drop of rain falls in June, July, and August, and the quantity is commonly very small: the great heats occur between the middle of July and the end of September, yet even in summer scorching heat alternates with the most piercing cold; and the vicissitudes are so sudden and severe, that strong persons, much more invalids, should beware how they yield to the temptation of wearing thin clothing, and of abandoning cloaks and great-coats.

§ 2. The cause of these sudden changes in temperature is the Mistral or N.W. wind, one of the scourges of Provence, from the occurrence of which no season is exempt. It is a most violent, bitterly cold, and drying wind, which fills the atmosphere with a yellow haze, and is very painful to the eyes and face. It prevails chiefly in spring all along the coast, and up the Rhône as far as Valence.

"Voilà le vent, le tourbillon, l'ouragan, les diables déchainés qui veulent emporter votre château; quel ébranlement universel!" are the words in which Madame de Sévigné describes it: it overthrows at times the largest trees; their branches generally grow in a direction contrary to its cutting blasts, and while it rages, vessels are not unfrequently prevented putting out to sea in the teeth of it. It was well known to the ancients, and is supposed to be the Melamborias of Strabo, which he describes as sweeping stones and gravel from the ground. It is sufficient to blow a man from his horse. "In the winter months, December, January, February, the weather is truly charming, with the mistral very rarely."

§ 3. Another plague of the South of France is the mosquitoes, cousins, or moucherons, which, to an inhabitant of the North, unaccustomed to their venomous bite, will alone suffice to destroy all pleasure in travelling. They appear in May, and last sometimes to November; and the only good which the mistral effects is that it modifies the intensely hot air of summer, and represses, momentarily, these pestilential insects. They are not idle by day, but it is at night that the worn-out traveller needing repose is most exposed to the excruciating torments inflicted by this cruel insect. Woe to him who for the sake of coolness leaves his window open for a minute; attracted by the light, they will pour in by myriads. It is better to be stifled by the most oppressive heat than to go mad. Even closed shutters and a mosquito curtain (cousinière), with which all beds in good inns are provided, are ineffectual in protecting the sleeper. A scrutiny of the walls, and a butchery of all that appear, may lessen the number of enemies; but a single one effecting an entry, after closing the curtains and tucking up the bed-clothes with the utmost care, does all the mischief. The sufferer awakes in the middle of the night in a state of fever, and adieu to all further prospect of rest. The pain inflicted by the bites is bad enough, but it is the air of triumph with which the enemy blows his trumpet, the tingling, agonising buzzing which fills the air, gradually advancing nearer and nearer, announcing the certainty of a fresh attack, which carries the irritation to the highest pitch.

The pain and swellings usually last for several days, and there is no remedy but patience. The state of the blood at the time, however, considerably modifies or increases the amount and duration of suffering. It is said to be the female only which inflicts the sting. Mosquitoes, of course, are not peculiar to the S. of France, but there the traveller from the N. will probably first encounter them; and it is necessary that he should be prepared.

The scorpion is not uncommon in Languedoc and Provence, and even now and then makes his entrance into the houses, being brought in along with fire-wood; and it is even not uncommon to discover it in the folds of the bed-curtains or sheets. Instances, however, of persons being bitten by this foul insect are very rare indeed: from its nature it is fearful, and, when discovered, endeavours to run away and hide itself.

§ 4. The foregoing description of Provence and Bas Languedoc has been limited to the dark side of the picture: it remains to examine the resources, fertility, and curiosities of the country.

Its valleys, and lowlands accessible to irrigation, are most fertile; and the earth, where it can be sufficiently supplied with moisture, teems with varied productions all the year round. Before the spring is over, the mulberry-trees, which line the roads and cross the fields, in ugly cabbage-headed rows, are stripped of their juicy foliage to feed the silkworm—silk alone being a source of immense and increasing wealth in the S. provinces of France. Early in summer comes the corn-harvest, the crops having grown, for the most part, under the boughs of the mulberry, olive, or vine; sunshine and soil sufficing for both. Autumn is the season of the vintage; and the wines of Lunel and Frontignan have a widely-established reputation, though the bulk of the produce is used in the manufacture of wines and for mixing with other sorts. Chestnuts are another crop collected in the same season, and furnishing a store of wholesome food for the peasant during winter. The winter has set in before the olives are gathered and pressed. A visit to the market-place in every town will show with what abundance the earth brings forth fruits and vegetables of endless variety—grapes, figs, melons, almonds, citrons, mushrooms, tomatoes, truffles, &c. The drying and preserving of fruits of various kinds is a great source of mercantile wealth to Provence.

§ 5. There is one little corner of Provence which combines remarkable picturesque beauty with a climate so serene and warm, and well protected from injurious blasts, that its productions are almost tropical in their nature. This is a narrow strip in the Department of the Var, bordering on the blue Mediterranean, extending from Toulon to Nice, stretching inland to Grasse and Draguignan. In this favoured region, the true garden of Provence, the real paradise of the Troubadours, in the valleys, and on the S. slopes of the small mountain-chains of Les Maures and Les Estrelles, sheltered from the injurious mistral, and open only to the S., the aloe, the cactus, the pine of Aleppo, the umbrella-pine, the pomegranate, the orange, and even the palm-tree, may be seen flourishing in the open air. This is especially the case at St. Maxime, Hyères, Antibes, and Cannes, whose gardens, luxuriant with aromatic herbs, heliotropes, orange-flowers, jasmines, &c., supply the perfume-distilleries of Grasse, where more scents, pomades, essences, &c., are made than in any town in Europe, save Paris.

§ 6. The chief attraction, however, of these southern provinces is their Roman remains, not surpassed in beauty and preservation by any in Italy. No traveller should miss seeing the Pont du Gard, between Avignon and Nîmes, and the walls of the Theatre at Orange, stupendous and most impressive structures, perfectly characteristic of the great people that raised them; the Amphitheatres of Nîmes and Arles, though far less enormous than the Colosseum, are more interesting on account of their better preservation. The Maison Carrée is a gem of architecture: the monuments at St. Rémy, and the arch at Orange, are also of great excellence, besides many other curious relics, which are described in their proper place. It may be interesting to compare the Roman aqueduct with that recently erected to convey water to Marseilles, at Roquefavour.

§ 7. The student of Christian architecture will find much to interest him in the churches of Arles and its vicinity, of St. Gilles, of Aix, of Avignon (the cathedral), where the stupendous Papal palace is also a very interesting historical monument, and many more.

In these and other mediæval monuments of S. E. France the traveller will not fail to observe the long-perpetuated influence of Roman architecture on the ecclesiastical edifices of the district, which still retains its Roman name of THE Province, par excellence. "A marked difference of character prevails between the church architecture of the S. of France and that of the N., in the smallness of the windows, designed no doubt to exclude the glare and heat. This gives the southern churches a much greater solemnity than those immense lantern-structures of the N.: unless where the windows are entirely filled with stained glass, it is difficult to produce the same effect. The influence of climate evidently gave rise to the distinctions in the two styles."—E. o. S.

§ 8. The Rhône, the great highway to Provence and to Italy, is not of commercial utility proportioned to its length and volume, owing to its turbulence and shifting sand-banks. Yet it is a noble river, and its scenery very striking, and some have preferred it to the Rhine; but, in truth, the two have a totally different character, and each its own excellences. The traffic upon the Rhine is at least fourfold greater than that on the Rhône.

The works which will best afford detailed information respecting Provence and the S. of France are—Millin, 'Voyage dans le Midi de la France;' Frossard, 'Tableau de Nîmes;' Merimée, 'Rapport sur les Monuments du Midi de la France' (for architecture); and Hughes' 'Itinerary of Provence and the Rhône."

ROUTE 125.

LYONS TO MARSEILLES, BY AVIGNON,
ARLES, VIENNE, VALENCE, ORANGE.
— RAILWAY. — DESCENT OF THE RHÔNE (B).

Lyons (Perrache).	Miles.
Vienne . . . . .	19
St. Rambert jn. . . . .	38
Valence . . . . .	65
Montellmar . . . . .	94
Orange . . . . .	125
Avignon . . . . .	143
Tarascon . . . . .	156
Arles . . . . .	165
Marseilles . . . . .	218

By water to Arles, 285 kilom.

Railway opened 1854 and 1855-6.

Trains in 8 (Exp.) to 11 hrs. to Marseilles.

Terminus in the Allée Perrache.

Steamers, belonging to several companies, start every morning at daybreak from the Quai near the Place Bellecour on the rt. bank of the Rhône, except when the fogs are dense in autumn, or the river is too high to allow them to pass under the bridges, or too low, which sometimes happens. The hour of departure varies according to the season, and the time occupied in the voyage according to the efficiency of the steamers. Steamers are much less resorted to since the rly. was opened, and rarely except to descend the river. The rly. continually runs by the river-bank, and the description of the route is as seen from the river, but the beauty

Fluvial

Published by John Murray Albemarle Street London 1864.

Drawn & Eng'd by J. & C. Walker.

of it is almost entirely lost from the rlyw. "The Express" steamboats profess to descend to Avignon in 7 hours, more usually in 10, and return upwards to Lyons in 10 to 18. Other boats make the voyage to Avignon. The passenger's fare varies from 10 to 20 or 30 fr. They are by no means clean, and are often crowded with merchandise. There is a Restaurant on board. They touch at Vienne, Tournon, Valence, Avignon, Beaucaire, Arles.

The Railway is carried from the terminus in the Allée Perrache, over the Rhône, on an iron bridge, through the Faubourg Guillotière on its l. bank.

There is little interest at first in the banks of the Rhône, after getting clear of Lyons, its bustling quays and tall stately houses, and passing, rt., the junction of the Saône with the Rhône,—

"Ubi Rhodanus ingens amne prærapido fluit,
Ararque dubitans quo suos cursus agat
Tacitus quietis alluit ripas vadis,"—Seneca.

under the bridge of La Mulatière, which carries the Rly. to St. Etienne over the Saône (Rte. 118). The junction of the Rhodanus and Arar originally took place nearly 2 m. higher up, until 1770, when the architect Perrache constructed dykes between the rivers, and gained from the water the long tongue of land now partly occupied by an important suburb of Lyons. Cæsar appears to have visited the junction from his description of it: "Arar in Rhodanum influit incredibili lenitate, ita ut oculis in utram partem fluat, judicari non possit." (See Lyons, Rte. 108.)

The united waters form a broad majestic flood; the banks are studded with small villages, scattered among willow and poplar avenues.

rt. Givors, distinguished at a distance by the smoke of its glass-houses. It is a place of some importance from its position on the St. Etienne railway, and at the mouth of the canal, which brings down coal, iron, &c., from Rive de Gier (see Rte. 118). Omnibuses run between Givors and Vienne, corresponding with the railway trains.

Along the banks of the Rhône, from Lyons to Valence, a "poste aux ânes," or relays of donkeys, for the convenience of bargemen and such persons, was at one time established. The cultivation of the vine is very general in the neighbourhood of Vienne: vineyards here cover all the slopes.

1. Vienne Stat. (Inn: Table Ronde), a town of 19,052 Inhab., stretches its buildings along the l. bank of the Rhône, faced by a tolerably handsome quay, at the foot of precipitous hills, and runs up a small valley between 2 heights: the one, Mont Salomon, crowned by a ruined castle of the middle ages; the other, Mont Pipet, originally a fortified camp of the Romans. The Castle of Salomon passes with the common people for the prison of Pilate, who was banished to Vienne in Gaul, according to Eusebius and others, after his return from Judæa to Rome.

From the valley behind Vienne, the Gère issues out into the Rhône, turning in its passage many mill-wheels, and giving activity to manufactures of coarse cloth, pasteboard, iron-forges, &c.

Vienne is one of the most ancient towns in France, having been already a flourishing place before Lyons is known to have existed. It is mentioned by Cæsar, by Ausonius, in the line,

"Accolit Alpinis opulenta Vienna calonia," and by Martial, who calls it "opulenta Vienna," and it is natural to expect to find some remains of its Roman possessors. Besides numerous water-conduits and substructions of masonry, the chief Roman building is a Temple, supposed to have been dedicated to Augustus, in form somewhat like the Maison Carrée at Nîmes, but much injured during the middle ages by having the interstices of its columns built up with masonry, and the columns themselves rasped to bring them to a level with the walls, in order to convert it into a church. It is now a museum, and contains a number of sculptured and architectural fragments found in and about the town, a very rich frieze, inscriptions, terra-cottas, capitals of columns, &c. A Greyhound in marble, two Boys quarrelling about a Bird (a common subject of antique sculpture), and 2 bronze Dolphins found in the Rhône, are worth notice.

Behind the Place du Pilon is a lofty double arch and vault, with pillars inside, called Arche de Triomphe, but in reality part of the portico of the ancient Forum. It now leads to the modern theatre.

On the slopes of Mont Pipet the remains of the seats of a Roman theatre may, it is said, be traced among the vineyards, but they are very inconsiderable. Lastly, outside the town, below it, is the Roman obelisk, or Aiguille, described below.

The Cathedral of St. Maurice is a stately and interesting edifice in the lower part of the town, raised upon an elevated basement or parvis, facing the river, on a line with the bridge, and approached by a broad flight of steps. Its W. front, flanked by 2 massive towers, is rich in flamboyant ornaments, but they are clumsy and without delicacy. It was much mutilated, like all the churches on the Rhône, by the fanatic Huguenot soldiery (1562), less than 30 years after its completion. The interior wants height. The pointed roof, painted blue, and sprinkled with stars, and the 4 compartments nearest to the W. end, seem of the same age, viz. 15th or 16th centy. The pillars of the choir, and the apses at the E. end, are said to be of the 12th centy. The delicate carving of the capitals and of other ornaments is very remarkable. There are no transepts. A marble monument of an Archbishop Montmorin, on the rt. of the altar, though much vaunted, seems a heavy piece of work; its artist was called Michel Angelo Slodtz. The N. porch retains some statues in a stiff style.

The Romanesque tower of St. Andre le Bas, a curious and very old church, will be admired by the architect for its composition and proportions; but the cloister, so interesting for the varied sculpture of its capitals, is now included in a private garden, and its pillars built up in a wall.

In the suburb Pont l'Evêque, in a hill on the l. bank of the Gère, there is a lead-mine.

Many who have occupied themselves in tracing the route of Hannibal over the Alps suppose that he quitted the l. bank of the Rhône at Vienne (which was one of the chief towns of the Allobroges), proceeding hence, by Bourgouin and Yenne, to the Little St. Bernard.

Vienne is interesting as the cradle of Christianity in the West: the Epistle of its early Martyrs to their brethren in the E. is a very instructive and perfectly authentic document.

Vienne was capital of the 1st kingdom of Burgundy in the 5th centy., and at a later period was the capital and residence of the Dauphins. A celebrated ecclesiastical council held here 1307, and presided over by Pope Clement V. and Philippe le Bel, condemned the Order of the Templars. The archbishops long enjoyed considerable temporal sway: they had the privilege of naming the governor of the forts Salomon and Pipet, who was always a canon of the cathedral, but had a military deputy under him.

A suspension-bridge, reconstructed since 1840, the previous one having been washed down by the inundation, connects Vienne with, rt., its suburb, St. Colombe, where stands by the water side an old square tower, sometimes called "Tour de Mauconseil," from a tradition that Pilate threw himself off from the top of it. In reality it was built by Philippe de Valois as a tête-du-pont to the original stone bridge, destroyed by the Rhône, 1651, except the trunks of some of its piers, still visible when the water is low.

1. Immediately below Vienne, in the midst of a field, on the rt. of the road to Avignon, stands a Roman obelisk, called L'Aiguille, 76 ft. high, including its square base, pierced by a double arch, and supported at the angles by pillars of clumsy proportions. The whole is of excellent masonry, the stones being fastened together, not by mortar, but by iron clamps. Its destination is unknown, and it bears no trace of an inscription, but was probably a sepulchral monument.

rt. The uniformity of the vine-clad slopes which border the river is relieved by the lofty irregular ridge and picturesque outline of Mont Pilas, 3516 ft. above the sea-level, a member of the chain of hills which divides the Rhône from the Loire.

rt. Ampuis. At its base is a small village, from the flat behind which rise the sunny slopes of Côte Rôtie, called "the burnt side," from their happy exposure to the sun, which, striking full on them, as on a forcing wall, matures the excellent wine named after them.

rt. Condrieux, a town of 4000 Inhab., famed for its wines; it has a suspension-bridge over the Rhône.

The soil of the valley of the Rhône abounds with rolled pebbles, which in places almost exclusively compose it; yet upon this grows the mulberry-tree in vast quantities, planted in rows across the fields, while beneath, and in spite of its shade, luxuriant crops of corn are produced.

rt. There is another suspension-bridge leading to Serrières, whence a road strikes off to Annonay. (Rte. 119.)

rt. The church of Champagne is a Romanesque edifice of the 13th centy., well worth the attention of the antiquary, on account of the singular bas-reliefs with which its outer walls are incrustated, consisting of heads of animals, monsters, &c., and for the sculptured cornice running under the roof. Some of these carvings have been conjectured to belong to a more ancient structure. Two of them represent David and Goliath, and Judith and Holofernes. The interior ends in an apse at the E. The grand portal is decorated above with 6 bas-reliefs in medallions, representing, 1. a satyr; 2. a lion couchant; 3 and 4. 2 young fauns; 5. a tiger; 6. a group of 2 genii embracing. The meaning of these sculptures seems difficult to explain.

Before the Revolution the towns of Andance, Champagne, Annonay, though on the rt. bank of the Rhône, belonged to Dauphiné, having been ancient possessions of the Dauphins of Vienne.

1. St. Rambert Junct. Stat. Just below this the Railrd. passes from the Dépt. de l'Isère into that of La Drôme, and the ancient province of Dauphiné is entered. A branch Railway from St. Rambert to Grenoble. (Rte. 131.)

rt. The road from St. Etienne to Marseilles, by Annonay, descends through a gap in the vine-clad granite hills near rt. Andance (Rte. 119), and crosses the Rhône, a little lower down, by the suspension-bridge of

1. St. Vallier Stat. (Inn: Poste or Grand Sauvage, fair), a town of 2455 Inhab., consisting of a long street, extending on a terrace above the Rhône. It has a large modern château. There are numerous silk-mills here.

Behind the town, in the gorge of the Galaure, rise the picturesque ruins of the castle of Vals; and near it is the Roche Taillée, a passage cut in the rock, through which a small road is carried.

1. The Château de Ponsas (derived, by the vulgar, from Pontius Pilate, who, according to the tradition, ended his days here by throwing himself from the rock) is a fine object, rising over the river and village on the summit of a precipice.

The valley of the Rhône is narrowed to a pass, by rocks projecting on either side, on approaching Tain. Nearly opposite the mouth of the considerable river Doux, which is crossed by a wire bridge,

1. A lofty round-topped hill, with a scanty scarf of black bushes round its shoulder, pushes forward its naked and almost precipitous sides into the river, which, along with the road, winds closely round its base. On doubling the sort of cape which it forms, its southern side will be found to consist of a more gradual slope, descending in a succession of steps, or terraces, formed by the natural divisions of the slaty beds of gneiss rock, all covered from top to bottom with vines. This is the celebrated vineyard of L'Hermitage, named from the ruin on its summit, once, perhaps, a hermit's cell. On its favoured slopes the sun plays all day long, maturing the juices of its grapes, which produce the Hermitage wine, one of the finest which grows on the Rhône. The white sort will keep for half a century; the red, of the best quality, is sent to Bordeaux, to be mixed with clarets of first growth, principally the kinds exported to England, which derive from it, and not from brandy, as is commonly supposed, that body which fits them for exportation, and adapts them to the English palate. The whole extent of the vineyard does not, perhaps, exceed 300 acres, and of this only a part near the centre, where a calcareous band traverses the gneiss rock, produces first-rate wines; the soil below is too rich, and above is too cold. The hill is divided among numerous proprietors; it is cultivated with vast labour, and at great expense; the vines are manured with sheep or horse dung. The grape grown for the red wine is called Ceras, and is said to have been brought from Shiraz, in Persia, by one of the hermits of the mountain.

1. Tain Stat. (Inns, mere cabarets), a town of 2338 Inhab., connected by 2 wire suspension-bridges (one for foot passengers only; the other was the first, on a large scale, erected in France) with rt. Tournon, one of the chief towns of the Dépt. de l'Ardèche (4522 Inhab.). Above the bridge the picturesque towers of the old castle of the Counts of Tournon and Ducs de Soubise rise on a precipitous rock, from which there is a splendid view towards the E.; it is now converted into a barrack. Below the bridge, at the water-side, stands the Collège Royal, originally founded by the Cardinal de Tournon, a favourite of Francis I. (1542), and a few years after, 1561, delivered over to the care of the Jesuits in order to extirpate the seeds of Protestantism, and they maintained their post here until the suppression of the Order in 1766. It next became an Ecole Militaire. Inn: H. de l'Europe, exorbitant charges.

1. The valley of the river Isère, one of the chief tributaries of the Rhône, rising at the foot of the Little St. Bernard, now opens out into a wide and monotonous plain, after traversing which, and being crossed itself by the rly. on a fine bridge, just below the old road bridge of 7 arches, the river falls into the Rhône. Its waters have usually a dark tint, contrasting with the white muddy Rhône. Hannibal is supposed by some to have reached the foot of the Alps by ascending this valley, having passed the Rhône lower down, perhaps near Roquemaure.

1. The vista, opening out through the valley of the Isère, is terminated by the majestic snowy mass of Mont Blanc, clearly distinguished from among the Alps of Dauphiné; a magnificent object, although 70 or 80 m. distant as the crow flies.

rt. The picturesque white feudal castle, Châteaubourg, perched on a pedestal of rock, washed by the Rhône, with a little hamlet at its foot, stands in the eye of Mont Blanc, and the everlasting snows of the monarch of mountains add magnificence to the distant horizon of a view in which the exulting and swelling Rhone occupies the foreground. The Castle is besides of historic interest, since in it St. Lewis, on his way to the Crusade, spent the eve and festival of the Assumption, A.D. 1248. It had fallen to ruin and was condemned to destruction when rescued by its present owner, Mr. L. Giraud.

rt. Cornas, at the foot of limestone hills of considerable elevation, produces a tolerable red wine.

rt. On approaching Valence, the bare limestone precipices, rising behind the village of St. Peray, and crowned by the picturesque castle of Crussol, arrest the attention. (See below.)

1. Valence Stat. and Buffet (10 min. halt) — Inns: Poste; (H. du Louvre). Try here the sparkling St. Peray, an excellent wine, not inferior to Champagne. It costs here 3 or 4 frs. the bottle, and Châteauneuf des Papes 1½ fr.

The steamer comes to her moorings below the wire Suspension-Bridge.

The high road from Lyons to Avignon skirted the outside of the town, which lies between it and the river, through a faubourg, in which the Poste and other inns are situated.

Valence is an ancient town of 13,829 Inhab. It is chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Drôme, and was formerly capital of the Valentinois, created a dukedom for the infamous Cæsar Borgia, by Louis XII.

The Cathedral, a Romanesque building, small in size and very plain, is yet interesting to the architect for its age and constructive peculiarities. It is a cross with long transepts. Tower rebuilt, 1862. Outside the nave, above the aisle roof, runs a small arcade of arches, alternately round and straight sided. The interior is simple; the piers, surmounted by nearly pure Corinthian capitals, support round arches, from which rises the cylindrical roof, without triforium or clerestory. The E. end is an apse, roofed with a semi-dome. The choir contains a bust and bas-relief, by Canova, to the memory of Pope Pius VI., who, after having been carried off a prisoner from the Vatican and loaded with insults by the French, which he bore with resignation, died here, 1799.

On the N. side of the Ch. is a singular building, known as Le Pendentif, of classical architecture, erected 1548, as a monument to the family Mistral, whose arms are still visible on it. It is square in form, consisting of 4 piers, with pillars in the angles, and arches between them, supporting a vault, the first of its kind erected, and regarded as a type in architecture. In the rusticated space occupying the sides, carvings of monstrous birds may be discovered.

The ancient Evêché, now subdivided, and partly destroyed, was often visited by Madame de Sévigné.

The semicircular E. end of the cathedral adjoins the Place aux Clercs, an Esplanade between the Faubourg and the river, ornamented with a bronze statue of the Napoleonist General Championnet, a native of Valence.

In the "Grande Rue," leading out of this Place, will be found a very rich and interesting specimen of domestic architecture, in a Mansion of the 16th centy., now converted into a bookseller's shop. Its origin and destination are not clearly known. It has a Gothic front, covered with elegant Florid tracery, now sadly mutilated, combined with a certain mixture of classic ornament, such as rows of heads and statues, the upper heads representing the 4 Seasons. The doorway is an elegant flattened arch; the transoms of the windows have unfortunately been knocked out. The front of the house is not in one plane, but projects forward; only one part of it is ornamented, and that which is unadorned retreats backward at a slight angle, so as to be partly concealed from view as you approach it from the Place aux Clercs, probably with design on the part of the architect. The groined and vaulted passage, and the walls towards the inner court, also deserve notice. In the same street, at No. 4, on the 1st floor, Napoleon lodged, while yet a poor and obscure sous-lieutenant of artillery; and some of his first essays in the art of war were made in the Champs de Mars here. The staircase at the back of the house of Madame Dupré, Rue Perolierie, is a good specimen of the Renaissance in architecture, enriched with sculpture.

The Citadelle, begun by Francis I., and bastioned only on the side facing the town, but of no use now as a fortress, is converted into a Caserne du Génie. From the finished bastion there is a good view over the river, of St. Peray, and the Castle of Crussol on its arid rock beyond the Rhône.

Valence is the seat of an Ecole d'Artillerie, and the practice of gunnery is taught on the polygone, a large sandy area on the outskirts of the town, bordering on the Lyons road.

The reeling (filature) and throwing (moulinage) of silk affords employment to a large number of persons at Valence. The view from the Castle of Crussol will well repay the ascent. (See next page.)

Steamers up and down the Rhône daily. The ascent to Lyons is made in one day.

[rt. St. Peray, famed for one of the best wines of the Rhône, is 2 Eng. m. from Valence, on the opposite side of the Rhône, within the Dépt. of the Ardèche: an omnibus goes thither several times a day; and those who are curious in wines should pay a visit to the vineyards of M. Giraud.

The little village of St. Peray lies snugly in the quiet nook of a sheltered valley running down to the Rhône opposite Valence. Its most conspicuous buildings are the house of the proprietor of the vineyards around; and on the height, a little above it, the Château de Beauvregard, a singular mansion on the plan of a mimic fortress, bastioned and curtained, with loop-holed walls, portcullis, &c., built, it is said, by Marshal Vauban, as a freak, reminding one of Uncle Toby and Corporal Trim, now converted into a residence for M. Giraud, proprietor of the vineyard, while the cellars beneath, of vast extent, serve as a dépôt for the wine of the district.

The slopes of the hills around St. Peray are covered with one uninterrupted vineyard, and wherever they present an aspect to the S.E., so as to receive the sun's rays during nearly the whole day, the best wines grow: such are the Côte de Hongrie, Chapelle de Crussol, and the Prieuré vineyards. The soil is a decomposed granite, and the vine seems to flourish most on this mere dry gravel. Great pains are taken in digging about the roots, but the only manure employed is the leaves of the box, cut small. The grape, when ripe, assumes a beautiful golden hue; its taste is cloyingly sweet, and the saccharine matter exuding often covers the bunches with a brown stain.

The sparkling St. Peray wine is distinguished from Champagne in this respect, that its sweetness arises from the natural juice of the grape, and not from the addition of sugar to the grape-juice: and it is consequently a far more wholesome and not less palatable wine. The red St. Peray derives its colour, a delicate rose tint, from the hue of the skins of the grapes. The vintage takes place about the middle or end of September, and the juice is at once transferred to the cask before the fermentation has begun, and rests there for 6 or 7 months, during which time it is fined. In March or April it is bottled, and remains 2 or 3 years to mature, and allow the dregs to deposit. The bottles are piled up in stacks, each row separated by laths, to allow of the bottles which burst (and they form 14 or 15 per cent. of the whole) to be withdrawn. After this the wine is racked, i.e. every bottle is taken out, and is thrust, with its neck downwards, into a hole cut in a board. By this means the dregs sink down gradually into the neck, and, as they descend, day by day, the bottle is tilted more and more until its position becomes nearly vertical. To expedite the falling of the sediment the bottles are lifted and set down with a jerk once or twice a day; and after receiving 200 of these jerks, the bottle is taken up, and the sediment is discharged by cutting the string and letting the cork fly, and with it the lees at the neck of the bottle, but as little as possible of the wine. The vacancy thus caused is filled with clear wine; and this process of corking and uncorking is repeated 2 or 3 times, until no more sediment is deposited. The wine is then fit for use, and an excellent wine it is, the "St. Peray grand Mousseux" of M. Faure being equal to a first-class Champagne.]

rt. On quitting Valence a very conspicuous but unsightly line of cliffs of limestone, naked, arid, and partly stained black and yellow, bounds the W. side of the Rhône valley, opposite to and below Valence. Quarries of building-stone are worked in these rocks. The highest peak of all, a castled crag rising above the entrance of the valley in which lies St. Peray, is crowned by the ruins of the Castle of Crussol, called, from its 2 projecting and roofless gables, Les Cornes de Crussol: one of "the horns" has been undermined by the stone-quarriers. It belonged to the ancient family of the Crussols, Ducs d'Uzès, and once enclosed within its fortifications, which may be seen running down the rock, a small village long since deserted. Owing to the precipice, from whose very edges its walls start up, it must have been impregnable in the olden time. The view from the top is most remarkable, extending over the junction and valleys of the Rhône and Isère, with the Alps in the distance.

rt. Lower down, on the top of the same escarpment of limestone, stands Soyons Castle, now an utter ruin, once a stronghold of the Calvinists, who by means of it held the key of the Rhône, intercepting the communication between Lyons and the S. in 1627, under their chief, Brissot: it was taken and demolished the same year by the Prince de Condé. A flight of steps cut in the rock leads to the summit.

1. Among the Dauphiné mountains the Roche Courbe becomes a conspicuous feature in the landscape, from its precipitous sides and horned brow. A little further down it changes its aspect, presenting a series of peaks as seen from the river.

rt. The river Eyrieu pours itself into the Rhône, a little below Charmes, at Beauchastel, where a wire bridge shortens the way to Lavoulte by more than 2 m. Formerly it was necessary to ascend as high as St. Laurent du Pape to cross the Eyrieu.

rt. Lavoulte, a little town, piled up in a heap against a rock, is distinguished by the large castle on the summit of the height above it, and the clouds of smoke rising from the 4 large iron-furnaces at its base. The Castle, an ancient possession of the house of Ventadour, and residence of Louis XIII. in 1629, is now occupied by an iron-company, and partly serves as a fire-brick kiln: 1 or 2 picturesque towers remain of its older feudal part. The furnaces at its base are supplied with a very rich ore (red carbonate or hæmatite), from mines a short way up the valley. More than 300 persons are employed in them and in the iron-works; and the red tinge from the ore pervades the hideously filthy streets, and its dirty inhabitants, whose flesh, clothes, and even hair, acquire the same ruddy stain. The coal comes from St. Etienne, and the metal is sent hence in barges, for whose reception a little basin has been formed here at the water side.

rt. Pouzin, a small town with a suspension bridge; activity is caused by the establishment of two large iron furnaces: nearly opposite

1. the river Drôme, which gives its name to a Dépt., pours itself into the Rhône.

1. On either side of the Drôme, about 2 m. above its confluence, stand the towns of 13 Livrons Junct. Stat. (half of whose 3457 Inhab. are Protestants) and Loriol Stat. (Inn: Chariot d'Or). A fine bridge over the Drôme connects them. On the l. in the valley is the Château of Crest, well placed. Loriol was the birthplace and residence of Faujas de St. Fond, who wrote a bulky tome on the extinct Volcanoes of Central France.

The branch rail from Livrons to Privas by Lavoulte (Rte. 121) opens a way to the volcanic district of the Ardèche by Aubenas (Rte. 121).

rt. Cruas, a curious fortified Abbey on a hill, in ruins, but retaining its antique ramparts, gates, and donjon, which stood sieges in 1584 and 1585, from the Calvinists, who were repulsed by the monks. The Ch., below the road, and half buried under the deposits brought down by a neighbouring torrent, is a curious specimen of Romanesque architecture: beneath it are crypts. It contains the monument of Count Adhemar, founder of Montélimart and Rochemaure.

One of the most striking scenes on the banks of the Rhône is rt. Rochemaure, a small village at the base of a hill, surmounted by the ruins of a feudal castle, which belonged to the families of Ventadour and Soubise. The donjon, crowning a now isolated peak, was formerly joined to the rest of the fortress by bridges thrown across the abyss. About  $\frac{1}{4}$  m. higher up the river rise 3 peaked masses of black basalt, contrasting vividly with the light-coloured limestone around, the middle peak rising precipitously 300 ft. above the river. In these precipices of Rochemaure you behold the last root or limb of the Coiron chain of hills, which, after traversing the whole of the Ardèche, terminates here, on the margin of the Rhône. The black rocks are 3 dykes of basalt, branches of the vast lava current which caps that mountain plateau. The basalt assumes in places a columnar form, and some of the houses and a part of the castle are built of regular prisms. From the top of the rock of Rochemaure there is a fine view over the course of the Rhône, the Alps of Dauphiné, &c.

Immediately opposite, but  $1\frac{1}{2}$  from the river-side, stands

1. Montélimart Stat. (Inn. Poste, outside the town on the S.), an ancient town of 8632 Inhab., surrounded by modern boulevards and gardens, on the site of its walls. On a rising ground within it stands the castle or citadelle. It obtained its name, Monteil d'Adhemar, from a powerful family of magnates, who held possession here from the days of Charlemagne, and from whom many of the old noblesse of the province traced their lineage. Some morocco leather is made here, and the manufacture is mentioned by Rabelais. The almond-cakes (nougat), in texture resembling a piece of soap, enjoy some celebrity. Near this the olive is first seen, though it cannot be said to flourish farther to the N. than Avignon: black truffles abound; and the mulberry-tree is cultivated to a very great extent for the silkworm.

At a small village called Allan, about 9 m. S.E. of Montélimart, and the same from the Rhône, there existed, down to 1802, the first white mulberry planted in France. It was brought thither from Naples, by Guy Pope de St. Auban, seigneur of Allan, one of the soldiers who accompanied Charles VIII. on his Italian campaign, 1494. It spread hence all over the S. of France, where the culture of the silkworm is now one of the chief sources of industry and prosperity to the people. The silkworm is here called magnan, and the establishments in which it is reared magnaneries. A single tree will furnish 5 or 6 quintals of leaves, and not unfrequently as much as 9 or 10.

At the time when the eggs (la graine) are beginning to be hatched, sheets of paper pierced with holes are laid upon them, and through these the worms, extricating themselves from the shells, climb to reach the mulberry leaves hung over them, whence they are transferred to hurdles formed of reeds, arranged like shelves, for their future habitation. The worms live in that state (as larvæ) about 34 days, and in the course of that period change their skin 4 times. Before each of these sloughings, called "ages" by the peasant, they become torpid, and cease to eat, but, having changed their skin, their appetite increases enormously. The periods of appetite preceding the 4 first changes are called petites frèzes, and that before the 5th change grande frèze. The consumption of leaves increases with each age. The worms produced by an ounce of eggs devour 7 lbs. of leaves during the 1st age, and as much as 200 to 300 lbs. of leaves during the final period. At that time they make a noise in eating which resembles that of a heavy shower falling. On the 10th day of this 5th age they cease to eat, and try to climb up to the small twigs of heath or other plants purposely hung over the shelves, in order to spin their cocoon, which they complete in 3 or 4 days. Formerly it was usual to bake the cocoons in an oven, in order to kill the worm and prevent its biting through the silk; a more effectual method, unattended by risk of burning the silk, is to enclose the cocoon in a copper filled with steam, and hermetically sealed, and thus to stifle the worm. It is then fit for reeling (filature).

[17 m. S.E. of Montélimart is Château Grignan, celebrated in the letters of Madame de Sévigné, and the residence of her son-in-law. It was originally a stately pile, "un château vraiment royal," as Madame de S. calls it, seated on a commanding height above the town, fronted with a terrace raised partly on a rock, partly on masonry, 100 ft. high, commanding an extensive view, bounded by the Mont Ventoux. But it was burnt and gutted at the Revolution by a band of robbers composed of the scum of Orange and the neighbouring towns, and now stands a mere shell; yet the window of the bed-chamber and boudoir of the Sévigné is still pointed out. In the church, whose tower adjoins the castle terrace, and rises to a level with it, Madame de Sévigné (who died at Grignan) is buried. A black stone in the pavement marks the entrance of the family vault, which was saved from desecration at the hands of the Revolutionist pillagers of the church by the removal of this stone, so as to conceal the position of the vault.

The traveller may regain the banks of the Rhône from Grignan by a different road, leading direct to La Palud, near Pont St. Esprit. The cross-roads, however, to and from Grignan are very bad indeed.]

In this portion of the route the finest scenery occurs, and the superior transparency of a southern atmosphere becomes perceptible in the remarkable blueness of the distant hills, approximating in intensity to ultramarine. The inhabitant of a northern climate, who has, perhaps, regarded as exaggerations the azure mountains in the backgrounds of the paintings of Titian, will be surprised to find them here realised in nature.

The Rhone is skirted by high limestone cliffs before reaching Châteauneuf Stat., opposite to which, on the further bank of the Rhone, stands rt. Viviers, a town of only 2500 Inhab., yet a bishop's see, and anciently the capital of the province of Vivarais, which is named after it. The town, enclosed within its old walls, is a complicated labyrinth of narrow streets, partly crossed by arches, not unlike the interior of a hive. On an eminence, near the verge of the cliff, rising abruptly from the Rhône, stands the Cathedral, overtopping the other buildings: it is small, and not very remarkable; the nave modern, surmounted by a tower. Near it is the Evêché. At the upper end of the town stands the Seminaire, a huge modern edifice of 6 stories, for the education of priests. A private house in the principal square presents in its richly ornamented front a good specimen of domestic architecture. Viviers suffered much during the wars of Religion, having been one of the first towns to declare against the king in favour of the Prince de Condé and the Protestant party, 1562. It was several times besieged and captured by both parties.

There is a road from Viviers to Au-benas, by Villeneuve de Berg, the birthplace of Olivier de Serres; near which is a curious volcanic mountain, known as les Rampes de Montbrul, pierced with grottoes.

1. The majestic summit of the Mont Ventoux, the extreme buttress or root pushed forth from the French Alps towards the Rhône, continues in view, a noble object and landmark from this as far as Avignon.

Below Viviers the river expands, and its current is divided by numerous willowy islands. The inundations of 1840 and 1856 each swept away the fine suspension-bridge of 3 curves.

rt. Bourg St. Andeol, a town of 4300 Inhab., built on a slope. Close to it is a copious source rising from the base of a rock, on the face of which, about 20 ft. from the ground, is a rudely-sculptured group, representing the Sacrifice of a Bull to the god Mithras, to whom the source seems to have been dedicated. It is now nearly effaced.

1. Opposite to St. Andeol, but removed  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. from the river, is Pierrelatte Stat., so called from the broad mass of calcareous rock rising out of the plain behind it, to a height of 300 or 400 ft. For many miles beyond this, nearly as far as Avignon, the road runs at such a distance from the Rhône that it is rarely seen at all.

1. La Palud Stat., the first place in the Dépt. Vaucluse, and in the ancient Provence, is about 2 m. distant from the Rhône, but the crocketed stone spire of its Gothic church may be distinguished. A few miles to the E. of the road is St. Paul Trois Châteaux, the Roman Augusta Tricastinorum.

rt. The river Ardèche pours its waters into the Rhône nearly opposite La Palud, and its deposits seem to have formed the numerous islands occurring near its mouth.

rt. At Pont St. Esprit, 4500 Inhab., whose citadel was built by Louis XIII. to keep in awe the Protestants, there is a bridge over the Rhône of 19 arches, and 4 small land arches, the longest stone bridge in the world, and down to 1806 the only one over the Rhône. It was built 1310 by an associated brotherhood formed in the town, then called St. Saturnin, and 45 years were occupied in its construction, the first stone having been laid 1265 by the prior of the convent. The cost of this great public work was defrayed by subscriptions raised among the inhabitants of both banks of the Rhône, and by offerings made by the pious at a little chapel dedicated to the Holy Ghost at the end of the bridge, whence its actual name. The stones for it were brought by water from the quarries of St. Andeol, and a company of monks and nuns was established on the bank, the one to superintend the works, the other to attend the sick or wounded workmen. It is 2550 Fr. ft., or 2717 Eng. ft. long, more than three times as long as London Bridge, and 17 ft. wide; the arches are irregular in size; the widest have an opening of 108 ft.; the piers are pierced with small, round-headed, flood-water arches. It is not straight, but makes an angle against the stream. The passage under the Pont St. Esprit used to be thought an achievement like that of shooting old London Bridge, owing to the rapidity of the current; but the experience of the pilots is a guarantee from all danger, and the steamers pass in perfect safety, although the eddying river, rushing through the low arches, has an alarming look, increased by the sudden twist which the steersman is obliged to give to the vessel the moment it has passed through. The bridge is about 2 m. distant from the high road to Avignon. Roads branch off from it E. to Gap, and S.W. to Nîmes, by the Pont du Gard. (Rte. 126.)

1. Montdragon Stat. and 5 Mornas Stat., both seated at the foot of precipitous cliffs crowned by ruined castles. From that of Mornas, as the story goes, the ferocious Huguenot leader, the Baron des Adrets, forced his prisoners to leap down on the pikes of his soldiers below.

1. After passing a small stream, the Aigues, a good view may be obtained of a huge structure surmounting the town of Orange, 3 m. inland from the Rhône: it is the wall of its Roman theatre. (See below.) The post-road, just before it reaches Orange, flanked by poplars, was carried in a double sweep round the antique Roman Arch.

1. Orange Station.—Inns: H. de la Passe, fair;—H. des Princes;—Griffin d'Or; both dear: mosquitoes are to be much dreaded here. (§ 3.) This town of 9254 Inhab., situated about 3 m. E. of the Rhône, was the ancient Arausio, and is remarkable for the interesting Roman remains which it possesses. Its name has been rendered familiar and illustrious by having been borne by the noble family of Nassau. It was the chief town of a small but independent principality which had existed from the 11th cent., and on the death of Philibert de Châlons, Prince of Orange, 1531, without children, became the inheritance of his sister, who was married to the Prince of Nassau Dillingen. The family of Nassau was confirmed in the possession by the Treaty of Ryswick; but upon the death of William III. of England the King of Prussia claimed it, as a descendant of the princes of Nassau-Orange, and in spite of other, rightful perhaps, but weaker claimants, he was allowed by the Treaty of Utrecht to make over the principality, in exchange for other possessions, to the King of France, from whose dominions it has never since been separated. The house of Nassau consequently retains at present no more than the title of Prince of Orange, which is borne by the heir apparent to the throne of Holland.

The principal Roman remains are, 1. The *\*Triumphal Arch*, situated about  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. outside the town, on the road to Valence. It is a handsome structure, in a good, if not in the best style of Roman architecture: its preservation is remarkable, considering that it was incorporated in the palace of the Princes of Orange; and the deep yellow tints of the stone (a tertiary limestone abounding in fossils) of which it is composed have a rich effect. The bas-reliefs with which it is adorned represent chiefly naval trophies,—rostra, masts, yards, shrouds, anchors, and a number of barbaric shields skillfully disposed; others consist of groups of figures, but the subjects are not satisfactorily explained: one female holds her finger to her ear. The sunken panels (coissons) in the vault of the central archway are very elegant. The date and destination of this arch are unknown; no inscription is visible, excepting certain names inscribed on the shields, among which the most distinct is MARIO, and some have, in consequence, supposed that it was raised in commemoration of Marius' victory over the Cimbri near Aix. But arches of triumph were not known, it appears, until the time of the emperors, and the generally-received opinion at present refers it to the reign of Marcus Aurelius, and to his successes on the Danube and in Germany.

The building has been very judiciously restored.

Quite at the other end of the dirty little town stands, 2. The *\*Roman Theatre*, at the foot of a hill, whose side, with skilful economy, was excavated into semicircular ranges of seats for the spectators, and whose top was crowned by the citadel of the Romans first, and afterwards of the Princes of Orange, finally razed by Louis XIV. The colossal wall forming the scena, the chord of the semicircle, built over against the hill, overtops all the puny edifices of modern times, and is conspicuous for miles around. Few such walls, it may safely be asserted, exist in any part of the world: its dimensions are, 111 ft. high,  $334\frac{1}{2}$  ft. long, and 13 ft. thick. It is formed of huge blocks, fitted accurately together without cement. It had 3 doorways below, and near the top ran 2 rows of projecting corbel stones, some of which are pierced with holes for the masts by which an awning was stretched over the scene. Owing, however, to the projection of the crowning cornice, the masts must have inclined outwards. The inner face of the wall is denuded of ornament; in its centre is an arch, and on either side a curious and lofty recess. The interior has recently been cleared of the miserable hovels which filled it, and whose tenants, in some instances, burrowing like moles, had formed cellars in the thickness of the wall, regardless of the risk of undermining it, and of being buried in its ruins. The removal of 100 of these cabins now enables the spectator to judge, to a certain extent, of the arrangement of the scene on its inner face. It is still accessible by stone stairs nearly to the top. Some of the corridors are vaulted with long stone beams. Near the top the stone is calcined and reddened by the action of fire. The apartments at the side were destined for the actors, scenery, and other accessories of a theatre. A few seats remain on the slope, formed by excavating the limestone rock: on one may be seen the letters Eq. C. III. (Knights' 3rd row).—Round the semicircle run 3 passages, lined with masonry of small stones. A great many fragments of architecture and sculpture, slabs of marble, pillars of granite, &c., dug up within the enclosure, are preserved here.

Side by side with this theatre ran a circus, or hippodrome, the greater part of which has disappeared, quarried out to build the houses of the town, except a few arches of the portico, which joined it to the theatre.

The ancient Arausio, which could construct and maintain edifices of such splendour and magnitude as these, far exceeded in extent the present provincial town; and, judging from the range of the Roman walls, part of whose circuit still remains, they may have enclosed a population of 40,000. A good survey of it may be made from the heights above the theatre, where the citadel, now reduced to fragments of masonry, and the base of a round tower, once stood.

The people of Orange have a character for ferocity, of which they certainly displayed a sample during the first Revolution; 378 persons perished here by the guillotine, in the space of 3 months, in compliance with the decree of the revolutionary tribunal.

[At Vaison, 15 m. N. E. of Orange, are some scanty ancient remains, 2 arches of a theatre, and a Roman bridge, of a single arch, over the torrent Lou Vèze, beyond which, in the modern town, are 2 old Romanesque churches, St. Quimin, partly of the 8th centy., and the cathedral, calculated to interest the antiquarian architect.

The most curious of the bas-reliefs and other antiquities, built into the walls of the house called Château Maraudy, have been removed to Avignon.]

The Rhône, below Orange, traverses a wide plain, with little variety of surface.

rt. Roquemaure, distinguished by its tower, perched on the edge of a cliff, excavated below by stone-quarries, is fixed on by various authors as the spot where Hannibal passed the Rhône with his army and elephants, 4 days' march below the junction of the Isère, on his way to the Little St. Bernard, where he crossed the Alps.

1. Nearly opposite is Châteauneuf des Papes, where the Popes had a country residence.

1. The stony plain on the E. of the Rhône is nearly barren, but supports a few olives and willows. The Railroad passes by

Courthézon Stat., near which is a salt lake, the only one in France; in its bed salt is collected when the waters dry up. There is greater fertility near

Bédarrides Stat. (Biturritæ, from 2 towers which it possessed), and Sorgues Junct. Stat., a village named from the clear stream flowing through it, which rises at Vaucluse. At its junction with the Rhône, that river divides into 2 branches, separated by broad islands. Branch rail to Carpentras (see below).

Le Pontet Stat.

The spires of Avignon, and the gigantic towers of the Papal palace, now rise conspicuously to view, whether we approach by land or water. A large infantry barrack has been built (1864) near

1. AVIGNON Station.—Inns: Hôtel de l'Europe, excellent; attentive landlady;—H. de Luxembourg. Capital buffet and good dinner at the Stat. Omnibus meets every train: fare 30 c., or 75 c. with luggage.

This ancient city of the Popes, now chef-lieu of the Dépt. de Vaucluse, is seated on the l. bank of the Rhône, a little above the influx of the Durance into it, and is still enclosed by the lofty walls, surmounted by a cornice of machicolated battlements, and flanked by watch-towers, which were constructed for its defence by Clement VI. in the middle of the 14th centy. They are very perfect and picturesque, interrupted only on the side towards the Rhône by the cliffs of the Rocher des Dons, which, starting up abruptly, nearly from the water's edge, abuts against the wall, serves as a rampart, and renders other defence needless. Within the circuit of these fortifications, however, will be found large spaces, now vacant, once covered with habitations; for Avignon, though now numbering only 31,812 Inhab., possessed down to the time of Louis XIV. a population of 80,000. It has indeed several thriving suburbs outside its walls. A suspension-bridge is thrown over the branches of the Rhône, from the Port d'Oulle to Villeneuve-lès-Avignon, on the rt. bank of the river. In the Place d'Oulle, just within this gate, stand the two principal hotels, and a small Theatre, designed by the architect Mignard, now a warehouse. On this place Marshal Brune, in passing through Avignon, 1815, furnished with Lord Exmouth's passport, was murdered by an infuriated mob of Provençal royalists, who, upon the news of the battle of Waterloo, and instigated by hatred of Buonaparte, rose upon their adversaries, and committed all sorts of excesses and massacres. The Marshal was shot by the pistol of an assassin in his chamber at the Hôtel du Palais Royal, his body was thrown into the Rhône, and his murderers were allowed by the government of the day to escape justice.

To obtain an idea of the leading features of Avignon and its vicinity, the traveller must penetrate through its ill-paved and dirty streets, so narrow that an awning is often stretched across, from house, to house to keep off the sun, to the *height of the Dons. On reaching its platform, now planted, converted into a public walk, and ornamented with a bronze statue of Alten, who introduced the culture of garance (madder-root) into France, in the Dépt. of Vaucluse, close to the old telegraph stat., he will find himself on the brink of a precipice, looking over the Rhône, here divided by an island, towards the stately towers of Villeneuve, which was long a frontier fortress of France, on the opposite bank. In the S. appears the barren range bordering the valley of the Durance, and the Durance itself hurrying on to join the Rhône. On the N.E. rise the Mont Ventoux, and the blue hills at whose feet lies Vaucluse; and close at hand the buildings of the city are spread out, surmounted by the palace of the popes, and its ill-omened tower of the Glacière, and by the cathedral, planted side by side.

The **Cathedral*, called Notre Dame des Doms (de Dominis), is founded on the rock, and approached by a long flight of steps. It is entered by a projecting porch, calculated to interest and puzzle the architect and antiquary, consisting of a circular arch, flanked by 2 Corinthian columns at the corners, so completely Roman in character that some have supposed it to have formed the porch of a Roman building, a temple of Hercules; and, judging from a juncture perceptible in the masonry behind, it is probably of a different date from the body of the church. The pediment surmounting it is rather higher pitched than is usual in classic buildings; its tympanum is pierced with a circular opening. This portico, it has been discovered by Messrs. Crowe and Cavalcaselle, was painted, 1339, by Simone Memmi of Sienna, with frescoes, still existing, but defaced. Behind this rises a massy W. tower, and the cross is surmounted by an octagon, supported at the angles and flanked externally by fluted Corinthian columns. The roof is Pointed: the side chapels date from the 14th centy.; that of St. Joseph was once a passage leading into the papal palace, and now forms the antichamber to the Sacristy. It contains the magnificent Gothic tomb of Pope John XXII., which once stood in the centre of the ch., a florid Gothic canopy, richly carved, but mutilated, [France.] and its niches emptied since the Revolution; beneath it reclines his mutilated effigy.

In the Ch. is preserved a very ancient altar, a slab of marble supported on 5 pillars with classic capitals. Benedict XII. has a plainer monument in a N. chapel. In the choir is placed the papal throne, now the seat of the archbishop, of marble, with reliefs of the Winged Bull of St. Luke, and the Lion of St. Mark. Near it is the monument of the brave Crillon. 4 or 5 popes were consecrated in this church.*

Besides what it suffered at the Revolution, this edifice was, in 1814, made the receptacle for some hundred Spanish prisoners. It has undergone repairs, and has been modernised with bad effect. One chapel is decorated with frescoes by Deveria; in one a statue of the Virgin, by Pradier, has been placed.

The ancient **Palace of the Popes* is magnificent from its colossal vastness, and very impressive. It was for many years degraded into a barrack, but has once more been restored, purified from its defilements, and reconverted into * The Popes gained possession of Avignon on the strength of a grant made by Joanna of Naples, while yet a minor, 1348: she was to receive for it 80,000 gold crowns, which were never paid.

List of the Popes who reigned at Avignon—all Frenchmen.

- 1305. Clement V. Born near Bordeaux.
- 1316. John XXII. Born at Cahors.
- 1334. Benedict XII. Born at Verdun, Comté de Foix.
- 1342. Clement VI. Born near Limoges.
- 1352. Innocent VI. Born near Limoges.
- 1362. Urban V. Born in diocese of Mende.
- 1370. Gregory XI. Born in Limousin. Quitted Avignon for Rome, 1376. Thus ended the Babylonish Captivity of the Romish Church, as it is called, "L'Empia Babilonia" of Petrarch's Sonnet, 91.

Afterwards the following schismatic Popes set up their throne at Avignon, and resided there 40 years.

- 1378. Clement VII.
- 1394. Benedict XIII. (Pedro de Luna.)
- 1424. Clement VIII.

On the termination of the Schism, Avignon became the residence of the Papal Legate, Louis XIV., "the eldest son of the Church," seized Avignon to revenge a pretended affront on his ambassador at Rome. Louis XV. held possession of it for 10 years. It was not united with France until 1791.

the Episcopal residence, under the care of M. Viollet le Duc, architect. It partakes of the mixed character of a feudal castle and convent. Its walls are 100 ft. high, and some of its towers 150 ft., with a proportionate thickness of masonry.

It is an edifice rich in associations. It was founded by Clement V., but his works were swept away to give place to the present castle, the grander design of Benedict XII., who employed the engineer Peter Obreri, the Vauban of his time, who built the N. portion 1336. It was continued down to 1370, and during the greater part of the 14th centy., the period of its construction by successive rulers, it was the seat of the Papal court, which had become a by-word for its luxury, profligacy, and venality. In those halls, now echoing to the oaths of prisoners, or subdivided and filled with soldiers' cribs and accoutrements, the conclave of cardinals sate, by whom the pope was elected. Here Petrarch was a guest. Simone Memmi of Sienna and his scholars adorned its walls, and in its dungeons Rienzi was a prisoner. Here the once formidable Tribune of Rome, who had ruled from the Capitol with the sway of the Cæsars, now humble and despicable, owed his life to the intercession of his friend the poet. He was imprisoned in the tower des Oubliettes, and fettered with a single chain, fastened into the vault of the dungeon; in other respects kept in honourable custody, and had his meals from the remnants of the papal table, which were distributed to the poor. He could pursue his beloved studies: the Bible, and the history of the ancient Romans, particularly the books of Livy, were his companions in his prison, as formerly at the height of his prosperity. These battlemented walls and towers defied for several years a French army under Marshal Boucicault, who in vain besieged within them the anti-pope Benedict XIII. (Pedro de Luna), who finally escaped by a postern.

Above the entrance, originally defended by drawbridges, portcullis, and iron gates, now removed, is the balcony whence the popes bestowed their benediction upon the people, and under it an eagle holding a thunderbolt! an addition of the reign of Napoleon III. A wide vaulted and finely groined stone staircase, under a depressed arch, on the rt. hand, leads up to what was once the great hall of the palace, called Salle Brûlée, ever since Pierre de Lude, papal legate in 1441, caused it to be blown up, with the guests assembled in it, consisting of the nobles of Avignon, in revenge for the murder of his nephew, a young libertine, who had outraged them by his excesses! Attached to it are side chapels, and the Salle du Consistoire. The Salle du Consistoire, the finest hall of all, is now divided by a floor halfway up into two rooms; the upper one a dormitory for enfants du troupe. This hall was painted with frescos by Simone Memmi, but one fragment only, exhibiting 18 prophets in rows, is uncovered by whitewash.

Within the massive square Tower of St. John, lighted by 3 windows, are 2 chapels: that on the ground, the Pope's chapel, was painted with frescoes, still visible in parts, of the life of John the Baptist and other Saints. Above this is the chapel of the Holy Inquisition (Santo Ufficio) painted with scenes from the legends of SS. Martial, Stephen, Peter, and Valerian. They are the work of Simone Memmi of Sienna and his scholars. In the Chapelle du Saint Office, vaulted and groined, the Jews inhabiting Avignon were assembled at stated times to hear a sermon, designed to promote their conversion to Christianity. The chamber of torture (salle de la question) is built with funnel-shaped walls, contracting upwards, in the manner of a glass-house; a form devised, it is said, to stifle the cries of the miserable victims. In the thickness of the wall, in one corner, are the remains of a furnace for heating torturing irons, according to the tradition. Near it are the holes to which was attached the instrument called La Veille, a pointed stake upon which the condemned was seated, suspended by cords from above, so as only to prevent his falling, but allowing his whole weight to bear upon the point.

These are the associations of the dark ages, and they are dismal enough; but this building has beheld events in modern and enlightened times which far distance them in their horrors and atrocities. The crimes accumulated during a few hours of the French Revolution exceed those dispersed through previous ages. Who has not heard of the Glacière of Avignon? The tower so called, from an ice-house in a garden near it, stands close to the tower of the Inquisition. Until lately the stranger, through an aperture in its walls, might discern, near the bottom, long black stains, said to be of human blood. Into those dark depths below were hurled from above no less than 60 unfortunate and innocent persons, females as well as men, massacred by a band of democrats more savage than wild beasts, in Oct. 1791. The prisoners were dragged from their cells, and poignarded or struck down in the door; but in the blind haste of the ruffians, it is believed that some of their victims were precipitated from above before life was yet extinct; but to finish the deed of infamy, quicklime in large quantities was thrown down over them upon the mangled heap of dead and dying. The actual scene of these atrocities is no longer visible, the tower having been floored and fitted up.

In the narrow passage, shut up within lofty walls, by which you approach this part of the castle, some of the prisoners of the revolutionary executioner Jourdan, called Coupetête, from his butcheries, were thrust, and, cannon being brought to the gate, were despatched by grape-shot, the marks of which still indent the walls. With reference to these atrocities, it should be remarked that Avignon, being Papal property, had become the refuge of the criminals and bad characters of the surrounding country, and they were no doubt the principal actors.

When the restoration of the Papal palace is completed, not only the archbishop's residence, but the museum and archives will find a place within its walls.

A later building facing the Papal palace, now Conservatoire de Musique, fantastically ornamented in front with large garlands carved in stone, was the papal mint.

A lane S. of the Palace, passing into the Rue Peirrollerie, under a huge flying buttress, which connects the castle wall with the ancient building, once residence of the Podestat or Governor of Avignon, leads to the Ch. of St. Pierre, having a richly florid front, built 1512, nearly in the Perpendicular style. It contains a stone pulpit, carved and surrounded by little statues, in canopied niches. Scarcely any other of the numerous churches here deserve notice.

Avignon, before the Revolution, contained 8 chapters, 35 convents of both sexes, 10 hospitals, 7 fraternities of penitents, 3 séminaires, a university, and 60 churches, of which 18 now remain;  $\frac{1}{3}$  of its population were dedicated to the church, and it possessed between 200 and 300 towers and spires. Rabelais, in consequence of the number of bells, called it "La Ville sonnante."

Near the Place de l'Horloge rises the clock-tower, or belfry, called Jacquemart, from the figures in armour, who strike the hours. Here has been built (1862) a handsome Hôtel de Ville. Here are situated the principal cafés and the Theatre, and in the midst a statue of the brave Crillon.

In the Rue Calade, which leads to the rly., not far from the hotel, is the Musée, founded by Calvet, a native of Avignon. Its collections are of considerable interest. The Roman antiquities found in the neighbourhood are numerous, though few are derived from Avignon itself, the ancient Avenio. Several large monuments, carved in high relief, have been brought from Vaison near Orange, among them a chariot carrying 2 persons and a driver, drawn by horses harnessed with traces, and shod (this use of horseshoes has been attributed to later times); another represents the Sacrifice of a Bull (? Mithraic). They are overladen with ornament, and in the debased style of the 4th centy. An amphora or wine-jar, 5 ft. high, and 8 or 10 in circumference, deserves notice for its size.

In the upper rooms are a large collection of antique bronzes, arms, utensils, &c., found in Provence and the Comtat Venaissin, in fine preservation: some of them have a Greek character. Among them is the Head of a Roman Standard (the Eagle of a Legion?), and a Head of Jupiter, cut in agate. The collection of Roman glass is large and perfect. Many of these objects were obtained from the Roman town Vaison by excavations in 1838-1840. There are 2 Egyptian paintings on papyrus, and other Egyptian antiquities. The coins and medals amount to 14,000: among them is a suite of Papal medals struck at Avignon; also the seals of the Popes and their Legates, and the last seal used by the Inquisition here.

In the Picture Gallery, besides many early paintings of the 15th and 16th centuries, which seem to have been retouched, there are 2 portraits attributed to Holbein; another head, like John Knox, 1535, in an oval; and a Holy Family of the Milanese school. A Crucifixion, by Eckhout, is not unworthy of Rembrandt, and is, perhaps, the best picture in the gallery. There are paintings by the 3 Vernets; by Joseph, who was a native of Avignon, one of his best landscapes; by Carl, several landscapes; and by Horace (whose bust, by Thorwaldsen, is placed in the room), Mazeppa on the Wild Horse. Many of old Vernet's sketches for the views of French seaports in the Louvre exist here.

The library amounts to 60,000 vols. derived from suppressed convents in the town; it includes 1200 MSS. and many early printed editions of the 15th centy.

In the Rue Napoléon, not far from the rly., is The Museum of Natural History. In this collection may be seen specimens of the flamingo caught in the delta of the Rhône, where it frequents the ponds (étangs) of the Camargue. (See Index.) It is stated to be a permanent inhabitant of that part of France, forming a nest of mud, in the form of a truncated cone, on which it sits over its eggs, with its long legs dangling down on the outside. The bird does not assume its red plumage until it is 2 years old.

Here is the beaver of the Rhône, an animal now nearly exterminated, since the late inundations drove most of them from their retired haunts. Its colour is tawny, and its hair harsh compared with the American beaver. It does not build houses nor lay up stores in Europe, but burrows in the dykes or river bed, and feeds on willows or other brushwood, whole plantations of which are often laid prostrate by its sharp teeth. Here are collections of the minerals and fossils of the Dépt. de Vaucluse; also of fossil insects and fishes from Aix. The museum has been enriched by the bequests of M. Riquen, and the whole is well-arranged. In one of the rooms, called the Musée Granier, the name of their donor, are several objects of antiquity and natural history from Peru and Bolivia—amongst others some interesting fossil bones of extinct quadrupeds from the higher regions of the Andes. Behind is the botanic garden.

Continuing in the same direction, as far as Rue des Lices (No. 8), a street abounding with dyers and tanners, at the back of the Maison des Orphelins, a charitable institution for the education of 50 poor children, we shall find the last relic of the church of the Corde-liers, in which Petrarch's Laura, a married lady of the family De Sade in Avignon, was buried. The church, destroyed at the Revolution, is now reduced to a fragment of the tower and side walls, sold probably for the value of the materials, but not worth pulling down.

Laura's tomb, described by Arthur Young as "nothing but a stone in the pavement, with a figure engraved on it, partly effaced, surrounded by an inscription in Gothic letters, and another on the wall adjoining, with the armorial bearings of the family De Sade," has entirely disappeared, having been broken open, and the contents of the tomb, as well as that of the brave Crillon, scattered by the Revolutionists. In a sort of tea-garden behind the fragment of the church, a vulgar, tasteless monument has been raised to Laura, bearing the pompous inscription, "Hunc cippum posuit Carolus Kelsall Anglicus." Petrarch has recorded that he first saw Laura in the church of St. Claire, 1327, in the time of his early youth.

In this church of the Cordeliers, June 1791, the mob of Avignon, irritated at the tyranny, spoliations, and sacrilegious acts of the democratic municipality, put to death its agent and secretary Lescuyère: the chief actors in this deed of blood were women, who actually tore out his eyes with their scissors.

Behind the church and convent of St. Martial is the Hôtel des Invalides, subordinate to, and dependent on, that of Paris, founded for old soldiers, after the expulsion of the French from Egypt. It occupies the buildings of 2 suppressed convents, between which a park extends. The upper part of a chapel, in the roof of which are traces of fresco, serves as the Lingerie. The establishment is furnished with a good library for the use of the inmates.

There are now 500 Prot. in Avignon, all of the wealthy class, and there is a French Protestant Ch. in the Rue Dorée, behind the Préfecture. Service at 11.

Steamers on the Rhône—to Lyons in one long day, starting very early, during summer; at other seasons they stop for the night at Valence or Tournon.

Railway to Arles, Nîmes (Rte. 126), Montpellier, and Marseilles. (Rte. 129.)
—Railway to Valence and Lyons.

rt. Opposite to Avignon,  $\frac{3}{4}$  hr's. walk,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  m. distance, higher, on the rt. bank of the Rhône, at the extremity of the wooden bridge, stands Villeneuve-lès-Avignon, an ancient town of 4000 Inhab., which was much encouraged by the kings of France, as a border-fortress, on the frontier of Languedoc, confronting the foreign territory of the Pope, on the opposite shore of Provence. It contains several objects of curiosity. In the chapel of the Hôpital is placed the very elegant Gothic tomb of Pope Innocent VI., composed of tabernacle work, and niches beautifully carved. It was removed from the ruined convent of the Chartreuse, and has been carefully restored. In a recess near the tomb is a most curious old Flemish picture of the Coronation of the Virgin.

The ruins of the Gothic Church of the Chartreuse, and the tower which formed the Tête du Pont of the broken bridge of St. Benazet, built by Philippe le Bel, a magnificent specimen of the solid masonry of the period, also merit notice. The Fort St. André, on an elevated platform above the town, is a nearly unaltered citadel of feudal times, entered between 2 grand drum towers. From the ramparts is a splendid view extending to Mont Pelvoux.

The climate of Avignon is described in the proverbial line, "Avenio ventosa, sine vento venenosa, cum vento fastidiosa."

The following very interesting Excursions may be made from Avignon:—
a. To Vaucluse; b. To the Pont du Gard, on the way to Nîmes (Rte. 126); on no account to be omitted: either of these may be seen in one day from Avignon. The traveller should not return to Avignon from the P. du G., but by all means go on to Nîmes.
c. To Orange, on the way to Lyons;
d. To St. Remy (Rte. 127); e. To Carpentras by rail. The Roman remains of Nîmes (Rte. 126) and Arles (Rte. 127), more distant from Avignon, are scarcely inferior in interest to any in Italy, and can now be conveniently reached by rail.

a. To Vaucluse. 29 kilom. = 18 Eng. m. Diligence every evening at 6 to L'Isle for 30 sous, returning next day: it takes about an hour to walk from L'Isle to Vaucluse.

A carriage with 2 horses costs 20 frs., or with 1 horse 12 frs., to go and return; the excursion will take about 8 hrs.

It is incumbent upon all travellers to perform this "sentimental journey," not only on account of Petrarch and Laura, but because Vaucluse itself is a striking scene. You quit Avignon by the Porte St. Lazare, traverse long avenues of willows and poplars, leaving on either hand numerous country-houses, each fronted with an avenue of planes; and, after crossing the Canal de Crillon, which conducts the waters of the Durance to fertilise the fields of madder around Avignon (Rte. 125), reach the village of Le Thor, so named from a bull, which, by constantly falling on its knees, when brought to water on the margin of a pond, led to the discovery of a miraculous image of the Virgin, which was fished out of the mud, and deposited in the Church of St. Marie du Lac! This is an ancient and curious Romanesque building; its W. doorway resembles that of Notre Dame des Doms, and is probably of the 11th centy.; an ornamented portal at the E. end is rather later. The country is dreary as far as

22 L'Isle (Inns: H. de la Poste;—H. du Pétrarque et Laure; not so good, and dear), a town of 5000 Inhab., 12 m. from Avignon, on an island surrounded by branches of the Sorgues, whose waters, employed in irrigation, spread fertility and verdure around. This is a green oasis in the desert, affording bubbling streams and grateful shade. There is a road from L'Isle to Carpentras. (See below.)

The valley of the Sorgues, whose course we trace hence upwards, is excavated in a mountain-chain, branching from the lofty Mont Ventoux. Near its head lies the little village

7 Vauchuse.—Inn: H. de Laure; small, and not very clean. Formerly the landlord was a good cook, and judging from the Strangers' Book, the fried trout and eels, soupe à la bisque, and coquille d'écrevisse, made a far deeper impression on some visitors than the souvenir of Laura; Petrarch himself has mentioned the fish of the Sorgues with praise. Close to the village stands a tasteless monument to Petrarch, which the Academy of Avignon planted at the mouth of the grotto itself, whence it was judiciously removed by order of the late Duchesse d'Angoulême, when she visited the spot. A path leads from the village to the fountain by the side of the Sorgues, but its exquisitely limpid waters are sometimes dried up near the head, in summer, and, instead of bursting out exuberantly from the cavern, filtrate underground, and issue out, some hundred yards lower down, in numerous streamlets, out of holes in the limestone rock.

The valley of Vauchuse (vallis clausa) is a complete cul de sac, a semicircular excavation in the side of a mountain, which seems to have been split from top to bottom, so as to disclose the secret storehouse of water within it, whence the sparkling Sorgues derives its supplies. All around rise walls of yellow rock from 500 to 600 ft. high, intermixed with bristling pyramids, arid, and destitute of verdure. The sides and bottom are strewn with broken fragments of stone, which, where the Sorgues rolls over them, are covered with a luxuriant mantle of green moss. On a ledge half way up, to the rt., is perched a ruined castle, which belonged to the bishops of Cavaillon, one of whom, the Cardinal de Cabasole, was Petrarch's friend. Though popularly known as Petrarch's Castle, it never belonged either to him or to Laura; but the site of his house is pointed out between the castle and the village. Here, beside a natural grotto in the rock, mentioned in his letters, one of the gardens which he formed with so much care was probably situated.

At the extremity of this majestic recess, at the base of the precipice, yawns the cavern which contains the fountain of Vauchuse. According to the season, and the abundance of the water, it presents alternately a gushing cataract, tumbling over the moss-clad stones, from step to step, or a quiet, pellucid, dark-blue pool, sunken within its grotto, so that you may enter under the vault beside it, and, gazing into its funnel-shaped basin, watch the stones which are thrown in gradually descend into its fathomless depths. A wild fig-tree, springing from a crevice in the face of the rock, above the natural vault, marks, with its roots, the height which the waters attain when they fill the cave.

Around this spot must have been the other garden mentioned by Petrarch in his letters; that consecrated to Apollo, adapted to study, "where art surpasses nature."

It is more agreeable to contemplate Petrarch in these haunts, as the laborious student retired from the world, than as the mawkish lover, sighing for a married mistress, and converted, as in the sentimental verses of Delille, into a sort of Italian Werther. Listen to his own account of his occupations at Vauluse.

"The Sorgues, transparent as crystal, rolls over its emerald bed; and by its bank I cultivate a little sterile and stony spot, which I have destined to the Muses; but the jealous Nymphs dispute the possession of it with me; they destroy, in the spring, the labours of my summer. I had conquered from them a little meadow, and had not enjoyed it long, when, upon my return from a journey into Italy, I found that they had robbed me of all my possession. But I was not to be discouraged; I collected the labourers, the fishermen, and the shepherds, and raised a rampart against the Nymphs; and there we raised an altar to the Muses; but, alas! experience has proved that it is in vain to battle with the elements. I no longer dispute with the Sorgues a part of its bed; the Nymphs have gained the victory.

"Here I please myself with my little gardens and my narrow dwelling. I want nothing, and look for no favours from fortune. If you come to me, you will see a solitary, who wanders in the meadows, the fields, the forests, and the mountains, resting on the mossy grottoes, or beneath the shady trees. Your friend detests the intrigues of court, the tumult of cities, and flies from the abodes of pagantry and pride. Equally removed from joy or sadness, he passes his days in the most profound calm, happy to have the Muses for his companions, and the song of birds and the murmur of the stream for his serenade. . . . I have few servants, but many books. Sometimes you will find me seated upon the bank of the river, sometimes stretched upon the yielding grass: and, enviable power! I have all my hours at my own disposal, for it is rarely that I see any one. Above all things, I delight to taste the sweets of leisure."

e. To Carpentras by Rail; branching from the Sorgues Stat. of the Lyons line, 17 m. Trains in 1½ hr.

By road, direct from Avignon, 14 Eng. m.

Entraigues Stat. Montoux Stat. The rly. crosses the Sorgues, here as limpid as at Vauluse, between the two villages. The country around Carpentras is a fertile plain, which, by means of irrigation, and of a southern sun, produces crops of all kinds in abundance, especially madder-root.

23 Carpentras, terminus, is a flourishing town of 12,000 Inhab., still retaining, like most of those in the old Papal territory (the Comtat Venaissin), its feudal walls, towers, and gates; the Porte d'Orange being particularly perfect and stately. It was an important Roman station; but almost the only relic of that people remaining is an Arch of Triumph, formerly built up into the bishop's palace, and serving as his kitchen, but now set free. It is reduced to the mere stone vault, without the attic, resting on the side piers. Upon these are curious sculptures in relief, representing Barbarian Captives, their hands bound behind their backs to trophies. It is doubtless a work of the Lower Empire.

The cathedral, rebuilt 1405, has a tower attached to it of the 10th centy., and contains a nail of the Cross, made into a bit, and used for that purpose by Constantine, if we may believe the tradition.

There is a musée here containing antiquities, and a very fine public library of 12,000 volumes and 700 MSS.

The aqueduct of Carpentras, a massive structure of 48 arches, was finished 1734.

Its weekly markets are copiously and cheaply supplied with poultry, game, fruit, and vegetables. Truffles are exported hence to the value of 3,000,000 fr. a year.

Rather more than a mile is St. Didier, a well-managed Hydropathic establishment, and pleasant boarding house in a handsome château, formerly belonging to the Seigneurs de Thézan. Part of it is of 14th centy. It is managed by Dr. Masson. It will be found a pleasant half-way house for invalids going to or returning from a hot climate.

Within a short distance are the Baptistery of Venasque, a very early ch., the Abbey of Senanque, and Vaucluse.

The ascent of the Mont Ventoux may be made from Carpentras by way of Malaucène, whence it is 6 m. distant. Its top, reached by Petrarch in 1345, is 6427 ft. above the sea-level, and is covered for half the year with snow, which supplies the Dépt. with ice in summer. The view from it includes a portion of the chain of the Alps, the Cevennes, the Coiron, the course of the Rhône and Durance, and, it is said, extends to the Mediterranean. At the foot of the mountain stands Bedouin, a miserable village rising from amidst the blackened ruins of a former village destroyed at the Revolution. There is no darker spot in the black history of that period than the burning of Bedouin and the massacre of its inhabitants by the revolutionary committee. Their agent, the apostate priest Maiguet, directed this atrocious crime, and Suchet, afterwards so eminent a general, with his soldiers, carried it into execution, setting fire to the houses, blowing up the public buildings, hurrying the peaceful inhabitants to the scaffold, and picking off with musketry those who tried to escape, until 180 had perished. And these horrors were enacted, not in a hostile country and in time of war, but upon fellow-countrymen, women, and children, Frenchmen being the executioners; and all because a tree of liberty planted within the parish had been sawn through in the night!!

f. The Pont du Gard (Rte. 126) may be visited from Avignon, but it is nearly 20 m. over a dreary country. Carriages may be procured at the H. de l'Europe. The Pont du Gard is about  $\frac{1}{2}$  way to Nîmes, so that they who follow this course need not return to Avignon.

N.B. The railway from Avignon to Tarascon, Arles, and Marseilles is described Rte. 127.

ROUTE 126.

AVIGNON TO NARBONNE, BY (PONT DU GARD) NÎMES, MONTPELLIER, AND BÉZIERS.—CETTE AND AIGUES MORTES.

Avignon.	Miles.
Tarascon . . . . .	13
Nîmes . . . . .	30
Lunel . . . . .	46
Montpellier . . . . .	61
Cette . . . . .	78
Béziers . . . . .	105
Narbonne . . . . .	121

From Avignon to Tarascon the Marseilles Rly. is followed. (Rte. 127.)

At Tarascon the rly. to Cette branches off and crosses the Rhône by a cast-iron bridge of 7 arches. We leave Provence and enter Languedoc at Beaucaire Stat. (Inn: H. du Luxembourg), which, though it contains only 9967 Inhab., is a town of more life than its opposite neighbour Tarascon. It stands at the mouth of the Canal de Beaucaire, which joins the Canal du Midi, and thus unites the Rhône and Garonne.

It is, besides, the locality of the celebrated Fair, held here between the 1st and 28th of July, on the wide space of ground, planted with rows of trees, extending between the Rhône and the castle rock. This space is then covered with booths and sheds, arranged in streets, forming a sort of supplemental town of wood and canvas, within which the various kinds of merchandise are deposited, each classed by itself. The shore is lined by a flotilla of barges, the roads are choked with waggons, and the inns are filled to overflowing. Though fallen off of late, this fair collects together about 50,000 persons, and is attended by merchants not only from all parts of France, Spain, Italy, Portugal, but by many Jews, Turks, Armenians, Greeks, and even Moors from Barbary, who sell dates, &c. It terminates July 28, at midnight. It is said to date as far back as 1168.

The Castle, standing on the top of an escarped rock, was an ancient possession of the Counts of Toulouse, and was recovered by Count Raymond VII., when only 19 years of age, from the usurping Simon de Montfort and his sons, after a long and memorable siege (1216), in which he, besieging the garrison, was himself surrounded by an army from without. It is now reduced to a complete ruin; one stately triangular tower, and a curious Romanesque chapel of great antiquity, in which St. Louis is said to have heard mass before he embarked for the Crusade, alone surmounting the crumbling walls. There is a good view, from the castle rock, of the Rhône, the bridge, the scene of the fair, the distant arid range of the Alpines on the opposite side of the river, and the equally naked hills of the Calvary and gallows (fourche patibulaire) on this side; but verdure is wanting. The rock, which serves as the pedestal to the castle, has been cut through, to allow the passage of a road to the Rhône. The suspension bridge between Tarascon and Beaucaire, 1446 ft. long, was built in 1829 by M. Seguin, of Lyons, in six months.

Beucaire is the scene of the old Provençal romance of Aucassin and Nicolette.

Nîmes Station. Inns: H. du Luxembourg, H. Durand, comfortable and moderate; H. du Cheval Blanc, H. du Midi, all good.

Nîmes, chef-lieu of the Dépt. du Gard, a flourishing manufacturing town of 49,480 Inhab., consists of a central nucleus of narrow intricate streets and old houses, encircled by a girdle of open boulevard, which separates it from its modern fauxbourgs, composed of wide streets and new houses. The boulevard is itself a fine broad street, planted with trees, lined with handsome buildings; and there is little need for the passing traveller to penetrate into the old town, as the chief curiosities and objects of interest are situated on the edge of this boulevard, or at a short distance from it. They consist almost exclusively of Roman monuments, relics of the ancient city of Nemausus, which, though passed over in oblivion by classic authors, so that its origin is unknown, and merely mentioned in the geographical catalogues of Strabo and Ptolemy, yet affords more palpable testimony of its ancient extent and splendour than most cities celebrated in classic page. While the renowned cities of Marseilles and Narbonne have few relics and no existing edifices of the ancient masters of the world, the obscure Nîmes is richer in well-preserved antiquities than any town in France or Northern Europe.

A walk along the boulevard, starting from the H. du Luxembourg, and keeping to the l., will bring you first to the Esplanade, a square terraced platform, planted with trees, furnishing a promenade of considerable extent. In the centre is a handsome Fountain; the statues are fine works by the sculptor, Pradier: in the centre the city of Nîmes; at the corners, the Rhône, the Gard, the Nymphs of the Fountain, and another river. Facing it is the Palais de Justice, fronted with an imposing portico, and a little further on stands

The **Amphitheatre, Les Arènes*, now isolated by the removal of the buildings which obstructed it within and without, in the middle of a wide Place, allowing unimpeded view of its very perfect oval circuit. It consists of 2 stories, each of 60 arcades, 70 ft. high; the lower arches serving as so many doors: the arches of the upper arcade are double, but the inner arches are not concentric with the lower. It is far better preserved, externally, than the Coliseum at Rome, although like it converted into a fortress during the middle ages, and retains even its projecting stones, pierced with holes, for inserting the masts to which the awnings (velaria) were attached.

The interior, though less perfect, retains some of the original seats, especially of the lower and upper rows. The modern French architect has reconstructed, in a somewhat clumsy manner, part of them and some of the arcades. There were originally 32 rows of seats, and the number of spectators with which it is supposed the building may have contained is estimated at from 17,000 to 23,000.

A long corridor, surrounding the building, runs within the arches on the ground story, and a smaller corridor encircles the upper story. It is worth while to make the circuit of these, and, indeed, to penetrate every part of this extraordinary structure. The vaults of the lower corridor or portico are like some vast natural cavern; the upper one is roofed with huge stone beams, 18 ft. long, reaching from side to side, many of them cracked, either by an earthquake, or by the conflagration which consumed the Arènes in the times of Charles Martel. It is interesting to penetrate the wedge-shaped passages, radiating from the centre, and widening outwards, so contrived as to facilitate the egress of the hastening crowds, and allow them to depart without any check; to ascend the stairs, by which ready access was given to every part of the huge structure; to clamber over the broken seats, some still marked with the line indicating the space allotted to each spectator, scaring the frightened lizard, which starts away from under your foot, out of the sunshine in which it has been basking, to the shelter of the tufts of grass or weeds springing up among the crevices of the masonry; and, finally, to stand on the topmost stone, the rim of this huge oval basin, surveying its whole interior, dismantled, and almost gutted. Here you may examine the round holes cut in the projecting stones, and corresponding with hollows in the exterior cornice below, into which the poles were put, in order to fasten the awnings stretched over the spectators. A very narrow stair in the thickness of the wall, near the N. side, was destined, it is supposed, for the men who had charge of the awning. The zones of seats, as is well known, were divided into 4 tiers (præcinctiones) by spaces wider than the seats themselves, and were destined for spectators of different rank; the patricians occupied the lower, equivalent to the dress circle—the plebeians the upper, corresponding with the gallery. These spaces, or landing-places, were each reached by 10 passages or vomitories. The 3 uppermost rows of seats rest upon a half arch, whose only support is the outer wall.

The dimensions are, length 437 ft., width 332 ft., height 70 ft.

The founder of this building and its date are unknown: it is attributed to Antoninus Pius, whose ancestors came from Nîmes, but by others to Titus and Adrian.

The Visigoths converted it into a fortress, and it was known as the "Castrum Arenarum." The Saracens occupied it as such in the beginning of the 8th centy., until expelled by Charles Martel, who endeavoured to destroy the building altogether, by filling its vaults and passages with wood, and setting fire to it; finally, down to the middle of the 18th centy., it was occupied by mean hovels, all of which are now swept away. The people of Nîmes use the Arènes for bull-fights and an entertainment called Ferrade, which consists in teasing a number of wild bulls from the Camargue (p. 478), previous to branding them with hot iron. The sport is but a poor imitation of a Spanish bull-fight; nearly as cruel, without being so exciting.

Continuing through the boulevard, from the Arènes, and passing on the l. the Great Hospital, you reach the modern Theatre, remarkable only for its tasteless portico, contrasting very unfavourably with a neighbouring building, which, though of an age deemed barbarous, shows yet a far greater refinement in taste,—

** The Maison Carrée, the vulgar name given to a beautiful Corinthian temple, a gem of architecture, which has come down to the present time in a state of wonderful preservation, considering its various fortunes and the purposes to which it has been converted. Originally a temple, consecrated in the reign of Augustus, according to some; of Antoninus Pius, according to others; it became afterwards a Christian church, and, in the 11th centy., the Hôtel de Ville; still later it was converted into a stable, and its owner, to extend his space, built walls between the pillars of the portico, and pared away the flutings of the central columns to allow his carts to pass; it then became attached to the Augustine convent, and was used as a tomb-house for burial; its next changes were into a Revolutionary tribunal and corn warehouse; and, finally, at present it is converted into a museum.

It is surrounded by 30 elegant Corinthian columns, 10 of them detached, forming the portico, and 20 engaged: their height is equal to  $10\frac{1}{2}$  diameters; and learned architects will tell you that these proportions are contrary to Vitruvian rules, and that the building is debased and defective in consequence. This, however, appears a case in which ignorance is bliss; the ordinary and unlearned spectator will scarcely fail to be impressed with the elegance of its general effect, as well as with the simplicity of its form, the beauty of its fluted Corinthian columns, and the richness of the capitals, frieze, and cornice which they support.

M. Séguier, an antiquary of Nîmes, first hit upon the ingenious idea of restoring the inscription on the frieze above the portico from the holes left in it, by which the bronze letters composing it were attached, the letters themselves having long since disappeared. According to his reading, it ran thus:—C. CAESARI. AUGVSTI. F. COS. L. CAESARI. AVGVSTI. F. COS. DESIGNATO. PRINCIPIBVS. JVENTVTIS.; thus attributing the dedication of this temple to "Marcus and Julius Cæsar, grandsons of Augustus, Consuls Elect, Princes of Youth." The style, however, of the building, and the profusion of ornament, indicate a period much later than Augustus; and another antiquary, on examining the original state of the holes in the frieze, discovers 3 holes preceding the 2 to which M.

Séguier's first letter C was fastened, and thus converts the C into an M. This slight alteration shifts the date of the Maison Carrée from the era of Augustus to that of Antoninus, for it appears that the only 2 princes bearing such names who enjoyed together the title Principes Juventutis, after the sons of Agrippa, were Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Verus, adopted sons of Antoninus. It is evident, however, that the determination of the letters from such data must, in a great degree, be a mere piece of guess-work, owing to the confusion and number of the holes. Excavations have laid bare the foundations of walls, extending on either side of the temple, showing that it was only the centre of a larger edifice, from which two long colonnades extended, in the manner of wings, on either hand, and it is supposed that it occupied one end of the ancient forum of Nemausus.

The whole is now enclosed by an iron railing, within which are deposited numerous antique fragments found in and about the town.

The contents of the Museum (into which the temple is now turned) consist of other antiquities, including a bronze head (of Apollo?), a marble bust of Venus, and a quantity of pictures, very poor and commonplace for the most part, excepting Paul Delaroche's masterpiece, Cromwell opening the Coffin of Charles I., and Nero trying upon a Slave the Poison destined for his Brother Britannicus, by Sigalon.

Opposite the entrance to the Maison Carrée is the small, though rich, Museum of Antiquities, formed by M. Perrot.

Returning to the boulevard, and continuing along it as far as the irregular Place de la Bouquerie, you come upon a handsome canal, supplied with water from the ancient Fountain of the Nymphs. It must not, however, be judged of at first sight, for at this point nothing can be more unclassical; its limpid rills are stained with soap-suds, and in the place of nymphs a swarm of blanchisseuses convert it into a public washing-tub. Trace it upwards, however, and you will find its source within a fine Public Garden, planted with trees, in the midst of which it bursts forth in exuberant copiousness from the foot of a hill, and is received into a large reservoir, originally a Roman bath for Women. It is surrounded by a large colonnade below the level of the ground, and is conducted through a formal canal lined with masonry, like the ditch of a fortification, and bordered with a handsome stone balustrade. A part of this enclosure is of antique masonry, but the whole has been restored in modern times. It is a very handsome but formal construction, and it and the fine Garden which it traverses form a principal ornament of the town. On one side of it is a ruined Roman building, supposed at one time to have been a temple of Diana, but now regarded as a Nymphæum (or fane dedicated to the Nymphs), and connected with the neighbouring baths. It appears to have had a semi-sylindrical roof rising from an entablature, supported by columns. It is proved by inscriptions to have been built, along with the baths, by Augustus. It was reduced to ruin 1577. The ancient aqueduct which the Pont du Gard carried across the valley of the Gardon (p. 469) terminated near the fountain at Nîmes, in a basin or reservoir 16 ft. diameter, and about 5 ft. deep, recently discovered.

The hill rising behind the fountain, planted with trees, and rendered accessible by zigzag walks, is surmounted by another singular ancient monument, known as La Tourmagne, a dismantled tomb of rough ashlar, not unlike several still existing in the vicinity of Rome, but which has passed at different times with learned antiquaries for a lighthouse (50 m. inland, and remote from any river!), a Gallic temple, and a treasury. It is hollow within, having a rude conical shape, resembling that of a glass-house. The walls are very thick below, but taper upwards; externally it was an octagon, but the surface-stonework is for the most part removed. It is, perhaps, the oldest building in the town. Some have referred its origin to times preceding the Romans: in their time it was included in the defences of the town, and connected with the walls. It was originally filled with earth, and it seems not unlikely that it was built upon a nucleus of earth, for its cone is not properly vaulted, but consists of small stones, held together by the strength of the cement alone. It was cleared out by a gardener, who obtained leave from Henri IV. to search the building for treasure, a scheme which turned out eminently unprofitable.

A staircase is now erected to the top, whence the view is very fine. The situation of the Tourmagne is very commanding; at the foot of the heights, on which it stands, the whole city is displayed, and the distant horizon includes the bifurcation of the Rhône, and, perhaps, the tower of Aiguës Mortes on the Mediterranean.

Nîmes retains two of its original Roman gates, the Porte d'Auguste, founded in the reign of that Emperor, B.C. 16, consisting of a double arch with two side doors for foot passengers, flanked by 2 towers, and the Porte de France.

In the heart of the old town stands the Cathedral, an ancient building, but so injured during the wars of religion of the 16th and 17th centuries, and now so much modernised, as to possess little interest. High up, on the W. front, above a circular window, a curious sculptured frieze, representing events from the book of Genesis, is introduced; it is very ancient.

The cabinet of antiquities of M. Pelet, and the cork models made by him of the ancient buildings in Nîmes, are well worth seeing.

Two churches have been built since 1860—St. Paul, Romanesque, the choir painted by Flandrin, and St. Perpetua, pointed Gothic, with tower and spire.

There are 12,000 Protestants at Nîmes, who have 2 churches (temples) and a chapel: they have endured severe persecutions at different times. So little even now do the Protestants and Catholics coalesce, that each party frequents distinct cafés.

The Maison centrale de Détention was originally a citadel, erected by Louis XIV. to keep down the Protestants.

The manufactures of Nismes consist of various articles of silk and cotton, which change with the fashion and the demand; it has large printing and dyeing works; but cotton handkerchiefs seem the staple production. A considerable trade in the wines and spirits of Languedoc, in raw silks, and in oil, is carried on here. It is a very thriving town on the whole.

In the garden of the Convent of Recolets, now occupied by the Theatre, Marshal Villars had an interview in 1704 with the chief of the Camisards, Cavalier, who, originally a baker's boy, and at that time a mere youth, had raised himself by his talents for command and his fanatic eloquence to be the head of the formidable rebellion of the Cevennes. He appeared on that occasion magnificently mounted, and attired in laced coat, cocked hat, and plume of white feathers, escorted by a body-guard on horseback. The result of this memorable conference was to detach him from the insurgents by flattery and promises of rank and reward in the service of Louis XIV., as the price of his defection, coupled with assurances of justice and tolerance in religion to the persecuted Protestants of the Cevennes. Neither the one nor the other was destined to be kept or fulfilled. Villars, however, thus dealt a death-blow to the insurrection, by depriving it of one of its heads; and Cavalier, despised and hated for his desertion by his own party, and neglected by the court, was soon driven into exile, and was made Governor of Jersey.

On the Place de Boucaille in 1705 were erected the gibbet, the wheel, and the stake, at which a vast number of the Camisards, concerned in the rebellion of the Cevennes, perished miserably, after suffering horrid tortures in the prison of the fortress. The most memorable execution was that of the chiefs (April 22) Catenat and Ravenel, who were burnt alive, almost within sight of the battle-field where 2 years before they had defeated the royal forces under the Comte de Broglie; while their companions, Jonquet and Villas, were broken on the wheel and then burnt. On the 16th August, 1704, the body of Roland Laporte, general of the Camisards (see Rte. 121), was dragged into Nismes at the tail of a cart and burnt, while 5 of his companions were broken on the wheel around his funeral pyre.

Nismes is the birthplace of Nicot, a physician who first introduced from Portugal into France tobacco (called after him Nicotiana). Some one proposed to raise a monument to him in the form of a snuff-box, bearing the inscription, "Dieu vous bénisse." M. Guizot, ex-Minister of France, also comes from Nismes, where his father, an avocat, was guillotined during the Reign of Terror.

Railroads to Alais and its coalfield 30 m. (Rte. 121), trains twice a day;—to Avignon, Lyons, and Paris;—to Arles and Marseilles;—to Montpellier, Cette, Narbonne, Toulouse, and Bordeaux.

[The Pont du Gard, distant about 11 m. from Nismes, is about 2 hours' drive; a carriage may be hired for 12 fr. to go and return. Make the driver understand before setting out that he is not to leave you at La Four, where there is an Inn, but to drive to the Pont, two miles further. The sight of this noble edifice, one of the grandest monuments which the Romans have left, in France or any other country, would well repay for a very long détour. Like Stonehenge, it is the monument of a people's greatness, a standard by which to measure their power and intellect. It consists of 3 tiers of arches; the lowest of 6 arches supporting 11 of equal span in the central tier, surmounted by 35 of smaller size; the whole in a simple, if not stern style of architecture, destitute of ornament. It is by its magnitude, and the skilful fitting of its enormous blocks, that it makes an impression upon the mind. It is the more striking from the utter solitude in which it stands, a rocky valley, partly covered with brushwood and greensward, with scarcely a human habitation in sight, only a few goats browsing. After the lapse of 16 centuries this colossal monument still spans the valley, joining hill to hill, in a nearly perfect state, only the upper part, at the N.

extremity, being broken away. An enterprising water company of Nîmes are about to turn it to its original use, and, after repairing its conduits, to convey through it fresh water to supply the town. The highest range of arches carries a covered canal about 5 ft. high and 2 ft. wide, shaped in section like the letter U, just large enough for a man to walk through, still retaining a lining of Roman cement. It is covered with thick stone slabs, along which it is possible to walk from one end to the other, and to overlook the valley of the Gardon. The arches of the middle tier are formed of 3 distinct ribs or bands, apparently unconnected. The height of the Pont du Gard is 180 ft., and the length of the highest arcade 873 ft. Its use was to convey to the town of Nîmes the water of 2 springs, 25 m. distant, the Airan rising near St. Quentin, and the Ure near Uzès. It forms only a small portion of the conduit constructed for this purpose, whose course, partly raised on low arches, some of which exist on the N. of the Pont du Gard, partly cut in the rock round the shoulders of the hills, may be traced at the village of St. Maximin, near Uzès, and above that of Vers, to the Pont du Gard; thence, by St. Bonnet and Sernhac, to the hill of the Tour Magne, and Bassin des Thermes at Nîmes. Its date and builder are alike lost in oblivion, but it is attributed to M. Agrippa, son-in-law of Augustus, B.C. 19. The quarry whence the stone was obtained is a little way down the Gardon, on its l. bank. The bridge by which the road crosses the Gardon, on a level with the lower tier of arches, and formed by merely widening them, is a modern addition to the ancient structure, having been erected in 1743 by the States of Languedoc.]

[About 13 m. nearly due S. of Nîmes is St. Gilles (Inn: Cheval Blanc, poor accommodation, but good fare), a town of great antiquity, originally Rhoda Rhodiorum, a colony founded by the Rhodians according to Pliny, situated on the Petit Rhône, chiefly remarkable at present for its magnificent Abbey Church. The upper ch. was begun 1116, on a scale of great magnificence, by Alphonso, son of Raymond IV., Count of St. Gilles, called Jourdain, because baptised in the Jordan, but was destroyed during the wars of religion, having been turned into a fortress by the Huguenots in 1562, and demolished, when no longer tenable as such, by the Duc de Rohan, 1622. It has been replaced by a temporary structure of late date and inferior architecture.

The lower Church, however, which is not subterranean, but on a level with the cloister, is, perhaps, of the 11th centy., having been dedicated, 1096, by Pope Urban II.; and the **West Front* is a masterpiece of the Romanesque style, upon which every species of ornamental decoration and rich sculpture seems to have been lavished. It has been described as one immense bas-relief, crowded with pillars, statues, panelling, foliage, &c., combined with a strange infusion of the elements of classical architecture, columns, capitals, entablatures, and friezes. Sculptured lions are frequently introduced as supports to the pillars, and in other parts; and as the abbots of St. Gilles, powerful seigneurs in ancient days, used to sit at the gate of the ch. to dispense justice, many of the old charters begin with the words "Domino NN. sedente inter leones." In the vestibule of this ch., Raymond VI., Comte de Toulouse, accused of favouring the persecuted Albigenses, underwent, in 1209, the ignominious penance of being scourged on his naked back, in the presence of the papal legate and of 12 French bishops. The lower church is supposed to be a little older than the porch.

A detached pile of ruin, behind the actual church, is the only relic of the old priory which escaped being destroyed in the 16th centy.; it contains a cork screw staircase, called Le Vis de St. Gilles, and is celebrated for its masterly construction as a piece of masonry. It was again saved from destruction at the Revolution by the influence of M. Michel, a lawyer of St. Gilles. In a narrow street facing the ch. is a curious old house, deserving attention as a remarkable specimen of the civil architecture of the middle ages.]

The Railway, finished 1844, joins Nîmes to Montpellier (50 kilom), and is carried thence to Cette, 28 kilom. = total 48½ Eng. m. 6 trains daily in 2 hours to Montpellier, and 4 to Cette in 3½ hours. Its chief work is a viaduct of 96 arches. It passes by Lunel. In 1857 it was continued by Narbonne to Toulouse and Bordeaux.

The way from Nîmes to Montpellier lies across an extensive plain, reaching from a range of low rocky limestone hills on the N., the extreme roots of the Cevennes, to the salt marshes bordering on the Mediterranean, S.

The fertile district to the W. of Nîmes is called the Vauvage or Valley of Nages, from a small and reduced town of that name, a little to the N. of our road. It was the scene of one of the most remarkable engagements in the war of the Cevennes (April 6, 1704), in which Cavalier, at the head of 900 foot and 300 horse, well equipped, intending to waylay the Maréchal de Montreval on his way to Montpellier, was himself betrayed into a vast ambushade, surrounded on all sides by the royal troops (among whom were 100 Irish from the Boyne), and caught as in a trap. Undismayed by numbers 6 times exceeding his own, the Camisard chief, perceiving the design of the enemy to outflank him, wheeled his column rapidly round under the hottest fire, and in the face of a charge of bayonets, and drew off his men, retreating en échelon—a masterly manœuvre of the baker's boy, which drew forth the admiration of Marshal Villars. Cavalier's retreat, however, was cut off; the royal army occupied every pass, every height; not an opening remained; and his only course was to cut his way through. Throwing aside his magnificent uniform and white plume, he put on a common dress, and, bidding his followers close their ranks, dashed forward directly against the enemy. With the fiercest struggle he broke through the first line, but was soon singled out and discovered: at one time a soldier caught his horse's bridle, but a Camisard behind cut off the hand; another dragoon who had seized him he shot with his pistol. But in front now appeared a second rank barring his way, and a squadron of dragoons occupying the Pont de Rosni, the only issue. The fugitive cavalry poured down upon it, forced their way through, forgetful of their leader, who was in the rear, and would probably have been cut off after all but for his brother, a boy 10 years old, who drew up his horse across the bridge, and, with a pistol presented to the fugitives, summoned them to defend their chief, and not abandon him. Cavalier, with the rest of his infantry, escaped into the wood of Cannes. This battle, or series of combats, extended from the mill of Langlade to the village of Nages; 1000 dead were left on the field, half of whom were Camisards.

At the commencement of the fight one of the prophets of the Enfants de Dieu, named Daniel Gui, planted on the top of a rock, surrounded by 5 or 6 prophetesses, 3 of whom were afterwards found among the slain, called on the God of battles to favour their cause.

The turbulent torrent Vidourle, which separates the dépt. du Gard from that of l'Hérault, is crossed near Gallargues Stat.

Lunel Stat., at some distance from the town, which is perched upon a hill to the l.

Lunel (Inn.: H. du Palais), a town of 6385 Inhab., owing its prosperity to the sweet wine and brandy which form its chief articles of commerce. The best Lunel wine is grown on the Côte de Mazet. The low ground in which the town is situated is often inundated in winter and spring, is infested with mosquitoes in summer, and with fevers in autumn. Human bones, with pottery, have been found in caves in the tertiary limestone at Pondres, 6 m. N. of Lunel. Here is a very pretty public garden on the river, and a botanic garden.

[22 kilom. = 13½ m. S. of Lunel is Aigues Mortes, singularly situated in the midst of salt marshes, the resort of the flamingo, and lagoons, whose exhalations render it unhealthy. It is approached by a causeway raised above the marsh and spanned midway by an ancient gate-tower, La Carbonnière. Aigues Mortes is of interest only as a perfect example of a feudal fortress; its walls and gates, more entire and less altered than even those of Avignon, give a perfect idea of the art of fortification in the 13th centy., when they were built for Philip the Bold by the Genoese Boccanegra. Its fosse has been filled up, on account of the malaria produced by its stagnant water. In advance of the place, to the N., is a single round tower, which served as a citadel, 90 ft. high, 65 in diameter, surmounted by an old lighthouse turret of 34 ft. In the centre of each floor is a hole communicating with a reservoir for water below. Some of its chambers served as a prison, in which Protestants, chiefly females, who refused to abjure their faith, were confined after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes. This tower is called Tour de Constance, from the constancy of Philip the Bold in finishing the work begun by his father St. Louis. That king embarked here on his unsuccessful Crusade in 1270, having assembled at this spot a fleet of 800 galleys, and an army of 40,000 men. As Aigues Mortes lies nearly 3 m. inland, some have supposed from this that the sea must have retired since the 13th centy.; modern investigations have proved, however, the existence of a small port close to the town, in whose walls the ancient mooring rings still remain; and of a canal, now filled with sand, extending thence to the harbour of Grau du Roi, on the sea, doubtless the place of rendezvous for the royal fleet. The walls of the town were built after the death of St. Louis, in Africa, by his son Philippe le Hardy, on the plan, it is said, of those of Damietta. Salt is the chief article of commerce produced in the vicinity; and after the massacre by the royal forces, aided by the townsfolk, of the Burgundian troops, who had obtained possession of the town in 1421, the bodies of the slain were thrown into the tower still called Tour des Bourguignons, between layers of salt, it is said, in order to prevent their putrefying and breeding miasma in the town. There is a statue of St. Louis, by Pradier, in the principal Place. The room is still shown (and it contains a fine marble chimney-piece) in which (1538) an interview took place between the Empr. Charles V. and Francis I. In 1542 the Turkish corsair Barbarossa, the ally of the French king against the emperor, moored his fleet in the harbour.]

There is little to observe on the road between Lunel and Montpellier; the country rich and monotonously flat.

Lunel Viel Stat. Near this are produced the finest Lunel wines.

Baillargues Stat., a land of oil and wine. Through a tunnel we reach

Montpellier Stat.—Inns: Hôtel Nevet, a splendid large edifice, 200 bed-rooms—one of the best hotels in France;—H. du Midi, good;—H. de Londres, good;—H. des Ambassadeurs. Montpellier, the name of which is familiar to every one who has been in an English watering-place, as the type of salubrity and mildness of climate, will not in reality answer the expectations of those who anticipate either a soft air or a beautiful position. Indeed it is difficult to understand how it came to be chosen by the physicians of the North as a retreat for consumptive patients; since nothing can be more trying to weak lungs than its variable climate, its blazing sunshine alternating with the piercingly cold blasts of the mistral. Though its sky be clear, its atmosphere is filled with dust, which must be hurtful to the lungs; and the glare from the chalky ground and white houses, unmodified by shade, is exceedingly painful to the eyes. The town is chef-lieu of the Dépt. de l'Hérault, and a place of importance, since it contains 40,746 Inhab. (2500 Prot.); in its streets and buildings it is not much distinguished.

The Promenade du Peyrou (a provincial form for pierreux, stony, the spot having been originally a bare rock), an elevated platform, reached by flights of stairs, and surrounded by balustrades in the style of the time of Louis XIV., whose equestrian statue is in the centre, was constructed 1766, and is referred to as the ne plus ultra of a public walk. It has, it is true, shady avenues and neat parterres. At the extremity of it rises the Château d'Eau, a sort of fountain-temple, which receives and distributes through the town the waters conveyed across the fertile valley from the opposite hill by the Aqueduct, a very noble construction, though modern, begun 1753, consisting of 53 large arches, surmounted by 183 smaller, measuring 2896 ft. The source whence the water is derived is about 8 m. distant. The beauty of the view from the Peyrou has been somewhat exaggerated; the Pyrenees are too distant to give it interest, though the peak of the Canigou is said to be sometimes visible; the Mediterranean is ill represented in its border of marshes and lagoons; and the Alps (in spite of what the guide-books say) are out of the scope of vision. The chief feature is the bare Pic de St. Loup, a buttress of the Cevennes projecting from the N., visible from the road to Nismes. On the S. is seen the church-tower of Maguelonne.

Near the handsome Palais de Justice stands the town gate, on one side of the Peyrou, erected to commemorate the glories of the reign of Louis XIV. The bas-reliefs towards the town are meant to represent the union of the Mediterranean to the Atlantic by the Canal du Midi, and the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes; the one a benefit, the other a curse to France. There are, indeed, mournful recollections connected with the Peyrou: here were raised, during the reigns of Louis XIV. and XV., the scaffolds on which perished, by being burnt alive or broken alive on the wheel, not only many of the fanatic Camisards, among others their chief Castanet, but also many "Pastors of the Desert," Protestant ministers whose only crime was praying to God according to the impulse of their own conscience.

The Jardin des Plantes was the first established in France, in the reign of Henri IV., and it is well kept up, under the able direction of M. Martins. Here may be seen the Galactodendron, the cow or milk tree of S. America, mentioned by Humboldt. In one corner of the garden, shaded by cypress, is an arched recess, fenced with a trellis rail, within which a simple tablet bears these words: "Placandis Narcissæ manibus." This is pointed out as the tomb of Mrs. Temple, the adopted daughter of Young, the poet, who died suddenly here, at a time when the atrocious laws which accompanied the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, backed by the superstition of a fanatic populace, denied Christian burial to Protestants. Such a refusal gave rise to the following passage in the 'Night Thoughts':—

"Snatch'd ere thy prime! and in thy bridal hour!
And when kind fortune, with thy lover, smiled!
And when high-flavour'd thy fresh opening joys!
And when blind man pronounced thy bliss complete!
And on a foreign shore, where strangers wept!
Strangers to thee; and, more surprising still,
Strangers to kindness, wept: their eyes let fall
Inhuman tears! strange tears! that trickled down
From marbled hearts! obdurate tenderness!
A tenderness that call'd them more severe;
In spite of nature's soft persuasion steel'd;
While nature melted, superstition raved;
That mourn'd the dead, and this denied a grave—
Denied the charity of dust to spread
O'er dust! a charity their dogs enjoy.
What could I do? What succour? What resource?
With pious sacrilege a grave I stole;
With impious pety that grave I wrong'd;
Short in my duty; coward in my grief!
More like her murderer than friend, I crept,
With soft suspended step, and muffled deep,
In midnight darkness, whisper'd my last sigh.
I whisper'd what should echo through their realms;
Nor writ her name whose tomb should pierce the skies."

Evidence has been brought forward to prove that Narcissa (Mrs. Temple) was, in reality, buried at Lyons.

The student of medicine should not fail to see the Ecole de Médecine, situated in the old building, formerly the bishop's palace. It contains valuable anatomical collections, and the doctor's robe with which Rabelais was here installed, and which is employed for the same purpose at present, but so much patched and mended that scarcely a thread of the original garment remains. The school of medicine here is of great antiquity, having been founded, it is said, by Arab physicians, driven out of Spain, and patronised by the Comtes de Montpellier. Adjoining this building is the Cathedral, modernised, and of no interest. It has a singular porch, projecting from the wall, and resting on 2 round piers or turrets. The building suffered much from the Huguenots. It contains an altarpiece, the Fall of Simon Magus, by Sebastian Bourdon, a native of Montpellier.

The principal object of curiosity here, however, is the **Musée Fabre*, named from its founder, a native of Montpellier, an artist, and the friend of Alfieri and of the Countess of Albany. It comprises a collection of paintings, of an excellence rarely found away from the capital; among them a portrait of Lorenzo de' Medici, father of Catherine de' Medici (d. 1519), by Raphael, probably genuine, and good; and a head of a Young Man, also attributed to Raphael, and at least a good copy by his scholars, if not original. The Infant Samuel in Prayer, Sir Joshua Reynolds. There are also many other pictures of the Italian schools, and a number by modern French artists.

The Bibliothèque Fabre, containing the library of Alfieri, 15,000 vols., including many works on art, are also deposited in this museum.

Cambacères, Arch-Chancellor of the Empire, Seb. Bourdon the painter, and Chaptal the chemist, were born here.

Montpellier has some considerable manufactures of cottons, dye-works, &c.; and some which are nearly peculiar to itself and its neighbourhood, such as the making of verdigris, which is obtained by laying plates of copper between layers of grape-husks, and allowing them to remain in cellars for 18 or 20 days, after which the coating of green rust (acetate of copper), produced by the oxidizing of the metal plates by the grape-juice, is scraped off. There are extensive chemical works here, founded by the Comte de Chaptal, consisting of alum, Prussian blue, sulphuric and nitric acids; also manufactures of perfumes, essences, and liqueurs. The distilleries of brandy from the wines of the district are very numerous.

The excellent Roquefort cheese is made about 15 m. to the N. of this, in the Dépt. de la Lozère. (See Index.)

The high road to Cette used to make a circuit by Mèze, a seaport and fishing station, near which are the mineral baths of Balarue.

The railway takes a direct course through a densely peopled country abounding in vineyards on the plain, olives on the hills.

Villeneuve Stat., whose Church is in part as old, probably, as the 8th centy.

Frontignan Stat., the neighbourhood of which is celebrated for its sweet wine, the best being of the kind called Muscat.

On leaving Frontignan the rly. crosses the Etang de Maguelonne, by a long causeway to Cette Stat. This flourishing town and seaport (Inns: H. des Bains, very good; —H. du Grand Galion, dear; beware mosquitoes) contains a population of 13,413, and is situated on a tongue of land running between the sea and the salt lake called Etang de Thau: it stands at the foot of an eminence, surmounted by a fort. The old road entered by a causeway elevated above the lagoon, and by a bridge of 52 arches. The town was founded by Louis XIV.; and the works of the harbour, piers, &c., were executed by Riquet, the engineer of the Canal du Midi. There is an extensive manufacture here of the wines of all countries, port, sherry, claret, champagne, for the English and other markets, produced by the mixture of various kinds of French and Spanish wine and brandy; Benicarlo wine being imported from Spain to mix with inferior claret. The salt-works on the lagoon are numerous. In 1710 a descent was made here from the fleet of Commodore Norris by a small British force designed to cause a diversion on the side of Spain, and effect a junction with the insurgents of the Cevennes. They took possession of Cette, but after holding it for a few days were driven back to their ships with some loss.

Steamers to Marseilles, chiefly for merchandize, in 10 or 12 hours. A canal passes through the series of lagoons from Cette to Aigues Mortes, fenced in by dykes of stone or mud, and thence to Beaucaire. The Canal du Midi opens out also into the Etang de Thau, and thus Cette has a water communication both with the Rhône and Garonne.

The ruined church of Maguelonne, on an island between the sea and the lagoons, beyond the Canal du Grave, will interest the antiquary, but he will require a guide to it across the heath and marsh, though the distance is only 6 m. from Montpellier. It appears more like a castle than a church, little ornament being expended on its exterior. Its W. doorway is curious, consisting of a pointed arch of coloured marble, resting on a sculptured frieze, with a bas-relief of the Saviour in the tympanum, and a triangular bas-relief on either side of the door, representing St. Peter with the Keys, and St. Paul with the Sword. The body of the church, a nave ending in an apse, contains some ancient tombs of bishops, but is filled with hay. The building dates from 1110 to 1180. It is the sole relic of a populous town which existed on this spot down to the 16th centy.

Cette is the terminus of the Lyons Railway: we now enter on the Bordeaux and Cette Railway.

The Railway runs near to the sea, between it and the Etang de Thau.

[The high road turned back inland, and went through Pezenas, a town of 7800 Inhab., agreeably situated on the l. bank of the Hérault, at the confluence of the Peine. It was anciently called Piscescanum. Molière wrote here his comedy Les Précieuses Ridicules, while director of a troop of strolling players. The chair in which he used to sit to be shaved by the barber is still preserved in the town. Pezenas is one of the chief brandy markets in Europe.]

Onglous Stat., near the mouth of the Canal du Midi.

Agde Stat. (Inn: Poste), a small seaport.

Béziers Stat.—Inns: H. du Nord; Poste; Croix Blanche.

Béziers, an ancient town of 17,376 Inhab., has an imposing appearance at a distance, seated as it is upon a commanding eminence, its topmost building being its Cathedral. The interior, however, is confined, gloomy, and filthy; but some improvements have lately been made, including a new bridge to lead into the town. The view from the Terrace, in front of the cathedral and évêché, is fine, extending over the course of the Orbe, and of the Canal du Midi, both of which pass near the foot of the hill, and pursue their way to the sea in different directions. The Cathedral of St. Nazaire is a Gothic building, surmounted by battlements, so as somewhat to resemble a castle externally, and contains some old painted glass. It was the chief scene of the horrible slaughter of 1209, with which the name of Béziers is always associated, at that terrible siege by the crusading army raised at the call of the church of Rome to exterminate the unfortunate Albigenses, who were numerous in this devoted city. The inhabitants refusing to yield, the crusaders forced their way into the town, their leaders being its bishop and the abbot of Citeaux, who had prepared a list of the proscribed persons. In the confusion of the assault, however, the soldiers were perplexed to distinguish the heretics from the orthodox: "Kill all," exclaimed the abbot; "the Lord will recognise his own" (Cædite eos, novit enim Dominus qui sunt ejus). The result was the massacre of every living soul, to the number of 60,000 according to some historians, though the abbot of Citeaux himself, in his letter to Innocent III., humbly avows that he could only slay 20,000. A Maison Centrale de Detention has been built on the terrace in front of the Cathedral.

The chief trade here is in eau de vie, produced in the numerous distilleries. On the Promenade is a Status in bronze of Paul Riquet, Baron de Bonrepos, a native of Béziers, the projector of the Canal du Midi, which is carried through 9 locks close to the town. (See Rte. 93.) It opens into the sea, 13 m. S. of this, at Agde, called "Ville Noire," from the black basalt of which it is built. Agde (Inn: Poste; 8230 Inhab.) contains of every cathedral, and a cloister, whose arcades are perfect, though walled up. The Hérault is here crossed by a suspension bridge.

Hence to Narbonne the country is very uninteresting.

Nissan Stat. The Etang de Capes-tang is passed on the rt., and the river Aude (Atax), which gives its name to the Dépt., is crossed.

Narbonne Stat. Inns: H. de France; H. de la Daurade.

This very ancient and dirty town was the Narbo Martius of the Romans, one of the first colonies established by them beyond the Alps, and capital of the vast province of Gallia Narbonensis, which extended from the Alps to the Pyrenees. It was the spot where Julius Cæsar settled the remains of his 10th Legion, at the termination of the civil wars, and the "pulcherrima Narbo" of Martial; yet it retains scanty vestiges of its ancient masters compared with the importance which it maintains in history. Not one Roman building remains; the reason of which is that all were pulled down to furnish materials for the fortifications erected by Louis XIII., which were composed of masonry of Roman monuments, Arab ramparts (for the Arabs held Narbonne for half of the 8th century), and mediæval fragments. The ramparts may consequently be looked upon as a museum of antiquities out of doors, and the stranger should walk round them to observe the bas-reliefs, inscriptions (500 or 600 in number), and sculptures inserted in them, especially near the Porte de Bézier.

Near the Cathedral, in the centre of the town, is the Hôtel de Ville, once Archbishop's palace, partly rebuilt in the style of 15th centy. by M. Viollet le Duc. Attached to it are three ancient towers. La Tour des Télégraphes dates from the beginning of the 14th centy.; it is battlemented, pierced with loopholes, and furnished with turrets. Within it Louis XIII. signed the order for the arrest of Cinq Mars and De Thou for conspiracy, at the instigation of the dying Cardinal Richelieu, whose archers caught them in the act of escaping from the town.

A local antiquarian society has collected together in a Museum within the ancient Archevêché, and in the palace garden, a number of architectural and sculptured fragments, Roman, Phœnician, and Visigoth; Christian tombs of the 3rd and 4th centuries; a bas-relief of 2 Eagles supporting a Garland; an altar to the deified Augustus, erected to him by the people of Narbonne, B.C. 11, in the Forum; a statue of Silenus, dug up on the line of rly., &c. In the Picture Gallery are many old paintings from convents and churches. Some works of the Spanish school deserve notice.

The Cathedral of St. Just is a fine Gothic edifice, of which the choir only is finished. It was founded in 1272, finished 1332; the height of the roof is 40 mètres (131 ft.). The side chapels were added during the 13th centy.; and some of the windows having flamboyant tracery are of the 15th. There is a good deal of painted glass in them. The high altar is rich in marble of the country. The magnificent white marble monument of Bishop de la Jugie (1272) is a model of Gothic art of the 13th centy., and well worth study. The statues of saints and bishops are admirably executed, but in the revolutionary frenzy the head of every statue was knocked off, and the Bishop's effigy removed. There are other tombs of the 16th centy., and a fine organ of the age of Louis XIII. Repairs and additions are being made to the building, and the completion of the nave is intended.

Behind the altar are some curious iron seats, in the form of an X, of considerable antiquity. Sebastian del Piombo's "Raising of Lazarus," now in the National Gallery, was painted for this church: there is a copy of it here. The Romanesque Ch. of St. Paul, founded 1229, may interest the architect. The carved capitals of the columns on the outside represent monsters, devils, and other objects designed to disgust men with vice, and to remind them of the punishment of the wicked.

Narbonne is a city of 14,300 Inhab., but, though once so important, it is now not even chef-lieu of the department. It is about 8 m. from the sea; and a branch of the Canal du Midi, called La Robine, runs through it to the Mediterranean. The principal Promenade is an avenue of trees, which lines its side, called Allée des Soupirs. Narbonne is an intricate, curious, but lifeless town, though it possesses some manufactures. The honey of Narbonne is the best in France; it is very white, and has a highly aromatic flavour. A distant view of the Pyrenees is obtained from hence.

Railway to Toulouse and Bordeaux (Rte. 93), and to Perpignan (Rte. 94).

The Canal du Midi is shortly described in Rte. 93.

during an inundation of the river; which had laid a quarter of the town under water, the royal bailiff entered the streets in a boat, and claimed all those parts which the river had occupied, for his master.

3 m. S. of Avignon the turbulent river Durance is crossed by a Viaduct 656 yds. long.

The course of the Rhône below this possesses very little interest. The railroad to Arles is equally uninteresting, but more direct than the river: traversing at first a country rendered fertile by irrigation, it crosses the Durance, at a distance of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. from Avignon, by a very long bridge, rendered necessary by the broad bed of gravel, not half of which is occupied by the wild river, except in times of flood.

At Barbantane Stat. there are extensive quarries.

A low ridge of limestone hills, called les Alpines, remarkable for their utter nakedness, separates the road from the Rhône, running from E. to W. In the distance, upon their flanks, the white houses of St. Remy, and its 2 Roman monuments, may be distinguished.

Graveson Stat.

TARASCON JUNCTION STAT.

rt. Here the Rly. is joined by the line from Nismes and Montpellier (Rte. 126).

* Tarascon (Inns: H. des Empe-reurs, close to the bridge; not recommended) is a town of about 11,000 Inhab. Etymologists have been bold enough to derive its name from the Greek ῥαπδῶσα, disturb, connecting it with the tradition of a dragon called Tarasque, which, once upon a time, infested the borders of the Rhône, preying upon human flesh, to the great terror and disturbance of the inhabitants. They were at length delivered from the pest by St. Martha, sister of Lazarus, who had landed in Languedoc with her sister Mary Magdalen, since adopted as the patron saint of the town. She conquered the monster with no other weapon than the Cross, and made him a prisoner with her girdle. This de-

ROUTE 127.

AVIGNON TO MARSEILLES, BY TARASCON, ARLES, AND ST. CHAMAS—RAILWAY. THE RHONE FROM AVIGNON TO ARLES.

	Miles.
Avignon.
Tarascon . . . . .	13
Arles . . . . .	22
Rognac Junct. . . . .	58
Marseilles . . . . .	73

The first portion of this Rly. was opened 1847, and it was completed by aid of advances from Government, 1849. It cost £3,400,000.

As far as Arles its course is parallel with the Rhône, at some distance from the l. bank of the river as far as Tarascon.

The Rhône opposite Avignon always belonged to the King of France, even when its l. bank formed the territory of the Pope, and, in consequence, liverance was commemorated until within a few years by a procession of mummers, attended by the clergy, who paraded the town escorting the figure of a dragon, made of canvas, and wielding a huge beam of wood by way of a tail, to the imminent danger of the legs of all who approached. The ceremony was attended by numerous practical jokes, and led to acts of violence, in consequence of which it has been suppressed. The effigy of the dragon now slumbers in the lumber-room of the playhouse.

The Ch. of St. Martha is a pointed Gothic building of the 14th centy., with the exception of the S. portal, which is circular and recessed with deep mouldings; between these the dog-tooth ornament appears: it dates from 1187. In a crypt beneath the nave of the church is the shrine and tomb of St. Martha, ornamented with her reclining effigy of white marble, not badly executed, but modern. Against the walls the history of Martha is represented in a series of bas-reliefs. Here also is the tomb of a Neapolitan knight, a follower of Roi René, and a well in the floor, the water of which is said to rise and fall with the Rhône.

The picturesque Castle, remarkable for its massive construction and perfect preservation, was begun in 1400, and finished by King René of Anjou, who frequently resided here, spending his time in festivities and fêtes, during one of which he and his queen appeared in the attire of shepherd and shepherdess: it is now a prison, and contains nothing remarkable.

Beaucaire, on the opposite (rt.) bank of the Rhone, and the railroad from Tarascon to Nîmes, are described in Rte. 126.

[From Tarascon an excursion may be made to St. Remy (10 m.), on the road to Orgon and Aix, a deserted town, remarkable only for two well-preserved Roman buildings, detached from all others, and about  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. from the town: the one is a funereal Monument, of most elegant design, about 50 ft. high, ornamented on its square base with bas-reliefs. On the N. side is a Skirmish of Cavalry; on the W. a Combat of Infantry; on the S. the Sacrifices and Erection of Trophies after a Battle; on the E. a winged Victory supporting a wounded Soldier: above this rises a double arch with engaged columns in the angles, and the whole is surmounted by a circular temple enclosing 2 statues. It bears this inscription, which throws no light on its date:—

SEX. L. M. JVLIEL. C. F. PARENTIBVS. SVIS.

The Arch of Triumph, standing within a few yards of it, is less perfect, having lost its upper story, but the stones of its vaults remain, beautifully carved in hexagonal sunk panels. Much of the sculpture has perished; the bas-reliefs remaining represent captives, bound, with women beside them. The date of this monument is as little known as that of the former: it has been supposed to commemorate the victories of Marc Aurelius. St. Remy was the ancient Glanum: it stands on the slope of the naked Alpines, and one of the limestone crests near the town is pierced through and through by a natural orifice. The ancient quarries remain, from which stones were obtained for the Roman edifices in the neighbourhood, and there exist 2 wells. St. Remy was the birthplace of Nostradamus (1503), the astrologer and fortune-teller.]

[About 5 m. S. of St. Remy is the **Baux*, an exceedingly curious fortified town of the middle ages, wonderfully little altered, except that it has fallen into utter decay, only 60 of its houses occupied, and only 200 Inhab. left. It is seated on an escarped platform of rock, surmounted by a Castle, begun about 485, including a Church, both in ruins. It belonged to the Counts des Baux, who during the middle ages were constantly engaged in feud with the Counts of Provence, who frequently laid siege to their stronghold. This place would well reward an antiquary to visit it.]

The railway now again joins the Rhône. The plain around was overwhelmed by débris brought down by the Rhône, which broke its banks hereabouts during the inundation of 1840. This irruption, covering the low grounds, destroyed the crops, but has left behind a deep deposit of mud over much waste land, which it is hoped may produce permanent fertility.

The country between Tarascon and Arles is a flat and uninteresting alluvial marshy plain, intersected by ditches, and the olive here gives place to the willow.

Segonnaux Stat.

A little on the l. of the road, about 3 m. from Arles, a singular rock rises, like an island, above a marshy pond, crowned with the ruins of the Abbey of Montmajour, a very picturesque and interesting building, founded in the 10th centy., and continued down to the 18th. Of the latter period are the vast palatial constructions of Italian architecture, which formed the convent, now rapidly falling to ruin. The Church is partly Romanesque, partly Pointed; but beneath it is a vast crypt, of the 11th centy., running under nearly the whole upper church. Behind the altar of this crypt stretches a semicircular wall, pierced with windows so as to render the altar visible from the side-chapels. Attached to the church is a ruined cloister, of the same character as that of St. Trophimus at Arles, in which 2 mutilated monumental effigies remain of princes of the house of Anjou. Beneath the abbey are the chapel and cell of St. Trophimus, a beautiful specimen of early Romanesque, partly hewn out of the rock.

At the foot of the rock, on the N.E., is the very curious Chapel of Sainte Croix, consisting of a central square tower, from which project 4 equal semicircular apses, that on the W. having a porch attached. It is in the Romanesque style, but destitute of all ornament. It is proved by records to have been dedicated by Pons de Marignan, Bishop of Arles, in 1019. An inscription, forged by the monks of Montmajour at a comparatively late period, attributed its origin to Charlemagne, to commemorate a victory here gained over the Saracens. Down to 1789 this chapel was resorted to every year, on the festival of the Discovery of the True Cross, by infinite multitudes of pilgrims, anxious to reap the advantages promised by papal indulgence to all who then visited it. The rock on which the chapel is built is honey-combed with tombs of all sizes excavated in it: some are said to have been the last resting-place of early Christians.

[The Rhône first forks off into 2 branches, forming the head of its delta, about a mile to the N. of Arles. The branch which it sends off to the W., called Petit Rhône, is crossed by a wire suspension bridge at the village Fourques, on the road to Nîmes.]

ARLES STAT.—Inns: H. du Nord, in the Place du Forum, good and moderate;—H. du Forum, most comfortable, perhaps the best;—H. du Commerce, on the Quai.

Arles, one of the most ancient, and once the most important city in France, the Rome of Gaul ("Gallula Roma Arelas," as Ausonius calls it), the residence of a Roman Prefect, and, after the fall of the Roman Empire (A.D. 876), the capital of the kingdom of Arles, or of Trans-Jurane Burgundy, is now shrunken up into a dull provincial town. It is, however, rich in ancient remains of the period of its greatness; and the stranger who succeeds in threading its labyrinth of dirty narrow streets, more intricate than any other perhaps in France, will be duly rewarded, if he takes an interest in antiquities. Arles is justly celebrated for the beauty of its women.

It is a town of 22,788 Inhab. (but its population is on the decrease), standing on the l. bank of the Rhône, near the apex of its delta, about 28 m. from the sea. The river bank is lined by a quay, at which may be seen moored a number of heavy barges, with one mast and a very long yard, and a prow not unlike that of the antique galleys. A bridge of boats unites the town with its suburb

Trinquetaille, and supplies the place of an old bridge, over which passed the Aurelian Way, extending from Rome to Cadiz,

Per quem Romani commercia suscipis orbi, to use the words of Ausonius, in his description of Arles.

The most interesting ancient monuments existing at Arles are,

* The Amphitheatre, a magnificent and most interesting relic of former days, larger than that of Nîmes (measuring 459 ft. by 341 ft., having 5 corridors and 43 rows of seats, and capable of holding 25,000 spectators), but by no means so well preserved, owing to the devastations of human hands, rather than those of time. It consists of 2 stories of 60 arches, the lower Doric, the upper Corinthian, both rude in style, and of most massive construction, formed of enormous blocks, very exactly fitted together. Owing to the unevenness of the ground, it is supported on one side by vast substructions. The outer wall is now nearly separated from the second by the removal of the vaults, and the interior is completely gutted. Yet the lower portion, including the podium, or parapet surrounding the arena, faced with marble slabs, is even more perfect than at Nîmes, having been covered up with earth until 1830. It was also filled within and choked up without by an accumulation of mean hovels, occupied by the poorest and worst part of the population of the town, to the number of 2000. Some of them had even burrowed under the vaults, or nestled in its recesses. An excrescence, not forming part of the original structure, are the three square towers surmounting the entire edifice, left out of four originally. But they are interesting historical relics, having been raised in the 8th centy., either by the Saracens, who, under Jusouf-Ben-Abdelrahman, Wali of Narbonne, then obtained possession of Arles, or by Charles Martel, who expelled them from the city 739. At all events the amphitheatre, like the Coliseum of Rome, was at that period converted into a fortress, and withstood sieges and assaults, while 4 towers of defence were erected at the 4 cardinal points. From the top of the loftiest remaining tower the best view is obtained of the amphitheatre, and of the city of Arles, of the course of the Rhône upwards to Beaucaire, of the distant outline of the Alpines and Mont Ventoux, and of the plain of the Crau: the sea is not visible.

The stranger will not fail to remark the beauty of the masonry of the amphitheatre, the arches sometimes turned flat, of small stones, sometimes replaced by huge single beams of stone. The vaulted chambers communicating with the arena are supposed to have been the dens for wild beasts. The very scanty traces of inscriptions remaining on this building throw no light on its date, but it is supposed to be older than the arènes of Nîmes, and is attributed to the age of Titus.

The **Roman Theatre*, more recently disinterred from the earth than the amphitheatre, has suffered equal if not greater dilapidations in the course of ages. It is said to have been demolished by order of the early Christian bishops, who regarded it as the focus of idolatry and vice. Although reduced to a mere fragment, the costly marbles, the columns, the sculptured friezes (some preserved in the museum), and the statues found in it, one of which, called the Vénus d'Arles, forms an ornament to the Louvre, attest its ancient magnificence. The portions remaining are two Corinthian columns, surmounted by part of their entablature, which stand isolated like those in the forum of Rome; they formed part of the Proscenium, the rest of which is reduced to the pedestals of other pillars on a line with these, to truncated walls pierced by openings for doors, by which the actors made their entrance and exit, and furnished with niches for statues. Opposite to this wall is the semicircular space for the audience, which still retains some of its stone seats, rising in steps one above the other. In the middle are some very curious substructions, attached apparently to the orchestra, consisting of 3 parallel walls, 6 or 8 ft. high, stretching quite across the building, leaving a space of about 1 ft. between them, which is set with grooved ridges projecting alternately from either wall at regular distances. Within these was probably placed the wooden support of the proscenium or pulpitum, the stage in fact. It is difficult to explain the uses of this very peculiar construction.

A portion of the semicircular outer wall of the theatre, of 2 stories, with arches and pillars, has been liberated from the modern houses which blocked it up, and exhibits both frieze and architrave richly sculptured.

In the midst of the Place Royale, or de l'Hôtel de Ville, in which are situated the church of St. Trophime, the Hôtel de Ville, and the museum, rises an Obelisk of a single shaft of grey granite, antique, but not Egyptian, since it is ascertained to have been brought from a quarry in the Estrelle mountains, near Fréjus; and it differs in shape from those of Egypt, tapering more rapidly from its base to its summit. After having been for centuries prostrate in the mud of the Rhône, it was elevated in its present position in 1676. It is supported on 4 lions, and surmounted by a very tasteless gilt sun, set off with eyes, cheeks, and mouth. It is supposed to have stood upon the spina in an ancient circus, all traces of which are gone; it is 47 ft. high (the Luxor obelisk is 72 ft.), and is destitute of inscription or hieroglyph.

The **Museum* occupies the suppressed church of St. Anne; it is filled with an interesting collection of ancient remains discovered in or near Arles, a large proportion in the theatre, including a very rich marble frieze, and numerous statues, whose merit as works of art is small, except a head of a female (? Diana, or the Empress Livia) without a nose, and a head of Augustus found in 1823, belonging to a torso previously sent to the Louvre, both very good. An altar to Apollo bears representations of the Delphic Tripod and of Marsyas flayed alive. A leaden pipe, more than 40 ft. long, stamped with the name of the Roman plumber, was discovered in the bed of the Rhône, and is supposed to have conveyed fresh water to the opposite bank. The Roman glass vessels are very numerous. The cemetery called Aliscamps (see below) has furnished a great number of sarcophagi, some pagan, but the majority Christian, ornamented with bas-reliefs of good design and execution, showing that Roman art survived long after the extinction of paganism, though the subjects on which it was exercised were taken from the Bible. Those most commonly represented are Adam and Eve, the Deluge, the Passage of the Red Sea, Moses striking the Rock, Jonah and the Whale, the Sacrifice of Isaac, &c. On one is seen the Oil Press and Olive Harvest. A mutilated statue of the God Mithras, wanting the feet and head, is very curious. It is a human body entwined by a serpent, between whose folds the signs of the zodiac are sculptured.

The **Cathedral of St. Trophimus*, who is said to have been a disciple of St. Paul, and to have first planted the Cross here, is entered from the Place by a very curious projecting porch, constructed in the 12th or early in the 13th centy. It consists of a deeply recessed semicircular arch, with mouldings not unlike our late Norman, resting upon a horizontal sculptured frieze which forms the lintel of the door, and is continued from beneath the arch on the rt. and l. of the façade, supported on pillars. There are 6 of these pillars, 4 round and 2 octagonal, on either side of the door—these are of marble; and one of granite in the middle of the door forms the support of the lintel. They are based upon carved lions, some of them devouring men. Between the pillars are statues of Apostles and Saints, those in the angles being St. Trophimus and St. Stephen. The tympanum over the door is occupied by the figure of the Saviour as Judge of the World, with the attributes of the 4 Evangelists; and the sculptured frieze below represents in the centre the 12 Apostles, and on the sides the Last Judgment; the Good being on the l. of the spectator, the Bad, bound by a rope and dragged by devils, on the rt. The archivolt is filled with the Heavenly Host in the shape of rows of cherubims.

The interior is modernized, and less interesting; it contains 3 antique sculptured sarcophagi, one of which serves as a font.

The cloisters on the S. side are very curious; two of the sides have round arches, and two pointed, resting on double shafts, or square piers, carved on the sides with figures of saints, and projecting towards the courtyard in the form of fluted Corinthian pilasters. The capitals of the pillars are very curiously but rudely sculptured, in part with Scripture groups.

The square tower is also ancient, and in its upper story Corinthian pilasters again appear.

The Hôtel de Ville was built 1673, from designs of Mansard, contiguous to the clock-tower, which is somewhat older. It contains a collection of natural history.

Besides the more important Roman remains already described, there are, within the town, in the Place du Forum, 2 granite pillars and part of a Corinthian pediment, let into the wall in front of the Hôtel du Nord; they are supposed to have been moved, from some building now destroyed, into their present position. Other constructions, which may have belonged to the forum, are known to exist beneath the houses. In a narrow street near the Rhône is a tower of brick, called Tour de la Trouille, supposed to have been built by Constantine the Great, who resided much at Arles, and whose eldest son was born here.

Beyond the walls, to the E. of the town,  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. from the Rly. Stat., is situated the ancient Cemetery of Arles, still called Aliscamps, a slight variation from the original name (Elisi Campi) by which it was known 18 centuries ago. It was of vast extent, a complete Necropolis, and the dead were brought hither from other cities, as far distant as Lyons, for interment. Dante mentions it in the Inferno, IX. 112:—

"Si come ad Aril ove 'l Rodano stagna, Fanno i sepolcri tutto 'l loco varo."

And Ariosto alludes to it in the Orlando Furioso:—

"Piena di sepolture è la campagna."

One portion of the ground was used for burials in pagan times; another, marked off with crosses, was afterwards designated for the interment of Christians. The ground teems with gravestones, sepulchral memorials, and sarcophagi, but the most curious have been removed to the museums of Arles, Toulouse, Marseilles, &c. In the neighbouring farms the cattle drink out of stone troughs which are nothing but empty coffins, and with their lids the ditches are bridged. Several chapels were erected within the area of this vast churchyard: the most remarkable is that of St. Honorat, or of Notre Dame de Grace, now falling to ruin. It is surmounted by an elegant octagonal tower, of two stories, having 2 circular-headed windows in each face; the interior, except the crypt, is not older than the 14th centy.

Excursions from Arles.—No one should omit to visit les Baux, that unique remnant of feudal times; a good road leads to it (see above).

The ecclesiastical constructions of Montmajour, about an hour's walk from Arles, passing under the Rly., are described above.

Although, in the days of the Romans, Arles was plentifully supplied with spring water, conveyed to it from the chain of the Alpines in aqueducts of masonry many miles long, the modern town is destitute of this important commodity, and the inhabitants suffer severely from the want of drinking water. Owing to the marshes and pools in the vicinity, the town and the district around Arles are unhealthy at certain seasons; and intermittent fevers are very prevalent, but less so now than formerly, in consequence of the extended drainage.

A Canal has been formed from Arles to Bouc, on the sea-coast, at the mouth of the salt lake called Etang de Berre, which opens a more direct communication to Marseilles than the course of the Rhône. This canal, begun 1802, with the double object of draining the marshes on the l. bank of the Rhône, and of facilitating traffic by avoiding the bars and sandbanks at the mouth of the river, was not completed until 1835. It is about 30 m. long. It was traversed regularly by barges until 1840, when the great inundation of the Rhône overwhelmed a part of it with sand.

The wide uninterrupted plain stretching from Arles to the sea, S. and E., nearly as far as Marseilles, including the delta of the Rhône, or the island of Camargue (derived from Kamaſ, reed, and erypos, field; or perhaps from Spanish Camarca, march or frontier?), presents some singular phenomena not unworthy of attention. Indeed, both its climate and its soil of mud banks, arid sand, or vast bare gravel beds, alternating with salt marshes and lagoons, raised from 2 to 7 feet above the sea, assimilate it rather to Africa and the borders of the Nile than to France. Even some of the animals which resort to it, the ibis, the pelican, and the flamingo, properly belong to the African continent. The ground is so impregnated with salt, that the water is brackish; the surface of the soil is, in summer, covered with a white saline efflorescence, like a coating of snow, and, when the pools are dried up, the salt forms in a cake 2 in. thick. Here, as in the deserts of Asia and Africa, the mirage constantly occurs during the heats, transforming the arid plain in appearance into a wide lake. Cultivation can only be pursued by excluding the sea by dykes, which entirely surround the Camargue, and the saline influence is counteracted by covering the surface with the muddy deposits brought down by the Rhône. In this manner the district produces extensive pastures, on which large flocks of sheep are fed, together with herds of cattle, and wild horses, or rather ponies, said to be of a stock originally brought from Africa by the Arabs, in their frequent invasions of this part of France. At stated times the young bulls are chased and separated from the herd by horsemen armed with tridents, in order to be branded, and receive the marks of their different proprietors; this is called La Ferrade. A considerable portion of the district is ploughed land, furnishing crops of corn, madder, &c., which are produced in abundance, and the culture of rice has lately been introduced; but this fertility, as well as the rich pasturages, arises entirely from irrigation, and the distribution in all directions of the waters of the Rhône, derived from the river in cuts and canals. The salt marshes and lagoons are unprofitable except in producing salt. There is only one village in the Camargue, that of Saintes Maries, but many isolated farms are scattered over it. At harvest time, in the month of July, the corn is threshed in the Oriental fashion, by driving 10 or 12 young horses, held with a long rein by a man in the centre of the threshing-floor, over the sheaves laid in heaps around, but this practice exists throughout Provence. The winnowing is performed by tossing the straw, chaff, and grain into the air, and allowing the wind to separate them.

It has been calculated that the Rhône discharges into the sea, in 24 hrs., more than 5 million cubic mètres of earthy matter, similar to the deposits composing the Camargue. Its banks are in consequence extending daily, and the Tower of St. Louis, built 1737, at a distance of 2600 mètres (1 m. 3 furl.) from the sea, is now 7200 mètres (4 m. 3 furl.) from it. In consequence the mouths of the Rhône are beset by sand-banks so as to be pronounced by Vauban "incorrigibles," and their navigation is dangerous.

At Arles are situated the workshop, engine-house, and carriage dépôt of the Rly. Company. On quitting Arles Stat. the Rly. turns away from the Rhône and pursues a S.E. direction.

The railroad, issuing out of the antique Necropolis of Arles, the Aliscamps, passes (l.) near an Aqueduct, comprising part of the line of a Roman one, which conveyed the waters of the Durance by St. Remy to Arles. A short distance from Arles the railway is carried over some low grounds by a viaduct of 31 arches, 841 yards in length, which is a fine piece of engineering. From Raphele Stat. nearly to St. Chamas the railroad traverses the Crau, a singular stony plain of 30,000 acres extending S. to the Mediterranean, covered all over with rolled boulders and pebbles, deposited doubtless by the Rhône and its tributaries, especially the Durance, under circumstances differing from their present physical condition. This "campus lapideus" was well known to the ancients; not only is it described by Strabo, Pliny, and Mela, but Æschylus, in a fragment preserved by Pomponius Mela, lays on it the scene of the combat between Hercules and the Ligurians, when the son of Jove, having exhausted his arrows, was supplied with artillery from heaven by a discharge of stones from the sky, sent for his use by Jupiter.

Ἰδὼν δ' ἀμυχανοῦντα σ' ὁ Ζεὺς οἰκτερεῖ, νεφέλην δ' ὑποσχών νιφάδι στρογγύλων πέτρων ὑπόσκιον θήσει χθόνα, οἷς ἔπειτα συμβαλὼν θηώσσει βῆδις λίγυν στρατόν.

One ancient writer remarks that the assistance of Jupiter would have been more effectual had he showered down the stones at once on the heads of the Ligurians. Such is the mythological history of the Crau. "It is composed entirely of shingle, being so uniform a mass of round stones, some to the size of a man's head, but of all sizes less, that the newly thrown up shingle of a sea-shore is hardly less free from soil; beneath these surface-stones is not so much a sand as a cemented rubble, a small mixture of loam. Vegetation is rare and miserable; some of the abanthium and lavender so low and poor as scarcely to be recognised, and 2 or 3 miserable grasses, with Centaurea calycitropes and solstitialis, were the principal plants I could find."—A. Young.

Of late cultivation has been extending eastward. The most arid portion is passed near Entressen Stat.

Through the greater portion of its extent its condition is that of a semi-desert; but under the stones which cover it grows a short sweet herbage, which the sheep accustomed to the locality obtain by turning over the stones. It is consequently covered over in the winter months with flocks driven hither from the French Alps, where they spend the summer, passing annually to and fro like the merino flocks of the Mesta in Spain. There the practice of migrating from the plains to the Pyrenees, and vice versa, is as old as the 7th centy. Here, however, it must be traced to a far earlier period, since it is mentioned by Pliny, "e longinquis regionibus pecudum millibus convenientibus ut vescantur."

Every portion of the Crau which can be reached by irrigation is exceedingly fertile, producing vines, olives, almonds, mulberries, and corn. Young says, "The meadows I viewed are among the most extraordinary spectacles the world can afford, in respect to the amazing contrast between the soil in its natural and in its watered state, covered richly and luxuriantly with clover, chicory, rib-grass, and avena elatior." The chief means by which this useful purpose is effected is the Canal de Craponne, so called from its projector, a native of Salon, who began it in 1554; it is cut from the Durance at a place called La Roque, and extends to the Rhône at Arles, a distance of 33 m., sending out branches to Salon and elsewhere. The whole agriculture of the district depends upon this canal, as Egypt does upon the Nile: it is besides of no small use in turning oil and corn mills. Previous to its construction the stony desert reached up to the very outskirts of Arles and Salon. Irrigation is continually extended over fresh lands with wonderful results. The meadows in winter are said to resemble English meadows in spring, and they produce numerous heavy crops. In the remoter and uncultivated parts of the Crau, the Mirage, which so often in the African deserts cheats the parched traveller with the appearance of inland lakes in spots most destitute of water, is of frequent occurrence.

St. Martin Stat.

Entressen Stat.

Miramas Stat. Near this the barren Crau ends and olive plantations succeed.

[A few m. N. lies

Salon (Inns: Poste; — Croix de

Malte), a town of 6000 Inhab., carrying on an important trade in olive-oil. The high road is carried through a sort of Boulevard, enclosing the old town; and passes the Castle, said to be that of Nostradamus, now a barrack. That celebrated astrologer died here 1566, and is buried in the parish church. A statue of Adam de Craponne is erected in the Place.]

The railway is carried round the margin of the Etang de Berre, a sort of inland sea, navigable for small vessels, which is connected with the sea by a new canal at Bouc.

St. Chamas Stat., a town of 2443 Inhab., overlooking the Etang de Berre. It is divided into 2 parts by a narrow marly ridge pierced with caverns, some of them inhabited. On the ridge stands the old Church of St. Amand. The upper and lower portions of the town are joined by a tunnel. Part of the ancient ramparts surround the town. There is a Government powder-mill here.

About  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. beyond the Stat. (rt. of line), in the midst of the plain, stands the \**Pont Flavien*, a Roman bridge, built over the Touloubre, a single arch of large blocks, approached by dedicatory arches of elegant Corinthian architecture at either end. On the frieze is this inscription:—

L. DONNIVS. C. FLAVOS. FLAMEN.
ROME ET. AVGVSTI. TESTAMENTO. FIERI
JVSSIT. ARBITRATV. C. DONNII. VENÆ
ET. CATTEL. RVFI.

Leaving St. Chamas, the Rly. is carried over a magnificent viaduct of 49 intersecting arches, the largest 85 ft. span, over the Touloubre.

Berre Stat., near the village on l. which gives its name to the Etang de Berre, an inland bay, overlooked by the rly.

6 Rognac Junction Stat.; branch Railway to Aix (Rte. 129), 24 kilom., finished in 1856. It passes near the grand Aqueduct of Roquefavour.

Pas des Lanciers Stat.: rt. see the sea;

Near St. Chamas and Vitrolles the railway encounters a triple range of hills, which hem in Marseilles on this side. It clears a series of ridges and ravines by tunnels and embankments. It traverses, by a tunnel  $2\frac{1}{2}$  English

m. long, the longest in France, which cost 400,000*l.*, the Montagne de la Nerthe. Emerging from it the blue expanse of the Mediterranean is first seen.

Estaque Stat. Beyond this we cross the viaduct of Le Riaux and Château Follet, and soon after the tunnel of St. Louis, 503 yards long, and cross the valley of Ayglades before reaching Marseilles Station, at St. Charles, on a height 160 ft. above the Mediterranean; a handsome structure, commanding a strikingly grand view. A branch line  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. long is carried down to the port of La Joliette, or New Harbour.

MARSEILLES.—Inns: Grand Hôtel de Marseilles, clean, comfortable, with reading and drawing-rooms; good table-d'hôte;—Grand Hôtel du Louvre et de la Paix, also a fine house, clean and good, on the Cannebière, near the Port;—H. des Catalans, a little way E. of the town, near the Emperor's palace, on a little bay; good bathing; good and clean;—H. de l'Univers;—H. des Colonies.

Marseilles, capital of the Dépt. des Bouches-du-Rhône, is a busy and flourishing city, and the most important seaport of France, having a population of about 200,000 souls; but it has few fine public buildings or sights for strangers. It is, however, a grand city in site and extent, and, next to Paris, no place in France is more improved since 1853, by the creation of new streets, quarters, harbours, and buildings.

From the Porte d'Aix, a Triumphant Arch, not far from the Rly. terminus, erected to commemorate the French campaign in Spain of 1823, a broad avenue traverses the city, leading to the Prado under various names—Rue d'Aix, Cours and Rue de Rome, Cours Belzunce. Near the centre of it another wide street, called Rue de la Cannebière (Kavvaßis, flax), crossing it at right angles, runs down to the Port or Harbour, a natural oblong basin 1000 yards long by 330 broad, extending into the heart of the town, occupying an area of nearly 70 acres, about equal to two of the docks at Liverpool.

1. Hôtel de Ville.
2. " de la Préfecture.
3. " de la Marine.
4. " des Douanes.
5. Museum and Library.
6. Palais de Justice.
7. Bourse.
8. Cabinet d'Histoire Naturelle.
9. Palais Episcopal.
10. Jardin des Plantes.
11. Cathedral, Notre Dame de la Major.
12. Place d'Aix.
13. Place de Rome.
14. Place Castellane.
15. Museum.

The depth of water varies from 18 ft. at its mouth to 24 ft., and it is capable of holding 1000 or 1200 merchant vessels. This was for ages the focus of that extensive commerce which renders Marseilles the first seaport of France and of the Mediterranean. The number of vessels entering and quitting in a year amounts to 18,000, and their tonnage exceeds 2,000,000 tons, about one-fourth of that of Liverpool: 633 vessels, of 53,973 tons, belong to the port. To this harbour Marseilles is indebted for her commercial consequence, which dates nearly 3000 years back, from the days when the Phœceans first set foot on her shore, conveying to the barbarous realms of W. Europe the civilization of the East. The connexion of France with Algiers has given a great impetus to the prosperity of Marseilles, as it engrosses nearly the whole trade with the colony in Africa. It has risen also to considerable importance since 1830 as a steam-packet station.

The new Harbour of La Joliette is constructed a little to the N. of the old. It consists of a breakwater, 1350 yards long, thrown into the sea parallel to the shore, and at a distance of 1312 ft. from it; 2 moles or piers stretching from the shore towards it, at a distance of 590 yards from each other, but leaving openings for the entrance of vessels. This forms an inner basin and 2 outer harbours, and the former is connected by a canal, running behind Fort St. Jean, with the old Port. The inner basin covers an area of 68 acres including the passage into the old Port, with a depth of  $2\frac{1}{2}$  to 5 fathoms. The Joliette is surrounded by broad quays, stately buildings, &c., and a new town is rising rapidly around it. Since 1860, 3 other docks are being formed for steamers—Bassin du Lazaret, d'Arène, and de Napoléon—which will double the harbour space of the port of Marseilles.

On the Quai, close to La Joliette, rises a new Cathedral of grand proportions, in the style of the public buildings of Genoa, Italian Romanesque, the stones in stripes, white, grey, and black.

From the margin of the Old Harbour, lined with quays, the ground rises on all sides, covered with houses, forming an amphitheatre, terminating only with the encircling chain of hills. From this disposition of the ground, the port becomes the sewer of the city, and is offensive from the filth which, flowing into it, is allowed to stagnate in its tideless sea, and in hot weather the stench is most unpleasant. This objection has been in a great measure removed since the surplus water of the Aqueduct of Roquefavour has been made to flow into it. The * Quais are an agreeable walk, presenting as they do an amusing scene of bustle and variety, Greek, Turkish, and Neapolitan costumes. Among its shipping, the picturesque latteen sails of the Mediterranean are very common.

The direction of the old harbour is from E. to W. On its N. side, and within the angle formed by the Rue Cannebière and the Cours, lies the old town of narrow dirty streets, scarce worth entering. Modern improvement however is preparing to drive 3 wide avenues through the midst of this labyrinth, crossing in the centre in a circular Place.

One of these avenues will open on the N. Quai, at the back of the Hôtel de Ville, a heavy building, and overloaded with tasteless ornaments, attributed to Puget, but not by him, his really beautiful design having been rejected. Farther on, near the harbour mouth, is the Consigne, or health office, where everything relating to quarantine is transacted, and whence the permission for vessels to enter the harbour is issued. To this office the captains of vessels come to give an account of themselves (raisonner), and to show their bill of health. The council-room contains a few paintings, chiefly having reference to the plague: by Girard, the Plague at Marseilles, in which Bishop Belzunce is introduced; and another showing the self-devotion of the Chevalier Rose in burying the dead, when even the galley-slaves had refused; by David, St. Roch healing the Sick; a bas-relief, by Puget, of the Plague at Milan; the Cholera at Marseilles by Vernet; the Yellow Fever at Barcelona, 1822. The subjects are all horrible, and the execution not good enough to compensate.

The mouth of the old port is narrow. 105 yds. across, and was once closed by a chain. It is defended by two forts: on the N. by the old castle and tower of St. Jean, built in the 15th centy., in which Philippe Egalité was imprisoned with his youngest son, and whence after a time they escaped; on the S. the Fort St. Nicolas, repaired and extended into a citadel 1860, guards the entrance. It was founded by Louis XIV., who, after capturing the disobedient city, and entering it by a breach in the walls, observed that "he also would have a Bastide at Marseilles;" and forthwith laid the foundation of this fort, of which the first stone bore the inscription—"Ne fidelis Massilia, aliquorum motibus concitata vel audaciorum petulantia, vel unica libertatis cupiditate tandem ruerit, Ludovic. XIV. optatum populi securitate hac arce prodivit." Close beside Fort St. Nicholas a graving dock for repairing vessels, Bassin de Carénage, has been formed, by costly excavations out of the rock, on the site of an ancient cemetery.

Not far from this is St. Victor, the most ancient church of Marseilles, though its crypts and substructures alone are of the 11th centy. The upper part dates from 1200, except the two battlemented towers, which give it the air of a castle, erected 1350, by Pope Urban V., who had been abbot of St. Victor. The entrance under the tower is by a round arch: near it is a curious pointed arch, its mouldings relieved with the dog-tooth ornament. St. Victor was one of the most celebrated abbeys in Christendom, and possessed a host of other abbeys and religious houses dependent on it.

Above St. Victor, to the S. of the town and harbour, rises the bare rocky hill of **Notre Dame de la Garde*, so called from the curious chapel, now enlarged into a capacious Romanesque Church, situated within a small fort on its summit, a spot exposed to all the winds that blow. An image of the Virgin, carved in olive-wood, and of great antiquity, is enclosed within this shrine; it is held in the highest veneration throughout the Mediterranean by the sailors and fishermen and their wives, and the walls and roof are hung with ex-votos, chiefly paintings representing moving accidents by flood and field—all the veriest daubs, but very curious, as illustrating the religious feeling of the people. Besides a vast number of shipwrecks, storms, steamboat explosions, escapes from British vessels of war, there is a whole host of surgical operations, sick-beds, road-side accidents, &c. The cholera panic produced numerous offerings: among them a silver tunny-fish, presented by the Marseillaise fishwives. Many ostrich-eggs and models of ships are suspended from the roof, and one corner is filled with cast-off crutches, the gifts of grateful cripples, now no longer lame, and with ropes' ends by which men have been saved from drowning! The silver statue of the Virgin, 4 ft. high, over the altar, is modern.

The view from the top of the hill, beside the chapel, is perhaps the best that can be had of Marseilles itself, spread over a gradually sloping basin, a city remarkably deficient in spires, towers, or domes. It is surrounded by hills which are covered with vineyards and olive-gardens, and speckled with white country-houses, called Bastides, to the number of 5000 or 6000, belonging to the citizens and shopkeepers. Monte Cristo, well known from Dumas's novel, is conspicuous. It is an arid prospect of dazzling white, interspersed, but unrelieved, by dark streaks of dusky green. From this the eye is delighted to turn and repose upon the deep blue of the Mediterranean, the graceful curves of the coast of the Gulf of Lyons, and the little group of islands. The nearest and smallest, the Isle d'IJ, is crowned by a castle, once a state prison, in which Mirabeau was shut up; farther off are Pomègue and Ratoneau, under which a fleet of vessels in quarantine find shelter. The stripe of blue sea is prolonged into the heart of the city in the harbour, partly hidden from view by its forests of masts.

The Fort de la Garde was built by Francis I., and was never of great importance as a defence: hence the verses, “Gouvernement commode et beau,

Où l'on ne voit, pour toute garde,
Qu'un Suisse, avec sa hallebarde,
Peint sur la porte du château.”

Along the lower slope of the same hill, within the town, stretches a wide promenade planted with trees, called Cours Bonaparte. Those who have not time or patience for the long and somewhat fatiguing ascent of N. D. de la Garde, may content themselves with the fine views from the “Jardin Napoléon,” at the end of Rue Napoléon. Lower down, at the water-side, stand numerous soap manufactories, and the Customhouse, with its piles of warehouses, isolated by a canal cut round it from the port.

On the headland, Tête du Maure, near the lighthouse, commanding the entrance to the port, a Marine Palace has been built for the Emperor. S. of it some strong fortifications have been thrown up.

A splendid Corniche road (Chemin de Ceinture), commanding fine sea views, runs from the back of this palace along the shore, past the Bay des Catalans, at the base of the hill de la Garde, and round great part of the city, to join the Prado, a handsome and very agreeable public walk and drive, a prolongation of the Rue de Rome. This drive of 3 or 4 Eng. m. is strongly recommended.

The Museum, Boulevard du Musée, beyond the Marché aux Capucins, contains the few relics of antiquity which alone remain of the time-honoured city Massilia, founded (B.C. 578) by Phocæan exiles flying from Asia Minor. In spite of its wealth, power, and progress in civilization, the ancient city has left no remains of buildings, nor any traces of its existence beyond inscriptions (some in Greek), sarcophagi, mostly of the 5th, 6th, and 7th centuries, and a few fragments of sculpture. Among the antiques is a draped torso of a female with a child, wearing a peaked cap of Greek workmanship:

a marble sarcophagus (No. 13) brought from Arles, sculptured with a combat between centaurs and lions: several Christian tombs, brought, for the most part, from the crypt of St. Victor; one (No. 27) of marble, designed for a child, contained the relics of St. Victor, and seems to be the most curious; another of Abbot Isarn (d. 1048), whose effigy is covered with his epitaph in Latin verse, allowing only his head, which exhibits the tonsure, and the feet to appear. None are so old as the capture of the city by Julius Cæsar.

The Picture Gallery in the same building contains about 150 very badly-lighted pictures, of which the following seem the best:—St. John carried up on the eagle, inspired to write the Revelations; a portion of the isle of Patmos appearing below: a copy after Raphael. The 3 Maries, as mothers, with St. Joseph, St. Cleophas, St. Simeon, &c., by Perugino; a very pleasing and genuine picture, though faded; very like Raphael's early manner. Rubens (perhaps by Jordaens): a boar-hunt; spirited, but the figures rather huddled together. A Prince of Orange with his family, attributed to Rubens. Lord Strafford, a copy from Vandyke. One or two small paintings by Puget merit notice, as he was a native of Marseilles, and architect and sculptor, as well as painter.

The Exchange, a handsome building with a Corinthian portico, near the Vieux Port, and at the extremity of La Cannebière, was erected 1858–60. The arrangements resemble those of the Paris Bourse. In front, on the Place, is a statue of Puget the sculptor, inscribed with his pretentious speech to the Minister Louvois: “Le marbre tremble sous mes mains.” A fountain surmounted by a bust of Homer, in the Rue d'Aubagne, bears this inscription: “Les Phocéens reconnaissants à Homère, 1803.”!! (See below, History.)

The Lazaret, once famed as the largest and best regulated quarantine establishment in Europe, is removed, and its site now nearly covered with buildings. It owed its foundation to the fearful ravages of the plague at Marseilles in 1720, which destroyed between 40,000 and 50,000 persons, i. e. half the population of the town. Amidst the general despair, selfishness, and depravity which accompanied this dire calamity, many individuals distinguished themselves by their noble self-devotion. One of them has been commemorated by Pope:—

"Why drew Marseilles' good bishop purer breath
When nature sicken'd and each gale was death?"

The name of the good bishop was Belverunce, who offered a rare example of courage and piety by his intrepid intercourse with the sick in the hospitals, where, aided by pious nuns, he constantly ministered to the support and consolation of the plague-stricken inmates. A statue of the good bishop has been set up on the Cours. The 2 échevins of the town, Estelle and Moustier, likewise exposed their lives. The streets soon became choked with dead, and of the galley-slaves, supplied at the rate of 80 a-week to conduct the dead-carts, none survived. The Chevalier Rose with his own hands then helped to bury the dead, when every one else refused the dangerous duty. 3 physicians, also, from Montpellier, repaired to the city of death to aid the sick and dying, when all the native doctors were dead or had fled. The pestilence, which had broken out in the spring, continued its fury till September, but abated after a violent storm, and disappeared in November.

A Breakwater has been thrown between the islands of Pomègue and Ratonneau, connecting them together so as to form a quarantine roadstead, called Port du Frioul (fretum Julii). At this spot Caesar's squadron, under the command of D. Brutus, was stationed during the siege of Marseilles.

One of the chief manufactures here is that of soap. The process is worth seeing, and, as it is made exclusively of vegetable oil, it is not so unsavoury as in England. Shipbuilding is a very important branch of trade. The manufactory of steam-engines, belonging to Mr. Philip Taylor and Sons, is one of the most considerable in France.

The Fish-market displays a number of the finny inhabitants of the Mediterranean unknown in the seas of the N.; among others, the tunny is abundant at certain seasons. The Flower-market also, at the N. end of Rue Cannebière, deserves a visit, as well as the Jardin des Plantes.

The climate of Marseilles for a portion of the year is delightful, but in summer and autumn the heat is at times intense—the streets like an oven, so that it is scarcely possible to move abroad during the daytime, and all rest during the night is liable to be destroyed by the mosquitoes. To this not unfrequently succeeds the Mistral, or cutting dry N.W. wind (see Index). The wind called le Libech (Ital. Libeccio) exercises a terrific force over the Mediterranean.

Consuls reside here from the principal states of Europe and America. The British Consulate is No. 127, Rue Sylvabelle.

Dr. Pirondi fils is a skilful physician, and speaks English.

The English Church Service is performed in an apartment, No. 100 in the Rue Sylvabelle, at 10.30 and 3.30 on Sundays, by a resident clergyman.

The Cafés of Marseilles equal even those of Paris in splendour: the decorations of the Café de France, partly in style of the Alhambra, cost 16,000*l*. The Café Turc is frequented by Levantine merchants.

Baths. The Bains de la Méditerranée, about 1½ m. out of the town, on the S. of the road to Aix, in an agreeable situation, commanding a view of the bay, and receiving the sea-breeze, is a well-conducted establishment. The Sea-Baths, at the extremity of the Prado, are even superior.

With this exception the Environs of Marseilles possess but slight attractions—nothing but dust, scorched rocks, and bare high walls, amidst which the eye in vain seeks for some verdure to rest on. The Bastides already mentioned are little country boxes, which entirely dot the slopes around the town, prolonging it apparently to the tops of the surrounding hills. Some of them are handsome, and surrounded by gardens, but the greater part stand in mere bare enclosures, between 4 walls, destitute of shade and water, their only recommendation being that they are out of town. Every merchant, citizen, or shopkeeper must have one, and their number is said to exceed 6000. The stupendous Canal which supplies Marseilles with water from the Durance is gradually altering the aspect of the country around the town, by the irrigation which it furnishes.

Travellers should visit the aqueduct of Roquefavour, which may be easily reached in 2 hours by taking the Aix branch of the Avignon Rly. from Rognac Stat. (Rtes. 127 and 129).

A common excursion is a "promenade sur eau," from the harbour's mouth to the islands of If, &c. Courty's Restaurant, "La Mulette de Portici," at the Prado, on the beach, 2 m. out of Marseilles, affords a good specimen of la Cuisine Provençale: try a "Bouillabaisse," a dish of dressed fish.

The best shops are in the Rues Canebière, St. Ferréol, Beauvau, and Paradis, and the Post Office is in a street running out of the last, Rue Jeune Anacharsis.

Railways—Terminus at St. Charles, not far from the Porte d'Aix:—to Lyons (Rte. 127);—to Aix, Arles, Nîmes, Montpellier, Narbonne, Toulouse, and Bordeaux (Rtes. 116-130);—to Toulon, Hyères, Cannes, and Nice. Paris is reached in 20 hrs. (express).

Steamers.

To the ports of Italy and Malta nearly every second day, by the Messageries Impériales Company (most to be depended on for punctuality and good order), or the Neapolitan Company's steamers. Messageries Impériales steamers for Italy, direct to Civita Vecchia and Naples, in 30 hrs., on Monday; on Thursday, for Genoa, Leghorn, Civita Vecchia, Naples, Messina, and Malta. The Neapolitan steamers, fast and good, for Civita Vecchia and Naples every Saturday.

Besides the above there are frequently steamers belonging to private companies sailing for the ports of Italy; but they are very inferior, dirty, slow, and uncomfortable.

Direct line to Constantinople, by the Messageries Impériales steamers, stopping only at Malta and the Pireus. A line in correspondence leaves the Pireus for Salonica and Nauplia, and others from Constantinople for Varna and Kamiesch.

Line to Algiers on Tuesday and Saturday, reaching Algiers in 50 hrs., arriving at Marseilles on Monday and Thursday.

Line to Oran, via Valentia (in Spain), on Wednesday, starting from the Joliette, where passengers walk on board; they reach Valentia next morning, and reach Oran in 70 hrs.

Line to Tunis, by Stora and Bone, on Wednesday, reaching Stora in 60 hrs., Bone in 3 days, and Tunis in 5 days.*

Line to Alexandria, by Messina, and to Syria, the Archipelago, &c., 9th, 19th, and 29th of every month.

Coast of Spain, Barcelona, Valencia, Alicante, Carthage, Malaga, Gibraltar, and Cadiz: steamers several times a month, on the 1st, 8th, 15th, and 23rd. The steamers calling at Valencia, coupled with the railway from the latter, offer one of the easiest modes of reaching Madrid.

To Cete twice a week, chiefly for merchandize; to La Ciotat, Toulon, Cannes, Antibes, and Nice; to Ajaccio and Bastia in Corsica 3 times a week; the latter, continuing to Leghorn, afford the cheapest means of reaching Central Italy.

N.B. The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Company's fast and clean vessels leave Marseilles for Malta and Alexandria, with the overland Indian mail, on the 12th and 28th of each month, and reach Malta in about 55 hrs.

The fares by the steamers between Marseilles and the coast of Italy are high, considering the distance run and the time employed. The treatment on board is greatly superior as to cuisine to that met with in boats sailing from England. This is included in the price of the passage. Return-tickets, with a reduction of 20 per cent., and available for 4 months, are issued by all the companies; and a reduction of 20 per cent. to families of 3 persons and upwards on the single, and of 30 per cent. on the double voyage.

* There is also a line of steamers to Tunis from Genoa by Cagliari.—See Handbook of North Italy.

Passports.—The several companies undertake to have the necessary visas obtained; for this purpose it will be necessary to deposit this document at their office on securing berths. British subjects going to the Italian ports will require the visas of their own Consul, and of those of Italy (except to Foreign Office passports) and Rome. A charge of 3½ fr. is made for passengers proceeding to the Italian ports.

History. Classical tradition assigns the foundation of Massilia to a colony of Phœceans, who left their native country, Asia Minor, with their wives and children, rather than submit to Cyrus, and sought for liberty on the then barbarous shores of Gaul. Their emigration (B.C. 5) is described by Herodotus, and alluded to by Horace:—

“Phœcorum

Velut profugit execrata civitas,
Agros atque lares patrios, habitandaque rura
Apris reliquit et rapacibus lupis:
Ire pedes quocunque ferent, quocunque per undas
Notus vocabit, aut protervus Africanus.”

Favourably received by the inhabitants of the country, the settlement increased and prospered; became great in commerce and navigation, eminent in the arts and literature; was sought and esteemed by Rome as an ally, until, wishing to remain neutral in the wars between Cæsar and Pompey, and finally siding with the latter, she was besieged, taken, and reduced to great distress by his successful antagonist, who records that he preserved it “magis pro nomine et vetustate quam pro meritis in se.”—Cæsar. Lucan has described the siege, but evidently without local knowledge. Cicero says, in his Oration for Flaccus, that Greece alone could compete with Marseilles as a seat of learning; Tacitus calls her “magistram studiorum.” Her importance continued during the middle ages; she formed a sort of independent state, electing her own magistrates, and forming alliances with other states. She furnished alone all the galleys required by St. Louis to transport his army on the Crusade. The famous commercial code Le Consulat de la Mer is supposed to have been drawn up here. At length, conquered by Charles d'Anjou, Comte de Provence, she yielded to the rising superiority on the sea of Pisa, Genoa, and Venice.

Marseilles held out against Henri IV. long after Paris had submitted; when at length he was informed of its surrender, he exclaimed, “C'est maintenant que je suis Roi.” Yet was its turbulent spirit of independence not subdued, since, in consequence of an outbreak against Louis XIV., that monarch entered the city by a breach in its wall (see above).

At the Revolution, which inflamed to madness the fiery spirits of the people of the south, among whom moderation and restraint are unknown or little practised, Marseilles furnished, from the dregs of its own population and the outcasts of other lands, the bands of assassins who perpetrated the greater portion of the September massacres in Paris. The Reign of Terror at Marseilles itself, under the rule of the infamous Fréron and Barras, produced more than its usual proportion of atrocities and follies. The usual wholesale murders were committed, amounting to 400 persons, attended by confiscation of their property.

But not satisfied with this, it was proposed by one of the Représentants du Peuple to fill up its harbour. The name of Marseilles was absolutely abolished by a decree, which enacted that it should pass under the denomination of “la Commune sans Nom!” Even the death of Robespierre, which, for the most part, put an end to the Reign of Terror in other places, was here and elsewhere in the south the signal for fresh assassinations. Vengeance against those who had been the instruments of the revolutionary massacres was now the cry; the Fort St. Jean, in which about 200 of them had been confined, was broken open, and they were all murdered by an irritated mob of insurgents, employing cannon loaded with grape to finish their victims in their cells.

Marseilles is the birthplace of Mascaron the preacher, of Bishop Balzunce, of Puget, the architect who built the old British Museum, and of M. Thiers, ex-premier and historian, b. 1797, son of a working locksmith,—others say of a poor dock-labourer.

ROUTE 128.

MARSEILLES TO NICE, BY TOULON, HYÈRES, AND CANNES—RAILWAY.

	kil.
S. Marcel . . . . .	9
La Penne . . . . .	13
Aubagne . . . . .	17
La Ciotat . . . . .	37
Sandol . . . . .
La Seyne . . . . .	62
Toulon . . . . .	67
Sollès-Pont . . . . .	84
Cuers . . . . .	90
Le Puget . . . . .	98
Pignans . . . . .	105
Le Luc . . . . .	121
Les Arcs . . . . .	136
Le Muy . . . . .	144
Roquebrune . . . . .	150
Fréjus . . . . .	159
S. Raphael . . . . .	162
Agay . . . . .
Cannes . . . . .	184
Jouan . . . . .
Antibes . . . . .	205
Vence-Cagnes . . . . .	214
Nice . . . . .	226

226 kilom. = 140 Eng. m.

Railway opened 1859; Toulon to Nice in 1863.

[France.]

3 trains daily in 7 to 9 hrs. Terminus same as Lyons Rail, near St. Charles. The train passes rt. the Jardin Zoologique, on emerging from a short tunnel.

The line passes through a district of great beauty and interest, especially between Toulon and Nice, the true garden of Provence.

Amidst cultivated gardens and numerous Bastides, alternating with deep cuttings in the limestone, the train proceeds, leaving on l. the town of 17 Aubagne (Stat.) Near this a little verdure is visible in the pretty vale of Gemenos. The Abbé Barthélemy, author of the 'Voyages du Jeune Anacharsis,' was born at Aubagne.

The caper, a pretty flowering plant, is cultivated near Cujes, a miserable-looking town (3000 Inhab.), but the country around most productive and well cultivated.

The old road kept inland, and about 3 m. farther penetrated the mountains, through a deep chasm or defile of wild and savage features, called the Pass of Ollioules. Bare, bleached, and nearly precipitous rocks of limestone, surmounted by a ruined Castle, which once guarded the passage, hemmed in on either side, for a distance of nearly 3 m., a scene of desolation, nakedness, and solitude.

The Railway keeps nearer to the coast by La Ciotat and La Seyne Stats., and penetrates these hills by means of 2 long tunnels. On emerging from them, the landscape is more cheerful; the orange-tree is first seen; the pomegranate grows in the hedges; the olive-trees, the cactus, and palm occur at intervals in the favoured region, sheltered from the N. by the hills extending hence to the Var.

Toulon Stat. is at the upper part of the town, where it extends to the base of the Mount Pharon, surrounded by the new fortifications.

67 Toulon. (Inns: Croix d'Or, in the town, clean and comfortable, w.-c.'s, good cuisine;—H. Victoria, opposite the Stat., comfortable and moderate;—H. de l'Amirauté, (? shut up);—Croix de Malte;—H. de France.)

Omnibus 25 c., and 25 c. for every large package.

Toulon is the Plymouth of France, the seat of her naval power in the Mediterranean, the greatest naval arsenal in that sea, and second only to that of Brest on the Atlantic. It is a strongly fortified town, situated at the bottom of a deep double bay, which forms the roads. Behind it runs an amphitheatre of hills rising on the N. into the heights of Mount Pharon, too bare to be picturesque, which stretch their arms as it were round the bay, so as nearly to landlock it, rendering it a safe anchorage, except from the S. and E., where it is somewhat unprotected. 6 forts on the land side defend the town, while the mouth of the harbour and hills commanding it are studded with forts and redoubts.

The Port is divided into the old and new, separated from the roadstead by moles, hollow and bomb-proof, begun in the reign of Henri IV., formed externally into batteries on a level with the water's edge,—very formidable against ships. The Port du Commerce, or Darse Vieille, on the E., is appropriated to merchant-vessels, and is bordered by a quay. The Darse Neuve, on the W., is surrounded by the dockyard, slips, the arsenal, the store-houses for provisions, &c., equipments, cannon foundry, artillery, &c.

Toulon has greatly extended since 1860—to the N. towards the Rly., round which a new and elegant quarter is rapidly rising. The old town, between the latter and the sea, consists of a series of narrow streets descending towards the sea, which is bordered by a wide Quay, the busiest portion of the city. The Pop. amounts to upwards of 50,000 persons, exclusive of the garrison, and a large body of seamen, who are lodged in pontoons in the Port.

The most remarkable edifice of the town is the Hôtel de Ville, facing the sea, ornamented with 2 colossal Terms, by Puget, supporting a balcony; close by, in the street behind it, is a house built after the designs of the same artist.

The Office of the British Vice-Consul is in the same street. The best shops and cafés are on the Quay and in the Rue des Chaudronniers. The great lines of communication between the old and the new towns are the Rue Lafayette, planted with double rows of plantain-trees, forming the fruit and vegetable markets, and the Rue des Chaudronniers, parallel to it, but farther W.

The Darse Vieille contains on one side, the E., a series of pontoons, or laid-up sailing line-of-battle ships, in which are housed a reserve of several thousand sailors. On the wall separating them from the sound is the Masting Machine. On the E. side are moored several screw line-of-battle ships ready for commission. From here is the seaway into the Arsenal, and near it the Health Office.

The Dockyard (Port Militaire), or Arsenal, covers a space of 240 acres, more than twice the area of Portsmouth. The Basins finished or forming have an area of more than 80 acres of deep water, fit throughout for the largest ships fully equipped. There are several building-slips (cales), and 8 docks; in the smithery there are 100 forge fires. The store of oak timber is very large. The rope-house (corderie) is nearly 1200 ft. long, of 3 vaulted aisles of masonry, fire-proof, except the floor. In the centre of the yard is an opening into the Petite Rade, and a line-of-battle ship, fully armed and stored, may sail at once from the basin out to sea. Immediately after crossing this opening on the rt. is Le Baigne, a large airy building. The number of convicts (forçats) here is about 4000, of whom 1500 may be thieves, 900 murderers, 130 incendiaries, 175 forgers, 450 guilty of many crimes, sent from the tribunals at the rate of 100 a month. They are rigidly superintended, chained each night to their beds, and there are loopholes for guns in the walls at the extremity of the dormitory, which would sweep it from end to end in the event of a mutiny. Convicts are now kept at no other French dockyard. The number of free workmen is about 4500.

The Dockyard is now being greatly extended towards the W., and will soon occupy the whole of the N. side of the Bay.

Strangers are allowed to visit the Dockyard by a permission liberally granted on application at the Admiral Superintendent's, or Major-General's, near the gate, in the Place de la Prefecture.

The building-yards are situated on the E. side of the Sound, in the suburb of Mourillon, where five slips for constructing line-of-battle ships have been erected, all permanently covered in.

One of the most interesting sights for the traveller will be the Roadstead or Outer Harbour, which can be easily visited by means of boats, plenty of which will be found at the Quay opposite the Rue des Chaudronniers, the fares being 2 frs. an hr. The boatmen are generally well informed, and good guides.

The Musée de la Marine contains a large collection of models of inventions, ship-building, &c. On the Gun Wharf, fronting the Salle d'Armes (Small Arms Repository), may be seen many hundred rifled guns.

2 first-rate Docks have been constructed at the S. angle of the Basin. They are not excavations from the land, but formed by quays carried into the port. A large frame of wood (caisse) was sunk with ballast at the spot, and of the size of the dock, and the masonry was built in around it.

A new or supplemental dockyard, chiefly for building, has been formed at Mourillon, in the S. of the town, between it and Fort la Malgue, E. of the Petite Rade. Here are 5 large slips; and hither are transferred the timber, stores, saw-mills, building slips, foundries, &c. At the new Arsenal, Castigneau, are 3 docks of the largest size; also workshops for the construction and repair of steam machines on the largest scale. Here may be seen the Frigates in armour (blindées); floating batteries and gunboats plated with iron.

The dockyard and fleet of Toulon were destroyed by a British force under Sir Sidney Smith, detached from the fleet of Lord Hood, in November, 1793, previously to the evacuation of the town by the British.

It was a work of danger, as the republicans, having already gained possession of the surrounding forts and heights, poured in a merciless hail of shot and shells; and the work was but imperfectly performed, that is to say, the great magazine and several vessels on the stocks escaped. 27 vessels were destroyed, being ignited in the harbour by a fire-ship, 2 of them blowing up: 15 ships were brought away. It must be remembered that the English gained possession of Toulon not by force of arms, but by convention with the royalist portion of its inhabitants, on condition of their being protected from the cruel vengeance of the republicans. But the means at the disposal of Admiral Hood, a fleet of 21 ships, aided by a Spanish squadron of 17, were totally inadequate to effect this; 5000 British troops, the amount of his land force, were far too few to garrison so vast an extent of works, and little good was done by our 8000 Neapolitan and Spanish allies. Although the surrounding forts were manned and put into a state of defence as far as possible, the important pass of Ollicoules, commanding the only approach to Toulon from the W., was left unguarded, and the republican forces, reeking from the massacres of Lyons and Marseilles, marched in, and speedily invested the town to the number of 50,000, breathing vengeance against the inhabitants of Toulon for the defection of a place so important. When at length, at the end of 3 months, the harbour became no longer tenable, and the British fleet was obliged to weigh anchor, nearly 15,000 of the inhabitants were embarked on board the British fleet, by the light of the burning ships and dockyards, amidst the cries and groans of the multitude that remained behind, praying for the means of escape from the hands of the merciless republicans. Nor were their worst anticipations unfounded; more than 6000 miserable victims were sacrificed to the vengeance of the agents of the Committee of Public Safety, in spite of the remonstrances of Dugommier, the French general, and his lieutenant Buonaparte.

With such blind rage did the besieging soldiery rush into the town, that they murdered, without question, 200 Jacobins who had gone forth to meet them. The horrors of the fusillades and the butcheries of the guillotine were then exercised against the inhabitants with a blind rage which did not wait to distinguish those who had opposed from those who had favoured the English. Fréron and the other members of the Committee of Public Safety, including the younger Robespierre, presided in person over the fusillades (thank God, the word has no equivalent in English). They sent orders for 1200 masons to raze the town of Toulon, but their commands were only partly carried into execution, and they decreed that its name should be abolished, and that it should in future be known only as Port de la Montagne.

The Roadstead and Harbour is the most picturesque and interesting feature about Toulon, and the views of it from the neighbouring heights are very pleasing. A small steamer plies across to the village of La Seyne. The inner road is divided from the outer by 2 capes or headlands; that on the E. is defended at its point by an advanced fort, called Grosse Tour; and on its neck or root, between the little and great "Rade," stands the strong Fort la Malgue, surrounded by ramparts 30 ft. high, capable of holding 800 men, and defended by 200 pieces of cannon. Opposite to this, from the W. side of the bay, stretches forth a two-horned hilly promontory, the two points of which are occupied by the strong forts of Eguillette and Ballaquier, at the water's edge, while the commanding heights, de Caire, above them are crowned by the Fort Napoleon, which replaces the field-works of 1793, styled le Petit Gibraltar, and which is the key of the whole defences. Eguillette was regarded as the key of the British position in 1793, but was occupied by a garrison of which unfortunately only a small part were British, the rest Spaniards and Neapolitans. After keeping possession of it between 3 and 4 months, in spite of the besieging French force from without, on the 16th of December a range of batteries, which had been formed secretly by the French and concealed behind the olive-gardens, suddenly opened their fire upon le Petit Gibraltar and the Fort Eguillette from the heights behind, throwing, in the course of 36 hours, 8000 shot and shells. Early the next morning, the French, led by Dugommier, their commander-in-chief, advanced to the attack, but were so warmly received, that at first there seemed no hope of success, until the brave Muiron, followed by his men, entering by an embrasure on the side of the line intrusted to the Spaniards, overpowered them, and cut to pieces the British detachment of 300 men.

The planner of this attack, the constructor of the concealed batteries was a young officer of artillery, aged 23, named Buonaparte, who for the first time received a command and enjoyed an opportunity of displaying his vast military genius on the heights above Toulon. On arriving 2 or 3 months previously to take the subordinate command, he found that the incapables who had preceded him had raised their batteries at a distance of 2 gun-shots from Toulon, and were directing vain efforts against the place itself. His quick eye at once perceived the defect, and singled out the points where an impression was to be made. In 5 or 6 weeks, under his directions, batteries were constructed, mounting 200 pieces of cannon, on the heights of Brégailhon, Evesca, and Lambert, commanding the forts held by the British. While awaiting the time when all should be ready to make his great effort, the Representatives of the People, discovering so many guns lying idle, would have caused an immediate cannonade, and would in their ignorance thus have spoiled all. Then it was that the young officer had the boldness to reply to one of them, Barras, "Tenez-vous à votre métier de Représentant, et laissez-moi faire le mien d'artilleur. Cette batterie restera là, et je répons du succès sur ma tête." He promised that, in 2 days after gaining the fort, Toulon would fall, nor was he wrong: the morning after the capture of Petit Gibraltar, Eguillette, and Fort Pharon (an important work on the heights to the N. of the town), whose guns together swept the roadstead from end to end, the British and Spanish fleets had weighed anchor, and were standing out to sea.

A previous attempt was made upon Toulon, in 1707, by the Austrian and Sardinian army, under Prince Eugene and the Duke of Savoy, aided by an English and Dutch fleet, under Sir Cloudesley Shovel; but after an ineffectual bombardment of the town, they found it so stoutly defended that they were compelled to retire.

The Outer Roadstead (Grande Rade) is formed by a hilly peninsula stretching from W. to E., terminating in Cap Sepet, corresponding with Cap Brun on the opposite side of the bay.

A charming excursion may be made in a boat to the Naval Hospital at St. Mandrier, on the S. side of the roadstead, a splendid building with 2000 beds, excellently managed. For travellers, however, the chief attraction is the beauty of the spot and of the Garden attached to it, where the fig, aloe, cactus, palm, and banana flourish in the open air. Near it is the Lazaret.

The view from the hill to the S.E. of Toulon, on which stands Fort la Malgue, is one of the finest in the S. of France.

Diligences from Toulon to Hyères at 7 and 11 a.m., and at 3 and 6 p.m., in 1½ hrs.

Toulon to Nice.

The first portion of the line, as far as Roquebrune, runs more inland, between the range of highlands which border the Mediterranean between Cape Camaret and S. Tropez, and the northern one. The depression between the two, the real Garden of Provence, is rich, cultivated in olives, vines, and corn: the greater portion, being situated on the marls and limestones of the New Red sandstone formation, has a very luxuriant soil, bordered on each side by a double picturesque range; these are clothed to their base with olives, whilst above rise thick woods of the Pinus Maritima, the bright green of which forms so fine a feature in the landscape, and contrasts, from their colour, with the dull grey of the olive-trees.

Railway.—Toulon to Cannes, 127 kil. = 79 Eng. m., opened 1862-63; 3 trains daily, in 3 hrs. 40 min. and 4 hrs. The Rly. cuts through the fortified wall of Toulon, and passes 2 forts on the l. upon the heights.

25 min. La Garde Stat. Castle in ruins on l.

[Hyères Stat. is 5½ m. distant from the town of Hyères, which is not seen, but a branch line will conduct thither. Meanwhile omnibuses meet every train.

78 Hyères (Inns: H. de l'Orient, in a fine and sheltered position;—H. des Iles d'Or, perhaps the best, a vast edifice and well served; commands fine views, has baths;—H. de l'Europe;—H. des Ambassadeurs), a town of 4591 Inhab., on the S. slope of a hill crowned by ruins, sheltered from all winds except the mistral by the chain of Les Maures, so that it enjoys a temperature as mild as that of Nice. It faces the Mediterranean, but is separated from it by an intervening space 3 m. broad, beyond which it enjoys a view of the sea.

The mildness of its climate causes Hyères to be chosen as a winter residence for invalids, and renders it perhaps one of the best resorts, during that season, in Europe, but it is not so satisfactory during the summer months. The best lodgings are in Boulevard d'Orient and Place des Palmiers, but they are let only for the season, from Nov. to May. Visitors staying only a few weeks must put up at the hotels.

Physician, Dr. Chassinat. Cabinet de Lecture in Place des Palmiers. Ass's and goat's milk for invalids.

For the passing traveller there is little attraction. The chief sight is the Place des Palmiers, so called from the 6 or 7 specimens of palms growing in the open air. The orange-groves are a novelty to strangers from the N., but not an agreeable feature in the landscape, the trees being shut up in walled gardens. The palm-tree produces fruit, though it does not fully ripen in this latitude. In the garden of M. Denis are many varieties of palm and a camphor tree, aloe, cactus, Indian fig, &c. The old or upper town, composed of narrow streets, steep and dirty, retains a fragment of its old Castle, and part of the line of the former fortifications still climbing up the steep. Many neat villas for visitors have been built outside the wall on the face of the hill. The principal Ch., S. Louis, on the Place Royal, restored 1840, has a handsome Romanesque façade.

The English Service is performed twice every Sunday in the Protestant Chapel.

Hyères is the birthplace of Massillon the preacher, to whom a marble pillar and bust have been raised in the Place Royale.

The low ground is richly cultivated: olives, vines, figs, mulberries abound; the pomegranate, pistachio, caper, myrtle, jessamine flourish; cyresses abound and form a striking feature in the landscape; the hills are rocky, with underwood mixed with pines and cork-trees. Many rare butterflies are found on the arbutus and cypress.

On the shore, about 3 m. to the E., are large saltworks, and off the coast is the group of islands called Iles d'Hyères or Iles d'Or—Porquerolles, with its fine roadstead, château, and lazzaret; Portcroo; and Levant.

In 1843 excavations led to the discovery of the remains of a Gallo-Roman town, Pomponiana, 3 m. from Hyères—consisting of foundations, vaults, a castellum, baths, and a harbour, now bedded in mud—on the shore near the Presqu'île de Gien.

Diligence daily in 7 hours to St. Tropez (37 m.). (Inn: H. du Commerce; no good inn.) In its first aspect St. Tropez is a little like Cadiz on a small scale, its white houses rising out of the blue sea.]

The railroad to Nice passes through 84 Solies-Pont Stat. Cross the Gapeau river, fine olive-gardens.

90 Cuers Stat., walled town and castle on l. Plain covered with olives and vines.

98 Le Puget Stat. The forest near this caught fire, Aug. 1863, and was consumed for a distance of 12 m.

Carnoule Stat. Summit level of the line 800 ft. above the sea.

Pignans Stat. Extensive woods of cork-trees. A fertile plain, backed by the wooded hills of Les Maures. Deep cuttings in the red marl.

121 At Le Luc Stat. (Inn: Poste, indifferent), a town of 3600 Inhab., 1½ m. from the stat., this road reaches the rly. from Marseilles to Nice, and is described in Rte. 128.

130 Vidauban Stat. The Argens is crossed on a viaduct of 3 arches.

136 Les Arcs Junct. Stat., village of 2800 Inhab.; trades in cork.

[Branch Rly. to Draguignan (Inns: H. de France, fair; Poste), chef-lieu du Dépt. du Var, on the Artuby. Pop. 7000. It has a botanic garden, soapworks, and oil-mills.]

Le Muy Stat. (Inn: Poste). In 1536 the Emp. Charles V., on his retreat from his disastrous expedition to Provence, was fired at from a tower (visible from the rly. on l.), which had been occupied by a band of Provençals, lying in wait for the Emperor. He owed his escape mainly to his sombre attire, and the superior splendour of the armour of one of his attendants, no other than the Spanish poet Garcilasso de la Vega, who thus fell victim to the ambushade prepared for his master.

Roquebrune Stat., so called from an advancing rock or promontory jutting from the chain of Les Maures.

On approaching Fréjus the remains of a small Roman amphitheatre are passed on the l. of the line close to the town.

Fréjus Stat. (Inns, not good: H. du Midi, best; Napoleon stayed 3 days at the Poste). This town, which bears the name and occupies the site of the Roman Forum Julii, founded by Augustus, is a dirty and insignificant place, numbering barely 3000 Inhab., yet its Roman remains have considerable interest. N. of the town, on the road to Italy, is the Porte de César, the base of a Gateway of large stones.

The direction of the old Roman town walls may also be traced by existing fragments of them. The ancient harbour, in which Augustus posted the fleet of 300 galleys captured at Actium from Antony, is now sanded up by the deposits of the Argens (Argentius). The mole and a stone obelisk (? Pharos), which commanded the entrance to the old port, now rise out of the midst of a garden. Fréjus is now a mile from the sea.

N. of the Rly. and of the town is a Roman arch, formed of rubble-work alternating with layers of tiles, called Porte Dorée. The Cathedral of St. Etienne is neither large nor handsome, but may interest the antiquary as a Romanesque edifice of the 11th or 12th centy. Within it is a Baptistery, resting on 8 antique columns of grey granite with marble capitals.

The most considerable and interesting Roman remains here are those of an **Aqueduct*. It has been traced for more than 24 m. up the valley of the Siagnolle, whose clear water it conveyed to the town. Many of the arches and piers remain perfect close to the town. It is a picturesque subject for the pencil.

The train, on quitting Fréjus Stat., passes over the Roman harbour. 1. are seen the Porte Dorée, and the so-called Pharos. Soon after the sea-shore is reached at St. Raphael Stat.—lovely views.

Napoleon landed at this small port 1799, on his return from Egypt, and embarked hence, 1814, for Elba. This is the birthplace of the Abbé Sièyes, and is said to be that of Julius Agricola, father-in-law of Tacitus.

Between Fréjus and Nice the rly. is carried along the shore of the Mediterranean, skirting the rocky base of the Estrel chain of hills, crossing the ravines on viaducts, piercing the promontories in tunnels, and supported in the face of precipices upon shelves cut out of the rock. The promontory dividing the Bays of Fréjus and Napoléon, and ending in Cap Roux, is traversed by tunnels cut in the red sandstone and porphyry.

This part of the route is extremely picturesque, a real Corniche in miniature, passing by Agay, a pretty cove.

Though the peaks of the Esterels are bare, near their bases the aloe, cactus, and date-palm flourish in the open air; and the umbrella pine, as in Italy, raises its graceful head close to the sea-shore. This is the true "garden of Provence." The Esterelle mountains are partly of porphyry, and are highly picturesque in their forms, as is invariably the case where that rock occurs. The red porphyry was worked by the Romans, and used by them for the buildings of Fréjus; the ancient quarry has been discovered about 1½ m. from the shore.

After leaving Cape Roux, the rly. crosses a sandy plain before reaching the stat.; several villas are passed on the l., among them those of Lord Brougham and Mr. Woolfield.

CANNES STAT., N. of the town. Inns: H. Bellevue, in the English quarter, W. side of town;—New Hotel of the Cannes Company, to be finished 1865;—H. des Etrangers, in the town, and close to Rly. stat.; small, clean, and comfortable;—H. Gonnet, on the E. side of Cannes, on the shore, a first-class house (drainage bad);—la Poste, in the town; a new hotel, near H. Gonnet;—H. et Pension de l'Europe, 10 min. walk from the stat., comfortable, and more reasonable than the great hotels.

Pensions.—Suisse (kept by Mad. Fétis), Meuron.

Lodging-houses, Maison Pinchinat; Pension Anglaise; H. d'Angleterre.

There are many furnished Villas to let entire or in apartments. Everything is let by the season (i. e. from October to May), but the hirer has always the option of under-letting reserved to him.

Climate.—The E. side of the town is more protected from the high winds which occur here than the W.; is more sheltered also from extreme heat.

Post-office, Route d'Italie, close to Rly. Stat.

Cannes, down to 1831 a poor fishing village, has suddenly risen to be a flourishing popular watering-place, with a Pop. of more than 8000. It owes its prosperity to Lord Brougham, who, being prevented crossing the Italian frontier to Nice, by the Sardinian police, on account of the cholera, took up his residence here, and quickly became alive to the beauties of the spot, and its vegetation, and the serenity of its climate. The old town, on the shore, on the margin of a small harbour, and on the slope of the hill, is a foul and uninteresting place in all respects, save its lovely views. The only accessible street is that through which runs the high road from Fréjus to Antibes, in which are some of the best hotels and lodgings. But from either side of the old town, along the shore, and up the hills above, have spread of late years a swarm of houses and villas, each with a small garden, extending over a length of 4 or 5 miles, and plots of ground are bought at very high prices. The W. end of Cannes is considered the English quarter. Here are the villas of Lord Brougham and Mr. Woolfield; the English ch., built on ground given by him; the Châteaux St. George, Ste. Ursula, and La Bocca. Many of these, however, have been purchased by Frenchmen; and Cannes is fast becoming a winter resort of the Parisians, among them the distinguished authors Victor Cousin, Prosper Mérimée, Jean Renaud.

The sea-bathing is very agreeable, and may be continued till near Christmas, and recommenced in April in fine seasons; but the regular bathing season is not supposed to begin till May or June, when visitors flock to it from Grasse, Digne, Aix, and other inland neighbourhoods. As there is little or no tide in this sea, horse-machines are not required, but little wooden huts are erected on the sands to serve as dressing-rooms for the bathers. The scattered way of building, and the difficulty of access to many of the houses, are drawbacks to much evening visiting. Carriages for hire are few and dear.

A Casino, a Gothic building, in an odd style, has been opened, 1864, for social purposes, with reading, ball, and music-rooms. The French amalgamate little with our countrymen.

English Church, mentioned above; Chaplain, Rev. E. N. Rolfe. A second ch. is projected. There is also a French Protestant Ch.

English Physicians, Dr. Whitely, Dr. Battershy.

Bankers, MM. Aune, Barbe, et Comp.

Walks and Excursions.—The country around abounds in beauties; drawn both from its scenery, its views over the coast, the Mediterranean, and the islands off the coast, and its exquisite vegetation. It is no exaggeration to call it a natural garden. Towards the end of February the wild flowers, which are the glory of this neighbourhood, begin to appear in numbers too great to be told; scenting the air, and delighting the eye.

La Croix des Gardes, a rocky height, about 500 ft. above the sea, N.W. of Cannes, a walk of  $\frac{3}{4}$  hr., crossing the bridge over the ravine of the Rion, commands a view extending in clear weather to the mountains of Corsica.

Pleasant sites for picnics are Castellaraze, Mougins, Auribeau, l'Estérel, on the old post-road.

Grasse (Rte. 136) is about 10 m. off, celebrated for its trade in scents and flower distilleries.

Cannes, 2 m. from the Cannes rly. stat., a pleasant retreat for invalids, who will find its climate milder than Cannes. At the Villa Sardou, Rachel the actress ended her days.

A boating excursion to the lovely islands of Les Lérins, which lock in the harbour, is among the most popular and usual of all. Boats may be hired to go and return for 10 or 12 frs.

[The Ile Ste. Marguerite, covered with wood, one of the group of 2 isles called Lérins, in whose citadel, now a pentagon fort, once a state prison, above the sea, the Man in the Iron Mask long lingered. The dungeon in which he was confined (1686 to 1698) is still pointed out; its walls are 12 ft. thick, and its solitary window is guarded by treble iron bars. The only approach to it was through the governor's rooms. In the midst of a small garden is a curious square building, with a door in each face. On

NICE.

1. Cathedral and Evêché.
2. Croix de Marine.
3. French Protestant Church.
4. English Cemetery.
5. Hôtel de Ville.
6. Tribunal.
7. French Theatre.
8. Theatre.

9. Post.
10. Lycée.
11. Library.
12. Statue of Charles Felix.

Hotels:—

- A. de France.
- B. de l'Univers.

- C. des Etrangers.
- D. Chauvain.
- E. de la Méditerranée.
- F. Victoria.
- G. d'Angleterre.
- H. Royal.
- I. Salon de Lecture Visconti.

the Ile St. Honorat are remains of a fortified convent, a church, and a baptistery, reduced to ruin, and all deserving the attention of the antiquary. Over the E. door of the ch. is an early Christian bas-relief in white marble. The most interesting object is the Castle Convent, in which the monks found refuge when Saracens or other pirates landed. It consists of a donjon, surrounded by a loop-holed wall, and a chapel. It abounds in secret stairs, dungeons, &c.]

On the top of the hill washed by the sea above Cannes is the Ch. of Notre Dame d'Espérance, much revered by sailors.

Flower culture.—Jonquils, violets, roses, lemon-scented geraniums, and other flowers, are grown in great quantities for making scents. The orange also is cultivated, chiefly for the sake of its blossom. The gathering of it commences about the end of April. The fruit does not come to perfection, and is of little value.

Rents of houses and lodgings are high, and are increasing yearly. Food is dear, and the markets inadequately supplied. Game, red-legged partridges, and woodcocks occur. Fish is dear and generally inferior: John Dory (poisson St. Pierre), red mullet, a kind of gurnet, and the langouste, or sea crawfish, are the exceptions, and are much esteemed.

On leaving Cannes the rly. runs near the shore, along the bay of Jouan.

Napoleon landed  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. E. of Cannes from Elba, in March, 1815, with an army 1100 strong, including 500 grenadiers of his former guard, 200 dragoons, and 100 lancers without horses, and 4 cannons, which he left here. He bivouacked in a neighbouring olive-garden, and at midnight took the road to Grasse.

The railroad merely skirts the walls, but does not enter the town of 11 Antibes Stat. (Inn: Poste, not good), a flourishing little seaport (5976 Inhab.), finely situated on a promontory jutting out into the sea, and looking beautiful at a distance, and commanding views of the Maritime Alps. Close to the Ch. are 2 towers of Roman masonry, almost the only relics of Antipolis; some Latin inscriptions are built into its walls. A curved pier thrown out from the shore connects it with some islets in the bay: it was the work of Vauban.

The conical hill of La Garoupe, surmounted by a lighthouse,  $\frac{1}{2}$  an hour's walk from the town, commands a wide expanse of sea and coast-line E. as far as Bordighera and San Remo.

It is a delightful drive hence to Nice, through plantations of olives.

Vence-Cagnes Stat. Cagnes, upon a hill on l. crowned by an old Castle of the Grimaldi family, converted into an hospital and barrack.

Vence is an old town still surrounded by walls and towers. The Ch. of Notre Dame contains monuments of several bishops.

The river Var, crossed by a bridge of wood, on the carriage-road, once divided France from the Sardinian states. It is an unmanageable stream, rolling enormous masses of shingle down into the sea, which the current of the Mediterranean pushes constantly to the W., grinding them smaller the further they are carried.

The rly. crosses the Var above St. Laurent by a viaduct of 6 arches. Its piers are founded on piles sunk nearly 30 ft. deep in the sand of the river bed.

206 kil = 129 Eng. m. NICE TERMINUS.

Nice is now reached—1st, by rly. in 23 hrs. from Paris; invalids may break the journey by sleeping at Lyons and Toulon, where the most comfortable Inns are;—2nd, by steamer from Marseilles in 15 hrs.;—3rd, from Turin by railway as far as Cuneo, and thence by posting, malleposte, or diligence; the time occupied by the latter conveyance, rly. included, being 25 hrs., and by malleposte 21.

Nice — Nizza di Mare in Italian.—Inns: Hôtel Victoria, a large establishment W. of the town, close to the beach: charges high; table-d'hôte at 5 frs.; everything else expensive, especially apartments; the mosquitos here in the months of Oct., Nov., and Dec. are often very annoying.

H. de la Méditerranée, near the Victoria, has one of the largest saloons for dining and balls in Nice; table-d'hôte 4 frs., dinner in rooms 6 frs.; this hotel is well situated and spoken of; recently opened.

H. d'Angleterre, in the Place du Jardin Public; table-d'hôte 4 frs., with a civil master (Palmieri).

H. Chauvain, on the Quai St. Jean Baptiste, near the Pont Neuf, a very good house generally speaking; some of the rooms, however, are gloomy, and there are at times disagreeable drain-smells; table-d'hôte 4 frs.: suited for single men and small families.

Hôtel de France, on the Quai Masséna, one of the best tables-d'hôte in Nice, 5 frs.

H. des Anglais, near the sea, at the corner of the Jardin Public. This hotel, having passed into the hands of the Mediterranean Hotel Company, is now very good, and highly spoken of for its cookery and moderate charges, &c.

H. de l'Europe, Rue de France, a quiet family house: charges the same as at the H. Chauvain.

H. Royal; the wife of the owner, M. Santi, is an Englishwoman; the house is well kept, and with perhaps more moderate charges than at any of the preceding; persons can arrange here to live en pension, paying 10 frs. a-day, with a room looking south. The H. Royal, being at a considerable distance from the quarter most frequented by foreigners, may be inconvenient for those going out in the evening, although unobjectionable in other respects; a boat is kept here to convey lodgers in the hotel to and from the quarter of the Rue des Ponchettes.

H. de l'Univers, kept by How in the business quarter, the Place S. Dominique, and near the diligence office, —improved.

H. des Princes, at the E. extremity of the town, near the shore; "very clean and comfortable;" under the Castle-hill, which protects it from the northerly winds.

H. du Paradis, on the Boulevard du Midi, frequented by French families; more economical than the houses on the Promenade des Anglais and Jardin Public; the landlord civil and obliging.

H. des Etrangers, Rue du Pont Neuf; charges reasonable, but attendance complained of.

H. du Nord, frequented chiefly by Russians and commercial travellers.

H. de l'Orangine at Cimies, in the Villa Gerebsoff, is in a delightful situation, with fine bracing air and a lovely view; it is well spoken of by those who can afford to pay the very high prices charged; a bachelor can scarcely expect to live in it for less than 30 frs. a day.

A very just cause of complaint regarding the Hotels at Nice is that there is no general saloon or sitting-room in any of them, the inmates being obliged to remain in their apartments—the evident object of the landlords being to necessitate a greater consumption of fuel and lights.

As a general observation, it may be stated, that the hotels at Nice have become of late years as expensive as those in the largest capitals in Europe: although every article of marketing, and house-rent, are comparatively moderate, complaints have been universal, not only as regards the high charges, the attempts at extortion even in some of the first-class houses, the want of attention and of ordinary civility, the inadequacy, little variety in, and bad quality of the food at the tables-d'hôte, even where prices higher than those in Paris, Florence, or Rome are charged. Unfortunately visitors are in some measure at the mercy of hotel-keepers here, as lodgings can only be procured in private houses for a lengthened period, the season, which lasts from November until May: fabulous prices are consequently demanded and obtained; and as the system of fixed charges is unknown at Nice, the unfortunate foreigner is screwed without mercy. It is to be hoped that the grand hotel projected by a joint-stock company, on the excellent plan of the Hôtel du Louvre at Paris, and Hôtel de Lyon at Lyons, will bring those screwing gentry to their senses, by its fixed and moderate charges, good food, and civility. Such an establishment will well deserve the patronage of our countrymen visiting Nice, as it will meet, if conducted as we are given to understand it will, every praise and encouragement from us.

Boarding-houses: Pensions.—The following are amongst the best:—Marine Villa, pension, Promenade des Anglais, with a small garden; and Pension Visconti, at Cimies, near the Roman Amphitheatre, both kept by Mr. and Mrs. Smithers, are well spoken of: terms—for a single room, with breakfast, lunch, dinner, and tea, “fare very good,” 10 frs. a day: the inmates at the one may take their meals at the other, when it suits their convenience.—Pension de Carabacel (Madame Stokar), near the English Chapel, well furnished and conducted; 10 to 15 frs. a day; servants 4 frs.—Pension Guilbot, or Helvetique, at Longchamps: same prices, service and fare good: the situation of this house is favourable for persons labouring under pulmonary affections.—Pension Finella, in the Petite Rue St. Etienne: more of a family pension, in a domestic kind of way; very good fare, situation excellent for invalids; the owner is a homœopathic physician, who will advise his boarders, although he does not practise out of doors; of course lodgers can call in their own medical men.—Pension Rivoiz, in a good situation on the Promenade des Anglais: very clean; meals served in private apartments (“a party consisting of two masters and a servant, having a large drawing-room and bed-rooms, and their meals served separately—breakfast, lunch, dinner, tea, fire, and lights—paid 40 frs. a-day in the height of the season”).—Pension d’Italie, Rue des Ateliers, near the Hôtel de l’Europe: very quiet, with good rooms.—Pension Suisse, 27, Rue Masséna, and Pension Julienne, opposite, are chiefly frequented by French, Swiss, and Germans.—Miss Stafford, an Englishwoman, has a good pension, which is generally full.

Persons living in boarding-houses will do well to settle their bills at the end of every week, as cases have occurred, and by no means rarely, of a demand being made for breakages, which could not be verified after a lapse of time, and hence nothing remained but to pay.

Lodgings may be had to suit every class of persons, although, as in the case of hotels, the prices have been carried to an exorbitant extent. A list of the houses and rooms on hire may be seen at the offices of

The principal house-agents, the most respectable amongst whom are now—Dalgoutte, No. 9, Rue du Paradis, an active and attentive man, who keeps also a list of foreigners arriving at and leaving Nice;—Samaritani, the longest established in this line of business; his wife speaks English and German;—Lattes, near the Pont-Neuf;—and Pieffin, Place Charles Albert, &c. In hiring furnished apartments, the general system is that the agent is paid by the owner; but in this respect there is a good deal of shuffling. Visitors ought to see that all agreements are made in writing, and to mark particularly that charges for water, gas, porter (concierge), be included in the rent; and that a clause be inserted, if any article of furniture be wanting, they can procure them at the letter’s cost, he taking the inventory. All crockery, china, glass, linen, &c., should be gone over piece by piece, since, if on giving up possession there be the smallest stain or crack, the lodger will have to pay for it as for new. It will also be necessary to stipulate that all washing of furniture, hangings, curtains, &c., be at the charge of the person who lets, that of table and bed linen only being at the lodger’s. It is difficult to convey a correct idea of the price of lodgings. The following has been sent to us from Nice by a person well acquainted with the subject:—“An apartment of 7 or 8 rooms, of which 4 or 5 look towards the south, on the Promenade des Anglais or Jardin Public, will cost 5, 6, or 7000 frs. for the season; one of the same size at Carabacel, in a villa, from 4000 to 6000 frs.; at St. Etienne Longchamps 3500 to 5500; an apartment of 8 or 9 rooms on the Quai Masséna from 3000 to 5000, and on the Boulevard du Midi something less. Small villas in the environs from 4000 to 6000; larger ones from 9000 to 15,000. Very comfortable apartments may be procured in the Piazza Grimaldi and Rue Grimaldi at Longchamps, well placed, and sheltered from dust and wind."

Restaurants.—None very good; several send out dinners in heated tin boxes on the Roman plan. The best are—Restaurant Français, Quai Masséna; Julien, in the Rue Masséna; Escoffier, Quai Masséna; Augier, Avenue du Prince Impérial; Lavit, Rue Masséna; Bellissime, Rue de Longchamps—the two last are the best for sending out dinners: they do not keep restaurants. The system is to pay so much a day; bread, wine, and dessert not being generally included. Persons living in furnished lodgings will find it more economical to obtain their meals from a restaurateur's than to employ cooks, who are not here remarkable for their honesty, and who will generally charge more than the actual cost, and, what is still worse, furnish meat of an inferior quality.

Cafés.—The principal Cafés are on the Corso, near the Theatre. The Café Américain, and Café du Commerce. The Café de l'Univers, Boulevard du Pont Neuf, and Café Royal, two very elegant cafés, at the corner of the Avenue of the Prince Impérial and Place Masséna.

Confectioners, Pastrycooks, &c.—Maras, Rue du Pont Neuf; Café Américain; Cresp, Rue St. François de Paule, for biscuits and rusks. The best ices are to be had at the Cafés Américain, Vittoria, and de l'Europe. The charges at the pastrycooks' on the Quai Masséna, so much frequented by foreigners, are higher than in the others.

Physicians.—There are three excellent physicians here, whose practice is almost exclusively confined to English and Americans. Dr. Pantaleoni, so long established at Rome, and so well known amongst our countrymen who have resided there, is one of the most eminent medical men in Italy at the present day; practises as physician and accoucheur; he lives at No. 1, Place Masséna, 2nd floor. Dr. Travis, M.D., Member of the College of Physicians of Edinburgh, 15, Quai Masséna. Dr. Gurney, 25, Rue de France. Drs. Fitzpatrick, Crothers, and Crosby. Dr. Pasquale, a Neapolitan physician, who practises amongst our countrymen, and speaks English. Dr. Pressat, an eminent French practitioner.

Post Office in the Place Napoléon.

Poste aux Chevaux, behind the Théâtre Français.

Like every other expense to be incurred at Nice, the fee of physicians has increased: that expected by the first 3 medical men on our list is 20 fr., and double when they are called to Cimiez and other places at a similar distance from the town.

Chemists, Apothecaries.—Daniel, on the Quai Masséna, and Musso, Rue du Pont Neuf: both have English assistants. Musso is also celebrated for his dried fruits and syrups, of which he is an exporter upon a large scale. Peron, in the Rue du Pont Neuf; and Fouques, Place Napoléon. Leoncini, Place , has also an English assistant.

Dentist.—Mr. Hall, an American dentist, is by far the best; he lives at No. 3, Place Masséna.

British Consul.—A. Lacroix, Esq., Place S. Dominique.

Bankers.—The principal are MM. Avigdor and Co.; Lacroix and Co., at the British Consulate; and Etienne, Carlone, and Co.; all of whom are very obliging towards their English customers.

Tradespeople.—As a general rule, tradespeople employed by foreign visitors make higher charges than those whose business is more confined to the native population; but it must also be stated that the shops of the former are better supplied.

a. Grocers.—Berlandina, Rue S. François de Paule, is one of the best for teas, wines, and groceries in general: he is an obliging man, and will give information as to lodgings, servants, &c.; Gent, on the Quay, equally good; so are Barberi, 2, Croix de Marbre, and Braud, 15, Rue de France.

b. Wine Merchants. — Berlandina, Barbéry, Rue Masséna, 28, for French wines; Vrial, on the Corso, for foreign and common wines.

c. Bakers. — English bread may be procured at Martin's shop, forming the corner of the Rues de Masséna and du Paradis; Braquet, Rue de France; and Renz for German bread, No. 5, Rue du Paradis.

d. Tailors. — Thibaut is a good gentleman's tailor; and for ladies' habits, Gavarry frères. Morrison, an English tailor, in the Jardin Public; and Mazzini.

e. Bootmakers. — Bouchon, in the Corso; and Brun: both very good.

f. Hatters. — Cordiglia keeps French and English hats; Medecin, for ladies' hats. Nice is celebrated for its straw hats, of a peculiar form for ladies, of late so fashionable, perhaps the best in Italy for protection against the sun; the principal shops where they can be procured are at Torri et Fils, Place S. Dominique, and Rue du Gouvernement. Linen Umbrellas, called sun-shades, a very necessary article against the hot sun of Nice, may be procured in the same shops, and at the corner of the Rue du Pont Neuf, Rue Masséna, price 5 to 10 frs.

g. English Articles. — Giraldin, near the Hôtel Chauvain.

h. Merceries, Silk, &c. — Ade, Place Masséna, well supplied, but expensive; Orengo, Place S. Dominique, more reasonable; Mazoury and Sauvin, in the same Place, aux Villes de France; Gonin, Jardin Public.

i. Modiste. — Madame Mock, Jardin Public; Madame Haas, Rue de Pont Neuf; Madame Gregory, Place Charles Albert.

k. Linen-drapers. — Weeks, Place du Pont Neuf, Cassini, and Messiah: all well supplied.

l. Turnery, Marqueterie. — Nice is celebrated for its inlaid woodwork, a kind of mosaic in coloured or died woods, like those of Sorrento and Tunbridge Wells. The best shops for it, as well as for turnery, which is largely manufactured here, are—Cian-do's, in the Rue S. François de Paule; Galliena and Cera, in the Place S.

Etienne, who also give lessons in their art, now a good deal practised by ladies; Lacroix, Rue du Pont Neuf; Gimécle, Place Charles Albert; Nicolas and Lacroix, in the Rue des Ponchettes, near the Hôtel des Princes.

Booksellers, Circulating Libraries, News-rooms, Stationery, &c. — Visconti's, in the Rue S. François de Paule, is the largest establishment of the kind at Nice, and a general place of rendezvous for foreigners; the collection of newspapers, reviews, and other periodicals is very extensive and well chosen in the reading-room, for which the subscription is 5 frs. for 1 month, 13 for 3, and 24 for the season or 6 months. Visconti lets out also English and French papers. Giraud, a very obliging man, in the Jardin Public, keeps a good circulating library and bookshop.

Clubs, Cercles, &c. — There are now 2 clubs at Nice: the oldest, called the Société Philharmonique, to which foreigners are admitted on being presented by one of the members, gratuitously for the first 10 days, and afterwards by paying 10 frs. a month, 25 frs. for 3 months, and 50 for the year; —and what may be called the English Club from being chiefly frequented by our countrymen, in the Place Masséna: there is a table-d'hôte dinner here at 6 frs., for which the members must inscribe their names at an early hour. Gambling in the form of betting, although against the rules, has been much complained of here. Both at the Société Philharmonique and at the English Club balls and concerts are frequently given during the winter, to which subscribers can bring their families. The principal Italian, French, and English newspapers are taken in at both.

Masters. — It is difficult to give a list of the masters in different departments; the best plan will be for foreigners to apply to their bankers, and at Giraud's and Visconti's libraries, for information, or for music-masters at the principal music-shops. The following can be recommended: —for French, Mons. Mallard; Sig. Bertani, a Roman, is an excellent Italian master; Sig. Ciaffei, also a Roman, is a first-rate singing-master, but his charges are high—10, 20, and even 30 frs. a lesson, according to the distance; Madlle. Petti, a Roman lady, is a very good teacher on the piano, and gives lessons in Italian; Madlle. Mignie is a good mistress for the piano; Madame Sohmitt, a German teacher; Mr. Price, who receives pupils to prepare them for our English universities and for the Civil Service examinations, can be recommended to families.

Pianofortes can be hired at Balbi's, Boulevard du Midi; Dalguette's, Rue du Paradis; and at Nolfe's, Place S. Etienne.

Protestant English Church, a handsome Gothic edifice, is situated near the Rue de la Croix de Mabre. It is supported by a grant from the Treasury, but chiefly by the contributions of the British residents; the contributions for sittings being—families, 105 francs for the season, and 15 additional for every servant; a single sitting, 10 francs for the first month, 15 for two, 25 for the season, and half these rates for children. Divine service is performed twice a-day on Sundays and holidays. The present clergyman is the Rev. Mr. Childers. There is a second church, or chapel of ease, also a neat Gothic edifice, in the suburb of Carabacel, on the way from Nice to Cimies, where the Rev. Mr. Ward officiates. Too closely annexed to the principal church in the Rue de la Croix de Marbre is the Protestant cemetery, chiefly tenanted by our countrymen, and already over-crammed. There is a Scottish Presbyterian church at No. 5, Rue Masséna; and a French and German one, where the service is celebrated in those languages every Sunday.

Public Conveyances.—A malleposte from Nice for Turin daily, employing 18 hours as far as Cuneo, arriving at Turin at midday; and a diligence which employs 25 hours.

From Nice to Genoa the daily malleposte takes several passengers; also two diligences. By one of these, at 9 A.M., and by paying an additional 20 francs, the traveller can sleep at Oneglia, and arrive at Savona or Voltri in time next day for the last railway train, thus traversing by daylight the whole of the beautiful road of Corniche. Fares 30 and 40 francs, but constantly varying.

The Railway between Nice and Genoa is progressing rapidly, but will scarcely be completed before 2 years.

Steamers.—There are nearly every evening steamers sailing between Nice and Genoa, leaving Nice in the evening, so as to reach Genoa early in the morning. Some boats (those of the Zuccoli Company), however, sail in the morning, in which case and during fine weather the voyage is delightful, and more agreeable and expeditious (8 to 10 hours), and economical (27½ and 17½ fr.). The boats of the Zuccoli Company, said to be well appointed, leave Nice on Tuesday and Friday, at 9 A.M. From Nice to Marseilles, also frequently, those of the Frainsinet Company, 3 times a week. There is a weekly boat of the Valery Company for Corsica, alternately for Bastia and Ajaccio. A small steamer, the Palmaria, a rather rickety concern, leaves Nice every day about 1 o'clock during the fashionable season, for Monaco, performing the voyage in about 2 hrs., and returning in the evening; the principal passengers being persons who frequent the gaming-tables, which are permitted by the prince of that place, as in several German watering-places, the profits from which form a considerable item in the revenues of that petty potentate.

Vetturini.—The most agreeable mode of reaching Genoa from Nice, by persons not pressed for time and by families, will be by vetturino. Carriages will always be found ready to start. They are in general good as to vehicles and horses; but it will be necessary before leaving to sign a written engagement. The time occupied is generally 3 days; the hire will depend on the number of horses and passengers, and, above all, on the period of the year—that when the charges will be highest being when foreigners are rushing away from Nice towards Southern Italy, and especially to Rome, in the early spring; a good carriage with 4 horses ought not to cost more than 15 Napoleons; with two, 10 to 12. Plana near the Croix de Marbre, and Felice near the Palais du Gouvernement, are respectable men as agents.

Hackney-coaches, fiacres, &c., abound: 1 fr. 50 c. the course;  $2\frac{1}{2}$  frs. an hour with 2 horses for the first hour, and 2 fr. for every subsequent one; with one horse, 2 frs., and 1 fr. 75 c.: the course in the town, 1 fr. with one horse; the excursion to Villefranche and returning, 6 frs. But in going beyond the city limits, it will be well to come to an understanding as to the fare before starting.

Nice, in Italian Nizza, called also Nizza di Mare, and Nizza Maritima, to distinguish it from Nizza della Paglia, in the province of Alessandria, was formerly the capital of a small independent sovereignty governed by its counts in the middle ages. It passed successively into the hands of the Counts of Provence, of the Angevin sovereigns of Naples, until the end of the 14th centy., when it was sold by Ladislaus to Amadeus VII. of Savoy, in whose family it has since remained, except during the French revolutionary war and empire, to which it was attached, until 1860, when it was ceded to France; it is now the chief town of the French Département des Alpes Maritimes. Considerable doubt exists as to the first foundation of Nice and the origin of its name, but it is generally believed to have been peopled by a Phœcean colony from Marseilles, as early as the 5th centy. of Rome; during the Imperial period it was a port of some importance, from its vicinity to Cemenelum (the modern Cimies), the Roman capital of the Maritime Alps. The name of Nice is derived by some philologists from Nike, in memory of a victory gained by its early Phœcean colonists over some neighbouring Ligurian tribes.

Modern Nice offers few remains of ancient art; we must seek this on the hills above it, near where the capital of the Maritime Alps stood. The mediæval town appears to have been entirely situated on the l. bank of the Paglione torrent, and round the base of the hill on which its castle stood, the whole of that on the rt. bank being of very modern date, chiefly during the present centy., and since the great influx of foreigners; of late years the town has been much extended also in a northerly direction, and the quarter bordering on its little port much enlarged and embellished.

The city consists of three principal portions: that on the rt. bank of the Paglione, called the Quartier de la Croix de Marbre; the Old Town with its modern additions; and the Port. The quarter of the Croix de Marbre is that principally occupied by foreigners; it borders the river with a handsome quay filled with gay shops. The square called the Jardin Public is surrounded by handsome buildings, at the extremity of which is the street leading towards the French frontier, and a new parade, the Promenade degli Inglesi, facing the sea, constructed by subscriptions chiefly of the English visitors, to employ the poor during a year of scarcity. The English church and cemetery is in this part of the town, which derives its name of Croix de Marbre from a marble cross erected in 1538, on the occasion of the arrival of Paul III. to bring about a reconciliation between Charles V. and Francis I., "when so great was the difficulty of adjusting the ceremonial, or such the remains of rancour and distrust on each side, that they refused to see one another, and everything was transacted by the intervention of the Pope, who visited them alternately."—Robertson's Charles V. The white marble column opposite this cross was put up in 1823 to commemorate the two visits of Pius VII. in 1809 and 1814.

N. of this runs the Rue Grimaldi, a newly built street, with several good houses, amongst which the Hôtel de Louvre, all tenanted by foreigners. The quarter of the Old Town extends from the Paglione to the foot of the Castle-hill; on the side of the sea it is bordered by a very handsome quay or parade, affording a delightful walk, in the direction of the port, of more than a mile. Parallel to this are the Rue St. François de Paule and the Corso, where the theatre, public library, and principal cafés are situated. Farther N. is the Rue du Pont Neuf and Place St. Dominique, the principal centre of business; and at its N. extremity the large Piazza Vittorio, which forms the entrance from the sides of Turin and Genoa. The dirty quarter close under the hill is the oldest part of Nice. Near this are the market, the cathedral, principal churches, &c.

Between this quarter and that of the port is the Castle-hill, an insulated mass of limestone, which rises to an elevation of 800 ft. It was formerly crowned by a strong castle, destroyed by the Duke of Berwick, general of Louis XIV., in 1706. This hill has been laid out as a public promenade, the entrance to which is towards the Place Napoléon. Some Roman remains have been recently discovered on the summit, towards the S.E., especially 3 sepulchral sarcophagi of the 5th centy. From the summit the view is most extensive, Corsica being easily seen, in clear weather, especially early in the morning and before sunset.

The quarter of the port, originally a low crowded place, has been greatly improved, and is approached by the Quai Parade of the Ponchettes from the W., and by the Rue Cassini from the N. It is chiefly inhabited by seafaring persons. The little port itself, capable of admitting vessels drawing 15 ft. water, is protected by 2 moles, at the extremity of the outer one of which is a small lighthouse and a strong battery. The entrance is somewhat difficult, and at no time can it be considered as a place of refuge, from the difficulty of its approach in heavy weather.

The principal objects worthy of the traveller's notice at Nice are—

The Cathedral or Ch. of S. Reparata, the principal ecclesiastical edifice of the town: it is in the ordinary Italian style of the 17th cent., and offers nothing remarkable as a work of art. The same observation applies to the pictures over the principal altars.

The Public Library, in the Rue St.

François de Paule, is open daily from 10 till 4. It contains about 40,000 volumes, and is well supplied with works of modern Italian and French literature. In one of the rooms are preserved fragments of 3 milestones, of the reigns of Augustus and Adrian, discovered on the Via Aurelia, near Turbia; the most perfect indicating the dcv. mile.

Museum of Natural History, at No. 6, Place Napoléon, near the Post-office, consisting of two large rooms, in the first of which is a remarkable series of painted models or facsimiles of mushrooms found in the province, and formed by Mr. Barla, a rich amateur, who has expended a large amount on it. In the second room are the Zoological Collections, rich in ornithological specimens, in the fishes and other marine animals of the adjacent Mediterranean, especially of the naked mollusca, formed by Dr. Verani, a local naturalist of great merit. Here also are the Palæontological Collections, formed by Dr. Perez, particularly rich in the cretaceous and tertiary fossil shells of the county of Nice, and in the bones of extinct quadrupeds of the bone breccia which fills the crevices and caverns of the calcareous rock of the Castle-hill.

The Liceo Nazionale, or College, near the Ponte Vecchio, a large educational establishment on the plan of the French lycées or colleges, and receiving several hundred pupils.

Geology.—It may not be out of place here to give a general sketch of the different formations which constitute the environs of Nice, as many of our readers may wish to occupy themselves in their walks around with geological investigations. "Commencing in the ascending order, the oldest rock in this part of the Maritime Alps is a metamorphic conglomerate, called Verrucano by the Tuscan geologists, which may be seen about San Dalmaszo and on the road to Tenda. On this lies, at Isola, an extensive calcareous deposit referable to the lias and inferior oolite of England and to our Oxford clay, and with the characteristic fossils of the latter beds in the Vallée de St. André. The Coral rag constitutes the greater part of the range of hills that separate the bays of Nice and Villefranche, and the promontory of Montboron, on which is situated the lighthouse. To this portion of the oolitic series belong the deposits of gypsum which exist close to the town. The limestone of this period is frequently converted into dolomite, as may be seen at the foot of Montalbano and in the Castle-hill of Nice. The only fossils hitherto discovered have been corals and the Diceras Arietina, near to S. Pons. Upon the coral rag, near the small bay des Fosses, lies a series of beds of a compact limestone, without fossils, which may be referred to the Portland system. The Neocomian and Cretaceous systems are well developed about Nice. The gault exists, with its characteristic fossils, in the valley of the Madonna del Laghetto, in the ravines W. of the village of Esa, and on the Mont Chauve, N. of Nice. In the two former places good collections of its fossils may be procured. Green-sand.—The best points for studying this formation will be perhaps along the E. side of the peninsula of San Ospizio, as we shall notice in our excursion to Villefranche and that promontory. The same may be said of the upper cretaceous rocks, which abound in the most characteristic chalk fossils, Gryphæa columba, Ananchites ovatus, about the village of S. Jean, and on the headland of San Ospizio itself. Tertiary System.—The members of the tertiary period, the most developed about Nice, are the eocene and pleiocene formations. The eocenic strata are well characterised by their fossils in the escarpments along the E. side of the peninsula of S. Ospizio, between Beaulieu and the village of S. Jean, especially in the small Baie des Fourmis. The richest localities, however, for these fossils are in the vicinity of Drap and Pallarea, on the road from Nice to Turin, where about 400 species have been already found and described by Signor Bellardi. The pleiocene strata, with the exception of a small patch near La Trinité, are confined to the W. side of the Paglione, and occupy all the low hilly region between it and the Var, so remarkable for its rich olive-plantations, and which presents so marked a contrast with the bare and arid region of the limestone hills on the E. side of the first-mentioned river. The pleiocene strata appear identical with those of the Subapennine hills, and of the patches which exist along the Corniche road and at Genoa. Quaternary.—An interesting quaternary deposit, which rises to upwards of 50 ft. above the present sea-level, and containing marine shells identical with those now living in the Mediterranean, may be seen covering the eocene beds between Beaulieu and S. Jean, on the E. side of the promontory. The dolomitized coral rag, which forms the greater part of the insulated hill on which stood the castle of Nice, is penetrated at its S.E. extremity with fissures and caverns, in which bones of extinct quadrupeds have been frequently found. These remains are accompanied by bones of fresh-water turtle and some marine shells, as may be seen in the museum of the municipality. The bones of quadrupeds are referable to the elephant, hippopotamus, rhinoceros, horse, hog, several species of ruminants, &c."

Climate of Nice.—When Nice first became the resort of British residents, the salubrity and advantages of its climate were perhaps overrated, but at present there is too great a tendency in a contrary direction, in comparing it with other places adopted as a residence for invalids. With its few drawbacks as regards climate, Nice offers advantages from its situation, its resources, the facility of now reaching it by railway, from England, &c., vastly superior to most of the places which have been placed in competition with it. Situated at the opening of a mountain valley, enclosed by hills which in winter are often covered with snow, the wind descending from them is sometimes cold and stimulant; but the greatest drawback perhaps is the dry N.W. wind or mistral, which, crossing Provence from the Pyrenees, is very trying to invalids while it lasts, and is attended with another inconvenience, clouds of dust, which no amount of watering can prevent. The great advantage which the climate of Nice offers in winter is its clear atmosphere, bright sun, and comparative absence of rain, which always renders the chamber of the invalid cheerful. The temperature seldom falls below freezing during the clear, serene winter nights, and is then produced more by radiation than by an absolute diminished temperature. The daytime is warm, sometimes inconveniently so, even in December; and persons subject to nervous headaches, or determination of blood to the head, will do well not to expose themselves too much to the sun, or in doing so to use the grey linen parasols so generally adopted. The mean temperature of Nice, deduced from 15 years' observation, has been found to be  $60\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$  Fahrenheit. The greatest heat in July and August,  $88\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ ; the greatest cold in January,  $27\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ ; the mean temperature during the 3 winter months,  $48\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ ; during the 3 spring ditto,  $58^{\circ}$ ; in June, July, and August,  $78^{\circ}$ ; in the autumn,  $62^{\circ}$ : January being the coldest, and August the hottest months. As regards the effect of the climate of Nice on disease, it may be pronounced excellent in cases of chronic rheumatism, gout, and paralysis; very good in visceral obstructions, dyspepsia, &c., in scrofulous and glandular affections, especially in children, owing to the dry, bracing nature of the air. In pulmonary complaints of an advanced stage, a residence at Nice is not to be recommended; in incipient or threatened consumption, unaccompanied by febrile irritation, a winter residence in Nice is less objectionable. In all affections of the brain, this climate will prove prejudicial in the extreme. In female sufferings, patients cannot "go to a better place." It may not be out of place to add that the Sea-bathing at Nice is good, something similar to that at Brighton, on a shingle beach. Bathing machines on the English system have been lately introduced; those who prefer a sandy beach will find some beautiful situations in the deep coves, near Villefranche, and round the peninsula of Saint Hospice.

Among the low hills on the W. side of the Paglione and behind Nice the air is said to be milder and less stimulating than in the lower situation about the town and nearer the sea. The climate of some of the towns along the Riviera is undoubtedly milder than that of Nice, as is also that round the bay of Villefranche, owing to their more protected situation by headlands from the sharp mistral, and not being at the mouths of valleys descending from the Alps; Mentone and San Remo are peculiarly favoured in this respect.

The advantages of Nice may be summed up in a few words: a delightful winter climate, with very little rain, except during the few days that the mistral blows; a town possessing all the resources of many capitals as to lodgings, masters, recreations, tradespeople, supplies, a Protestant church, English medical men, and abundant society for those inclined to take part in its gaieties; and, since the rly. to Toulon has been opened, at the easy distance of 3 days' journey from England. The climates of Pisa and Hyères are perhaps more equable, but certainly damper, than that of Nice, and consequently more relaxing, and with fewer social advantages and resources; the same may be said of Cannes, which to other drawbacks unites those of being a dirty town, the country around comparatively bare and arid, and the principal residences for foreigners near a high road, from which there rise clouds of dust in the dry season.

---

EXCURSIONS IN THE ENVIRONS OF NICE.

One of the most interesting, in an antiquarian point of view, is to Cimiez, the Civitas Cemeneliensis of the Romans, and once the capital of the Maritime Alps. Cimies is less than 3 m. from Nice, and may be reached in an hour either on foot or in a carriage. The pedestrian can combine in the same excursion other interesting points, as St. Pons, returning by the Fontaine du Temple, the Vallée Obscure, and St. Barthélemy. The road to Cimies branches off from the rt. bank of the Paglione at the N. extremity of the town, and, ascending rapidly between high walls which exclude all view, and bordered by villas, at the end of 2 m. reaches the well-preserved ruins of a small Roman Amphitheatre, called by the peasantry the Tino delle Fade, or Bath of the Fairies; it is 210 ft. by 175, and could have contained about 8000 spectators. A short distance further on the rt. is the Franciscan Convent of Cimies, which is supposed to occupy the site of a temple of Diana at the ancient Cemenehum. The ch., which has been newly repaired, contains a picture by Ludovico Brea, the only artist of any eminence whom Nice has produced. In front of the ch. is a square planted with gigantic ilexes, and an interesting Gothic marble cross of the 15th centy. Annexed to the convent is a burying-ground, a favourite spot of repose for the Roman Catholic inhabitants of Nice. Not far from here, in the villa of Count Garin, are some Roman ruins, the supposed remains of a Temple of Apollo.

At St. Pons, about a mile from Cimies, by an abrupt stony path, is an extensive convent over the rt. bank of the Paglione. It stands on the site of one where Charlemagne is said to have dwelt on his way to Rome in 777. The place is more celebrated as having witnessed the assembly of the inhabitants of Nice in 1388, when they declared for Amadeus VII. of Savoy.

La Fontaine du Temple, and the Fontaine de Mouraille, both in very picturesque situations, may be reached by the pedestrian from Cimies, or more easily from Nice, combined with a visit to St. Barthélemy and the Vallée Obscure. The Fontaine du Temple derives its name from the ch. of St. Marie du Temple, founded by the Templars. The neighbouring Vallée Obscure is a fine gorge, a Via Mala on a diminutive scale.

---

CHÂTEAU DE S. ANDRÉ, FALICON AND ITS GROTTO.

This excursion may be performed in a carriage by the road running along the rt. bank of the Paglione as far as St. Pons, and from thence along the same side of the torrent of S. André by the road to Levens. The Castle of S. André is a very picturesque ruin, surrounded by plantations of aloes and cacti: the Grotto is at a short distance beneath the Castle, from which a path leads to it. Crossing the torrent, the pedestrian will soon reach the village of Falicon, from which, following the road to Levens, he will arrive, about a mile further, at the Grotto of Falicon, at the base of Mont Cavo or Mont Chauve, one of the elevated limestone peaks which bound the district of Nice towards the N. The grotto is very picturesque, and lined with stalactites; it is of a circular form: there are some remote smaller chambers which have not yet been explored.

The geologist will find much to interest him in the excursion to S. André and Falicon.

---

EXCURSION TO VILLEFRANCHE, CAPE ST. HOSPICE, ETC.

This excursion, the most interesting for beautiful scenery, may be easily performed in a day. To the geologist it offers a great variety of objects for observation, as during it all the formations found about Nice may be seen in a limited space. The best mode of proceeding for ladies will be to reach Villefranche (about 2½ m.) in their carriage, and from thence to cross the bay in a boat, or to walk round the head of the bay along the beautiful Corniche road which leads to Beaulieu. A very pretty drive may be had from Nice by the new road, keeping the sea in sight all the way, rounding the point up the hill by Smith's Folly, a huge castellated edifice, on a bare arid rock, to Villefranche along the new road, the distance from the Place Napoléon and the Rue Cassini, where the road commences, being about 3 m. There is a good Inn at Villefranche; but we would advise travellers to lunch or dine at old Gianetta's homely Locanda, at the pretty little cove of St. Jean, on the S. side of the peninsula of St. Hospice, where they will find a comfortable meal and a good bed, should they desire to prolong their stay. A new Inn, the Victoria, of greater pretensions, has been lately opened near to St. Jean.

The road to Villefranche, by the old and now less frequented road, leaves the Place Napoléon on the rt., and, after passing a kind of faubourg, reaches the bottom of the hill which separates the Bay of Nice from that of Villefranche. An ascent of 450 ft. through olive groves leads to the summit of the low neck or pass called the Col de Villefranche. Instead of proceeding immediately to Villefranche, the lover of the picturesque will do well to take a path on the rt., which in a few minutes will bring him to the Fort of Montalban, on the highest point of the range of Monteboron, which separates the two bays, and from which, or a little further S. near some ruined buildings, he will discover the whole coast-line from near S. Remo, on the E. passing by Mentone, Ventimiglia, Monaco, to St. Tropez, on the W. passing by Antibes, the islands of St. Marguerite, the mouth of the Var and its low delta. The Fort de Montalban commands the Bays of Nice and Genoa, and from its height (950 ft.) a magnificent view of the valley of the Paglione, Nice, and of the rich district between it and the Var, covered with one continuous olive forest extending to the foot of the last spurs of the Alps. Returning to the Col of Villefranche, an excellent, well-managed road leads to the pretty town of that name, which from its cleanliness offers a striking contrast with the older parts of Nice, and with the other towns along the sea-coast. Villafranca, or Villefranche, owes its foundation to Charles II. of Anjou, King of Naples and Count of Provence, in the 13th centy. It is near the head of a most lovely land-locked bay, which offers a secure anchorage for vessels of the largest size. Before the Government of Piedmont became possessed of Genoa and its maritime territory, Villefranche was the naval arsenal of the House of Savoy: it contains a good dock, storehouses, &c.; but since then, Genoa having become the great naval station, Villefranche was almost abandoned as a naval post. Commanding the dock is an extensive fortified castle, and a Lazzaretto. Though so close to Nice, the climate is much milder, scarcely ever feeling the inconvenience of the cutting mistral, or of the blasts from the snow-capped Alps. Orange, lemon, and carouba trees abound in its territory, and its beautiful gulf is not only rich in fish for the table, but furnishes a very ample field for the student in zoology, from the abundance and variety of its marine mollusca and zoophytes; indeed, Villefranche will always prove the best locality for the naturalist wishing to study the varied animals of the Mediterranean, as the fishermen are the most expert, and furnish the greater proportion of fish for the market at Nice. A very beautiful road leads from Nice to Beaulieu along the N. side of the bay, on a ledge overhanging the Mediterranean, and passing through woods of orange-trees, olives, carouba, pistachio, &c.: at the distance of about a mile it suddenly emerges on the Bay of St. Jean, and a very agreeable path, which strikes off on the rt. and along the top of the cliff, will carry the tourist to the small village of St. Jean, on the E. side of the peninsula of St. Ospizio: or a boat may be hired at Villefranche, which will enable him to cross the bay to Passable, from which a stony path across the isthmus leads to the same village; but, although less fatiguing, this route offers nothing of the beauty or interest of the former. St. Jean consists of an Inn (Gianetta's), where a fair fish dinner may always be had; and while this is preparing, a walk of half an hour will bring the tourist to the S.E. extremity of the peninsula, crowned by a circular fort, at the foot of which is the chapel of the patron saint, a recluse, who died in the tower where he was here immured in the 6th centy. It was on this portion, called Fraxinet, that the Saracens established themselves, and were only expelled in the 10th centy. In the bay between Cape St. Ospizio and Beaulieu, opposite to St. Jean, is the Madrague or Tunny-fishery of Nice; it is in activity from February until the autumn, and, being the one most accessible to the passing traveller along the shores of the Mediterranean, will well repay the trouble of a visit; no other exists until we arrive near Genoa. Instead of returning by the same route, let the tourist take the path S. of St. Jean, leading to the lighthouse, along the E. declivity of Mont Canferrat, and along the W. side of the wild bay des Fosses: a different path will take him from the lighthouse to Passable, where boats will generally be found to carry him across the bay to Villefranche in 10 minutes; or he will find a pleasant path round the head of the bay, amidst olive and carouba trees. The little bay of Passable is by some antiquaries supposed to be the Olivula Portus of the ancient Itineraries.

GEOLOGICAL EXCURSION TO THE PENINSULA OF ST. HOSPICE, &c.

However foreign to the object of this work to enter into details on dry scientific subjects, as many of our countrymen during their sojourn at Nice may be disposed to turn their attention to the interesting geological features of the country around, no part of it is better calculated to show the succession of the formations which enter into its structure than the environs of Villefranche and the peninsula of St. Hospice. The tourist, on leaving the Faubourg de Villefranche, at Nice, begins to ascend the chain of Mont-boron, which is composed of highly inclined strata of limestone of the oolitic series, probably of the age of our great oolite of the West of England, and of the coral rag. The Château or Fort of Montalbano is perched on strata changed into dolomite, a metamorphism very common in the environs of Nice, the effect probably of the porphyritic eruptions of the chain of Estrelles. If the geologist, before arriving at the Col, at a small oratory or chapel, will turn off to the l., the path will lead him to a ravine excavated in the gypsum, which is evidently a part of the oolitic series, although its origin as a metamorphic rock (produced by the action of sulphureous emanations on the limestone) is probably posterior to the deposit of the cretaceous formation, and even of the eocene beds. At the Col de Villefranche the green beds of the cretaceous rock lie on the dolomite. On arriving near Villefranche, let the pedestrian take the road on the l. to Beaulieu, and, rounding the N. side of the bay, he will soon find himself on the same rocks of the cretaceous system as he had seen at the Col de Villefranche; before arriving at the lowest part of the neck of land which separates the two bays, these latter are covered by a quaternary deposit containing shells still living in the Mediterranean, and which continues to the escarpment of the bay of Beaulieu, where it attains an elevation of 50 ft. above the level of the sea. Having reached this point, let him descend the escarpment to the thick bed of seaweed which covers this part of the beach, and he will find under the quaternary deposit a cliff of inclined strata of sandy marls abounding in Foraminifera, and farther S. of nummulites and other well-characterised fossils of the Eocene period. Following the sea-beach at the foot of the escarpment, he will be able to make a large collection of fossils. This Eocene deposit, here very limited in extent, lies on the cretaceous rocks in a kind of gorge, the latter reappearing in the Baie des Fourmis, where it contains numerous fossils, amongst others the Exogyra Haliotidea in great abundance; and in the ledge of inclined beds which form the N. side of the little Bay of St. Jean, millions of that most characteristic shell of the upper chalk, the Gryphæa columba, with Spatangi, &c. These cretaceous beds form the whole of the small peninsula of St. Hospice, and may be seen resting on the oolitic ones behind the village of St. Jean. From the latter place let the geologist take the path leading to the Bois des Fosses, and following its W. side he will discover successively the lower beds of the Neocomian series, with Nautilus pseudo-elegans, Belemnites dilatatus, Ammonites intermedius, &c.; and beneath a compact limestone, which probably represents our English Portland beds, resting on the coral rag full of madrepores, and which forms the whole S. portion of the peninsula on which the light-house stands, the Mont Canferat as far as the small Bay of Passable, the bareness and aridity of which contrast so singularly with the richly wooded region situated upon the cretaceous and tertiary rocks.

GEOLOGICAL EXCURSION TO LA TRINITÉ, DRAP, AND PALLAREA.

This excursion may be made easily in a carriage, as the principal points of interest lie close to the high post-road leading from Nice to Turin. Following the l. bank of the Paglione, the road runs along the base of the Mont Vinaigrier, and Mont Gros, formed of Jurassic limestones, as far as the chapel of Notre Dame du Bon Voyage, where the Paglione bends to the N.E., and from which to the village of La Trinité we pass over the cretaceous system. This village is at the W. extremity of a kind of island of Pleocene marls, extending for a short distance on either side of the torrent of the Magnan, and offers perhaps the best point in the environs of Nice for studying this modern marine deposit. After leaving La Trinité, the road continues for about 2 m. farther to the village of Drap, still on the cretaceous or Neocomian beds, which about the latter village contain a great variety of our English greensand fossils. Continuing along the banks of the Paglione, we at length reach Pallarea, a short distance on the rt., in the environs of which abound fossils of the Eocene period, of which nearly 400 species have been collected, and described in Signor Bellardi's work on the 'Fossils of Nice.'

Persons residing at Nice, and making the excursion from there to Mentone and Monaco, will do well on reaching Turbia (2 hours) to send on their carriage to the junction of the Nice, Mentone, and Monaco roads, to wait for them, and walk down the steps to Monaco: the descent will be accomplished in less than an hour. Donkeys can be hired at Monaco to reach the carriage. The drive to Mentone is a very agreeable one, a pleasant way of spending a day in the spring.

FROM NICE TO TURBIA, MONACO, MENTONE, AND THE ITALIAN FRONTIER.

	KIL.	KIL.
Nice to
Turbia . . . .	18	Mentone . . . . 31

A rly. in progress. The portion between Nice and the Italian frontier, running along the sea, will scarcely be opened for 2 years.

Steamers sail nearly every day from Nice to Monaco in fine weather.

Leaving Nice by the Place Napoléon and the fine alley of plane-trees which leads also to the road of the Col di Tenda and Turin, the road soon commences to rise, and for the next 10 miles is one continuous ascent: this route, which has replaced the once dangerous Corniche, was commenced by the French, who, before the fall of Napoleon, carried it nearly to Ventimiglia, from which it has been completed by the Sardinian government to Genoa, under circumstances of great engineering difficulties. The views during the ascent to Turbia are very fine, especially over the subjacent lovely bays of Villefranche, St. Jean, Beaulieu, and the village, with its castle on a high peak, of Esa. The road attains its greatest elevation (2100 ft.) 2 m. before reaching Turbia: soon after passing a column on the road-side, called the Colonna del Rè, from its having been erected to commemorate the visit of one of the late kings of Sardinia, a road turns off on the l. leading to the sanctuary of La Madonna del Laghetto, in a romantic valley at the foot of Monte Sembola, and through which the branch of the Via Aurelia passed between Turbia and Cimies: several remains of Roman antiquities have been discovered hereabouts; the most remarkable is the Milliarium, now preserved in the library at Nice, marking the dcv mile. A very gradual descent brings us to 11 m. Turbia, a village at an elevation of 1900 ft. above the sea, upon a col or saddleback between two limestone peaks. Turbia, a corruption of Trophæa, is celebrated for the Trophæa Augusti, which stands close to and S. of the village; and was probably a Roman station on the branch of the Via Aurelia called Julia, from having been continued from Tuscany to Arles by Augustus. The Trophæa Augusti was erected by Augustus, and may be considered as marking the limit between Liguria and Gaul; it is now a ruin: the mediæval tower by which it is surmounted forms a remarkable object in the landscape. Of the Roman construction only the basement remains, which offers some fine blocks of quadrilateral masonry, and which is supposed to have been surmounted by successive stories, tapering to a point, decorated with sculptures and statues like some of the sepulchral monuments on the Via Appia. On this basement was an inscription commemorating the victories of Augustus over the Alpine tribes, of which only some detached fragments have been discovered: one contains the letters RVMPILI, forming part of the name of one of the vanquished tribes (Trum-pili), which is recorded in Pliny's description. It is not known at what period the Gothic tower which surmounts the Trophæa Augusti was erected, but it long served as a mountain fastness, and was reduced to its present dilapidated state in the 17th century by the Maréchal de Villars, who blew it up, thus destroying what man and 17 centuries had spared, at the instigation of Louis XIV.'s ally, the Prince of Monaco. In some of the itineraries Turbia is assigned as the limit or boundary between Italy and Gaul, and is certainly naturally so, being placed on the pass over the most inaccessible spur of the Maritime Alps, which descends to the shores of the Mediterranean, and round the base of which neither the ancient nor modern rulers of Italy have succeeded in carrying a line of communication. Leaving Turbia, the road constantly descends. Soon after emerging from the village a splendid view, embracing Monaco, Mentone, and the blue Mediterranean, opens, and a road branches off to the former town, but with so rapid a descent as to be only suited for mules or pedestrians, the traveller who may wish to reach Monaco by carriage being obliged to go round by Mentone. (Inns: Hôtel de Russie, in the Piazza; H. de Paradis, near the landing-place: both very fair.)

Monaco, the capital of the smallest European monarchy, is now reduced to the town itself and to a very small territory near the promontory on which it stands: seen from the N. it presents a good appearance, surrounded by fortifications, and flanked with batteries commanding its little bay; indeed the view as you look down upon the town, with its fortifications, towers, and quiet port, is peculiarly beautiful. Monaco contains a population of about 1500 souls, and is the only part of its prince's dominions over which he still retains any authority: his flag, a shield, en échiquier, supported by two monks, in allusion to the name of Monaco (Monachus), may be seen floating over its half-ruined castle. The town is garrisoned by French soldiers.

The principality of Monaco embraced the towns and territory of Mentone and Roccabruna: its history is obscure; it seems, however, to have been one of those allodial domains which escaped feudalization in the middle ages, and over which the Emperor had no authority. We find one Carlo Grimaldi in possession of this little sovereignty in the middle of the 14th cent., but this seems only to have been an Imperial restitution, for the dominion appears to have been granted as early as the 10th centy. to one of his ancestors by the Emperor Otho, for the part he took in the expulsion of the Saracens from Provence and this part of Liguria. The reigning family became extinct in the male line in 1731, in the person of Antonio Grimaldi, whose only daughter married into the French family of Thorigny, and from whom the present Prince of Monaco, Charles Honoré, of the Matignon family, and who has assumed the name and arms of the Grimaldis, is descended. Considerable discussion has arisen as to his being really the legitimate heir: by the exertions, however, of Prince Talleyrand, his title was acknowledged at the Congress of Vienna, in spite of the protests of the then existing Grimaldis, one of the most ancient families of Genoa, also now extinct in the male line, and the principality placed under the protection of the King of Sardinia, as suzerain. In 1848 the inhabitants of Mentone and Rocca-bruna, who had much to complain of the exactions and misgovernment of this petty sovereign, annexed themselves to the Sardinian monarchy, which was subsequently confirmed by a decree of King Charles Albert, and by placing Piedmontese garrisons at Mentone and Monaco. An attempt of the late prince to re-establish his authority at Mentone, in 1854, was met by his expulsion. France has stepped into Sardinia's shoes as regards the principality, having purchased it for 15,000,000 frs. in Feb. 1861, and this petty sovereign is allowed to preserve his castle and to exercise authority at Monaco alone.

The town of Monaco covers a considerable extent of ground. In the centre is a large place d'armes and the Prince's palace. The place is of remote antiquity, its foundation being attributed by some writers to the Greeks, even to Hercules, who undertook several expeditions to the coasts of Liguria; it is frequently alluded to as the Monæci Portus, and is noticed in the Antonine Itinerary, under the name of Portus Herculis Monæci. Lucan gives an accurate description of its situation:—

Quaque sub Herculeo sacratus nomine Portus
Urget rupe cava pelagus; non Corus in illum
Jus habet aut Zephyrus; solus sua littora turbat
Circius, et tuta prohibet statione Monæci.

Monaco was fortified by Louis XIV. for his protégé, the duke; the works are now falling into ruin. The principal ch., dedicated to Santa Barbara, contains the graves of some of the last Princes of Monaco.

A continuous descent of 8 miles leads from Turbia to Mentone; about 3 m. from the former we pass on the l. the village of Rocca-bruna, one of the former possessions of the Prince of Monaco, perched upon a mass of tertiary breccia, of which two large pyramids are seen standing amongst the houses of the village; there are remains of an old castle and of some mediæval towers and walls.

All this part of the country is highly romantic; every inch of ground capable of cultivation is attended to; gigantic olives rise to a considerable height on the mountain sides, and Mentone is approached by a handsome alley of plane-trees, on the l. of which, before entering the town, one of the ex-ducal residences is passed.

13 kil. Mentone. (Inns: Hôtel de Turin, with a fine view over the sea; H. Victoria, a new and excellent hotel; Grand Hôtel d'Angleterre, with a fine view over the sea and the Promenade des Palmiers or des Anglais; H. des 4 Nations, in the principal street; H. de la Grande Bretagne; H. de Paradis; the Pension Anglaise, kept by Clerici, and Miss Stafford's Pension, both well spoken of; H. de Londres, newly opened by Boggi; H. de la Paix, kept by Logeron, new.) Almost all the good houses are let furnished, Willoughby, the English grocer, being the principal agent. Mentone will be found the best resting-place for the first night on leaving Nice. This little city, of 6000 Inhab., is situated in a fertile district, and carries on a large trade in oil, oranges, lemons, the produce of its territory. It has a clean, neat appearance, and a look of more prosperity and comfort than most of the towns of the Riviera. French is generally spoken here, and the traveller, on arriving from the side of Genoa, will see the signboards for the first time in that language. On the hill above are the remains of an old castle and walls; at a short distance, under the Cape Martino, is its little port, resorted to by the coasters employed in carrying off its produce. The climate of Mentone is one of the mildest on the Ligurian seaboard, and perhaps better calculated for invalids than Nice, from the N.W. wind, or mistral, being seldom felt. It is surrounded by gardens of lemon and olive-trees, the former blossoming during the greater part of the winter. Of late Mentone has become a favourite residence for invalids, and numerous villas in the vicinity and houses in the town have been fitted up for their accommodation. Hitherto it has had the additional advantage of being more economical than Nice; but this is no longer the case, whilst its social resources are infinitely behind those of its larger neighbour, and the superiority of its climate, in consequence of its more relaxing tendency, having been perhaps much exaggerated.

The service of the Church of England is performed in a house near the Hôtel Victoria on Sundays and Wednesdays, by the resident clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Morgan. A ch. is building near the sea, for which the land has been given by a generous English lady, Mrs. Osborne.

Dr. Bottini is recommended as a good physician here. Dr. Bennett is the principal English medical man; he has resided for several years at Mentone, has written a book on its climate, and in fact has made its fortune; he will be the best person for English to consult. A good road (5 m.) leads from Mentone to Monaco, and forms a very agreeable drive.

[France.]

Mentone being a part of the territory ceded by Sardinia to France, it is now the frontier custom-house station on the side of Italy, where luggage is examined on coming from Genoa. Soon after leaving Mentone we enter the Italian territory; the road passes near to St. Louis; the Italian Custom-house is at the village of St. Mauro.

ROUTE 129.

AVIGNON TO NICE, BY AIX.

274 kilom. = 170 Eng. m.

The Branch Railway from the Rognac Stat. of the Avignon and Marseilles Line (Rte. 127) is by far the quickest way to Aix, so that this road is deserted and without post-horses.

The Rly. passes near Roquefavour Aqueduct.

The road on quitting Avignon runs along the rt. bank of the Durance (Druentia), a turbulent and ill-conducted stream, whose wide and desolate bed of gravel, laid bare in summer, bears so large a proportion to the reduced stream flowing in threads towards the Rhône, that a passing traveller has no idea of the considerable volume of water poured down by it even at that season from the supplies furnished by the melting snows of the Alps. In winter, swollen in a few hours to a torrent, it not only fills its channel, but often inundates its banks. Its waters are employed in irrigating the neighbouring land. One considerable Canal, called de Crillon, from the grandson of le Brave Crillon, who caused it to be made, is passed by our road near Bonpas. Here we cross the Durance by a long wooden bridge. A road runs hence to l'Isle, by which the traveller visiting Vaucluse (Rte. 125) may gain the route to Marseilles without returning from Avignon.

Near Bonpas is the village Noves, reputed the birthplace of Petrarch's Laura.

[Higher up the Durance, on its rt. bank, is Cavaillon (7000 Inhab.), where are some mutilated Roman remains, an Arch of Triumph, half buried in the ground, attributed to the Empr. Constantine, and a curious Romanesque Cathedral (St. Véran) of the 13th centy., with an apse of the 12th; attached to it is a curious Cloister.]

The Durance separates the Dépt. of Vaucluse from that of Bouches du Rhône.

18 St. Andéol. There is a cross-road from this to St. Remy, whose Roman monuments are described Rte. 127. It lies at the foot of the low chain of bare limestone hills visible to the S., extending from Tarascon to Orgon, called Les Alpines.

10 Orgon (Inn: Poste; dear, and not to be recommended). This is a town of 2000 Inhab., near the l. bank of the Durance, at the foot of a hill crowned by a ruined castle.

The Canal de Boisgelin, a branch of the Canal de Craponne, which conveys the fresh water of the Durance to the Rhône at Arles, fertilising the land on its passage, is here carried through the rock in a Tunnel, known as the Pierre Percée, of no great length.

Napoleon, on his way from Fontainebleau to Elba, was nearly torn in pieces here by the infuriated populace, and became so much alarmed as to disguise himself as a courier, and ride on before his own carriage.

The Canal de Craponne is crossed at 18 Pont Royal: there is a pretty fountain near the post-house.

Canal to Marseilles from the Durance.

This highly important hydraulic work was begun 1830, under the able direction of the engineer M. Montricher. The canal derives its waters from the river Durance at a point near to Pertuis, 28 m. in a direct line from Marseilles; but from the mountainous and difficult character of the country, its length extends to 60 m. before it reaches that city. The point of derivation, at Pertuis, is 614 ft. above the sea, between which place and Les Beaumes St. Antoine, near Marseilles, a length of 51 m., it falls to the level of 490 ft. (about 29 in. per m.) The section of this portion of the canal is calculated to pass the enormous quantity of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  million tons of water per day, or 198,000 gallons per minute. In its course three chains of limestone mountains are pierced by 45 tunnels, forming an aggregate length of  $8\frac{1}{2}$  m., and numerous intervening valleys are crossed by aqueducts. The Aqueduct of Roquefavour, over the ravine of the river Arc (about 5 m. from Aix), is a structure of gigantic dimensions, and well worthy the attention of the traveller. In admiring this work many will doubtless be surprised to find so large a volume of water, with such ample fall, still carried across on the same principles as those adopted by the Romans, instead of the modern substitution of iron pipes, which, owing to the facilities of the manufacture of iron, now so generally supersede the necessity of such constructions. As a work of art this aqueduct will not suffer in comparison with the famous Pont du Gard, which it surpasses in height; while it partakes much of the same character in design. The whole is carried out in excellent taste, but it is to be regretted that its principal arches are not of a more noble span. The entire elevation of the aqueduct is 262 ft. and its length 1287 ft. Its total cost has been 151,394*l.* sterling, and it contains 51,000 cubic yards of masonry. In the execution of the tunnels great difficulties were encountered owing to the hardness of the rock and the presence of large quantities of water, particularly in sinking the shafts of the tunnel of Taillades, which is above 2 m. in length, where the expense amounted to an average of 24*l.* each yard in depth. The total cost of these shafts, added to the expense of the tunnel, 22*l.* per yard, amounted to 57,200*l.* per mile. The whole work, from its origin to St.

Antoine, have cost 666,546*l.*, or 13,069*l.* per mile.

The object of this canal is to convey to the arid territory of Marseilles an almost unlimited supply of water for irrigation, and to the city a quantity sufficient for domestic and public distribution; for giving activity to various branches of industry which may require water-power; and for cleansing the tideless port, by throwing a large body of fresh water into it.

Perhaps no work of this description has been undertaken in modern times with a greater amount of hardy conception, and determination to complete it to its fullest extent, almost regardless of expense. It has already succeeded in converting bare rocky soil, almost unproductive hitherto, under the effects of a southern sun, to the condition of a teeming garden. The principal channel is continued from St. Antoine, but reduced in size one-third, and progressively diminishes, taking a circuit round Marseilles of 25 m., at an elevation of from 200 to 300 ft., commanding an area of many square miles. 5 other branch canals strike out of this, the aggregate lengths of which, including the main line and trunk canal to St. Antoine, amount to 97 m.

One of these branch canals is executed for the supply of the city of Marseilles, where it arrives at the level of 242 ft. above the sea.

Large filtering and service reservoirs are in the course of construction, and a considerable extent of iron pipeage for distributing the water is completed.

The entire cost of this important undertaking has exceeded 2,000,000*l.* sterling.

Lambesc is passed on the way to 14 St. Cannat, where our road is joined by that from Arles and Nismes. (Rte. 130.)

A hilly country succeeds, bare and bleak, but abounding in olives, and not interesting. A long and steep hill leads down to Aix; on its brow, close to the road, are subterranean Quarries of Gypsum, in connexion with which a great number of well-preserved fossil fish and insects are found. They occur in a fresh-water shale, whose laminations are so minute as to resemble the leaves of a book; on splitting them open the fossils are found between.

The Montagne de St. Victor, rising to the E. of Aix, is a conspicuous feature in the landscape.

16 Aix. (Inns: H. des Princes, the first house as you enter the Cours, good; Palais Royal, good.)

Aix is a flourishing town of 24,255 Inhab., agreeably situated in a basin surrounded by hills of abundant fertility, amidst almond-groves and plantations of olives, which furnish the much-esteemed sweet oil of Aix, the best produced in France.

Aix is connected with Paris and Marseilles by the branch rly. to Rognac, on the Paris and Marseilles line. Trains in 1 hr. to Rognac. (Rte. 127.)

The broad street called the Cours, by which you enter the town, is very striking; it is lined with handsome modern houses, including the chief hotels, closed at one end by an iron rail, and ornamented with 3 fountains, one of which bears a statue, by David, of le Bon Roi René, who is represented holding a bunch of Muscat grapes, which he introduced into France. During his reign Aix was the scene of gaiety and luxury, and the seat of art and literature. Within the modern and external quarters of the town, which assume somewhat the aspect of boulevards, is the Old Town, the ancient capital of Provence, the resort of the troubadours, the home of poetry, gallantry, and politeness; the theatre of the courts of love, and of gay fêtes and tournaments, during the reign of Raymond Berenger IV. as well as of René of Anjou. It still retains in part its feudal walls and gates, and its streets are narrow and foul. Here stands, surmounted by an octagon belfry, without a roof, the Cathedral of St. Sauveur, parts of which are very ancient, as the S. aisle of the nave, resting partly on a wall of Roman masonry, entered by a curious portal flanked by 2 Corinthian columns, probably antique, within which is a plain round arch. Attached to the aisle is a Baptistery, restored 1858, around which are arranged a number of antique pillars of polished granite, supporting round arches. These portions are all Romanesque, of the 12th centy., as well as the Cloister, remarkable for the variety of the columns supporting it. The central aisle is later, in the florid Gothic, and the N. aisle shows traces of the Italian style. The main W. entrance resembles in character somewhat the perpendicular English Gothic, overloaded with ornaments. The heads of the statues ornamenting it, destroyed at the Revolution, have been restored in the worst manner. The carved cedar-wood doors merit notice; they were executed 1503. The bas-reliefs upon them represent the 12 Theological Virtues (or the Sibyls), and the 4 Greater Prophets, below: the ornaments, a mixture of Gothic and Renaissance, are very delicately executed. These doors are covered with a sort of shutter to protect them, which the sacristan will remove for a small fee.

Within the ch. is a very good old picture of the Virgin and Child, on the top of a clump of trees, surrounded by a glory. Below, an angel appears to a shepherd, probably intended to represent Moses and the burning bush. On the outside of the two wings or shutters which cover the picture, painted in black and white, is the angel Gabriel appearing to the Virgin; and within are King René, and his second wife, Jeanne de Laval, both evidently portraits; he, attended by his patron saints, the Magdalen, St. Anthony, and St. Maurice; she, accompanied by St. John, St. Nicholas, and St. Catherine, the last a beautiful and most elevated countenance. This picture is attributed, like many others in different parts of France, to the pencil of King René; it is probably the work of a Flemish artist of the school of Van Eyck: its date must be posterior to 1455, as René did not marry Jeanne de Laval until that year. There are some marble bas-reliefs, which probably belonged to an antique sarcophagus, representing Christ and the Apostles, in the chapel of St.

Mitre, and others of the 15th centy. behind the altar of St. Maurice.

The Ch. of St. John includes some monuments to the Counts of Provence. The building is Gothic. The sacristy of the modern ch. of La Madeleine contains a curious painting of the Annunciation, attributed to Alb. Dürer.

The Museum contains numerous fragments of antiquity, inscriptions, mosaics, sculpture, bronzes, chiefly Roman, and found in the neighbourhood; including a torso of a youth, a tripod carved with a dancing female in relief, and a statue, said to be Hercules. The Pictures, as usual, are for the most part very mediocre; but among the modern works is a sample of Granet, a native of Aix.

The Public Library in the H. de Ville consists of 100,000 volumes, and possesses many letters of Mary Stuart.

In the Place de l'Hôtel de Ville is an old gateway with a clock bearing the date 1512. There are many pretty bits of carved stone, and other relics of ancient taste and splendour, in the filthy little closes of this most filthy town.

Aix, the Aqua Sextia of the Romans, derives its origin from a Roman colony sent hither to defend the Phocæan colonists of Marseilles from the attacks of the Salyes, in the year 630 after the building of Rome. Its warm mineral waters served probably as an inducement for them to select this spot. The hot saline spring still exists, but it is neither very strong nor in high repute.

A Bath-house is erected over the source in the suburb, and there are remains of vaults near it, said to be Roman. The water is so weak that the baths may with safety be taken as ordinary warm baths. The chief spring, called Source de Sextius, from the founder of the Roman colony, Caius Sextius Calvinus, has a temperature of 78° Fahr. At the beginning of last century it diminished greatly in quantity, in consequence of wells being dug at a place called Barret, 2 m. off, which brought to light, at a short distance from the surface, very copious springs, similar in nature to those in the town, but cold. The magistrates, however, ordered these sources to be stopped up; and 22 days after, the warm spring of Sextius had regained  $\frac{2}{3}$ ths of its original volume. It would appear, from this remarkable occurrence, that the source of heat must lie between the Source de Barret and that of Sextius.

Few provincial towns in France have produced a greater number of remarkable men than Aix: among them the learned Peiresc, the Marquis d'Argens, the naturalists Tournefort and Adanson, the painters J. B. Vanloo and Granet, General Miollis, and the author Mignet. M. Thiers "a fait son droit" at the university here, with him.

The commerce in the sweet oil of Aix has greatly fallen off since 1830, when an unusually severe frost killed a large proportion of the olive-trees in this neighbourhood.

Diligences to Le Luc; to Gap; Digne.

Railway by Roquefavour to Rognac Stat., to Marseilles and Avignon, described in Rte. 127.

The road to Nîmes passes under the precipitous heights of the Mont St. Victoire, and not far from the spot where Marius is supposed to have defeated the Cimbri, B.C. 125. 100,000 of the barbarians are stated to have been slain or taken prisoners, and the battlefield on the banks of the Arc was long known by the name "Campi Putridi," whence the modern village Pourrières.

12 Châteauneuf-le-Rouge.

11 Grande Pugère.

St. Maximin (H. du Var, indifferent) has a rather fine Gothic Ch., very lofty within, but destitute of a W. front, without transepts, but ending in 3 apses. It was founded by Charles II., King of Naples and Count of Provence, 1279, but seems chiefly of the 15th centy. The woodwork of the pulpit and sacristy is well preserved. Here are treasured up the bones of the Magdalen, over the altar; her skull, with a bit of flesh adhering to the forehead, where our Saviour touched it! her arm gilt, and the coffins of several saints, her servants; also some curious old vestments.

22 Tourves, a wretched town of 2800 Inhab., in the Dépt. du Var. No Inn.

There is a direct road from Tourves, by Roquevaire 30 kilom., Aubagne 8 kilom., to Marseilles 17 kilom.

12 Brignolles. (Inn: Hôtel Pippard, clean and comfortable.) In this town of 6000 Inhab. an extensive trade is carried on in dried fruits. The "prunes de Brignolles," though sold here, are in fact produced in the country around Digne (Basses Alpes.)

23 Le Luc. (Inn: Poste; indifferent.) At Le Luc (Stat.) this road reaches the Rly. from Marseilles to Nîce, and is described in Rte. 128.

ROUTE 130.

NÎMES TO MARSEILLES, BY BEAUCAIRE AND ARLES—RAILWAY.

Railway trains 4 times a-day, and 10 or 12 times during the fair of Beaucaire; it takes carriages. The journey to Beaucaire is performed in 35 min.; the distance 25 kilom. = 16 m. This railroad is carried through olive-grounds and vineyards, and, on approaching Beaucaire, is terraced along the shoulder of a hill overlooking the muddy Rhône, and the canal leading to Cette. It passes 1 or 2 small tunnels and cuttings.

[The post-road, direct from Nîmes to Arles, crosses the Canal de Beaucaire and the Rhône, by

17 Bellegarde (about 7 m. S. of this lies St. Gilles).]

15 ARLES, and avoiding Beaucaire altogether.]

24 Beaucaire Stat. (Inn: H. du Grand Jardin; tolerable). Here are no post-horses; and it is necessary to cross the Rhône to 15 Tarascon Stat., described in Rte. 127.

A viaduct of 7 arches of cast iron carries the railroad over the Rhône to Tarascon Stat.

The railroad hence to Marseilles is described Rte. 127.

SECTION VII.

DAUPHINÉ.*

ROUTE	PAGE	ROUTE	PAGE
131 Lyons to Grenoble, by Bourgoin (Rail).—Excursion to the Grande Chartreuse . . .	525	136 Grenoble to Nice, by Digne and Grasse . . .	538
132 Valence on the Rhône to Grenoble and Chambéry, through the Valley of Grésivaudan . .	532	137 Grenoble to Briançon, by Bourg d'Oysans and the Col de Lauteret, and by the Mont Genève to Susa.—Excursion up the Val St. Christophe . .	539
134 Grenoble to Marseilles, by Gap and Sisteron.—Protestant Valleys of Dauphiné . . .	534	139 Gap to Briançon, by Embrun.—Protestant Valleys (continued): Val Queyras, Val d'Arvieux, and Val Fressinière . .	543
135 Grenoble to Marseilles, by the Croix Haute . . .	538

INTRODUCTION.—SKETCH OF THE COUNTRY.

THIS province has been as much neglected by travellers as many other parts of France, yet its scenery is of first-rate beauty and grandeur. "I saw nothing among the Alps," says Arthur Young, "that offered such pleasing scenes as the N. parts of Dauphiné." The valley of the Isère is made up of a series of beautiful scenes, and the part of it about Grenoble, the deservedly vaunted Vallée de Grésivaudan, combines with the mountain forms of Switzerland the luxuriant vegetation and umbrageous foliage which usually characterise the S. slope of the Alps.

The Grande Chartreuse is rarely visited by the English since Gray and Horace Walpole first drew their attention to it, yet the approach to it from St. Laurent is by a gorge as fine as any in the Alps. Grenoble itself is a striking city in a very romantic situation; and now that the railway to Grenoble is made there are few places better deserving a visit. The carriage-road, begun by Napoleon, and at length finished, from Grenoble to Briançon, by Bourg d'Oysans and the Col of the Lauteret, lays open a magnificent Alpine pass.

* The name Dauphin (Delphinus, whence Dauphiné), borne by the eldest son of the King of France down to 1430, is of unknown origin, but belonged to the Counts of Vienne, who also carried a dolphin as their coat of arms, from the 11th or 12th century down to 1349, when Count Humbert II., the last native Dauphin, made over his title and domains to the eldest son of Philip of Valois.

Above all, Dauphiné includes, in the block of mountains situated between the Romanche, the Durance, and the Drac, the highest mountains in France, that is to say, 13 peaks between 13,000 and 14,000 ft. high, 17 peaks between 12,000 and 13,000 ft. high, from which descend more than 100 glaciers. The loftiest of these are—1. The Ecrins, 13,462 ft.; 2. The Meige, or Aiguille du Midi de la Grave, 13,081 ft.; 3. The Pelvoux, 12,973 ft. Yet, though the loftiest summits in the Alpine chain between Mont Blanc and the Mediterranean, and considerably higher than Monte Viso, they rarely appear on maps and in books of geography even published in France. Several members of the Alpine Club have visited this district since 1861, and have ascended some of the peaks. Previous to this, almost the only persons who had visited it, besides engineers employed in the vicinity, were M. Elie de Beaumont, and Prof. Forbes, of Edinburgh, who have examined it geologically.* The scenery around Mont Pelvoux will well repay the trouble of a visit: it is of a sublime but desolate and savage character. It is best approached from Bourg d'Oisans, whence a path runs up Val Christophe to Bérarde, a desolate village at its base, buried by snow 7 months of the year, and hemmed in by precipices, with the scantiest vegetation around, and beyond it moraines and the glacier of la Pilatte or Condamine. Mont Pelvoux is surrounded by other lofty peaks, all inclining their heads to him as in homage to the monarch of the French Alps, but presenting sides nearly precipitous, surrounding the desolate valley of Bérarde as it were with a colossal circus 36 miles in circumference, forming an arrangement which has been compared to the petals of a flower.

The Valleys of the Hautes Alpes, including the Val Fressinière to the S. of Mont Pelvoux, and the Vals Queyras and Pragelas, running E. from Embrun and Mont Dauphin towards Monte Viso, although destitute of roads and accessible only by the pedestrian, will be explored with a double interest, not only for their noble scenery, but also as the refuge of persecuted Protestants, the kindred of the Albigenes and Vaudois, and also in recent times as the scene of the labours of the virtuous pastor Felix Neff.

Inns and Accommodation for Travellers can scarcely be said to exist in this wild district. Travellers must be fully prepared to rough it. Not only are the inns in these remote valleys mere cabarets, but they exceed in filth and vermin those of any part of Europe, and are nearly destitute of proper food. Visitors should provide themselves with tea, chocolate, portable soup, biscuits; and those who intend to ascend peaks, and cross difficult passes, had better provide ropes, ice-hatchets, and a bag to sleep in.

The native Guides, with few exceptions, are little to be depended on. Explorers should bring with them guides from Savoy.

Maps.—Until the French Government Survey (Feuille de Briançon) be published, Gen. Bourcet's 'Carte du Haut Dauphiné,' 1760, in nine large sheets (30 frs.), is the best and only map.

Gilly's 'Life of Felix Neff,' of which there is a pocket edition, will be read with interest amidst the scenes of his ministry. Musgrave's 'Pilgrimage into Dauphiné' is the latest work on the country, and very entertaining.

Joanne's 'Itinéraire du Dauphiné,' 2 vols.

John Ball's 'Guide to the Western Alps, 1863,' devotes nearly 50 pages to the Alps of Dauphiné.

* See Forbes's 'Norway and its Glaciers, with Excursions in Dauphiné,' &c.—1853.

ROUTE 131.

LYONS TO GRENOBLE, BY BOURGOIN (RAIL).—EXCURSION TO THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

Lyons to	Miles.
Bourgoin . . . . .	26
Voiron . . . . .	66
Voreppe . . . . .	73
Grenoble . . . . .	81

131 kilom. = 81 Eng. m. 4 trains daily in 4 hrs.

Terminus in Lyons, La Perrache. The Rhone is crossed by a bridge, and near Fort Columbiér detaches itself from the rly. to Marseilles.

12 k. St. Priest Stat. Here is a Château of mixed styles.

22 k. Heyrieux Stat.

26 k. St. Quentin Stat. Here are iron-mines and furnaces.

The Castle of Fallavier, close to a small lake, belonged to the Princes of Orange.

La Verpillière Stat., on the old post-road.

Bourgoin Stat. (Inn: H. de l'Europe) 4850 Inhab. The Bourbre river turns several mills, paper, cotton, &c. Extensive marshes and peat bogs here.

The rly. is carried up the valley of the Bourbre.

La Tour du Pin Stat. (Inns: H. Chocat; Poste), an industrious town of 2700 Inhab.

St. André du Gaz Stat.

Virieu Stat., a village overlooked by a well-preserved feudal castle, belonging to M. de St. Ferreol.

The rly. now passes from the valley of the Bourbre, over the summit level, into that of the Isère, skirting a small lake, not far from Le Grand Lemps.

Rives Junct. Stat. (Inn: Poste), a town of 2500 Inhab., on the Fure, which sets in motion paper and silk mills. There are numerous steel furnaces here.

Voiron Stat. (Inns: H. du Midi; du Commerce; Poste), a thriving town of 9600 Inhab., where great quantities of sailcloth and other coarse cloths are made. From this or from Voreppe travellers may most advantageously make the excursion to the Grande Chartreuse. A Diligence runs from Voiron to St. Laurent du Pont.

At Moirans Stat. we enter the beautiful valley of the Isère. The portion of it extending upwards from Voreppe to Chapareillan is called the Valley of Grésivaudan, and is deservedly celebrated as one of the most productive and beautiful in France. In its culture and its different kinds of produce, it is scarce surpassed by those luxuriant valleys stretching down into Italy on the S. side of the Alps. Up to the point where the mountains rise in bare precipitous rocks, or are girt with dark forests, every portion is constantly subject to tillage, and produces a vast variety of crops. Besides corn and clover, hemp, for which the valley is celebrated, grows often to the height of 15 feet. Orchards, chestnuts, and mulberry-trees rise above these; and the vine also, very abundant, instead of being allowed to crawl along the ground, or being clipped like a currant-bush, slings its graceful festoons from tree to tree, or is trained along wooden trellises. The roads are lined and shaded with trees, and it is difficult to see across the valley for the dense screen of foliage, but it hides the somewhat arid peaks and ridges from view, and thus modifies an unpleasing feature. Industry, abundant irrigation, and manure, have brought the whole to the condition of a luxuriant garden, and a great portion of the bottom is carpeted with meadows.

Voreppe Stat., a flourishing village abounding in inns, chiefly resorted to by waggons, of which the Petit Paris seems the best.

[THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

"Per invias rupes, fera per juga,
Clivisque præruptos, sonantes
Inter aquas, nemorumque noctem."
GRAY.

"There are certain scenes that would awe an atheist into belief without the help of other argument. I am well persuaded St. Bruno was a man of no common genius to choose such a place for his retirement."—Gray's Letters.

The Grande Chartreuse may be visited either from Voiron,  $\frac{3}{4}$  hr. by rail, from Grenoble, or from Voreppe, by taking a char or diligence, which runs 3 times a day, to St. Laurent, about 10 m. from either. Abundance of vehicles at about 10 frs.

The road from Voiron is hilly but good. It ascends the steep hill on which the town is situated, the road commanding a fine view up the Grésivaudan valley. It then crosses a valley and enters a somewhat grand pass between bold and rugged crags. The pass leads into the valley of the Guiers, which is crossed to St. Laurent.

The road from Voreppe to St. Laurent runs up a side valley shaded by walnut-trees, ascending steeply at first. At a distance of about 6 m., where the valley has widened out, the road from Voiron falls in, and 4 m. farther lies

St. Laurent du Pont, a small village, 1500 ft. above the sea, burnt down 1854. (Inns: Tirard;—H. Cadot;—Cognin;—Tartavel.) Here the traveller bound to the Chartreuse must turn out of the road to Les Echelles. Chars, mules, or horses may be hired here; horses 4 frs. 50 c., and 2 frs. for the man. A guide is not necessary. The ascent to the convent takes about 2½ hrs., and is perhaps more interesting than the convent itself.

Since the rly. was completed, and the char-road to the convent made, great numbers of French make the excursion, but very few English find their way. Male visitors are lodged in the convent, female visitors in an adjoining building, but in neither will meat or fowls be found; and those who cannot content themselves with Carthusian fare, viz. soupe maigre, bread, omelet, herbs, coffee, &c., must take up food for themselves.

The road was formerly rugged and scarcely practicable for horses. Now, however, a tolerable char-road has been made (1855), in order to bring down the timber and the charcoal produced by the forests which cover the mountains. The road follows the Guiers Mort, and is at first bounded by gentle slopes covered with pasture below, and above with wood; but it soon contracts into a wooded gorge, not exceeded for picturesque grandeur among the Alps. At Fourvoirie, a little more than a mile (30 min.) from St. Laurent, near an iron-forge, the mountains close together; the river, hemmed in by vertical precipices of vast height, is spanned by a single-arched bridge, and gushes forth from between the smoothed rocks with the swiftness of a cataract, in one deep sea-green flood. The jaws of the gorge seem barely rent asunder sufficiently to allow the stream to pass. The space cut out for the road between the torrent and the mountain precipice is occupied by a gateway, a pointed arch, faced by a modern and less picturesque one. It originally served for defence, and marked the limit of the domain of the monastery, or of the "Desert of St. Bruno" as it was styled. The bridge, the forge, the gateway, the river, and the precipices combine to form a most romantic natural picture, which will gratify the artist's eye, and has often employed the pencil. Within this grand portal the sides of the defile, up which the road is carried, are rocks and precipices of limestone many hundred feet high; but their savageness is subdued by the dense foliage which lines them, so that it is a ride through a forest the whole way. The varied combinations of rock, tree, and river,—of rocks at a vast height overhead, inclining over the tree-tops and the wayfarer,—of the torrent foaming and rushing in the depths below,—its constant roar, as it frets and worms its way, indicating its presence, even when lost to view by the bends of the gorge or the intervention of rocks and trees,—and the varied forms and tints of the foliage, especially in autumn,—redeem the defile from all monotony. There is no habitation except at one saw-mill between Fourvoirie and the convent. The original road, though narrow, must have cost the monks much, and could only have been executed in a long time, and with great labour, being cut out of the rock great part of the way. After the Revolution, however, which ruined the monks, it went to decay also, and in places was barely passable. Before the road was remade no wheeled cart could pass, and the timber cut in the surrounding forests, and sawn into planks in the mills on the Guiers, was transported down the valley slung with ropes by the middle to the sides of mules. The deals thus nicely poised "traversed" like the needle of a compass, and at every movement of the animal performed segments of circles, sweeping the road and all that was upon it. It was by no means agreeable to meet a train of beasts so laden, with a precipice on one side of the narrow path, and a wall of rock on the other. It is now a curious sight to see the huge trees brought down the road, and skilfully taken round the corners, by a man who works the hind wheels as if they were a rudder. After about an hour's walk you cross the Guiers by a fine skew bridge, 60 ft. span, Pont de St. Bruno, to the rt. bank. The monks' old bridge, Pont Péraut, remains a picturesque object, a little higher up the stream. The new road, striking out a line for itself, has obliterated or left on one side all remains of a second Gateway, jammed in as it were between the precipice and a colossal obelisk of limestone (l'Œillette), beyond which, in former times, no female could pass,—such was the rigid regulation of St. Bruno. A guard of soldiers was anciently posted here to keep the pass. Soon afterwards the new road is carried through several tunnels; the old road used to ascend high into the woods above. At a little distance further the mountains separate, and from the height you look down upon their sloping sides, covered with nearly unbroken forest, stretching over several minor valleys. The road then turns to the l., still through woods, but slightly thinned, though the charcoal-burners are habitually settled in them. At the end of a ride of 2½ hrs. the traveller reaches umbrageous woods, with only small patches of meadow and little or no level ground about it, being quite hemmed in by wooded heights. The position is not grand, but solitary, desolate, and monotonous, from the confined prospect. The convent is a huge unpicturesque pile, having neither age nor architecture to recommend it, since, owing to repeated conflagrations, which destroyed 6 or 8 previous buildings, very little of it is older than the 17th centy. Externally, its tent-like roofs of slate, higher than the body of the building which they cover, are its most conspicuous feature. Various straggling outhouses surround the main edifice. One of them was formerly an infirmary, but has now been devoted to the use of ladies, and is kept by Sœurs de Charité. In the eating-hall of this building both sexes are allowed to assemble, but all male visitors are obliged to sleep at the convent, whilst females, though no longer restricted to the limits of the gateway, are not permitted to set foot in the convent itself, and must sleep at the Infirmary in plain but clean rooms. The male visitors are lodged within the convent in little cells provided with a bed, a chair, a table, jug, and basin, and a sort of small altar, and take their food in halls, called Hall of France, Hall of Burgundy, &c. Strangers are not admitted between evening and morning, and are not allowed to remain more than two days. The hours are 9½ a.m., 1 p.m., and 4½ p.m. The doors of convent and infirmary are closed at 9½ at night. A charge is made for board and lodging, but it appears to be so small that a further donation should be given. Male visitors are received by one of the fathers, called le Père Procureur, who is absolved from the obligation of silence, and are conducted along the cold corridors, one of which is 660 ft. long, and includes part of a Gothic cloister, perhaps of the 15th centy., to the burial-ground, a simple enclosure without tombstones. The graves of the Generals of the order alone were formerly marked by stone crosses, but these were destroyed at the Revolution. When one of the monks dies, a cross of lath is set up over his head; but it soon disappears. Each father has 3 small rooms and a garden to himself, in which a crucifix and a skull invite him to prayer and the contemplation of death. The cells are lined with plain deals, and furnished with a bed, a chair, a table, a crucifix, bookshelves, and a working bench, with tools, &c. There is a library of about 6000 volumes, tolerably well selected; the old and valuable collection of MSS., &c., was at the revolution carried to the public library at Grenoble. The chapel is a lofty apartment, quite plain, in which service is performed by night and day. Most persons will feel a curiosity to attend the midnight mass. There is, however, nothing to see, as the chapel is almost in darkness, and nothing to hear but a continued monotonous chant; and after 10 minutes of it the visitor is generally ready to return to his bed. The chapterhouse has been painted with portraits of the Generals of the order, of no great merit, and contains a marble statue of St. Bruno. The number of monks (pères) is now reduced to 40, who are dressed in white cloth, and 18 servitors (frères) clad in brown, and there are about 60 servants. The pères are usually men of superior rank, and pay on admission. The frères are employed as carpenters, &c., and in superintending the servants. By the original rule the pères were not allowed to speak, and remained in their cells, except on Sundays and Saints' days, when they dined, as they still do, in common, but without speaking. Now, however, on Thursdays they are allowed to walk about together in the mountains, which is called "le Spaciment," and are not prohibited from answering when addressed by strangers. Previous to 1789 the monks were owners of St. Laurent du Pont and of many other villages; their tenants were well off, the ground well tilled, and they gave away much in charity. They were excellent landlords, managing their estates prudently, and were just to their tenants. The convent was stripped of its vast possessions at the Revolution, and escaped being sold only because no purchaser could be found for it; but the woods around, forfeited at that time, still belong to the government, and the monks now pay a small rent for the convent and its grounds, and for the right of cutting wood in the forest, and of pasturage for their cows, of which they have a large number of excellent breeds. Their principal revenue is derived from the cattle, and from the sale of certain liqueurs and medical compounds of great reputation, prepared at the convent. The yellow or white liqueur is excellent, and can also be purchased at Paris, and of Morel, Piccadilly.

La Grande Chartreuse, the Escorial of Dauphiné, seated at a height of 4268 ft. above the sea, shrouded in

The Grande Chartreuse (so named from a neighbouring village) was founded in 1084 by St. Bruno, who was descended from an opulent family of Cologne. The legendary histories of him relate the apparition to him of a learned doctor of Paris, who, as the funeral procession was proceeding to the place of burial, burst from his coffin, exclaiming, "I am accused by the just judgment of God." This occurrence sank so deeply on St. Bruno's mind, that he, with 6 friends, determined to quit the world and retire into the wilderness. At first his only habitation was in the clefts of the rock, and the spot was inhabited at that time only by wild beasts. The first cells were higher up than the present convent, near the chapel of St. Bruno. They and many of their inhabitants were swept away by an avalanche. The first convent, on the actual site of the present one, was built of wood by the 5th prior, Guignes, who died 1137. He first committed to writing the rules of the order, one of which runs thus:—"Nous ne permettons jamais aux femmes d'entrer dans notre enceinte; car nous savons que ni le sage, ni le prophète, ni le juge, ni l'hôte de Dieu, ni ses enfans, ni même le premier modèle sort de ses mains, n'ont pu échapper aux caresses ou aux tromperies des femmes. Qu'on se rappelle Salomon, David, Samson, Loth, et ceux qui ont pris les femmes qu'ils avoient choisies, et Adam lui-même; et qu'on sache bien que l'homme ne peut cacher du feu dans son sein sans que ses vêtements soient embrasés, ni marcher sur des charbons ardents sans se brûler la plante des pieds." The order at one time possessed nearly 200 convents; the Charterhouse in London was one of them. Pictures of many are suspended in one of the corridors. The monks claim the honour of having planted the present extensive forests, and certainly the old writers call the spot a desert, and it would seem that the forest cannot have been in existence at the time of St. Bruno, otherwise the avalanche could not have reached the establishment.

It is a pretty walk of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m., rather more than an hour to go and return, through the woods and rocks to the Chapel and Fountain of St. Bruno. The present chapel was built in 1640, and is not worth notice.

Grand Som (8740 ft.), the highest peak in the neighbourhood, can be ascended in about 3 hrs. steep climbing. Guides and mules at the convent. The path turns off just before reaching the Chapel of St. Bruno, and passing between rocks reaches in 1 hr. 45 min., the plateau of the Bergerie. The rocks behind this are scaled to a sort of ridge, whence a grassy slope leads to the summit; there is a fine view extending to Lyons, Mont Blanc, Mont Pelvoux, &c. Several rugged mule-tracks lead from the convent: a. By the chapel, the Col de la Ruchère, and Le Trou, to les Echelles, in 4 hrs. 45 min. b. To Chambéry, by the Porte du Sapey, in 9 or 10 hours' walk. Descending the valley, or keeping to the l. on the meadows, till the Guiers Mort is reached, the course of the river is followed to the Porte du Sapey, a narrow passage leading to the village of St. Pierre, whence the valley of Entremont is gained, leading down to Chambéry. There is another path to Entremont, by the Bergerie.

The return to Grenoble may be made on foot or horseback in about 7 hrs., by Sapey, descending to the building called La Courrierie, following the stream of the Guiers Mort through a gorge once shut by the Porte de l'Enclos, thence ascending the Col du Porte, to descend upon Sapey, Maison Pilon (fine view over vale of Isère), and Tronche.]

Beyond Voreppe we pass through the most picturesque portion of the Vale of Grésivaudan, here bounded by mountains precipitous as well as lofty. The road winds under such a one near the village of La Buisserade, which is particularly imposing. Under the dark woods and heights on the opposite bank lies Sassenage, and near this the river Drac pours itself into the Isère.

Little is seen of Grenoble, at a distance, in approaching from this side. A tall mountain buttress, nearly precipitous, projects forward to the Isère, leaving barely space for the road at its foot, and hides the town from view. This shoulder of rock has been recently studded with fortifications, rising one above another nearly to the clouds, 918 ft. above the river. They took more than 10 years to construct; the natural strength of the height having been increased by blasting and scarping the rock with gunpowder. The position of this fortress, the **Citadel* of Grenoble, at an angle in the valley where the Isère makes a bend, and opposite the opening of the Vale of the Drac, gives it the command of these valleys, which would be swept by its guns. The chief work is the crowning battery, to defend the place in the rear, where it is surmounted by the superior heights of the Mont Rachet. It is called La Bastille, from an old feudal castle, a bit of which remains in the midst of modern works. It is worth while to ascend the hill of the Bastille, the Ehrenbreitstein of the Isère, for the sake of the view. It embraces the town of Grenoble at your feet, laid open as on a plan, surrounded by its stellular ramparts, on a flat and fertile tongue of land watered by canals, bounded on one side by the Isère and by the Drac on the other. The courses of both rivers may be traced from their junction upwards; that of the Isère is very winding, and its valley is terminated by the snowy mass of Mont

Blanc. In front stretches the straight road leading to Vizille, and pointing to the mouth of the valley of the Romanche, bounded by mountains of very picturesque outline.

Permission to enter the fortress must be obtained from the commandant at the little citadel in the town.

At the foot of the rock, crowned by the Bastille, stands the narrow suburb of St. Laurent, wedged in between precipices and the river. One side of its confined street has recently been pulled down and converted into a cheerful quay.

St. Laurent occupies the site of the original Gaulish town, called Cularo, mentioned in the letters of Plancus to Cicero: it changed its name, out of compliment to the Emperor Gratian, into that of Gratianopolis, whence Grenoble.

A handsome stone bridge, and a suspension wire bridge, replacing an old one of wood, connect this suburb with Grenoble.

GRENOBLE Station, on the l. bank of the Isère, between it and the Drac.—Inns: H. des Trois Dauphins, Rue Montorge; rather dirty: here Napoleon lodged on his return from Elba; the room he occupied (No. 10) remains nearly in the same state.—H. de l'Europe, comfortable and reasonable, on the Grande Place.—H. des Ambassadeurs; civil people.

Grenoble, formerly capital of Dauphiné, and now of the Dépt. de l'Isère, is a fortified city of 32,800 Inhab., pleasingly situated on the Isère, in a basin of great fertility and beauty, surrounded by high mountains, within which the Romanche and the Drac unite with the Isère, joining it a little below Grenoble. The full and rapid flood of the Isère, which is here confined within handsome quays, lined with fine houses, contributes much to the beauty of the town. Grenoble has been much improved and enlarged of late, and it is proposed to extend it considerably, and reconstruct the fortifications around it, so as to enclose a much larger space of ground. It has scarcely any fine public building: its churches are not remarkable: the Ca*thedral* (Notre Dame), a heavy mixture of ancient and modern masonry, having been ravaged in the 16th centy. by the Baron des Adrets, contains in the choir a Gothic Tabernacle (date 1457), of graceful sculpture of rich foliage and minute tracery carved in stone. Under St. Laurent is an ancient Crypt with 28 marble piers.

St. André contains the monument of the Chevalier Bayard; whether his body rests within is uncertain.

One of the most pleasing features of the town is its Public Garden, on the l. bank of the Isère, shaded with umbrageous trees, planted with flowers, and set out with orange-trees in pots. It was originally laid out by the Duc de Lesdiguières, and attached to his palace, now the Préfecture.

In the midst of the neighbouring Place St. André is a bronze colossal Statue of Bayard, the "chevalier sans peur et sans reproche," who was born in the valley of the Isère, and buried in the neighbouring church of the Minimes, (!) some say in the cathedral, where there is an inscription to his memory. It is meant to represent him in the moment of death, mortally wounded, kissing the cross formed by the hilt of his sword; but it is theatrical, and unworthy of the hero. It stands opposite the Palais de Justice, originally the palace of the Dauphin, the most interesting old building in the town, retaining a Gothic oriel, and other portions in the style of the Renaissance. Several apartments have carved roof, rich woodwork, and elaborate chimneypieces. The Place Grenette is the largest open space in the town: in it are the chief cafés and diligence offices. There are several handsome Fountains; observe one on the quay—a Lion crushing a Snake.

Attached to the College is a Museum, in which may be seen some busts which pretend to represent the old Dauphins. Here is a large collection of paintings, mostly mediocre: the best seem to be a portrait by Philip de Champagne of Jean Duvergier de Hauranne, a member of Port-Royal; a Venetian in Velvet, by Tintoret (!); the Entry of the Emperor Sigismund into Mantua; a sketch by J. Romano; Pope Julius II., do. (?); St. Gregory, with Prudence and Force, by Rubens (or one of his school). Here are 2 bronze lions of Byzantine art, brought from an abbey at St. Marcellin.

The library is unusually fine for a provincial collection—nearly 80,000 vols. and 1200 MSS.—and contains some books brought from the Grande Chartreuse; also portraits of some of the celebrities of Grenoble—Vaucanson the mechanician, and Dolomieu, with busts of Mably and Condillac.

In the cabinet of natural history may be seen specimens of the minerals of Dauphiné,—its huge rock crystals, 2 feet long and 1 foot broad, its axinite, anatase, &c., with silver ore from Allevard, and gold from La Gardette, both mines near Bourg d'Oysans, no longer worked: but the collection is dirty and ill-arranged. Here are stuffed specimens of the wild animals from the neighbouring Alps, the bear and wolf.

A Museum of Natural History has been built on the S. side of the town, and merits notice.

Diligences daily to Chambéry (2); to Gap; to Bourg d'Oysans.—N.B. The gates of Grenoble are closed at 11 P.M., and there is no means of gaining admittance except an order from the commandant. Those who are shut out must sleep where they are, and there is no inn outside.

No one should omit to ascend the fortifications on the rt. bank of the Isère (Fort Rabot and the Bastille): the view from them is one of the finest in Dauphiné.

Though Grenoble itself is deficient in objects of curiosity, the country around has great beauty, and many interesting excursions may be made from it: the chief of these are,

1. To the Grande Chartreuse (described above). There are two ways, either a, by rail to Voreppe, and by diligence (3 times a day in summer) to St. Laurent du Pont, by which one can go in the morning and return in the evening; or b, by Sapey, a mule-path, by which the convent may be reached in 7 hrs. The most interesting part of the excursion, however, is the wooded gorge on the other road, between St. Laurent du Pont and the convent.

2. To Sassenage, a beautifully situated village on the opposite side of the Drac, in the midst of thick woods, and falling waters, and fine pasturages, producing an excellent cheese, resembling that of Roquefort. The distance is about 5 m.; a one-horse carriage may be hired in Grenoble to go and return for 5 francs. It is a pleasant drive. A turning to the rt. leads out of La Cours, the long avenue extending from Grenoble to Vizille, and conducts you to the iron suspension-bridge over the Drac. The river is here retained within stout dykes, originally the work of Lesdiguières; the plain is intersected with canals for the sake of irrigation. A small streamlet, a tributary of the Furon, which traverses the valley of Sassenage, bursts out of a hole in the limestone mountain above the village. The rock is pierced by several small caves, rather difficult of access.

3. Château Bayard, the birthplace of the model of French chivalry, is about 27 m. up the valley of the Isère, on the l. bank. (See Rte. 132.)

4.  $7\frac{1}{2}$  m. from Grenoble, at the mouth of the gorge of the Sonnant, is the fine feudal castle Uriage; and near it Mineral Baths, which have given rise to the construction of a range of buildings, arranged in a square, devoted to the Baths, and to numerous Inns: H. du Cercle; Grand Hotel; H. des Bains, &c. Omnibuses several times a day from Grenoble. The Castle, rising on a height 300 ft. above the baths, was built by the family of Alleman, and now belongs to M. de St. Ferreol, who has converted it into a sort of Museum. The waters are sulphureous, rising near a junction of the granite with the lias rock, at a temperature of 70° Fahren.

The ascent of the Belledonne (9780 ft.) may be made from this; it is a very hard and long one day's work.

5. La Tour St. Venin, on the hill of Parisot, on the l. bank of the Drac, classed among the wonders of Dauphiné, from a vulgar belief that no poisonous reptiles can live on it, is a fine point of view, 4 or 5 m. from Gre-noble, commanding the junction of the valleys of the Isère and Drac. It appears to have been a chapel or hermitage, attached to a castle now swept away, dedicated to St. Verin; and that a misprint or mispronunciation gave rise to the present name and to the vulgar fable.

The staple manufacture of Grenoble is that of leather gloves: it is the most considerable in France: 6 million pairs, worth 500,000*l.* at least, are made annually. They are made of the skins of kid, the best sorts of which are obtained from Annonay, of chamois (beaver), and of lamb. Much leather also comes from Romans and Milhau. The gloves are chiefly sewed by the hand by women, between 14,000 and 15,000 being employed in and about the town in cutting out and sewing; machinery is also employed.

Grenoble was the first place which openly received Napoleon on his return from Elba. After having been joined at La Mûre by the troops sent out against him, and still nearer at hand by Labedoyère, he approached the walls, which were strongly guarded by troops and cannon. Although the garrison dared not disobey their commandant by opening the gates, yet not a shot was fired on him; he was permitted to come up to the gates and direct against them a howitzer to blow them open. Once within the walls he was received both by citizens and soldiers with the utmost enthusiasm, and borne in triumph, amidst shouts of "Vive l'Empereur !" to the Hôtel des Trois Dauphins. The Bourbonist governor was obliged to decamp, leaving him at the head of a force of 7000 men. Before the Emperor retired to rest the gates of the Porte de Bonne, by which he had entered, which at the same moment were burst open by the peasants without and the townsfolk within—to use his own words, "A Grenoble je n'ai eu que frapper la porte avec ma tabatière pour qu'elle s'ouvrit,"—were unhinged and brought before his windows by the young men of the town, instead of the keys, of which they could not obtain possession to present them to him.

ROUTE 132.

VALENCE ON THE RHÔNE TO GRENOBLE AND CHAMBERY, THROUGH THE VALLEY OF GRÉSIVAUDAN.

147 kilom. = 92 Eng. m.

Diligence daily in 11 hours. Railway in progress.

The ascent of the valley of the Isère is a very agreeable journey, the country being alike remarkable for its beauty and fertility. The river is spanned by 12 or 15 iron-wire suspension-bridges, erected for the most part within a few years. Our road crosses it at Bourg du Péage by a stone bridge.

18 Romans (Inn: Coupe d'Or!), a thriving town of 9972 Inhab., in a picturesque situation, still partly surrounded by ramparts and flanking towers, one of which leans considerably out of the perpendicular. The ch. of St. Antoine is said to be a curious Gothic edifice.

At this place the last Dauphin, or native prince of Dauphiné, Humbert II., having lost his only son, who leaped from his nurse's arms out of a window of the castle of Mazard into the Isère, and was drowned, signed his abdication, 1349, by which he resigned his domains to Philippe de Valois, on condition that they should be an appanage of the heir to the French crown, and that he should bear the title of Dauphin.

18 Fauries, in the Dépt. de l'Isère.

At La Sône, where the Isère is crossed by a wire bridge, is an old castle, now turned into a silk-mill, part of the machinery for which was made by Vaucanson, who was a native of Dauphiné.

14 St. Marcellin. Inns: Poste;—Petit Paris, not good. This little town, of 3344 Inhab., is situated near the Isère. On the height above it, called Mont Surjeu, is a fine terrace walk, commanding one of the best views of the valley.

11 L'Allegrie.

From the top of the descent to Tullins, commencing at the inn of Morette, a beautiful view opens out over the valley of the Isère, and the serpentine windings of the river, backed by the chain of Alps, and by the Grand Som, which surmounts the Grande Chartreuse, in front. The charms of the landscape, the diversified nature of the ground, the variety of crops, the number and denseness of the trees, and the luxuriant productiveness of the valley, one of the very finest and richest in France, appear to be constantly increasing as far as 11 Tullins (Inn: La Poste), a town of 3500 Inhab., only remarkable for its situation in a spot teeming with fertility. This is a great market for hemp grown in the vicinity.

The stream of the Fure, crossed a little beyond Tullins, is studded with iron-forges.

At Moirans, Stat., a town of 2500 Inhab., we join the railway from Lyons to Grenoble (Rte. 131), and enter the valley of Grésivaudan at 13 Voreppe Stat., which, with the excursion thence to the Grande Chartreuse, and the remainder of the route to 14 GRENOBLE Stat., are described in Rte. 131.

There are two roads up the valley of the Isère above Grenoble.

a. On the rt. bank of the river is the post-road, and the shortest way to Chambéry. It is carried along a sort of terrace at the roots of the mountains which rise abruptly towards the Grande Chartreuse. The bridle-road thither turns off to the l. by Sapey at Montbonot. The lower slopes are sprinkled with the country seats of the Grenoblois.

21 Lumbin. It is asserted that gottle and crétinism are unknown on this the sunny side of the valley, while they abound on the opposite bank of the Isère.

10 Le Touvet. Inn, clean; vines and walnuts abound. Beautiful scenery.

On the opposite side of the Isère rise the ruins of Château Bayard.

A little farther on our road passes on the rt. Fort Barraux, commanding it and the passage up and down the valley; it was built by Charles Emmanuel Duke of Savoy, in the presence of a French army commanded by Lesdiguières. That general, on being reproved by Henri IV. for his inertness in allowing this to proceed, replied, "Your Majesty has need of a fortress on the side of Savoy, to hold in check that of Montmeliant; and since the duke is willing to undertake the expense, we may as well permit it, and as soon as it is properly furnished with cannon and provision I undertake to capture it;" and he kept his word, surprising the fort by moonlight, March 13, 1598. It was afterwards strengthened by Vauban. It commands a charming view from its elevated position. The road, as it rises over the base of the hill, overlooks the charming valley of the Isère, with the river itself, and in the N.E. the snowy top of Mont Blanc—a scene of grandeur and beauty scarcely to be surpassed.

10 Chapareillan. Beyond this we enter Savoy. The Mont Grenier rises 3700 ft. high, close above this village.

16 Chambéry, described in the HANDBOOK FOR SWITZERLAND.

b. The road on the l. bank of the Isère is interesting and picturesque, but is not furnished with post-horses. Omnibus to Pont Charra and Allevard. Railway in progress. The road to Uriage Baths (Rte. 131) turns rt. at Gière, 4 m.

At Domène, if you turn l. from the stone bridge over the torrent, you reach the ruined ch. of the Cluniac Priory, Romanesque in style (1058), founded by Eygnard, and by its side a chapel of the family d'Arcees. Here is a wire suspension-bridge over the Isère: others have been erected at Brignoud and La Gache.

At Tencin (16 m.), which is about half-way, the traveller, while his horses rest, may explore a pretty shady glen, traversed by a gushing stream, leaping in a miniature fall down the rocks. Here is the château of the family Monteynard, and a modern ch. Bridge over the Isère.

Goncelin.

[A road strikes off to the rt. from Pont Charra, up the vale of the Bréda, 9 m., to the Baths of Allevard (Inns: H. du Bains; H. Planta). They are situated in a picturesque gorge or rent, stretching from the lias up to the granite mountains. Within a short distance of the junction of the lias with the primitive talc-slate rise the sulphur springs, much used medicinally. There are iron mines and furnaces at Allevard. Higher up, in the valley of the Bréda, is La Ferrière, a poor hamlet, from which a walk of 5 hrs. leads to Les Sept Lacs or Lacs, up a steep ascent. These 7 small and beautiful tarns lie at the bottom of a deep ravine, fed by springs. It is a wild and gloomy spot.]

27 m. Pontcharra, once the frontier town of France (Inns very dirty and uncomfortable.) About a mile distant is Château Bayard; a foot-path leads up to it from the ch. of Grignan.

Its remains are situated on a height which commands the road, and a fine view of the beautiful valley from its terraces. In the mouldering turrets and shattered walls there is little beauty, but as the birthplace of the "Chevalier sans peur et sans reproche" they possess great interest. A gateway with the two flanking towers is the part best preserved. The walls of the castle are, in some places, 6 ft. thick. The situation of the room in which Bayard was born (1476) is pointed out by those who show the place, but without authority for what they state. Nearly opposite, beyond the Isère, is the modern fort Barraux. The conspicuous mountain of La Tuille, remarkable for the contortions of the strata in its limestone precipices, appears to close the valley at its upper end.

Montmelian (H. des Voyageurs). See HANDBOOK FOR SWITZERLAND AND SAVOY.

ROUTE 134.

GRENOBLE TO MARSEILLES, BY GAP AND SISTERON.—PROTESTANT VALLEYS OF DAUPHINÉ.

282 kilom. = 175 Eng. m.

A courier goes daily to Gap in 14 hours, taking passengers:—also a diligence.

This is a very hilly and a little more circuitous way to Marseilles than the road by Luz la Croix Haute. (Rte. 135.)

The road on quitting Grenoble is carried within an avenue of trees across the plain of the Drac, at a short distance from its rt. bank, in a straight line from the Porte de la Graille, as far as Claix, where there is a fine bridge of a single arch, built on dry land by Lesdiguières, who afterwards turned the course of the river below it. Here the road by Croix Haute crosses the river, while ours, turning to the l. along high dykes, passes near the junction of the rivers, the Grèze on the l., and the Romanche on the rt., with the Drac. We here bid adieu for the present to the Drac, and follow up its tributary, the Romanche, as far as 18 Vizille (Inns wretched—a new one is promised for 1864), an ancient town of 2750 Inhab., on the rt. bank of the Romanche, carrying on some manufactures of cotton-spinning, calico-weaving, &c., chiefly founded by the Périer family, one of whom was the French minister Casimir Périer.

The Château, partly destroyed by fire 1825, was built, between 1611 and 1620, by Lesdiguières, the Protestant commander, and governor of Dauphiné under Henri IV., "ce fin reynard," as the Duke of Savoy called him, who compelled the peasants on his estate to contribute their unpaid labour in constructing it, conformably with the old tax called Corvée. In 1788 the Estates of Dauphiné, assembled by Louis XVI. to appease the discontent and outcries of the people of the province, met in this building, and here prepared the bold remonstrance against aristocratic privileges, and in favour of popular representation by the assembly of the Tiers Etat, which served as a signal for the Revolution. This event occurred a year before the opening of the States General at Versailles; Barnave and Mounier were the leading orators. The actual building is now a calico and silk-printing work, and belongs to the family Périer. One apartment is preserved as it was in the time of Lesdiguières, and a bronze bas-relief of him, on horseback, still exists.

The route to Briançon and the Mont Genève, across the grand mountains of Bourg d'Oysans, here turns to the l. (Rte. 137.)

The road to Gap crosses the Romanche at Vizille, and proceeds by a very steep ascent, requiring 2 hours to surmount. The view from its slope over Vizille and the Romanche, and over an intervening hilly ridge to Grenoble and the valley of the Isère, very fine.

7 Laffrey.

On the l. of the road 3 small lakes, la Motte, l'Aveillan, and Pierre Châtel, are passed in succession. Napoleon on his way from Elba, with little more than 200 men, was encountered, a little to the S. of Laffrey, by a battalion despatched by the governor of Grenoble and drawn up across the road to intercept his march, between the hill on one side, and the stream which runs out of the lake on the other. Napoleon, on coming in sight of them, turned off into a meadow on the rt., and sent forward an aide-de-camp to parley with the soldiers, and tell them the Emperor was at hand. The two parties remained thus an hour in view of each other, when Napoleon, advancing to the battalion, opened his grey riding-coat, and baring his breast, so as to show the Star of the Legion of Honour, exclaimed, "Si quelqu'un de vous veut tuer son Empereur, qu'il tire." They were most of them soldiers of his own armies, and their commanding officer had served under him in Egypt. The command given by their officer to "fire" was unheeded by them; the ranks were broken, and the veterans crowded around him; some, embracing his knees, swore never to quit him; many burst into tears, while the air resounded with the cry of "Vive l'Empereur!" On his way hence to Grenoble, at the head of this reinforcement, he was met by the regiment of Labedoyère, which at once joined his ranks, their colonel at their head.

After leaving behind the 3 lakes some coal-mines are passed on the rt.; they are worked to a considerable extent, and produce anthracite coal (charbon-à-pierre). The road crosses the Bonne by the bridge of Ponthaut.

14 La Mûre (Inns: H. Pelloux; Poste), an industrious town, on the top of a high hill, visible from afar; it abounds in mean cabarets and cafés; the chief occupation of the people is nail-making. Capital honey here. The mineral springs of La Motte occur near an outbreak of granite in a ravine extremely narrow, with a temperature of 45° Réaum. They are conveyed on mules' backs to the Baths.

A long-continued and very circuitous descent leads into the valley of the Drac; the road, however, does not approach it closely, but skirts the shattered and deep gorges of its tributaries until a favourable opportunity occurs for crossing them. It is a hilly stage to 11 Souchons. The mountains of the district are mostly of the Jura limestone formation, and are readily disintegrated by the washing of the rivers and by the weather. One very conspicuous conical summit rising on the W. is called the Mont Aiguille, or Mont Inaccessible, and was regarded as one of the wonders of Dauphiné.

It is 8562 ft. above the sea-level. Another mountain, still higher, called L'Obieux, rises above

14 Corps; no good inns. [7 m. from this (a mule-path, 2½ hrs. walk) is the village of La Salette, famous for a pretended apparition of the Virgin to a peasant boy and girl, Sept. 19, 1846, at a spot called Sous les Baisses, still higher in the mountains. A certain Mlle. Lamerlière, a crazy young woman, is accused of having personated the Virgin. She was cast in a trial for libel which she brought against her accusers.* In spite of the disapproval of a court of justice the belief in the miracle collects annually to this spot 40 to 60,000 pilgrims, and the sale of the water of a fountain, which is said to have burst forth from the Virgin's tears, produces 12,000*l.* a year! A Church of grand dimensions, every stone brought on mule-back, has sprung up since 1860, surrounded by convent buildings—proof of the abundant alms poured in by pilgrims, while cabarets and houses without number for their reception cover the ground.]

On the opposite (l.) bank of the Drac are the shapeless and uninteresting ruins of the Château Lesdiguières, built by the Constable as a resting-place after death, for he never inhabited it living. His body, transferred hither from Italy, was torn up at the Revolution, and his monument removed to Gap.

We enter the Dépt. des Hautes Alpes and cross the Drac, before reaching the relay of 14 Guinguette de Boyer.

St. Bonnet (H. Gueydan), on the rt. bank of the Drac, was the birthplace of Lesdiguières. The house is marked

The upper part of the valley of the Drac, which we now leave on the l., is called Champsaur (campus aureus); it is fertile and picturesque, and a large portion of its inhabitants are Protestants. They formed part of the flock of Felix Neff, who often resided at St. Laurent. This valley communicates at its upper extremity, by the difficult pass of the Col d'Orcières, with the village of Dormilleuse, and the sterile and dreary Val Fressinière (Rte. 139).

* Father Bernoud stated before the clergy of Grenoble, "Je tiens de sa bouche que c'est elle seul qui a fait l'apparition de la Salette."

10 Brutinel. In this stage the high chain which separates the vale of the Drac from that in which Gap is situated is crossed by a long and tedious ascent, Col Bayard, requiring 2 hours to surmount.

13 Gap. Inns: H. du Nord, good; de Provence, tolerable. This little mountain capital, the chef-lieu of the Dépt. des Hautes Alpes, with 9000 Inhab., need scarcely detain the traveller, since it possesses no objects of curiosity, but is pleasingly situated, approached by avenues of walnuts, and surrounded by slopes on which the vine still flourishes, although the height above the sea amounts to 2424 ft. In the Préfecture, a modern building, is deposited the monument of the Duc de Lesdiguières, François de Bonne, who, after having been the successful leader and defender of the Protestants in Dauphiné, abjured his faith for the rank of Constable of France, imitating, in his apostasy, the example of his master Henri IV. The monument was originally erected over his grave, in his own castle on the Drac, the spot chosen by himself, but was torn thence by revolutionary spoilers. It is of little merit as a work of sculpture, and consists of a white marble effigy, stiffly reclining on his side, in armour.

Gap was the ancient Vapincum: it was burnt 1692, by Victor Amedeus of Savoy. Here is an experimental Horticultural Garden.

William Farel, the Reformer, was born in the hamlet of Tareau, just outside of Gap: his first sermon was preached in the mill of Burée, but his followers soon drove out the Roman Catholics from Gap, and he took possession of the pulpit of St. Colomb.

Here is a mill where the marbles of the country are sawn.

The road from Gap to Briançon is given in Rte. 139. That to Marseilles descends a tributary valley of the Durance, and reaches the borders of that turbulent river at 17 La Saulce: passing previously, a little on the l., the ruined castle of Tallard, once the property of the family d'Auriac, now of that of Béranger: the ruins are extensive and picturesque.

16 Rourebeau.

The considerable river Buech is crossed before entering 14 Sisteron (Inn: H. Wagram, tolerable). This fortress, which once commanded the passage from Dauphiné into Provence, is built in a defile of the Durance, so narrow as barely to leave space for a street or lane of dirty houses between the cliffs and the river. (4546 Inhab.). The only object of much interest is the picturesque ruined Citadelle, once the prison of Casimir, brother of Ladislaus VII. of Poland; but so many attempts were made by his friends for his rescue that he was removed to Vincennes. Several ancient Towers are still standing in the midst of the public walk, and an old bridge of a single arch connects the town with its suburb, La Baume. Sisteron, if properly guarded, would have effectually arrested Napoleon on his march from Cannes to Grenoble, March 5, 1815, but the gates were opened to Cambonne without obstacle. There is an ancient Church, Notre Dame, of 11th centy., here; and fine remains of a monastery. Notre Dame de Char-davon is a ruined monastery, in a valley shut in by pointed cliffs, about 12 m. distant, on the Rieu, now turned to lay purposes. Sisteron has a picturesque exterior, and its position is well worthy of the pencil of the artist.

Here the roads to Grenoble by La Croix Haute (Rte. 135), and to Nice by Digne (Rte. 136), diverge from our route.

23 Peyruis.

12 Brillane. The Durance, throughout the greater part of its course, is nothing better than a large devastating torrent, at no time a picturesque object, and in summer so far diminished as to be incapable of covering its bed, so that, though its volume is always considerable, its shrunken rivulets of water seem nearly lost amidst beds of gravel and rolled stones, so broad as in places to appear like a dried lake bed.

15 Manosque (Inns: Poste; fair. Petit Versailles) is a flourishing little town, 5936 Inhab., larger population than Digne, the chef-lieu of the Dépt. des Basses Alpes. St. Sauveur is said to retain parts of an older ch. of 10th centy. Notre Dame possesses a Virgin of 5th or 6th centy. and an ancient sarcophagus. The gates of Soubeiron and la Sauverie may deserve notice. The olive is cultivated to a considerable extent in its vicinity.

20 Mirabeau. About  $\frac{1}{4}$  m. from the post-house, on a height, is the ruined Château of the family of the celebrated leader and orator of the French Revolution. He frequently resided here in his early years, but was not born here. It is flanked by 4 round towers; and a group of poor houses form a hamlet about its base.

We are now within the limits of scorched and dreary Provence (Sect. VI.). About a mile from the post-house the Durance, hemmed in between high cliffs, is spanned by a suspension bridge, by which the road is transferred to its l. bank, and is carried along it partly on terraces.

11 Peyrolles.

The road begins to ascend near Meyrargues; and a little beyond the village, which is surmounted by a stately castle, the remains of an ancient aqueduct of brick, designed by the Romans, it is said, to convey the water of the Durance to Aix, are passed. From the top of the hill which succeeds, the eye wanders for many miles down the vale of the Durance, traversed by two more suspension bridges in this part of its course.

The wonderful Canal which supplies Marseilles with water commences on the Durance, near the suspension bridge of Pertuis. (See Rte. 129.)

A considerable tract of well-cultivated table-land is traversed, commanding a view of Mont St. Victoire on the E., before descending the long hill which leads into 21 Aix.

29 MARSEILLES.

ROUTE 135.

GRENOBLE TO MARSEILLES, BY THE CROIX HAUTE.

277 kilom. = 172 Eng. m.

Diligence daily to Sisteron.

This road was opened 1841, and is excellent, but is neglected for the railway by Avignon. As there are many precipices, and few parapet-walls, the journey was at first attended with danger. No one should attempt this road without being prepared to rough it. It is well to engage post-horses to be in readiness at a fixed time beforehand.

There is no inn fit to sleep in before reaching Sisteron.

The relays, after crossing the plain of the Drac, below Vizille (Rte. 134), are 16 Vif (Inn: l'Union), 2417 Inhab. The women are employed in sewing gloves at 3 fr. 50 c. the dozen.

18 Monestier de Clermont.

A long and continuous ascent. Beyond Sert a cabaret, bearing the sign "la Fontaine Ardente," points the way to one of the Marvels of Dauphiny. The burning fountain is only a spring which discharges along with water a jet of hydrogen gas, inflammable whenever fire is applied to it.

17 Clelles. (Inn, Lion d'Or.)

14 Lalley. The mountains assume a very wild and desolate appearance, and there is scarcely any vegetation, on approaching 11 Lus la Croix Haute, 3476 ft. above sea level.

14 La Faurie.

8 Aspres les Veynes.

15 Serres (Inns: Moulin; Poste). The road descends the valley of the Buech.

16 Laragne. No inn, but a wretched cabaret.

17 Sisteron (Inn: see Rte. 134).

131 MARSEILLES. (Rtes. 127 and 134.)

ROUTE 136.

GRENOBLE TO NICE, BY DIGNE AND
GRASSE.

This is the most direct route from Lyons to Nice; but a considerable portion of the road is very hilly; and it is by no means the most comfortable as regards accommodation. It is, however, a fine road, well engineered, and passes through magnificent mountain scenery on the grandest scale. Much shorter, in respect of time, is the way by rail to Marseilles and Fréjus. The distance between Digne and Grasse is not furnished with post-horses, consequently the traveller must hire horses at Digne for the whole distance, which takes 2 days to perform. Diligence (very ill-managed) from Grenoble to Digne, stopping at Sisteron 5 hrs. and at Gap 3, in the middle of the night! From Grenoble to Sisteron, see Rte. 134. The road is carried hence along the l. bank of the Durance, and then alongside one of its tributaries, the Bléone, which overspreads the valley with débris, to 20 Malijay.

20 Digne (Inns: H. Boyer, good; Petit Paris; Bras d'Or), 5421 Inhab., a town of narrow, steep, and dirty streets, and mean houses, stands in the midst of a cultivated oasis of this desert, through which the torrent passes, restrained within dykes. It is chef-lieu of the Dépt. des Basses Alpes, and its chief edifice is the Préfecture, once the Bishop's Palace, a very ordinary building.

The ancient *Cathedral exists on the road to Barcelonnette, and is worth the attention of architect and antiquary. It is in the transition style, showing the early pointed arch in its portal and roof, probably of 12th cent.

Pliny mentions the town under the name Dina.

About 1½ m. off are Warm Baths, supplied by thermal springs, recommended in cases of rheumatism. The accommodation is very simple.

The philosopher Pierre Gassendi was born at the village Champsercier, 7 m. dist., of poor parents, 1592.

The road is carried through the defile called Clus de Chabrières.

29 Barrême (Inn: H. du Midi, tolerable). 1750 Inhab.

25 Castellane (Inn: Sauvère, tolerable), a small town of 2160 Inhab., enclosed by old walls, at the foot of an escarped rock, on the Verdon, surrounded by precipices, and in the midst of scenes of the highest grandeur. The road hence commands magnificent views over the coast of the Mediterranean—Nice, Antibes, Ile Ste. Marguerite, and Sardinia.

24 Logis-du-Pin.

22 Nans.

18 Grasse. Inns: H. des Ministres; H. de la France; Poste, bad. Grasse (12,888 Inhab.) has, after Paris, the most extensive manufacture of perfumery in France, made from the flowers which grow in its neighbourhood, favoured by the peculiarly mild climate. The flower-fields and nursery-gardens near Cannes (10 m. S.) produce annually 200,000 frs.-worth of flowers of orange, lemon, heliotrope, hyacinth, &c. &c., which are sent to Grasse to supply its distilleries. The Hôtel de Ville has a central tower, said to be Roman (?), but certainly of early massive masonry. The Church has a graceful pointed doorway and 2 crypts of modern date beneath cut in the rock. The views of the Alps from its Public Walks are very striking; so is that from the high road. The rly. is reached at 23 k. Antibes Stat. to } Rte. 128.

21 Nice Station.

ROUTE 137.

GRENOBLE TO BRIANÇON, BY BOURG D'OYSANS AND THE COL DE LAUTERET, AND BY THE MONT GENÈVRE TO SUSA.—EXCURSION UP THE VAL ST. CHRISTOPHE.

Grenoble.	Eng. m.
Vizille . . . . .	10½
Bourg d'Oysans . . . . .	20
Le Dauphin . . . . .	10 } 6 hrs.
La Grave . . . . .	8½
Col de Lauteret . . . . .	6½ 2 hrs.
Monestier . . . . .	6½ 3 hrs.
Briançon . . . . .	8½

The scenery between Bourg d'Oysans and Briançon will repay the pedestrian's leisurely survey. It is about 13½ hrs. walk.

114 kilom. = 60 Eng. m.

This magnificent carriage-road, begun by Napoleon in 1804, has been 60 years in progress, under the direction of the meritorious engineer of Mont Cenis, M. Dausse, but, owing to the extent and difficulty of the works to be executed, it is barely completed. It has been greatly injured by storms and floods. The scenery is so grand, that it ought to be better known and much more traversed than it is. Few passes in the Alps exceed it in interest or admit such extensive glacier views from a carriage. It is traversed by a Diligence daily in summer, as long as the ground is clear of snow. It is not yet furnished with post-horses. Travellers to Turin must take voiturier horses from Grenoble to Briançon, where they fall into the Mont Genève road. Diligence daily to Bourg d'Oysans in 5 or 6 hrs., whence to Briançon, by car, will take 8 or 10. Courier every night to Briançon takes 4 or 5 passengers. Conveyances very dear. Ravix at Grenoble supplies horses and carriages with drivers who know the road; he is expensive, but there is slight chance of a return fare. He will send on a relay of horses the day before, and his cattle may be depended on; they will do their work without renforts.

The accommodation on the way, as yet, is bad. The best is to be found at La Grave and at the Baths of Monestier, but they are often full in summer.

As far as 17 kil. Vizille (a new Inn, 1864) the road is the same as Rte. 134, but, instead of crossing the Romanche, it adheres to its rt. bank, and enters a narrow and finely-wooded glen, threaded by the river for many miles, called Combe de Gavet.

In 1081 a landslide, or fall of a mountain, washed down by the fury of the torrents, formed such an accumulation of earth at the upper end of this defile as to dam up the river Romanche until it formed a lake which covered the entire plain of Bourg d'Oysans, and rose to a height of 60 or 80 ft. It lasted until 1229, when the dyke burst, and the emancipated flood swept all before it, cultivated lands and villages, as far as the city of Grenoble, part of which it also destroyed.

At the upper end of the combe, where the valley opens out, the river Olle flows into the Romanche from the N. [A few miles up it are the iron-foundries of Allemont and the lead and silver mine of Chalanche. At the head of the valley of Allemont a difficult and dangerous pass leads across to the Sept Laux, 7 small lakes, one of the "wonders" of Dauphiné, abounding in trout. From the Sept Laux you descend to the iron-mines and Baths of Allevard in the valley of the Isère (Rte. 132).]

50 kil. Bourg d'Oysans (Inns: H. de Milan, dear and indifferent, but the best;—Etoile), a town of 3052 Inhab., possessing a manufacture of cotton. It lies in a swampy flat more than a mile broad, hemmed in by rocky precipices of great height, in the face of which is the gold-mine of La Gardelle. Mules may be hired here.

["An interesting excursion may be made from Bourg d'Oysans to La Bérarde, in the upper part of the valley of St. Christophe, 10 hours' walk from the Bourg. The only fair Inn on the whole route is at the finely situated village of Vénos, 2 hrs. ride from Bourg d'Oysans. Inn: Pagnet; tolerable, but exorbitant. Good mules are kept here. Start early, for it takes 2 good hours to St. Christophe, and at least 3 more to Bérarde, and the same to return, as the road is very rough, and in places like a staircase. Between the 2 hamlets a mountain has fallen in pieces, nearly filling the valley with huge fragments through which the path and the river wind. La Bérarde lies at the foot of Mont Pelvoux, the highest mountain in France, or in the S. Alps; its loftiest summit—the Point d'Arcines or des Ecrins—being 13,123 ft. above the sea-level. The scenery of the whole valley, and especially at and above La Bérarde, may vie in grandeur and savage sterility with any in the Alps. The valley is little known, but a day devoted to visiting it will be remembered with gratification by the lover of sublime scenery." From Vénos you may reach Le Dauphin, if about to cross the Lauteret, instead of returning to Bourg d'Oysans (thus saving a very long détour), by the Col de Mont Lens, 4 hrs. walk. The Col commands a beautiful view, and is a garden of flowers and herbs, which are gathered in summer by the peasants and sold to the druggists, being carried as far as Paris. There is a Pass from the head of the Val St. Christophe into that of the Val Louise leading down to Mont Dauphin.]

A char may be hired at Bourg d'Oysans to cross the Lauteret to Briançon for 40 or 50 fr.; but it is a long day for one horse. About 3 m. above Bourg d'Oysans the plain terminates, and the Vénos, coming from the l., pours itself into the Romanche. Between these 2 streams rises the snowy Mont de Lans. As far as Freney the road is carried along a tremendous gorge called Les Infernets, on the N. side of this mountain, through which the Romanche forces its way, by terraces and tunnels cut out of the gneiss rock. Two very long tunnels have thus been formed for the passage of the road. The first of these, more than 234 yards long, and very wide and high, is a fine work.

The gorge of Infernets is succeeded by a sterile upland valley, strewn with rocks. A little above this, on the l., is a fine waterfall, called Le Saut de la Pucelle.

53½ kil. Le Dauphin (a poor Inn), in a bare and dreary situation, with scarce a habitation around.

The Saut de la Pucelle is a beautiful fall, somewhat resembling the Staubbach.

Between Le Dauphin and La Grave a stupendous narrow gorge is traversed by the Romanche, remarkable for the extraordinary grandeur and utter nakedness of the precipices of gneiss which form its sides. It is called La Combe de Malval. These precipices are the escarpments of vast mountains covered over with eternal snow and glaciers, which terminate at the edge of the cliff overhanging the combe. That on the S. is the vast expanse of the Glacier de Lans, the largest in Dauphiné. Numerous streams descend from them in falls across the road.

We pass from the Dépt. d'Isère into that of the Hautes Alpes, about a mile before reaching the miserable village of 76 kil. La Grave, grandly situated on a projecting rock, backed on the S. by vast snowy heights. (Inn: Chez Juge, fair mountain quarters, rather dear, 8 or 9 bedrooms, charrs and horses, the best on the road.) The ch. is worth looking at, and the view from it is splendid. [A long day's walk leads hence over the Col des Infernets, a wild and high but not difficult pass, to St. Jean Maurienne.]

Copper-mines are worked in the apparently inaccessible cliffs above La Grave; the ore is sent down through wooden tubes attached to the face of the rocks, and includes fine crystals of copper.

Close to La Grave the road enters a short tunnel, but a little further on is carried through one of the grandest tunnels in the Alps, cut in the rock, 2066 ft. long. A steep ascent succeeds over a crumbling, black, slaty limestone. The Glacier of La Grave is in full view, while the Romanche dashes down in a fine fall into the depths below.

The route now ascends the pass of the Lauteret, leaving on the rt. the Romanche, whose source is in an upland valley to the S., at the foot of the snowy Mont Pelvoux.

The mountain opposite Villars d' [France.]

Arène exhibits a section of granite or gneiss rock overlying limestone, of great interest to the geologist.

86 kil. The Col of the Lauteret, which separates the waters of the Romanche from those of the Guisanne, is 6869 ft. above the sea-level, about 500 ft. higher than the Mont Genève. Its summit is covered with some of the most beautiful pasturages in the Alps. Near the crest of the Col, which is not more than 50 yards broad,

A new Hospice was built, 1864, to furnish food and some sort of accommodation, near to an ancient hospice, founded by Humbert II., Count of Dauphiné. The view from the summit is fine: the Montagne d'Oursine (13,123 ft. high) is a grand object on the S.W.; from the glacier at its base rises the Guisanne, while in that of Tabouchet, to the S., is one of the sources of the Romanche. The Mont Pelvoux from this point appears lower, because more distant.

A steep descent leads down the valley of the Guisanne. An improved line of road has been made to La Madeleine. The Mont Viso is visible from this descent.

100 Monestier (Inn: H. Armand), a town of 2500 Inhab., with several indifferent Inns, having in its neighbourhood hot sulphureous springs, used for baths, and so abundant, that within a short distance of the source they serve to turn a mill. The valley around, and from hence to Briançon, is fertile, well cultivated, and studded with numerous villages; the upper slopes clothed with fir woods, while the view of the course of the Guisanne, backed in the distance by Briançon, and its extraordinary group of forts, piled one over the other, forms a magnificent scene.

Between Monestier and Briançon, 9½ m., the valley is remarkable for its populousness, there being not less than 22 villages between the foot of the Lauteret and 114 Briançon (Inns: H. de l'Ours, good rooms, fair cuisine, but dirty; H. de la Paix, very dirty), a first-class fortress of great strength, a sort of Alpine Gibraltar, and the loftiest town in France, 4283 ft. above the sea-level, commanding the passage from Italy into France by the Mont Genève, is a most picturesque and imposing object at a distance. It stands at the meeting of three valleys, at the foot of an isolated and escarped rock, whose summit is crowned by the Fort du Château. Many of the streets of the town are so highly inclined that they are impassable for vehicles, and the carriage-road makes a circuit, and enters it by a series of zigzags. All the heights around are converted into points of defence; fort rises over fort up to the very clouds, which frequently shroud from view the upper works. Where the position is not inaccessible through natural precipices, it has been rendered so by artificial escarpments. The rivers Guisanne and Clairée, which unite beneath the walls of the town with the infant Durance, run in deep gullies, whose sides are precipices, forming as it were natural ditches to the fortress. The principal works are on the l., or E., bank of the Clairée, whose deep and savage gorge is crossed by a bridge of a single bold arch, 130 ft. span, and 168 ft. above the water, constructed 1734. An excellent road leads, in zigzags, up the abrupt heights from this bridge to the different forts, which communicate with each other by subterranean ways. The largest fort is called Les Trois Têtes, because it occupies a triple-headed crag; on a level with it is Fort Dauphin; 330 ft. higher, towards the Durance, is Fort Randouillet, whose batteries are partly excavated in the rock; nearly 2000 ft. above this is the Donjon; and finally the Point du Jour, commanding all the other defences. The different points, or mamelons of rock on which these forts are built, all belong to the Mont Infernet, whose summit still supports the ruins of a fort built in 1814, at a height of 9350 ft. above the sea-level. From its crest the Mont Pelvoux is a magnificent object, and the valley des Prés or de Neuvache, down which pours the Clairée, and that leading up to the Mont Genève, are well seen. Permission to visit the forts may be obtained from the commandant in the town. If the weather be clear, it is worth while to ascend to Randouillet, on account of the view up the beautiful valley of Guisanne, studded with villages, and towards the Col de Lauteret (p. 541), otherwise the traveller may content himself with seeing the Fort du Château. The fortifications of Briançon have been greatly strengthened of late, and the improvements are not yet completed.

In the town itself there is nothing to see. The Fort d'Embrun bore this inscription: "Aux braves Briançonnais, pour la conservation de cette ville, Louis-Philippe reconnaissant:" alluding to the refusal of the inhabitants, in spite of the orders of the préfet, to deliver up the town, though defended by a weak garrison, to the allies in 1815. The name of L. P. was erased in 1848.

Briançon has 4600 Inhab. besides its garrison; it stands at an elevation of 4285 ft. above the sea-level, and may be said to endure 7 months of winter. It was until 1848-51 cut off, in a manner, from the rest of the world, being accessible by only one carriage-road from the side of Gap.

The courier takes 12 or 14 hours to reach Bourg d'Oysans. A diligence goes daily to Embrun and Gap. (Rte. 139.) Diligence to Susa Stat. over the Col de Genève.

Time—Briançon to Bourg d'Oysans:

	H.	M.
Briançon to Monestier . .	2½	0
Monestier to summit . .	2½	0
La Grave . . . . .	1	50
Le Dauphin . . . . .	1	50
Bourg d'Oysans . . . .	2	40

The Pass of the Mont Genève from Briançon to Susa, a day's journey, 15 hours. The road, practicable for 4-wheeled carriages, leaves the Val des Prés on the l., traversing thick forests of fir, and at the end of about 2 leagues of ascent, by zigzags, reaches the summit of the pass at Bourg Mont Genève, a hamlet on a plain, 6476 ft. above the sea-level, on which barley ripens. From this plain, at a short distance from each other, rise the Doira, which flows through the Po into the Adriatic, and the Durance; hence the verses

"Adieu ma sœur la Durance,
Nous nous séparons sur ce mont;
Tu vas ravager la Provence,
Moi féconder le Piedmont."

An obelisk erected on the summit commemorates the construction of this road, under Napoleon.

This pass was crossed in 1494 by Charles VIII. of France with the army with which he invaded Italy, dragging with him several hundred pieces of artillery.

The descent into Piedmont lies through Cesanne. Good road thus far; beyond, rough and narrow.

Oulx (Inn: Café National, tolerable).

Salabrand.

Fort Exiles.

Susa (22 m. from Cesanne) (Inn: *H. de France), described in the HANDBOOKS for SWITZERLAND and N. ITALY. Railway hence to Turin.

ROUTE 139.

GAP TO BRIANÇON, BY EMBRUN, AND EXCURSION INTO THE VAL DE QUEYRAS, VAL D'ARVIEUX, AND VAL FRESINIÈRE.

91 kilom. = 57 Eng. m. to Briançon. A diligence (very slow) daily.

The valley above Gap is stony and dreary.

17 Chorges appears to have preserved traces of the name of the ancient inhabitants of this district, the "Caturigæ."

After crossing a high ridge the road descends in a gradual sweep into the valley of the Durance, which it reaches at the foot of a precipitous mountain. The valley hereabouts is a scene of unmitigated desolation: the turbulent river rolls along a furious flood of dirty water, undermining the loose shaly rocks (? Jura limestone) composing its sides, strewn the bottom with rubbish, and constantly forcing its banks. The road is frequently swept away by inundations, and for some distance is carried along temporary causeways. The Durance is crossed by a wooden bridge at

14 Savines, and again before reaching

10 Embrun. Inn: H. de Milan, fair. Embrun (anciently Ebrodunum), an old-fashioned fortress, surrounded by loopholed ramparts, overlooks the valley from the top of a singular platform or table of pudding-stone rock, escarped on the side facing the river, and separated by a ditch from the mountain behind it. 3019 Inhab.; 1200 men garrison. The Cathedral has a fine lofty Romanesque tower ornamented with circular arches, and a N. portal, whose round mouldings rest on pillars of the red marble of the country, the two outer ones being supported on rudely-carved lions. The W. end is chequered with slabs of yellow limestone and black shale. It has a tolerable wheel window, filled with stained glass. The interior is not otherwise remarkable: the roof is Pointed. Against the N. door is nailed a horseshoe, said to have been thrown by the horse of Lesdiguières, the Protestant leader, which is reported to have stumbled and thrown its master in the porch as he was spurring on his steed to enter the church, and thus saved it from desecration. Such is the Romanist legend. The image of Notre Dame d'Embrun was held in great reverence by Louis XI., who, as dauphin, resided long in Dauphiné. (See 'Quentin Durward'.)

Beside the cathedral stands the building formerly the archbishop's palace, now a barrack; and near it rises a curious tower of ancient masonry called Tour Brune.

The first church at Embrun is said to have been built by Constantine the Great. The line of its archbishops is traced back, uninterruptedly, to his time: they were made princes, and endowed with the sovereignty of a large part of Dauphiné, by the Emperor Conrad II. A portion of their archives, captured with the town by Lesdiguières in 1585, are now in the public library of Cambridge.

Embrun is a poor town of narrow dirty streets; the view from its ramparts is striking, but the mountains around are bare in the extreme. Henri Arnaud, leader and pastor of the Vaudois, was born here.

Little occurs worthy of remark in pursuing the course of the Durance upwards, until, after crossing the river to its l. bank, we approach the very picturesque and strong fortress of

Mont Dauphin (Inn: Café du Nord, fair), the key of the pass into Italy, standing conspicuous on an elevated platform of rock, appearing to close the mouth of the lateral valley of the Guil, which here enters the Durance from the N.E. It was fortified by Vauban, who constructed its bastions of the rough pink marble of Eygliers, a neighbouring village, and completely commands the 2 valleys—presenting escarped precipices on either side, so as to be almost impregnable. Our road is carried under the base of the rock of pudding-stone, crowned by the fortress, 500 or 600 ft. above the river, and near it is the post-house. It is well worth while to ascend to the fortress, both on account of the better lodgings and also of the view extending to Mont Pelvoux.

16 Plan de Phazy.

[The river Guil rises at the base of the Monte Viso, on the Piedmontese frontier: its valley, called Val de Queyras, consists chiefly of a series of narrow defiles, through which the river seems to have forced its passage. A carriage-road is opened from Mont Dauphin to Château Queyras. About  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. up, on its l. bank, is Guillestre, which was one of the stations for English prisoners during the war. Above this the valley is rent by an extraordinary fissure, called Gorge de Chapelue, bounded by precipices from 700 to 800 ft. high, described by Brockedon as "one of the finest in the Alps." In places the rocks almost meet overhead, and the road crosses the depths, in which the Guil flows far below, from side to side, as the rocks present a shelf for its passage; but at times they are completely precipitous. At the upper end of the defile, a mile from Mont Dauphin, is the castle of Queyras, an ancient feudal stronghold of the seigneurs of Château-Ville-Vieille, perched on the top of a monstrous rock, which seems to have been detached from the neighbouring peak in order to guard the passage. It is now converted into a military post, and is occupied by a company of infantry. A tolerable inn here, chez Bosi.

Two passes, the Col des Hayes and Col d'Isoard, lead N. over the mountains to Briançon.

In the remote valleys around Queyras the Protestants are very numerous, especially in the Val d'Arvieux, reached by a rough road branching off on the l. about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. below Château Queyras; as well as in the Commune of Molines, and its hamlets, St. Veran, Pierre Grosse, and Fousillarde. They have churches at Arvieux, St. Veran, and Fousillarde, in all of which service is performed once in 3 weeks by a minister who resides for a week in each parish alternately.

Felix Neff's residence was at La Chalp, in the Val d'Arvieux, above the village of that name; a foot-path runs thence over the mountains to Briançon. St. Veran, where he had also a small Protestant flock, is situated in another valley, 8 or 10 m. to the S. of Château Queyras, on the very verge of vegetation: it is the loftiest human habitation in France, 6692 ft. above the sea-level, and the nearest towards the snowy summits of the Viso. Neff said of it that it was "the highest and consequently the most pious village in the Val Queyras."

About 2 m. above Queyras is Abries (Inn: Etoile, clean beds), where the Guil bends to the S.E. towards the Monte Viso, whose unscaled peak forms a striking object amidst the wild and savage scenery of this upland valley, here contracted and strewn with rocks. It is very grand, and well worth exploring, not only on its own account, but because through the two passes issuing out over the mountains at its head most interesting excursions may be made into Piedmont.

a. The Col de la Croix leads from the village Ristolas and Monta (French custom-house) to the Protestant valleys of the Vaudois, and their capital La Tour.

b. The Col de Viso conducts from La Chalp, a hamlet  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. above Monta, along the rt. bank of the Guil, by a path only practicable on foot, in 5 hours, from Abries to the summit of the pass, 10,150 ft. above the sea-level, whence the view over the valley of the Po and plains of Piedmont, comprising an horizon of 100 m., "is one of the most magnificent in the world."

—B. The traveller may enter Italy by the Col de Viso, and return by La Tour and Col de la Croix. The routes are described in the HANDBOOK for SWITZERLAND.]

From Mont Dauphin to Briançon (5 hrs. walk) the road constantly follows the course of the Durance, sometimes on a level with it, at others at an elevation of many hundred feet above it. The river runs for a long distance at the bottom of a deep gash, whose sides, rarely susceptible of cultivation, slope at a very high angle.

[About 6 m. above Mont Dauphin, near the village of La Roche, prettily situated beside a small lake, a long timber bridge crosses the Durance, and an abrupt shepherd's path, scaling the mountain, leads up into the Val Fressinière, the poor Alpine valley once blessed by the ministering care of Felix Neff, and which now serves as his last resting-place. "The path creeps up the mountain in an oblique direction, and then over some rugged ground leads to a defile through which a torrent rushes, bordered on each side by groups of cottages, crossed by an Alpine bridge, below which is a cascade. This hamlet is Palons, and the torrent, called the Rimasse, is the guide which conducts to the Val Fressinière. There is no mistaking the way. The villages passed are Fressinière, whence the valley is named (1 league), in a lovely fertile vale, producing grain of several kinds and fruit-trees: Violins (1 league); here is a Protestant church, built by Neff, to which a tower has lately been added: Minsas (2 m.). Then comes the toilsome, rough, and clambering path, through a country perfectly savage and appalling, to Dormilleuse (3 m., or 5 leagues from La Roche), a miserable village at the very foot of the glaciers, constructed like an eagle's nest upon the side of a mountain, the most repulsive, perhaps, of all the habitable spots of Europe. Nature is here stern and terrible, offering nothing to repay the traveller but the satisfaction of planting his foot on the rock which has been hallowed as the asylum of Christians of whom the world was not worthy. It consists of a few poor detached huts, from which fresh air, comfort, and cleanliness are all banished; some without chimneys or glazed windows, others consisting of a mere miserable kitchen and stable, seldom cleaned out more than once a year, where the inhabitants spend the greater part of the winter along with their cattle, for the sake of the warmth. Their few sterile fields hang over precipices, and are partly covered with blocks of granite. In some seasons even rye will not ripen. Many of the pasturages are inaccessible to cattle, and scarcely safe for sheep. Yet in this gloomy spot did the virtuous Protestant pastor, Felix Neff, sit himself down, because his services seemed here to be most required, where he had everything to teach, even to the planting of a potato."—Gilly's Memoir of Neff.

A mountain pass leads over the Col d'Orcière, at the head of the Val Fressinière, into the valley of Champ-saur, traversed by the Drac. (Rte. 134.)

Near Palons are several caves in the rocks, which served the inhabitants in time of persecution as places of refuge and of worship: one of them is called Glesia (L'Eglise).]

17 La Bessée. Near this a step or rise occurs in the valley of the Durance, which seems barred by a high bank or natural dam. Up this the road to Briançon toils in zigzags. A little above La Bessée the ruins of an embattled wall are visible, running across the valley from either bank of the Durance to the summit of the heights commanding it on the rt. and l., evidently designed to close the passage up, and check the incursions of a people from the S.

[Nearly opposite La Bessée to the N.W. opens out the Val Louise, which terminates in the glaciers and peaks of the Mont Pelvoux, whose top, rising 13,468 ft. above the sea-level, is visible from our road in clear weather. "The poor village called La Ville de Val Louise is the chief place. Its environs are very picturesque. The valley branches into two: that on the rt. leads to Mt. Pelvoux. Its summit, or Pic des Arcines, was for the first time attained by 2 Englishmen, named Whympier and Macdonald in 1861 (Aug.). 8 hrs. sharp climb over rocks from the Ville in a straight line. The summit is a mass of ice. By the other branch there is a difficult pass into the Val Godemar, called Col de Celar."

Within this valley is a cavern called

Baume des Vaudois, from a number of those unfortunate professors of an ancient faith, who concealed themselves within it in 1488, carrying with them their children, and as much food as they could collect, relying on its inaccessible position, and the snows around, for their defence. When the officer despatched by Charles VIII. arrived with his soldiers in the valley, none of its inhabitants were found; but at length tracing out their hiding place, he commanded a great quantity of wood to be set fire to at the mouth of the cave to burn or smoke them out. "Some were slain in attempting to escape, others threw themselves headlong on the rocks below, others were smothered; there were afterwards found within the caverns 400 infants stifled in the arms of their dead mothers. It is believed as a certain fact that 3000 persons perished on that occasion in this valley."—Gilly's Mem. of Neff. The present inhabitants are all Rom. Catholics, and a miserable goitred race.

Above this the valley is more wooded, while low down little patches are cleared of stones to allow the grass to grow.]

17 Briançon, in Rte. 137.

SECTION VIII.

BURGUNDY.—FRANCHE-COMTÉ.

ROUTE	PAGE	ROUTE	PAGE
144 Troyes to Dijon, by Châtillon .	547	156 Lyons to Geneva, by Belle-
148 Dijon or Chalindrey to Neu-		garde—RAIL . . . . .	553
châtel, by Dôle—RAIL . . . . .	548	159 Dijon to Belfort, by Besançon
153 Macon to Geneva—RAIL . . . . .	550	—RAIL . . . . .	553
155 Descent of the Haut Rhône.—
Aix in Savoy to Lyons . . . . .	552

INTRODUCTION.

The want of a generally fertile soil and picturesque outline in the province of Burgundy is atoned for by her vineyards. The principal occur on the sunny slopes of the hills of Côte d'Or, Chambertin, Nuits, Romanée, and Clos Vougeot, all situated between Dijon and Beaune.

That part of Franche-Comté which occupies the slopes of the Jura is a pastoral district, the inhabitants of which are chiefly occupied with cattle and dairies. In this it resembles the lowlands of Switzerland, as well as in the system of Fruitières, which prevails among the hills. A fruitière is a company of 50 or 60 small farmers, who bring their milk and cream into one common stock and central establishment, to be made into cheese, dividing the produce according to the extent of the contribution which each associate has made to the common stock.

ROUTE 144.

TROYES TO DIJON, BY CHÂTILLON.

This route is now deserted for the rail.

TROYES STAT. Rte. 162.

19 St. Parres-les-Vaudes.

14 Bar-sur-Seine. Pleasantly situated on the banks of the infant Seine, here a clear rivulet. A quiet country town. The Church has great elegance.

19 Mussy.

15 Châtillon-sur-Seine (Inns: Poste(?); —H. de la Côte d'Or; dirty, and barely tolerable), a neat small town. A congress of representatives of the allied sovereigns, at which Lord Castlereagh appeared on behalf of England, was held here, February 1814, to offer to Napoleon the throne of France, provided he would be content with its limits previous to the Revolution; he rejected these terms, and, emboldened by the successes he gained in the course of the campaign, broke off the negotiations, and the result was his dethronement.

Marshal Marmont was born here, and built on the spot a fine château.

On the hill sides many little ancient towns or bourgades are seen, even now strongly bearing the impress of feudality. Surrounded by walls and gates, it seems as if not a house could venture to stray out of the protecting circuit, indicating the ancient unsettled state of the country, or, at least, of the habits which arose from its insecurity."—F. P.

14 Aisey-le-Duc.

15 Ampilly-le-Sec.

15 Chanceaux, celebrated for the manufacture of preserved barberries (épinettes). Here is a comfortable little inn, where a good stock of the preserve is kept.

The Seine takes its rise in the high land of the Côte d'Or, within about 1 m. of Chanceaux.

The country now assumes a picturesque character; you begin, as it were, to cross the roots of the Jura.

"12 St. Seyne, beautifully situated amongst a ridge of bold hills, almost of a mountainous character. The town, which contains about 1000 Inhab., is at the bottom of the valley. Above, on the brow of the hill, are the remains of a celebrated Abbey of Benedictines, founded by St. Seguanus before 580. The church, whose construction dates from the beginning of the 15th cent., is yet standing, and contains much that is remarkable; amongst other things, a series of ancient frescoes representing the life of the patron founder. This church has some peculiarities in its architecture, and the stalls of the monks continue undisturbed."—F. P.

10 Val de Suzon, so called from the torrent Suzon, which flows through the very pretty valley. The general aspect of the village, which you reach by a steep descent, continues to remind the traveller of his gradual approach to Switzerland; and indeed, throughout the whole of this district, he will observe how overcharged is the opinion of the monotony of French scenery, even in the provinces which are not professedly mountainous.

17 DIJON (in Rte. 104).

ROUTE 148.

DIJON OR CHALINDREY TO NEUCHÂTEL, BY DÔLE—RAIL.

A. Paris.	Miles.	B. Paris.	Miles.
Dijon . . .	196	Chalindrey	191
Auxonne . .	216	Gray . . .	219
Dôle . . .	225	Auxonne . .	243
Mouchard .	267	Dôle . . .	252
Pontarlier

The rly. by Dôle to Salins and Neuchâtel was completed 1862, and is the shortest way from Paris to Switzerland. There are three ways of reaching Dôle from Paris:—A. By Dijon, the shortest and best (Paris and Lyons Rly.); B. By Troyes and Chalindrey (Paris and Mulhouse Rly.); C. By Bar-le-Duc and Chalindrey (Paris and Strasbourg Rly.).

A. Paris to Dijon. (See Rte. 104.)

Forsome distance beyond Dijon there is little worth description or notice; the country fertile, but flat and monotonous. As you advance, the distant blue outline of the Jura mountains is discovered on the horizon.

A causeway  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. long, pierced with 23 arches, to allow the escape of the water of the Saône during inundations, leads into

Auxonne Junct. Stat. (Inn: Grand Cerf), a second-class fortress of minor importance, owing to its distance from the frontier, in the rear of Besançon. It stands on the l. bank of the Saône, here crossed by a bridge. The fortifications were planned by Vauban. It was taken by the Austrians 1815. The Pop. 5150.

Here the line by Chalindrey falls in, and the two routes become the same.

B. Paris to Chalindrey, by Troyes (see Rte. 162); C. by Bar-le-Duc (see Rte. 165). From Chalindrey a branch leads through

Gray, on the Saône, to

Auxonne Junct. Stat. (See above.)

From the heights above Dôle the snowy mass of the Mont Blanc, more than 100 m. distant as the crow flies, is apparent in clear weather.

Dôle Junction Stat. (Inns: H. de France;—Ville de Lyon;—H. de Paris; said to be good) is a cheerful town of 9913 Inhab., in the Dépt. of the Jura, in a very pretty country, on the Doubs. It was the capital of the county of Burgundy, after which it belonged to Spain, having been the capital of Franche-Comté, which was not united to France, until the reign of Louis XIV. The Emp. Charles V. fortified it; but the works were destroyed by Louis.

The Parish Church is Gothic. The Tour de Vergy, which now serves as a prison, is one of the few ancient edifices.

Excellent trout-fishing in the Louve, at Parez, 2 m. from Dôle.

The Canal which joins the Rhine to the Rhône passes near the town.

[The railroad to Besançon turns off here to the N. (Rte. 159).]

Dôle to Neuchâtel. 3 trains daily in 6 hrs.

Mont Barrey Stat.

Arc-Senans Stat.

Mouchard Junct. Stat. Here the rlys. to Salins, and to Poligny and Lons-le-Saulnier, diverge.

[Salins Stat. (Inns: Poste; Tête Noir; tolerable), a town of 9000 Inhab., which had the misfortune to be almost entirely consumed by a fire, which lasted for 3 days, in 1825. It is romantically situated in a narrow rocky gorge, and owes its name to the salt-works, Salines Royales, a vast edifice, 918 ft. long, surrounded by walls, in the midst of the valley. The salt is obtained from brine-springs rising below vaults of ancient construction. The weaker springs are conducted in pipes to the forest of Chaux, 15 m. off, where, after being evaporated in "maisons de graduation," they are boiled.

The Church of St. Anatole is an interesting edifice, and contains some good woodwork in the stalls of the choir. There are quarries of gypsum here.]

Mesnay-Arbois Stat.

Pont d'Hery Stat.

Andelot Stat.

La Joux Stat.

Frasne Stat.

Pontarlier Stat. Inns: the best is the Lion d'Or at Frambourg, near to the Fort du Joux;—Post (H. National), fallen off. This is the frontier town of France, a place of considerable antiquity and interest, containing 4890 Inhab., seated at a height of 2716 ft. above the sea-level, at the foot of the second ridge of the Jura, and at the débouché of the principal routes leading through that chain.

The road to the Swiss frontier, ascending by the side of the river Doubs, enters the pass of La Cluse, which may be called a mountain gateway between France and Switzerland, to St. Pierre de Joux. The defile is commanded by the Château de Joux, situated on the summit of a precipitous and nearly inaccessible rock, at the foot of which the roads from Pontarlier, Neuchâtel, and Lausanne unite. This frontier-fort was the prison of the unfortunate Toussaint L'Ouverture, when treacherously carried off from St. Domingo by command of Napoleon. He ended his days here, some say by violent means; but the sudden transition from the climate of the tropics to a dark dungeon, so dank and cold that the water drops from the roof in summer, and icicles congeal on the walls in winter, in the elevated region and biting atmosphere of the Jura, sufficiently explains the cause of his death, without the need of violence. His miserable cell still exists. He was buried in the prison church, with nothing to mark the grave, but it was bricked over, and is included in the new wall of the church. Here also was confined previously, "dans ce nid de hiboux, égayé par une compagnie d'invalides," as he termed it, another remarkable prisoner, Mirabeau. He was sent hither (1776) by virtue of a lettre de cachet obtained by his father, "L'Ami des Hommes," as he called himself, and the tyrant of his own family, as he proved himself. Mirabeau, having by his insinuating manners obtained leave from the governor to visit the town of Pontarlier on parole, made love to Sophie Monnier, the wife of a magistrate there, and eloped with her to Holland. She was the Sophie to whom he addressed some of his obscene writings, the 'Lettres datées du donjon de Vincennes.'

Rly. Pontarlier to Swiss frontier, 11 kil.

12 kil. Verrières Stat.

9 Boveresse.

3 Couvet. Viaduct.

3 Travers.

4 Noirague.

Auvernier Stat.: Junction with Littoral Railway, or line skirting W. shore of Lake of Neuchâtel—Tunnel.

From Pontarlier to Neuchâtel this line of rly. runs through a picturesque country, including the Gorge of the Reuse. It traverses numerous tunnels and viaducts, and finally commands a noble view of the Alpine chain on approaching

Neuchâtel Junct. Stat. Inn: Bellevue (see HANDBOOK for SWITZERLAND).

ROUTE 153.

MACON TO GENEVA: RAILWAY.

Paris.	Miles.	hrs.	min.
Macon . . . . .	275	9	0
Bourg . . . . .	300	10	15
Amberleux . . . . .	325	11	15
Culoz . . . . .	356	13	0
Geneva . . . . .	389	15	15

From Paris to Macon, see Rtes. 106, 108. 4 trains daily.

About a mile beyond Macon the railroad leaves on rt. the main line to Lyons, and crosses the Saône by a handsome bridge of considerable height, and then proceeds through a very fertile and well-cultivated plain, with no remarkable objects, except the line of the Jura.

Enter the Départ. de l'Ain.

Pont de Veyle Stat. 1450 Inhab.

Bourg (en Bresse) Stat.—Inns: H. de l'Europe;—du Midi;—du Palais. This place was capital of the ancient division of La Bresse, and is now chef-lieu of the Dépt. de l'Ain; Pop. 11,676. It passed into the possession of the House of Savoy 1285. It was taken by Francis I. in 1538, but was not finally gained by the French until 1600. It has neither trade nor manufactures.

In the Ch. of N. Dame, at the back of the choir, are 68 carved wood stalls 16th centy. On the walk called the Bastion is a statue (by David) of Bichat, the eminent anatomist, born at Thoirrette en Bresse. The only object of interest is the Church of Notre Dame de Brou, outside the walls, a very remarkable edifice in the latest style of Gothic, verging into the Renaissance, constructed between 1505 and 1536 by Margaret of Austria, who was created by her father, the Emperor Maximilian, and confirmed by her nephew, Charles V., governor of the Netherlands. Her motto, * fortune—infortune—forte une, is repeated in various parts of the building. The architect was "Maistre Loys Van Boghen," and the sculptor "Maistre Conrad." The W. front is surmounted by 3 gables; under it is a portal, consisting of a flattened arch, highly enriched with carvings, arabesques, and other ornaments. The decorations of the interior are concentrated upon the choir: rich and varied marbles, and peculiarly fine painted windows, contribute to the splendour of the shrine, which contains the superb monuments of Margaret of Austria, founder of the ch.; of her mother-in-law, Margaret de Bourbon (wife of Philip II., Duke of Savoy), who made the vow, which her daughter accomplished, of building this church; and in the centre that of her husband, Philibert le Beau, Duke of Savoy, which is the finest of all. The prince is represented above as dead, and below as dying. These tombs, of white marble, are the work of artists of Dijon named Conrad and Th. Meyt. The carving and decoration of the roodscreen, the woodwork of the choir, and the Tabernacle of the Lady Chapel, enriched with bas-reliefs, delicately sculptured out of alabaster, all deserve minute attention. The sun-dial in front of the portal, originally made in the 16th centy., was reconstructed by the astronomer Joseph de Lalande, who was born at Bourg, 1732.

* "In fortune or misfortune, there is one (woman) strong of heart."

[A railway is open in part from Bourg, through the district of La Bresse, which is famed for its poultry, honey, &c., to Salins (Rte. 148), passing St. Etienne du Bois, a little beyond which is Coligny, the cradle of the illustrious family which sent forth the leader of the Protestants, the Admiral Coligny. He was born at Châtillon-sur-Loing.

Lons-le-Saulnier (Inn: Chapeau Rouge) is situated in a basin nearly, surrounded by the mountains of the Jura, whose lower slopes are covered with vines. It is chef-lieu of the Dépt. of the Jura, and a flourishing town of nearly 8000 Inhab.

At one end of the town is the brine-spring, or well, 60 ft. deep, supplying the salt-works, Salines (whence the town received its ancient name, Ledo Salinarius), situated about a mile from the town, including vast evaporating houses for sparing fuel, by strengthening the brine before it is boiled.

Above the salt-well rise the ruins of the Castle Montmorot.

This is the birthplace of the revolutionary general Lecourbe.

Poligny Stat., on the high road from Dijon to Geneva, Rte. 148.

Arbois Stat. A good sparkling wine is grown here. It is the native place of General Pichegru.

Mouchard Stat.

Salins (Rte. 148).]

After leaving Bourg Stat. the Ch. of N. D. de Brou is seen on l. The Rly. keeps close to the foot of the Jura.

Pont d'Ain Stat. (Inn: H. de l'Europe), 1467 Inhab. The old pont is replaced by an iron suspension bridge. A little further on the Rly. crosses the Ain by a bridge of 6 arches.

Amberieu Junct., situated at the foot of the Jura. Here the Rly. from Lyons falls in (Rte. 156).

Soon after leaving Amberieu the Rly. plunges into the Jura mountains, ascending a narrow and very picturesque valley, and following, at first, the curves of the river Alberine, in a most wonderful manner. The vegetation extends to the summit of the hills, and among the vines châlets are seen.

St. Rambert de Joux Stat. Here are cotton and woollen mills.

After Tenay the line leaves the river; cultivation decreases, and the rocks become more precipitous: the rly. turns to the left and enters another verdant valley. It afterwards leaves the mountains and comes to the Rhône at Culoz Junct., a village of 1211 Inhab. at the foot of the Columbier mountain. [Here the line to Chambéry and St. Jean de Maurienne turns off.] The rly. now keeps close to the Rhône, only leaving it at one point in order to cut off an angle.

Seyssel Stat., a town of 1500 Inhab., on the Rhône. Here are quarries of limestone, which furnish the asphalt of Pyrimont-Seyssel.

[A few miles distant is

Nantua (Inns: H. du Nord;—l'Ecu de France, dear), a town of 3700 Inhab., finely situated in the midst of the Jura mountains, at the extremity of its lake, hemmed in by bare precipices and dark woods. It possesses some considerable manufactures. The Parish Church, originally attached to an abbey, is a "venerable and picturesque edifice, in the Romanesque style." The entrance, a round-headed arch, is surmounted by a circular window, and nearly all the rest of the building is early Pointed. The centre is surmounted by an octagonal lantern. Charles le Chauve, who died at Briord, 877, was buried here. The lake produces capital trout and crawfish.]

Several tunnels occur, one driven under the roots of the Mont Credo, near Seyssel, and the Viaduct of the Vizéronce, and the Viaduct of the Valserine at Bellegarde Stat.—Buffet (Inns: Poste, near the Viaduct;—H. de la Perte du Rhône), the frontier village of France, placed at the junction of the Valserine with the Rhône. Passports are here called for, and baggage examined likewise, on entering France. Ten minutes' walk from the inn is the Perte du Rhône, a contracted portion of the channel, encumbered with rocks, where the river plunges into the earth, and continues its subterranean course through caverns neither explored nor fathomed, which it has probably excavated by its own torrent in the limestone rocks, for about 120 yards. This phenomenon, however, is seen to perfection only when the river is low. At other times, when its volume exceeds that which the subterranean passage is able to contain, it flows along its upper bed, open to day, as well as below ground. At such times, says M. Simond, "la Perte du Rhône est perdue pour les voyageurs." The vault of rock which covers the subterranean canal has been partly removed by blasting, to facilitate the floatage of timber in detached trunks down the Rhône at high water; this tends to diminish the wonder of the Perte.

The width of the Rhône, which, on quitting the Lake of Geneva, is about 115 ft., is contracted at the Pont de Grezin, in the neighbourhood of the Perte, to 15 or 16 ft.

The bed of the Valserine, now crossed by the Rly. Viaduct of 11 arches, is more picturesque and scarcely less curious than the Perte. It is worth while to descend from the garden of the inn into the worn channel of this little river, which is almost dry in summer time, except when a rivulet of its water burrows into the clefts and fantastic bends of its calcareous rock.

After crossing the Viaduct the Rly. enters the Tunnel of the Credo, 2 m. long, which cost  $7\frac{1}{2}$  million fr. to pierce, and took  $3\frac{1}{2}$  years.

The wild and narrowly contracted gorge through which the Rhône forces its way between Bellegarde and Colonges, formed by the Mont Vouache on the side of Savoy, and the Mont Credo, the extremity of the Jura, on that of France, is thus described by Cæsar:—"Angustum et difficile inter Montem Juram, et flumen Rhodanum, quâ vix singuli currus ducerentur; mons autem altissimus impendebat, ut facile perpauci prohibere possent." Near the upper end of this defile, commanding the entrance into France, stands the very strong and picturesque fortress Fort de l'Ecluse, originally a fortress of the Dukes of Savoy, rebuilt by Vauban, but ruined by the Austrians, and repaired since 1824 by the French government, who have used infinite labour and expense to strengthen this position. Additional batteries have been cut in the rock above the lower fortress, and these communicate with the barracks below by a broad staircase, 100 ft. high, hewn inside the solid mountain.

Soon after Bellegarde the road enters Switzerland.

GENEVA in HANDBOOK for SWITZERLAND.

ROUTE 155.

DESCENT OF THE HAUT RHÔNE.—AIX IN SAVOY TO LYONS.

The Upper Rhône is navigated in summer by Steamers, which perform the voyage, descending from Aix to Lyons, in 8 hours, but requiring 13 hours for the ascent. The steamers are liable to cease running since the rlwy. (Rte. 156) has been opened.

From Port-au-Puer, whence the steamers started to cross the Lac de Bourget, a pleasant voyage of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hr., passing the Abbey of Haute-Combe, at the foot of the Mont du Chat, described in the SWISS HANDBOOK. The outlet from the lake is a narrow winding channel, called Canal de Savières, traversing the flat meadows once overflowed by the Rhône in a serpentine course, which some have supposed artificial, but which has, probably, only been enlarged by art. It enters the Rhône at Chanaz. rt. stands Lavours on a cone of limestone (here called molars). The village and Castle of Rochefort stand on another "molars."

The scenery of the Upper Rhône is fine; in places very picturesque and grand. The reaches of the river are larger than those of the Rhine; the banks are steeper and more rugged, and have a sort of resemblance to those of the Elbe above Pirna. It runs through a series of basins, terminated at either end by gorges (étranglemens, i. e. throttlings, as the French expressively term them), caused by the approximation of the hills on either side.

The Rhône, narrowed within a reduced channel, traverses a contracted defile between overhanging cliffs abreast of rt. Pierre Châtel, a fort of imposing appearance, belonging to France, built on the summit of a rock 1200 ft. high. It was a fortified convent, built by the Carthusians at the end of the 14th centy. During the first Empire it became a state prison, and many Spanish patriots were shut up in it. Opposite to it, at the narrowest part, a light iron bridge (Pont de la Balme) has been thrown across. This scene is perhaps equal in grandeur to any on the Rhine.

The river below alters its course; turning to the N.W., and emerging upon an open country, it is intersected by numerous low islands, once the resort of smugglers. Between (rt.) the Chateau of Murs and (l.) St. Didier, the river Guiers, which descends from the Grande Chartreuse (Rte. 131), joins the Rhône: it was the boundary of Savoy. Above the junction of the Guieres there is a suspension bridge, and a castle on the height near it.

rt. the ruined Castle of Groslée.

1. Castle of Quinsonas.

To this succeeds the defile of St. Alban, where the channel is contracted to a width of 60 ft.; it is walled in by rocks destitute of verdure.

The Sault du Rhône consists of 2 rapids formed by reefs of rock traversing the river from side to side. They are probably dangerous to small boats, but not to vessels so large and well managed as the steamers. Here the river is crossed by a handsome stone bridge, the central arch being 105 ft. span, erected 1826, on piles said to be Roman. The road to Bourg from Grenoble passes over it. On either side are extensive quarries of limestone, furnishing building materials for Lyons and other towns on the banks of the Rhône below.

rt. St. Sorlin, with the remains of ancient fortifications.

1. Vertrieux a modern château in the foreground, near the river, and behind it, on an isolated rock, its ancient castle rises in picturesque ruins.

rt. Lagnieu (below this, at Ville-neuve, a suspension bridge of wire spans the Rhône) is about 3 m. from Amberieu Stat. on the rly. (Rte. 156). The hills subside into a monotonous plain, stretching away to Lyons.

1. Château de la Salette. The entry of the cave called Grotte de la Balme is about 20 minutes' walk from the river.

rt. We pass the embouchure of the Ain, which gives its name to the Département extending along the rt. bank of the Rhône from Fort l'Ecluse nearly to Lyons. The Rhône below this assumes a very tortuous course between islands and sand-banks. Nothing announces the approach to a vast city, the borders of the river are so desolate and lonely. The steamer at length brings to, under the fortress-crowned heights of La Croix Rousse, at the quai in the Faubourg of Bresse, on the outskirts of rt. LYONS, described in Rte. 108.

ROUTE 156.

LYONS TO GENEVA—RAILWAY.

Lyons	Miles.
Amberieu . . . . .	28
Culoz . . . . .	59
Bellegarde . . . . .	79
Geneva . . . . .	100

4 trains daily, in 4 to 5½ hrs.; station St. Clair, Faubourg des Brotteaux. This Rly. was opened in 1858.

For some distance after quitting Lyons, and having crossed the Rhône, it runs parallel with the river up its rt. bank. The river, left to its own wayward impulse, straggles onward, overspreading the plain with wrecks of sterile sand and stones.

Montluel Stat. is a small town of about 3000 Inhab., on the Seraine, which is here crossed.

Mexémieux Stat., a town of 2439 Inhab. The Rly. now leaves the Rhône and crosses the Ain before reaching Amberieu Junct. Stat. For the rest of the route see Rte. 153.

ROUTE 159.

DIJON TO BELFORT, BY BESANCON—RAILWAY.

Dijon.	m.
Dôle . . . . .	30
Besançon . . . . .	58
Belfort . . . . .	117

This Rly. forms a communication between the south and the east of France; joining the Paris and Lyons line (Rte. 104) at Dijon, and the Paris and Mulhouse line (Rte. 162) at Belfort.

Dijon Stat. to Dôle Stat. (Rte. 148).

Mouchard Junct. Stat.

Dannemarie Stat.

Besançon Stat. (Inns: H. du Nord, best; H. National; H. de l'Europe).

This ancient and interesting city and first-rate fortress, originally capital of Franche-Comté, and a free city of the empire, now chef-lieu of the Dépt. of the Doubs (Pop. 35,345), is seated on the Doubs, which divides it into 2 parts, and nearly surrounds the ville haute, the larger and older portion. It is defended by a Citadel, built by Vauban, on an inaccessible rock, occupying the isthmus of the peninsula on which the town stands, and by several detached forts. There is a fine view from the citadel.

Besançon was the ancient Vesontio mentioned by Cæsar, and his description of it is so exact, that no other will better portray its position. He tells us that it was the largest town of the Sequani, and so strong by nature as to form an excellent basis for a campaign, because nearly surrounded by the river Dubis (Doubs) making a curve like a horseshoe about it, except for the space of about 600 ft., occupied by an eminence washed by the river on either side. A wall which surrounds this height converts it into a citadel, and unites it with the town. "Oppidum maximum Sequanorum; naturâ loci sic muniebatur ut magnam ad ducendum bellum daret facultatem: propterea quod flumen Dubis ut circino circumductum, pene totum oppidum cingit: reliquum spatium quod non est amplius pedum DC, quâ flumen intermittit, mons continet magnâ altitudine, ita ut radices montis ejus ex utraq[ue] parte ripæ fluminis contingunt."—L. i. It is interesting to find the classical description backed as it were by still existing remains of the Roman city, which are both numerous and curious, consisting not only of inscriptions, mosaics, pillars, and other fragments, but of buildings, the chief and oldest of which is a Triumphal Arch, still tolerably perfect, ornamented with niches, statues, and reliefs, called la Porte Noire. It is of a low period of art, and much defaced by time and violence; it leads up to the Citadel.

The old and narrow bridge over the Doubs is said also to rest on Roman foundations.

The Porte Taillée, on the E. side, is an ancient gateway of solid masonry, built in a cleft of the rock, which was tunnelled through by the Romans for the passage of an aqueduct, constructed by them, to convey water to the city from the village Arcier, 7 m. distant, considerable fragments of which are still visible along the road leading to that village from the Porte Rivotte. Outside the walls are the remains of an Amphitheatre.

The extensive promenade of Chamarr, traversed by 2 branches of the Doubs, is said to occupy the site, as well as retain in part the name, of the Roman "Campus Martius."

The Cathedral of St. Jean has a fine Gothic nave; an apse at the E.; the high altar at the W. end.

The other churches are comparatively modern. The Palais de Justice was built 1749 to receive the court of the parliament of the province, removed hither from Dôle by Louis XIV.

Ant. Perrenot, Card. Granvelle, the able minister of the Emp. Charles V. and of Philip II. in the Low Countries, himself a native of Franche-Comté, born at Ornans, spent many years here, when disgraced through the intrigues of his enemies, occupying himself with literary pursuits. He contributed to the enlargement of the College founded by his father, and he built the Palais Granvelle, in the style of the Renaissance, uniting (like the schools at Oxford) the various orders of architecture, one above another. The library contains 60 folio vols. of his letters. The Café Granville, in this building, is the best in the town.

In the Musée, partly the bequest of a native named Paris, are assembled objects of art and antiquity of various degrees of interest. There are 400 paintings. On the W. of the town is an Arsenal; also a School of Artillery.

Trout are abundant in the Doubs; fly-fishing is little known or practised. 20 lbs. fish are caught here.

Watch-making, introduced from Switzerland about 40 years ago, is the most important manufacture here, employing 2000 persons, who work at home for large houses.

Besançon stands on the important line of inland navigation formed to connect the Rhine with the Rhône, partly by making the Doubs navigable: it was originally called Canal du Monsieur, now Canal du Rhône au Rhin.

History.—In the vicinity of this city Cæsar defeated Ariovistus. Besançon was taken by Louis XIV. in person 1660, and the possession of it was confirmed to France at the peace of Nime-guen. It was fruitlessly besieged by the Allies in 1814.

The Rly. now follows the beautiful valley of the Doubs, esteemed by some superior to that of the Meuse.

The Doubs, a doubling stream, rises in the Jura, at the foot of Mont Rixon, 3122 ft. above the sea-level, and flows for 60 m. to the N.E. as if to join the Rhine, but is turned to the S.W., on approaching Montbéliard, by the spur or ridge which connects the Vosges with the Jura, traversed by our road between Thann and Béfort. It descends past Besançon and joins the Saône below Dôle. It has been canalised and made navigable for barges of 20 tons, and forms a limb of the inland water communication connecting the Rhine with the Rhône. It is crossed by numerous suspension bridges.

Roche Stat.

Baume les Dames Stat.

L'Isle-sur-le-Doubs Stat.

Montbéliard Stat. (Germ. Mumpelgard) (Inns: Lion Rouge; Balance), a small walled town of 5000 Inhab., the majority Protestants, and industrious; it is prettily situated in the valley of the Allan and Luzine. The most conspicuous building is the Château, on a commanding height; the greater part a modern construction of the last centy., flanked by ancient round towers. It is now converted into a prison. This town has to boast of being the birthplace of the distinguished naturalists George and Frederick Cuvier (b. 1769): a bronze statue of George C. by David D'Angers has been raised to his memory by his countrymen, opposite the house in which he was born.

Belfort Stat. (Rte. 162).

---

SECTION IX.

CHAMPAGNE.—LORRAINE.—ALSACE.—THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS.

ROUTE	PAGE	ROUTE	PAGE
162 Paris to Mulhouse and Bâle, by [ Provins ] Troyes, Vesoul, Langres—RAIL . . . . .	558	170 Strasburg to Bâle—RAIL- ROAD—by Mulhouse . . . . .	581
164 Blesme to Chaumont and Cha- lindrey—RAIL . . . . .	564	175 Châlons-sur-Marne to Verdun	584
165 Paris to Strasburg (Railway), by Meaux, Epernay, Bar-le-Duc , Châlons-sur-Marne, Nancy, and Lunéville . . . . .	564	178 Paris to Mézières and Givet, by Soissons and Reims .— The Upper Meuse . . . . .	586
167 The Vosges (A)—Nancy to Thann, by Plombières —RAIL .	577	180 Mézières to Thionville, by Sedan and Montmédy . . . . .	592
168 The Vosges (B).—Strasburg to Epinal, by Mutzig and St. Diey . [ The Ban de la Roche ] .	580	181 Nancy to Metz and Forbach— Metz to Trèves, by Thionville (RAIL).— The Upper Moselle .	593
		182 Metz to Luxembourg, or Arlon, by Longwy. . . . .	596

PRELIMINARY INFORMATION.

Travellers going to Switzerland or Italy, and not wishing to visit Paris, have now a direct route opened to them by the branch railway (Rte. 187) from Lille, by St. Quentin, Laon, Reims, to Epernay, Châlons, upon the line to Strasbourg.

The N.E. departments of France deserve to be visited by lovers of Gothic architecture, for the sake of a series of monumental edifices, very grand, and some of them peculiar and original in style.

Besides Reims, Strasbourg, Troyes, and Metz—first-class cathedrals—and Toul, the following, for the most part, belong to the end of the 12th or early part of the 13th centy., when Gothic art was in its vigour:—Laon, a noble edifice and grandly placed, rising above the plain with its 4 stately towers; Noyon, with its original W. porch; Soissons, distinguished for its exquisite S. transept; St. Quentin, Meaux, Châlons-sur-Marne, and near it Notre Dame de l'Epine, a fine church of the 15th centy. The ruined abbeys of Ourscamp, near Noyon; of Longpont, near Soissons; and the castles of Coucy, Pierrefonds, &c., should not be forgotten.

Champagne is a barren province, and very dreary and unpicturesque, so that to it has been added the curious deprecatory epithet of la Pouilleuse, which the reader may translate for himself. To atone for the want of beauty and fertility, however, it possesses the most famous vineyards, which are alone a mine of enormous wealth. In Champagne the vine occupies only 150,000 acres, yet its produce amounts to nearly 2,500,000*l.* a year (see Rte. 165).

In the agricultural districts the population is collected almost entirely in remote villages, isolated cottages or farms being nearly unknown, and the peasant has to trudge miles to get to his work.

The banks of the Upper Meuse between Mézières and Givet are highly picturesque, little known, and much recommended to visitors to explore either by boat or by rail (Rte. 178).

ROUTE 162.

PARIS TO MULHOUSE AND BÂLE, BY TROYES—RAILWAY.

Paris.	Miles.
Longueville jn. stat. . . .	56
Flamboin jn. . . . .	59
Nogent-sur-Seine . . . .	69
Troyes . . . . .	104
Bar-sur-Aube . . . . .	137
Langres . . . . .	185
Challindrey jn. . . . .	191
Vésoul . . . . .	236
Belfort . . . . .	275
Mulhouse . . . . .	305
Basle . . . . .	325

This road, opened 1858, is shorter than that by Strasbourg, which is 402 m.: 3 trains daily; Express in about 13½ hrs., being about an hour less than by the Strasbourg line: it is 3 fr. 25 c. cheaper first class. Beyond Troyes there is only a single line, and stoppages sometimes occur. The Stat. at Paris is the same as the Strasbourg Stat., Boulevard de Sebastopol, and the line follows the Strasbourg line for about 7 m. out of Paris, as far as Noisy le Sec.

Nogent-sur-Marne Stat. Here the Marne is crossed on a lofty viaduct.

Nangis Stat., 2185 Inhab.: St. Martin's ch.

Longueville Junct. Stat. Not far hence St. Loup de Naud has a fine ch.

[Branch hence 3 m. to

Provins.—Inn: H. de la Fontaine. Provins, formerly the capital of La Brie, and residence of the Comtes de Champagne, was at one time a flourishing manufacturing town of 60,000 Inhab. It is now reduced to 7256, and a large part of the space enclosed by its old walls is vacant and turned into gardens. The objects of interest are confined to the older and upper town, to which the stranger may at once proceed by a steep street leading into La Place du Châtel. Here, conspicuous from far and near, rises an ancient truncated tower of great size and solid masonry, known as the Grosse Tour de César, though undoubtedly built in the 12th centy. It is square at the base; but in its second story 4 turrets or bartizans detach themselves from the centre, which becomes octagonal, and is connected by flying buttresses with the turrets. The upper story is removed.

At present it consists of a vaulted hall, and a dungeon below, and it serves as bell-tower to the neighbouring church of St. Quiriace, remarkable for its early date (1160) and plain massive architecture; it is surmounted in the centre by an ugly cupola of 17th centy., and beneath is a curious crypt.

In the Tresor are preserved the robes of St. Edme, Archbishop of Canterbury. There are some remains of a cloister. In the Rue St. Jean is La Grange des Dîmes, the tithe-barn of the canons of St. Quiriace, and still serving as a corn warehouse, consisting of 2 stories carefully vaulted, and resting on piers in the Pointed style. St. Quiriace was a converted Jew, who helped the Empress Helena to dig on the site of Calvary, and who found for her the true cross.

The Porte de St. Jean is the best preserved of the city gates, and a capital specimen of mediæval fortification. Pass through it and turn to the rt., and you will find the old ramparts nearly perfect, flanked and defended by 9 watch-towers in succession, rising out of the fosse. Turning an angle, 5 more towers appear, and you pass on to another gateway—La Porte de Jouy: just within it stands a vaulted crypt or hall resting on 20 pillars, called Bureau du St. Esprit. It is worth while to continue the walk outside the walls as far as the Porte de Culoison, near which, in the Ville Basse, is the ch. of St. Ayoul (Aygulphus), much mutilated, having its apse or chevet walled off from the choir, but containing parts of interest. It possesses a remarkable altarpiece of carved wood, the work of Pierre Blassot of Amiens (d. 1663).

The Ch. of St. Croix consists of nave and aisles of 13th centy., to which outer aisles were added at a later date. The choir and its chapels are of 16th centy. The pillars of the chevet are extremely elegant. The font deserves notice.

The chapel of the hospital contains the metal shrine in which was deposited the heart of Thibaut VII., Comte de Champagne, who founded here, 1248, an hospital for pilgrims. Part of the cloister exists.

Provins has for centuries been celebrated for Roses (improperly called Provençe roses); and though the cultivation of them for purposes of commerce has now nearly ceased, they are still partially grown to make "conserve," and to colour bonbons. The Provins rose has a rich crimson hue, and is said to have been brought by the Crusaders from the Holy Land.

The 2 small rivers, the Durtin and Vouzie, above whose confluence Provins is built, turn no less than 50 or 60 corn-mills; their waters are thought to be well fitted for dyeing, and there are consequently numerous dye-works on their banks.]

The Rly. descends from the tableland of la Bris into the valley of the Seine before

Flamboin Junct. Stat.

[Hence a branch to Montereau on the Lyons line (Rte. 104).]

Nogent-sur-Seine Stat. (Inns: Cygne d'Or;—Cygne de la Croix), a thriving town (3486 Inhab.) prettily situated on the l. bank of the Seine, at the point where it becomes navigable. It is intersected in the middle by the Ile des Ecluses, which is connected with either bank by stone bridges, one of which was blown up on February 11, 1814; when Nogent was bravely defended, step by step, and house by house, by a small body of French, under Bourmont, against the Allies, who finally carried the place by storm.

Here is a handsome Ch., St. Laurent, in the late Gothic of the 15th centy., surmounted by a fine tower, constructed between 1521 and 1542; also agreeable walks round the town.

At St. Aubin, about 4 m. beyond Nogent, may be seen the chimneys and roofs of an iron-forge, now abandoned, which occupies the site of the famous monastery of the Paraclete, founded by Abélard, 1123. It afterwards became the retreat of Heloise, and the final resting-place of both. In 1792, when the abbey was sold, the coffin containing their bodies was removed to Nogent, and afterwards transferred to Paris, where it is now deposited in Père la Chaise, under a Gothic monument, originally erected at the monastery of St. Marcel, near Châlons, over the remains of Abélard. The monument raised over the two lovers at the Paraclete, ornamented with a figure of the Trinity, was destroyed at the Revolution, 1794. A marble pillar was placed over the mouth of their burial vault, within the area once occupied by the church of the Paraclete, by the late Gen. Pajol, the owner of the ground. Nothing now remains on the spot but the empty vault.

Romilly Stat. In the Abbey Ch. of Scellières, of which nothing remains, the body of Voltaire was buried, by favour of his nephew the Abbé Mignot, after the curé of St. Sulpice had refused to receive it. At the Revolution 1790 the Abbey was sold, and Voltaire was taken up and transported to the Pantheon.

TROYES Stat. (Inns: Hôtel des Couriers;—H. de France, rue de la Monnaie;—H. St. Laurent;—Grand Mulet), chef-lieu of the Dépt. de l'Aube (Pop. 25,656), seated on the l. bank of the Seine, branches of which, conducted through the town in canals, contribute to its industry and cleanliness. In the reign of Henri IV. Troyes had 60,000 Inhab., so that it will be perceived its present state is one of decay, many of its most industrious citizens having been banished by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. "This ancient capital of Champagne, in which the peculiar provincial character of the 'Francs Champenois' is thought to be exhibited in its most genuine aspect, still contains much that is interesting. The greater part is of timber and plaster, or parquetry, exactly in the old English style, though, as in England, the number of these venerable buildings diminishes day by day.

"The Cathedral, dedicated to St. Peter, displays a splendid specimen of the flamboyant Gothic, full of bold inverted curves, open borders of festooned pendants, and all those luxuriances which preceded the abandonment of the style. It was commenced early in the 13th cent., and some of the chapels at the E. end may date from 1223: the choir is of the 14th, and the nave dates from 1492. The W. front, begun 1506, was not finished until the end of the centy., consequently unity of design and style is not to be looked for here. The church is 374 ft. long, 96 ft. high to the point of the roof, and has 5 aisles, besides the side chapels of the nave, producing beautiful combinations of perspective. It is undergoing restoration, and the choir is almost rebuilt. Those who are fond of painted glass will here have much enjoyment, for the windows are most brilliant and elegant. All the clerestory windows in the nave and choir retain their original glass of the 13th and 15th centuries. In this church, and before the high altar, May 20, 1420, was our Henry V. affianced to the Princess Katherine; and on the following day was signed the memorable Treaty of Troyes,—that treaty so full of disaster, by which the victor of Azincour was declared to be the heir of Charles VI., and his successor in the kingdom. Charles VI. was present, together with very many magnates and nobles, English and French; but, above all, Philip Duke of Burgundy, by whose intervention the treaty was negotiated and concluded.

"The Ch. of St. Urbain is unfinished. It contains a great deal of open tracery, such as is found at Cologne, but of which there are very few examples on this side of the Rhine. Maréchal Vauban, who studied Gothic architecture attentively, used to say of this church that it was built of coupons."—F. P. St. Urbain was founded by (Jacques Pantaleon) Pope Urban IV., son of a shoemaker of Troyes, 1262, on the site of his paternal abode, and is remarkable as an example of great richness of middle pointed Gothic, yet uninfluenced by the Flamboyant style.

The marriage of Henry V. took place June 2, 1420, in the Church of St. Jean, now much mutilated externally. It encloses a well which furnishes water to the neighbouring quarter of the town, and possesses an altar-piece, the Baptism of Christ, painted and given by Mignard, who was born in the parish; also some good glass.

The Sainte Madeleine (13th centy.) possesses a stone rood-loft (jube) of great beauty and richness of decoration, the work of John Gualdo, an Italian, 1514, who is buried beneath it. His epitaph states that he awaits the last Judgment "sans craindre d'être écrasé." Most of the statues have been destroyed, and some replaced by wood. Those which remain are good. In this church, at St. Nicholas, and at St. Nizier, are painted glass windows.

St. Pantaleon, erected 1527, is ornamented internally with statues by natives artists. The nave is lofty. The windows "en grisaille" deserve notice.

St. Remi has a fine spire, and a bronze statue of Christ by F. Girardon, a Troyen.

The Chapelle de St. Gilles, in the Faubourg de Croncels, is of wood (end of 15th centy.), and therefore curious. 1 m. beyond this is the village Ch. of St. André, which has a fine doorway (1580).

The H. de Ville was built 1624-70 from a design of Mansard.

The Public Library, rue St. Loup, contains 100,000 vols. and 2000 MSS., including part of the library of the Abbey of Clairvaux! the hall in which they are deposited is decorated with painted windows representing events in the life of Henri IV. On the ground floor is the Musée of paintings and sculptures, including some architectural fragments from Gothic buildings now destroyed.

"The ancient Boucheries consist of several long low ranges of timber buildings, evidently quite as old as the time of our Henry V. It used to be an article of popular belief that flies never entered this building, which some writers ascribed to a property of the wood, others to the construction of the edifice, and others to a spell or charm of St. Loup. The immunity, however, like all other privileges, has disappeared.

"Troyes would delight an architect. The houses are generally old and picturesque, and there are several churches besides those which we have noticed. Troyes having suffered less than many places during the Revolution."—F. P.

The Hôtel Megrigny is a good specimen of the architecture of the Renaissance, flanked by 2 turrets.

In the environs of Troyes, about 3 m. from the town, are the churches of Pont St. Marie, and, in the opposite direction, of St. André, both having Renaissance façades of the 16th centy.

The name of Troyes will always be familiar to us from our Troy-weight, which obtains its name from the standard of this town.

The city has little commercial activity; it is evidently the centre of an agricultural community. A Canal communicates from Troyes to the navigable part of the Seine, and also to the Canal of Burgundy.

The chief manufacture carried on in and around Troyes is that of nightcaps.

Troyes is a very important military position, being the centre where various roads meet on the l. of the Seine, in the midst of a plain cut up by streams and woody morasses. As a proof of this, in the course of the wonderful campaign of 1814, when Napoleon kept at bay so many enemies pressing on him from all sides, it was twice taken by the Allies and once by the French. In the month of February the portion of the Allied armies encamped round the walls amounted to 100,000 men, and they required 12 hrs. to march through it. Here the first steps for the Restoration of the Bourbons were taken, and the white cockade was publicly displayed in France for the first time after a lapse of more than 20 years.

The Railroad descends into the valley of the Aube, whence the Dépt. gets its name.

Jessains Stat. Diligence to Brienne Napoléon, 1½ hr.'s drive = 8 m.

[At Brienne, on the Aube, Napoleon went to school—a poor friendless Corsican boy, not 10 years old, able to speak no language but Italian, 1779. The military college which he attended was suppressed 1790, and the building sold and pulled down. At this spot, 30 years after, he attempted the masterly manœuvre of cutting the army of Silesia in two, by marching suddenly from Châlons and interposing his forces between Blücher and Schwartzenberg, so as to prevent their junction.

The town, of 2000 Inhab., was once named after its handsome Château, seen from the Rly., built by Louis de Lomenie, last Comte de Brienne, with the fortune obtained by his marriage with the daughter of a fermier général. It was the head-quarters of Blücher during the memorable engagement of Jan. 29, 1814, alluded to above. After resisting the assaults and bombardments of the French during the whole day, by which the town had been set on fire, and nearly destroyed, the Prussian commander was very nearly surprised and made prisoner by a party of French grenadiers, who burst into the town at night through the park. He escaped, it is said, by leading his horse down a stair. Almost at the same spot, and at the same time, the career of Buonaparte, who was advancing to enter the town, was nearly cut short by a Cossack, one of a band who had dashed unawares upon the Emperor's staff, and, singling him out from the rest, charged him with his lance in rest, and was only arrested by a bullet from the pistol of Gourgaud, which brought the daring lancer to the ground, when so near to the Emperor that he fell at his feet. Napoleon took up his head-quarters in the Château, which he promised to make an imperial residence or military school, to compensate to the inhabitants for the losses his cannon had caused them. His promises were not destined to be fulfilled; but he left by his will a million of francs to the town, of which 400,000 fr. has been paid by Napoleon III. A statue in bronze is placed in front of the Mairie.]

Bar-sur-Aube Stat.—Inn: La Poste. Bar is a town of 4780 Inhab., at the foot of Mont St. Germaine, on the rt. bank of the Aube, here crossed by a stone bridge, upon which a chapel was erected to mark the spot where Charles VII. caused the Bastard de Bourbon, who had revolted against him, to be broken on the wheel, and his body, sewn up in a sack, to be cast into the river, 1440.

There are 2 churches here: St. Pierre is very ancient, and its pavement sunk considerably below the level of the ground; and St. Maclou, which has a curious altar-piece of wood, carved and gilt. There is good trout-fishing in the Aube.

An important and hard-contested action was fought here, Feb. 27, 1814, when the Allies, under Schwartzberg, retreating before the French general Oudinot, turned round and made a stand, the result of which was that the French were obliged to retire across the river, having lost 3000 men, the Allies 2000. Schwartzberg and Wittgenstein were both wounded here. On the preceding 25th of February a conference of the ministers of the allied sovereigns was held here, in which the firmness of Lord Castlereagh in refusing the English subsidies to Bernadotte, who was hanging on the French frontier unwilling to take a part in the invasion of France, unless he detached 2 corps of his army in support of Blücher, contributed in no slight degree to decide the wavering policy of the Allies, and to bring the war to an end. These reinforcements, thus extorted from the Swedish army, enabled the Allies to fight the battle of Laon, and put a stop to Napoleon's successful efforts to arrest the march of the Allies on Paris.

Clairvaux Stat. Near this is (or rather was) the Abbey of Clairvaux, founded 1114, in a savage glen, previously known as the Vallée d'Absinthe, by St. Bernard, then only 24 years old. It is now converted into a very capacious prison, or Maison Centrale de Détention. Its noble church, in which kings and princes were interred, not inferior to Notre Dame of Paris, no longer exists. After withstanding the storm of the Revolution, it was pulled down in the first year of the Restoration, without leaving one stone upon another, not even St. Bernard's monument, in order to make room for a prison-yard!

We quit the valley of the Aube on leaving Bar, and soon after enter the Dépt. Haute Marne.

Colombey les Deux Eglises. [About 15 m. to the N. is the Château de Cirey, where Voltaire passed 5 years, 1734-39, in retirement, in the company of the Marquise du Châtelet, the pair quarrelling at times like cat and dog. He composed in this retreat, 'Mahomet,' 'Merope,' 'L'Enfant Prodigue,' and the 'Discours Philosophique sur l'Homme.' The château is now deserted and partly ruined.]

In the midst of a country destitute of picturesqueness, but abounding in iron furnaces, works, forges, &c., stands

Chaumont Junct. Stat.—Buffet—(Inns: Ecu;—La Poste), chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Haute Marne, a dull town of 5991 Inhab., planted on a sort of elevated platform on the l. bank of the Marne, and retaining some fragments of old fortifications. A square tower alone remains of the Castle of Haute Feuille, which belonged to the Comtes de Champagne. Here is a sort of Triumphal Arch, begun by Napoleon, finished by Louis XVIII.

The Treaty of Chaumont signed here by the ministers of the allied sovereigns, March 1st, 1814, stipulated that, in case Napoleon should refuse to agree to the reduction of the territory of France to the limits existing previous to the Revolution, the four allied powers, Austria, Russia, Prussia and England, should each maintain an army of 150,000 men in the field, and that Great Britain should contribute a subsidy of 5 millions a year towards their support; it also provided for the reorganization of the other states of Europe.

There are some manufactures in the town, and it has a large trade in the iron made in the neighbouring iron-works: iron is the staple manufacture of the Dépt. Wood and charcoal are chiefly employed in smelting the ore. From Chaumont a road strikes off to Bourbonne-les-Bains.

The country from Chaumont to Langres is such as one would wish to pass in the dark, so few attractions has it for the eye. The road runs up the valley of the Marne.

[At Chaumont a branch from Blesme, on the Paris and Strasbourg Rly., falls in as described in Rte. 164. Time and distance from Paris to Chaumont by either line about the same.]

Langres Stat. (Inns: H. de l'Europe;—Poste: both tolerable), a picturesque town, situated on the slope of a hill skirted by the Marne, at a considerable elevation: 8570 Inhab. It is of military importance, as commanding the passage from the basin of the Saône into that of the Seine, and it has consequently been converted into a strong fortress. The defences on the S. side are very complicated. Here a strong citadel was built by Louis-Philippe. Langres is mentioned by Cæsar as capital of the Lingones, and its antiquity is undoubted. The Cathedral (St. Mamée), a large and interesting ch., is its finest edifice: it is built chiefly in the Romanesque style, with ornaments borrowed apparently from classic architecture; some portion, however, is Gothic. The portal, a work of the last centy., is quite inappropriate, and the choir-screen, resembling an arch of triumph, built 1555, is not much better.

St. Didier, the oldest church, is turned into a Museum, in which not only various Roman remains dug up on the spot, but also some Egyptian antiquities, pictures, and a collection of birds from S. Africa, have been deposited.

The only vestige of a Roman building is an arch included in the modern town wall, not far from the Porte du Marché, raised in honour of the 2 Gordians, A.D. 240.

Diderot was born at Langres: he was the son of a cutler.

Langres is a sort of French Sheffield, and produces the best fine cutlery.

[About 30 m. N.E. of Langres is

Bourbonne-les-Bains (Inns: La Maison Bauvain, best and excellent; board and lodging 8 to 10 frs. a day;—H. du Commerce;—Voages;—Tête du Boeuf). This watering-place is resorted to on account of its saline hot springs, which have a temperature of 131° Fahr., and are efficacious in rheumatism, scrofula, and paralysis. The bathing establishment contains about 50 baths, and there is accommodation for more than 1000 visitors. The number usually exceeds 800, exclusive of military, who are received in a Government hospital.

The situation is elevated, the climate rainy, and the resources are said to be few. The springs rise out of the Muschelkalk, which formation, intermixed with variegated sandstones, composes the base of the surrounding district. This place can be reached more easily from Gray (Rte. 148).]

Chalindrey Junct. Stat.

[Here a branch to Gray and Dôle goes off (Rte. 148).]

Port-d'Atelier Junct. Stat. Branch rly. to Plombières, by Taverny and St. Loup Luxeuil.

Port-sur-Saône, 2067 Inhab., is situated on the Saône, here crossed by a bridge. The Romans called it Portus Abucinus. The Saône becomes navigable at Gray, 30 m. lower down; but a canal has been undertaken to extend the water-way up to this point. It is a hilly country.

Vésoul Stat. (Inns: Cigogne;—Madeleine). Although chef-lieu of the Dépt. Haute Saône, this is a dull and inconsiderable town of 6061 Inh., possessing absolutely no interest, but seated in a fertile country.

The road reaches the hills at Champagne, near which there are coal-mines employing many hands.

The Dept. of the Haut Rhin is entered at Essort, a little short of Belfort, or Belfort Junct. Stat. (Inn: L'Ancienne Poste), a fortress of first class in strength and importance, commanded by a Citadel, defending the entrance into France from this side of Switzerland. It was laid out by Vauban; but, besides its own formidable fortifications, it is protected by an intrenched camp capable of holding 30,000 men. The town numbers about 7500 Inhab., and is seated on the Savoureuse.

Here the lines from Dijon (Rte. 159) and Besançon fall in.

The road lies through a hilly country, passing the iron-mines of Prouce.

Altkirch Stat. is a manufacturing town of 3028 Inhab., and a place of some antiquity. Its old castle, in ruins, was occupied by the archdukes of Austria when they visited Alsace. It is seated on the Ill.

Mulhouse Junct. Stat. on the Strasbourg and Bâle line (Rte. 170).

ROUTE 164.

BLESME TO CHAUMONT AND CHALINDREY.

Blesme.	Miles.
St. Dizier . . . . .	11
Joinville . . . . .	30
Chaumont . . . . .	54

This is a short line joining the Paris and Strasbourg line (Rte. 165) with the Paris and Mulhouse line (Rte. 162), and by it, Langres, Mulhouse, &c., may be reached as quickly and easily as by the Paris and Mulhouse line.

Blesme (Rte. 165).

St. Dizier Stat. (Inn: Soleil, tolerable), a very long and very narrow town, with 6400 Inhab., stands at the point where the Marne first becomes navigable. It has a modern aspect, having been almost entirely burnt down 1775 through the carelessness of a baker. The Church, at the N. end, has a pretty and singular variety of Gothic windows. A portion remains of the old Castle, which must have witnessed the siege of the place in 1544, by the Spanish army of Charles V., commanded by Ferdinand de Gonzaga, assisted by Maurice of Saxony, Albert of Brandenburg, and the Prince of Orange (killed at a spot marked by a cross), who served under him. The town, commanded by the Comte de Sancerre and the Seigneur de Lalande, resisted for a month; and, by thus delaying the march of the Spaniards on Paris, enabled Francis I. to collect his forces to oppose them. St. Dizier is now no longer a fortress. The produce of the forges and forests of the Dépt. of the Haute Marne, which is more abundantly supplied with wood and iron than almost any other in France, is embarked here on the river.

Joinville Stat. (Inn: Soleil d'Or), an interesting town, prettily situated on the Marne, surrounded by vineyards. The ancient and noble castle of the Prince de Joinville, the cradle of the Ducs de Guise, in which the famous "Ligue du Bien Public" was signed, 1585, was sold, in order to be pulled down, by Philippe Egalité, Duc d'Orléans, 1790, and no vestiges of it exist. The building called Petit Château was a country seat of the Duc de Guise, the owner of the town. The domain was created a principality by Henri II., in behalf of François Duc de Guise, who was assassinated by Poltrot. The Sire de Joinville, the faithful servant and biographer of St. Louis, was born here. There are many iron-works on the borders of the river, the supply of ore being very abundant.

Chaumont Junct. Stat. (Rte. 162.)
Chalindrey Junct. Stat.

ROUTE 165.

PARIS TO STRASBURG (RAILWAY)—NANCY.

Paris.	Miles.
Meaux . . . . .	23
Epernay Junct. . . . .	69
Châlons-sur-Marne Junct.	108
Blesme Junct. . . . .	135
Bar-le-Duc . . . . .	158
Nancy . . . . .	220
Sarrebouurg . . . . .	268
Strasbourg . . . . .	312

This Rly. is the Great Eastern of France, and makes a communication with Metz and Prussia by Frouard (Rte. 181), with Baden by Kehl, and with Switzerland by Bâle. This route to Bâle is rather longer and dearer than that by Troyes (Rte. 162). N.B. Through tickets to Bâle are considerably cheaper than tickets to Strasbourg and on to Bâle.

Fast trains from Paris to Strasbourg in 11½ hrs.

Terminus in Paris, Rue et Place de Strasbourg. It is a splendid edifice, with a rose window at one end.

Buffets at Meaux, Château-Thierry, Epernay, Bar-le-Duc, Nancy, Metz, Sarrebourg, and Strasburg.

It issues forth on the N. side of Paris, between the Faubourgs of St. Denis and St. Martin; it is carried over the Canal St. Denis, the ditch of the Fortifications, and the Route de Flandres.

The banks of the Marne are reached near Lagny Stat., a town on the l. bank of the Marne. Orchards and gardens.

The winding Marne is twice crossed, at Chalifert (short tunnel, l.) and at Isle; and the Railway runs between it (rt.) and the Canal de l'Ourocq, to

Meaux Stat. (Inns: H. Grignan; H. des Trois Rois, near the Cath., fair; Palais Royal), on a height above the Marne, round whose base winds the Rly. Population, 8356. It is a bishop's see, and its Cathedral (St. Etienne) is a noble Gothic edifice (12th to 16th centy.), but not finished; its vaulted roof is 109 feet high. Obs. the pointed triforium of choir, the open parclose work, and the monument of Philippe of Castille, bearing his kneeling effigy, in armour, bareheaded, his helmet at his side. Here also are the tombs of several bishops, and the Monument of Bossuet, "the Eagle of Meaux," as he has been called, who long time filled the see. His marble statue, sitting, erected by the Dépt. 1820, is stiff, hard, and by no means successful as a work of art. His grave escaped, by a wonder, violation from the Vandals of the Revolution, and even the pulpit from which he preached remains. Some relics of him are preserved in the Evêché—the study in which he wrote, and the avenue of yews in the garden where he used to meditate. A house behind the cathedral is a good specimen of domestic architecture of the 15th century, of stone, flanked by turrets. There is an Hospice here, founded by a citizen, Jean Rose, now turned into a Séminaire. Three abbeys, numerous convents, and 4 out of its 7 churches, were destroyed at the Revolution, and scanty ruins alone exist. A magnificent Hôpital Général has been built here. Meaux was besieged 1358 by the revolted serfs or Jacquerie, when the Duchess of Orleans and 300 ladies of rank were shut up within the walls. The small garrison were relieved by Gaston Phœbus and the Captal de Buch, and the peasants defeated (see Froissart, b. x. c. 184). Meaux furnishes Paris with a large supply of corn and flour from the water-mills on the Marne. A sort of cream cheese (fromage de Brie), is peculiar to the place, and is considered very delicate.

[France.]

6 Trilport Stat. The Marne is crossed before and after traversing the tunnel (2) of Armentières, 672 yards.

La Ferté-sous-Jouarre Stat. (Inns: Epée; France; H. du Grand Condé); a town of 2907 Inhab. (Jovis Ara?), on the Marne, here varied by islands, in one of which, united to the banks by a bridge of 5 arches, is an old mill. Here is a pretty Pavillon, of the time of Louis XIII., which, it is said, once belonged to the Duc de St. Simon. The Château de Laguy, in the Faubourg de Condets, deserves mention. La Ferté is famed for its millstones, the best in the world, quarried in the vicinity out of beds of a cellular siliceous rock, known as Burr stone, almost peculiar to the freshwater basin of Paris, in which it forms nearly the uppermost stratum. The stone is very full of cavities, and consequently does not require picking. The blocks are extracted in cylinders, by driving in wedges of wood and iron. A good millstone, 6½ ft. diameter, costs about 48l.; but nearly all those which are used are composed of pieces (carreaux) bound together with iron-hoops. The number of millstones extracted amounts to 1200 pairs yearly, which are chiefly sent to England and America.

The height opposite La Ferté is crowned by the antiquated town of Jouarre, where the Gothic ch. and its rare Font and reliquaries deserve notice. La Ferté, as before noticed, means la fortifiée. The Marne is crossed by an iron bridge of 3 arches.

The banks of the Marne are very prettily varied to Château-Thierry Stat. (Inn: H. d'Angleterre, tolerable), a neat and pretty town of 4697 Inhab., agreeably situated on the Marne. On the summit of the gently sloping hill on which it is built are the fragments of a Castle, which has now nearly disappeared, constructed, it is said, by Charles Martel for the young King Thierry IV. The site, and the ground around these mouldering walls, and one well-preserved old tower (Tour de Balhan), are converted into a pleasant and well-kept public walk, and command a pleasing prospect of the town and river. From these ramparts a crushing fire was poured upon the Russians in trying to cross the river, Feb. 1814. The Church of St. Crispin, on the heights, of massive pointed architecture, resembling a fortress, surmounted by a huge tower and entered by high flights of steps, deserves the notice of the antiquary. In the Rue de la Fontaine, once des Cordeliers (the name given in France to the Franciscan friars from the knotted cord which they wore round the waist) the house is preserved in which the charming poet Jean de la Fontaine was born, 1621. A statue of him has been erected at the end of the promenade called La Levée.

This town suffered much in the campaign of 1814, when the plain of Brie was covered over with uncouth hordes of Calmucks and Lesghian Cossacks, having been taken and retaken several times (Feb. 8-12).

The Rly. crosses the Marne for the 8th and last time.

The valley of the Marne, between Château-Thierry and Epernay, is the prettiest part of the ancient province of Champagne, the country of the champagne wine.

Dormans Stat. (Inn: Lion d'Or?), a town of 2000 Inhab., in the Dépt. Marne, has a port on the river. The ruins of the Château of Châtillon, the birthplace of Pope Urban II., on an elevated and apparently intrenched position, have a picturesque aspect.

rt. On a height rises the picturesque modern Gothic Castle of Boursault, built by Madame Cliquot (Mother of Wines) for her son-in-law, M. de Mortemart: the towers have been maliciously compared to champagne bottles.

Epernay Junction Stat., Buffet (Inn: H. de l'Europe), a town of 7408 Inhab., on the l. bank of the Marne. It is the head-quarters of Vins de Champagne; the kinds which are grown in the vicinity are distinguished from those produced near Rheims, as "Vins de la Rivière." Ai, which gives its name to one of the best sorts, is a hill a little higher up the Marne, on its rt. bank. Almost the only "lion" is the Cellars cut out in the chalk rock; they are of vast extent; a perfect labyrinth, and always contain several millions of bottles, a great part of which are sold on the spot, wholesale, at 2 or 3 frs. the bottle.

"Formerly wines from these particular spots were esteemed for their peculiar qualities; but now that the wine of Ai or any celebrated locality is no longer prepared without the admixture of the wine of other places, the general quality of champagne wines is greatly improved. These growths are now of value chiefly for admixture; and a skilful wine preparer gives to his wine a quality and character fitted for different markets and countries by his judicious proportions of the wine grown in different soils or aspects. Thus a light wine is preferred in Russia, and a full-flavoured wine in England; and these depend on the selection of the wine, and the degree of sweetness artificially imparted.

"It is a common mistake to suppose that champagne wine is obtained from unripe fruit. The grapes are small, but extremely sweet; and fine wine is never produced unless the season be most favourable to the ripening of the fruit. When the fruit is gathered and pressed, the juice is exquisitely sweet, but in a few days this is destroyed by fermentation in the casks in which it is placed. When this subsides the wine is vapid and very disagreeable; it is then stopped, and fined to as great a degree of brightness as can be obtained before the bottling season, usually in March following the vintage. When it is bottled, a second fermentation is induced, by putting into each bottle a small glass of what is called liqueur—sugar-candy dissolved in wine, and fined to brightness. This fermentation produces a fresh deposit of sediment or lees, however bright the wine may be when bottled. In this process the greatest attention is necessary, and the bottles are closely watched, the temperature of the air carefully regulated, to promote or check the fermentation; yet thousands of bottles explode—so many, indeed, that 10 per cent. is always charged as a cost of manufacture: but in seasons of early and great and sudden heat 20 per cent. and even 25 per cent. are broken. It was reported that Madame Cliquot of Rheims, the largest grower in France, lost in the latter proportion 400,000 bottles in the great heat of April, 1843, before the fermentation could be checked by supplies of ice from Paris thrown into the caves.

“When the wine, after clouding with fermentation in the bottles, begins to deposit a sediment, the bottles are placed, with the necks downward, in long beds or shelves, having holes obliquely cut in them, so that the bottoms are scarcely raised. Every day the man whose business it is to attend to this process lifts the end of each bottle, and after a slight vibration replaces it a little more upright in the hole, thus detaching the sediment from the side, and letting it pass towards the neck of the bottle. This is done for some time, until the bottle is placed quite upright, and the sediment is entirely deposited in the neck of the bottle; which is then ready for disgorging. In this process, a man holds the bottle steadily, with the mouth downwards, before a recess prepared for the operation, cuts the wire, when the internal force drives out the cork, and with it the foul sediment. The skill of the workman is shown in his preserving all the bright pure wine, and losing only the foul. There is an indescribable manipulation in this. An old cork is ready to replace that blown out, which in its turn serves again; the bottle is filled up from some previously purified wine, and again stacked. A second disgorgement is always necessary when the wine is prepared for sale; sometimes a third: when ready, it is sweetened for the particular market, or taste of customers. But the wine now gets another dose of liqueur, which is prepared with great care and purity, by candy dissolved in white wine for ordinary champagne, and in red wine for pink; and the colouring thus given is sufficient. The quantity put into each bottle depends upon the market to which it is to be sent,—generally a good wine-glassful: this gives it the requisite sweetness, and aids its sparkling condition when opened. The high price of genuine champagne may be accounted for by the loss from breakage and the cost of preparing. So large is the demand now for this class of wines, that many of the wine districts make mousseaux wines in imitation, under the names of sparkling Hock, Burgundy, and Moselle; and even in Hungary they make and send 8 millions of bottles annually to Russia, which country consumes more than 3 times that amount from France. A large quantity of wine is made and sold as champagne in France; and a company exists in Paris, Cette, and in many other towns for this manufacture. Light, poor wines, such as inferior Chablis, are sweetened with candy, and fined or strained bright: the liquor is then passed through an apparatus which charges it with carbonic acid gas: in this state it is bottled, and in 10 min. is ready for the market. The genuine productions of France in the champagne districts exceed 50 millions of bottles.”—W. B.

Large quantities of coarse earthenware are made at Epernay from clay called Terre de Champagne, obtained from the neighbouring hill of Montigny.

One of the principal buildings in the main street is the house of M. Moët, the eminent wine-merchant, and opposite is a second, in which Napoleon slept on the eve of the battle of Montmirail, 1814. M. Moët's cellars contain usually 4000 to 5000 pipes, run at a depth of 40 ft. below the street, through the chalk.

The town was taken by Henri IV., 1592, after an obstinate siege, in which Marshal Biron was killed. In the hideous modern Church remain a fragment of a portal in the style of the Renaissance, and 16 windows filled with curious painted glass of the 16th centy.

[1. A branch Railway to Reims (Rte. 178) diverges at Epernay, crossing the Marne just above that town, and traversing the chalk range, dividing its valley from that of the Vesle by a tunnel 3450 mètres long. The stations are—3 Aï, 4 Avenay, 12 Rilly la Mont, 11 Reims.]

The journey continues up the l. bank of the Marne, through a region of vines; the vineyard of Aï being conspicuous on the opposite bank. The landscape somewhat monotonous, the river appearing only now and then.

Châlons-sur-Marne Stat. (Inns : H. de la Haute Mère Dieu, in the Marché, best and very good ; Cloche d'Or, old-fashioned and not good ; H. Morizot), chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Marne, 14,100 Inhab., formerly seat of a Count-Bishop ; it is named from the Gallic tribe the Catalauni. Though fallen from its ancient prosperity, it is still a chief seat of the Champagne trade. The Cathedral, distinguished by its 2 pointed open spires, not Gothic but of the 18th centy., was nearly destroyed by fire 1668, and is now a jumble of modern styles with ancient parts. Nave, 90 ft. high, is of 13th centy., and remarkable for its lofty triforium and clerestory containing some good old glass. In the N. transept is a fine rose window. Here are numerous incised monumental slabs.

The finest Ch. here is Notre Dame, having 2 elegant W. spires and 2 towers E. of the transepts ; rebuilt in 1157, and dedicated 1183 ; it is a beautiful specimen of the transition period, but parts betoken a later date. It has been well restored. In 1793, while the nave was dedicated to the Goddess of Reason, mass was said in the choir, with only a few days of interruption. There are large cavalry barracks here. The Marne flows past the town, and on its margin is the promenade du Jard, planted with 2000 ash-trees (ormes).

The large buildings rt. of the Stat. are the Champagne cellars of M. Jaqueson, perhaps the most extensive in France : they hold, as an ordinary stock, 4 millions of bottles. One portion only—that which contains his stores in cask, and his sheds for packing, where he keeps his wood and straw—were let for 6 months to the French Government as barracks for 4000 men. The galleries excavated in the chalk rock are 6 miles long, through which loaded waggons are driven. Through part of them run tramways communicating at once with the rly. They are perfectly lighted by metal reflectors placed at the bottom of the air-shafts. Every bottle passes through the workmen's hands nearly 200 times before the wine is cleared and fit for use.

An account of the Battle of Attila, fought near Châlons, is given in Rte. 187.

[A branch Rly., made in 2 months, 1857, connects Châlons with the Grand Permanent Camp of Exercise of the French army.—Terminus at Grand Murmelon, about 15 m., and 7 m. from the Camp of Attila.]

The beautiful Gothic church of N. D. de l'Epine, 6 m. E. of Châlons, is described in Rte. 175. Chalk hills.

Vitry-le-Français Stat. (Inn : La Cloche ; landlady English) is a town of modern origin, on the Marne (Matrona), which is here navigable, built 1545 by Francis I., and fortified, to supply the place of Vitry-le-Brûlé, 2 m. off, which had been taken and destroyed by Charles V. : 7796 Inhab.

The Rly. penetrates into the vale of the Saulx, and thence into that of the Ornain, passing Blesme Junct. Stat. [Raily. to Gray by Chaumont and Langres (Rte. 164).]

rt. at Fain—where is a Hospice des Alienés—is a Roman camp on the height, where coins, &c., are found.

Bar-le-Duc Stat. (Inn : Le Cygne). This flourishing town, the chef-lieu of the Dépt. of La Meuse, has 14,303 Inhab., and stands on the Ornain. It was for several centuries the seat of the line of Dukes of Bar, whose castle is destroyed all but a small fragment. The view from the upper town is fine; and here are two Elms, larger probably than any others in France.

In the Church of St. Pierre, in the upper town, is the monument of René de Châlons, Prince of Orange, who was killed before the walls of St. Dizier. It bears an emaciated effigy of white marble on a black altar-tomb.

The Pretender resided here 3 years in a house which is still pointed out. There is a large and increasing Protestant community here under a pastor who is half an Englishman. They have service twice a day on Sundays, and are about to build a church.

The lower town, close to which is the Rly. Stat., has some handsome wide streets and buildings. Here is a Statue of Marshal Oudinot, a native of Bar, (as was also General Excelmans); and near it is the handsome Café des Oiseaux, furnished with a collection of Natural History. There are several Cotton-mills, employing 3000 persons, some trade in timber, iron, and vins de Bar, which resemble champagne.

Diligence to Verdun, Montmedy, Ste-nay, and Longwy.

Nançois le Petit Stat. Coach to Ligny. Through deep cuttings in the chalk we pass from the vale of the Marne into that of the Meuse.

Loxeville Stat. Quarries in chalk.

Lerouville Stat. [Coach to St. Mihiel en Lorraine, a town of 6000 Inhab., on the Meuse, above which rise the Falaïses, a group of singular cylindrical rocks 50 or 60 ft. high, one of which, surmounted by a Calvaire, commands a fine view. The Church of the Bourg contains a remarkable group of statuary—13 figures, life-size, representing the Entombment, by Ligier-Richier. It was here and at Commercy that Card. de Retz wrote his Memoirs.]

Commercy Stat., a town of 4000 Inhab., on the Meuse. Close to the rly. is a Château enlarged by king Stanislas of Poland. [Coaches to Domrémy (la Pucelle.) This retired and insignificant village, on the Meuse, has been rendered celebrated as the birthplace (1410) of Jeanne d'Arc, the simple untaught peasant girl, who quitted her flocks to rescue her country from foreign invaders, and to place the crown of France on the rightful sovereign's head. Here, in the deep shade of the neighbouring haunted wood, Bois Chénus (Nemus Canutum), she heard the mysterious voices of her guardian saints, St. Margaret and St. Catherine, urging her to the enterprise, and counselling her how to act; and here in the village chapel dedicated to them, now in ruins, she would spend whole days in prayer, avoiding the pastimes of her companions. After the accomplishment of her mission, by the coronation at Rheims of Charles VII., Jeanne d'Arc entreated to be allowed to return hither to join her parents, and become a shepherd girl again, an intention she was persuaded to abandon to her own destruction. The only favour that she asked from the king, for whom she had effected so much, was that her native village should be exempt from every tax. This privilege was conceded, and remained in force down to the Revolution. In the registry-book of taxes, the space opposite the name Domrémy was filled up with the words, "Néant, à cause de la Pucelle," instead of the amount of contribution. The humble cottage in which she was born, having always been treated with a sort of veneration, is preserved, somewhat altered, in an enclosure near the Ch., between 2 buildings, founded as public schools for girls of the district, as a monument to the Maiden, by the Dept. of the Vosges. Louis-Philippe presented to the cottage a copy of the beautiful statue of the Pucelle by his own daughter, "another inspired Maid of Orleans."]

The railway crosses the Meuse by a bridge nearly 100 yds. long. Through a tunnel (5) of 623 yds., near Pagny Stat., and another (6) at Foug Stat., of 1203 yds., it reaches Toul Stat., at some distance from the town, of which little is seen but the spires of the cathedral, which remain long in sight, as the Rly. here makes a very considerable curve. (Inn:

H. de l'Europe), a fourth-rate fortress, irregularly bastioned, seated on the Moselle, and containing 7314 Inhab. It was not definitively added to France until 1552, having previously maintained a sort of independence as a free city of the German empire, under the nominal control of a long line of bishops.

The chief edifice is the fine Cathedral of St. Etienne, a type of the Lorraine Gothic style of the 15th centy., surmounted by twin spires. Its portal and W. front, designed and raised by Jacquemin de Commercy (1447), are surpassed by few in France: the façade is 227 ft. high. It is a parallel triapsal ch., short transepts, no triforium. The E. end of 13th centy.; height to roof 108 ft. It has some good old glass, and in the sacristy the nail of the true cross which Constantine used as a bit for his horse. There is a very remarkable cloister. The Ch. of St. Gengoul has some fine painted glass, a tomb of 15th centy., and a rich Flamboyant cloister. The H. de Ville, a modern building, was originally the Bishop's palace.

Toul is the birthplace of Marshal Gouvion St. Cyr. Near Liverdun the valley and river Moselle are crossed by two bridges of 7 arches each, forming part of a remarkable group of engineering works which cost 3½ million francs. 2 rly. bridges over canal and high road, a canal bridge, tunnel, and lock, all within the space of a mile.

The Meurthe joins the Moselle near to Frouard Junct. Stat., a village on the Moselle, with 2 handsome bridges, at the confluence of the Meurthe.

[Here the branch line to Metz (Rte. 175, about 30 Eng. m.) diverges.]

NANCY Junct. Stat. is situated near the marsh where Charles the Bold was slain. Inns: H. de Paris;—H. de France;—H. de Metz, about the best;—H. d'Angleterre, clean, 5 min. walk from the Stat., and close to the Porte de St. Jean;—H. de l'Europe, cheap.

Nancy, formerly capital of Lorraine, now chef-lieu of the Dépt. de la Meurthe, is a city of 50,000 Inhab., seated on a fertile plain, not far from the Meurthe. It has been styled the prettiest town in France; it is, at least, clean and distinguished for the regularity of its buildings and breadth of its streets. Through the Porte Stanislas you enter the long Rue Stanislas, leading into the Place Stanislas, surrounded by 5 fine public buildings, including the H. de Ville, Evêché, and theatre, and ornamented with 2 handsome fountains, and a statue of Stanislas Leszczyński, ex-king of Poland and duke of Lorraine, to whom Nancy is indebted for its modern quarter and architectural embellishments. After abdicating the throne of Poland (1735), he resided in Lorraine until his death (1766), when these domains fell to the crown of France. The handsome Triumphal Arch on the l., also erected by Stanislas, leads into the Place de la Carrière, where are handsome edifices: the Palais de Justice, the Tribunals, and the Palace of the ancient Governor, near which is the public promenade La Pépinière. The University is in the Place de Grève, and near it the Cours d'Orléans, with a statue of General Drouet in the middle; the Cours d'Orléans is terminated by the Porte de Metz, erected in 1785 to celebrate the birth of the Dauphin, the victories of France, and her alliance with the United States. The Public Library is in the old University, Rue Stanislas. There is a Musée of modern pictures by Isabey, a native of the town, and some relics of Napoleon, left by General Drouet to the town.

In the Grande Rue, forming part of the old town, stands a portion of the old Palace of the Dukes of Lorraine, an elegant specimen of the Flamboyant Gothic of the 16th centy. Its portal and gatehouse deserve special notice. A part of the building is devoted to a museum of local antiquities.

Not far off, in the same street, in the Ch. of the Cordeliers, are tombs of the Card. de Vaudémont, consisting of a kneeling statue, by Drouin; of Antoine de Vaudémont and his lady, 1447; of Philippa of Gueldres, much praised as a work of art, by the sculptor Ligier-Richier; and of Callot the artist. From the nave you enter the Chapelle Ducale or Rotonde, an octagonal structure, of singular grace and elegance, rich in marbles, prefaced by the arms of Lorraine and Austria, erected as a funeral chapel for the Dukes of Lorraine, from the 12th to the 18th centy. The coffins were taken up at the Revolution, and thrown into a public cemetery; the ch. and chapel were converted into a warehouse.

The Ch. of St. Evre or Epre, in the old town, is old but much altered. From its tower the Burgundian officers of Charles the Bold, to the number of nearly 100, were hanged in revenge for the death of Suffron du Bachier, chamberlain of René II., Duke of Lorraine, whom Charles had seized and put to death while besieging Nancy (1477). Behind the altar a bas-relief of the Last Supper, by Drouin, a sculptor of Nancy. In the Chapel of the Conception are ancient frescoes, much injured by repainting.

The Gate of St. Jean leads to the Rly. Stat., and to the Croix du Duc de Bourgogne, further out of the town, near the Statue raised to mark the spot where the lifeless body of Charles the Bold was discovered in a pond, near what was then the Marais de St. Jean, two days after the battle of 1477, when the might of Burgundy was laid prostrate by hireling Swiss and German lanz-knechts engaged to support Duke René of Lorraine, whose domains Charles had unjustly invaded. He rushed on certain destruction with a dispirited army, inferior to that of his opponents, and betrayed by his Neapolitan favourite, Campo Basso.

At the extremity of the Faubourg St. Pierre stands the Ch. of N. D. de Bon Secours, occupying the site of one raised by the Duc René to commemorate this victory. Having fallen to ruin, it was rebuilt 1738 by the ex-king of Poland, Stanislas, and contains the Tombs, in white marble, of himself and his queen. He was burned to death by his clothes accidentally catching fire as he sat at the fire-side. Here are or were preserved several standards taken from the Turks by various Princes of Lorraine in 1664, 1687, 1716.

Callot, the artist and clever etcher, Marshal Bassompierre, and Napoleon's

General of Artillery, Druot, were natives of Nancy.

The Cotton manufacture is carried on to a considerable extent at Nancy, as well as that of Cloth; but Embroidery, of the kind called "plumetis," upon cambric, muslin, and jaconots, employs the greatest number of hands, amounting to 20,000 persons, in and about the town. The prices asked here are much below those of Paris.

Railway to Epinal and Plombières (Rte. 167).

[From Nancy run Diligences also to Moyenvic and Château Salins.

Moyenvic, a town of 1295 Inhab., which formerly possessed salt-works, abandoned 1831, since the discovery of a mine of rock-salt at Dieuze (3892 Inhab.), about 9 m. off, where the most extensive salt-works in France have been established, producing annually 145,000 quintals, supplied chiefly from very copious brine springs, as well as rock-salt, and employing 400 men. There is also a considerable manufacture of soda and other chemical products.

"From Moyenvic, or even farther W., the country is a vast unenclosed arable plain, uninhabited, save in the towns or villages; scarcely one hamlet or farm-house, hardly a solitary cabaret at the road-side."—R. J.]

The Rly., quitting Nancy, runs by the side of the Canal de la Marne au Rhin. At S. Nicholas a very fine ch.

Varengeville Stat. Here are salt-mines and works. Canal and Rly. cross the Meurthe on one bridge at St. Phlin. It traverses the several branches of the Meurthe at

Lunéville Stat. (Inn: H. du Faisan, fair, and good table-d'hôte; H. des Vosges: omnibuses to trains from both), a decayed town of 12,476 Inhab., near the junction of the Vezouse with the Meurthe, consisting chiefly of straight streets and regular buildings, but scarcely otherwise remarkable than for the Treaty of Peace signed in a house in the Rue d'Allemagne, 1801, between France and Austria, by which the frontier of the Rhine was conceded to France, as a consequence of the campaign of Marengo. The Palace built by Leopold

Duke of Lorraine at the beginning of the last centy., in which was born (1736) his son Francis, who married Maria-Theresa and was progenitor of the Imperial house of Austria, has been turned into a Caserne de cavalerie. Its pretty gardens are become a public walk. Stanislas, king of Poland, died here, and has a monument in the ch. This is one of the chief stations for cavalry in France : a review of 3 or 4 regiments in the capacious Champ-de-Mars is worth seeing.

Heming Stat.; on leaving which the Rly. enters the valley of the Sarre, before reaching Sarrebourg Stat. (Inns: Le Sauvage;—Grand Hôtel), a walled town of 2494 Inhab., on the rt. bank of the Sarre, or Saar. It stands on the boundary-line of the 2 languages, French being spoken in the Upper and German in the Lower town. Here are enormous military storehouses and bakeries, destined for a dépôt of provisions in the event of a war on the Rhine. The Rly. quits the fertile plains of Lorraine and penetrates the chain of the Vosges Mountains in a series of tunnels, the longest of which, the Archweiler Tunnel, about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. (3034 yards) in length, takes 4 minutes to traverse. The canal from the Marne to the Rhine traverses the same passage, but in its subterranean course the Rly. passes under the Canal. It soon after emerges into the valley of the Zorn, which it crosses upon a bridge spanning with one arch the river and with the other the canal. This part of the Rly. is exceedingly beautiful, but the trains invariably go their very fastest over this portion of the line, although the curves are formidable. The Rly. is carried in a tunnel under the Castle of Lützelburg to Lutzelbourg Stat. [ $7$  m. N. is Phalsbourg (Inn: H. de la Ville de Metz), one of Louis XIV.'s fortresses, planned by Vauban in the place of older works: it is of importance from its position, under the crest of the Vosges, as commanding the defiles of those mountains, and is itself built on the living rock.]

The Castles of Haut-Barr and Gerold-

seck are seen on the hills as you approach Saverne.

We now enter the Dépt. du Bas Rhin. The entrance into Alsace is very picturesque, presenting a pleasing picture of fertility. The people differ much in customs, dress, and language from the French.

Saverne Stat. (Germ. Zabern) (Inn: Sonne), a town of 6400 Inhab., on the river Zorn, and on the E. slope of the Vosges. This was once the capital of the Wasgau, and must not be confounded with 2 namesakes in Germany—Rhein-Zabern and Berg-Zabern. It suffered severely in the 30 Years' War, but has ceased to be fortified since 1696. In the vicinity is the Château, converted by Louis Napoleon (1852) into an asylum for the widows of military and civil public servants. The Castle of Saverne, formerly the country residence of the Bishops of Strasburg, was rebuilt (the former one having been destroyed by fire in 1780) by the notorious Bishop-Prince de Rohan. It is an immense edifice of red sandstone, and appears to be now a barrack. The ruined towers of Haut Barr, Geroldseck, and of Greiffenstein, on the heights above the valley, are very picturesque objects. S.E. of Saverne is Marmoutier, the oldest Abbey in Alsace.

About 21 m. N. of Saverne is the fortress of Bitché, where many English were confined prisoners of war.

You now enter the level plain of Alsace, inhabited by people of the Germanic race, one of the richest scenes, as far as regards soil and cultivation, to be met with in France.

At Marlenheim, near Wasselonne, are the quarries which furnished stone for Strasburg Minster.

The Rly. from Paris is joined by that from Basle within the walls of Strasburg, and they penetrate together to

Strasburg (Fr. Strasbourg, Germ. Strassburg) Stat.—Inns: H. de Paris; the best, a very handsome edifice, by an architect of Strasburg, Siebald-table-d'hôte at 1, 3 fr.; at 5, 4 fr.; breakfast  $1\frac{1}{2}$  fr.; rooms from 2 to 3 fr.;—H. de Metz, near the Rly. Stat.;—\*Maison Rouge (Roths Haus), good;—

La Fleur, in a central situation;—Rebstock (the Vine), a 2nd-class German inn, but fair.

N.B. Omnibuses await the trains.

Strasburg, capital of the ancient province of Alsace (Elsass), and now of the Dépt. du Bas Rhin (the Argentoratum of the Romans) is a very strong frontier fortress, with 75,000 Inhab. (25,000 Prot.) and a garrison of 6000 men, even in time of peace; situated at the distance of about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. from the Rhine, on the Ill, which, on its way to join that important river, intersects the town, divided into several channels and a canal.

Though it has now for a long time been united to France, yet it bears all the external aspect of a German town in the appearance of the streets and houses, and in the costume and language of its inhabitants. German is generally spoken by the lower orders, though French is taught in the schools. Louis XIV. got possession of Strasburg, which was an imperial city of the German empire, in 1681, by an unwarrantable attack during the time of peace.

The principal and most interesting building in the town is the Cathedral, or Minster, one of the noblest Gothic edifices in Europe, remarkable for its spire, the highest in the world, rising 468 ft. above the pavement; 24 ft. higher than the great Pyramid of Egypt, and 64 ft. higher than St. Paul's. The artist who designed this admirable masterpiece of airy open-work was Erwin of Steinbach: his plans are still preserved in the town. He died in 1318, when the work was only half finished: it was continued by his son, and afterwards by his daughter Sabina. The remains of this family of architects are interred within the cathedral. The tower, begun 1277, was not completed till 1439, long after their deaths, and 424 years after the church was commenced, by John Hültz of Cologne, who was summoned to Strasburg for this end. Had the original design been carried into execution, both the towers would have been raised to the same height. A doorway, in the south side of the truncated tower, leads to the staircase; admission 15 c. to the platform. A small further fee to the man on the platform will procure admission to the base of the spire, but the ascent of the spire requires a special permission from the mayor. On the platform, about  $\frac{1}{3}$  of the way up, is a station for the watchmen, who are set to look out for fires; and on a turret a telegraph. There is no difficulty or danger in the ascent to a person of ordinary nerve or steadiness of head; but the stonework of the steeple is so completely open, and the pillars which support it are so wide apart, and cut so thin, that they more nearly resemble a collection of bars of iron or wood; so that at such a height one might almost fancy one's self suspended in a cage over the city; and, if the foot were to slip, the body might possibly drop through the open fret-work. At the same time, the elaborateness of the tracery, and the sharpness of the angles and ornaments, are proofs of the skill of the architect, and the excellent materials he had chosen; and it is only by a close inspection that the delicacy of the workmanship can be truly appreciated. It must, however, be observed that at present the whole of the stone-work is bound and strapped together with iron bars and ties, so that it can scarcely be considered as legitimate stone-work. Within a few feet of the top the winding stair terminates, under a species of carved rosette. Several instances are recorded of persons who have either fallen, or have thrown themselves, off the top. The upper part of the spire, within and without, is covered with neatly carved names of those who have visited it; among them may be read Stolberg, Göthe, Schlosser, Herder.

The view of the multitude of rusty-coloured tiled roofs of the town is not very pleasing; nor is it the bird's-eye panorama of the rich district around, of the Rhine and Black Forest in Germany, and of the Vosges Mountains on the side of France, that will reward the adventurous climber; but rather the exploit, the great elevation, and the near view which it affords of the steeple.

Now to descend to the body of the church. The exterior of the W. end deserves minute examination.

"The gigantic mass, over the solid part of which is thrown a netting of detached arcades and pillars, which, notwithstanding their delicacy, from the hardness and excellent preservation of the stone, are so true and sharp as to look like a veil of the finest cast-iron, contains a circular window 48 ft. in diameter, and rises to the height of 230 ft.: i. e. higher than the TOWERS of York Minster." — Hope's Architecture.

"The building," says Dr. Whewell, "looks as though it were placed behind a rich open screen, or in a case of woven stone. The effect of the combination is very gorgeous, but with a sacrifice of distinctness from the multiplicity and intersections of the lines." The triple portal in the W. front deserves to be studied, on account of its sculptures, statues, and bas-reliefs; as does also the porch on the S. side, executed by Sabina, the daughter of Erwin. Although the greater portion of these carvings are modern, the originals having been destroyed by the democrats of the Revolution, who melted down the great doors of brass into sous-pieces, yet they have been restored with a perfect exactness, with great truth of sentiment, and good taste, by MM. Kirstein et Haumack. The group of the Death of the Virgin is executed in a masterly manner.

The nave is a beautiful example of German early decorated Gothic. The choir, far inferior to it in size and proportion, is part of an older building, and of plain Romanesque architecture lately repaired. The most remarkable things in the interior are the rich painted glass, executed partly in 1348, partly in the 15th centy., the vast and beautiful marigold windows, the pulpit of carved stone (date 1487), and the famous clock in the S. transept, made in 1571, which, after standing still for more than 50 years, has been repaired by a mechanician of Strasburg, named Schwilge. It shows the hour, day of week, of month, the month, the year, and many other epochs, and has several clockwork images, &c. At 12 all its clockwork, puppets, and images are set in motion. The part of the church where it is now placed is supported by a beautiful single pillar, ornamented with statues: above the Gothic border, which runs along the wall, appears a figure of the architect of the minster, Erwin of Steinbach: he is interred here; and in 1835 the tombstone was discovered in the little court behind the chapel of St. John. A statue of him has been erected in the porch on the S. side of the nave.

In the S.W. corner of the Minster Platz is a Gothic house with an elegant winding stair called Frauenhaus (House of our Lady) or Maison de Fabrique, formerly belonging to the cathedral. Here are preserved curious ancient architectural drawings of the cathedral on a large scale, and parts of the old works of the minster clock.

There is no other very remarkable monument in the town, but the curious old streets, and the high-roofed and many-windowed houses, particularly those in the market-place and by the side of the Ill, will afford abundance of amusement, and well repay a long stroll.

The Guild of Freemasons has existed at Strasburg since the foundation of the minster, and is the parent of the lodges throughout Germany.

The Church of St. Thomas, appropriated to the use of a Protestant congregation, contains the Monument of Marshal Saxe, erected to his memory by Louis XV., the masterpiece of the sculptor Pigalle, and the result of 25 years' labour. It represents the General descending with a calm mien to the grave, while France, personified in a beautiful female figure, endeavours to detain him, and at the same time to stay the threatening advance of Death. It is looked upon as a very successful effort of the chisel: though somewhat theatrical, there is a tenderness of expression about the female figure which is truly charming. This monument was saved from destruction at the Revolution by a citizen of Strasburg, named Mangelschott, who covered it up with bundles of hay and straw, the church having been turned into a straw warehouse. Schöpflein, and a brother of the pastor Oberlin, are buried in this church; and there are one or two other small monuments. Two bodies, said to be of a Count of Nassau Saarwerden and his daughter, are shown, on account of the wonderfully perfect state in which flesh and clothes have been preserved after the lapse of more than a century. This is truly a disgusting spectacle.

Some curious portions of a "Dance of Death" are painted on the walls of the new Church, Temple Neuf. (Within it John Tauler, the Dominican, d. 1361.)

The Mairie, in the Brandgasse, contains a museum of second-rate pictures; among them a fine Perugino (S. Apollinare), and some old German works of Martin Schön.

The Académie, originally a Protestant school, founded 1538, raised to the dignity of an University in 1621, but suppressed at the Revolution, has produced several remarkable scholars, as Schöpflein, Oberlin, Schweighäuser, &c.: here also Göthe completed his studies, and took his degree of Doctor in Laws, 1772. His residence at Strasburg is admirably described in his autobiography. The Academy possesses a Museum of Natural History, which ranks far higher than the common average of provincial collections. It is very complete in the productions of Alsace, and especially in the fossils of the red marl and trias; and there is a large series of the fossil plants discovered at Sulz-les-Bains and Mühlhausen. The botanical collection contains the section of the trunk of a silver fir, from the Hochwald, near Barr; its diameter was 8 ft. close to the ground, its height 150 ft. There are many other specimens of woods, preserved in such a manner as not only to interest the botanist, but to be useful to the practical man, to the carpenter, and the like, by showing the texture and quality of the timber.

The Public Library, near the new Church, of 100,000 vols., boasts of many literary curiosities: the principal are, the 'Landsberg Missal,' or 'Hortus Deliciarum,' of Herrade, Abbess of Hohenberg, richly and copiously decorated with illuminations and miniatures in the early Byzantine style, executed in 1180; many early printed books; Cicero, printed by Faust, 1465; a Bible, printed at Strasburg, 1466, by Eggestein; Mentelin's Bible, printed here in the same year.

In 2 halls formed out of the choir of the ch. are collections of antiquities, chiefly Roman, and found in Alsace; also some monuments of the middle ages; a statue of Rudolph of Habsburg the town standard (carroccio) of Strasburg, and some painted glass from Molsheim.

The earliest attempt at printing was made at Strasburg (about 1436) by John Guttenberg, who finally brought his invention to perfection at Mayence. Peter Schöffer, who assisted him, and made many improvements, particularly in the casting of metallic letters, was a citizen of Strasburg. The statue of Guttenberg, on the Marché aux Herbes, now called Place Guttenberg, was modelled by David.

Strasburg is regarded as one of the strongest fortresses in France, or in Europe; its fortifications, including the citadel of 5 bastions, whose outer works extend to the arm of the Rhine, were laid out by Vauban, 1682-84. Persons interested in military matters will be disposed to visit the arsenal of a fortress so important as Strasburg: it contains fire-arms for 155,000 men, and 952 pieces of cannon, nearly 500 of which are required for the defence of the town and the citadel. There is a cannon foundry here, and one of the largest depôts of artillery in France. By means of large sluices, constructed in the time of Louis XV., by Vauban, at the spot where the Ill enters the town, the country around Strasburg, between the Rhine and the Ill, can be laid under water, except on the side of the Porte des Mines, and on that side the glacis is mined, and the city rendered unapproachable by an army, and almost impregnable. The attempt of Louis Napoleon to seize Strasburg was made Oct. 30, 1836.

The Palais Impérial is a handsome edifice, close to the cathedral : it was originally the Bishop's palace.

There is a good provincial Theatre here, near the square called Broglie, from a governor of Alsace of that name. A very splendid Synagogue was erected in 1834 by the Jews. It is curious to contrast the present with the former condition of that people in this city. Nowhere did they suffer more cruel or tyrannical persecutions. The street called Brand Gasse (Rue Brulée) was so named because on the spot where the Préfecture now stands a bonfire was made, in 1348, to burn the Hebrews ; and 2000 of that devoted race, accused of having poisoned the wells and fountains, and thus caused the plague which desolated the city about that time, were consumed in the flames. From thenceforth no Jew was allowed to live within the walls ; and the summons of a horn, blown every evening from the Minster tower, compelled them all to depart.

The body of General Kleber (a native of Strasburg), originally interred in the Minster, has been removed to a vault in the centre of the Place Kleber, and a monument has been erected over it.

Strasburg is famous for its Pâtés de foie gras, made of the livers of geese, which are enlarged to an unnatural size by the simple process of shutting the birds up singly in coops, too narrow to allow them to turn, and stuffing them twice a day with maize formed into a paste, and injected through a syringe. They are generally kept in a dark cellar, and the winter is the season for fattening them, coolness being essential. There is such a coop in almost every house in the town. Sulphur is steeped in the water given to the birds, to increase their appetite. Instances are known of a goose's liver having attained the weight of 2 or even 3 lbs. Henri, Rue de la Mesange (Meisengasse), and Hummel, 9, Rue des Serruriers, are said to make good pâtés.

The gates of Strasburg are shut in winter at 8 and in summer at 10 o'clock, but ingress or egress is allowed after that time for diligences, and for travellers by post and by steamboat ; and some of the gates remain longer open in summer.

The principal Promenade is the Rueprechtsau, an extensive space, laid out in walks and gardens, beyond the walls.

Railways—To Paris ;—to Bâle (Rte. 170) ;—to Hagenau, Wissembourg, Landau, Neustadt, Worms, and Mayence ;—to Baden-Baden from the Kehl Stat. (4 hrs.), Freyburg, Carlsruhe, Heidelberg, and Frankfurt.

The distance from Strasburg to the bridge of boats over the Rhine at Kehl is rather more than 3 m. On the way thither you pass, on the rt., in the middle of an island formed by a branch of the Rhine, a monumental cenotaph, inscribed "Au Général Desaix—l'Armée du Rhin—1801," bearing a medallion portrait of him ; and bas-reliefs representing the passage of the Rhine, the Battle of the Pyramids, and the Death of Desaix at Marengo. His body lies on the summit of the Great St. Bernard.

A permanent fixed Bridge of iron trelis girders now carries the Rly. across the Rhine at Kehl, and connects France with Germany. It was opened May, 1861. It rests on 4 great piers of granite sunk 65 feet below low water, and rising 23 ft. above—very strong, to resist the current. The two central arches are removeable, in case of war ; they have an opening of 74 ft. : the others are 160 ft. wide. The bridge cost 320,000*l.*, and was erected by the Eastern Rly. of France Company.

Kehl and the Rhine are described in the HANDBOOK FOR NORTH GERMANY.

The Ban de la Roche, or Steinthal (Stone Valley), the scene of the Pastor Oberlin's beneficent life and labours, is about 30 m. S.W. of Strasburg. It is described in Rte. 168.

Strasburg communicates with Provence and the Mediterranean by the Canal du Rhin au Rhône, and with the Loire and Atlantic by the Canals de Bourgogne and du Centre, which supply the manufacturers of Alsace with fuel from the coal-basin of the Loire.

ROUTE 167.

THE VOSGES A.—NANCY TO THANN, BY EPINAL AND PLOMBIÈRES.—RAIL.

	Miles.
Nancy to Epinal (Rly.) . . .	46
Epinal to Remiremont . . .	16
Remiremont to Plombières . .	8

The Vosges, a department of France, but little considered since the days when the Dukes of Burgundy and Lorraine made it the theatre of many a bloody drama, has been again brought into notice and repute by the Emperor of the French, who often pays a visit to Plombières. This part of France, into which the railway has only penetrated as far as Epinal, abounds with mineral springs, and offers many temptations to travellers, be they in pursuit of health, amusement, scientific knowledge, or scenery worthy of the artist's finest pencil. The tourist may either make a week's excursion by turning off the great Paris and Strasburg line, and afterwards resuming that route; or, if bound for Switzerland, he will do well to take the diligence to Thann from Remiremont.

The Rly. from Nancy follows the lovely valley of the Moselle, and in 2 hrs. reaches Epinal Stat. (Inn: La Poste), chef-lieu of the Dépt. des Vosges, a clean little town of 10,183 Inhab. It stands on the W. declivity of the Vosges mountains, on the infant Moselle, which makes several small falls in passing through it, and it is surmounted by the ruins of an old Castle, whose gardens are much admired. It has a large Gothic church.

At Epinal roomy diligences meet the trains and convey passengers for 4 francs to Remiremont. The road lies through a country totally different in character and beauty from that already traversed by rail: on the one hand are the ruins of those ancient castles whence the Lords of Lorraine and their retainers fought their Burgundian foes with bow and arquebus; on the other sweep the valleys threaded by the bright Moselle, and bounded by a majestic range of mountains.

Remiremont (Inns: Cheval de Bronze, not good; H. de la Poste; H. des Vosges, better), an old town of some 6000 Inhab. Streams of limpid water flow through the streets, and its innumerable fountains are of elegant design. The town lies among hills clothed with fir-trees, the fragrance from which pervades the whole air, and is said to conduce to its healthfulness; in proof of this, the cholera has never reached the town.

The town owes its origin to a Benedictine nunnery founded by St. Romeric, 7th centy., replaced in later times by a chapter of noble canons, who were admitted only after the most rigid proof of noble birth.

The Mairie, now modernised, was the residence of the noble Abbesses of Remiremont, who were Princesses of the Empire, owned the country, and made war against their feudal neighbours. One of them, Catherine of Lorraine, is said to have mounted a breach at the head of her ladies, and to have fairly driven back the assailants. Some modernised houses and gardens occupy the site of the dwellings of the Ladies of the Chapter; and within a few yards of these is a convent, with a small chapel open to the public.

Behind the town is a pretty promenade, planted with firs. It leads to a platform on which a well-meaning inhabitant has erected a Calvary, a large crucifix in bronze, with a figure of the Virgin and St. John on either side.

In the environs of Remiremont are many singular mounds of earth, called tertres, which have the appearance of old redoubts. No one has yet decided whether these curious elevations are natural or artificial; they are believed by the inhabitants to be the accumulation of ages. The earth is used for building purposes.

Within a few minutes' walk of the inn, La Poste, is a remarkably pretty cemetery overlooking the valley. Excellent fishing is to be had in the Moselle near Remiremont at 2 frs. a day.

From Epinal to Vesoul, 94 kil. Rly. by Xertigny Stat.

Aillewillers-Plombières Stat.

Plombières. The charge for a conveyance, carrying two persons, from Remiremont to Plombières is 10 francs; distance, eight miles. The botanist should make this excursion on foot. The artist will be struck by the colouring of the landscape.

Plombières contains 1600 permanent Inhab.; is situated in a valley hemmed in by mountains, and redolent of the wholesome perfume of the Sapins. It possesses several mineral springs, containing carbonate of soda, sulphate do., muriate do. They are chiefly thermal; but there are some cold springs, and one of them, situated in the Promenade des Dames, ferruginous. The principal are the Sources des Romains, du Crucifix, de L'Enfer, du Grand Bain (147 Fahr.), des Capucins (132 Fahr.), du Bain des Dames, in the most fashionable quarter. They are used chiefly for baths, but some are taken internally.

The springs were known to the Romans, and traces of their buildings are to be found. The waters contain a glutinous substance, like those of Barèges. The name was formerly Plumières, and has nothing to do with lead.

The Bath-houses belong to Government. The Bain Impérial contains two public baths—one for male, the other for female bathers, each capable of containing twenty-five persons. The building also has a subscription reading-room, which serves for balls and concerts.

In all there is a public as well as a private bath, and in some are douche and vapour baths.

The Vosges people assert that the waters of Plombières are good for every ailment except affections of the chest. They are especially recommended for dyspepsia and chronic diseases of the digestive organs, as well as for rheumatism and sciatica, and for female complaints; and they have also been found efficacious in cleansing the skin of leprosy and scorbutic eruptions, and may be used with advantage for liver complaint. The ferruginous waters act as a tonic. The season extends from May till October—June and July are the fashionable months.

Plombières has suddenly started into life and activity after a lethargy of years. Buildings are rising in all directions under the personal superintendence of Napoleon III.

At the entrance to the town from Remiremont is the wide Promenade des Dames, planted with noble trees in the time of Stanislas. At the other end, leading to the Val d'Ajol, are tasteful shrubberies and hanging terraces, which the Emperor assisted in laying out. The banks of the Eau-gronne afford a delightful walk.

At half an hour's distance on foot beyond the shrubberies is the Fontaine Stanislas, a well on the side of an eminence overshadowed by rocks. It is carved with inscriptions recording the benefactions of the good Polish king, appointed Duke de Lorraine by his son-in-law, Louis XV. of France. He also founded a hospital here, one of the innumerable monuments of Stanislas le Bienfaisant.

La Feuillée, the eminence so called, commands a noble view over the Val d'Ajol, or Val de Joie, as it was originally named from its fertility. A colony of Spanish emigrants are said at one time to have occupied this part of the Vosges. An imperial residence has been built.

Fougerolles L'Eglise, 6 miles from Plombières. A pretty village, famous for cherries, from which the inhabitants manufacture the famous Kirsch Wasser. In the Val d'Ajol are also the remains of the Château de Fougerolles.

The antiquary will find much occupation for his time at Plombières. The ch. is built on the site of a Pagan temple. The baths were dedicated to Neptune and Apollo.

St. Colomb, the Irish saint, introduced Christianity into this part of France, and the Vosges became renowned for its sanctity. The Knights Templars had several institutions here. The monks and they kept up a perpetual feud, until the dispersion of the Knights in the 14th century.

Gerardmer is the most beautiful spot.

in the department: it is a village or bourg, occupying a considerable extent of ground from the houses being seated among gardens: fountains form a pleasing feature here. A diligence starts for Gerardmer from Remiremont. It lies at the source of the river Béliard, among lofty mountains and calm lakes, of which Longemer is the largest. Stately trees overshadow these deep and placid streams, and the murmur of the waterfall alone disturbs the silence of the woods. One of the objects of a trip to Gerardmer is to mount the steep, whence you may see the sun rise on the Vosges and Alsace, with a superb view of Rhine scenery beyond.

The Schlucht road, mounting from Gerardmer, winds through wild and rocky passes into the Valley of Munster. The Emperor Napoleon III. visited it in 1858, and placed additional workmen on it in order to connect this part of the Vosges with the railway at Colmar.

In looking down on the valley, the tourist will remark numerous rocks scattered about the turf. These are called "Les Moutons de Gerardmer."

The Saut des Cuves is the highest waterfall.

The great block of granite called Charlemagne's Stone is said to have been the resting-place of that Emperor during the night of a hunting expedition.

The finest trout are to be had at Gerardmer.

Inns clean and comfortable—apply to landlord of La Poste at Remiremont for particulars as to fishing at Gerardmer.]

The Railway from Aillewillers-Plombières passes S. Loup-Luxeuil Stat.

Conflans Stat.

Favernay Stat.

Port-d'Atelier Junct. Stat. on the rly. from Paris to Mulhouse.

Remiremont to Thann.

The traveller should hire a carriage for the journey, the diligences to Thann being slow and inconvenient. Rail in progress. The route lies through wide and fertile valleys, dotted with villages and factories, and bounded by lofty mountains: those of dome shape are the Ballons; the Grés des Vosges are of flatter formation. All offer much that is curious and interesting to the geologist and botanist.

Bussang, famous for its medicinal waters, which are sent all over Europe, is a pretty primitive village, lying under the shadow of the great Ballon d'Alsace at the source of the Moselle. The dépôt of the waters is a solitary insignificant building, the last object to be seen in the Vosges before entering the tunnel leading into Alsace.

After passing this the beautiful Valley of St. Amarin stretches before you, and each succeeding village presents a more thriving aspect. We are in the land that sent forth the most noted crusaders, and that now gives to France her best soldiers. Here are groups of factories, especially cotton-mills, and the vale teems with evidences of peaceful life.

St. Amarin, a place of some note formerly, and now a manufacturing town, containing 1600 Inhab.

Wassenburg is a veritable Arcadia. The busy mills are far from unsightly, many of them rising from the grassy banks of murmuring streams, cradled amid trees and evergreens.

Among the groups of factories, that of Messrs. Gros, Odier, and Roman employs 6000 workpeople. In summer-time they may be seen picking the cotton by the roadside in the open air.

Cleanliness and order prevail throughout this wealthy district; the cottages of the artisans clustered about the handsome châteaux and shrubberies of the manufacturers, the groves, the streams, the hills, have an air of comfort and repose about them which is heightened by the picturesque ch., with tapering spire, seen in approaching on the right. Most of the community are Protestants.

Thann (Rte. 170).

ROUTE 168.

THE VOSGES B.—STRASBURG TO EPINAL,
BY MUTZIG AND ST. DIEY.—EXCURSION TO THE BAN DE LA ROCHE.

139 kilom. = 86 Eng. m. Diligences
daily to Epinal and Mutzig.

This road, through the heart of the Vosges mountains, will possess an interest with many English travellers from its leading them close to the country of the estimable pastor Oberlin. Leaving Strasburg by the Porte de Nancy, and crossing the Ill, you pass over a country whose chief productions are tobacco, flax, and potatoes.

11 "Entzheim. In several villages the houses are hung with double rows of tobacco-leaves drying in the sun. At Altorf, the near undulating hills are covered with vineyards; in the distance the mountains of the Vosges show themselves with great beauty. At Molzheim, a prettily situated village, is a large manufactory of saws, files, and other edge tools." Near this are the saline thermal springs of Sulzles-Bains, little frequented at present.

"At Darlesheim we cross the river Bruche, and entering a defile of the mountains lose sight of Strasburg spire, hitherto visible far above the level plain."

14 Mutzig, a small walled town of 3551 Inhab., prettily situated on the Bruche. The Château of the bishops of Strasburg is turned into a manufactory of fire-arms. Behind the wooded hills to the W. rises the bald head of the Donon, 3314 ft.

"At Diersheim, 2 m. farther, a fine view of mountain scenery: the valley only  $\frac{1}{2}$  m. broad; on l. a level green-sward, from which the hills rise precipitously about 500 ft., covered with young oak, beeches, fir, &c.; before us the mountain stream, the narrow but fresh-looking valley shut up by the mountains of the Vosges, of which we trace 7 ridges rising one above another in the distance.

22 "Schirmeck, a village prettily situated at the junction of another small stream with the Bruche, has 2 large ribbon manufactories. We are now in the Dépt. of the Vosges. 4 m. farther, at Rothau, a village situated at the N.E. extremity of the Ban de la Roche, we turn to the l. out of the road to St. Diey, and crossing the Bruche by a bridge which supplies the place of that originally constructed, as well as the road itself, in part by the labour of Oberlin's own hands, reach the quiet village of Fouday, within the Dépt. Bas Rhin, at the entrance of the valley of Waldersbach, which, though naturally sterile, enclosed by schistose hills, rising 1000 ft. above it, is much improved by cultivation and irrigation. A cotton-ribbon factory has been established here by M. Legrand, which, unlike most other establishments of the kind, has proved a blessing instead of a curse. The children, who are chiefly employed, work at home under their parents' eyes, and thus reap all the benefits of industry without the risk of health or morals attendant upon a crowded room."—C. W.

In the churchyard is the grave of Oberlin, a plain stone with his name engraved on it, and the words "Il fut 60 ans Père de ce Canton," and round the edge, "La mémoire du juste sera en bénédiction."—"His memory is indeed blessed: no cottager in this valley ever mentions his name without the affectionate addition of Father. Look around; every smiling field, every cultivated spot, every tree bearing fruit, reminds them of their lost benefactor: the education of their children, the comforts they enjoy in their cottages, the very roads by which they communicate, and, of infinitely more importance, the knowledge of the road that leads to heaven, which was constantly and faithfully taught them both by precept and example,—all forcibly recall the memory of their 'Father Oberlin.'"—Capt. W.

At Waldbach, a few miles farther, is Oberlin's parsonage, where his study, books, MSS., specimens of natural history, and drawings remain nearly as he left them; the walls and doors decorated by him with texts from Scripture.

In the plain village church is a monument to him, a medallion head by Ohmacht. The school established by him, which in one generation redeemed the inhabitants of this district nearly from barbarism, will not be looked on without interest.

There is no inn at Fouday or Waldbach. There is a road from Fouday by St. Blaise and Villy to Schlestadt (Rte. 170).

The principal mass of the Vosges mountains lies between Giromagny and the valley of the Breusch; they are about 120 m. in extent, running parallel to the Rhine, and separating its basin from that of the Moselle. They consist chiefly of rounded dome-shaped hills abounding in forests and often turfed on the top. The name "ballon" applied to several of them is doubtless derived from this swelling rounded form. Les Chaumes (Calvi montes), so called from their bareness, form the highest ground in the Ban de la Roche. The bulk, or thickest mass of the Vosges, rises between the Ballon d'Alsace (4124 ft.), the Donon (3314), and the Ballon de Sultz, the highest of all (4693). The rivers Seine, Saône, Moselle, and Saar rise in the Vosges.

The road from Schirmeck to St. Die runs by 20 Saales.

19 St. Die or Dié (Inn: La Poste). The name of this town of 7707 Inhab. comes from St. Dieu Donné (Deodatus), to whom it and the valley were given by Childeric II. It stands on the Meurthe, here a mere torrent. Having been burnt down 1756, it was rebuilt, chiefly by the ex-king of Poland, Stanislas. The houses are built with arcades like those in the town of Chester. The cloisters belonging to the old Cathedral are good Gothic.

11 L'Hôte du Bois.

16 Rambervillars.

13 Girecourt.

15 Epinal, in Rte. 167.

ROUTE 170.

STRASBURG TO BÂLE.—RAILROAD.

Strasbourg.	Miles.
Colmar . . . . .	39
Lutterbach Junct. . . . .	66
Mulhouse Junct. . . . .	69
Bâle . . . . .	82

Total, Paris to Strasbourg, 401 m. Trains in 16 hrs. N.B. Through tickets from Paris much cheaper. From Strasbourg to Bâle in 4 hrs. fast, 6 hrs. slow. There is nothing whatever remarkable between Strasbourg and Bâle, the line running through the flat plain of Alsace, up the valley of the Ill, and parallel with the Canal du Rhône au Rhin, and with the Rhine, though at some distance from them.

It is carried over many hundred small bridges, which allow the streams descending from the Vosges to pass. It skirts the roots of that mountain chain, and commands some pleasing views of them and of their old castles.

Erstein Stat., a town of 3550 Inhab. The Strasburghers destroyed its walls and the neighbouring fort of Schwanaue in the 14th centy. Hence by omnibus through the industrious village Obernay an interesting excursion may be made to the Ottilienberg (11 m.), commanding one of the finest views in the range of the Vosges; the Convent of St. Ottilia, with a church built 1696, with 5 or 6 ancient chapels near it.

Benfeld Stat. (Inn: Poste). This small town was taken by the Swedes 1632, and fortified by Count Horn.

[A little to the W. of Benfeld and Schlestadt lies Barr, a town of 4200 Inhab., remarkable for the beauties of the surrounding country.

Close to Barr are the 2 castles and Abbey of Andlau, and near Barr are the fine castles of Landsberg on a lofty height, Birkenfeld and Spesburg, also the Heidenmauer or Pagan's Wall. Hüttenheim, on the l. of the railway, is distinguished by one of the finest and loftiest church towers in Alsace.]

Schlestadt Stat. (German Schlettstadt) (Inn: Le Bouc), seated on the l. bank of the Ill, anciently an Imperial Free City, has now 8700 Inhab. and some manufactures, and is a fortress of fourth class, laid out by Vauban. It was besieged by the Allies in 1815.

The Church of St. George is rather an elegant Gothic building of the 14th centy., and that of St. Foy is remarkable for its antiquity, having been built 1094, on the model of the Holy Sepulchre church. It has a curious Romanesque tower. Adjoining it is a large convent, called Le Pavillon, occupied in turn by Benedictines and Jesuits, but now a barrack.

The Tour d'Horloge, or Fausse-porte, is a fine Gothic gate-tower, pierced by a Pointed archway. Martin Bucer, the Reformer, was born here.

Diligences go hence to the industrious town of St. Marie aux Mines, which is entirely engaged in the cotton manufacture.

From the vicinity of Schlestadt, and from other points on the railway between Strasburg and Mühlhausen, good views are obtained of the Vosges Mountains, stretching nearly parallel to the Rhine on the W., and gradually sinking into the plain traversed by the railway. They have mostly a tame, rounded outline; here and there an escarpment of red sandstone, of which they are chiefly composed, breaks through the green forest, and ever and anon upon some projecting cape stands forth a ruined castle. The beauties of the Val de Villée, near Schlestadt, are extolled.  $2\frac{1}{2}$  m. from Schlestadt is the old castle Kientzheim.

St. Hyppolite (Germ. St. Pilt) Stat. The town ( $2\frac{1}{2}$  m. from Stat.—Inn: Couronne) is a good point from which to start on an excursion into the Vosges mountains. It lies at the foot of a hill crowned by the ruined castle of Hoher Koenigsburg, the most extensive in the Vosges range, and very picturesque. From the top (a walk of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hr.) of its massive towers a fine view over Alsace and the Rhine valley is obtained. Its origin is unknown, but it is recorded that it was taken and dismantled (1462) by an army of Stras-burghers and of Bâlois, who combined their forces, and placed themselves under the Bishop of Strasburg as general, in order to put down the robber knights, its owners, on account of the depredations they had committed. It was ruined and sacked by the Swedes in the 30 Years' War, 1633. Near this are coal-mines.

Ribeauvillé (Germ. Rappoltswiller) Stat. The best wine produced in the Vosges is grown here (Inn: Lamm).

The hill rising on the W. of this town of 6568 Inhab. is crowned by the castle of Ribeaupierre, which was besieged in turn by Rudolph of Habsburg and Adolphus of Nassau. Lower down, on neighbouring heights, are the castles of Giersburg and St. Ulrich. Along the crest of the advanced line of hills forming the Vosges range above Ribeauvillé runs the curious and mysterious bulwark, of unknown antiquity, called Heidenmauer, or Pagan Wall. It is composed of unhewn stones, heaped together without cement, from 8 to 10 ft. high.

Colmar Stat. (Inns: Deux Clefs; good;—Ange). This is a flourishing town of 22,000 Inhab., and chef-lieu of the Dépt. Haut Rhin. It is situated near the foot of the Vosges, at the distance of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  m. from the Ill, on 2 of its tributaries, which do much service by turning millwheels in their passage through the town. Its chief manufactures are cotton and printed goods. There are many large factories on the outskirts, especially in the valley of Munster. In the 13th centy. it was made a Free Imperial city, and was joined to France 1697. Louis XIV., who took it in 1673, razed the fortifications, and they are now replaced by agreeable Boulevards.

In the Minster, begun 1363, but unfinished, a respectable Gothic edifice, containing some monuments and painted glass in the choir, is a remarkable painting, of the old German school, by Martin Schön, or Schöngauer, a native of Colmar. It is placed behind the altar, and represents the Virgin Mary in a bower of Roses with the infant Jesus, attended by Angels. It is remarkable for its size and composition:

the figures, rather larger than life, are on a gold ground. In the public library (containing 36,000 vols.) are several other paintings by M. Schön; 2 altarpieces of 6 compartments each, filled with events in the Life of Christ; 6 subjects from the Passion; an Annunciation and Adoration of the Magi, also by M. Schön, with other pictures attributed to Alb. Dürer and Grunewald.

The Halle aux Blés is a desecrated church; the nave is very elegant. In the Musée is preserved an aérolite, which fell here in 1492.

The fine choir of the Protestant Church is now a warehouse; and several other religious edifices are degraded to similar purposes.

General Rapp was a native of Colmar. Omnibus to Breisach.

Diligences to Munster (15 m.), a manufacturing town, of 4340 Inhab., on the Fecht, in a pretty, narrow valley, shut in by hills, where factories and country seats alternate with vineyards and gardens. The principal factory is that of MM. Hartman, for cotton prints, one of the largest in France, employing about 1200 workpeople: there are also spinning and paper mills.

Sulzbach, in the valley of Munster, 9 m. from Colmar, has mineral springs of acidulous water, sometimes called "bain des fous," because considered to be efficacious in hypochondriacal and hysterical complaints.]

4 m. W. of Colmar is Turckheim, where Turenne gained a victory (1675) over the Imperialists.

Eguisheim Stat. This was the birthplace of Leo IX. Above the town rises the castle, conspicuous for its 3 towers.

Rouffach (Stat.) is the birthplace of Marshal Lefebvre, Duke of Danzig. It has a very fine Ch., St. Arbogast, with an early tower and spire, 13th centy. Above it rises the Castle Isenburg.

Bollwiller Stat. There is a large nursery garden here, where all the known species of vine are cultivated. Some of the best wines of Alsace are grown near this.

At Guebweiler, a few m. up the valley of the Lauch, is an extensive manufacture of spinning machinery. The ch. is Romanesque of the 11th centy.

The Ballon de Guebweiler, or de Sultz, one of the highest of the Vosges mountains, is 4705 ft. above the sea-level, and 10 m. distant from Bollwiller.

Lutterbach Junct. Stat. Cross canal of Huningen.

[Hence a Rly. branches to Thann, 8½ m.]

The pretty little town of Thann (Pop. 3937) has a superb Gothic Church, St. Theobald (1455), surmounted by a spire of delicate open work more than 300 ft. high (1516). The doorway is highly enriched with sculpture, representing saints and Scriptural subjects, of very good execution; it is, in short, a miniature of Strasburg, and has been repaired.

On the hill above are the ruins of the Castle of Engelburg. One tower, thrown down by Turenne, lies prostrate like a great cask. There are large manufactories of cotton prints here. Inns: Löwe; Krone.]

Mulhouse (Germ. Mühlhausen) Stat. (Inns: H. de Paris; du Lion Rouge; both in rue Porte de Bâle;—Post Office, rue d'Altkirch), one of the greatest manufacturing centres of France. A collection of huge factories and chimney-stalks, rising above streets and houses, stands on a plain between the Vosges mountains and the Rhine, watered by 7 streams or canals of the Ill, which pass through it and turn its mills, in parts. The Rly. Stat. is close to the Great Basin of the Rhine and Rhône Canal, beyond which extends the New Town (Nouveau Quartier), whose streets radiate from a common centre and meet at the Place de la Bourse, beyond which is the old town of tortuous streets. It was formerly capital of a small democratic and independent state, and an ally of the Swiss Confederation from 1466 down to 1798, when it was united to France. Since the beginning of the present centy. it has rapidly risen to be one of the most important manufacturing towns in France. Pop. 45,981; and 7000 workmen repair daily to the town from the neighbouring communes.

The Rom. Catholic Ch., founded 1855, is a handsome Gothic edifice, and its architect, M. Schaere, made the designs also for the Protestant Ch.; and he has also built a Synagogue.

The Hôtel de Ville is almost the only ancient building (1551-53). The great hall is covered with coats of arms of the mayors of the town.

On the Place de la Réunion is a monument to the astronomer Lambert, b. here 1728.

The branch of industry from which this sudden progress is derived is the manufacture of cotton prints and muslins. The quantity made here probably exceeds that of any other place in the world; they are particularly distinguished by the perfection and variety of their patterns, and the fineness of the colours. Another manufacture, the spinning of cotton, does not flourish to an equal extent, having difficulty in competing with Manchester and Glasgow. There are several extensive manufactories of machinery. Cotton printing was first introduced here, 1746, by Samuel Koechlin (whose descendants are still at the head of the manufacturers here), in conjunction with J. Schmalzer and H. Dollfus. Many of the mills and factories of Mulhouse are carried on by the capital of the bankers of Bâle. It has to contend against the serious disadvantage of its long distance from the sea (raw cotton being transported hither from Havre and Marseilles), and the want of coal in the neighbourhood. Its supply of fuel is obtained chiefly from St. Etienne and Rive de Gier, through the Canal du Rhin au Rhône.

The octagonal church of Ottmarsheim, near Mühlhausen, will interest the architect and antiquary by many peculiarities of construction.

Rixheim Stat. Here are manufactories of stained papers for rooms, including those very flashy pictures which commonly decorate the walls of salles-à-manger at inns; one of the chief establishments employs 200 workmen.

St. Louis Stat. Frontier town of France. Luggage searched in coming from Switzerland.

BÂLE CENTRAL STATION outside the Steinen Thor (see SWISS HANDBOOK). Omnibuses meet every train.

ROUTE 175.

CHÂLONS-SUR-MARNE TO VERDUN.

Châlons-sur-Marne is described in Rte. 165.

6 m. from Châlons the road to Ste. Meneshould passes the beautiful Gothic Church of N. D. de l'Epine, a miniature cathedral, which Fergusson (HANDBOOK OF ARCHITECTURE) compares with St. Mary Redcliffe, surmounted by an elegant open spire contrasting forcibly with the hovels of the poor hamlet around it. The exterior is especially beautiful, full of bold and graceful devices. It was begun about 1329, but not completed until towards the end of the 16th centy., partly at the expense of Charles V. It has been redeemed from ruin and repaired since 1860. Its triple portal at the W. end richly adorned with sculptures of holy persons and sacred subjects, the fine rose windows surmounting them, the elegance of the piers and arches, the choir screen, or jubé, delicately carved, a bas-relief of wood over the high altar, and some curious painted glass, all merit examination. Mr. Beresford Hope affirms (in his 'Cathedrals of the Nineteenth Century') that this ch. was built, 1419, by an English architect named Patrick.

13 Somme Vesle.

16 Orbeval.

8 Sainte Meneshould.—Inn: La Ville de Metz: "c'est une auberge excellente," and its kitchen is a "cuisine modèle," says Victor Hugo. This town of 3900 Inhab. has nothing worth notice, except its very pleasing aspect and position; it stands on the Aisne.

[6 m. off is Valmy, where the French under Kellerman defeated the Prussian army and compelled it to evacuate the territory of France, 1792. Louis-Philippe was present in this battle. The French commander, who became Duke of Valmy, desired at his death (aged 82, in 1820) that his heart should be transported to the battle-field, in order that it might rest among the remains of his brave companions in arms who fell there. This wish has been complied with, and a simple monument erected on the spot.]

The road now passes through a nearly uninterrupted orchard, as far as the large village of 44 Clermont en Argonne, previously entering the Dépt. of the Meuse, across the very pretty wooded valley of the Brième, and the defile of les Islettes. 11 m. to the N. lies the small town of Varennnes (Inn: Grand Monarque), where Louis XVI. and his family were arrested, June 21, 1791, while endeavouring to escape across the frontier, by Drouet, post-master of Ste. Menchould, as the king's carriage was crossing the little place or square.

The ridge of land called Monts de la Meuse, separating the basin of the Marne from that of the Meuse, is crossed between 10 Dombasle and Verdun. The passes of these hills were the scene of the campaign of 1792, when Dumouriez was opposed to the Prussians; but they have lost their military importance, now that the country of l'Argonne is drained, and its forests cleared.

We now enter the valley of the Meuse and the territory formerly known as Les Trois Evêchés (Metz, Toul, and Verdun).

15 Verdun (Inns: H. de l'Europe; Trois Maures, dear), an ancient and historical town, and a fortress of the 4th class (Pop. 10,540), is picturesquely placed on a height above the Meuse, which here first becomes navigable. It is well known to many Englishmen as the prison in which they spent 11 weary years from 1803, when so cruelly and unjustly seized by Napoleon on the sudden breaking out of the war, and kept until his fall in 1814.

The citadel, which is alone of importance as commanding the course of the Meuse, was planned by Vauban. The beautiful Gothic chapel of St. Vannes in the midst of it, was pulled down in 1825 to give place to a barracks.

The great event which renders Verdun distinguished in history is the dismemberment of the vast empire of Charlemagne in 843, between the 3 brothers—Louis, who received all Germany as far as the Rhine; Charles, who took the Gallic provinces S. of a line formed by the Scheldt, Meuse, Saône, and Rhône; and Lothaire, who kept Italy and the E. part of Gaul. This act is known as the "Treaty of Verdun."

Verdun was a free city of the Empire down to 1552, and was not finally united to France until the peace of Münster, 1648.

It was taken by the Prussians, 1792, after a bombardment of 15 hours, in spite of the opposition of Marceau, Lemoine, and other brave officers, who wished to hold out still longer. It was, however, soon evacuated by the Prussians in consequence of the victory of Valmy. When the French regained possession, the revolutionary tribunal sent to the guillotine 15 young women, all under 15 years of age, for the crime of having danced at a ball given by the Prussian officers.

Verdun is celebrated for its manufacture of sugar-plums (dragées) and liqueurs.

ROUTE 178:

PARIS TO MÉZIÈRES AND GIVET, BY SOISSONS AND REIMS.

	Miles.
Le Bourget . . . . .	64
Dammartin . . . . .	21
Nanteuil le Hardouin . . . . .	30
Crepy . . . . .	37
Villers Cotterets . . . . .	48
Soissons . . . . .	65
Braine . . . . .	75
Jonchery . . . . .	89
Reims . . . . .	99
Mézières . . . . .	153

4 trains daily in about 10 hrs.

Chemin de Fer du Nord, Terminus Place Roubaix, Paris.

At the village of la Villette, on the basin of the Canal de l'Ouroq, the most desperate resistance was made by the French in defence of Paris, against the allied armies, in March 1814, and several bloody combats were fought here.

11 Le Bourget Stat. Napoleon on his way from Waterloo stopped here some hours, in order not to enter Paris by daylight.

Dammartin Stat. The Ch. of Notre Dame contains the monument of its founder, Antoine de Chabannes, leader of the ferocious brigands called "Ecorcheurs:" died 1488.

A little on the l. of the road lies the village of Ermenonville. In the Château (which belonged to M. de Girardin) Jean Jacques Rousseau resided 6 weeks, and here terminated his miserable existence, it is supposed by poison, if not by the additional aid of a pistol, 1778, aged 66. (See Musset-Pathay, Vie de J. J. R., 1822.) His tomb is in the midst of the Ile des Peupliers, in the grounds of his host; but he was removed hence to the Pantheon, 1794.

Nanteuil-le-Hardouin Stat. (Oise).

A tower of the Château of the time of Francis I. alone exists.

Villers-Cotterets Stat., a town of 2689 Inhab. Its magnificent manor-house, belonging to the Duc de Valois, of the age of Francis I., is now degraded into a poor-house (Dépôt de Mendicité). Its former parc was laid out by Le Nôtre. Coach to Meaux Stat.

La Ferté Milon, a walled town on the Ourcq, with an old castle, about 9 m. S. of our road, on the way to Château-Thierry, deserves mention as the birthplace of Racine.

Longpont Stat. The ch. of the ruined Abbey was dedicated, 1227, in the presence of St. Louis.

Soissons Stat. (Inns: Lion Rouge, comfortable;—Croix d'Or, dirty;—Couronne.) Pop. 7893.

This is a truly historical city, and one of the oldest in France as regards its foundation. Cæsar found the territory of the Suessones most extensive and fertile, and under the rule of a king not only the most powerful in the whole of Gaul, but who ruled over part of Britain. Noviodunum, at that time the name of this city, is mentioned thus in the Commentaries: "Cæsar in fines Suessionum qui proximi Rhemis erant, exercitum duxit, et ad oppidum Noviodunum contendit." Under its walls, Clovis, by defeating Syagrius, in 486, put an end to the Roman rule in France. He established here the throne of the Franks, and chose Soissons for his capital. Afterwards, and because some of his successors made it the seat of government, they were called Kings of Soissons. Charles the Simple was here defeated 924.

Its importance, in a military point of view, as commanding a passage over the Aisne, is shown by its fortunes in the campaign of 1814, when it was twice taken and retaken within 4 weeks—first, by the Russian general Chernicheff with his Cossacks, by a coup-de-main, February 13th, when its governor, the brave General Rusca, was killed by a cannon-shot on its walls. The French, however, regained it the same day, Chernicheff being compelled to withdraw. Napoleon laid the greatest stress upon the possession of it, enjoining the garrison to hold it to the last drop of their blood; and, if his injunction had been complied with, Blücher and the Silesian army, pursued by Napoleon across the Marne, and pent up between his army and Soissons, with the army of Marmont and Mortier behind it, would probably have been annihilated. Fortunately for the old Prussian Marshal, he obtained possession of the place by a disgraceful capitulation on the part of the French governor, which deranged all Napoleon's plans, March 3rd, and Blücher thus escaped out of the trap which Napoleon had laid for him.

Soissons in 1814 was defended only by antiquated ramparts; it has since been converted into a regular fortress. It is a city of 8149 Inhab., pleasantly situated on the banks of the Aisne.

Owing to what it has suffered from time and from the wars of 1567, when it was sacked by the Huguenots, and that of 1814, Soissons of the present day is a new town, and has a modern air, with few tangible relics to which one may attach the recollections of ancient times. The chief buildings remaining here consist of the Castle, occupying only the site of that inhabited by the Merovingian kings.

The Cathedral, surmounted by a solitary W. tower, and very dilapidated, yet is placed by Fergusson in the first rank of French cathedrals: he says, "Nothing can surpass the justness of the proportions of the central and side aisles." The ch. is not large, and chiefly of the 13th centy. The S. transept ends in an apse surrounded by arches resting on slender and most graceful shafts, a work of great beauty (1168-75). The choir was finished 1212. The glass of the easternmost chapel of the apse is of the earliest date, and very rich. Soissons is one of the oldest episcopal sees in France; indeed, traditions of the Church would refer its origin to the primitive Christians.

Of the once magnificent Abbey of St. Jean des Vignes, which was castellated and moated, and formed a fortress by itself, detached from the town, only the W. end of the church, surmounted by 2 towers, crowned by spires, remains. These are a great ornament to the town, and were spared at the entreaty of the citizens, when the ruthless democrats destroyed the rest. The towers and the portal are probably of the 13th centy., the spires are more modern. The building stands in the midst of the Arsenal. There are also some conventual buildings and a cloister. The Church of St. Leger is interesting for its architecture, and tolerably perfect. It is also pure Gothic of the 13th centy., and it ends in an apse of 7 sides. Beneath this is a crypt fitted up as a chapel, and retaining the original painting on its vault and walls. Another desecrated ch. is St. Pierre.

Some fragments of antiquities found in and near the town are stored away in a Museum. The famous tomb of St. Drausen, and the statues of several abbesses, have been saved from destruction.

A short walk across the fields, along the rt. bank of the Aisne, leads to an institute for Deaf and Dumb, occupying the site of the once celebrated Abbey of St. Médard, which has been razed to the ground, the only remnant being a range of subterranean chapels, the date of which is referred by some to the 11th century. (?) Here were buried the kings Clothaire and Sigebert; and in a dismal dungeon adjoining it, measuring 8 feet by 3 feet, which is still pointed out, Louis le Débonnaire is supposed to have been confined by his own son, Clothaire, 833. The verses on the wall, apparently referring to him, are not older than the 15th centy.

Among the natives of Soissons are kings Caribert, Chilperic, and Clothaire II., and the Duc de Mayenne, chief of the League, the opponent of Henri IV., who died here.

Railway to Paris;—to Laon in progress (22 Eng. m.) (see Rte. 187).

Diligences to Compiègne, &c.; to Chateau-Thierry Stat.

Steamer on the Aisne to Compiègne, the best way to that place.

588

The road to Reims follows the course of the Vesle, a small stream, upwards to Reims Stat. (Inns: Lion d'Or, fronting the Cathedral;—Arbre d'Or; landlord speaks English.) "This city of 43,643 Inhab., the largest (though not chef-lieu) in the Dépt. Marne, so inseparably connected with the history of the Frankish monarchy, retains many vestiges of the Roman domination. The 4 gates of the city were called respectively the Porta Martis, Porta Cereris, Porta Veneris, and Porta Bacchi: the first 2 still preserve their appellations, but the ancient Porta Martis alone remains. It was employed as the city gate until 1554, when earthworks were raised against it, and the adjoining gate opened. It was uncovered in 1595, but afterwards walled over again. In 1677 it was uncovered, but since 1830 it has been effectually cleared from the stonework and earth in which it was buried. It has been carefully restored. Various improvements are going forward in Reims, to the injury of the antique air of the city. A new street opened out to the Cathedral bears the name of Libergius, the architect of that noble edifice, whose tomb is still preserved within its walls.

"*The Cathedral is one of the most sumptuous Gothic edifices in France. It is, perhaps, the finest shrine of masonry N. of the Alps. The building, as it now stands, was begun 1212 by Robert de Coucy, consecrated 1241, but not completed until 1430. The towers are unfinished; they were to have been crowned by open-work spires, such as did exist in the now demolished church of St. Nicaise; and by their absence the elevation loses much of its completeness. Extensive repairs and continuations in good taste have been for many years in progress. The great merit of Reims arises from the unity of the conception. Completely as the portal is covered and filled with ornaments, not one can be considered as an afterthought. The middle portal represents the coronation of the Virgin; that on rt. the Last Judgment; that on l. the Passion: over the rose window, between the towers, the Baptism of Clovis by St. Remigius. Many of the 600 statues on the portal are colossal, and generally elegant both in design and workmanship; those in the transepts are not so good. The 2 rose windows in the W. front, a large one above, more than 40 ft. in diameter, and one within the vast portal, are filled with the most brilliant painted glass. Size of the building: its length is 466 ft., its height 121. The architecture of the interior bears a near resemblance, in the main outlines, to Westminster Abbey, excepting that it is bolder and simpler. It is much less florid and decorated than the exterior, and this has sometimes been considered as a defect; but it is evident that the architect calculated upon the gloom produced by the painted glass. Fergusson ('Handbook of Architecture') considers the plan and proportions of the interior as perfect, and especially praises the arrangement by which the ch. expands towards the choir. Almost all the monuments have been swept away; but rt. in the nave is the Sarcophagus of Jovinus, prefect of Reims, brought from the Abbey of St. Nicaise—a curious national monument. It is composed of a single block of pure white marble, about 9 ft. in length and 4 in height. Jovinus is represented in fine bas-relief, on horseback, having just broken his spear in the neck of a lion, which was leaping on a man. Many figures surround Jovinus; some, as well as himself, apparently portraits. Some antiquarians are of opinion that the bas-reliefs refer (though how it would be difficult to conjecture) to the defeat of the Alemanni (A.D. 367) by this consular general. Jovinus was a Christian; but there is no token of his faith upon this very curious monument. The clock, standing in the N. transept, is probably the oldest moving piece of horology in existence. From the style of the Gothic tracery and carvings, it seems to belong to the 15th centy. When it strikes, a door opens, and the effigy of a man looks out; other smaller figures sally forth and make the round. It is well worth while to ascend the tower, in order to inspect closely the details of the upper part of the building. Those who do not go so high should ascend to the gallery under the W. window, from which the finest view of the interior is obtained.

The Trésor contains many curious antiquities, ch. plate, vestments used at the coronation of later kings, and among the vessels a portion of the holy oil from the Sainte Ampoule, which served for many generations to anoint the Kings of France.

The Archbishop's Palace, enclosed within walls on the S. of the cathedral, has a fine hall of the 12th cent., much defaced by alterations made in the reign of Charles X. Here various sovereigns of France lodged at the coronations, and in 1429 the Maid of Orleans. The state rooms fitted up for Charles X. are not worth seeing. There is a chapel of some elegance; and beneath the chapel a vaulted crypt of early pointed Gothic.

The **Abbey Church of St. Remi*, in the suburb, is the burial-place of St. Remigius, the Apostle of the Franks (d. 535). Clovis and Clotilda founded the church. As it now stands, the principal portions were erected between 1048 and 1162: the choir is of the latter period, of a fully developed and beautiful Gothic. The S. transept, in the flamboyant style, was built in 1506. It is a most curious and harmonious mixture of inharmonious parts, of different periods and different styles. It is a large Ch. 350 ft. long; it was extremely injured during the Revolution, but has undergone a thorough repair, not in the best taste. Obs. the semicircular buttresses, the capitals of the piers in the choir, and the tooth moulding round the windows outside. The bodies of Carloman, Louis d'Outremer, Lothaire, and of 25 archbishops buried in its walls, were torn up, 1793. The tomb of St. Remi, erected by Cardinal Abbot Robert de Lenoncourt, about 1533, escaped the iconoclasts; and, though not in accordance with the Church, for it is in a Flemish-Italian style, is grand from its size and sumptuousness. It was reconstructed by a private individual in 1803. It is ornamented with 12 statues, as large as life, of the 12 peers of France, to whom Turpin gave so much chivalrous celebrity: 6 are the prelates of Reims, Laon, Langres, Beauvais, Châlons, Noyon; 6 lay peers—the Dukes of Burgundy, Normandy, and Aquitaine, the Counts of Flanders, Champagne, and Toulouse: the figures are of white marble, finely sculptured, but in the rather theatrical and exaggerated taste of the time.

[France.]

A few examples of picturesque street-architecture remain: in the Rue du Tambour is the hotel of the Comtes de Champagne—(13th cent.); in the Marché au Blé, a house decorated externally with rich and well-preserved oak carving. The old Hôtel de Ville (containing the Public Library), a very remarkable collection, including interesting MSS. once in the Jesuits' College here, was built in the reign of Louis XIII. The inn called Maison Rouge, near the Cathedral, occupies the site of that in which Jeanne d'Arc's parents were lodged at the coronation of Charles VII.; it then bore the sign of L'Ane Rayé (Zebra). In the Rue de Cérés is the house in which Colbert, the enlightened minister of Louis XIV., was born, 1619; his father is supposed to have been a draper, and he to have served as a shopman and traveller. The Abbé Pluche, author of the 'Spectacle de la Nature,' was also a native of Reims. Mr. Pitt spent some months here in 1786 with his friend Wilberforce, in order to learn French. Drouet, Comte d'Erlon, is buried in the Cemetery; his sword is at the foot of the pedestal bearing his bust.

The ramparts and fosse have been planted and converted into agreeable public walks surrounding the town, and commanding fine views. The promenade of the Grand Cours, extending from the Porte de Vesle to the Porte de Mars, is well laid out. The vast Café Courtois, fitted up in the most costly style, is hardly surpassed by anything of the sort in Paris.

The H. de Ville is in the Renaissance style of Louis XIII.

Reims has become a manufacturin-town, where large quantities of woollens, serges, merinos, &c., are woven.

The celebrated Madame Clicquot has her principal champagne establishment here, and is alive, at a very advanced age.

Reims is the metropolitan see of France, and one of the nuclei of the civilisation of that country; and was the place of coronation of the French kings from the time of Philippe Auguste to that of Charles X., with the two exceptions of Henri IV. and Louis XVIII. It was selected for that distinction, probably, as the place of deposit of the Sainte Ampoule, or holy flask of oil, brought by a dove from heaven to St. Remy as he was about to baptize Clovis (496). The persuasion of Clotilda, his queen, and a vow made before the decisive battle of Zulpich, had induced the Frankish conqueror to receive the Christian rite from the hands of the bishop; who, as the new convert knelt before him, received him as a member of the church with these haughty words:—"Mitis depone colla Sicambar; incende quod adorasti, et adora quod incendiasti." The story of the Ampoule, however, is said to have been an invention of the Bishop Hinckmar, 360 years after Clovis; it is certain that no contemporary records make mention of it. After having been publicly smashed to pieces by a sansculotte named Ruhl, in 1793, it most unaccountably reappeared at the coronation of Charles X.

No celebration of the august ceremony of the "Sacre" in that imposing and well-proportioned pile, the Cathedral, can have exceeded in interest that of Charles VII., the result of the enthusiasm of the Maid of Orleans "The people looked on with wonder and with awe. Thus had really come to pass the fantastic visions that floated before the eyes of the poor shepherd-girl of Domrémy! Thus did she perform her two-fold promise to the king within 3 months from the day when she first appeared in arms at Blois. During the coronation of her sovereign—so long the aim of her thoughts and prayers, and reserved to be at length achieved by her own prowess—the Maid stood before the high altar by the side of the king, with her banner unfurled in her hand. 'It had shared the danger,' she observed; 'it had a right to share the glory.'

"The holy rites having been performed, the Maid knelt down before the newly-crowned monarch, her eyes streaming with tears. 'Gentle King,' she said, 'now is fulfilled the pleasure of God, who willed that you should come to Reims and be anointed, showing that you are the true king, and he to whom the kingdom should belong.' She now regarded her mission as accomplished, and her inspiration as fled. 'I wish,' she said, 'that the gentle king should allow me to return towards my father and mother, keep my flocks and herds as before, and do all things as I was wont to do.'—Lord Mahon.

In the campaign of 1814 Reims was surprised and taken by a Russian force under St. Priest, the French garrison being quite inadequate, from their small numbers, to defend the walls; but Napoleon did not allow the Russians to keep it many hours. Hurrying to the spot with an army broken by the defeat of Laon, he nevertheless completely took by surprise St. Priest, who was mortally wounded while endeavouring to stem the torrent and secure his retreat. This was almost the last military success which Buonaparte gained.

Railway to Chalons, by Sillery and Mourmelon.

Railway to Laon, St. Quentin, and Lille (Rte. 187). Laon Cathedral is well worth a visit; but the inn accommodation is by no means so good as at Reims.

The situation of Reims is agreeable, on the rt. bank of the Vesle, surrounded by slopes covered with vineyards.

CHAMPAGNE WINES.—"This city is thriving: the chief article of commerce is the wine, which, in spite of all the powers of revolutionary geography, will perpetually keep the ancient name of the province of Champagne in remembrance. These wines are divided into 'Vins de la Rivière,' and the 'Vins de la Montagne,' the former being for the most part white, and the latter red.

The best river wines, strictly so called, are obtained from the vineyards situate in the valleys and on the sides of the hills that border the Marne at Ay, Hautvilliers, Epernay, Dizy, Avenay, &c., and occupy a tract of country of about 5 leagues in extent; but the estate of Cumières, though in the midst of these vineyards, lying under the same line and with the same exposure, yields red wines only, and of a superior quality to the others that are grown in the same neighbourhood. In general, it may be observed that the vineyards on the banks of the Marne supply the choicest wines. (Rte. 165.)

The railroad to Mézières runs through an uninteresting portion of that part of Champagne called "La Pouilleuse," passing

Bazancourt Stat., beyond which it enters the Dépt. of the Ardennes, and reaches Rethel Stat. (Inn: Poste), a garrison town of 7500 Inhab., prettily seated on the Aisne, whose branches divide it into several parts.

A hilly country succeeds; once forest, now cleared for the most part, and bare and sad of aspect in consequence.

Mézières Stat. (Inn: H. du Palais Royal), one of Vauban's strong fortresses, and at the same time the chef-lieu of the Dépt. des Ardennes, is seated on the rt. bank of the Meuse, on the isthmus of a promontory formed by the river, which washes its walls on two sides, and separates it from Charleville. It has 4083 Inhab.

The parish Church is a flamboyant edifice of the 16th centy., in which the marriage of Charles IX. with Isabelle d'Autriche was solemnised 1570, but of slight interest for travellers. Among the good points about it are its lateral portals, in the style of the latter part of the 15th centy., and 2 curious bas-reliefs in the choir. There are some bits of painted glass inserted in blank windows, and over the N. aisle is a bomb-shell, one of those thrown by the Allies when they invested the place after the battle of Waterloo, which has remained sticking in the roof ever since the town capitulated.

A more glorious event in the annals of Mézières was the resistance which it made to the Spanish army of Charles V., 40,000 strong, in 1521. The Chevalier Bayard gallantly took the command of the town at a time when Francis I. had proposed to blow it up and abandon it, as too weak to offer any resistance, and to lay waste the country around, as the sole means of stopping the enemy. With a force of only 2000 men Bayard endured a siege of 6 weeks, in the course of which bombs were for the first time used, and were most plentifully showered upon the garrison, but with little effect. The banner of Bayard is said to be still preserved in the H. de Ville.

Charleville, a town of 7773 Inhab., is only a mile distant from Mézières, and is connected with it by an avenue and suspension-bridge. It has become a thriving place since it ceased to be a fortress at the end of the 17th centy., and manufactures nails, hardware, fire-arms, &c.

The Meuse makes a wide sweep around, and then dives into a narrow defile in the slate rocks, which stretch with the most contorted windings nearly as far as Givet.

The rly. follows the river bank by Nouzon Stat.

Braux Stat.

The boldest scenery is near Monthérine Stat., where it is worth while to stop and take boat to Deville, or walk on to Revin and Fumay, where is a nice little Inn (H. de la Poste). All these are stations.

The Meuse penetrates the chain of the Ardennes by a breach, in places no wider than the river itself, its sides often vertical, sometimes nearly 1000 ft. high. The tints of the slate rocks are lovely. It expands suddenly at Fumay Stat., a town most picturesquely planted on a holm on the banks of the river, overhung by precipitous rocks, called Les Dames de la Meuse, 800 ft. high, and overlooked by the picturesque ruins of the castle of Hierches. Slate is the chief product of this desolate district; it is sent down the Meuse to Holland from Fumay, where there are extensive quarries. In 1623 slates were sent from the Ardennes to roof the ch. of St. James of Compostella in Spain.

[20 m. N. of Mézières is Rocroy, a small fortress, in front of which le Grand Condé gained the greatest of his victories over the Spaniards, at the age of 22 years. The army opposed to him were veteran bands of Walloons, Spaniards, and Italians, commanded by a mature and experienced general; and it was only after thrice heading the charge against this serried infantry, that Condé at length broke their array. The Spanish general Fuentes, who conducted the battle from a litter, being wounded, was found among the dead. The battle-field is on a plain, at that time (May 19, 1643) surrounded by marshes and dense forests on all sides, but now much changed by clearing and drainage.]

Vireux Stat., a French village divided by the Meuse.

12 kil. Givet Stat. (Inn: H. du Mont d'Or, on the l. bank of the Meuse), a small fortress 6404 Inhab., astride the Meuse, the suburb Charlemont on the l. bank.

ROUTE 180.

MÉZIÈRES TO THIONVILLE, BY SÉDAN AND MONTMÉDY.

134 kil. = 83 Eng. m. 4 trains daily.

Nouvion sur Meuse Stat.

Donchery Stat.

9 m. SÉDAN Stat. — Inns: none good: Croix d'Or; - Croix d'Argent, nasty. Sédan, situated on the rt. bank of the Meuse, is both an important frontier fortress, commanding the entrance from Luxembourg into France, and a prosperous manufacturing town of 13,719 Inhab., but is a dirty, disagreeable place. It is celebrated for the fine cloths, especially the black, which are made here, and not less than 11,000 or 12,000 persons are employed in this branch of industry.

Down to the time of Louis XIII. it was capital of a principality belonging to the family of La Tour d'Auvergne, Ducs de Bouillon; but in 1642 the Duc de B., having engaged in the conspiracy of Cinq-Mars against Richelieu, was too happy to give it up to save his head. Marshal Turenne was born here 1611, in a small pavilion attached to the château, which was razed to the ground at the Revolution, and no souvenir of him remains, save a black stone to mark the spot where it stood. An ugly statue of him has been set up in the Place. The château itself is also demolished. In fact, Sédan has nothing of interest to detain the traveller. Bayle was professor at the Académie here in 1675. It was suppressed and he was driven into Holland.

Bazeilles Stat. At this village is, or was, the château where Turenne was nursed, and an avenue planted by him. At this place the Comte de Soissons defeated the army of Richelieu 1641, but perished on the field of battle.

Douzy Stat.

Carignan Stat.

Margut Stat.

Chauvency Stat.

Montmédy Stat. is a fourth-class fortress, consisting of an upper town surrounded by 8 bastions, and a lower one badly fortified. It stands on the Chiers, a tributary of the Meuse, and was taken from the Spaniards 1657. 3169 Inhab.

[About 7 m. W. of Montmédy is Stenay, an ancient town of 3140 Inhab., once an important frontier fortress, but after its capture by Louis XIV. its fortifications were razed, 1654. It belonged to the family of Conde down to 1791, and the Vicomte de Turenne, when in rebellion against the Court and Mazarin, threw himself into it, and was joined by the Duchesse de Longueville, so celebrated in the wars of the Fronde. They here signed a treaty of alliance with Spain.

The country around is flat, and subject to inundations from the Meuse.]

Longuyon Junct. Stat. Rail to Longwy.

[12 m. W. lies Longwy (Inn: Croix d'Or; very good.) This is another fortress; the works of the upper town were laid out by Vauban, 1682, and Louis XIV. styled it the Iron Gate of France, from its important military position, at an angle of the French territory projecting into Luxembourg. It was taken by the Duke of Brunswick and the Prussians, 1792, and again 1815, when, after a severe bombardment, and a noble resistance on the part of the French General Ducos and a small garrison, it surrendered on honourable terms to the Allies commanded by the Prince of Hesse-Homburg.

Mercy, the Bavarian General, the antagonist of le Grand Condé at Fribourg and Nordlingen, where he fell nobly on the battle-field, 1645, was born here.

Railway—Longwy to Arlon and Luxembourg (Rte. 182.)

Pierrepont Stat.

Joppécourt Stat.

Audun le Roman Stat.

Fontoy Stat.

Thionville Stat. (Rte. 181.)

ROUTE 181.

NANCY TO METZ AND FORBACH (RAIL)
—METZ TO TRÈVES, BY THIONVILLE
—THE UPPER MOSELLE.

	Miles.
Frouard. . . . .	38
Metz . . . . .	76
Forbach. . . . .	56
Thionville . . . . .

Paris to Forbach on the German frontier; express trains in 11 hrs.; common trains in 14. Forbach to Mannheim in 4½ hrs. Paris to Metz—express in 8 hrs., and 12½ hrs.

The line leaves the Paris and Strasbourg line (Rte. 165) about 7 m. from Nancy at Frouard Junct. Stat., and descends the pretty and populous valley of the Moselle.

Pont-à-Mousson Stat. (Inn: H. de France, comfortable), a town of 7718 Inhab., on the Moselle, here crossed by a bridge, above which, on a projecting rock, is a Castle in ruins.—N.B. Ascend to it, for the sake of the charming view over town and winding Moselle.—Obs. the fine Gothic Ch. of St. Martin, with its 2 towers, ending in 3 apses and ornamented with paintings of the Lorraine school, in the style of the latter part of the 13th cent.; and, in the square or Place, which is surrounded by arcades, an ancient mansion curiously decorated externally with sculptures, called Maison des 7 Péchés Capitaux. The buildings of the ancient Abbaye de St. Marie are converted into a Séminaire. This is the birthplace of Marshal Duroc, the friend of Napoleon, in whose arms he died mortally wounded at the battle of Bautzen, 1813.

Novéant Stat. Suspension Bridge.

Portions of the Roman Aqueduct, built by Drusus to supply Metz (Diodurum) with water, exist at Jouy aux Arches; but at

Ars-sur-Moselle (properly Arches) Stat. 7 more arches may be seen close to the Rly. Its original length was 5000 ft. and its height 60 ft. A good view is obtained of it from the Bridge by which the Rly. crosses the Moselle to reach Metz Stat. Inns: H. le Jeune, Rue des Clercs, good;—Grand Hôtel de Metz (Canaux);—H. de l'Europe;—du Nord;—de France.

Metz is considered the strongest fortress in France, and forms the centre of defence on the frontier of Germany between the Meuse and the Rhine. It is also chef-lieu of the Dépt. of the Moselle; and an important city on the score of its population (64,727), of its trade, and of its manufactures. It is seated on the Moselle, at the junction of a small stream, la Seille. The streets in the centre of the town are narrow, and the houses lofty, but the river is lined with open quays and crossed by fine bridges. The situation of Metz, its public gardens and quays, will repay the traveller for a halt of some hours. It possesses a magnificent Gothic Cathedral, whose construction dates—the nave from 1332, the choir from 1519, with some incongruous additions (Portal, 1754) in the style of Louis XIV. It is surmounted by an elegant spire of open work 373 ft. high (built 1427). Fine view over the town from it. The passage up is too narrow for fat persons. It is 373 ft. long, and the elevation of the vaulted roof above the pavement is 141 ft. (?). A part of an old circular ch., N. D. de la Ronde (date 1190) is incorporated in the nave, which occupies its site. Its choir has become a side chapel, and its beautiful W. door is seen on the S. side of the cathedral. The painted glass of the choir, executed 1526 by Anthon Busch of Strasburg, is remarkably fine, the design good, and the colours very brilliant. The font called Cuve de César, is very ancient, probably Roman, and oblong in shape. Here are preserved the ancient stone throne of the early bishops; 2 processional croses, 12th and 14th centuries; a cope of red silk, embroidered, said to be Charlemagne's; mass-books, &c.; and a dragon of paste-board, or canvas, on a wooden frame, called le Gracelli, which was formerly carried through the streets in procession, with a man inside of it. It is worth while to ascend to the clerestory gallery, to view the stained glass close at hand, and to pass on to the roof, in order to examine the skilful arrangement of the flying buttresses, and the details of sculpture, as well as to enjoy the view over the city and surrounding Pays Messin.

Within the citadel is a Round Church, Eglise du Temple, which belonged to the Knights Templars, somewhat like the round churches of Cambridge and Northampton. It is wholly Romanesque in style; the nave is externally an octagon: it has a low apsidal E. end. Within it, and in a building near it, probably the Knights' Refectory, are traces of painting of the 13th centy.

Some of the ancient city gates remain, and retain the machinery for raising the portcullis.

The **Esplanade*, its shady walks and gardens brilliant with flowers, planted with lofty acacias, and "confided to the care of each citizen," overlooking the river Moselle with its bridges and fine buildings, are much to be admired. Military bands play here 3 times a week in the evening.

Metz has one of the largest Arsenals in France, with cannon foundry, &c., the machinery moved by water. It occupies the N.E. corner of the city, and is shown only Monday and Thursday, by order. In the court lies a German long gun, called Vogel Greif, taken by the French from Ehrenbreitstein, 1799. It was cast for Bp. Richard of Griffenclaw, elector of Treves. The immense Military Hospital is capable of holding 1500 patients. Metz is abundantly supplied with barracks.

It is the Woolwich of France. The greatest school for the education of officers of the Engineers and Artillery in France is here; the pupils being selected from those of the Ecole Polytechnique at Paris.

The fortifications were planned by Vauban, and continued by Marshal Belleisle. The most important works are the forts of Belle Croix, a chef-d'œuvre of military construction, begun 1731; and la Double Couronne, surrounded by a triple ditch filled with water. In addition to these, there is (S.W.) a considerable redoubt called le Pâté, so contrived that it may be converted into an island, by closing the sluices on the Seille, whose waters may be raised 24 feet, so as to form a lake more than 6 m. in extent.

Metz, for a long time capital of the kingdom of Austrasia, became, under the Emperor Otho II., a free imperial city, and residence of a prince-bishop. At length, in 1552, the Constable Montmorency gained possession of it by stratagem for Henri II. The Emperor Charles V., furious at the loss of so strong a fortress and important a city, containing at that time 60,000 Inhab., assembled an army of 100,000 men, determined at all risks to regain it. The defence, however, had been undertaken by the youthful and chivalrous François Duc de Guise, the same who afterwards wrested Calais from the English, who threw himself into the place with the élite of the French noblesse, among them the Prince de Condé. The Guise, by his address and activity, conciliated the citizens, inducing them to endure patiently the horrors of a siege, and strengthened the walls by new works thrown up in an incredibly short space of time. The details of this hard-contested siege are familiar to all who have read Robertson's Charles V. On Jan. 1, 1553, at the end of 10 months, the Emperor, experienced general as he was, was compelled to raise the siege, having lost 30,000 men before the place. "Fortune is a woman," he exclaimed bitterly, "and she favours only the young." The Duc de Guise was at that time only 30 years of age.

The old Porte des Allemands, on the E. of the town, still bears marks of the shot fired by Charles V. Near this is the Ch. of St. Eucaire, of the 12th cent. It deserves attention from architects.

There are more Jews in Metz than in any other city of France, except Paris. They have a handsome Synagogue, in the Rue de l'Arsenal.

Metz is the native place of Generals Kellerman, the hero of Valmy, and Custine, who was guillotined.

Though Metz was an important city under the Romans, who called it Diodurum and Metis, yet there are few traces of their buildings in the town itself. Without the walls, however, at the village of Jouy aux Arches, 6 m. off, on the road to Nancy, are the very interesting remains of a Roman Aqueduct, which conveyed the waters of a streamlet from Gorze to Metz, a distance of more than 15 m. Five arches are still standing on the l. bank of the Moselle, and 17 in the village of Jouy on the rt., out of 118: that under which the road passes is 60 ft. high.

[From Metz to Forbach.

SAINT-AVOLD Stat. Woody country; red sandstone formation.

Hombourg Stat. (called Hombourg l'Evêque), prettily situated among hills of red sandstone, wooded, and intersected by ravines.

FORBACH STAT. The frontier town of France: 4281 Inhab.

Railway hence to Mayence, Mannheim, and Frankfurt (see NORTH GERMAN HANDBOOK), in 4 hrs.]

Metz to Trèves—Railway to Thionville descends the valley of the Moselle

The correction of the course of the Moselle below Metz has been carried to such an extent that it resembles a canal running between dykes. In Prussia little has been done: in many places the current is very strong.

The small town of Richemont stands prettily on the l. bank of the Moselle, at the confluence of the Orne.

Thionville Stat. (Germ. Diedenho-fen) (Inns: H. du Luxembourg;—du Commerce;—Lion d'Or), a town of 5800 Inhab., a fortress of third class, constructed by Vauban, consisting of 11 bastions covered by some external works, and by a fort on the rt. bank of the Moselle. It contains 5600 Inhab.; many of its houses bear the date of the 16th centy. It was taken from the Spaniards, 1558, by the Duc de Guise, but was restored to Philip II. by the treaty of Cateau Cambresis. The Grand Condé, while yet Duc d'Enghien, captured it, 1643, after 3 months of siege and 40 days of open trenches.

The railway is continued to Luxembourg and Arlon.

From Thionville steamers descend the Moselle to Trèves.

Sierck (Inn: Chez Aubertin—the pattern of a country inn, moderate charges), the last town in France, is agreeably situated on the rt. bank of the Moselle, between the Stromberg and the rocks of the valley of Montenach, surmounted at a considerable height by an old Castle in ruins, commanding the course of the Moselle: it is a fine point of view.

A little below Sierck is the camp of Kunsberg, thrown up by Vauban, a series of fortified lines, in which Marshal Villars arrested the march of Marlborough.

TRÈVES. HANDBOOK FOR NORTH GERMANY.

ROUTE 182.

METZ TO LUXEMBOURG, OR ARLON, BY LONGWY.

a. Metz to 25 Thionville (Rte. 181). } Rail.

The Rly. from Thionville to Luxembourg (32 kil. = 20 m.) was opened 1859.

Bettembourg Stat. Bridge over the Alzettes.

Fontange Stat.

LUXEMBOURG STAT. HANDBOOK FOR N. GERMANY.

b. Thionville to Arlon.

Hayange Stat.

Fontoy Stat.

Joppécourt Stat.

Pierrepoint Stat.

Longuyon Junct. Stat. (Rte. 180.)

Longwy Stat. (Inn: tolerable), a fortress; the upper town was fortified by Louis XIV., after the treaty of Nymegen. (See Rte. 180.)

Arlon Stat. (Rte. 180), on the Great Luxembourg Rly. HANDBOOK FOR N. GERMANY.

SECTION X.

ILE DE FRANCE.—FLANDRES.—ARTOIS.

ROUTE	PAGE	ROUTE	PAGE
183 Paris to Cologne, by Creil and Charleroi (RAILWAY) .	597.	baix , Mouscron, Tournai, and Mons.—Lille to Gand .	604
184 Chemin de Fer du Nord . Paris to Brussels, by Amiens, Arras, Douai, and Valenciennes .	603	187 Lille to Epernay, by St. Quentin, Cambrai, Tergnier, Laon, and Reims .	604
186 Lille to Brussels, by Rou-		188 Lille to Dunkerque, by Cassel.	608
		189 Calais to Dunkerque, by Gravelines .	608

INTRODUCTION.

The Dépt. du Nord and the adjoining N.W. district is the richest country of France, not only from its manufactures, but for its unrivalled agriculture, including the culture of beet-root. The Dépt. du Nord alone has 150 sugar-mills. The stimulant to all this industry is the productive coalfield.

ROUTE 183.

PARIS TO COLOGNE, BY CREIL AND CHARLEROI (RAILWAY).

Paris.	Miles.
Chantilly . . . . .	25
Creil . . . . .	42
Compiègne . . . . .	63
Tergnier . . . . .	92
St. Quentin . . . . .	107
Busigny . . . . .	123
Maubeuge . . . . .	153
Charleroi . . . . .	178
Cologne . . . . .	317

507 kilom. = 317 Eng. m. 4 trains daily ; express in 12 hrs.

This is now the quickest and shortest route from Paris to Eastern Belgium, and to Northern Germany and the Rhine.

The Chemin de Fer du Nord has been described between Paris and ## Chantilly Junct. Stat.

[A branch line (single) runs from this to 11 kil. Senlis Stat. (Inn: Grand Cerf, tolerable), a town of 5000 Inhab., consisting of an old part still surrounded by old feudal walls with 16 watch towers, among which are traces of Roman constructions, and of 3 modern suburbs, in which are cotton-mills and other manufactories. In the interior of the Cité, many picturesque and curious old houses, and attached to the city walls are remains of the Castle, dating from the time of St. Louis, in which may be distinguished the chapel, the hall bearing the initials of Henri II. and Diana of Poitiers.

The Church of Notre-Dame, once

Cathedral, is a small and simple but stately building, chiefly of the 12th centy. The W. portal, with its finely carved statues, has been restored. The lateral portals, the façades of the transepts, which are very rich, are of the age of Francis I. and Louis XII. It is surmounted by 2 towers, that to the N.W. surmounted by a very elegant and original clocher, a gem of French Gothic, 211 feet high. The nave and transepts are chiefly Romanesque. In the chapels round the choir is some good painted glass.

Several desecrated churches merit notice, as St. Frambourg, used as a building-shed, a fine lofty ch. of 13th centy., with E. apse; the rich Flamboyant Church of St. Pierre, now a cavalry stable, with a porch rich in sculpture; and the Chapel of the Hôtel Dieu.

Rather more than a mile S.E. of Senlis, on the road to Pont l'Évêque, in the grounds of the Baron de Navry, are the very picturesque ruins of the Abbaye de la Victoire, built by Philip-Auguste, demolished 1783. They deserve a visit from those who take an interest in Gothic remains.]

Creil Junct. Stat., in Rte. 3.

rt. extends the Forest of Chantilly.

Pont St. Maxence Stat. This town is prettily situated on the Oise. Its bridge was built by the architect Peyronnet.

Verberie Stat. The river Oise runs parallel with our road at some distance on the rt. 2 hrs. by rail from Paris is Compiègne Stat. (Inns: La Cloche, very good; it is described by Dumas in Monte-Cristo;—H. de France;—Soleil d'Or), a town of 10,364 Inhab., on the l. bank of the Oise, a little below its junction with the Aisne. The Romans gave it the name Compendium, because their military stores and ammunition of all sorts were kept here. It has been a favourite residence of the French monarchs, with few exceptions, from the time of Clovis. They often repaired hither to enjoy the pleasures of the chase in its very extensive park and neighbouring forest.

The Emp. Napoleon III. has completely revived the ancient system of stately hunting, and resorts to Compiègne nearly every year.

The Royal Palace, as it at present stands, is a building of the time of Louis XV., erected from designs of Gabriel. Napoleon added a splendid hall or gallery: it was here that he received his bride Marie Louise, Mar. 18, 1809. Charles X. spent much of his time here, in his favourite sport of shooting. The interior is elegantly furnished. The Gardens are prettily laid out, and a sort of arbour, or berceau walk, 4800 ft. long, leads from them to the forest. The façade towards the forest is very grand.

Turning l. as you issue from the stat., you cross the bridge over the Oise, and, following the Rue de Solferino, arrive at the Place de l'Hôtel de Ville.

The Hôtel de Ville is a picturesque late Gothic edifice, surmounted by a central beffroi with side turrets of the time of Louis XII. It contains a Museum well worth seeing, formed by M. Vivenel, containing bronzes, pottery, enamels, armour, a bedstead of the time of Henri II., &c. The chapel has a carved oak altarpiece.

Church of St. Antoine, a large edifice of late Flamboyant. It has a disused marble font in the style of those of Winchester and East Meon. St. Jacques is the principal ch. The choir is of 13th centy., the chapels of the apse and nave 15th centy., the W. front 16th centy.; the roof of the nave Flamboyant. In this ch. Jeanne d'Arc took the Sacrament, May 24, 1430.

The Forest occupies an area of nearly 30,000 acres, and contains some fine oak timber.

A camp for military manoeuvres is sometimes formed here in the autumn.

Compiègne was once a strong place; and it was before its walls (still standing for two-thirds of their circuit) that the Maid of Orleans was made a prisoner and entered on a captivity which ended only in her cruel death, 1430. She had thrown herself into the town, then besieged by the Duke of Burgundy, and had courageously headed the garrison in a sally across the bridge, when, in retreating last of the rearguard, she found the town-gate partly closed, and choked by the throng eager to escape from the enemy, who closely pursued them. In consequence of this, while endeavouring to protect the fugitives, and before she could obtain an entrance, she was seized by an archer of Picardy, and transferred to John of Luxembourg, from whom she was purchased by the English. The spot of her capture, marked by the ruined Tower, Tour de la Pucelle, in the Rue de Vieux Pont, is seen as you enter the town from the Rly. The old bridge, close to which it occurred, has been replaced by another higher up the stream.

Diligence daily to Villers-Cotterets; to Soissons, following the valley of the Aisne. Also steamer to Soissons (Rte. 178), up the Aisne, 4½ hrs.; 3½ hrs. down.

[7½ m. from Compiègne, at the southern border of the forest, is the pretty village of Pierrefonds (Inns: Grand Hôtel; —H. des Etrangers; —H. des Ruines), to which an agreeable excursion may be made; it is in a lovely situation, crowned by the ruins of a fine mediæval Castle, which dates from a very early period: having become one of the strongholds of the Fronde, it was destroyed by Henry IV., but its massive towers and ruins form a very picturesque object in the landscape. It was restored by M. Viollet le Duc for the Emperor Louis Napoleon, 1864. There are some mineral waters in the village similar to those of Enghien, much frequented during the summer, with several good inns and lodging-houses, and several handsome villa residences, forming a very agreeable and fashionable retreat. Omnibuses from Compiègne at each train.]

The Railroad ascends the valley of the Oise on its rt. bank.

Noyon Stat. (Inn: H. du Nord), a very ancient town, on a small stream, the Vorse, about a mile from the right side of the Oise, with 6350 Inhab., remarkable as the birth-place of John Calvin,* son of a notary, grandson of a cooper, b. 1509. The house at the corner of the Rue Fromenteresse has been pulled down, it is said out of hatred to the heresiarch. Noyon was besieged by Julius Cæsar, who calls it Noviodunum Belgarum. Charlemagne resided here; and Hugues Capet was elected by his vassals King of France at this place in 987.

* See Dyer's 'Life of Calvin.'

The Cathedral is of great interest to the antiquary and architect. It is "one of the best and most elegant transition specimens in France, begun about 1137, and finished, as we now see it, 1167." —Fergusson. The W. front has 2 tall towers and a porch between them, assuming the dimensions of a narthex. It is remarkable as a triapsal ch., exhibiting the indiscriminate use of the round and pointed arch. The position of the conventual buildings is unusual, the cloisters being on the N. side of the nave, and the chapter-house (well restored and very noble) on the W. side of the cloisters.

The Hôtel de Ville, built 1485-1523, has a picturesque front. The house shown as that of Calvin was built 1683!

[A Diligence runs from Noyon Stat. by Guiscard to Ham (12 m.). The road crosses the ridge which divides the basin of the Seine from that of the Somme, and enters the Dépt. of the Somme before reaching

Ham (Inns: H. de France; —Cornet d'Or), a small town on the Somme, surrounded by marshes, with 1663 Inhab. Its Citadel has been much strengthened by modern works, so as to be now a fortress of importance: it serves as a state prison, for which purpose it is well fitted. The central round tower or donjon is 100 ft. high, 100 ft. wide, and the walls are of masonry 36 ft. thick. It was built 1470 by the Comte de St. Pol, afterwards beheaded by Louis XI., and bears over the gate his motto, "Men Mieux." Prince Jules de Polignac, and 3 other ministers of Charles X., who signed the Ordonnances of July 25, 1830, were confined here; and Prince Louis Napoleon, after the failure of his rash attempt at Boulogne, 1840, remained here for 6 years, until, in 1846, he escaped in the disguise of a labourer, carrying a plank on his shoulder.

The 2 cells where he slept and studied, and the little garden which he cultivated, remain nearly as he left them. Strangers are not admitted.

The Ch., Notre Dame, dates from 1108, but has been modernized. Its walls are lined with 32 bas-reliefs of Old Test. subjects, by sculptors of the end of the 17th centy. In the crypt beneath are monuments of Baron Odo IV., and his wife (1214), who built the castle.

General Foy was born here.

Between Ham and a village called Nesle, Henry V. crossed the Somme, by a ford which the French had left unguarded, with his brave army, destined, 2 days after, to gain the battle of Azincour, 1415.]

Chauny Stat., an ancient town of 8163 Inhab., partly built on an island in the Oise, which is here connected with the Canal de St. Quentin. The bleaching of cloth is carried on here to a large extent. 12 m. off (branch rly.) are the well-known Glass Works of St. Gobain, on the Oise, famed for the manufacture and the polishing of mirrors. 2000 persons are employed in them.

[The noble ruin of Coucy le Château, 8 m. off, may be conveniently visited from Chauny Stat. It is the beau idéal, in extent, arrangement, and picturesqueness, of a feudal castle, and perhaps the finest in France, and has been thoroughly restored by the Emp. L. N. It is attached to an old and picturesque walled town (Inn: Pemme d'Or), situated on the extremity of a high headland overlooking a deep valley. The castle consists of an outer bail or court, whose walls, garnished with circular towers at the angles about 100 ft. high, and with semicircular ones, or bastions, along the curtains, were partly blown up by Mazarin, 1652. Within this is the inner bail or ward, out of which rises the majestic circular Donjon, the prominent feature of the building—fit emblem of the proud barons that built and held it—whose boastful motto was,

"*Roi je ne suis,
Prince, ni Comte aussi,
Je suis le Sire de Coucy.*"

Time has made little impression on it, and even the earthquake's shock, though it has cleft its walls vertically from top to bottom in 1692, leaving the cracks still perceptible, has not altered its symmetry, nor caused it to swerve out of the perpendicular. It is 187 ft. high and 325 ft. in circumference; and its walls, massive in proportion, are 34 ft. thick. Except a row of windows surmounting its cireolet of machicolations at the top, almost the only external openings are mere loopholes. It was entered by a narrow bridge now removed; over the door is the fragment of a bas-relief, sculptured with the device of the Coucy, a combat between a man and a lion. The interior, divided into 4 stories originally, is now entirely gutted, but each stage had originally a groined roof springing from carved corbels, which remain. On the ground floor, to the rt. as you enter, is a well 200 ft. deep, cut in the rock. Beside it was originally a flour-mill and oven. Excepting the topmost story, the halls of the donjon must have been inconveniently dark. Two of the external round towers are furnished with dungeons, whose only entrance was a hole in their roof, like the mouth of a well. Vast casemates ran under the outer walls.

The construction of Coucy Castle dates from the 13th centy.: its founder was Eguerrand III. de Coucy. When the Archbishop of Reims sought aid from Philippe Auguste for an inroad on his domains made by that grandee, the answer he got from the king was, "Je ne puis faire autre chose pour vous que de prier le Sire de Coucy de ne point vous inquiéter." Coucy was excommunicated by the Pope for spoiling the canons of Laon, and carrying off their dean a prisoner.

La Belle Gabrielle had a house here, which still exists, where she was visited by Henri IV. Her son, the Duc de Vendôme, was born here.]

The meadows between Chauny and Tergnier are liable to be covered by the waters of the Oise in winter.

Tergnier Junct. Stat. (Buffet.)

[Branch hence to Laon and Reims. Rte. 187.]

ST. QUENTIN STAT. (Inn: H. du Cygne; comfortable), a flourishing manufacturing town, whose population has more than doubled in 25 years, and now amounts to 39,000. It was the ancient capital of the Vermandois, the "Augusta Viromanducorum" of the Romans, and is situated on the Somme (Samarobriua of Cæsar).

Turning l. out of the station, the stranger will cross the canal, and through the Rues de l'Île and de la Scellerie will penetrate to the Place in which stands the Hôtel de Ville, a very picturesque specimen of the Town Hall in the Flemish Gothic style of the 15th century. (finished 1509). The interior deserves a visit. See the Chambre de Conseil, its chimney, carvings, painted glass, &c.

Following out of the Place the Petite Rue St. André, it will lead you to

The principal Church, once collegiate, less known than it ought to be. It is one of the finest, boldest, and purest Gothic buildings in this part of France. The vault of the roof is 127 ft. high. It has a double transept; the choir (1257) is braced with iron; the E. apse has fine painted glass in 7 windows; the crypt, containing sarcophagi of St. Quentin and other saints, deserves notice. The King of France was premier canon of this church, and the chapter possessed privileges over the municipal community which kept up constant feuds between town and gown, and this continued, more or less, until chapter and community sustained a simultaneous annihilation. Many portions of the town afford good subjects for the pencil. It dates from the 16th century.

The wharfs on the banks of the Somme bear testimony to the increasing consumption of coal in this district. It is brought from the vicinity of Valenciennes, Condé, and Mons, by the Canal de St. Quentin, and is of an inferior quality, but it is extensively employed in the various manufactures which are springing up, and which may hereafter become formidable rivals to those of England.

St. Quentin is the centre of a great manufacture of cotton. Cotton spinning and weaving employ many thousand hands.

St. Quentin is now an open town, and its walls, removed 1820, are replaced by Boulevards. Under them was fought (July 28, 1557) the great battle between the Spanish troops, commanded by Emanuel Philibert Duke of Savoy, and Ferdinand Gonzaga, and the French, under Coligny and the Connétable Anne de Montmorency, in which the latter were entirely routed. Q. Mary of England aided her husband Philip II. on this occasion with a considerable levy of English troops, under the command of the Earl of Pembroke, who contributed not a little to the victory. This defeat left Paris unprotected; and, had the victors profited by their advantage, France and Spain might perhaps have been united into one vast monarchy. But Philip, who joined the army after the battle, hesitated, and occupied himself in the siege of the town, which, just capable of defence, might with safety have been left in the occupation of the French garrison. Defended by Coligny and Jarnac, the town sustained eleven assaults before it was taken. The inhabitants were treated with great cruelty, the Spaniards revenging themselves upon the burghesses, who had defended the town-walls with great valour. Even the clergy were not spared, and they all quitted the town, and did not return until St. Quentin was restored to France by the treaty of Câteau Cambresis, 1559.

St. Quentin is the birthplace of the Revolutionary monster, Fouquier Tinville.

At Ribemont, near this, was born, 1743, Condorcet, the philosopher.

The Canal of St. Quentin connects the basin of the Somme with that of the Scheldt, and is carried through the intervening hills by tunnels,—one at Tronquoy,  $\frac{1}{4}$  m. long; another at Riqueval,  $3\frac{1}{2}$  m. long, cut through the solid rock: it is 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. broad; it admits only 1 barge to pass at a time, towed by men. By means of this canal a communication is opened between the river Scheldt and the extreme eastern departments of France and the Atlantic, through the rivers Somme, Seine, and Loire; it was completed by Napoleon in 1810; it enters the Oise at Chauny.

Busigny Junct. Stat. A branch Railway (opened 1858) to Somain on the Chemin de Fer du Nord (Rte. 184).

Le Cateau Stat., or Le Cateau Cambresis, famous for the treaty signed there (1595) between Philip II. and Henri II., swelled to a town of 10,000 Inhab. since 1826, in consequence of the working of coal-mines. It was also the birthplace of Marshal Mortier, Duke of Treviso, who perished in Paris by Fieschi's infernal-machine. Here is a statue of him by Bra. Cateau was the head-quarters of the Duke of Wellington when he entered France in 1815; hence he issued his order to his troops to abstain from pillage, and to maintain the strictest discipline.

Soon after this the road enters the great coal-field of the Dépt. du Nord, the most important in France, discovered about 1736, in a portion of Hainault which was not ceded to France until 1678. It is a prolongation of the Belgian coal-field. The chief collieries are at Anzin, Denain, Louches, Fresnes, Vieux Condé, &c.; 40 mines are worked in this district; some of them are 1640 ft. deep. Paris is supplied with a large quantity of coal from hence by the canal of St. Quentin, and the fuel derived from hence imparts life to the numerous and varied manufactures scattered over the industrious Dépt. du Nord, including 3000 manufactories around the walls of Valenciennes, within a circle of 10 or 15 m. (Rte. 184.)

Landreecies Stat., a fortress of the second order, on the Sambre. (Pop. 4419.) Its works can be flooded by the river. In its modern ch. is the tomb of Marshal Clark, Duc de Feltre, of Irish descent, but born here.

Aulnoye Stat. Public conveyances to Avesnes, a garrison town. From this the Rly. follows the course of the Sambre to [Branch Rly. to Mons.]

Hautmont Junct. Stat. Here are iron furnaces and iron-plate works (Laminoir).

Maubeuge Stat. (Inns: Grand Cerf; —H. du Nord), one of the fortresses on the second line of defence towards Flanders, on the Sambre, 10,557 Inhab. It was long time capital of Hainault, was frequently taken and retaken by the French and Spaniards, until at length, having been captured by Louis XIV., 1649, it was confirmed to France by the Treaty of Nimeguen, 1678. It was fortified by Vauban.

The ch. steeple was knocked off by cannon-balls. In the Tresor of the ch. is shown a slipper and veil of St. Aldegonde the Virgin, who founded a famous nunnery here, and Maubeuge belonged to the abbess. Her stone Pillory still stands at the corner of one of the streets.

The painter Jean Gossaert (called Mabuse) was a native (d. 1562).

Jenumont Stat., the last station in France, where luggage is examined on arriving from Belgium. (Buffet.)

Erquelines Stat. Here is the Belgian custom-house, where travellers are detained nearly half an hour.

Thuin Stat.

Charleroi Stat., the first fortress forming a portion of the extreme Belgian line of defence towards France. Charleroi is only 45 m. from Brussels, for which trains start on the arrival of that from Paris; indeed this route is shorter by 12 or 14 m. than that by Amiens, Douai, and Quievrain.

51 COLOGNE TERMINUS.

For the rest of the Route see HAND-BOOK OF N. GERMANY, Rtes. 24, 25.

ROUTE 184.

CHEMIN DE FER DU NORD.—PARIS TO BRUSSELS, BY AMIENS, ARRAS, DOUAI, AND VALENCIENNES.

Paris.	Miles.
Amiens . . . . .	92
Douai . . . . .	150
Somain . . . . .	160
Valenciennes . . . . .	173
Mons . . . . .	192
Brussels . . . . .	231

370 kilom. = about 230 Eng. m.

7 trains daily to Douai in 4½ to 6 h.

4 trains daily to Brussels in 12 h.

This railway is described in Rte. 3 as far as AMIENS Stat.

Louguan Junct. Stat. (Buffet). Rly. from Boulogne falls in.

Albert Stat. [Diligence to

Péronne (Inns: H. St. Martin; H. d'Angleterre), a fortress on the N. bank of the Somme. Pop. 4445. It bore the epithet "la Pucelle," because it never was captured by an enemy down to 1815, when the Duke of Wellington deprived it of its virgin reputation. He thus describes its capture in his Despatches:—"I attacked Péronne with the first division of British Guards, under Major-Gen. Maitland, on the 26th in the afternoon. The troops took the hornwork, which covers the suburb on the l. of the Somme, by storm, with but small loss, and the town immediately afterwards surrendered, on the condition that the garrison should lay down their arms and be allowed to return to their homes."—June 26th, 1815. History, however, informs us that it was previously taken by the troops of Charles the Bold, 1465, but the army of the Emperor Charles V. failed ruinously before it, 1536.

It was in the Castle of Péronne that Charles the Bold detained the crafty Louis XI. his prisoner, in the way so admirably described in Quentin Durward, on receiving intelligence of the revolt of the Liégeois, and restored him to liberty only after he had signed conditions most disadvantageous to himself, and known in history as the "treaty of Péronne." The castle is much dilapidated, and a large part is probably not older than the 16th centy., yet there remain many dismal dungeons on the ground-floor. The chamber occupied by Louis is still pointed out in the Tour Herbert, and beside it the miserable cell, on a level with the moat, where Charles the Simple ended his days, a wretched captive. The Church of St. John, near the Beffroi, or bell-tower, is a handsome Gothic edifice, apparently of the 16th centy.; its lithe piers without capitals spread out into multiplied groinings over the roof, and it has a tree of Jesse in painted glass, and an old painting representing Louis XI. assisting at the translation of the bones of St. Farcy. The situation of Péronne is unwholesome, owing to the marshes which surround it.]

Achiet Stat. Coach to Bapaume. a dull and dirty town, where some linen and cambric muslin are made.

Arras Stat. in Rte. 1.

DOUAI Junct. Stat. in Rte. 1.

Somain Stat. [Branch to Busigny, Rte. 183, unites the Rly. from Paris to Brussels with that from Paris to Charleroi.]

On rt. lie the coal-mines of Anzin. The Scheldt is crossed before entering VALENCIENNES Stat. (Buffet) (Inns: H. du Commerce, good and comfortable, old-fashioned house; H. des Princes), a fortress of the 2nd class, with a strong citadel constructed by the engineer Vauban: a dark and ill-built town, lying on the Scheldt, with a population of 24,200 souls. In 1793 it was taken by the Allies, 75,000 strong, under the Duke of York and General Abercromby, after a siege of 84 days and a severe bombardment, which destroyed a part of the town: it was yielded back next year. In the grand square, or Place d'Armes, are situated the Hôtel de Ville, a fine building, half Gothic half Italian in style, built 1612, and containing 3 pictures by Rubens (?), brought from the abbey of St. Amand; the Beffroi, 170 ft. high, built 1237, fell 1843, and caused a serious loss of life; the Theatre. The Church of St. Gery is the principal one. The celebrated Valenciennes Lace is manufactured here, and a considerable quantity of fine cambric. This is the birthplace of Watteau the painter, of Froissart the historian, of whom there is a statue in Place St. Gery, and of the minister d'Argenson.

On entering France, passports must be delivered up here; and on quitting the country they are strictly examined by the police.

The country around Valenciennes offers no picturesque beauty; the rivers are sluggish, and have flat, uninteresting banks, but there are numerous manufactories and extensive collieries in the neighbourhood.

There is a triple row of French custom-houses on this frontier; and the repeated searches to which the traveller is subjected are often very annoying, and occasion considerable delay.

The Railway from Valenciennes to the Belgian frontier, and to BRUSSELS, is described in the HANDBOOK FOR NORTH GERMANY.

Mons Stat.

BRUSSELS Terminus (see HANDBOOK FOR BELGIUM AND NORTH GERMANY).

11 Roubaix Stat. An industrious town of 24,000 Inhab.—a focus of the cotton manufacture.

Tourcoing Stat. A town of 20,000 Inhab. Celebrated manufactures of table-linen.

Mouscron Stat.

Here branch Railways to Ostend, Bruges, and Gand diverge.

The Brussels line proceeds by

Tournai Stat.

Ath Stat.

Mons Stat.

Braine-le-Comte

Stat.

BRUSSELS STATION.

} described in HANDBOOK FOR NORTH GERMANY.

ROUTE 187.

LILLE TO EPERNAY, BY CAMBRAI, ST. QUENTIN, TERGNIER, LAON, AND REIMS (RAIL).

Lille Stat.	Miles.
Donal . . . . .	20
Cambrai . . . . .
Busigny . . . . .	11½
St. Quentin . . . . .	12
Tergnier. . . . .	16
Laon . . . . .	14
Reims . . . . .	32
Epernay . . . . .

This is a cross line of rly., and those who follow it must expect breaks and pauses in transferring themselves from one line to another. Still for persons going to Switzerland and S. Germany, and not wishing to pass through Paris, it opens a much shorter route, through a country little travelled over.

ROUTE 186.

LILLE TO BRUSSELS, BY ROUBAIX, MOUSCRON, AND MONS.—LILLE TO GAND.

133 kilom. = 82 Eng. m.

3 trains daily, in about 4½ hrs. This is the most direct line from Calais to Brussels.

Lille Stat. Rte. 1.

Douai Stat.

Somain Junct. Stat. Enter branch line to Busigny (opened 1858), to connect rly. from Paris to Brussels with that from Paris to Namur.

Cambrai Stat.

Cambrai (Inns: H. de l'Europe, good; H. de France) is an industrious and considerable town and fortress on the Scheldt, with 22,557 Inhab., principally remarkable for the fine muslin manufactured here, named by the English, after the place where it is made, Cambric. The Revolution stripped it of all its principal ornaments. It was the episcopal see of Fénelon, author of Télémaque, who was buried here. The sacrilegious hands of the Revolutionists, in 1793, tore his body from the peaceful grave, and melted the lead of his coffin into bullets. The beautiful Cathedral was utterly razed to the ground at the same time. A monument by David d'Angers was raised to his memory 1826: the ch. in which it was deposited was burned down 1859; but it was saved, together with another of Bishop Belmar, also by David, and they will be placed in a new Cathedral, to be erected partly by grant from Government, partly by subscription. Fénelon's statue, "half rising from an altar tomb, apparently ready to obey the sound of the last trumpet, is not ill conceived nor executed." The three bas-reliefs represent memorable events of his life—the education of the Duke of Burgundy, the Archbishop attending the wounded soldier after the battle of Malplaquet, and the cow restored to the peasant. His remains are said to be deposited beneath the monument. An ancient Greek painting of the Virgin, attributed, as is usual with pictures of this class, to St. Luke, is preserved, and is yet carried in procession.

Of the 12 churches which existed before the Revolution, 2 alone remain. That of St. Gery has a roodloft. The only other public building of consequence is the Hôtel de Ville, of modern construction, filling one side of the Place, and a Renaissance Portal leading to the Archbishop's Palace. The Beffroi is the tower of St. Martin's ch., now destroyed. There is a fine Public Library, enriched with spoils of monasteries, MSS., early printed books. Cambrai is called Camaracum in the Itinerary of Antonine.

Cambrai is celebrated in the annals of diplomacy for the famous League against the republic of Venice concocted here in 1508: a treaty of peace between Charles V. and Francis I. was also signed in 1529. The citadel was raised by Charles V. Cambrai was taken by a detachment of the British army under Sir Charles Colville, June 24, 1815. It is the native place of the historian Monstrelet, and of General Dumouriez (1739).

It has been calculated that 100,000 persons are employed in weaving and spinning flax in and around Cambrai. Flanders and Picardy furnish the flax: the finest quality comes from Marchiennes. The weavers are obliged to work below ground and in cellars, by the moist and even temperature of which they are alone enabled to prevent the fine thread breaking.

The Canal of St. Quentin begins at Cambrai, where it issues out of the Scheldt (see above). It is of the highest utility in promoting the industry and prosperity of the district through which it passes.

From Cambrai a branch rly. runs to Somain by Bouchain Stat., a small 2nd-class fortress on the Scheldt; near which is

Denain, the battle-field where Marshal Villars defeated and made prisoner Lord Albemarle, commander of the allied forces, posted in a strong position, 1712. An Obelisk was erected on the field to commemorate the success, with these lines of Voltaire:—

"Regardez dans Denain l'audacieux Villars Disputant le tonnerre à l'aigle des Césars."

Somain Junct. Stat. Rte. 184.

Leotlinières Stat.

Coudry Stat.

Busigny Junct. Stat.

Tresnoyle Grand Stat.

Essigny le Petit Stat.

ST. QUENTIN STAT. Rte. 183.

Montescourt Stat.

Tergnier Junction Stat. Here is the carriage and engine factory of the Company of the Chemin de Fer du Nord. It has swelled a station into a town.

The Rly. passes through

La Fère Stat., a fortified town of 2085 Inhab., on the Oise, which we here cross. It has a school of artillery.

Crépy Stat.

The country improves in picturesque on approaching

LAON Stat. (Inn: La Hure. It is best to make the visit to Laon an excursion from Reims, taking day-tickets by rail.) Laon, chef-lieu of the Dépt. de l'Aisne (10,090 Inhab.), situated upon a lofty hill, the last of a long promontory, dropping abruptly into the plain. The escarpment is made accessible by long flights of steps, and a zigzag carriage road, leading up to the summit, crowned by the noble Cathedral of Notre Dame. This edifice, which is in a very pure and simple Gothic style, much resembling the early English of Salisbury, was dedicated Sept. 6, 1114, having been built from the very ground in the space of the 2 years preceding. If this date be correct, it is a century older than any specimen of the same kind in England. M. Viollet le Duc, however, asserts that it was almost destroyed before 1190, and rebuilt circa 1200, a date which harmonizes better with its pure Gothic character. It has 4 towers, which have very large, lofty, unglazed windows, through which the light shines, and the plan obviously was to have 8, and a central lantern. Some of them were formerly crowned by spires. The steeple, on the S. transept, is admirably designed. The façade, with its great receding cavern-like portals and arches, is singularly venerable. The sculptured foliage of the exterior is very fine. The ch. is 400 ft. long within, and has a double triforium, making 4 stories in all. The piers are delicately shafted. The choir, like our English cathedrals, ends square. The circular window is remarkable for its size, and for its painted glass; apparently coeval with the building.

It has 4 towers, 2 at the W. end, and 2 E. of the transepts. The W. porch deserves notice. See 2 monuments of interest—a knight in chain armour, and an abbot who holds a pastoral staff. The small cloister on the S. of the nave deserves notice.

A cloistered gallery connected the Cathedral with the Bishop's Palace, now Palais de Justice. Its chapel and crypt are older than the Cathedral. The great hall, now divided (date 1212) and the kitchen deserve notice. The Bishop of Laon was one of the 12 ecclesiastical peers of France; but this dignity did not deter the citizens from violently contesting his authority. In this Cathedral is preserved an ancient painting of St. Veronica's handkerchief, the head of the Saviour, with an inscription in the ancient Slavonian character, merely indicating the object which it represents.

This Cathedral has undergone judicious restoration.

The Ch. of St. Martin, on the side of the town opposite to the cathedral, is also German in character; the foundation is Romanesque, the choir and transepts early pointed; remarkable for the heavy character of the mouldings and the ingenious arrangement of the chapels and buttresses. The W. front deserves notice. It contains curious monuments.

There is in the town a small round or octagonal chapel, which belonged to the Templars, now attached to a school of the Frères de la Doctrine Chrétienne.

The Prefecture is established in the ancient abbey of St. Jean, which also contains the public Library, also a Museum of local antiquities; the Hôtel Dieu is the former Abbey of Martin.

The grand massive tower of Louis d'Outremer, one of the oldest monuments in France, has been pulled down to make way for a Citadelle, which has been deemed necessary to defend this side of France from invasion. Its massive foundations, however, have hitherto resisted the attempt to remove them. Near the Porte St. Martin is a curious Leaning Tower, Tour Penchée, called de la Dame Eve, inclining nearly 10 degrees out of the perpendicular. It was forced out of its place by the earthquake of 1696. Queen Brunsbault, who fixed her court at Laon, gives her name to another tower. "The fine masses of the ancient walls and towers which encircle the town, mixing with the rocks, add much to its picturesque aspect. These walls are said to have been built by Guillaume Harulin, the physician who attended Charles VI. during his insanity; so that, if this tradition be correct, they give a great idea of his fees. There are many fine points of view here, and perhaps none of them are more pleasing than those gained from the summit of the ramparts. The landscape is extensive and varied. Vineyards clothe the slopes of the hills, the plains are covered with cultivation, the earth seems literally teeming."—F. P.

One of the finest views of the town is from the road called "Chemin des Creuttes," near the Calvary, on the way to the Abbey of St. Vincent, of which no part escaped the fury of the democrats, except its outer walls (creuttes), moated and embattled like a fortress as it was; they now enclose a private garden.

In March (9 and 10), 1814, a battle, which lasted 2 days, was fought between the Allies, commanded by Blücher and Witzingerode, who occupied the town and neighbouring heights, and the French army, much inferior to them in numbers. Here the success of Napoleon was arrested for the first time in the campaign, and he was compelled to retire towards Soissons, with a loss of 6000 men and 46 cannon.

[There is a very curious ch. at Vauxsous Laon, below the town; and a magnificent granary at the Abbey of Vauclair; and an interesting hospital for lepers at Tortoir: all in the neighbourhood.]

Crossing the Aisne, the road enters the ancient province of Champagne, which derives its name from the many plains which it contains, and which constitute its great natural features, as soon as you advance beyond the borders.

Coney les Eppes Stat.

St. Erme Montaignu Stat.

Guignicourt Stat.

REIMS Stat., in Rte. 178.

[The Branch Rly. from Reims to Châlons (Stations, Mourmelon and Sillery) passes through wide plains in which the course of the Marne may be traced by the long rows of poplars upon its bank, by the Campi Catalaunici, where the great battle took place between the combined armies of Rome and Theodoric, and the "innumerable host" of Attila (A.D. 451). Here, as Gibbon observes, were assembled the natives of the various countries from the Volga to the Atlantic. The number of the slain amounted to 162,000, or, according to another account, 300,000. Attila, whose valour was always guided by his prudence, had waited for the enemy in these plains, as being best adapted to the operations of his Scythian cavalry. Great as was the slaughter, the conflict was undecided: Attila retreated into his camp, which he had fortified, according to the Scythian usage, by a vast circle of the waggons in which they dwelt. The allied armies separated at the moment when the magnanimous Barbarian had resolved, if his intrenchments should be forced, to rush headlong into the flames of the funeral pile formed of the saddles and rich furniture of the cavalry, and thus to deprive his enemies of the glory which they might have acquired by his captivity. Attila continued for several days within the circle of his waggons after this defeat, dreading some hostile stratagem; but his ultimate retreat beyond the Rhine "confessed the last victory which was achieved in the name of the Western Empire." Near the villages of Chape and Cuperly, about 5 m. from Châlons, there are vestiges of ancient earthworks, an oval rampart nearly 2 m. in circumference, traditionally known as the Camps of Attila.]

ROUTE 188.

LILLE TO DUNKERQUE, BY CASSEL.

51 kilom. = 32 Eng. m.

From Lille to Hazebrouck is described in Rte. 1.

41 Hazebrouck Stat.

20 Cassel Stat. H. du Sauvage, good. It is worth while in fine weather to stop here for a short time to enjoy the view.

Cassel is an ancient town of 4234 Inhab., agreeably situated on a hill commanding one of the most extensive views in Europe. Although it has no striking features, it exhibits, on a clear day, an unusually extensive tract of highly cultivated and productive country. Its most remarkable feature is, that the horizon is almost equally distant in every direction, as no rising ground interrupts the sight. It extends over the flat and fertile plains of Flanders, and as far as the white cliffs of England, into 3 different kingdoms; includes 32 towns and 100 villages. St. Omer, Dunkerque, Ypres, Ostend, and the beautiful steeple of Hazebrouck are the most prominent objects: no fresh water is visible in this vast expanse. Mont Cassel is only 800 Eng. ft. high: it was one of the principal signal stations of the great trigonometrical survey carried on during the reign of Napoleon. A small map of the country visible may be purchased on the spot for 20 sous.

General Vandamme was born here.

Flemish is the general language of the entire population in the northern parts of the Dépt. du Nord: it is spoken at Cassel, and as far as Watel.

Bergues Stat. (Inn: Tête d'Or), a small and poor fortified town of 6000 Inhab., situated on an elevation, surrounded by marshes and salt lakes called Mœere, formerly waste and insalubrious; but having been drained within a few years by the construction of hydraulic works, they are now becoming productive, and less unwholesome. Though only a fortress of the 3rd class, the possession of Bergues has been deemed of such consequence in every war, that it has been 8 times taken and retaken, and 9 times pillaged, in the course of 8 centuries. It has a picturesque Beffroi, 150 ft. high. A very important corn-market is held here every Monday. The gates are closed at 10, after which neither ingress nor egress is allowed.

DUNKERQUE STAT., at the extremity of the long canal which forms the harbour. See Rte. 189.

ROUTE 189.

CALAIS TO DUNKERQUE, BY GRAVELINES.

Calais, in Rte. 1. Diligence daily.

It is a good road to 20 Gravelines, a fortress, and desolate-looking small town, with grass growing in its streets; it has 3000 Inhab. "It is," to use the words of an old writer, "very strong, by reason that they can drown it round in 4 hrs., so as no land shall be within a mile of it." It is surrounded by a plain, once a vast marsh, below the level of the sea, nearly 20 m. long by 12 broad; almost all this can be laid under water in case of need, to ward off a hostile invasion on this side of France. At present this district supports a population of 60,000. It is protected from the sea by the dunes or sandhills, and is gradually being drained by its inhabitants. It would cost the arrondissement 10 millions of frs. to repair the damage caused by admitting the waters upon the land.

The Emperor Charles V. here paid a visit to Henry VIII. on his return from his interview with Francis I. at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, 1520.

Beyond Gravelines the road is paved.

21 DUNKERQUE (Inns: Chapeau Rouge;—H. de Flandres; a third-rate house, which has taken the name of the excellent hotel now closed), a considerable fortified town and seaport, with 29,738 Inhab. Large sums have been expended in endeavouring to clear the mouth of the harbour from the bar of sand which obstructs it, by means of basins and sluices, which are filled by the flowing of the tide, and discharged at low water, so as to scour a channel through the mud. They are said to have failed in producing the results anticipated. Dunkerque nevertheless is the best harbour which France possesses in the N. Sea, and ranks fourth in the value of its exports and imports of all the seaports in the kingdom. It serves as the outlet for the manufacturing district of the Dépt. du Nord. It is one of the cleanest towns in France, with wide streets, well paved, living cheap: baths, very good.

The Quai, usually crowded with vessels, and pier, extending far into the sea, are worth seeing: so is the Corinthian portico of the Church of St. Eloi, a handsome but most incongruous frontispiece to a Gothic building; in front of it is a fine detached Gothic belfry, containing the chimes.

There is an English Consul and an

English Protestant Church, Rue des Sœurs Blanches.

A Statue of John Bart, a famous sea-captain, born here (temp. Louis XIV.), stands in the Great Market Place.

Dunkerque owes its origin to a chapel built by St. Eloi in the 7th century among the dunes or sandhills, and thence comes its name, "Church of the Dunes." Here was equipped the Flemish division of the Spanish Armada, designed to combine in the invasion of England, under the command of the Prince of Parma; but that skilful general, perhaps foreseeing the result, refrained from putting out to sea. Dunkerque, after having been hardly won by the English under Oliver Cromwell from the Spaniards, 1658, was basely sold by Charles II. to Louis XIV. for 6 millions of livres in 1662.

By the Treaty of Utrecht (1715) the French were compelled to demolish the town and fortifications, and an English commissioner was actually sent hither to ascertain that the stipulations of the treaty were complied with to the letter; a source of deep humiliation to French pride, but of more immediate misery to the poor inhabitants. The port and fortifications were not restored and rebuilt until 1740.

The country around is little better than a dreary waste of sandhills thrown up by the wind. It was in the neighbourhood of them that Turenne defeated, in 1658, the Spanish army under Don John of Austria and the Great Condé, who had sided at that time with the enemies of France, in the Battle of the Dunes. The siege of the town had been commenced by Mazarin, at the dictation of Cromwell, whose fleet blockaded it by sea. The Spaniards, unprovided with artillery, advanced to attack the French, by marching close to the sea. Condé remonstrated in vain with Don John against a measure so perilous: "Vous ne connaissez pas M. de Turenne," said he; "on ne fait pas impunément des fautes devant un si grand homme;" and just as the action began, he turned to the young Duke of Gloucester, and asked if he had ever been in a battle before. "No," answered the Duke. "Then you will see one lost in half an hour." The action was commenced by 6000 English soldiers of Cromwell, commanded by Lockhart, his ambassador, who formed the left wing of the French army, and distinguished themselves eminently: their charge carried everything before it, and contributed not a little to the result. The Duke of York (afterwards James II.) fought in the opposite ranks, at the head of a regiment of Cavaliers, and it was from them that their fellow-countrymen suffered most. The Spaniards lost 4000 men, and Dunkerque surrendered 10 days after, in consequence of this defeat.

A pleasant excursion may be made by rail to the hill of Cassel, about 18½ m. off (Rte. 188).

Steamers to London; to Rotterdam; to Hamburg; to Havre. Railway to Hazebrouck, where it joins the lines from Lille to Paris.

There is a canal from Dunkerque to Furnes, Ostend, and Bruges, traversed daily by a barge, and another canal to Bergues.

INDEX.

D'AAS.

A.

d'Aas, 296
 Abbeville, 15
 Abd-el-Kader, 187
 Abélard (at St. Gildas), 151;
 his birthplace, 209; his death at St. Marcol, 382; his burial-place, 359
 Aberldut, river, 131
 Abion, 173
 Abries, 544
 st. Acheul, 18
 Accous, 291
 Achlet, 9, 603
 Adour, river, 277, 290; passage of the, 278
 st. Adresse, 65
 Adreta, Baron des, 416, 454, 530
 st. Afrique, 423
 Agde, 475
 Agen, 260
 Agincourt, 6
 Agnes Sorel, 54, 58, 196, 216
 Agonac, 247
 d'Aguesseau, 244
 Ai, 566
 Aidat, lac d', 412
 st. Aignan, 186
 Aigrefeuille, 212, 226
 Aigueperse, 397
 Aigues, river, 454
 Aigues Mortes, 471
 Aiguille, Mt., 533
 Aiguillon, 261
 Aigun, 291
 Aillewillers-Plombières, 578
 Ailly le Haut Clocher, 16
 Ain river, 551
 Ainay, abbey of, 388
 Aire, 290
 — to Tarbes, 290
 Aisey-le-Duc, 547
 Aisy-sur-Armançon, 371
 Aisne, river, 585, 587, 598, 607
 Aiz in Provence, 519; cathedral,
 519; museum, library, baths,
 520; remarkable natives, 521;
 conveyances, 521
 — in Savoy to Lyons, 552
 Alagnon, river, 406, 417, 418
 Alais, 439
 — to Nismes, railway, 439
 Albert, 9, 603
 Albigeois, 335, 336, 337, 425, 475

ANDUZE.

st. Albin, 385
 Albret, Sires de, 276
 Alby, 424
 Alençon, 123
 Alfieri's library, 474
 Alfort, 361
 Alignon river, 427, 438
 Allscampa, 482
 Allse Ste. Reine, 371
 Allan, 452
 Alleaume, 81
 l'Allegrie, 533
 Allemont, 540
 Allevard, 534, 540
 Alleuzes, castle, 421
 Allier, 357, 404, 407, 416, 428
 Alpines, 477, 518
 Alsace, 557, 572
 Altefage, forest, 429
 Altorf, 580
 Altkirch, 564
 Alzettes, river, 596
 st. Amand, 244
 st. Amand Montrond, 359
 st. Amarin, 579
 Ambérieu, 551, 553
 Ambrzac, 242
 Ambès, 272
 Ambleuse, 10
 Amboise, 186; castle, 186
 d'Amboise, Card., 186
 st. Ambroix, 438
 Amélie-les-Bains, 347
 Amiens, 16, 603; cathedral, 16;
 taken by the Spaniards, 18
 — to Rouen, 27
 Amphitheatre. See Nismes, Poitiers, Arles, Saintes, Be-sançon
 Ampilly-le-Sec, 547
 Ampoule, saints, 590
 Ampuis, 447
 Amyot, Jacques, 367
 Ancenis, 208
 Ancizan, 317
 Ancy-le-Franc, 371
 Andance, 433
 Andaye, 283
 Andelle, 52
 Andelot, 549
 les Andelys, 52
 st. Andéol, 518
 Andorre, 344
 st. André du Gaz, 525
 Andresieux, 431
 Anduze, 430

ARMENTIÈRES.

Ancon, Port de, 298
 Anet, château d', 122
 Angers, 155; castle, 155; cathedral, 156; museums, 157 churches, 158; hospital, 158 neighbourhood, 159; slate-quarries, 159
 — to Nantes, 206
 Angerville, 172, 174
 Ango, 30
 Angoulême, 221; castle, cathedral, 222; remarkable natives,
 223
 Anjou, 155
 Anne of Brittany, 162
 Annonay, 433
 Ante, river, 100
 Antibes, 501
 st. Antonin, 420
 Antraigues, 437
 Anzin coal-mine, 603
 Anzicans, 302
 Aragnouet, 317
 Arago, M., 340
 Aran, Val d', 326, 329
 Arbols, 551
 l'Arboust, Val, 318
 Arc, Pont de l', 438
 les Arca, 498
 Arc-Senans, 549
 Archachon, 275
 Archweiler, 572
 Arcier, 554
 Arcueil, 179
 Arcy, les Grottes d', 368
 Ardèche, 349
 —, river, 427, 436, 453
 Ardennes, 76
 Ardevon, 93
 Ardoisière, 359
 Ardes, 5
 Argelez, 300, 302, 340
 Argentat, Bourg, 432
 Argentan, 100
 Argentières, 438
 Argenton, 242
 Ariège, river, 334, 341, 345
 ARLES, en Provence, 479; amphitheatre, 480; theatre, 480;
 museum, 481; cathedral,
 481; Allscamps, 482
 Arles-les-Bains, 347
 Arlon, 596
 Arios, 329
 Armançon river, 367, 369
 Armentières, 7, 565

ARMORICA.

Armorica, anc., 125
 Arnaut, Pierre, 285, 301
 Arpajon, 172, 174
 Arques, castle and battle of, 30
 —, river, 28
 Arras, 8
 Arreau, 316
 Arrengasse, 290
 Arrens, 299, 302
 Arrhune, 283
 Ars-sur-Moselle, 594
 Arténay, 172, 174
 Arthur, king, his court, 134
 Artigues, 315
 — de Lin, 329
 Artix, 285
 Artois, 597
 Arudy, 292
 Arveiron, river, 420
 Arvieux, Val d', 544
 Asaspe, 291
 Asnières, 32
 Aspe, Val d', 291
 Aspin, 316
 Aspres les Veynes, 538
 Astier, 245
 st. Astier, 248
 Astos, val d', 318
 Ath, 604
 Attila, 607
 Aubagne, 483
 Aube, river, 561
 Audenas, 435
 Aubigné, 100
 d'Aubigné, Théodore, 215
 st. Aubin du Cormier, 102
 — (Seine), 559
 les Aubrais, 175
 Auch, 289
 Aucun, 300
 Aude, river, 336, 338, 476
 Audierne, 147
 Audruicq, 5
 Audun, 593
 Auffay, 31
 Aulne, river, 146
 Aulnoye, 602
 Aumale, 27
 Auray, 149; château d', 360
 Aure, Val d', 317
 Aurnign (Alderney), 88
 Aurillac, 419
 Auron, river, 354
 Austreberthe, 61
 Autrerie, 342
 Autun, 383
 AUVERGNE, 349; books on, 351; skeleton tour through, 351
 Auvernier, 549
 Auvers, 21
 Auxerre, 367
 Auxonne, 548
 Avalon, 134
 Avallon, 368
 Avejan, 317
 Avenières, 119
 st. Aventin, 318, 328
 Avesnes, 602
 AVIGNON, 456; cathedral, 457;

BARSAC.

Palace of the Popes, 457;
 list of popes who reigned here, 457; Inquisition at, 458;
 "Glacière" of, 459; massacres, 459; museums, 459, 460; picture gallery, library, 460; the beaver, 460; Laura's tomb, 460; conveyances, excursions, 461
 Avignon to Marseilles (Railway), 477
 — to Narbonne, by Nîmes and Montpellier, 464
 — to Nice, by Aix, 517
 Avignonnet, 335
 st. Avoird, 595
 Avon, 365
 Avanches, 92
 Avre, river, 122
 Ax, 344
 Ayron, 212
 Ayzac, Coupe d', 437
 Azay-le-Rideau, 198
 Azincour, 6
 Azun, Val d', 390, 302

B.

Bagnères de Bigorre, 321;
 baths, 322; conveyances, guides, promenades, 323; excursions, 323
 — to Luchon, 316, 324
 — de Luchon, 326
 Bagnoux, 203
 Ballargues, 472
 Baillieu, 7
 Belarue, 474
 Balbigny, 431
 Bâle, 584
 Ballon d'Alsace, 581
 — de Sultz, 581
 Ballons, 581
 Baluc, Card., 194
 Ban de la Roche, 576
 Banys, 340
 Bapaume, 57; vale of, 54
 Bar-le-Duc, 568
 Bar-sur-Aube, 561
 — Seine, 547
 Barbantane, 477
 st. Barbe, 152
 Barbe Bleu, 207
 —, Ile, 386, 396
 Barbeira, 338
 Barbizon, 364
 Barèges, 312
 Barentin, 61
 Barfleur, 82
 Barr, 581
 la Barrasque, 403, 421
 Barraux, Fort, 533
 Barre-y-va, 55
 Barrême, 539
 Barrère, Bertrand, 320
 Barsac, 262

LA BEAUCE.

la Barthe, 325
 Basque Roads, 228
 Basques, 281
 Bassey, 379
 Basse Indre, 154
 Basselin, Oliver, 100
 Bastan valley, 283, 312, 314
 la Bastide, 341
 Bastides, 334, 248, 490
 Baths in the Pyrenees, 235
 Batignolles, 32
 Battles—
 Arques, 30
 Auray, 149
 Azincour, 6
 Bar-sur-Aube, 562
 Castelnau-dary, 336
 Châlons (Attila's), 607
 Chollet, 211
 Coutras, 223
 Crécy, 16
 Dreux, 121
 the Dunes, 609
 Formigny, 79
 the Herringes, 174
 la Hougue, 82
 Ivry, 70, 122
 Jarnac, 223
 Laon, 607
 Laval, 119
 le Mans, 118
 Montlhéry, 173
 Orléans, 284
 Patay, 174
 Poitiers, 220
 st. Quentin, 601
 Rocroy, 592
 Tarbes, 320
 Torfou, 210
 Toulouse, 257
 Ushant, 132
 the Vauvage, 471
 Verneuil, 123
 Batz, 167
 —, island, 135
 Baud, 149
 Baudéan, 315
 la Baume, 437
 Baume les Dames, 555
 — des Vandols, 546
 les Baux, 478
 Bayard, 530, 591. Château, 534
 Bayeux, 78; cathedral, 78; tapestry, 79
 Bayle, 342, 592
 Bayonne, 277; citadel, 277; cathedral, 278; passage of the Adour, 278; commerce, 279; conveyances, 280
 — to Irun in Spain, 280
 Bayonnette, 283
 Bazancourt, 591
 Bazas, 262
 Bazelles, 592
 Bazège, 335
 Béarn, 229, 288
 st. Béat, 326, 329
 Beaucouise, 464
 la Beauce, 114, 172, 174

BEAUCHASTEL.

Beauchastel, 451
 Beaugency, 182
 Beaujeu, 385
 Beaumanoir, 141
 la Beaume, Pont de, 428
 Beaumont, château de, 145
 — sur-Oise, 21
 — le Royer, 71
 Beaune, 381
 Beauport abbey, 133
 Beaupouyet, 248
 Beauregard, 416, 450
 Beaurivage, valley, 430
Beauvais, 25; siege, 26
 Beauvoir, 93
 Beaver of the Rhône, 460
 Bec, abbey of, 71
 Bec d'Ambès, 272
 Becket, Thomas, 72, 366, 369, 370
 Bédarrides, 456
 Bédellac, 342
 Bedouin, 464
 Bédous, 291
 Belfort, see Belfort
 la Begude, 437
 Behobia, 282
 Behuard, Ile, 206
 Béliard, river, 579
 Belfort, 563
 Bellegarde, 521
 — fort, 341
 — (Ain), 551
 Belle Isle, 148
 Belle-Ile-en-Terre, 125
 Bellesme, Wm. de, his castle, 124
 Belleville, 212, 385
 Bellevue, 110
 Bellot, Tour de, 439
 Belves, 289
 Belzunce, Bp., 490, 493
 Benfeld, 581
 Benqué, 328
 Béranger, 195
 la Bérarde, 540
 Berenz, 284
 la Bergière, 416
 Bergons, Pic de, 308
 Bergues, 608
 Berland, Pierre, 263
 Bernac Debat, 290
 Bernadotte, 287, 562
 st. Bernard, 369, 374
 Bernay, 71
 Besny, 172
 Berre, Etang de, 482, 485
 Berret, 293
 Berri, 242, 349
 —, Duchesse de, 162, 272
 Bersac, 242
 st. Bertin, 6
 Bertrand, Gen., 242
 st. Bertrand de Comminges, 325, 334
 Berwick, Marshal, 378
Besançon, 553
 Beslé, 141
 Bessée, la, 545
 Bessège, 438
 Bétharram, 301
 [France.]

BOOKS.

Bettembourg, 596
 Beuzeville, 62
 Beycheville, 272
 Beza, 369
 Bézier, 475
 —, Vicomte de, 337
 Bezons, 32
 Biarritz, 280
 Bidassoa, passage of the, 282
 Bielle, 294
 Bielsa, 317
 Bignon, 375
 Bigorre, 321
 Bihère, 285
 Binic, 133
 Bloux Artiques, 295
 Bitche, 572
 Bizy, château, 34
 Black Prince, 16, 75, 220, 234, 268, 301, 320, 337
 Blaisy, 371
 le Blanc, 226
 Blanche, abbaye, 101
 Blanchelande, 81
 Blanquefort, 269
 Blavet, river, 144, 148
 Blaye, 272
 Bléré, 188
 Blesme, 568
 — to Chaumont, 564
 Bleu, Lac, 324
 Blois, 182; castle, 182;
 churches, 183; illustrious natives, 184
 —, Peter of, 184
 Blücher, 561, 587
 le Bocage of Normandy, 100
 — of la Vendée, 212
 Boën, 416
 Boes, 284
 Boisset-Pacy, 70
 Bolbec, 62; valley of the, 56
 Boldingbroke's château, 178
 Bollwiller, 583
Bonaparte at Boulogne, 13
 — at le Bourget, 586
 — at Brienne, 564
 — at Cannes, 501
 — at Fontainebleau, 362
 — at Fréjus, 498
 — at Grenoble, 532, 535
 — at Malmaison, 47
 — at Orgon, 518
 — at Reims, 590
 — at Rochefort, 228
 — at Surville, 365
 — at Toulon, 496
 — at Valence, 449
 Bonchamps, 207, 211
 Bone-houses, 107
 st. Bonnet, 411, 433, 536
 Bonneval, 195, 422
 Bonnières, 34
 Bonny, 376
 Bonpas, 518
 Bon Port, abbey, 53
 Books—on Normandy, 3; Britany, 108; the Pyrenees, 237; Central France, 353; Provence, 444; Dauphiné, 524

BOVERESSE.

Bordères, 317
 Bord'haut, 48
 BORDEAUX, 262; cathedral, 263; Tour de Peyberland, 263; churches 264; belfry, 264; ruins of amphitheatre, 265; gates, 265; pictures, 265; museum, library, commerce, 266; railways and steamers, 267; environs, 267; history, 267
 Bordeaux bridge, 224
 — to Bayonne, 274
 — to Pau and Tarbes, 290
 — to la Tour de Cordouan, 269
 — wines, 269
 las Bordes, 329
 Bordes d'Expouy, 320
 Bore in the Seine, 55
 Borne, river, 407
 Boscherville, St. George de, 54, 57
 Bosost, 329
 Bossuet, 374, 565
 la Botte, 61
 Bouc, 482
 Bouchain, 605
 Boucharo, 312
 Bouchet, lac de, 427
 Boucoiron, 440
 Bouille, la, 45, 54
Boulogne-sur-Mer, 10; English at, 10; the port, 11; museum, 11; library, 12; cathedral, 12; numerics, 12; Napoleon's camp and flotilla at, 13; column, 14
 — to Paris, 14
 Boulou, 340
 Bourbon l'Archambault, 379
 — Vendée, see Napoleon
 Vendée
 Bourbonnais, 349
 Bourbonne-les-Bains, 563
 Bourbre, river, 525
 Bourdaloue, 356
 la Bourdinière, 195
 Bourdonnais, Mahé de la, 97
 Bourg (Bresse), 550
 — d'Argental, 432
 — (Gironde), 272
 — St. Andréol, 453
 — Dieu or Déols, 242
 — d'Oysans, 540
 — du Péage, 532
 — la Reine, 172, 179
Bourges, 353; cathedral, 354; Hôtel de Ville, 355; convent, museum, 356
 — to Montluçon and Clermont, 359
 le Bourget, 586
 Bourget, lac de, 552
 Bourgoin, 525
 Bourienne, 75
 Bourron, 375
 Bousanne, river, 242
 Bout de Bois, 145
 Boveresse, 549

BOVES.

Boves, 19
 Braine-le-Comte, 604
 Brauz, 336
 Branilla, 143
 Braux, 591
 Brech, 150
 Brèche de Roland, 308, 310
 Breda, valley, 534
 la Brède, château de la, 262
 Bréhal, 90
 Breisach, 583
 Bresle, river, 68
 la Bresse, 550
 Bresseuire, 211
Brest, 127; dockyard, 128;
 hospital, 129; roadstead, 130;
 environs, 131
 — to Nantes, 145
 Breteuil, 19
 Bretigny, 116, 174
 Bretteville, 78
Briançon, 541
 — to Susa, 542
 Briare, 376
 Briquebec, 81, 88
 la Brie, 361, 559
 Brienne, 561
 st. Brieuc, 125
 — to Brest, 133
 Brignolles, 521
 Brillane, 537
 Brioude, 406
 Brissac, château, 205
 BRITANNY, 103; character of the country, 103; language, 103; people, scenery, and buildings, 104; ancient monuments, 105; superstition, 106; ecclesiastical monuments, 106; connection with England, 108; Chouannerie, 108; books to consult, 108;
 skeleton tour, 108; accommodation for travellers, 109
 Brives, 245
 Brix or Bruis, 83
 Broons, 124
 Brosseau, Pierre de, 200
 Broto, 312
 Brou (Ain), church of, 551
 Brougham, Lord, 500
 Broussette, Case de, 298
 Bruche, river, 580
 Brummel, Beau, 75
 Brune, Marshal, 245, 456
 Brunel, birthplace of, 49
 st. Bruno, 527, 528
 Branoy, 361
 Brussels, 604
 Brutinel, 536
 Brux, 141
 Bucant, 277
 Bucer, Martin, 582
 Buech, river, 537
 Bueil, 70
 Buffon, 371
 Buglose, 276
 la Bugue, 289
 Bulserade, 529
 le Bulsson, 289

CAPBERN.

Burel, 426
Burgundy, 547. Wines, 380
 Burzet, valley, 437
 Busigny, 602, 605
 Bussang, 579
 Bussière-Gaband, 247
 Butler, Dr., his grave, 6
 Butte de César, 150
 — de Montpensier, 396
 Buzançais, 197
 Buzay, 167

C.

Cacolat, 281
 Cadéac, 317
 Cadoudal, George, 150
Caen, 72; ch. of St. Pierre, 73;
 Abbaye aux Hommes, grave of William the Conqueror,
 73; Abbaye aux Dames, 74;
 castle, 75; Girardin leaders at, 75; illustrious natives, 75; environs, 76; stone-
 quarries, 77
 — to Cherbourg, 77
 — to Tours, 98
 Caesar at Portus Itius, 10; at Gergovia, 405
 Cafés, xxiii
 Cagnea, 501
 Cagots, 233, 307, 325
 Cahors, 246; cathedral, 246;
 capture of, 246
Calais, 3
 — to Dunkerque, 608
 — to Paris by Amiens, 3
 — to Boulogne, 10
 Calas, Jean, 255
 Caligula at Boulogne, 13
 Callac, 143
 Calonne, river, 69
 Calvados, Dept., 72
 Calvin, 599
 Camargue, 483
 Cambacérés, 474
 Cambiel, 317
 Cambo, 280
Cambray, 605; cathedral, 605
Camisards, 351, 429, 439, 469,
 471, 473
 Campan, Val de, 315; marble-
 quarries, 322
 Cancale, 96; Rochers du, 95, 96
 Canche, river, 15
 Candes, 201
 Canfan, 329
 Canfranc, 292
 Canigon, 346
 st. Cannat, 519
 Cannes, 499
 Cannel, 500
 Cantal, 350, 417
 Canteleu, 54, 57
 Cany, 67
 Capbern, 325

CHALABRE.

Capdenac, 245
 Carbon Blanc, 216
 Carbonne, 334
Carcassonne, 336
 — to St. Gaudens, 342
 Cardillac, 262
 Carentan, 80
 Carhaix, 143
 Carignan, 592
 Carle-le-Comte, 342
 Carneau, 424
Carnac, 153
 Carnot, 382
 Carnoule, 498
 Carpentras, 463
 Carriages, xix
 Carrier, the infamous, 164, 419
 Carquefou, 141
 Carvin, 8
 Cassagnas, 429
 Cassel, 608
 st. Cast, 141
 Castarot, 427
 Castel Jaloux, 293
 — Leon, 329
 Castellane, 539
 Castelnau, 258, 290, 440
 Castelnaudary, 336
 Castel Sarrazin, 259
 Casters Verdun, 289
 Castillon, 248
 Château Cambresis, 602
 Cathelineau, death of, 165
 ste. Catherine de Fierbois, 216
 Catherine de Medicis, her observatory, 183; her residence, 186, 280
 Canchoise head-dress, 62
 Caudebec, 55, 59
 Caudebecquet, 58
 Caudos, 276
 Caumont stone-quarries, 54
 Caumont, M. de, 76
 Caunes, marble-quarries, 338
Cauterets, 303
 — to Luz, 306
 Caux, Pays de, 59, 61, 62
 Cavallion, 918
 Cavalier, 351, 430, 439, 469, 477
 Caylus, 420
 Cayrols, 419
 Cazeaux, 318
 Cazères, 290
 la Celle Brûlée, 359
 Celtic remains in Brittany, 105
 Cercolles, 172
 Cercottes, 175
 Cère valley, 418
 Ceret, 347
 Cérons, 262
 Cessanne, 543
 Cesson, 375; Tour de, 125
 Cette, 474
 Cevennes, 350, 438
 Cèze, 438
 Châblis, 368
 Chabrol Castle, 247
 Chagny, 382
 Chaise Dieu, 406
 Chalabre, 341

CHALAIS.

Chalais, 223
 Chalanche, 340
 Chailfert, 565
 Chalindrey, 563
 — to Neuchâtel, 548
 Chaillé, 214
 Challier, 392
 Chalonette, river, 174
 Chalonne, 206
 Châlons-sur-Marne, 568; battle of (Attila's), 607
 — to Verdun, 584
Châlons-sur-Saône, 382
 — to Lyons, 384
 — to Paris, 379
 la Chalp, 544
 Chalus, 244, 247
 Chaluset, 244
 Chamarande, 174
 st. Chamas, 485
 Chambertin, 380
 Chambery, 533
 Chambon, 427
 —, lac, 413
Chambord, château, 184
 st. Chamond, 426
Champagne, 557, 563
 —, church of, 447
 —, vins de, 566, 590
 Champeix, 415
 Champigny, 199
 Champollion, 419
 Champs, 368
 Champsaur, 536
 Champiercier, 539
 Champocé, 206
 Champocéaux, 208
 Chanaz, 552
 Chanceaux, 547
 Chandos, John, 81
 Changis, 365
 Chanteloup, 188
 Chantenay, 154
 Chantereine, 87
 Chantilly, 19, 597
 Chaparellian, 533
 Chape, 607
 la Chapelle Chaussée, 141
 — sur-Erdre, 141
 Chapelue, 544
 Chaptal, 474
 Chaptuzat, 397
 Charente, river, 214, 221
 Charenton, 361
 Charette, death of, 165
 la Charité, 376
 Charleroi, 602
 Charles X., 113
 — the Bold, 571, 603
 — the Simple, 603
 Charlesmesnil, castle, 31
 Charleville, 591
 Charmant, 223
 Charmes, 451
 Charolais, canal, 384
 Charroux, 221
Chartres, 114; cathedral, 114
 — to Tours, 118, 195
Chartreuse, la Grande, 523
 Chasselas grapes, 365

ST. CHRISTOPHE.

Château d'Adam, 83
 Châteaubourg, 120, 448
 Châteaubriand, M. de, 97, 98
 Châteaubriant, 141
 Château Chinon, 383
 Châteaudun, 195
 Château l'Evêque, 247
 — le Forêt, 127
 — Gaillard, 35, 50, 51
 — Gonthier, 119
 — Laftte, 273
 — Latour, 273
 — Léoville, 273
 Châteaulin, 146
 Château du Loir, 100
 — Margaux, 272
 Châteauneuf, 138, 180, 453
 — des Papes, 456
 — le Randon, 428
 — le-Rouge, 521
 Château Regnault, 195
Châteauroux, 242
 Château de la Salette, 553
 — Salins, 571
 — Thierry, 566
 Châtaudren, 125
 Châtelier, 138
 Châtelleraud, 217
 Châtenay, 172, 179
 Châtillon-sur-Indre, 197
 — sur-Loing, 375
 — sur-Loire, 376
 — sur-Seine, 173, 547
 — sur-Sèvre, 211
 Châtou, 47
 Chaudes Aigues, 422
 Chaumont, 186
 — Haut Marne, 562; Treaty of, 562
 — to Blesme, 564
 Chauny, 600
 Chaussée, la, 46
 Chauvency, 592
 Chauvigny, 225
 Chavagnac, 407
 Chaville, 111
 Chayla, death of, 429
 Chazes, 418
 Checy, 180
 Chemille, 367
 Chénonceaux, château of, 188
 Cheptainville, 174
 Cher, river, 186, 188, 195, 197,
 360
Cherbourg, 83; dockyard, 84;
 Digue, 84
 — to St. Malo, 88
 Chery, 242
 Chevilly, 172, 175
 Chevreuse, 113
 Chiers, river, 593
Chinon, 198
 Cholsy, 172
 Chollet, 211
 Chomerac, 434
 Chorges, 543
 la Chouannerie, 108, 119
 Chouzé, 201
 Christina of Sweden, 363
 st. Christophe, 540

COMBOURG.

Cierp, 326
 Cimiez, 510
 Cinq Mars, la Pile de, 200
 Cintegabelle, 341
 Clotat, 493
 Cirey, 562
 Cirque, 232, 308, 310
 Cité des Limes, 30
 Cîteaux Abbey, 381
 Clivray, 221
 Clain, 217
 ste. Claire-sur-Epte, 49
 Clairvaux, 562
 Claix, 534
 Clamart, 109
 Clamecy, 376
 Clarbide, Port de, 317
 Clarendon, lord, 378
Claret wine, 269
 Clark, Marshal, 602
 Clelles, 538
 Clémence Isaure, 251
 — de Maille, 242, 245, 268, 359
 Clères, 31
 Clermont en Argonne, 585
 — Ferrand, 398; cathedral,
 399; museums, 400, councils,
 environs, 401
 — to Mont Dore, 421
 — to Montbrison, by Thiers, 416
 — sur-Oise, 19
 — to Toulouse, by the Can-tal, 417
 — to Toulouse, by Rodez,
 421
 — sur-Loire, 208
 Cléry, N. Dame de, 181
 Clichy, 32
 Clisson, 209; castle of, 209
 —, Constable de, 144, 153
Clos-Vougeot, 380
 st. Cloud, 111
 Clovis, 586, 588
 Cloyes, 195
 Cluny, 385
 Coarrase, 300
 Cocherel, 70
 Cochrane, lord, 228
 Cœur, Jacques, 355
 Cognac, 215
 Colron mountains, 435
 Colbert, statesman, 589
 Coligny, 20, 375, 550
 Collifoure, 340
 Collonges, 386
 Collot d'Herbois, 390, 393
 Colmar, 582
 Cologne, 602
 st. Colomb, 578
 Colombes, 32
 Colombey, 562
 Colonne Napoléon, 14
 Combat des Trente, 144
 Combe de Malval, 541
 — le-Ville, 375
 Combleaux, 180
 Comblat, 419
 Combours, 98

ST. COOME.

st. Côme, 261
 Comines, 16
 Commeny, 360
 Commercy, 569
 Comminges, 325
 Compiègne, 598
 Concarneau, 147
 Conches, 71
 Condat, 224
 Conde, le Grand, at Chantilly, 19; at Montrond, 359; at Fontainebleau, 364; at Montargis, 375; at Rocroy, 592; at Thionville, 596; buried, 366
 Condillac, 181
 Condom, 289
 Condorcet, 109, 172, 601
 Condrieux, 447
 Conflans, 579
 Conjuration d'Amboise, 187
 Conneré, 117
 Conqueror, William the, his "mark," 41; at Rouvray, 53; his residence at Lillebonne, 60; his fleet and army, 70; his escape from Valognes, 80; his birth, 99; his death and funeral, 33, 42, 73; his grave, 73
 Conques, 424
 Conquet, 131
 la Coquille, 247
 Corbeil, 173
 Corbie, 9
 Corday, Charlotte, 75
 Cordemais, 154
 Cordes, 420
 Cordouan, Tour de, 274
 Corent, 405
 Cormery, 195
 Cornas, 448
 Cornella, vale of, 345
 Corneille, 44
 Corps, 536
 Corps Nuds, 141
 Corrèze, 245
 Corseul, 141
 Corseilles, 77
 Cosne, 376
 Côte des Deux Amana, 52
 — St. Amand, 359
 — d'Or, 371, 380, 547
 — Rôtie, 447
 Côtentin, 80
 Cotton manufacture, 571, 584
 Coucy le Château, 600
 — les Eppes, 607
 Coudes, 405
 Coudry, 605
 Couësson, river, 95
 les Couets, 166
 Coulbœuf, 98
 Courbassil, 345
 Courbevoie, 46, 111
 Courmouaille, 108, 143
 la Couronne, abbey, 223
 Courrier, P. L., 200
 Courtheson, 456
 Cousin, river, 368

DELAUVIGNE.

Coustouges, 347
 Coutabière, river, 223
 Coutances, 89; cathedral, 89
 Contras, 223, 248
 Couthon, 393
 Couvet, 549
 Couville, 83
 Conze, river, 406
 Couzon, 386, 426
 Crach, 151
 Craon, 216
 Craponne, Canal de, 484
 Crau, 484
 Crécy, 15
 Creil, 19
 — to Beauvais, 25
 Crépy, 606
 Crest, 451
 Creully, 78
 Creuse, river, 216, 242
 Creusot, 384
 Crillon, 517
 Criquetot, 67
 Croisic, 168
 Croix, Col de la, 545
 — Court, 142
 — Haute, 538
 — Rousse, 387, 553
 — Verte, 201
 Cromlecha, 150
 Cruas, 451
 Crume, river, 210
 Crussol, 450
 Cubzac, Pont de, 224
 Cuers, 498
 Cujes, 493
 Culoz, 551
 Cunsault, 205
 Cuperly, 607
 Cussy la Colonne, 382
 Custine, Gen., 595
 Cuvier, 66, 555
 st. Cybard, 222
 Cylindre, Mt., 310
 st. Cyr, 112, 195
 — de Favières, 431
 —, Marshal, 570

D.

Dagnèmière, 205
 Dammartin, 586
 Dampierre, 204
 —, château de, 113
 Dannemarie, 553
 Daoulas, 146
 Darlesheim, 580
 Darnétal, valley, 36, 45
 le Dauphin, 540
 Dauphiné, 523
 Dax, 276
 — to Pau, 284
 Delas, 272
 Delambre, birthplace of, 18
 Delavigne, Casimir, birthplace of, 65

DUCANGE.

Deille, abbé, 109, 397
 la Délivrande, 77
 Denain, 605
 st. Denis, 22, 124
 Departments of France, xxvii
 Desaix, Gen., 576
 Descartes, 216
 Despourrins, poet, 291
 Déville, 61
 Diana of Poitiers, 122, 188
 Diderot, 563
 st. Didier, 463
 Dieppe, 28; church, 28; castle, 29; environs, 30
 — to Rouen, 28
 Dieppedale, 54
 Diersheim, 580
 Dieune, river, 433
 Dieuze, 571
 st. Diey, or Dié, 184, 581
 Digne, 538
 Dijon, 371; palace, 372; museum, 372; churches, 373; remarkable natives, 374; conveyances, 374
 — to Paris, 361
 — to Châlons-sur-Saône, 379
 — to Neuchâtel, 548
 — to Belfort, 553
 Diligences, xx
 Dinan, 138; cathedral, 139
 Dinart, 97, 138
 Dives, river, 70
 st. Dizier, 564
 Doira, river, 543
 Dol, 95
 Dolaison, valley, 427
 Dôle, 548
 — to Neuchâtel, 549
 Dolmens, 105, 117, 147, 150, 166, 203, 219, 414
 Dombasle, 585
 Dombes, 386
 Domène, 533
 Domfront, 101
 Domrémy la Pucelle, 569
 Donchery, 592
 Donges, 166
 Donon, Mt., 581
 Donzenac, 245
 Dordogne, 224, 245, 248, 272, 411, 412
 Dormans, 566
 Dormilleuse, 545
 Douai, 8, 605
 Doubs, river, 549, 553, 554, 555; Dept., 553
 Dourdon, river, 424
 la Doutre, 158
 Doux, river, 447
 Douzy, 592
 Drac, river, 529, 534, 536
 Dragonnades, 259, 352
 Draguignan, 498
 Drap, 514
 Dreux, 121; battle of, 121
 Drevant, 360
 Drôme, river, 451
 Dubois, Card., 245
 Ducange, birthplace of, 18

DUCLAIR.

Duclair, 54, 57
 Dugual Trouin, 97
 Duguesclin, 93, 124, 138, 149;
   his death, 428
 Dumouriez, 605
 Dunes, battle of the, 609
Dunkerque, 609
 Dupin, Mad., 189
 Duplessis Mornay, 202
 Duprat, chancellor, 406
 Dupuytren, 244
 Durance river, 477, 517, 537,
   543
 Durtfort, 430
 Duroc, Marshal, 593
 Durola, river, 416

E.

Eaux-Bonnes, 296
   — to Caunterets or Luz, 299, 300
 Eaux-Chaudes, 294
   — to Caunterets, 298, 300
 Ebro, rise of, 325
 Ecluse, Fort, 552
 Ecommoy, 100
 Ecouen, 21
 Ecouls, 49
 Edward III. at Crécy, 16
 Efflat, 359
 Eguisheim, 583
 Elbœuf, 53
 Elle river, 147
 st. Elne, 340
 Elorn, river, 127, 145
 Elven, 154
 Embrun, 543
 st. Emilion, 248
 Enghien-les-Bains, 22
 English abroad, xxix
 English at Boulogne, 10
 Entécade, 329, 330
 Entraigues, 463
 Entre Deux Mers, 271
 Entremont, valley, 529
 Entressen, 484
 Entzheim, 580
 Epernay, 566
   — to Reims, 568
 Epernon, 113
 Epinac, 384
 Epinal, 577
 Epinay, 173
 Epine, N. D. de l', 584
 Epone, 33
 Epte, river, 49
 Erdevan, 152
 Erdre, river, 141
 st. Erme, 607
 Ermenonville, 586
 Erquelines, 602
 Erstein, 581
 Escaladieu, 324
 Escot, 291
 Esponblac, 167

FEURS.

Espally, 410
 Espalion, 422
 Espiadat, marble-quarries, 316
 Espingou, Lac, 319
 st. Esprit, 140, 453
 Essé, 120
 Essigny, 605
 Essera, val d', 331, 332
 Essonne, 173; river, 173
 Essort, 563
 Estaes, lac d', 292
 Estagel, 340
 Estaque, 485
 Estenos, 326
 Esterels, 499
 d'Estrées, Gabrielle, 18, 600
 Estrelles, 499
 Etampes, 174
 Etaples, 15
 Etauliers, 216
 st. Etienne, 431; museum, 431;
   manufactures, cathedral, 432
   — du Bois, 550
 Etrécy, 172
 Etréchy, 174
 Etrétat, 66
 Etaut, 291
 st. Etienne-de-Monluc, 154
 Eu, 67
 Eure, river, 53, 114, 121
 Euzet, 439
 Ewrau, 141
 Evre, river, 242
 Evreux, 70
 Eyrieu, river, 434, 451

F.

Fabre, revolutionist, 337
 Fain, 568
 Faisans, Ile de, 283
 Falaise, 98; castle, 99
 Falaises, 569
 Falcon, 511
 Fanlo, 312
 Faon, 145
 Faouet, 143
 Farel, 536
 Farguette, 424
 Fastolf, Sir John, 174
 la Faurie, 538
 Fauries, 532
 Favernay, 579
 Fécamp, 66
 Fénelon, 109, 605
 st. Ferdinand, 46
 la Fère, 606
 st. Féréol, 336
 la Ferrade, 466, 483
 Ferreol, 427
 la Ferrière, 534
 Ferrières, 375
 la Ferté, meaning of, 241
 Ferté-Bernard, 117
   — sous-Jouarre, 565
   — Milon, 586
 Feurs, 431

FRANCHE-COMTE.

Field of the Cloth of Gold, 5
 Figeac, 419, 245
 Finisterre, dept., 125, 134
 Fiquainville, 66
 Firmigny, 427
 Fishermen of Boulogne, 11
 Fitou, 338
 Fix, 407
 Flambouin, 559
Flamboyant Gothic, 107, 161,
   195, 334, 559, 570, 591
 Flamingo, 460
 Flanders, 597
   —, French, 1
 Fleury-sur-Andelle, 49
 Fleurigny, 366
 Flogny, 370
 Florac, 429
 st. Florent, 207
 st. Florentin, 369
 Florian, 179, 430
 st. Florine, 406
 st. Flour, 421
Fois, 342
   —, Gaston de, 284, 301, 342, 360
   —, Gaston Phœbus, 285
 Folgoat, church of, 136
 la Fonderie, 292
 Fonfroid, 337
Fontainebleau, 362; château,
   362; forest, 364; grapes, 365
 Fontaine Henri, 76
 la Fontaine, Jean de, 566
 Fontaines, 374
 Fontange, 596
 Fontaulier, river, 437
 Fontenay abbey, 371
   — aux Roses, 179
   — le Comte, 213
 Fontevrault abbey, 203
 Fontoy, 593, 596
 Forbach, 595
 Forez, 416
 la Forge Férét, 50
 les Forges, 353
 Forges les Eaux, 27
 Formigny, 79; battle, 79
 Fort Exiles, 543
 Fos, 329
 Fouché, 165, 393
 Fouday, 580
 Foug, 569
 Fougères, 102
 Fougères, 578
 la Foulloille, 431
 Fouquier-Tinville, 601
 Fourchambault, 376
 Fourvoirie, 526
 la Foux, 469
 Foy, Gen., 600
 FRANCE, introductory information respecting, ix; a traveller's view of, xxiv; Departments and Provinces,
   xxvii; skeleton tour through,
   xxxi; chronological table of kings, xxxii
 France, Central, 349
 Franche-Comté, 547

FRANCIS.

Francis I., his birth, 215
 Francis II., his death, 178
 Frasne, 549
 Fraxinet, 513
 Fréjus, 498
 Fresnay, 98
 — la Meré, 100
 Frêne-Camilly, 78
 Freassinière, 545
 Frillière, 189
 Frioul, 490
 Froisher, his death, 145
 Froissart, 26, 75, 234, 261, 284,
 301, 320, 321, 398, 604
 Fronde, leaders of the, at Havre, 63
 Fronquambant, 226
 Frontignan, 474
 Frouard, 570, 593
 Fuentarabia, 283
 Fumay, 591
 Fure, river, 525, 533
 Furens, river, 427, 431

G.

Gabas, 296
 st. Gabriel, 78
 Gaillac, 425
 Gaillard, château, 35, 51
 Gaillon, 34
 Gaigals, 106
 Galligani, 24
 Gallargues, 471
 Gallego, river, 298
 st. Galmier, 431
 Gan, 292
 Gannat, 396
 Gap, 536
 — to Briançon, 543
 la Garaye, 140
 Gard, St. Jean du, 430
 —, Pont du (aqueduct), 469
 la Garde, 497
 Gardelle, gold-mine, 540
 Gardon, river, 430, 439
 Gargantua, Chaire de, 54
 GARONNE, river, 224, 256, 258
 — below Bordeaux, 269
 —, sources of, 325, 329, 331
 Gartempe, viaduct of, 242
 Gascony, 229
 Gassendi, 539
 Gâtinoles, le, 375
 Gatteville, cape, 83
 Gaube, lac de, 305
 st. Gaudens, 334
 — to Carcassonne, 341
 st. Gauthier, 226
 Gauriac, 272
 Gavarnie, 309
 Gave de Pau, 292
 Gavea, 231
 Gavet, Combe de, 540
 Gavr Innis, 150
 Gèdre, 308
 la Gêlle, 289

GRAVELINES.

Gelos, see Castel Jaloux
 st. Genes, 416
 Geneva, 552
 st. Geneviève, 47
 Genevre, Mont, 542
 st. Genis, 215
 Genlis, Madame de, her grave,
 47
 Gennes, 205
 Genos, 317
 st. George d'Aurat, 407
 — Boscerville, 54, 57
 Gerardmer, 578
 Gerbier des Juncs, 410
 Gère, river, 445
 Gergovia, 404
 st. Germain-en-Laye, 47
 — to Rouen, 50
 — Railway, 47
 — des Fosses, 357, 379
 — forest, 33, 48
 — Lembron, 406
 st. Germe, 27
 Gers, dépt., 286
 st. Gervais, 41
 Gessoriacum, anc., 10
 Gesvres, 145
 Geucay, 221
 Gevrey, 380
 Gibaud, Pont, 404
 Gien, 180
 — to Orleans, 180
 Gier, valley, 426
 Giersburg, castle, 582
 st. Gildas, 154
 st. Gildas de Rhuya, 151
 st. Gilles, 470
 Girecourt, 581
 Gironde, 269, 271
 —, river, 216
 Girondins, 75, 248, 268
 st. Giron, 341
 Gisfort, vale, 440
 Gisors, 21
 Givet, 592
 Givors, 426, 445
 st. Gobain, 600
 Godemar, Val, 546
 Goderville, 66
 Goncelin, 533
 le Got, 289
 Götthe, 575
 Goueanon, 137
 Gouet, river, 125
 Gournay, 27
 Goust, 295
 Grande Chartreuse, 525
 — Cheminée, 80
 — Combe, 439
 — Croix, 426
 — Puyère, 521
 Grand Lieu, lac, 165
 — Mont, 151
 — Som, 529
 Grandville, Card., 554
 Granville, 91
 Grasse, 500, 539
 la Grave, 541
 — d'Ambares, 224
 Gravelines, 608

HAMILTON.

Grawson, 477
 Graviers, 216
 Gravelle, 63
 Gray, 548
 Gregory of Tours, 192
 Grenade, 258
 Grenelle, 109
 Grenoble, 530; cathedral, museums, 530; library, conveyances, excursions, 531;
 manufactures, 532
 — to Briançon, by Bourg
 d'Oysans, 538
 — to Gap and Marseilles,
 534
 — to Marseilles, by Croix
 Haute, 538
 — to Nice, by Digne, 538
 Grenoux, 119
 Grésivaudan, Val de, 525, 529,
 533
 Gresset, poet, birthplace of, 18
 Greuze, 385
 Grignan, château, 452
 Grigny, 426
 Grip, 315
 Grisac, 429
 Grisolles, 258
 Grolaud, 214
 Guebweiler, 583
 Guérande, 167
 Guerche, 356; château de, 216
 Gueule, valley, 113
 Guéthary, 281
 Guétin, le, 356
 Guibray, 100
 Guichen, 317
 Guichenbourg, 141
 Guienne, 229
 Guiers, river, 134, 526, 527,
 552
 Guignicourt, 607
 Guill, river, 544
 Guillestre, 544
 Guillotière, see Lyons
 Guimilliau, 143
 Guingamp, 125
 Guingnette de Boyer, 536
 Guisanne, Val de, 542
 Guise, Henri, Duc de, 68, 121;
 — assassination of, 183
 —, François, Duc de, 4, 595;
 — assassination of, 178
 Guisnes, 5
 Guizon, 227
 Guizot, 469
 Guttemberg, John, 575
 Gun manufacture, 432
 Gypsum quarries, 519

H.

Hachette, Jeanne, 27
 Hacqueville, 49
 Hague, Cap la, 88
 Ham, 599
 Hambye, 90
 Hamilton, lady, her grave, 4

HANNIBAL.

Hannibal's route over the Alps, 446, 448, 456
 Harcourt, 71
 Harfleur, 62
 Haut Buisson, 10
 Hauterive, 379
 Hauteville, 89
 Hautmont, 602
le Havre, 63; harbour, 64; history, 64; baths, 65; steamers from, 65
 — to Caen, 69
 — to Dieppe, 66
 — to Honfleur, 68
 Hayange, 596
 la Haye, 216
 Hazebrouck, 6, 608
 Héas, Val d', 309
 Hebert the anarchist, 124
 Hectaires, xlv
 Hédé, 141
 Heidenmauer, 582
 Heloise, 559
 Heming, 572
 Hendaye, 282
 Hennebion, 148
 Henri III., his share in the murder of the Duke of Guise, 183
 Henri IV. at Dieppe, 29; at Arques, 30; at Rosny, 34; accident to, at Neuilly, 46; at la Roche Guyon, 50; at Ivry, 70, 122; at Cahors, 246; at Nerac, 289; his birthplace, 286; his cradle, 287; his childhood in the Pyrenees, 300
 Henry II., pierre de, 92; his birthplace, 118
 Henry V. at Azincour, 6; at Harfleur, 62
 Herault, river, 476
 Herblay, 22
 st. Herbot, 143
 Hermitage, 447
 Herrings, battle of the, 174
 Heyrieux, 525
 st. Hilaire du Harcouet, 102
 Hoche, birthplace, 111
 Hoher Königsburg, 582
 Hombourg, 595
 st. Honorat, Ile, 501
 Honfleur, 68
 Hortense, queen, her grave, 47
 st. Hospice, 513
 Hospitalet, 344
 l'Hôte du Bois, 581
 Hondan, 121
 la Hougue, Cape, 82
 Hourat, 294
 Hourquettes, 232
 Huelgoat, 142; lead-mines, 142
 Huet, Bp., birthplace of, 75
 Huguenot, derivation of, 193
 la Hunaudaye, 140
 Hüttenheim, 581
 Hyères, 497
 st. Hyppolite, 214, 582

JEANNE.

I.

Ibos, 320
 If, 488
 Ifs, 77
 les Ifs Etretat, 66
 Igoe, 290
 Ile Adam, 21
 — Behnard, 206
 — Bouchard, 216
 — Belle, 49, 386
 — de France, 1, 597
 — st. Michel, 148
 Iles d'Or, 498
 Ill, river, 564, 580
 Ille, 345
 st. Imbert, 377
 Indre, 195
 Indret, 167
 les Infernets, 540
 Ingouville, 65
 Ingrande, 207
Inns, xxi
 Inquisition in Toulouse, 255; at Avignon, 458
 Irigny, 426
 Iron Mask, the Man in the, 500
 Irun, 280, 283
 Isère, river, 432, 448, 525, 529, 530, 533
 Isigny, 80
 l'Isle, 462
 —, river, 223, 248
 — sur-le-Doubs, 555
 Issoire, 406
 Issoudun, 242
 Issy, 109
 Ivry, battle, 70, 122
 Izarda, 233, 293

J.

Jacquard, 426
 Jacquerie, 27
 st. Jacques des Blats, 418
 James II. at St. Germain-en-Laye, 48; at la Hougue, 80, 82; at the battle of the Dunes, 610
 la Jard, 215
 Jargeau, 180
 Jarnac, 223
 Jasmin, poet, 260
 Jaudy, river, 134
 Jaujac, 428, 438
 st. Jean du Doigt, 134
 — du Gard, 430
 — de Luz, 282
 — (Nice), 512
 Jean-sans-peur, 365, 373
 Jeanne d'Albret, 287
 Jeanne d'Arc, at Rouen, 43; at Patay, 174; souvenirs at Orleans, 176, 177; at Jargeau, 180; at Chinon, 198; her sword, 216; at Domrémy,

LAGNY.

569; at Reims, 590; at Compiègne, 598
 Jeanne de Montfort, 148
 Jessains, 561
 Jeumont, 602
 Jeux Floraux, Société des, 251
 Jews at Strasburg, 576
 Joani, death of, 429
 st. Jodard, 431
 Joigny, 367
 Joinville, 564
 Joliette, 487
 Joppécourt, 593, 596
 Josephine, Empress, 47
 Josselin, 144
 Jouarre, 565
 Jourdan (Coupette), 459
 —, Marshal, 244
 Jourdanne, valley, 419
 la Joux, 549
 Joux, Château de, 549
 Jouy aux Arches, 595
 Joyeuse, 438
 Juigné, 154
 Juine, river, 172, 174
 Julia Bona, 60
 st. Julien, 272
 Jumièges Abbey, 57
 st. Junien, 244
 Junquiera, 341
 Jura, 549, 550
 Jurançon, 285, 292
 Jussieu, 391
 st. Just, 19
 Juvisy, 173
 Juzet, 328

K.

Kehl, 576
 Kellerman, 585, 595
 Kerdluel, 134
 Kerhuan, Anse de, 132
 Kermartin, 134
 Kersanton stone, 107; quarries of, 146
 Kilogrammes, xlv
 Kilomètres, xlv
 Kings of France, list of, xxxii
 Kistvaens, 106
 Kleber, Gen., 576

L.

Labedoyère, 532
 Labouhere, 276
 Labourd, Pays de, 280
 Labrit, 276
 Lace, manufacture of, 20, 76, 410, 603
 Lafarge, 247
 Lafayette, 407
 Laffrey, 535
 Lafontaine, 109
 Lagnieux, 553
 Lagny, 565

LAGUOIRE.

Laguiole, 422
 Lailly, 181
 Lalande, 550
 Lalley, 538
 Lamartine, 385
 Lamballe, 125
 Lambesc, 519
 Lamothe, 275
 La Mothe Fénelon, 246
 Lanbader, 127
 Lande de Miré, 193
 Landerneau, 127
 —, river, 132
 Landes, 275
 Landivisiau, 127
 Landrecies, 602
 Langeais, 200
 Langogne, 428, 434
 Langoiron, 262
 Langon, 261
 Langres, 503
 Langton, Stephen, 370
 Languedoc, 229, 333, 424, 441, 464
 Lanleff, 108, 133
 Lanmeur, 134
 Lannemezan, 325
 Lannion, 134
 Lanriouaré, 131
 Lantec, 133
 Lanza, 340
 Laon, 606; cathedral, 606;
 —, citadel, 606; battle of, 607
 Laqueuille, 411
 Laragne, 538
 Lardeyroliès, castle, 427
 Lardy, 174
 Laroche, 367
 Larochevoucauld Castle, 221
 Larochejacquelin, 91, 118, 119,
 202, 208; his death, 211
 Larrey, Baron, 315
 st. Lary, 317
 les Laumes, 371
 Laruns, 294
 Laschamp, 411
 La Tour d'Auvergne, 143
 Laura's tomb, 460
 st. Laurent du Pont, 526
 Lauteret, Col de, 541
 Laval, 118
 Lavedan, Val, 302
 Lavelanet, 341
 Lavoulte, 451; iron-works, 451
 Lavours, 552
 Lecalme, 422
 Lecourbe, 551
 Lectoure, 289
 Ledignan, 436
 Lefèvre, Marshal, 583
 st. Leger, 369
 Légué, 125
 Lehon, 140
 Lemans, 117
 Lempde, 406, 417
 Lentilla, vale, 345
 Leotinières, 605
 Lérins, 500
 Lerouville, 569
 Lers, river, 335

LONS.

Lescar, 285
 Lescur waterfall, 291
 Lescure, 102, 119, 210, 211
 Lescures, 425
 Leadiguières, 533, 534, 536
 Lesneven, 136
 Lesponne, 324
 Lestelle, 301
 st. Leu, 22
 Leucate, 338
 la Levade, 434
 la Levée de la Loire, 186
 Lez, 329
 Lezan, 430
 Lezardrieux, 133
 Lezoux, 416
 Liancourt, 19
 Liane, river, 11
 Libech, 490
 Libourne, 223
 Liffre, 102
 Ligny, 569
 Lille, 7; to Paris, 8
 — to Brussels, 604
 — to Dunkerque, 608
 — to Epemay, 604
 Lillebonne, 59
 la Limagne, 361, 396, 404
 Limandre, 407
 Limetz, 51
 Limoges, 243; cathedral, 243;
 —, remarkable natives, 244;
 —, porcelain manufacture, 244
 — to Bordeaux, 247
 — to Orleans, 241
 — to Montauban, 244
 Limousin, 229
 Limoux, 341
 st. Lissaigne, 242
 Lisleux, 72
 Lison, 80
 Liverdun, 570
 Livrons, 451
 Livia, 346
 st. Lo, 88
 Loches, 195; castle of, 196
 Locmariaker, 150
 Locquffret, 143
 Logis-du-Pin, 539
 Loing, river, 365, 375
 Loir, river, 155, 195
 Loire river, 169, 175, 178, 180, 186, 376, 427
 — A. Gien to Orleans, 180
 — B. Orleans to Tours, 181
 — C. Tours to Angers, 199
 — D. Angers to Nantes, 206
 — below Nantes, 166
 —, source of the, 438
 —, inundations of the, 169
 Loiret, 179, 181, 241
 Longjumeau, 172
 Longpont, 173; abbey, 586
 Longuau, 19, 603
 Longueville, 31, 558
 —, duchesse de, 29, 593
 Longuyon, 593, 596
 Longwy, 593, 596
 — to Luxembourg, 596
 Lons-le-Saulnier, 550

LYONS.

Lorient, 147; dockyard, 147
 Lorient, 451
 Lormont, 271
 Lorraine, 557
 Lot, valley, 246; source of the
 river, 428
 Lothiers, 226
 Loudreville, 317
 Louette, river, 174
 Louis, 93, 584
 st. Louis, 21, 33, 214, 448, 472
 Louis Napoleon, landing at Winiereux, 10; at Ham, 599
 Louis XI., 181, 194, 196, 353,
 603
 Louis XIV., marriage of, 113,
 282
 Louis XVIII., landing of, at
 Calais, 4
 Louis-Philippe, 67, 68, 122, 187, 585
 Louise, Val, 546
 st. Loup de Naud, 558
 Lourdes, 301
 Louron, val de, 317, 324
 Louvie, 293; marble-quarry,
 294
 Louviers, 35
 Louvigne, 102
 Louvres, 20
 Loxeville, 569
 la Lozère, 428, 434
 Luc, 77, 498, 521
 Luchon, 326
 — to Lac d'Oo, 318
 — to Venasque, 330
 Luciennes, 47
 Luçon, 213
 Lucy-le-Bois, 368
 Lumbin, 533
 Lunel, 471
 — Viel, 472
 Lunéville, 571
 Lury, 242
 Lus la Croix Haute, 538
 Lusignan on the Vonne, 226
 Lussac les Châteaux, 226
 Lutterbach, 583
 Lutzelbourg, 572
 Luxembourg, Metz to, 596
 Luynes, 200
 —, duc de, 200
 Luz, 307
 — to Gavarnie, 308
 — to Luchon, 312
 Luzarches, 20
 — to Luze, 154
 Luzerne, 92
 Lyonnais, 349
 Lyons, 386; Fourvières, 387;
 —, cathedral, 388; church of
 Atnay, 388; picture gallery, 390; museums, 390, 391; library, 391; charitable institutions, 391; siege of, 392;
 massacre, 393; inundations,
 394; silk-trade, 395
 Lyons to Avignon and Arles, 444
 — to Geneva, 533
 — to Grenoble, 525

LYONS.

Lyons to Nîmes, Aubenas, St.
Etienne, 425
— to Marseilles, 444
Lys, Val de, 328

M.

st. Macaire, 261
Mâcon, 385
— to Geneva, 550
Magny, 49, 112
Maguelonne, 475
Mailleraye-sur-Seine, 55
Maine, river, 155, 206, 209
Maintenon, 113
—, Mad. de, 112, 113, 226,
314, 323
Malson Carrée, 466
— la Coste Belair, 291
Maisons, 32
st. Maixent, 212, 226
Maladetta, 332
la Maladerie, 78
Malaunay, 31, 61
Malausse, 260
Malestroit, 144
Malijay, 538
Mallavaux, 359
Mallespostes, xx
Malmaison, 47
st. Malo, 96
— to Nantes, 137
st. Mamet, 328
la Manche, 80
st. Mandrier, 497
Mane, 341
Manny, Sir Walter de, 149
Manosque, 537
le Mans, 117
— to Nantes, 154
— to Tours, 100
Mansle, 221
Mantes, 33
Marans, 214
Marbord, 308
Marca, Pierre, 292
Marcadon, Port de, 299
Marcadieu, 290
Marceau, 116
st. Marcellin, 533
la Marche, 242, 376
st. Marcial, 283
Marcillac, 424
Marcorignan, 338
Mareuil, 213
Margaret of Anjou, 187, 204
Margaux, Château, 272
Marguerite, Ile Ste., 500
Marguerite de Navarre, 141,
289, 303, 320
Marguerite de Valois, see Angoulême, Agen, Pau
Margut, 592
Mariages Républicains, 764
st. Marie, 315, 316
st. Marie aux Mines, 582
Marigny, Enguerrand de, 41, 49

MEDOUZE.

Marlborough's betrayal of the expedition to Brest, 131
Marlenheim, 572
Marly, 46
Marman, Puy de, 405
Marmande, 261
Marmont, Marshal, 547
Marmoutiers Abbey, 192, 572
Marne, river, 361, 564, 565
Maroles, 121
Marolles, 174
Maromme, 31
Marot, Clement, 246
Marquise, 10
Marrac, château de, 279
Mars, 377
st. Mars-la-Bruyère, 117
Marsac, 425
MARSEILLE, 485; harbours, 485, 487; plan of, 486;
churches, 488; museum and picture-gallery, 489; plague at, 489; manufactures, climate, baths, environs, 490;
railways, steamers, 491; passage, history, 492; Reign of Terror at, 492; eminent natives, 493
— to Toulon, Hyères, and
Nice, 493
Marseillette, 338
Marsoux, 300
Martigné, 124
st. Martin, 205, 228, 484
Martinvaast, 83
st. Martory, 334, 341
Martres, 334
Marvillols, 428
Mary Queen of Scots, 128, 193
Massat, 343
Massiac, 406, 417, 421
Massillon, 498
Massoubeyran, 430
st. Mathurin, 205
st. Matthew, abbey of, 131
Maubeuge, 602
Maubourguette, 290
Mauléon, 238
st. Maur, 205
ste. Maure, 216
les Maures, 498
st. Maurice, 123
Maura, 419
Mauves, 208
Mauvezin, castle, 324
st. Maximin, 521; stone-quarries of, 19
Mayenne, 124
—, dépt. and river, 118, 124
Mayregne, 328
Mayras, 427
Mazarin, Card., 63
Mazères, 342
Meaulne, 360
Meaux, 565
st. Médard, 248
Médoc and its wines, 269, 271,
273
Médoc, 315
Medouze, river, 290

MONACO.

Mehun, 181
Mehun-sur-Yèvre, 353
Meillant, 360
la Meilleraie, 141
Melun, 361
Ménage de la Vierge, 143
Menars-le-Château, 182
Menat, 361
Mende, 428
le Mendi, 142
ste. Meneshould, 584
Menez Arrés hills, 103, 142
Menhirs, 96, 105, 120, 131, 135,
151, 166, 167, 168
Menil-Broust, 123
Mennais, abbé de la, 97
st. Menoux, 379
Mentone, 516
Mer, 182
Mercy, Gen., 593
ste. Mère l'Eglise, 80
Merens, 344
Méreville, 172
Mesle, 123
Mesnay-Arbois, 549
Meunil-sous-Jumièges, 54
Messac, 141
MÈTRE, the, xli
Mettray, 194
Metz, 594; cathedral, churches,
594; arsenal, 594; fortifications, siege, 595; Roman remains, 595
— to Luxembourg, 596
— to Treves, 595
Meudon, 110
Meulan, 33
Meung, 181
Meurthe, river, 570, 571
Meuse, river, 569, 589, 592
Meyrargues, 537
Meyras, 437
Mexémieux, 553
Mèze, 474
Mezène, Mt., 410
Mezidon, 72
Mézières, 589
— to Thionville, 592
Mialet, 430
Michel, Mont St., 93
st. Michel-sur-Grevé, 134
— sur-Orge, 173
Mihel en Lorraine, 569
Mimente, river, 429
Minsas, 545
Mirabeau, 374, 375, 537, 549
Miramas, 484
Mirambeau, 216
Mirande, 290
Miré, 216
Miremont, 341
Mirville, 62
Mistral, 442
Moirans, 525, 533
Moissac, 259
le Molay, 80
Molière, 185, 243, 475
Molines, 429
Molsheim, 580
Monaco, 515

MONALDESCHI.

Monaldeschi, 363, 365
 Moncada, castle of, 284
 Monclau, 367
 Monestier, 541
 — de Clermont, 538
Money of France, x
 Mongeron, 361
 Monistrol, 427
 Monnay, 195
 Monnerville, 174
 Mona, 604
 Monsemprene-Lebois, 289
 Monta, 545
 Montaigne, Michel de, château of, 249
 — the essayist, 249, 265, 321
 Montalgu, 212
 Montaigut, 361, 415
 Montargis, 375
 Montauban, 258, 327, 328
 — to Bordeaux, 259
 — to Rodez, 335
 — de Bretagne, 154
 Montbard, 371
 Mont Barrey, 549
 Montbazou, 216
 Moutbéliard, 555
 Montbert, 425
 Mont Blanc, 448
 Monbrison, 416
 Monbrun, 422, 435
 Mont du Chat, 552
 Mont Dauphin, 544
 Montdésir, 172
 Mont Dol, 96
 Mont Dore les Bains, 412
 — to Le Puy, 415
 Mont d'Oura, 410
 Montdragon, 454
 Monteburg, 80
 Monte Cristo, 488
 Montélimart, 452
 Montereau, 365
 Montescourt, 605
 Montesquieu's château, 262
 Monteux, 463
 Montferrand, 271, 398
 Montfort castle, 69
 — sur-Meu, 124
 Montfort, Jean de, 136, 148, 208
 —, Simon de, 252, 334, 336, 337, 342
 Montgaillard, 290, 320
 Mont Genèvre, 542
 Montglonne, abbey, 207
 Montgolfer, 433
 Monthivilliers, 67
 Montigny, 375
 Mont Heliu, 150
 Montherme, 591
 Mont Jan, 206
 Montlardon, 116
 Monthéry, 173
 Montlosier, Count, 417
 Mont Louis, 189, 346
 Mont Lözère, 428
 Montluçon, 360
 Montluel, 552
 Montmajour, 479
 Mont de Marsan, 290

MURET.

Montmédy, 592
 Montmelian, 534
 Mont Mezene, 410
 Mont Mirat, 99
 Montmoreau, 223
 Montmorency, 23
 Montmorillon, 225
 Montoir, 166
Montpellier, 472; Jardin des Plantes, 473; School of Medicine, 473; cathedral, museum, library, manufactures, 474
 Montpensier, Butte de, 396
 Mont Perdu, 311
 — Pertuis, 427
 Montpezat, 438
 Mont Pilaas, 447
 — Pipet, 445
 Montpoint, 248
 Montrejeau, 325
 Montrelais, 207
 Montreuil, 111, 212
 — sur-Mer, 15
 Montrichard, 186
 Montricour, 420
 Montrodelix, 411
 Montrognon, 404
 Montrond, 431
 Montrouge, 109
 Monte, 216
 Mont Salomon, 445
 Montsoreau, 199, 203
 Mont St. Michel, 93
 — St. Victoire, 519
 — Valérien, 47
 Montvalent, 245
 Morbihan, 150
 Moreaux, 276
 Moreau, Gen., 127, 266
 Moreilles, 214
 Moret, 365
 Morette, 533
 Morigny, 172
 Morlaas, 289
 Morlaix, 125
 — to Nantes, 142
 Morua, 454
 Mortagne, 123, 274
 — (Vendée), 211
 Mortain, 101
 Mortemer, abbey of, 49
 Mortier, Marshal, 602
 Morvan, 368
 Mosac, or Mosat, 397
 Moselle, 570, 577, 593
 Mosquitoes, 442
 la Motte, 424
 Mouchard, 549, 551, 553
 Moulineaux, 54
 Moulins, 377, 435
 Mouscron, 604
 Moyenvic, 571
 Mulberry introduced, 452
 Mulhouse, 564, 583
 Munster, 583; valley, 579
 Murat, 417
 — la Queire, 411
 la Mure, 535
 Muret, 334

NICE.

Muroi, 413
 Muslins, manufacture of, 379
 Mussidan, 248
 Mussy, 547
 Mutzig, 580
 le Muy, 498

N.

Nages, valley of the, 471
Nancy, 570
 — to Metz and Forbach, 593
 — to Thann, 577
 Nançois-le-Petit, 569
 Nangia, 559
 Nans, 539
 Nanterre, 47
 NANTES, 159; plan of the town, 160; cathedral, 161; castle, 162; museums, library, 163; archives, 163; Quais, 163; Noyades, 164; commerce, 165; environs, 166
 — to Bordeaux, 212
 — to Croisic, 166
 — to St. Nazaire, 166, 167
 — to Tours, 199
 — to Poitiers, 208
 Nanteuil-le-Hardouin, 586
 Nantua, 551
 Napier, Adm. Sir Chas., on the Digue of Cherbourg, 86
 Napoleon Vendée, 213
 Napoléonville, 143
Narbonne, 476; antiquity of, 476; museum, picture gallery, cathedral, 476; honey, 477
 — to Perpignan, 338
 Narciassa, 473
 Naussac, 246
 Navarre, 229
 st. Nazaire, 166
 st. Nectaire, 414
 Nééz, river, 292
 Neff, Felix, 536, 544, 545
 Negrepisse, 420
 Negrier, Gen., statue to, 8
 Negronde, 247
 Nelson, Boulogne bombarded by, 13
 Nemours, 375
 Nérac, 289
 Nérès-les-Bains, 360
 Ners, 440
 Neuchers, 414
 Neuchâtel (Switz.), 549
 Neuchâtel, 27
 Neuilly, 46
 Neuve St. Amand, 195
 Neuvy, 376
 Nevers, 376; cathedral, 377
 — to Paris, 375
 — to Lyons, 377
 — to Chagny, 383
 Nexon, 247
 Nice, 501; inns, 501; boarding-houses, lodgings, 503; restaurants, cafés, confectioners, physicians, apothecaries,

NICE.

bankers, tradespeople, 504;
libraries and reading-rooms, clubs, masters, 505; English church and cemetery, public conveyances, steamers, vettri-rini, 506; hackney coaches, 507; history, divisions, 507;
cathedral, 508; library, museum, college, 508; geology of it, 508; climate, 509; Environs of, 510
Nice to the Italian frontier, 514
st. Nicodème, 144
Nicot, 469
Niort, 212, 226
NISMES, 465; amphitheatre,
465; Maison Carrée, 466;
museums, 467; Fountain of the Nymphs, 467; Tour-magne, 468; cathedral, 468;
manufactures, 469; Cami-sards at, 469; eminent natives, 469; railroads, 469, 471
— to Alais and Aubenas,
434
— to Marseilles, 521
Nissan, 476
Nivelle, river, 282
Niversac, 289
Noailles, 245
Nogent-sur-Marne, 558
— le Rotrou, 116
— sur-Seine, 559
— sur-Vernisson, 375
Noimtot, 62
Noirague, 549
Noiretable, 416
Noirlac, 359
Nolay, 382
Nonancourt, 122
Nord, Départ. du, 8, 597
NORMANDY, 1-3. Routes, 28-
102
Norrey, 78
Nort, 141
Nostradamus, 478, 485
Nouan, 241
la Nouvelle, 338
Nouvion, 592
Nouzou, 591
Novéant, 594
Noves, 518
Noyades of the Loire, 164
Noyelle, 15
Noyen, 154
Noyon, 599
Nuits, 381

O.

Oberlin, 576, 580
Obernay, 581
Occismor, site of, 136
O'Connell, Daniel, at St. Omer, 6
Octeville, 81
Odelle, Mt., 346
Odel river, 147
Odon, river, 72
Oest, river, 144

PALISSY.

Oise, river, 19, 598, 606
Olssel, 53
Oléron, l'la d', 228
Olette, 346
Olivet, 178
Ollouloues, 493
Oloron, 291
st. Omer, 5
Onglous, 475
Onzain, 186
Oo, Lac d', 318; Port d', 319
Orange, 454; triumphal arch,
454; Roman theatre, 455;
character of the people, 455
Orbeval, 584
Orcières, Col d', 536, 545
Orge, river, 173
Orgon, 518
l'Orient, see Lorient
Orival, 53
ORLEANS, 175; cathedral, 175;
museum, 176; environs, 178
—, forest of, 172, 175
—, siege of, 177
—, Mald of, 43, 174, 177, 180,
198, 216, 569, 590, 598
—, railroad to Paris, 172
— to Bourges and Clermont, 353
— to Glen, 180
— to Limoges, 241
— to Tours, 181
— to Vichy, 353
Orléans, Duc d', 46
Orléanois, the, 169
Orly, 172
les Ormes, 217
Ornain, river, 568
Orne, river, 70, 72
Orry la Ville, 20
Orthez, 284; battle of, 284
st. Ospizio, 512
Ossau, Val d', 288, 293
Osse, 291
Ossoué, val, 306
Ossouet, val d', 320
Ossuary, 107
Ottillenberg, 581
Ottmarshelm, 584
Oudon, 208
Ouessant, 10, 132
Oule, 232, 368
Oullins, 426
Oulx, 543
Ourcq, river, 586

P.

la Pacaudière, 379
Pacy-sur-Eure, 70
Pagny, 569
Paillette, 292
Paillole, 316
Paimboeuf, 167
Palmopol, 133
Pal, 438
le Palais, viaduct, 243
Palaiseau, 179
la Palisse, 379
Palissy, Bernard, 215, 260

PERCHE.

Pallarea, 514
le Pallet, 209
Palombière, the, 323
Palons, 545
la Palud, 453
Pamiers, 342
Panticosa, 208
Papin, Denys, 184
Paraclete, church of the, 559
Pardon (festival), 106, 145, 147
st. Pardoux, 361
PARIS, 24
— to Boulogne, 14
— to Brussels, 603
— to Caen and Cherbourg, 70
— to Calais, 3
— to Chartres, 112
— to Clermont and Le Puy, 396
— to Cologne, by Creil, 597
— to Dijon, 361
— to Geneva, 550
— to Lyons, 361, 375
— to Mézières and Givet, by
Reims, 586
— to Mulhouse and Bâle,
558
— to Nancy, 564
— to Nevers, 375
— to Orleans, 172
— to Rennes, 112, 121
— to Rouen (railway), 32
— to Rouen by Magny, 48
— to Soaux (railroad), 179
— to St. Germain, 46
— to Strasburg, 564
— to Versailles (railroad), 109
st. Parres-les-Vaudes, 547
Parthenay, 211
Pas des Lanciers, 485
Passable, 513
Passage, 214
— du Four, 132
Passages, 283
PASSPORTS, xiv
Patay, 174
st. Paterne, 100
st. Patrice, 200
Pau, 285; castle, 286; museum, 289; conveyances, commerce, 288
— to Bagnères de Bigorre, 320
— to Luchon, 324
— to Canfranc in Spain, 291
— to Canterets, 300
— to Eaux-Bonnes and
Eaux-Chaudes, 292
Pauillac, 273
st. Paul de Dax, 277
— Trois Châteaux, 453
la Payre, valley, 434
st. Pé, 301
Péage, 532
le Pecq, 47
Pelouze, Mont, 541, 546
Penmarch, 147
st. Peray, 449
Perche, Col de la, 346

PERCI.

Perci, 90
 st. Père, 369
Perigues, 247
 — to Tarbes, 289
 la Pernelle, 82
 Péronne, 603
 Perouse, iron-mines, 563
Perpignan, 339
 — to Mont Louis and Paycerda, 345
 — to Campredon, 347
 Perrache, 394
 Perrier, 405
 Perte du Rhône, 551
 Perthuis, 341
 Pertuis d'Antioche, 228
 — Breton, 228
 Peter the Hermit, birthplace of, 18
 Petit Rhône, 479
 Petrarch, 458, 460, 462, 463
 Peulvena, 105
 Peyrada, 309
 Peyresourde, 317, 318
 Peyrolles, 537
 la Peyrouse, 425
 Peyruls, 537
 Pezenas, 475
 Pezou, 195
 Phalsbourg, 572
 st. Philin, 571
 Picade, port de, 332
 Picardy, 1
 Pic d'Arbizon, 317
 — de Bergona, 308
 — Génos, 317
 — Gers, 294, 297
 — du Midi de Bigorre, 314
 — du Midi d'Ossau, 296
 — de Monné, 304, 328
 Ploey-Poville, 61
 Pichegru, Gen., 551
 Picquigny, 16; meeting of
 Edward IV. and Louis XI.
 at, 16
 Pierre Buffière, 245
 — Châtel, 552
 — les Calais, 5
 — du Champ Dolent, 96
 — la Cour, 119
 — de Corps, 190
 — sur Dives, 98
 — les Eglises, 72, 73
 — le Moutier, 350, 379
 — Scise, 391
 — de Vauvray, 35
 st. Pierre, Bernardin, his birthplace, 65
 Pierrefitte, 20, 302
 —, Port de, 317
 Pierrefonds, 599
 Pierrelatte, 453
 Pierrepont, 593, 596
 Pignans, 498
 les Piliers, 90
 Pique, valley of the, 326
 Pithiviers, 174
 Plague at Marseilles, 489
 Plan de Phazy, 544
 Plantagenet, 103, 118

LE PONTET.

Pleadiben, 138
 Plénée Jugon, 125
 Plessis les Tours, 193
 Pleyben, 146
 Ploërmel, 124
 Plomb de Cantal, 418
 Plombières, 578
 Plouarzel, 131
 Plouer, 138
 Plouescat, 136
 Plougasson, 135
 Plougastel, 132
 Plouha, 133
 Plouharnel, 150
 Pluche, Abbé, 589
 Podensac, 262
 Poey le Houn, 300
 la Pointe, 206
 Pointe-Sainte-Sulpice, 425
 Poissy, 398; conference of, 33
Poitiers, 217; churches, 217;
 cathedral, 218; amphitheatre, 219; battle, 220
 — to Châteauroux, 225
 — to Rochefort, by Niort, 226
 Poitou, 169
 Poix, 27
 st. Pol, 9
 st. Pol de Léon, 135
 Polignac, 407
 Poligny, 551
 Polminhac, 419
 Pomard, 382
 Pompadour, 245
 Pompidou, 430
 Pondres, 471
 Pons, 215
 Ponsas, 447
 Pont d'Ain, 551
 — de l'Arc, 438
 — de l'Arche, 35
 — Audemer, 69
 — de la Baume, 428
 — du Casse, 289
 — Château, 154
 — du Château, 416
 — d'Espagne, 305
 — St. Esprit, 453
 — l'Evêque, 69
 — Flavien, 485
 — DU GARD, 469
 — d'Hery, 549
 — St. Maxence, 598
 — de Montvert, 429
 — à-Mousson, 593
 — Orson, 93
 — sans Pareil, 5
 — de Piles, 216
 — Rémy, 16
 — Royal, 518
 — Scoria, 148
 — du Val, 109
 — de Veyle, 550
 — sur-Yonne, 366
 Pontarlier, 549
 Pontaven, 147
 Pontcharra, 534
 Pontchartrain, 121
 le Pontet, 436

PUY.

Pontgibaud, 404
 Ponthou, 125
 Pontigny, 370
 Pontivy, 143
 Pontoise, 21
 Pontrieux, 134
 Ponts de Cé, 205
Popes at Avignon, 457
 Porcelain manufacture at Sèvres, 110; at Limoges, 244
 Porchaire, 214
 Port d'Atelier, 563
 — Boulet, 201
 — St. Hubert, 138
 — Launay, 145
 — Navalo, 153
 — de Penne, 289
 — au-Puer, 552
 — Royal des Champs, 112
 — sur-Saône, 563
 — Vendres, 340
 — S. Simon, 334, 341
 Portet, 333
 Portets, 262
 Portillon, port de, 329
 Ports, 231
Posting in France, xix
 Pouges, 376
 Pouilly, 376
 Poulahouan, lead-mines, 143
 st. Pourgain, 357, 396
 Poussin, 451
 Poussin, Nicolas, 52
 Pouy, 276
 Pouzac, 321
 Pradelles, 427
 Prades, 345, 437
 Pratz de Mollo, 347
 Preignac, 262
Pretender (the), 135, 163, 569
 Prex en Pall, 124
 st. Priest, 525
Privas, 434
 Privat d'Allier, 410
 PROVENCE, 441; features of the country, 441; the people and climate, 442; mistral, mosquitoes, 442; scorpions, 443;
 * fertility and productions,
 443; garden of, 443; Roman antiquities, 444; Christian architecture, 444; the Rhône,
 444; books on, 444
 Provinces of France, xxvii
 Provins, 558
 le Puget, 498
 Puget the sculptor, 489, 493
 Puis Justaret, 341
 Puteaux, 111
le Puy, 408
 — to Alais and Nismes, 434
 Puy du Chopin, 404
 — de Cliersou, 403
 — Come, 404
 — de Dôme, 361, 397, 402
 — Girou, 404
 — du Grand Sarcouy, 404
 — Gravenoire, 403
 — Griou, 418
 — Jussat, 405

PUY.

Puy Louchadière, 404
 — Marman, 405
 — Pariou, 403
 — la Poix, 416
 — de la Rodde, 412
 — de Tartaret, 414
 Puyocda, 345
 Puymaurins, 344
 Puyoo, 284
 PYRENEES, 230: directions for travellers in, 230; scenery, compared with the Alps, 231;
 rivers and lakes, 231; passes, valleys, 231; cirques, 232;
 a dash into Spain, 232; inhabitants, 232; Cagots, 233;
 sporting, 233; history and antiquities, 234; Bastides, 234; the English in, 234, 235;
 watering-places, 235; books on, 237; skeleton tours, 237;
 passports, conveyances, inns,
 239; horses, guides, 240;
 chaises - à - porteur, 241.
 Routes, 80, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86,
 87, 91, 94, 97, 98

Q.

Quatre Roules, 245
 Quêlern, 151, 146
 st. Quentin, 601
 — in Dauphiné, 525
 Quereilh, 412
 Quereville, 88
 la Queue, 121
 Quevilly, 54
 Queyras, Val, 544
 Quiberon, 153
 Quillebœuf, 55
 Quimper, 146
 Quimperlé, 147
 Quineville, 80
 Quiniply, Venus of, 149
 st. Quiriace, 558

R.

Rabelais, 110, 199, 473
 Rabastens, 290
 Racine, 112, 440, 586
 Radegonde, 189
 RAILROADS, xvii
 st. Rambert, 447
 — de Joux, 551
 Rambervillars, 581
 Rambouillet, 113
 la Rance, river, 137
 la Rance, abbé, 123
 Rancié, mines de, 343
 Rancogne, Grottes de, 221
 Randan, château, 359
 Randanne, 411
 st. Raphael, 499
 Raphèle, 483
 Rapp, Gen., 583
 Ravel, castle, 416
 Raymond VI. of Toulouse, 253
 Raz, Pointe du, 147
 Ré, Ile de, 228

ROCHE.

Réaumur, 228
 Rébénac, 292
 Redon, 144
 Reims, 588; cathedral, 588;
 palace, St. Remi, 589;
 streets, 589; eminent natives,
 589; coronation, Sainte Am-
 poule, 590; Joan of Arc,
 590; wines, 590
 Reliquaires, 107
 Remiremont, 577
 — to Thann, 579
 st. Remy, 478
 st. Renan, 131
 René d'Anjou, 156, 478, 519
 Rennes, 120
 — to Paris, 112, 121
 — to Brest, 124
 la Réole, 261
 la République, 432
 Rethel, 591
 de Reiz, Card., 162, 569
 —, Gilles, 207
 Reugny, 360
 Reuse, 549
 Reynac, 247
 RHÔNE, river, Rtes. 125, 127
 — the Haut, Aix to Lyons, 552
 —, Perte du, 551
 —, Sault du, 553
 —, inundations of, 394
 Rhuyz, 151
 Ribaute, 430
 le Ribay, 124
 Ribbon manufacture, 432
 Ribemont, 601
 Ribeaupierre castle, 582
 Ribeauville, 582
 Richard Cœur-de-Lion, 38, 41,
 51, 55, 143, 204, 247
 Richard II., 268
 la Riche, 193
 Richebourg, 381
 Richelieu, 47, 213
 Rochemaure, 451
 Richemont, 595
 Rlenzi, 458
 Riom, 397
 st. Riquier, 15
 Risle, river, 69
 Ristolas, 545
 Rive de Gier, 426
 Rives, 525
 Rivesaltes, 339
 Rixheim, 584
 Roanne, 379
 — to St. Etienne (Railway) and Valence, 431
 Robert the Devil, 54
 —, châteaux de, 46
 Robespierre, birthplace of, 9
 Rocamadour, 245
 la Roche, 545, 555
 — Bernard, 154
 — Guyon, 50
 — Jagu, castle, 134
 — Maurice, 127, 167
 — sur-Yonne, 213, 367
 Roche Corbon, 180

RUZAC.

Roche Cotte, 200
 — Courbe, 451
 — Taillée, 386, 447
 Rochefort, 228, 411, 552
 la Rochefoucauld, 221
 la Rochelle, 226
 Rochemaure, 451
 Rochers, château des, 120
 Rocking-stone, 143
 Rocroy, 592
 Rodez, 423
 Rognac, 485
 Rohan, 144, 430
 Roland, Camisard chief, 351,
 429, 440
 — the Girondist, 49
 — the Paladin, 272, 308
 Rolleboise, 34
 Rollo the pirate, 49
 st. Romain, 56, 60, 426
 Romanche, river, 530, 534, 540,
 541
 Romanèche, 385
 Romanée, 381
 Romans, 532
 Romilly copper-works, 53
 — Stat., 71
 — (Seine), 559
 Roncesvaux, 234
 Roquebrune, 498
 Roquefavour, aqueduct of, 518
 Roquefort, 423
 Rochemaure, 456
 Roscoff, 135
 la Rose, 273
 les Rosiers, 205
 Rosny, château, 34
 Rosporden, 147
 Rothau, 580
 Rostrénen, 143
 Roubais, 604
 ROURN, 36; cathedral, 37; St.
 Ouen, 39; public garden, 40;
 public library, 40; museums,
 40, 41; churches, 41; Palais de Justice, 42; Place de la Pucelle, 43; public buildings, bridges, manufactures, 44;
 environs, 45
 Rouen to Havre, 54, 57, 61
 — to Paris (railroad), 32
 Rouffach, 583
 Roule, le, tunnel of, 35
 Rourebeau, 537
 Rousseau, 22, 189, 586
 Roussillon, 220
 Rouvray, St. Etienne de, 53
 Royan, 214, 274
 Royat, 401
 Royaumont, abbey, ruins of, 20
 Rozay, 145
 Rue, 15
 Ruell, 47
 Ruelle, 221
 Ruffec, 221
 Rumengol, 145
 Ruoms, 438
 Ruzac, 248

SAALES.

S.

Saales, 581
 Sablé, 154
 les Sables, 213
 Sablonville, 46
 Sabres, 276
 Sacqueville en Bessin, 78
 le Sage, birthplace of, 151; his death, 12
 Saillagouse, 346
 Saincaise, 377
 Saintes, 214
 Saintonge, 169
 Salabertrand, 543
 Salbris, 241
 Salces, 338
 Salette, N. D. de, 536
 Sallent, 298
 Salins, 549
 Salles, 276
 Salon, 484
 Salt-works, 168
 Samarobriga, anc., 18
 Sambre, river, 602
 Sanadoire, 414
 Sancerre, 376
 Sancy, Pic de, 413
 Sandstone-quarries, 364
 Sanqueville, 31
 Santron, 154
 Sadoire, river, 563; Châlons to Lyons, 384
 Sapey, 529
 Sarrance, 291
 Sarre, valley, 572
 Sarrebourg, 572
 Sarrincolin, 317
 Sarthe, river, 123
 Sartilly, 92
 Sarzeau, 151, 153
 Sassenage, 531
 Saucède, Col de, 299
 la Saulce, 537
 Saudre, river, 241
 Sault de Navailles, 284
 — du Rhone, 553
 Saulx, vale of the, 568
 Saumur, 201; museum, 201; churches, 201; castle, 202; environs, 203
 — to Niort, 212
 Saut de Sabot, 425
 Sauterne, 262
 Sauveterre, 428
 st. Sauveur les Bains, 307
 — le Vicomte, 81
 Savenay, 154, 166
 Savenières, 206
 Saverdun, 343
 Saverne, 572
 Savigny, abbey, 102
 —, village, 173
 st. Savin, 225, 302
 Savines, 543
 Savonnières, 200
 Saxe, Marshal, 185, 574
 Scalliers, 260

SODE.

Sceaux, 179
 Scheldt, river, 605
 Schillères, 559
 Schirmeck, 580
 Schlestadt, 582
 Schluck, 579
 Schöffler, Peter, 575
 Schön, Martin, 582
 Scorff, 148
 Scoury, 226
 Schwartzberg, 561
 Scie, valley, 31; river, 31
 Scorpions, 443
 Scuderie, Mlle., birthplace of, 65
 st. Sebastian, 283
 Seculêjo, lac de, 318
 Séclin, 8
 Sédan, 592
 Sééz, 100
 Segonnaux, 479
 Seguler, death of, 429
 la Seigne, 493
 la Seillerale, 208
 SEINE RIVER, 32, 46, 50, 54, 109, 112, 172, 361, 547 — st. Germain to Rouen, 50
 — Rouen to Havre, 54
 Selles-sur-Cher, 185
 Sem, 343
 Senlis, 597
 Sens, 366
 Sept Laux, 534, 540
 Serraine, river, 553
 Serquigny, 71
 Serrant, château de, 206
 Serres, 538
 Sert, 538
 st. Servan, 98
 Servières, lake, 414
 Seugne, river, 215
 Seully, 199
 st. Sever, 37, 41
 Sévérac, 154
 Sévignac, 202
 Sévigné, Mad. de, 119, 120, 154, 162, 208, 442, 452
 Sevre Nantaise, 159, 209
 — Niortaise, 214
 Sevrès, 110
 st. Seyne, 548
 Seyssel, 551
 Sibourra, 282
 Sichen, river, 359
 Sierck, 596
 Sîlves, 499
 Sigeau, 338
 Silkworm, 452
 Silk manufacture, 395, 413, 435, 452
 Siorac, 289
 Sioule, river, 361, 396, 411, 414
 Sisteron, 537
 Skeleton Tour of France, xxxi
 — through Normandy, 3
 — through Brittany, 108
 — through Auvergne, 353
 — of the Pyrenees, 237
 Slate-quarries, 159
 Soch, 147

TALLEYRAND.

Soissons, 586; history, 586; cathedral, abbey of St. Jean, museum, abbey of St. Médard, 587; remarkable natives, 587; conveyances, 587
 Solesmes, 155
 Solles-Pont, 498
 Soligny, 123
 la Sologne, 241
 Somain, 602, 605
 Somme, river, 6, 15, 599, 603
 — Vesle, 584
 la Sône, 532
 Sorel, Agnes, 54, 58, 196, 216
 Sorgues, 456, 462
 st. Sorlin, 553
 Sottevast, 83
 Sotteville, 35
 Souchons, 535
 Soullols, 428
 Soulom, 302
 Soult, Marshal, 257
 Souppes, 375
 la Source du Loiret, 179
 Source, Château, 178
 Sourdeval, 101
 la Souterraine, 242
 Souvigny, 378
 Souzê, 204
 Soyons, 450
 Sporting in the Pyrenees, 233
 Stanislas of Poland, 570, 571
 Steamboats, xvi
 Stenay, 593
 STRASBURG, 572; cathedral, 573; museum and library, 575; arsenal, 575; Jews, 576; pâtés, 576; railways, 576
 — to Bâle (railroad), 581
 — to Epinal, 580
 Strazeele, 7
 Succinio, 151
 Suchet, Marshal, 391, 464
 Suetie, 155
 st. Suliac, 138
 Sully, 117, 180, 360; his castle and birthplace, 34; his grave, 117
 —, town and castle, 180
 St. Sulpice, 224
 Sulz les Bains, 580
 Sulzbad, 583
 Suresnes, 111
 Surville, 365
 Survilliers, 20
 Susa, 543
 Suzon, Val de, 548
 st. Symphorien, 195

T.

Tables-d'hôte, xxii
 Tadens, 138
 Taillebourg, 214
 Tain, 448
 Talbot's death, 248, 268
 Talleyrand's residence at Valencay, 185; his tomb, 185;

TALMONT.

Talmon, castle, 213
 Talmoutiers, 27
 Tamarville, 81
 Tancarville, 56
 Tanlay, 370
 Tarare, 379
 Tarascon, 477
 — (Ariège), 342
 Turbes, 290, 320
 Tardonère, river, 221
 Tareau, 536
 Tarn, river, 259, 424, 425, 428
 Tech, river, 340; valley of the, 347
 Tenay, 551
 Tencin, 533
 Tentenera pass, 208
 Tergnier, 600, 606
 — to Reims, 606
 Terre Notre, 426
 la Teste, 275
 Tet, river, 339; valley, 345
 Thadde, 411
 Thann (Alsace), 583
 — near Caen, 76
 Thau, Etang de, 335, 474
 Theatres, Roman, see Lillebonne, Arles, Orange, Vienne, Vaison
 Theilay, 241
 Théogonec, 127
 Thiers, 416
 —, M., 493
 Thiezac, 418
 Thilliers, 49
 Thionville, 595
 Thiviers, 247
 le Thor, 462
 Thouars, 212
 Thoue, river, 203, 212
 Thourie, 141
 Through Routes, xvi
 Thuerys, 427, 438
 Thuillière, 414
 Thuin, 602
 st. Thurin, 416
 Thury, birthplace of, 19
 Tiffauges, 210
 Tillières, 123
 Tinchebray, 101
 Tocqueville, 83
 Tombeleine, 92, 95
 Tombs, royal, at St. Denis, 23
 Tonnav Charente, 214
 Tonnelins, 261
 Tonnerre, 370
 Tonquedec, 134
 Torfou, 210
 Torte, Col de, 299
 Tortoir, 607
 Tôtes, 31
 Toul, 569
 Toulon, 493; port, 494; dock-yard, 494; siege, 495, 496; massacres, 495; roadstead and harbour, 496; Buonaparte at, 496; conveyances, 497
 — to Nice, 497
 Toulouse, 249; Capitole, 249;

TROUMOUSE.

plan of the town, 250;
 Jeux Floraux, 251; churches, 252; cathedral, 253; museum, 253; Inquisition, 255;
 Jean Calas, 255; canals, 256;
 battle of, 257; diligences and railways, 258
 Toulouse to Bagneres, 333
 — to Montauban, 249
 — to Narbonne, 335
 — to Puycauda, 341
 Touques, river, 69
 Touraine, 169, 186
 Tour du Carol, 345
 — de Constance, 472
 — de Cordouan, 274
 — de Meilleraie, 426
 — du Pin, 525
 Tourcoing, 604
 Tourlaville castle, 83
 la Tourmagne, 468
 Tourmalet, 314
 Tourmente, 245
 Journal, 604
 Tournebride, 209
 Tournelle, 398
 Tournon, 448
 Tournus, 384
 Tours, 190; cathedral, 190;
 museum, 191; ruins of old cathedral, 199; manufactures, 193; library, 193;
 Pleissis, 193
 — to Chartres, 195
 — to Chinon and Saumur, 197
 — to Loches, 195
 — to Angers, 199
 — to Poitiers and Bordeaux, 216
 Tourves, 521
 Tourville, 35
 Toury, 172, 174
 Toussaint l'Ouverture, 374, 549
 le Touvet, 533
 Tramesaigues, 315, 317
 la Trappe près Soligny, 123
 Trappist convents, 81, 123, 141
 Travers, 549
 Trebons, 320
 Tréguler, 134
 Trentats Ladignac, 289
 Trépassés, Bale des, 147
 Treport, 68
 Trescon, 259
 Tresnoyle, 605
 Trèves, 205, 596
 Trévoux, 386
 Triel, 33
 Trieux, vale, 125, 13
 Triguères, 375
 Trilport, 565
 la Trinité, 514
 Trinquetalle, 479
 les Trois Evêches, 585
 Trompe-Loup, 274
 st. Tropez, 498
 Trou d'Enfer, 329
 — du Toro, 329, 331
 Troubadours, 251
 Troumouze, 309

VARENNES.

Trouville, 69
 Troyes, 559; cathedral, 559;
 treaty of, 560; churches, 560;
 library and museum, 560
 — to Dijon, by Châtillon, 547
 — to Millhouse, 561
 Trunk hose, 145
 Truyère, river, 422
 Tuffeau, 204
 Tulle, 245
 Tullins, 533
 Tumiac, Butte de, 151
 Turbia, 515
 Turockheim, 583
 Turrene, 245
 —, Marshal, 592, 593, 609
 U.
 Urdos, 292
 Ure, source of, 440
 Uriage, 531
 Urugne, 282
 Ushant, battle of, 132
 Ussat, 343
 Ussé, 200
 Utrecht, Treaty of, 609
 Uzerche, 245
 Uzès, 440
 V.
 st. Vaast la Hongue, 81
 Vaise, 386, 391
 Vaison, 455
 Val d'Ante, 99
 — d'Aspe, 291
 — Denacre, 14
 — d'Enfer, 413
 — Fleury, 109
 — de Jarret, 299, 305
 — d'Ossau, 288, 293
 — Louise, 546
 Valengay, 185
 Valence, 448
 — to Aubenas, Privas, and Nîmes, 434
 — to Grenoble, 532
 Valence d'Agén, 260
 Valenciennes, 603
 Valentin, river, 296
 Valérien, Mt., 47
 st. Valéry-sur-Somme, 15
 Valines, 68
 Vallée Obscure, 511
 Vallery, 366
 st. Vallery en Caux, 67
 st. Vallier, 447
 Vallière, Mad. de la, 48
 Vallons, 438
 Valmy, 585
 Valognes, 80
 Vals, 436
 Valserinne, river, 551
 Vandamme, General, 608
 Vannes, 153
 Vanvres, 109
 Var, river, 501
 Varangeville, 30, 571
 Varennes, 357, 379, 585

VARILHES.

Varilhès, 342
 Vatteville la Rue, 55
 Vauban, Marshal, 7, 84, 128, 369, 450, 572, 575
 Vaucanson, 532
 Vaucelles, 74
 Vaucclair, 607
 Vaucluse, 462
 Vaudémont, 570
 Vaugirard, 109
 le Vauinage, 471
 Vaux de Vire, 100
 — sous Laon, 607
 Vayre, 405
 Veauce, castle of, 396
 le Velay, 410, 427
 Venables, tunnel of, 35
 Venasque, 331; port de, 331, 332
 — to Luchon, 332
 Vence, 501
 Vendéans, see Chollet, Dol, Granville, Laval, le Mans, Nantes, Saumur, Savenay, St. Florent, Torfou
la Vendée, 170, 212
 Vendôme, 195
 Vénérand, 119
 Venin, la Tour st., 531
 Venos, 540
 Ventoux, Mont, 453, 464
 st. Veran, 544
 Verberie, 593
 Vercingetorix, 371, 405
 Verdun, 585
 Vergniaud, 244
 Vermanton, 368
 Vernaizon, 426
 Vernet, 345
 — d'Arriège, 342
 —, Horace, 460
 Verneuil, 123
 Vernines, 414
 Vernon, 34
 la Verpillière, 525
 Verrières, 549
 Versailles, 111
 Versannes, 289
 Vert, lac, 324
 Vertrieux, 553
 Vesle, river, 588
 Vesoul, 563
 Veuves, 186
 Vexin, 49
 Vézelay, 368
 Vezénobre, 439
 Vézère, river, 245
 Vic de Bigorre, 290
 Videssoas, 343; valley, 343
 Vichy Baths, 357
 Vic-sur-Cère, 419
 st. Victor, 31
 Vidauban, 498

VOIRONS.

Vieille-Brioude, 407
 Viel Pont-en-Auge, 98
 Viella, 330
 Vielle, 317
 Vienne, 445; its great antiquity, 445; Roman remains, 445; museum, 445; cathedral, 446; council of, 446
 —, river, 201, 216
 Vierzon, 242, 353
 Vif, 538
 Vignemale, 305
 Vigny, 48
 Vilaine, river, 120, 144, 154
 Villandraut, 262
 Villars, marshal, 353, 378, 469, 605
 — d'Arène, 541
 — Bocage, 100
 Ville de Val Louise, 546
 Villebandon, 89
 Villebon, 116
 Villefort, 434
 Villefranche-sur-Saône, 385
 — (Aveyron), 420
 — (Tet), 345
 — (Nice), 512
 Villeneuve les Avignon, 461
 — sur-Allier, 377
 — de Berg, 453
 — le Roi, 173, 366
 Villers, 52
 Villers-Cotterets, 586
 Villiers, 173
 — le Bel, 20
 Villequier, 55
 la Villette, 586
 Vinça, 345
 Vincelles, 368
 st. Vincent de Paul, 276
 Vincî, L. de, 188
 Vine, cultivation of the, 269
 Vionne, river, 21
 Violins, 545
 Vire, 100
 —, river, 80
 — to Rannes, 100
 Vireux, 592
 Virieu, 525
 Viroflay, 111
 Viry, 173
 Viso, Monta, 544
 la Vitarelle, 428
 Vitré, 119
 Vitrolles, 485
 Vitry, 172
 — le Français, 568
 Vivarais, 349, 436
 Viviers, 453
 Vivonne, 221
 Vizille, 534
 Vocance, Val de, 433
 Voirons, 525

ZORN.

Voivres, 154
 Volane, 436
 Volcanoes, extinct, of Auvergne, 349
 Volnay, 382
Voltaire, 32, 172, 180, 188, 256, 559, 562
 Volvic, 398
 Voreppe, 525, 533
Vosges mountains, Routes 167, 168
 Vosne, 381
 Vougeot, Clos de, 380
 Vouillé, 249
 la Voulte, 451
 Vouvray, 189
 W.
 Wace, 79
 Waldbach, 580
 Waldersbach, 580
 st. Wandrille, 58
 Wasselonne, 572
 Wassenburg, 579
 Wassen-places in the Pyrenees, 235
 Watter, 5
 Weights and measures, xii-xiv
 Wellington, Duke of, 156; in the Pyrenees, 235, 257, 278, 282, 333; at Bayonne, 278; at Cateau Cambresis, 602; at Péronne, 603
 William the Conqueror: see Conqueror.
 Wimille, 10
 Wines of Bordeaux, 269; Burgundy, 380; Champagne, 566, 590
 Witsand, 10
 X.
 Xertigny, 578
 Y.
 Yères, river, 361
 Yèvre, river, 353
 Yffiniac, 125
 Yolet, 419
 Yonne, river, 365
 st. Yrieix, 244
 Yssingeaux, 427
 st. Yves, 134
 Yvetot, 61
 Yvette, river, 172, 173
 Z.
 Zabern, 572
 Zorn, valley, 572

St. Vici
Vidaub

MURRAY'S HANDBOOK ADVERTISER.

1864.

THE great advantage of this medium of Advertising for those who are desirous of communicating information to Travellers can scarcely be questioned, as it enables Steam, Railway, and other Public Companies, Landlords of Inns, Tradesmen, and others, to bring under the immediate notice of the great mass of English and American Tourists who resort to France, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Spain and Portugal, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Russia, the East, and other parts of the world every Season, in the most direct way, the various merits of their Railways, Steamers, Hotels, Taverns, Articles of Merchandise, Works of Art, and such other information as they may desire to make known.

Annual Circulation, 15,000.

Advertisements must be paid in advance and sent to the Publisher's before May.
The Charges are—A Page, 4*l*. Half-page, 2*l*. 2*s*. A Column, 2*l*. 2*s*. Half a Column, 1*l*. 2*s*.

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS.

Page	Page	Page
BADEN-BADEN. —	MARSEILLES. —Grand Hôtel	ENGLAND.
Hôtel de Russie. . . . . 40	du Louvre . . . . . 11	Agents—McCracken . . . . . 2-5
Hôtel de Hollande . . . . . 48	METZ.—Hôtel de l'Europe . . . . . 45	— Olivier and Carr. . . . . 16, 17
Hôtel de la Ville de Bade . . . . . 54	MONT CENIS.—Borgo's Car-	Allingham's Modern Poem . . . . . 28
BARCELONA.—Grand Hôtel	riages . . . . . 43	Art Student in Munich . . . . . 28
and Café d'Orient . . . . . 45	MUNICH.—Wimmer's Maga-	Athenæum . . . . . 51
BELLAGIO.—Hôtel Grand Bre-	zine . . . . . 7	Benham's Ironmongery . . . . . 52
tagne . . . . . 53	Englischer Hof Hotel . . . . . 42	Bennett's Gift Books . . . . . 34
BIARRITZ.—Hôtel de France . . . . . 48	NEUCHÂTEL.—Hôtel de Belle	Books—Foreign . . . . . 33
BONN.—Golden Star Hotel . . . . . 31	Ville . . . . . 45	— On Science . . . . . 54
Grand Hôtel de Belle Vue . . . . . 48	NICE.—The Shortest Road to	— For Travellers . . . . . 55, 63
BRIENZ.—Grossmann's Wood	Italy . . . . . 56	Brown and Polson's Patent
Sculpture . . . . . 6	How's Hôtel de l'Univers . . . . . 7	Flour . . . . . 23
BRUSSELS.—Carter's Hotel . . . . . 40	Pensions Anglaises . . . . . 33	Burrow's Malvern Glasses . . . . . 26
CANNES.—Hôtel des Princes . . . . . 27	Hôtel des Anglais . . . . . 36	Carter's Knapsack . . . . . 27
CHAMBERS.—Hôtel de France 53	Union Syndicale . . . . . 57	Cary's Telescope . . . . . 10
COLOGNE.—Farina's Eau de	Law and Estate Agency . . . . . 58	Chubb's Locks and Safes . . . . . 18
Cologne . . . . . 9	Hôtel Victoria . . . . . 58	Continental Express Agency . . . . . 21
COPENHAGEN.—Hôtel Phoenix 53	Hôtel de la Grande Bre-	Cooke's Journey due East . . . . . 28
DIEPPE.—Grand Hôtel Im-	tagne . . . . . 59	Couriers and Servants . . . . . 35
périal . . . . . 41	Grand Hôtel Chauvain . . . . . 60	Fauntleroy's Foreign Woods . . . . . 28
Hôtel Royal . . . . . 44	PARIS.—Hôtel St. Marie . . . . . 44	Galignani's Paris Guide . . . . . 26
DJON.—Hôtel du Parc . . . . . 46	Kirkland and Co., Agents . . . . . 44	Handbook for London . . . . . 50
FLORENCE.—Bianchini's Mo-	PRAGUE.—Hofmann's Glass	Havet's French Studies . . . . . 61
saic . . . . . 6	Manufactory . . . . . 10	Heal's Bedsteads . . . . . 29
Baccolotti's Picture-rooms . . . . . 6	ROME.—Shea, House Agent . . . . . 13	IRELAND.—Lakes of Killarney 30
Betti's Mosaic . . . . . 12	ROTTERDAM.—Kramers, Book-	Kimpton's Shipping Agency . . . . . 22
Grossi, Furrier . . . . . 12	seller . . . . . 26	Lee and Carter's Guide De-
Roberts, Perfumer . . . . . 61	SPA.—Hôtel de Flandre . . . . . 47	pôt. . . . . 64
FRANKFORT.—Tacchi's Glass	THUN.—Hôtel de Bellevue . . . . . 62	Letts' Maps for Tourists . . . . . 26
Warehouse . . . . . 8	TOULON.—Hôtel de la Croix	Locock's Pulmonic Wafers . . . . . 19
Roman Emperor Hotel . . . . . 12	de Malte . . . . . 44	London & Westminster Bank . . . . . 22
Bühler's Manufactory of	TOURS.—Grand Hôtel de Bor-	Measom's Guide-Books . . . . . 38, 39
Staghorn . . . . . 14, 15	deaux . . . . . 45	Mudie's Library . . . . . 25
GENEVA.—Baker, Chemist . . . . . 24	TREVES.—Hôtel de la Maison	North British Insurance . . . . . 20
Hôtel de la Métropole . . . . . 24	Rouge . . . . . 47	Passport Agency—Adam's . . . . . 21
Hôtel de la Couronne . . . . . 53	TURN.—Hôtel Feder . . . . . 43	Passport Agency—Dorrell . . . . . 51
Hôtel des Bergues . . . . . 62	Grand Hôtel de l'Europe . . . . . 49	Passport Agency—Letts' . . . . . 28
Pension Anglaise . . . . . 33	VICHY.—Hôtel Burnol . . . . . 27	Passport Agency—Stanford . . . . . 22
GHEENT.—Grand Hôtel de la	Grand Hôtel du Parc . . . . . 27, 42	Portmanteaus—Southgate's . . . . . 37
Poste . . . . . 44	Hôtel de l'Univers . . . . . 42	Rowland's Perfumery . . . . . 27
HEIDELBERG.—Hôtel de	Hôtel Victoria . . . . . 27	South-Eastern Railway . . . . . 32
l'Europe . . . . . 19	VIENNA.—Lobmeyr's Glass	South-Western Railway . . . . . 50
LAUSANNE.—Hôtel Gibbon . . . . . 40	Manufactory . . . . . 10	Spies' Ornamental Manufac-
LEGHORN.—Micall's Marble	Neuhoefer, Optician . . . . . 19	tures, Oxford . . . . . 26
Works . . . . . 7	Roman Emperor Hotel . . . . . 36	Swiss Couriers' Society . . . . . 50
LUXEMBOURG.—Hôtel de Co-	Ulrich's Glass Warehouse . . . . . 11	The Prince Consort . . . . . 61
logne . . . . . 62	WIESBADEN.—Hôtel d'Angle-	Thresher's Essentials for Tra-
LYONS.—Grand Hôtel de Lyon 46	terre . . . . . 40	velling . . . . . 22
MARIENBERG.—Hydropathic	WILDRAD.—Hôtel Klumpp . . . . . 47
Establishment . . . . . 40	ZURICH.—Kerez, Chemist . . . . . 10

NEW BRITISH TARIFF, 1864.

LONDON, May 1, 1864.

MESSRS. J. & R. M<sup>c</sup>CRACKEN,

LATE OF 7, OLD JEWRY, LONDON,

AGENTS, BY APPOINTMENT, TO THE ROYAL ACADEMY, NATIONAL GALLERY, AND GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE AND ART,

GENERAL AND FOREIGN AGENTS AND WINE MERCHANTS,

AND

AGENTS GENERALLY FOR THE RECEPTION AND SHIPMENT OF WORKS OF ART, BAGGAGE, &C.,

FROM AND TO ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD,!

Avail themselves of this opportunity to return their sincere thanks to the Nobility and Gentry for the patronage hitherto conferred on them, and to inform them that in consequence of the demolition of the above premises, which they have occupied for more than thirty years, they have REMOVED to larger and more commodious premises, at

38, QUEEN STREET, CANNON STREET WEST, E.C.,

Where they hope to be honoured with a continuance of the favour which has been hitherto accorded to them. Their charges are framed with a due regard to economy, and the same care and attention will be bestowed as heretofore upon all packages passing through their hands.

J. and R. McC. have the advantage of

DRY AND SPACIOUS WAREHOUSES,

Where Works of Art and all descriptions of Property can be kept during the Owners' absence, at most moderate rates of rent.

Parties favouring J. and R. McC. with their Consignments are requested to be particular in having the Bills of Lading sent to them DIRECT by Post, and also to forward their Keys with the Packages, as, although the contents may be free of Duty, all Packages are still EXAMINED by the Customs immediately on arrival. Packages sent by Steamers or otherwise to Southampton and Liverpool also attended to; but all Letters of Advice and Bills of Lading to be addressed to 38, QUEEN STREET.

MESSRS. J. AND R. McCracken

ARE THE APPOINTED AGENTS IN ENGLAND OF MR. J. M. FARINA, GEGENÜBER DEM JULIUS PLATZ, COLOGNE,

FOR HIS

CELEBRATED EAU DE COLOGNE;

ALSO TO

MESSRS. BOUVIER FRERES, OF NEUCHATEL, FOR THEIR

SWISS CHAMPAGNE,

Which obtained a Prize Medal at the Exhibition of 1862; and to
THE BARON RICASOLI, for his

BROLIO WINE.

This fine Wine (much resembling Claret, but of fuller body) also obtained a Prize Medal at the Exhibition of 1862.

LIST OF DUTIES.

All kinds of Merchandise, Works of Art, Antiquities, Curiosities, &c., are now admitted into England FREE OF DUTY, except the following (and a few others not of sufficient interest to enumerate here), which are still liable to Duty, viz.:—

	£	s.	d.
ARQUEBUSADE WATER . . . . . the gallon	0	14	0
CIGARS and TOBACCO, manufactured (3 lbs. only allowed in a passenger's baggage) . . . . . the lb.	0	5	0
TOBACCO, unmanufactured (with 5 per cent. additional) . . . ditto	0	3	0
COFFEE . . . . . ditto	0	0	3
CONFECTIONERY (Sweetmeats and Succades) . . . ditto	0	0	1
CORDIALS and LIQUEURS . . . . . the gallon	0	14	0
EAU DE COLOGNE, in long flasks . . . . . each	0	0	6
———— in other bottles . . . . . the gallon	0	14	0
MACCARONI and VERMICELLI . . . . . the cwt.	0	0	4½
PERFUMED SPIRITS . . . . . the gallon	0	14	0
PLATE, of Gold . . . . . the oz. troy	0	17	0
———— of Silver . . . . . ditto	0	1	6
TEA . . . . . the lb.	0	1	0
WINES in Cask, under 26° of strength . . . . . the gallon	0	1	0
———— „ above 26° and under 42° of strength . . . ditto	0	2	6
———— „ „ 42°, for every degree of alcoholic strength . . . ditto	0	0	3
———— in Bottle (6 bottles to the gallon) . . . . . ditto	0	2	6
SPIRITS in Cask and in Bottle . . . . . ditto	0	8	6

Spirits in Casks must contain not less than 21 gallons.

MESSRS. J. AND R. MCCrackEN'S

PRINCIPAL CORRESPONDENTS ARE AT

ALEXANDRIA.....	Messrs. BRIGGS & Co. Mr. E. St. J. FAIRMAN.
ALICANTE .....	Messrs. JASPER WHITE & Co.
ANCONA .....	Messrs. MOORE, MORELLET, & Co.
ANTWERP .....	{ Messrs. F. MACK & Co. Mr. P. VAN ZEEBROECK, Picture Dealer, &c., Rue des Récolets, 2076.
ATHENS, PIRÆUS
BADEN BADEN ...	Messrs. STUFFER & BINDER. Mr. F. PELIKAN's Successor.
BAD EMS.....	Messrs. BECKER & JUNG. Mr. H. W. THIEL.
BAGNERES DE BI- GORRE (Hautes Pyrénées).....	{ Mr. LÉON GÉRUZET, Marble Works.
BASLE .....	{ Messrs. JEAN PREISWERK & FILS. Mr. JEAN THOMMEN, FILS. Messrs. LIECHTENHAN & BURCKHARDT. Messrs. SCHICKLER Brothers.
BERLIN .....	{ Mr. LEON M. COHN, Comm <sup>re</sup> , Expéditeur. Messrs. C. HARSCH & Co., Glass Manufacturers, 67, Unter den Linden.
BERNE .....	Mr. ALBERT TRUMPT.
BEYROUT .....	Mr. HENRY HEALD.
BOLOGNA .....	Sig. G. B. RENOLL. Sig. L. MENI.
BOMBAY .....	Messrs. LECKIE & Co. Messrs. A. H. SABATIER & Co. Mr. J. SANSOT FILS.
BORDEAUX .....	{ Mr. LÉON GÉRUZET, 44, Allées de Tourny. Messrs. RIVIERE & Co., Place du Palais, 4.
BOULOGNE S. M...	Messrs. MORT, PERE, FILS, & VOGUE. Mr. A. SIRE.
CALAIS.....	Messrs. MORT, PERE, FILS, & VOGUE.
CALCUTTA.....	Messrs. GILLANDERS, ARBUTHNOT, & Co.
CARLSBAD .....	{ Mr. THOMAS WOLF, Glass Manufacturer. Mr. CARL KNOLL, au Lion Blanc.
CARRARA.....	Sig. F. BIENAIMÉ, Sculptor. Sig. VINCENZO LIVY, Sculptor.
CIVITA VECCHIA.	Messrs. LOWE BROTHERS, British Vice-Consulate.
COBLENTZ .....	Messrs. SACHS & HOCHHEIMER, Wine Merchants.
COLOGNE.....	{ Mr. J. M. FARINA, gegenüber dem Julichs Platz. Messrs. Gme. TILMES & Co. Mr. P. J. CASSINONE.
CONSTANCE.....	Mr. FRED. HOZ.
CONSTANTINOPLE	Messrs. C. S. HANSON & Co. Mr. ALFRED C. LAUGHTON.
COPENHAGEN.....	Messrs. H. J. BING & SON.
CORFU .....	Mr. J. W. TAYLOR.
DRESDEN .....	{ Messrs. H. W. BASSENCE & Co. Mr. E. ARNOLD, Printseller. Mr. F. R. BÜTTNER, Royal Porcelain Manufactory Dépôt. Mr. J. KREISS, Glass Manufacturer. Madame HELENA WOLFSOHN, Schüssergasse, No. 5. Mr. A. L. MENDE.
FLORENCE .....	{ Messrs. EMILIO FENZI & Co. Messrs. FRENCH & Co. Messrs. MA- QUAY & PAKENHAM. Mr. E. GOODRAN. Mr. J. TOUGH. Messrs. NESTI, CIARDI, & Co. Mr. ANTO <sup>ni</sup> . DI LUIGI PIACENTIL. Mr. S. LOWE. Mr. GAETIO BIANCHINI, Mosaic Worker. Messrs. P. BAZ- ZANTI & FIG., Sculptors, Lungo l'Arno. Sig. CARLO NOCCIOLI. Sig. LUIGI RAMACCI.
FRANKFORT O. M.	{ Mr. P. A. TACCHI's Successor, Glass Manufacturer, Zell. Messrs. BING, JUN., & Co. Mr. F. BÜHLER, Zell D, 17. Mr. G. A. ZIFF.
FRANZENSBAD....	Mr. C. J. HOFMANN.
GENEVA .....	{ Mr. AUG st . SNELL. Mr. F. PELIKAN's Successor, Grand Quai, No. 171. Messrs. GRANET, BROWN, & Co.
GENOA .....	{ Messrs. G. VIGNOLO & FIG <sup>i</sup> . Mr. A. MOSSA, Croce di Malte. Mr. G. GIBELLI.
GHEENT .....	{ Messrs. DE BUYSER FRERES, Dealers in Antiquities, Marché au Beurre, No. 21.
GIBRALTAR .....	Messrs. ARCHBOLD, JOHNSTON, & POWERS. Messrs. TURNER & Co.
HAMBURG .....	Messrs. SCHAAE & CLAUS. Mr. G. J. F. RODE.
HAVRE .....	Messrs. A. LOUVERDIN & FILS.
HEIDELBERG .....	{ Mr. PH. ZIMMERMANN. SCHULZE & MATTER, Successors to Mr. M. LIEBE.
HONOLULU .....	Messrs. ...

M'CRACKEN'S LIST OF CORRESPONDENTS—continued.

INTERLACKEN....	Mr. J. GROSSMANN. Mr. CLEMENT SESTI.
LAUSANNE .....	Mr. L. LONGCHAMPS. Mr. DUBOIS RENOU, FILS. Messrs. W. MACBEAN & Co. Messrs. THOMAS PATE & SONS Messrs. MAQUAY, PAKENHAM, & SMYTH. Messrs. GIACO. MIGALI & FIGO., Sculptors in Alabaster and Marble. Mr. M. RISTORI. Mr. CARLO CAROCOT, Ufficio della Strada Fertata. Messrs. GIO. GALLIANI & Co. Mr. ULISSE COTREMAN.
LEGHOEN .....	Mr. J. E. OEHLISCHLAGER's Successor.
LEIPZIG .....	Mr. ARTHUR VAN ZELLER, in the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's Offices.
LISBON .....	Messrs. F. KNORR & FILS.
LUCERNE .....	Messrs. BINNY & Co.
MADRAS .....	Mr. GEORGE HODGSON.
MALAGA .....	Mr. EMANUEL ZAMMIT. Messrs. JOSE. DARMANIN & SONS, 45, Strada Levante, Mosaic Workers. Mr. FORTUNATO TESTA, 92, Strada Ssa Lucia. Mr. CARMELO DIMECH. Mr. L. FRANCALANZA, 123, Strada [St. Giovanni].
MANNHEIM .....	Mr. DINKELSPIEL. Messrs. EYSEN & CLAUS.
MARIENBAD .....	Mr. J. T. ADLER, Glass Manufacturer.
MARSEILLES .....	Messrs. CLAUDE CLEBO & Co. Messrs. HORACE BOUCHET & Co. Mr. PHILIGRET, 8, Rue Suffren.
MAYENCE .....	Mr. G. L. KATSER, Expéditeur. Mr. W. KNUSSMANN, Cabinet Maker.
MESSINA .....	Messrs. CAILLER & Co.
MILAN .....	Messrs. BUFFET & BEBUTO, Piazzale di S. Sepolcro, No. 3176.
MONTREAL .....	Messrs. BRAMBILLA, CARLI, & Co. THOMPSON, MURRAY, & Co.
MUNICH .....	Mr. HY. WIMMER, Printseller, Promenade St. No. 12. Heirs of SEB. PICHLER. Messrs. MAY & WIDMAYER, Printsellers. Messrs. L. NEGRIOLI & Co.
NAPLES .....	Messrs. IGGULDEN & Co. Messrs. W. J. TURNER & Co.
NEW YORK .....	Messrs. WILBUR & PRICE. Mr. THOMAS SCOTT.
NICE .....	Messrs. A. LACROIX & Co., British Consulate. Messrs. E. CARLONE & Co.
NUREMBERG .....	Mr. PAOLO GALIMBERTI, at the Red Horse, Dealer in Antiquities. Mr. JOHN CONRAD CNOFF, Banker and Forwarding Agent. Mr. A. PICKERT.
OSTEND .....	Messrs. BACH & Co.
PALERMO .....	Messrs. THOMAS BROTHERS.
PARIS .....	Mr. L. CHENU, Packef, Rue Croix Petits Champs, No. 24.
PAU .....	Mr. BERGEROT.
PISA .....	Messrs. HUGUET & VAN LINT, Sculptors in Alabaster and Marble.
PRAGUE .....	Mr. W. HOFMANN, Glass Manufacturer, Blauen Stern. Mr. A. V. LEBEDA, Gun Maker.
QUEBEC .....	Messrs. FORSYTH & PEMBERTON. Messrs. MACBEAN & Co. Messrs. FREEBORN & Co. Messrs. MAQUAY, PAKENHAM, & HOOKER. Messrs. SPADA, FLAMINI, & Co. Messrs. FLOWDEN, CHOLMELEY, & Co. Mr. E. TREBBI. Mr. LUIGI BRAN- CHINI, at the English College. Mr. J. P. SHEA.
ROME .....	Messrs. PRESTON & Co. Messrs. C. HEMMANN & Co. Messrs. BOUTMY & Co.
ROTTERDAM .....	Mr. FRED HOZ.
SCHAFFHAUSEN ..	Mr. JULIAN B. WILLIAMS, British Vice-Consulate.
SEVILLE .....	Don JUAN ANT. BAILLY.
SMYRNA .....	Messrs. HANSON & Co.
ST. PETERSBURG ..	Messrs. THOMSON, BONAR, & Co. Mr. C. KRUGER.
SYRA .....	Mr. WILKINSON, British Consul.
THOUNE .....	Mr. A. H. J. WALD, Bazaar. Messrs. BUZBERGER & LANZREIN.
TRIESTE .....	Messrs. MOORE & Co.
TURIN .....	Messrs. J. A. LACHAISE & FERRERO, Rue de l'Arsenal, No. 4. Messrs. FRERES SCHIELIN. Mr. ANTONIO ZEN.
VENICE .....	Messrs. S. & A. BLUMENTHAL & Co. Mr. L. BOVARDI, Campo S. Fantino, No. 2000, rosso.
VEVEY .....	Mr. JULES GETAZ.
VIENNA .....	Mr. H. ULLRICH, Glass Manufacturer, am Lugeck, No. 3. Messrs. J. & L. LOBMEYER, Glass Manufacturers, 940, Kärnthner Sig. OTTO, CALLAJ, and Messrs. G. CHERICI & FIGI. [Strasse.
VOLTERRA .....	Mr. FRED. HOZ.
WALDSHUTT .....	Messrs. WEISS zum BRACKEN.
ZURICH .....

---

FLORENCE.

---

G. BIANCHINI,*MANUFACTURER OF TABLES AND LADIES' ORNAMENTS OF FLORENTINE MOSAIC,*LUNG' ARNO NUOVO, 1,

INVITES the English Nobility and Gentry to visit his Establishment, where may always be seen numerous specimens of this celebrated and beautiful Manufacture, in every description of Rare and Precious Stones. Orders for Tables and other Ornaments executed to any Design.

G. BIANCHINI's Agents in England are Messrs. J. & R. M'CRACKEN, 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West, London.

---

---

BRIENZ — INTERLACKEN.

---

J. GROSSMANN,*SCULPTOR IN WOOD, AND MANUFACTURER OF SWISS WOOD MODELS AND ORNAMENTS,*AT INTERLACKEN.

HIS WAREHOUSE is situated between the Belvedere Hotel and Schweizerhof, where he keeps the largest and best assortment of the above objects to be found in Switzerland. He undertakes to forward Goods to England and elsewhere.

Correspondents in England, Messrs. J. & R. M'CRACKEN, 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West, London.

---

---

FLORENCE.

---

PICTURE ROOMS.*MR. E. BACCIOTTI,*Via Legnajoli, No. 1,*NEAR THE EUROPE HOTEL.

---

THE best Copies of the Florentine Galleries may be found there. If desired, arrangements can be made for prices to include delivery free of charges in London or New York.

Correspondents in London, Messrs. J. and R. M'CRACKEN, 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West.

NICE.*HOTEL DE L'UNIVERS.*T. W. HOW,*FROM LONDON, PROPRIETOR.

This Hotel, most eligibly situated in one of the most central positions in the town, on the south side of the Place St. Dominique, and close to the Corso, Cercle, Public Libraries, Theatre, Sea-Baths, &c., has been entirely renovated, and furnished with the comforts necessary to English travellers.

Apartments or single rooms on most moderate terms.

Table d'hôte. THE TIMES and GALIGNANI taken in.

Correspondents in London, Messrs. J. and R. M'CRACKEN, 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West.

LEGHORN.HIACINTH MICALI AND SON,Sta. Francesco, No. 20.

Manufactory of Marble, Alabaster, and Scagliola Tables, and Depôt of objects of Fine Arts.

Their extensive Show-rooms are always open to Visitors.

THEIR AGENTS IN ENGLAND ARE

MESSRS. J. AND R. M'CRACKEN,

38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West, London.

MUNICH.*HENRY WIMMER,

SUCCESSOR TO

J. M. DE HERMANN,

PRINT AND PICTURE SELLER TO HIS MAJESTY THE KING OF BAVARIA,

ROYAL PROMENADE STRASSE, No. 12,

MAGAZINE OF OBJECTS OF FINE ARTS,

PICTURES, PRINTS, DRAWINGS, AND LITHOGRAPHS,

INVITES the Nobility and Gentry to visit his Establishment, where he has always on Sale an extensive collection of Pictures by Modern Artists, Paintings on Glass and Porcelain, Miniatures, Drawings, Engravings, and Lithographs, the latter comprising the Complete Collections of the various Galleries, of which Single Copies may be selected.

He has also on Sale all that relates to the Fine Arts.

H. WIMMER undertakes to forward to England all purchases made at his Establishment, through his Correspondents, Messrs. J. & R. M'CRACKEN, 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West, London.

---

FRANKFORT O. M.

---

P. A. TACCHI'S SUCCESSOR,*ZEIL, No. 44,*BOHEMIAN FANCY GLASS AND CRYSTAL WAREHOUSE.

---

P. A. TACCHI'S SUCCESSOR, MANUFACTURER OF BOHEMIAN GLASS, begs to acquaint the Public that he has always an extensive Assortment in the Newest and most Elegant Designs of

ORNAMENTAL CUT, ENGRAVED, GILT, & PAINTED GLASS,
BOTH WHITE AND COLOURED,

In Dessert Services, Chandeliers, Candelabras, Articles for the Table and Toilet, and every possible variety of objects in this beautiful branch of manufacture. He solicits, and will endeavour to merit, a continuance of the favours of the Public, which he has enjoyed in so high a degree during a considerable number of years,

P. A. TACCHI'S SUCCESSOR has a BRANCH ESTABLISHMENT during the Summer Season at

WIESBADEN, in the Old Colonnade,

Where will always be found an extensive Selection of the newest Articles from his Frankfort Establishment.

Visitors to Frankfort should not fail to pay a visit to the Show Rooms of Mr. P. A. TACCHI'S SUCCESSOR.

---

His Agents in England, to whom he undertakes to forward Purchases made of him, are Messrs. J. & R. M'CRACKEN, 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West, London.

COLOGNE ON THE RHINE.

JOHANN MARIA FARINA, GEGENÜBER DEM JÜLICH'S PLATZ

(Opposite the Jülich's Place),

PURVEYOR TO H. M. QUEEN VICTORIA;

TO H. R. H. THE PRINCE OF WALES;

TO H. M. THE KING OF PRUSSIA; THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA;

THE KING OF HANOVER, ETC. ETC.,

OF THE

ONLY GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.

THE frequency of mistakes, which are sometimes accidental, but for the most part the result of deception practised by interested individuals, induces me to request the attention of English travellers to the following statement:—

The favourable reputation which my Eau de Cologne has acquired, since its invention by my ancestor in the year 1709, has induced many people to imitate it; and in order to be able to sell their spurious article more easily, and under pretext that it was genuine, they procured themselves a firm of Farina, by entering into partnership with persons of my name, which is a very common one in Italy.

Persons who wish to purchase the genuine and original Eau de Cologne ought to be particular to see that the labels and the bottles have not only my name, Johann Maria Farina, but also the additional words, gegenüber dem Jülich's Platz (that is, opposite the Jülich's Place), without addition of any number.

Travellers visiting Cologne, and intending to buy my genuine article, are cautioned against being led astray by cabmen, guides, commissioners, and other parties, who offer their services to them. I therefore beg to state that my manufacture and shop are in the same house, situated opposite the Jülich's Place, and nowhere else. It happens too, frequently, that the said persons conduct the uninstructed strangers to shops of one of the fictitious firms, where, notwithstanding assertion to the contrary, they are remunerated with nearly the half part of the price paid by the purchaser, who, of course, must pay indirectly this remuneration by a high price and a bad article.

Another kind of imposition is practised in almost every hotel in Cologne, where waiters, commissioners, &c., offer to strangers Eau de Cologne, pretending that it is the genuine one, and that I delivered it to them for the purpose of selling it for my account.

The only certain way to get in Cologne my genuine article is to buy it personally at my house, opposite the Jülich's Place, forming the corner of the two streets, Unter Goldschmidt and Oben Marsporten, No. 23, and having in the front six balconies, of which the three higher ones bear my name, Johann Maria Farina.

The excellence of my manufacture has been put beyond all doubt by the fact that the Jurors of the Great Exhibitions in London, 1851 and 1862, have awarded to me the Prize Medal, and that I obtained honourable mention at the Great Exhibition in Paris, 1855.

COLOGNE, January, 1863.

JOHANN MARIA FARINA,
GEGENÜBER DEM JÜLICH'S PLATZ.

* * My Agency in London is at MESSRS. J. & R. M'CRACKEN, 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West.

P R A G U E.

WILLIAM HOFMANN, BOHEMIAN GLASS MANUFACTURER, TO HIS MAJESTY THE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA, HOTEL BLUE STAR,

RECOMMENDS his great assortment of Glass Ware, from his own Manufactories in Bohemia. The choicest Articles in every Colour, Shape, and Description, are sold, at the same moderate prices, at his Establishments.

Agents in London, Messrs. J. and R. M'CRACKEN, 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West.

Goods forwarded direct to England, America, &c.

CARY'S IMPROVED POCKET TOURIST'S TELESCOPE.

(See 'Murray's Handbook'.)

Manufacturer of all descriptions of Mathematical, Surveying, and Optical Instruments, for the use of Naval and Military Officers, &c. Also the Binocular Reconnoitring Field Glass, so highly spoken of by officers and other gentlemen; price, with best sling-case, 5*l.* 5*s.* Cary's improved Achromatic Microscope, with two sets of choice lenses, capable of defining the severest objects, from 4*l.* 4*s.* Travelling Spectacles of all kinds.

Mathematical and Optical Instrument Maker to the Admiralty, Royal Military College, Sandhurst, Christ's Hospital, and East India College, Agra, &c.; and Optician to the Royal London Ophthalmic Hospital.

181, STRAND, LONDON.

Established upwards of a Century.

ZURICH.

J. H. KEREZ, CHEMIST AND DRUGGIST,

RESPECTFULLY announces to Tourists and Visitors that he prepares and dispenses Medicines and Prescriptions according to the English Pharmacopoeia with the purest and choicest Drugs and Chemicals. J. H. KEREZ, having been a principal dispensing Assistant at one of the first Houses in England, hopes that his experience and attention will merit the support and confidence of the English Nobility and Gentry.

J. H. K. keeps constantly on hand a well-selected Stock of the most popular English Patent Medicines and Perfumery.

V I E N N A.

Bohemian White and Coloured Crystal Glass Warehouse.

J. & L. LOBMEYR, GLASS MANUFACTURERS,

No. 940, KÄRNTNERSTRASSE,

BEG to inform Visitors to Vienna that they have considerably enlarged their Establishment. The most complete assortment of all kinds of Bohemian White and Coloured Crystal Glass, and of all articles in this branch of industry, in the newest and most elegant style, is always on hand. The rich collections of all Articles of Luxury, viz. Table, Dessert, and other Services, Vases, Candelabras, Lustres, Looking-glasses, &c. &c., will, they feel assured, satisfy every visitor.

The prices are fixed at very moderate and reasonable charges.—The English language is spoken.

Their Correspondents in England, Messrs. J. and R. M'CRACKEN, No. 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West, London, will execute all orders with the greatest care and attention.

VIENNA.

BOHEMIAN GLASS AND BRONZE WAREHOUSE.

HENRICH ULLRICH,

LATE WILLIAM HOFMANN,

GLASS AND BRONZE MANUFACTURER,

No. 3, LUGECK,

Recommends his great assortment of Glass and Bronze Ware in the choicest articles, in every colour, shape, and description, specially adapted to the English and American taste, from his own manufactories in Bohemia and Vienna (for the Bronze).

The prices are fixed at very moderate and reasonable charges.

He received at the last London Exhibition the Prize Medal for excellent execution and very cheap prices.

HENRICH ULLRICH has a Branch Establishment during the Summer Season at

BADEN-BADEN,

NEW PROMENADE, 418,

where will always be found an extensive selection of the newest articles from his Vienna warehouse.

The English language is spoken, and every information given with pleasure to travellers.

He sells only real Bohemian Glass, and not Hungarian Glass, which in many places is sold in substitution.

Agents in Paris and New York.

Agents in London, Messrs. J. and R. McCracken, 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West.

MARSEILLES.

GRAND HOTEL DU LOUVRE ET DE LA PAIX,

RUE NOAILLES.

THIS new splendid Hotel, opened last year, contains 170 Rooms, 20 Saloons, Suites of Apartments for Families, Coffee and Smoking Divan, Drawing Room, magnificent Dining Hall (pronounced by connoisseurs to be a chef-d'œuvre of modern decorative art), Saloon for Table-d'Hôte.

Baths and conveniences on each floor, fitted up under the superintendence of an English gentleman.

This Hotel, so generously patronised by modern travellers and Italian tourists, has attained a reputation for comfort, cleanliness, and moderate charges, unequalled by any hotel in Europe. Rooms from 3 francs upwards.

The Proprietors superintend personally every department, and have received the most flattering testimonials.

The court is covered with glass, admitting of omnibuses and carriages setting down visitors at the foot of the grand staircase under cover.

English Newspapers received each day.

ALL LANGUAGES SPOKEN.

Table-d'Hôte, 5 francs, including Wine.

---

FLORENCE.

---

FRANCESCO BETTI,
MANUFACTURER OF FLORENTINE MOSAIC,
 LUNGO L'ARNO NUOVO, & BORGO OGNISSANTI, No. 3,
KEEPS an Assortment of Tables, Cabinets, Jewel Boxes,
 Presse Papers, Brooches, Pins, &c., mounted and unmounted.
He undertakes to deliver his Works in England.

---

---

FLORENCE.

---

PELLETERIE.
SIGNOR GROSSI,
VIA MERCATO NUOVO,
 Vis-à-vis le PALAIS BARTOLOMMEI.

Les meilleures Pelleteries, confectionnées à l'usage de Paris, peuvent se trouver à des prix très modiques à cet Etablissement, vu les acquisitions considérables que le Propriétaire fait chaque année de personnes aux diverses foires du Nord.

Anglais parlé.

---

FRANKFORT O. M.

---

MR. C. A. LÖHR,

PROPRIETOR OF

THE ROMAN EMPEROR HOTEL,

Begs to recommend his House to English Travellers.

This large and well-situated Establishment is conducted under the immediate superintendence of the Proprietor, and newly furnished with every comfort, and a new splendid Dining-room.

The "ROMAN EMPEROR" is often honoured by Royal Families and other high personages. The following have lately honoured this Hotel—

H.M. THE KING AND QUEEN OF WURTEMBERG.

H.M. THE QUEEN OF HOLLAND.

H.R.H. THE CROWN PRINCE AND PRINCESS OLGA OF WURTEMBERG.

H.L.H. THE ARCHDUKE OF AUSTRIA. &c. &c. &c.

Table-d'hôte at 1, 1s. 30kr.

Breakfast, 42kr.

" " 5, 2s.

Tea, 42kr.

Bed Rooms from 1s. to 3s.

R O M E.

J. P. SHEA, ENGLISH HOUSE-AGENT,

FORWARDING AGENT
TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

11, PIAZZA DI SPAGNA.

At this Office persons applying for Large or Small Furnished Apartments invariably obtain correct and unbiassed information on all matters connected with Lodging-Houses, Boarding-Houses,
and
Household Management,
while
Low and Fixed Charges
for practical services offer safe and satisfactory assistance to Proprietor and Tenant, as testified by the increasing confidence of English and American Travellers since the opening of the establishment in 1852.

Plans and Lists of Apartments sent by Post to persons who wish to secure accommodation, or avoid inconvenience at the approach of Carnival or the Holy Week.

AS CUSTOM-HOUSE AGENT,

MR. SHEA clears and warehouses

Baggage and other effects

for travellers who, to avoid the expense of quick transit, send their things by sea or luggage-train, directed to his care.

He also superintends the

Packing of Works of Art and other Property intrusted to his care, and the forwarding of the same to England, &c.; and being Agent for Messrs. Burns and McIvers' Italian line of steamers, can offer facilities on the freight of packages between Italy and England.

CORRESPONDENTS—

LONDON.....Messrs. J. & R. M'CRACKEN, 38, Queen Street,
Cannon Street West.
Messrs. OLIVIER & CARR, 37, Finsbury Square.
LIVERPOOL .....Messrs. STAVELEY & STARR, 9, Chapel Street.
FOLKESTONE .....Mr. FAULKNER.
BOULOGNE S.M.....Mr. BERNARD, 18, Quai des Paquebots.
PARIS .....Messrs. KAHN & CO., 8, Place de la Bourse.
MARSEILLES .....Messrs. GIRAUD FRERES, 44, Rue Sainte.
NEW YORK .....Messrs. AUSTIN, BALDWIN, & CO., 72, Broadway.

FRANKFORT O. M.

PRIZE-MEDAL,

LONDON, 1862.

SILBERNE

MEDAILLE.

STEMPEL, bewilligt

vom

SENAT
der freien Stadt,
FRANKFURT.

FRIEDRICH BÖHLER,

MANUFACTORY OF STAGHORN,

Zeil No. 54 (next door to the Post-Office).

FURNITURE OF EVERY DESCRIPTION, as Sofas, Chairs, Tables, &c. &c. CHANDELIERs, Table and Hand Candlesticks, Shooting-tackle, INKSTANDS, Paper-knives, Penholders, Seals, &c. KNIVES, RIDING-WHIPS, Cigar-cases and Holders, Pipes, Match-boxes, Porte-monnaies, Card-cases, Thermometers, GOBLETs, Candle-screens, Figures and Groups of Animals executed after Riedinger and others. BROOCHES, Bracelets, Earrings, Shirt-pins, Studs, and Buttons. STAG AND DEER HEADS with Antlers attached to the Skull. Sofarugs or Foot-cloths of Skins of Wild Animals with Head preserved.

Orders for a Complete Set or for any quantity of FURNITURE will be promptly executed.

The Agents in London are Messrs. J. and R. McCracken, 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West.

FRANKFORT O. M.

FRIEDRICH BÖHLER,

Zeil,

No. 54,

dicht neben

der Post,

Stempel, bewilligt vom Senat der freien Stadt, Frankfurt.

PENDULES (Ornamental Clocks) of every description, VASES, Goblets, ANTIQUE and MODERN STATUETTES and GROUPS, Groups of Animals, INKSTANDS, Paper-weights, &c. &c., in Bronze, Cast Iron, Galvano-plastic, &c.

CROWN-CHANDELIERS; Branch, Table, and Hand Candlesticks, in Bronze, &c.; Lamps of every description.

PORCELAIN and Britannia-metal Goods, Liqueur-chests.

TRAVELLING DRESSING-CASES, Railroad Companions, Picnic-baskets, Travelling Bags, Brushes, Combs.

WORK-TABLES and Boxes, Tapestries, Fans, Ball-books, Smelling-bottles, Opera-Glasses, &c. &c.

Superior Copies of the ARIADNE by Dannecker, and the AMAZON by Kiss.

Genuine Eau de Cologne of Jean Maria Farina, opposite the Jülichsplatz.

The Agents in London are Messrs. J. and R. M<sup>c</sup>CRACKEN, 38, Queen Street, Cannon Street West.

TO VISITORS TO THE CONTINENT.

OLIVIER & CARR,

37, Finsbury Square, London,

(MR. OLIVIER ESTABLISHED IN 1830,)

COMMISSION MERCHANTS AND GENERAL AGENTS

For Shipment and Reception of Goods to and from all Parts of the World.

OLIVIER & CARR have the honour to inform VISITORS TO THE CONTINENT

that they undertake to receive and pass through the Customhouse in London, Liverpool, Southampton, &c.,

WORKS of ART, BAGGAGE, and PROPERTY of EVERY DESCRIPTION, which are attended to on arrival

with the utmost Care in Examination and Removal, under their own personal superintendence. They beg to call particular attention to their Moderate Charges, which have given universal satisfaction.

Many Travellers having expressed a desire to know in anticipation to what expenses their Purchases are liable on arrival in England, the following

Rates of Charges on the Reception of Packages may be relied upon, for Landing from the Ship, Clearing, Delivery in London, and Agency:—

- On Trunks of Baggage. . . . . about 9s. each.
- On Cases of Works of Art, &c., of moderate size and value . about 15s.   "
- "       "       "       of larger       "       "   20s. to 25s.   "
- On very large Cases of valuable Statuary, Pictures, &c., on which an estimate cannot well be given, the charges will depend on the care and trouble required.
- When several cases are sent together the charges are less on each case.

OLIVIER & CARR undertake the FORWARDING OF PACKAGES OF EVERY KIND to the Continent, to the care of their Correspondents, where they can remain, if required, until the arrival of the owners.

Also

THE EXECUTION OF ORDERS FOR THE PURCHASE OF GOODS of all kinds, which, from their long experience as Commission Merchants, they are enabled to buy on the most advantageous terms.

Residents on the Continent will find this a convenient means of ordering anything they may require from London.

N.B.—The keys of locked Packages should always be sent to OLIVIER & CARR, as everything, although free of duty, must be examined by the Customs on arrival.

INSURANCES EFFECTED, and Agency Business of every description

OLIVIER & CARR'S principal Correspondents are—

At Aix-la-Chapelle . . . . .	Messrs. A. SOUTHEUR and CO.
„ Alexandria . . . . .	Messrs. FAIRMAN and CO.; Mr. J. W. BROWNE.
„ Antwerp . . . . .	Mr. F. VERELLEN BEERNAERT.
„ Basle . . . . .	Mr. J. J. FREY.
„ Bordeaux . . . . .	Mr. F. BEYERMAN.
„ Boulogne . . . . .	Mr. L. BRANLY.
„ Brussels . . . . .	Mr. L. STEIN, 22, Montagne de la Cour. Mr. G. LUYCKX, 24, Rue des Fabriques.
„ Calais . . . . .	Messrs. MORY, Père, Fils, and VOGUE.
„ Cologne . . . . .	Messrs. C. H. VAN ZUTPHEN and CO. Messrs. G. TILMES and CO.
„ Constantinople . . . . .	Messrs. VALSAMACHY and CO., Galata.
„ Dresden . . . . .	Messrs. KRAETSCHMER and CO.
„ Florence . . . . .	Messrs. HASKARD and SON. Messrs. W. H. WOOD and CO.; Mr. J. TOUGH.
„ Frankfort . . . . .	Mr. MARTIN BECKER, 5, Biedenstrasse. Mr. MORITZ B. GOLDSCHMIDT, Banker.
„ Geneva . . . . .	Messrs. JOLIMAY and CO.
„ Genoa . . . . .	Messrs. G. B. PRATOLONGO and CO. Messrs. SANTA MARIA and LERTORA.
„ Hamburg . . . . .	Messrs. JULIUS WÜSTENFELD and Co.
„ Havre . . . . .	Messrs. H. L. MÜLLER and CO.
„ Interlaken . . . . .	Messrs. RITSCHARD and BURKI.
„ Leipsig . . . . .	Messrs. GERHARD and HEY.
„ Leghorn . . . . .	Mr. MARIO GIOVANNETTI, 13, Scali della Darsena. Messrs. HENDERSON BROTHERS.
„ Marseilles . . . . .	Messrs. GIRAUD FRÈRES. Messrs. HORACE BOUCHET and CO.
„ Milan . . . . .	Mr. LOUIS MALEGUE, Rue de l'Agneau, No. 8 rouge.
„ Munich . . . . .	Messrs. GUTLEBEN and WEIDERT.
„ Naples . . . . .	Messrs. THOS. RAGLAND and CO. [le Port].
„ Nice . . . . .	Messrs. LES FILS DE CH. GIORDAN, Quai Lunel, 14 (sur [Trevis].
„ Ostend . . . . .	Mr. J. DUCLOS ASSANDRI.
„ Paris . . . . .	Messrs. VICTOR GRAND and CO., Bankers, 14, Rue de Mr. DELASSUS, Packer, &c., 6, Rue Neuve St. Augustin, près la Bourse. M. HECTOR L'HERBIER, 18, Rue de la Douane.
„ Pau . . . . .	Mr. BERGEROT.
„ Prague . . . . .	Mr. J. J. SEIDL, Hibernergasse, No. 1000.
„ Rome . . . . .	Mr. J. P. SHEA, 11, Piazza di Spagna.
„ Rotterdam . . . . .	Messrs. P. A. VAN ES and CO.; Mr. J. A. HOUWENS.
„ Trieste . . . . .	Messrs. MARTIN FRÈRES.
„ Turin . . . . .	Mr. CHIABODO PIETRO, Via Dora Grossa, 13.
„ Venice . . . . .	Mr. HENRY DECOPPET.
„ Vienna . . . . .	Messrs. FLEURRIET and CO.

Any other houses will also forward goods to O. & C. on receiving instructions to do so. Travellers are requested always to give particular directions that their Packages are consigned direct to OLIVIER & CARR, 37, FINSBURY SQUARE.

PRICES OF WINES IMPORTED BY*OLIVIER AND CARR,

AGENTS TO GROWERS.

	per doz. duty paid.
Claret , Shipped by F. Beyerman, Bordeaux . . . . .	18s., 24s., 30s., 36s., to 120s.
Burgundy „ Dumoulin aîné, Savigny-sous-Beaune . . . . .	24s., 28s., 36s., to 84s.
Hock &amp; Moselle , Jodocus Frères & Co., Coblentz . . . . .	21s., 30s., 36s., to 120s.
„ Sparkling, „ . . . . .	48s. to 60s.
Champagne „ . . . . .	48s. to 72s.
Marsala , in Qr. Casks, £11; Hds. £21 . . . . .	26s.
Sherries , Pale, Gold, or Brown, in Qr. Casks, £15 to £35, delivered.

CLARET, BURGUNDY, and HOCK, in the Wood, at Growers' Prices.

Detailed Price Lists may be had of O. &amp; C. 37, Finsbury Square.

CHUBB'S LOCKS and SAFES.

'For perfection of workmanship and construction of Locks, also for the manufacture of Iron Safes.'

PRIZE MEDAL AWARDED, INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, 1862.

CHUBB & SON,

BY APPOINTMENTS,

Makers to THE QUEEN; H.R.H. the late PRINCE CONSORT; and to H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

CHUBB'S PATENT DETECTOR
LOCKS, the most secure from picklocks and false keys, are strong, simple, and durable, and made of all sizes and for every purpose to which a Lock can be applied.

Trunks, Portmanteaus, Travelling Bags, Dressing Cases, Writing Desks, &c., fitted with only the usual common and utterly insecure Locks, can have the place of these supplied by CHUBB'S PATENT without alteration or injury.

'TRAVELLERS' LOCK-PROTECTORS and PORTABLE SCUTCHEON LOCKS for securing Doors that may be found fastened only by common Locks.

CHUBB & SON have always in stock a variety of Writing and Despatch Boxes in Morocco or Russia Leather and japanned Tin; the latter being particularly recommended for lightness, room, durability, and freedom from damage by insects or hot climates.

Best Black Enamelled Leather Travelling Bags of various sizes, all with Chubb's Patent Locks.

Cash, Deed, and Paper Boxes of all dimensions.

CHUBB'S FIREPROOF SAFES are constructed in the very best manner, of the strongest wrought-iron, fitted with Chubb's Patent Drill-preventive and their Gunpowder-proof Steel-plated Locks, are the most secure from fire and burglary, and form the most complete safeguard for Books, Papers, Deeds, Jewels, Plate, and other valuable property.

CHUBB & SON have also Safes not fireproof, but equally secure in all other respects, intended for holding plate where protection from fire is not an object, and affording much more room inside than the Fireproof Safes. They are recommended specially in place of the ordinary wooden cases for plate, which may so easily be broken open.

Complete Illustrated Priced Lists of Chubb's Locks, Boxes, Safes, and other Manufactures, gratis and post-free.

CHUBB and SON, Makers to the Bank of England, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, E.C.

INSTANT RELIEF AND A RAPID CURE OF ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, INFLUENZA, COLDS, AND ALL DISORDERS OF THE BREATH, THROAT, AND LUNGS,

ARE INSURED BY

WHICH HAVE A MOST AGREEABLE TASTE :

ANOTHER CURE OF CONSUMPTIVE COUGH.—From J. Pratt, Chemist, Stafford Street, Wolverhampton.—‘A lady had been suffering from a severe consumptive cough for twelve or thirteen years, and, after consulting several physicians, was induced to try your Wafers. The first dose gave instantaneous relief, and she has not had another attack since.’

CURE OF ASTHMA OF ‘TWENTY YEARS’ STANDING.—From Mr. C. Ward, Stationer, &c., Market Place, Heckmondwike, May 27th, 1863.—‘One person in Liversedge, named James Richardson, who has been an asthmatical man for nearly twenty years, declares that they are worth 11. a box (using his own words). He feels quite a new man through this truly valuable medicine.’

DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS give instant relief and a rapid cure of asthma, consumption, coughs, and all disorders of the breath and lungs. All throat affections are immediately relieved by allowing one occasionally to dissolve in the mouth. To Singers and Public Speakers they are invaluable for clearing and strengthening the voice.—THEY HAVE A PLEASANT TASTE. Price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 11s. per box. Sold by all Medicine Vendors.

CAUTION.—DR. LOCOCK'S ESSENCE OF SARSAPARILLA AND BARK.

For Purifying the Blood and Strengthening the Constitution. Counterfeits of this medicine have been discovered. Examine well the Government Stamp, which is outside the wrapper, and see that the words ‘Dr. Locock's Sarsaparilla and Bark’ are printed in the same, as without these words all are counterfeits—and do not be persuaded to the contrary. Sold at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. per bottle, by all druggists.

HEIDELBERG.

HÔTEL DE L'EUROPÉ.

PROPRIÉTAIRE, JOSEPH SCHRIEDER.

THIS splendid Establishment, recently constructed in the Anlage (the Public Promenade), is recommended for the convenience and beauty of its situation, and view of the Castle. It will be found to possess the comfort, elegance, and superior attendance of the best continental hotels. There is suitable accommodation for nobility, families, or single travellers, on business or pleasure; and arrangements can be made by the day, week, or month, at moderate prices. The latter are still more reduced for protracted visits, and during the winter season. English, French, and Italian spoken. Newspapers from all countries taken in.

N.B.—Mr. Schrieder begs to state that he was formerly the Proprietor of the ‘Hôtel Schrieder,’ named after him, and which still keeps his name. Travellers who wish to honour him with their patronage are respectfully solicited to inquire for the Hôtel de l'Europe.

VIENNA.

For Optical Instruments, Opera Glasses, &c.

THE ESTABLISHMENT OF

JOS. NEUHOEFER, LATE CH. GROSS & CO.,
1149, KOHLMARKT, VIENNA,

Manufacturer of Double Opera Glasses with 6, 8, and 12 lenses, own invention and newest construction, to be used for the theatre, travelling, and the field, Telescopes for the army and navy, Racing-glasses, and all other kinds of Optical and Mathematical Instruments.

NORTH BRITISH AND MERCANTILE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Established in 1809.—Incorporated by Royal Charter and Special Acts of Parliament.

PRESIDENT—HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF ROXBURGHE, K.T.

VICE-PRESIDENTS { HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF SUTHERLAND,
THE MOST NOBLE THE MARQUIS OF ABERCORN, K.G., AND [India.
RIGHT HON. SIR JOHN L. M. LAWRENCE, BART., G.C.B., K.S.I., Viceroy of ORDINARY DIRECTORS.

Edinburgh.

James Campbell Tait, Esq., W.S.
Laurence Davidson, Esq., W.S.
D. B. Wanchope, Esq., Merchant, Leith.
Frederick Pitman, Esq., W.S.
John Brown Innes, Esq., W.S.
Henry D. Ferguson, Esq., W.S.
J. Maitland, Esq., Account-Gen. to Court of Session.
R. B. Maconochie, Esq., W.S.
Sir James Gardiner Baird, Bart.
David Davidson, Esq., Treasurer of the Bank of Scotland.
G. Andljo Jamieson, Esq., C.A.
J. F. W. Drummond, Esq., Merchant.
Secretary—JOHN OGILVIE.
Actuary—DAVID CHISHOLM.
Auditor—GEORGE MURRAY, C.A.
Inspector of Agencies—ALFRED GOOD.
Medical Officer—JOHN G. M. BURT, M.D.

London.

John White Cater, Esq., Merchant.
Charles Morrison, Esq., Merchant.
P. du Pre Grenfell, Esq., Merchant.
A. Klockmann, Esq., Merchant.
John Mollett, Esq., Merchant.
Junius S. Morgan, Esq., Merchant.
John H. Wm. Schröder, Esq., Merchant.
George Garden Nicol, Esq., Merchant.
George Young, Esq., Merchant.
Alexander H. Campbell, Esq., Merchant.
Phillip Charles Cavan, Esq., Merchant.
Peter P. Ralli, Esq., Merchant.

Manager of Fire Department.

GEORGE H. WHYTING.

Superintendent of Foreign Department.

G. H. BURNETT.

Actuary—ANDREW BADSON, JUN.

Secretary—F. W. LANCE.

General Manager—DAVID SMITH.

LIFE ASSURANCE.

THE system of the NORTH BRITISH AND MERCANTILE INSURANCE COMPANY combines the benefit of Mutual Assurance with the safety of a large Protecting Capital, and affords all the facilities and advantages which can prudently be offered by any Life Assurance Office.

The rates adopted by the Company are moderate.

Ninety per cent. of the Profits are divided among the assured in the Participating Class.

From the REPORT by the DIRECTORS, read at the FIFTY-FOURTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING, held 7th March, 1864, the following particulars as to the present position of the Company are extracted:—

FUNDS AND REVENUE.

At 31st December, 1863, the Accumulated Funds

amounted to ..... £2,233,927 17 7

And the Annual Revenue to ..... £497,263 14 3

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—NEW BUSINESS in 1863.

No. of Policies.

1071

Sums Assured.

£963,839

New Premiums.

£33,002 14 0

NOTE.—The recent improvement in the Business will, it is expected, beneficially affect the Bonus to be declared at the next Division of Profits on the closing of the books for 1865.

NEW CONDITIONS.

The Conditions of the Company's Policies have recently been revised, and the Assured are now freed from many of the usual Restrictions.

FIRE INSURANCE.

The Company INSURES against FIRE—Silk, Cotton, Woollen, and Flax Mills, Buildings of all Descriptions, Furniture, Stock in Trade, Merchandise, Agricultural Stock, Implements of Husbandry, and Effects of every kind, at HOME and ABROAD, at the lowest rates of Premium corresponding to the risk.

Prospectuses containing the New Tables of Premiums may be obtained, along with Forms of Proposal, &c., from the Head Offices, or any of the Agents in the United Kingdom.

HEAD OFFICES—EDINBURGH, 64, Princes Street.

LONDON—60 and 61, Threadneedle Street.

West End Office, 8, Waterloo Place, Pall Mall.

PASSPORT AGENCY OFFICE, LONDON, 59, FLEET STREET, E. C.

Regulations gratis for obtaining Foreign Office Passports.

RESIDENTS in the United Kingdom or London, who desire to avoid trouble, can have their PASSPORTS obtained and viséd with expedition, upon application to W. J. ADAMS, 59, Fleet Street.

Country Residents, by this arrangement, are saved the trouble of coming to London, as the Passport can be forwarded to them by Post (en Règle).

Fee obtaining Passport, 1s. 6d.; Visas, 1s. each.

Passports carefully Mounted and Cased, and Names lettered thereon in Gold.

Passport Cases from 1s. 6d. to 6s. each.

Visas obtained to United States Passports. Every description of Stationery for Travellers.

THE LATEST EDITIONS OF MURRAY'S HANDBOOKS.

Phrase Books and Dictionaries.

BRADSHAW'S BRITISH and CONTINENTAL GUIDES and HANDBOOKS to France, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Spain and Portugal, Tyrol, Paris, London, &c.

KELLAR'S, LEUTHOLD'S, and ZIEGLER'S, Maps of Switzerland, Original Editions.

Knapacks, Rugs, Waterproof Coats, Door-fasteners, Handbags, Portmanteaus, &c. &c.

INDIA.

BRADSHAW'S Overland and Through Route Guide to India, China, and Australia, 5s.

BRADSHAW'S Handbook to the Bombay Presidency and the North-West Provinces, Madras, and Bengal, 10s. 6d. each.

Experienced Couriers may be had on application.

W. J. ADAMS (BRADSHAW'S BRITISH and CONTINENTAL GUIDE OFFICE), LONDON, 59, FLEET STREET, E. C.

OFFICE HOURS 8 TO 7. SATURDAYS 8 TO 3.

THE ORIGINAL CONTINENTAL DAILY PARCELS EXPRESS (the Proprietors of which are the SOLE AGENTS for ENGLAND of the Belgian Government Railway and Royal Prussian Post-Office) was established in 1849, for CONVEYANCE BY GOVERNMENT MAIL PACKETS EVERY NIGHT (Sunday excepted), viâ DOVER, CALAIS, and OSTEND, of Samples of every Description, all kinds of Papers, Plans, Books, Parcels containing Articles for Private Use, and any others, between ENGLAND and the CONTINENT, viz.: to and from FRANCE, SARDINIA, BELGIUM, HOLLAND, RUSSIA, the ZOLLVEREIN and other GERMAN STATES, AUSTRIA, BAVARIA, SWITZERLAND, PRUSSIA, ITALY, the LEVANT, the MEDITERRANEAN, &c., at fixed and moderate Rates, Tables of which, with full instructions to senders, may be had gratis.

LONDON. Offices and Agents of the Continental Express.

CHIEF OFFICE, 53, Gracechurch St., City, D. N. BRIDGE, Manager. } GOVERNMENT MAIL PACKET OFFICES.
BRANCH OFFICE, WEST END, 34, Regent Circus (Universal Office).

Prussia, all Germany, &c.—The Post Office of each locality.

Belgium.—OSTEND, 10, Georges Street: A. CARBON.—BRUSSELS, 77, Montagne de la Cour: J. PIDDINGTON.—Rue Duquesnoy and North Railway Station.—ANTWERP, GHENT, LIEGE, VERVIERS, and all other Places in Belgium: Government Railway Station.

Holland.—In all the principal Towns: VAN GEND & LOOS.

France.—PARIS, 2, rue Drouot, two doors from the Boulevard des Italiens: N. G. VERBERCKMOES.—BOULOGNE, rue de l'Ecu: G. SAUVAGE.

JOHN PIDDINGTON, } Proprietors.
JOHN FRIEND,

London, 1st May, 1864.

Stanford's Foreign Office Passport Agency,

6, CHARING CROSS, LONDON, S.W.

Passports (which are good for life) mounted on Muslin or Silk, in Roan, Morocco, or Russia Case, with the name of the Owner lettered on the outside, thus preventing injury or loss, as well as lessening the delay in examination abroad.

For further particulars, including the Forms of Application, Cost of Passport, Visas, &c. &c., see Stanford's Passport Circular, which will be forwarded per post on receipt of One Stamp.

STANFORD'S TOURIST'S CATALOGUE,

Containing Title, Price, &c., of the Best GUIDE BOOKS, MAPS, CONVERSATION BOOKS, DICTIONARIES, &c. &c., published in the United Kingdom, the Continent, and America, Gratis on application, or free per post for One Stamp.

LONDON: EDWARD STANFORD, 6, CHARING CROSS, S.W.,

Agent for the Sale of the Ordnance Maps, Geological Survey Maps, and Admiralty Charts.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER BANK issues Circular Notes of £10 each, payable at every important place in Europe. These Notes are issued without charge, and they are cashed abroad free of commission. The Bank also issues, free of charge, Letters of Credit on all the principal cities and towns in Europe. The Letters of Credit are issued only at the head office, in Lothbury. The Circular Notes may be obtained at the head office, in Lothbury, or at any of the Branches, viz.:-

Westminster Branch,	1, St. James's Square.
Bloomsbury	" 214, High Holborn.
Southwark	" 3, Wellington Street, Borough.
Eastern	" 87, High Street, Whitechapel.
Marylebone	" 4, Stratford Place, Oxford Street.
Temple Bar	" 217, Strand.
Lambeth	" 89 & 91, Westminster Bridge Road.

May 1, 1864.

WM. EWINGS, General Manager.

ESSENTIALS FOR TRAVELLING.

Thresher's India Tweed Suits.
Thresher's Kashmir Flannel Shirts.
Thresher's Kashmir Woollen Socks.
Thresher's Coloured Flannel Shirts.
Thresher's Travelling Bags.

SOLD ONLY BY
THRESHER & GLENNY,
NEXT DOOR TO SOMERSET HOUSE,
STRAND.

SHIPPING AND FORWARDING AGENCY,

For Baggage, Parcels, and Goods.

KIMPTON & CO.,

40, RUE NOTRE DAME DES VICTOIRES, PARIS,
AND

6, BATH STREET, NEWGATE STREET, LONDON,
Established 1846,

Forward Parcels and Baggage every day between London and Paris, England and all parts of the Continent, by Grande Vitesse, at Economic Charges.

Bureau Restante; Bureau pour Brevets d'Inventions. Continental Agents wanted.

The LANCET states—"This is superior to anything of the kind known."

BROWN & POLSON'S

PATENT CORN FLOUR

The First Manufactured in the United Kingdom and France.

Paisley, Manchester, Dublin, & London.

This favourite article of Diet is especially suitable for
PUDDINGS, CUSTARDS, BLANCMANGES;
 and, being very light and of easy digestibility, it is recommended for BREAKFASTS, SUPPERS, &c.,

for which it is easily prepared, requiring only to be boiled with milk for eight minutes, and taken with sugar.

It is preferred for all the purposes to which the best Arrowroot is applicable, and prepared in the same manner. For various culinary purposes, such as to thicken Soups, Sauces, Beef-tea, &c. &c., it is invaluable, and extensively used in all parts of the world.

IMPORTANT.

To obtain the full and delicious flavour of BROWN and POLSON'S Corn Flour, it should be boiled from 7 to 10 minutes; it will then, when poured out, leave the saucepan almost clean, which indicates that it has been sufficiently boiled. The milk may be brought to boil before it is added to the Corn Flour; the latter having been previously slaked with cold milk or water.

"John Brown," "John Polson," is now signed by the makers upon each packet, as purchasers are often deceived by the substitution of qualities that closely resemble Brown and Polson's in appearance.

RECIPE FOR INFANTS' FOOD.

To 1 dessert-spoonful of BROWN & POLSON, mixed with a wineglassful of cold water, add half-a-pint of boiling water; stir over the fire for five minutes; sweeten slightly, and feed the baby; but if the infant is being brought up by hand, this food should then be mixed with milk,—not otherwise, as the use of two different milks would be injurious.—FRANCATELLI, late Chief Cook to Her Majesty the Queen.

GENEVA.*No. 2, PLACE DES BERGUES.*GEO. BAKER, ENGLISH CHEMIST & DRUGGIST.

PREScriptions CAREFULLY PREPARED. ALL KINDS OF PATENT MEDICINES AND PERFUMERY.

Homeopathic Preparations. Soda and Saratoga Water.

Owing to the facilities accorded by the 'Postes Fédérales,' Medicines and Preparations of all kinds are forwarded with the greatest despatch and safety to all parts of Switzerland.

GENEVA.*HÔTEL DE LA MÉTROPOLE.

CONDUCTED BY MR. WILLIAM WOLBOLD.

¶ This large and excellent Establishment, situated in the most favourable quarter of the town, opposite the English Garden, and near all the principle edifices, enjoys the finest view of the Lake, in its full extent, and contains 200 most elegantly furnished Bed and Sitting-rooms in every variety.

A beautiful Reading-room, where all the chief English, American, French, and German Newspapers are to be found, with a spacious Coffee and Smoking-room; in short, every comfort travellers may expect from a first-rate Hotel, is at their disposition.

The House, by its good ventilation, is exceedingly cool in summer, and in winter is well heated by large stoves.

Charges very moderate, and Pension during the winter.

Table d'hôte three times a day, at 4 fcs. each person, at 1, 5, and 7 o'clock.

Omnibuses belonging to the Hotel to and from the Station for every train.

Private Carriages and Cabs always ready.

---

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

TWENTY-THIRD YEAR.

---

This Library was Established in April, 1842, in order to promote the widest possible circulation of the best Books in every department of Literature.

From its commencement great care has been taken to render the Collection as complete and accessible as possible. Books of every shade of opinion on all subjects of public interest have been freely added; and in cases where the demand has been general, hundreds, and in some instances thousands, of copies of the choicer Works have been provided for the use of Subscribers.

Book Societies in direct communication with the Library are now established in every part of the Kingdom, and are furnished on moderate terms with a constant succession of the new Books as they appear.

Two or three friends in any neighbourhood may unite in one Subscription.

Revised Lists of Works recently added to the Library, and Catalogues of Surplus Copies withdrawn for Sale, are now ready, and will be forwarded postage free on application.

New Oxford Street, London, April, 1864.

---

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

FIRST CLASS SUBSCRIPTION.

---

For a constant Succession of the best New Books, as they appear,

One Guinea to One Hundred Guineas per Annum,

according to the Number of Volumes required.

---

CHARLES EDWARD MUDIE,

NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, AND CROSS STREET, MANCHESTER.

---

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

CHEAP BOOKS.

---

Purchasers of Books for Public and Private Libraries, Merchants, Shipping Agents, and others, are invited to apply for the REVISED LIST of Surplus Copies of Works withdrawn from MUDIE'S LIBRARY FOR SALE. This list contains the Names of nearly One Thousand Books of the Past and Present Seasons, at the lowest current Prices.

---

CHARLES EDWARD MUDIE,

NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, AND CROSS STREET, MANCHESTER.

NOTICE

MAPS for TOURISTS, as recommended by MURRAY.—Messrs. LETTS have procured from various reliable sources the best Maps of every part of the World where Travellers are wont to resort, and believe that the annexed epitome will meet all requirements.

ENGLAND—The Ordnance Maps, on the scale of 1 inch to the mile, at 6s. each sheet coloured and mounted; or 2s. plain, unmounted.

WALES—Similar to the above, with the Geological Formations, if required.

SCOTLAND—The Ordnance or Ainslie's 1-inch Maps; or Black's at 2s. per sheet, coloured.

IRELAND—The 1 inch Ordnance Survey, at 6d. per sheet plain, unmounted.

ALGIER—The French Government Maps, on various scales, at 3s. per sheet.

AUSTRIAN EMPIRE—The Government Map, on the scale of  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch to the mile, at 2s. 6d. and 4s. per sheet: any part of this extended empire may be had.

AUVERGNE—Desmarest's; in case 1l. 10s.

BELGIUM—Van der Maelen's large Map on the scale 3 inches to the mile, at 5s. per sheet, mounted in case.

DAUPHINE—Bourcet; in case 2l.

GERMANY—Hendschel's Post Map; Diez's Eisenbahn Karte; and large scale Maps by Perthes & Engelhardt.

GREECE—French Government Survey, in 20 sheets, 1l. 15s.; case 2l. 12s. 6d. Kiepert's Pocket Map, case, 5s.

ITALY—Austrian Government Survey, on the scale of  $\frac{1}{4}$  miles to the inch, at 2s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. per sheet.

MADEIRA—Ziegler's colour-printed Map, 10s.

NORWAY AND SWEDEN—Forsell's, in 8 sheets, 2l. 10s.; Munch's, in case, 1l. 4s.

PALESTINE—Van der Velde's celebrated Map, in case, 26s.; memoir, 7s. 6d. extra. French Government Map of Lebanon, 1l. 10s.

PYRENEES—Lezat's and Veuillement's, at 6s. each in case.

ROME—Baron Moltke's, at 6s. & 18s., in case.

RUSSIA—Austrian Government Map, in 22 sheets, at 6s. per sheet.

SARDINIA—Alberto de la Marmora's beautiful Map, mounted in case, 26s.

STYRIA, TYROL—See Austrian Empire.

SWITZERLAND—Swiss Government Survey, on the scale of  $\frac{1}{4}$  inches to the mile, in 24 sheets, at prices from 5s. upwards; Leuthold's, at 12s. 6d. in case; Studer and Escher's Geological, at 18s. 6d.

TURKEY—Austrian Government Survey, at 4s. per sheet.

N.B.—Such of the above as are not in Stock can be ordered by means of the Index Maps, all of which, with Specimen Maps, may be consulted.

LETTS, SON, & CO., Stationers and Map Agents to H.M. Board of Ordnance and the Geological Society, 8, ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON.

OXFORD.

SPIERS AND SON,

102 & 103, HIGH STREET,

STATIONERS, &c., BY APPOINTMENT TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Respectfully invite TOURISTS to VISIT their Extensive Warehouses for Useful and Ornamental Manufactures, suitable for Presents and remembrances of OXFORD.

Copies of every published GUIDE-BOOK and MAP of Oxford and its neighbourhood kept in stock, as well as Views, Photographs, Stereoscopic Pictures, &c.

At the Great Exhibitions in London, 1851-1862, Paris, 1855, and New York, 1853, Honourable Mention or the Prize Medal was awarded to their Ornamental Manufactures.

Information relative to Oxford afforded to strangers visiting their establishments.

FIELD GLASSES.

BURROW'S MALVERN GLASSES

Are noted throughout the world, and their new and perfected

RIFLE TELESCOPES

command the preference of the highest authorities. Details and prices on application.

W. and J. BURROW, Great Malvern.

London.—ARNOLD, 72, Baker Street, W.;

WALES and Co., 56, Cheapside, E.C.

GALIGNANI'S NEW PARIS GUIDE.

Compiled from the best authorities, revised and verified by personal inspection, and arranged on an entirely new plan, with Map and Plates. Royal 18mo. 10s. 6d. bound; or without Plates, 7s. 6d. bound.

London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, & Co.

ROTTERDAM.

H. A. KRAMERS, Importer of Foreign Books.

Mr. MURRAY'S 'Handbooks for Travellers,' BARDEKER'S 'Reisehandbücher,' and JOANNE'S 'Guides pour les Voyageurs,' always in Stock.

English, French, and German Books imported Weekly, and a great variety of New Books kept in Store.

47, GELDERSCHE KADE.

VICHY ET CANNES.

Maisons Méry Georges.

VICHY.

Hotel Burnol, sur le Parc, entre le Casino et l'Etablissement des Bains.

CANNES.

Hotel des Princes, position exceptionnelle au midi.

Ces deux établissements se recommandent par leur service irréprochable et leur confortable. Interprètes.

VICHY.

Grand Hotel du Parc,

En face les Bains et le Parc.

Vichy, comme Paris et Londres, a son grand hôtel. Le Grand Hotel du Parc de Vichy, pour son confort et son élégance, ne le cède en rien à ceux de Paris et de Londres.

Appartements complets pour familles.

VICHY.

Hotel Victoria,

Près l'établissement thermal, et les sources, et le Parc,

L. ROUFFEY,

Se recommande par son excellent service et sa clientèle distinguée.

No Pedestrian Traveller should be without

THE TOURIST'S WATERPROOF KNAPSACK, 14/6.

The lightest, cheapest, and most durable made. To be had of

JAMES S. CARTER,

295, OXFORD STREET, LONDON.

Side Pouches, Courier Bags, Drinking Cups, Waterproof Coats, Glacier Nails, &c. &c.

Tourists and Travellers,

Visitors to the Seaside, and others exposed to the scorching rays of the Sun and heated particles of Dust, will find

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR

a most refreshing preparation for the Complexion, dispelling the cloud of languor and relaxation, allaying all heat and irritability, and immediately affording the pleasing sensation attending restored elasticity and healthful state of the skin.

Freckles, Tan, Spots, Pimples, Flushes, and Discolouration, fly before its application, and give place to delicate clearness, with the glow of beauty and of bloom. In cases of sunburn, or stings of insects, its virtues have long been acknowledged.

Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per Bottle.

The heat of summer also frequently communicates a dryness to the hair, and a tendency to fall off, which may be completely obviated by the use of

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL,

a delightfully fragrant and transparent preparation, and as an invigorator and beautifier of the Hair beyond all precedent.

Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per Bottle.

White and Sound Teeth are indispensable to Personal Attraction, and to health and longevity by the proper mastication of food.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO,

OR, PEARL DENTIFRICE,

a White Powder, compounded of the choicest and most fragrant exotics. It bestows on the Teeth a pearl-like whiteness, frees them from Tartar, and imparts to the Gums a healthy firmness, and to the Breath a pleasing fragrance.

Price 2s. 9d. per Box.

SOLD AT

20, HATTON GARDEN, LONDON;

And by Chemists and Perfumers.

*.* Ask for "ROWLAND'S" Articles.

NOTICE

Tourist's & Passport Agency,
8, ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON, E.C.

MESSRS. LETTS undertake to supply intending Travellers either through this or Foreign Countries with every information that can be of service to them on their route—relative to times and means of Conveyance, Couriers, Currency, &c.—and to provide PASSPORTS with the requisite visés with the utmost promptitude and regard to economy. The Passports, being mounted on strong, thin linen, and inserted in Russia, Morocco, or Roan Cases, with the Proprietor's name lettered on the outside, are rendered sufficiently durable to last many seasons and facilitate their examination by the Police authorities. TRAVELLERS TO INDIA or the CONTINENT may be provided with the Newest Editions of

ENGLISH, FRENCH, AND GERMAN GUIDE BOOKS,

as well as the most approved selection of Maps, both English and Foreign (see separate List), and with Polyglot Washing-Books, Books of Travel-Talk, and Dictionaries.

Trustworthy Couriers will be recommended by giving sufficient notice.

TOURISTS in the UNITED KINGDOM will find the following articles extremely valuable (many indispensable):—

MAPS AND GUIDES*

by Murray, Black, Stanford, and Johnston, for England, English Counties and Lakes, Isle of Wight, Wales (North and South), Scotland and Scotch Counties, and Ireland, together with the beautiful series of ORDNANCE MAPS (without which no Pedestrian should commence his tour), in neat and portable Cases, from 1s. each.

Also LETTS' Shilling Series of Government Maps, on the scale of 1 inch to the mile, folded in a neat paper cover. They may be obtained from any Bookseller (or the Publishers for 13 stamps), and embrace almost all the leading Cities, Watering-places, and Tourists' Resorts in England and Ireland. Each Map contains 18 miles one way and 12 the other, or a superficial area of 216 miles.

Every description of STATIONERY required by the Traveller, of which the undermentioned may form a sample, kept in stock, and forwarded on receipt of remittance to amount of order:—

Desks, Flexible Writing Cases, Metallic Books, Tourists' Cases, Perpetual Diaries, Luggage Labels, Foreign Paper and Envelopes, Cash Belts, Purses, Bags, Botanical Paper, and other Requisites.

LETTS, SON, & CO.,

8, ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON, E.C., Stationers, Travelling Desk Manufacturers, Lithographers, and Agents to H.M. Board of Ordnance and the Geological Society.

* Illustrated Catalogues of Ordnance and other Maps, Guides, and Atlases, forwarded per return of Post, upon receipt of One Postage Stamp.

TO BUYERS OF HARDWOODS, IVORY, &c.

ROBERT FAUNTLEROY & Co.,

99 & 100, Bunhill Row, Finsbury,
London, E.C.

Depôts:—James Street, Old Street; and Old Swan Wharf, London Bridge.

Importers and Dealers in every description of Foreign Wood; also Ivory, Timber, Veneers; Vegetable Ivory, Coquilla and Betel Nuts, &c. Wholesale and Retail. Catalogues, and Specimens in great variety, may be had at "Bunhill Row" only.

Contractors to Her Majesty's Government. R. F. (Juror, &c., International Exhibition, 1862) is great-grandson to Mr. ROBERT FAUNTLEROY, who established the Hardwood trade in this family A.D. 1732.

Specimens of Woods bought, sold, or exchanged.

In 2 vols. post 8vo. price 14s.

AN ART-STUDENT IN MUNICH.

By ANNA MARY HOWITT.

"A very charming reflex of thought and feeling, as well as a picture of Bavarian life, and of what is to be seen in the great art-city of Germany."—Spectator.

"Since Bubbles from the Brunnens we have had no local handbook so airy and buoyant, so effervescent and diaphanous, as this young lady's Munich experiences."—Globe.

"A lively, glowing, and individual picture of foreign scenery and manners. . . . No book, perhaps, has been published fuller of written pictures than this since the Letters from the Baltic."—Athenæum.

London: LONGMAN, GREEN, and Co.,
Paternoster Row.

LAURENCE BLOOMFIELD IN IRELAND.

A MODERN POEM.

By WILLIAM ALLINGHAM,

Author of 'Day and Night Songs,' &c.

MACMILLAN and Co., London and Cambridge.

Cloth lettered, 6s. 6d., with Map and Seven Illustrations.

A JOURNEY DUE EAST:—Mar-selles, Egypt, Palestine, Constantinople, Athens, Rome, Ancona, Bologna, Ferrara, Padua, Venice, Trieste, Vienna, Dresden, Berlin, and Hamburg, in 1862-63. By CHB. COOKE. "Intelligent and appreciative."—Reader.

London: ARTHUR HALL, Paternoster Row.

THE FURNISHING OF BED-ROOMS.

HEAL and SON have observed for some time that it would be advantageous to their customers to see a much larger selection of Bed-room Furniture than is usually displayed, and that to judge properly of the style and effect of the different descriptions of Furniture, it is necessary that each description should be placed in a separate room. They have therefore erected large and additional SHOW ROOMS, by which they are enabled not only to extend their show of Iron, Brass, and Wood Bedsteads, and Bed-room Furniture, beyond what they believe has ever been attempted, but also to provide several small rooms for the purpose of keeping complete suites of Bed-room Furniture in the different styles.

Japanned Deal Goods may be seen in complete suites of five or six different colours, some of them light and ornamental, and others of a plainer description. Suites of Stained Deal Gothic Furniture, Polished Deal, Oak, and Walnut, are also set apart in separate rooms, so that customers are able to see the effect as it would appear in their own rooms. A Suite of very superior Gothic Oak Furniture will generally be kept in stock, and from time to time new and select Furniture in various woods will be added.

Bed Furnitures are fitted to the Bedsteads in large numbers, so that a complete assortment may be seen, and the effect of any particular pattern ascertained as it would appear on the Bedstead.

A very large stock of BEDDING (HEAL and SON's original trade) is placed on the Bedsteads.

The stock of Mahogany Goods for the better Bed-rooms, and Japanned Goods for plain and Servants' use, is very greatly increased. The entire Stock is arranged in eight rooms, six galleries, each 120 feet long, and two large ground floors, the whole forming as complete an assortment of Bed-room Furniture as they think can possibly be desired.

Every attention is paid to the manufacture of the Cabinet Work; and they have just erected large Workshops on the premises for this purpose, that the manufacture may be under their own immediate care.

Their Bedding Trade receives their constant and personal attention, every article being made on the premises.

They particularly call attention to their Patent Spring Mattress, the Sommier Elastique Portatif. It is portable, durable, and elastic, and lower in price than the old Spring Mattress.

HEAL AND SON'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF

BEDSTEADS, BEDDING, AND BED-ROOM FURNITURE

Sent free by Post.

196, 197, 198, TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD.

LAKES OF KILLARNEY.

---

BY HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY'S SPECIAL PERMISSION.

THE

Royal Victoria Hotel,

PATRONISED by H.R.H. the PRINCE of WALES,

DURING HIS VISIT TO KILLARNEY IN 1858;

The ROYAL FAMILY of BELGIUM, &c.

---

THE ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL is situate on the LOWER LAKE, close to the water's edge, within ten minutes' drive of the Railway Station, and a short distance from the far-famed "GAP OF DUNLOE."

This Hotel, which is lighted with Gas manufactured on the premises, has been much enlarged; a magnificent COFFEE ROOM, a public DRAWING ROOM for Ladies and Families, BILLIARD and SMOKING ROOMS, and several suites of PRIVATE APARTMENTS facing the Lake, having been recently added.

TABLE D'HOTE DURING THE SEASON.

HOT AND COLD BATHS.

CARRIAGES, CARS, BOATS, PONIES, &c.,

AT FIXED CHARGES.

No GRATUITIES allowed to Drivers, Boatmen, Guides, &c., as they are paid ample Wages by the Proprietor.

THE HOTEL OMNIBUS ATTENDS THE TRAINS.

N.B.—It is necessary to inform Tourists that the Railway Company, proprietors of the Terminus Hotel in the town, send upon the platform, as Touters for their hotel, the porters, boatmen, car-drivers, and guides in their employment, and exclude the servants of the hotels on the Lake; they will however be found in waiting at the station-door.

JOHN O'LEARY, PROPRIETOR.

BONN ON THE RHINE.

MR. SCHMITZ,

PROPRIETOR OF THE GOLDEN STAR HOTEL,

BEGS leave to recommend his Hotel to English Travellers. The apartments are furnished throughout in the English style; the rooms are carpeted; and the attendance, as well as the kitchen and the wine-cellar, is well provided. MR. SCHMITZ begs to add that at no first-rate Hotel on the Rhine will be found more moderate charges and more cleanliness.

The STAR HOTEL has been honoured by the visits of the following Members of the English Royal Family :—

- |                       |   |  |
|-----------------------|---|--|
| 1857. Oct. 16         | { | H. R. H. the Prince of WALES, accompanied by General Sir W. CODRINGTON, Colonel PONSONBY, Sir Frederic STANLEY, Dr. ARMSTRONG, Rev. F. C. TARVER, Mr. GIBBS, etc.  |
| 1857. Aug. 20         | { | H. R. H. the Prince of WALES and his Suite paying a visit at the Golden Star Hotel to His Majesty the King of the BELGIANS.   |
| 1857. Aug. 8          | { | H. R. H. the Prince of WALES and his Suite.  |
| 1857. July 29         | { | T. R. H. the Duchess of CAMBRIDGE and Princess MARY of CAMBRIDGE, accompanied by the Baron KNESEBECK and Suite.  |
| 1857. July 29         | { | H. R. H. the Prince of WALES paying a visit at the Golden Star Hotel to T. R. H. the Duchess of CAMBRIDGE and Princess MARY of CAMBRIDGE.   |
| 1857. July 15         | { | H. R. H. the Prince of WALES, accompanied by the Right Honourable C. GREY, General MAJOR, Colonel PONSONBY, Sir Frederic STANLEY, Dr. ARMSTRONG, Rev. F. C. TARVER, Mr. GIBBS, etc.  |
| 1856. Nov. .          | { | H. R. H. Prince ALFRED of GREAT BRITAIN, accompanied by Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick STOVIN and Lieutenant COWELL.   |
| 1846. June 18         | { | H. M. ADELAIDE, QUEEN DOWAGER of GREAT BRITAIN, accompanied by His Highness Prince EDWARD of SAXE WEIMAR, Lord and Lady BARRINGTON, Sir DAVID DAVIES, M.D., Rev. J. R. WOOD, M.A., Captain TAYLOR, &c. &c., honoured the above establishment with a THREE DAYS' VISIT. |
| 1818. May . .         | { | H. R. H. the Duke of CAMBRIDGE and Suite.  |
| 1825. March and Sept. | { | H. R. H. the Duke and Duchess of CLARENCE (King WILLIAM IV. and Queen ADELAIDE) and Suite.   |
| 1834. July . .        | { | H. M. QUEEN ADELAIDE, accompanied by the Earl and Countess of ERROL, Earl and Countess of DENBIGH, Earl and Countess HOWE, &c.   |
| 1836. Aug. . .        | { | H. R. H. the Duchess of GLOUCESTER and Suite.  |
| 1837. July . .        | { | H. R. H. the Duchess of CAMBRIDGE and Suite.   |
| 1839. Nov. . .        | { | H. R. H. the Prince GEORGE of CAMBRIDGE and Suite.   |
| — Nov. . . .          | { | H. R. H. Prince ALBERT of SAXE COBURG GOTHA, accompanied by Prince ERNEST of SAXE COBURG GOTHA, and their Suite.   |
| 1840. . . . .         | { | H. R. H. the Duchess of CAMBRIDGE, accompanied by the Princess AUGUSTA of CAMBRIDGE, and their Suite.  |
| 1841. . . . .         | { | H. R. H. the Duchess of KENT and Suite, accompanied by H. S. H. the Prince of LEMINGEN.  |
| 1841. . . . .         | { | H. R. H. the Duchess of CAMBRIDGE and Suite.   |
| — . . . . .           | { | H. R. H. Princess CAROLINA of CAMBRIDGE.   |
| 1844. . . . .         | { | H. R. H. the Duchess of CAMBRIDGE and Suite.   |
| — . . . . .           | { | H. R. H. Princess MARY of CAMBRIDGE.   |
| 1845. June . .        | { | H. R. H. the Duchess of KENT and Suite, accompanied by H. S. H. the Prince of LEMINGEN.  |
| 1847. July . .        | { | T. R. H. the Duke and Duchess of CAMBRIDGE, with their Family and Suite.   |

N.B.—The NEW STATION at CHARING CROSS, WEST-END, is NOW OPEN for Traffic, and the Continental Mail Trains and Tidal Trains run to and from that Station, calling at London Bridge each way.

LONDON AND PARIS IN 10 HOURS,

By the Accelerated Special Express Daily Direct Tidal Service.

VIA FOLKESTONE and BOULOGNE.

THE CHEAPEST, QUICKEST, AND SHORTEST ROUTE.

A Through Night Service between London and Paris,

VIA FOLKESTONE and BOULOGNE.

For Hours of Departure (which are variable), of both the above Services, see Time Book and Bills.

SIX THROUGH SERVICES DAILY BY THE SHORT SEA AND CONTRACT MAIL ROUTES.

The Mail Trains of this Company, conveying by special appointment the Continental Mails, run to and start from the Mail-Packet Side on the Admiralty Pier at Dover.

To avoid inconvenience from examination en route, Passengers should be careful to order the registry of their Baggage to Charing Cross per South-Eastern Railway.

Rates for Through Tickets.

LONDON AND PARIS RETURN TICKETS.

FIRST CLASS.

SECOND CLASS.

By either Boulogne or Calais ..... £4 7 0 ..... $3 7 0

Third-Class Through Tickets by Night Service, 20s.

BELGIUM, GERMANY, HOLLAND, &c. &c.,

By the appointed Continental Mail Trains.

FOUR SERVICES DAILY.

Leaving CHARING CROSS and LONDON BRIDGE at 7:30 A.M. and 8:30 P.M. daily, via Dover and Calais, and 7:30 A.M. and 8:30 P.M., via Ostend, every day except Sunday.

THROUGH TICKETS ISSUED AND BAGGAGE REGISTERED

(With a free allowance of 56 lbs. each Passenger),

To and from the Principal Continental Cities and Towns.
NEW ROUTE TO THE EAST.

THE PARCELS EXPRESSES convey Parcels to nearly all Continental Destinations, at through Rates, as quickly as the Mails.

A Reduced and Revised Scale of Through Rates for PARCELS and MERCHANDISE, of any weight, between LONDON and PARIS. A New Through Tariff, between London and Paris, for Bullion and Value Parcels; also, Rates for Value Parcels between London and Belgium.

MERCHANDISE FORWARDED TO BOULOGNE.

THE OVERLAND AND MAIL ROUTE TO INDIA, CHINA, &c.

LONDON BRIDGE STATION,
SEASON, 1864.

C. W. EBORALL, General Manager.

FOREIGN BOOKS AT FOREIGN PRICES.

TRAVELLERS may save expense and trouble by purchasing Foreign Books in England at the same prices at which they are published in Germany or France.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE

have published the following CATALOGUES of their Stock :—

- |                                   |  |
|-----------------------------------|--|
| 1. CLASSICAL CATALOGUE.           | 9. SCIENTIFIC CATALOGUE.                                       |
| 2. THEOLOGICAL CATALOGUE.         | Natural History, Chemistry, Mathematics, Medicine, &c.         |
| 3. FRENCH CATALOGUE.              | 10. FOREIGN BOOK CIRCULARS. New Books, and New Purchases.      |
| 4. GERMAN CATALOGUE.              | 11. SCIENTIFIC-BOOK CIRCULARS. New Books and Recent Purchases. |
| 5. EUROPEAN LINGUISTIC CATALOGUE. |  |
| 6. ORIENTAL CATALOGUE.            |  |
| 7. ITALIAN CATALOGUE.             |  |
| 8. SPANISH CATALOGUE.             |  |

ANY CATALOGUE SENT POST-FREE FOR ONE STAMP.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, Importers of Foreign Books,
14, HENRIETTA STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, and 20, SOUTH FREDERICK STREET, EDINBURGH.

NICE AND SWITZERLAND.

Pensions Anglaises for Families of the First Class.

THE MARINE VILLA,
PROMENADE DES ANGLAIS, NICE;

THE VILLA VISCONTI, CIMIES, NICE;

AND

THE GRAND CHATEAU DE PRANGINS,
FORMERLY THE RESIDENCE OF KING JOSEPH BUONAPARTE, NYON, LAKE OF GENEVA,

Thirty minutes by rail from Geneva, and 200 feet above the Lake, in full view of Mont Blanc. The Château is very spacious, the apartments large and lofty, and the accommodation is of the first order.

All the above Establishments are conducted by the Proprietors,

MR. AND MRS. SMITHERS,

At Nice in winter, and in Switzerland in summer.

A. W. BENNETT'S GIFT BOOKS, ILLUSTRATED BY PHOTOGRAPHY.

Ornamental binding, fcap. 4to., cloth, 21s.; morocco, 31s. 6d.

RUINED ABBEYS AND CASTLES OF GREAT BRITAIN. By WILLIAM AND MARY HOWITT. The Photographic Illustrations by BEDFORD, SEDGFIELD, WILSON, and FENTON.

Bolton Priory. Glastonbury Abbey. Iona. Lanthony Abbey. Chepstow Castle. Tintern Abbey. Raglan Castle. Conway Castle. Goodrich Castle. Fountains Abbey. Roslin Chapel. Holyrood Abbey. Carlisle Castle. Elgin Cathedral. Melrose Abbey. Bievieux Abbey. Furness Abbey.

'Among illustrated books, the newly-published volume entitled "The Ruined Abbeys and Castles of Great Britain," is at once the most conspicuous and the most beautiful. As a gift-book the volume is in every respect to be commended, and, better than most gift-books, it will repay whoever shall carefully examine and peruse it.'—WESTMINSTER REVIEW.

Ornamental binding, fcap. 4to., cloth, 21s.; morocco, 31s. 6d.

RUINED ABBEYS AND CASTLES OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. By WILLIAM HOWITT. Second Series. The Photographic Illustrations by THOMPSON, SEDGFIELD, OGLE, and HEMPHILL.

Kenilworth Castle. Caernarvon Castle. Lindisfarne. Tynemouth Priory. Whithy Abbey. Netley Abbey. Hurstmonchoux Castle. Croyland Abbey. Castle Acre Priory. Richmond Castle. Byland Abbey. Dryburgh Abbey. Jedburgh Abbey. Rock of Cashel. Holycross Abbey. Cahir Castle.

'We have seen nothing finer in the way of [photographs than these old ruins, every stone, and bit of lichen and green spray coming out sharp and clear, in a manner quite wonderful in its truth and beauty. This should be the Christmas book of the season.'—BOOKSELLER.

Small 4to., handsome binding, cloth, 18s.; morocco, 28s.

OUR ENGLISH LAKES, MOUNTAINS, AND WATERFALLS, as seen by WILLIAM WORDSWORTH. Photographically Illustrated.

Rydal Mount. Winandermere. Euse Tarn. Dungeon-Ghyll. Rydale Water. Upper Fall, Rydale. Grasmere. Derwentwater. Brougham Castle. Honister Crag. The Bowder Stone. Alra Force. Wordsworth's Tomb. Fac-simile of Wordsworth's Handwriting.

'A beautiful, refined, and tasteful volume.'—MORNING POST.

'The idea is excellent, and has been ably carried out.'—LONDON REVIEW.

Small 4to., elegant, cloth, 18s.; morocco, 25s.

THE LADY OF THE LAKE. By Sir WALTER SCOTT, Bart. Illustrated with Photographs of the Scenery of the Poem, by T. OGLE; and of Scott's Tomb at Dryburgh, by G. W. WILSON.

Scott's Tomb. Brig of Turk. Ellen's Isle. Loch Katrine. Glenfinlas. Lanrick Mead. Near St. Bride's Chapel. Beal-nam-bo. The Hero's Targe. The Trosach's Dell. Benléd. Collantogle's Ford. Loch Achray. Benvenne and Loch Katrine.

'The photographs show many a lovely scene. . . . The idea of so illustrating the "Lady of the Lake" is an excellent one.'—ATHENÆUM.

'The photographs are certainly among the best in every way that we have ever seen, and most liberally bestowed, nearly every scene of special interest being given.'—SPECTATOR.

Square 16mo., cloth elegant, 5s.; ornamental boards, 3s. 6d.

THE WYE; ITS RUINED ABBEYS AND CASTLES. By WILLIAM AND MARY HOWITT. With Six Photographs by BEDFORD and SEDGFIELD.

'For all who want either a souvenir of past pleasures associated with the Wye, or a guide to the great shrines which so many pilgrims visit, there cannot be a more taking little book.'—Bristol Mercury.

In October.

LONGFELLOW'S HYPERION. Handsomely printed on Toned Paper, in 4to., with Twenty-four splendid Photographs, 7 inches by 5, of the Rhine, Switzer- land, &c., by F. FRITZ.

LONDON: ALFRED W. BENNETT, 5, BISHOPSGATE WITHOUT, E.C.

THE CONTINENT.

---

COURIERS AND TRAVELLING SERVANTS OF DIFFERENT NATIONS.

---

Society of Couriers and Travelling Servants.

ESTABLISHED 12 YEARS.

Patronised by the Royal Family, Nobility, and Gentry.

12, BURY STREET, ST. JAMES'S.

---

This Society is composed of Members of different Nations, all of well-established reputation, great experience, efficiency, and respectability.

Couriers suitable for any country can be obtained.

Italians, Germans, Swiss, French, and Men of other Nations, compose this Society; some of whom, besides the usually required languages, speak Spanish, Russian, Swedish, Turkish, and Arabic,—in fact, every Continental and European language.

Travellers for any part can immediately meet with Couriers and Travelling Servants on application to the Secretary.

---

COURIERS AND TRAVELLING SERVANTS OF DIFFERENT NATIONS, 12, BURY STREET, ST. JAMES'S.

NICE.

HÔTEL DES ANGLAIS

(now held by the MEDITERRANEAN HOTEL COMPANY, Limited, of London),

No. 1, PROMENADE DES ANGLAIS,

And Public Gardens, where the military bands play; commanding a most beautiful view of the sea and surrounding country.

THIS Hotel has been recently purchased by the Mediterranean Hotel Company (Limited), enlarged and fitted up in the most elegant manner, and supplied with English domestic comforts so much needed on the Continent. The cellar has been replenished by a stock of first-class wines and spirits.

Private Suites of Apartments. Table d'Hôte; Dinners à la Carte. Hot and Cold Baths. Smoking and Billiard Room, with one of Thurston's best Tables. English, French, and German spoken. For Apartments, address the Manager at the Hotel.

VIENNA.

ROMAN EMPEROR HOTEL.

THIS extensive and excellent Hotel is one of the best in Vienna, so much patronized by British Travellers for its English comfort, cleanliness, civility, and moderation in charges. It offers unusual convenience to all travellers.

Families will find sets of quiet airy Apartments, overlooking a large garden.

Families or Gentlemen, remaining some time, can live here moderately en pension.

The London 'Times' and 'Galignani's Messenger' kept all the year round.

English and other Languages spoken by the Proprietors,

DOTZLER AND STEININGER.

SOUTHGATE'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS

PRIZE MEDAL, 1862,

AWARDED TO

JOHN SOUTHGATE,
75 AND 76, WATLING STREET, LONDON, E.C.

For General Excellence and Cheapness.

SOUTHGATE'S FOLDING PORTMANTEAU.

SOUTHGATE'S
REGISTERED PORTMANTEAU.

SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS, SOLID LEATHER LADIES' DRESS TRUNKS, AND EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
PORTMANTEAU AND TRAVELLING TRUNK.
Southgate's Patent Overland Trunk.

OFFICIAL

Illustrated Railway Guide-Books,

By GEORGE MEASOM.

1. South-Western Railway and its Branches. Two hundred Engravings, and Map. ONE SHILLING.
2. The Isle of Wight—Its Geology, Climate, and Railway. One Hundred Engravings. ONE SHILLING.
3. All the above bound together with magnificent steel plate frontispiece, 3s. 6d.

'Quite a marvel in its way on the score of cheapness, well printed on excellent paper, with wood engravings of more than average merit.'—Illustrated Times.

Second Editions.

1. North-Western Railway and its Branches. Three Hundred and Sixty Engravings. ONE SHILLING.
2. Lancaster and Carlisle, Edinburgh and Glasgow, and Caledonian Railways. One Hundred and Fifty Engravings. ONE SHILLING.
3. All the above bound together, 1580 pages, 3s. 6d.

'This useful and delightful volume, which is a perfect marvel of cheapness, is prefaced with many interesting railway statistics, and useful directions to the traveller. The book, indeed, is so useful and entertaining, that every one who has travelled, or intends to travel, ought to have it, while he who has made up his mind to stay at home can find no better substitute for travel.'—Liverpool Mercury.

Second Editions.

1. Great Western Railway and its Branches. Five Hundred Engravings. ONE SHILLING.
2. Bristol and Exeter, North and South Devon, Cornwall, and South Wales Railways. Three Hundred Engravings. ONE SHILLING.
3. The above two works bound together, 3s. 6d.

"The Official Illustrated Guide to the Great Western Railway" is one of the largest shilling's worths of reading we ever saw. This interesting publication is a marvel of cheapness. The illustrations are well chosen and well executed, and the letterpress is written in the plain unvarnished style which characterises the previous works of the observant traveller, Mr. Measom.—Bristol Mirror.

OFFICIAL ILLUSTRATED RAILWAY GUIDE-BOOKS—continued.

Second Editions.

1. The South-Eastern Railway and its Branches. Two hundred Engravings. Beautiful Map.

ONE SHILLING.

2. Northern of France, with Six Days in Paris. Magnificent Map. One Hundred Engravings.

ONE SHILLING.

3. All the above bound together, with map and magnificent steel plate frontispiece, 3s. 6d.

'We can do no better service to an intending summer excursionist on the South-Eastern coast, or to the Northern of France Railway, comprising therein Boulogne and Paris (and how to spend six days there), than to invest the sum of a shilling for each of the two guide-books above mentioned; and he will have not only an amusing and instructive companion for the whole route, but save as many pounds as he has spent preliminary pence. The Northern of France and Paris is by far the best guide-book we have yet seen of Paris, and the route there by Boulogne. The books, in fact, are well worthy a place in any library.'—News of the World.

'Mr. George Measom maintains his credit as a railway topographer for travellers this summer, with two Official Illustrated Guides, one to the South-Eastern Railway and its Branches, a most liberal shilling's worth of edification, the other to the Northern Railway in France. The latter of these includes a very clever illustrated summary of what may be seen in six days in Paris.'—Examiner.

1. Great Northern; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire; and MIDLAND RAILWAYS. 300 Engravings. 794 Pages of Letterpress.

ONE SHILLING.

2. North-Eastern; North British; Edinburgh and Glasgow; SCOTTISH CENTRAL; EDINBURGH, PERTH, and DUNDEE; SCOTTISH NORTH-EASTERN; and GREAT NORTH OF SCOTLAND RAILWAYS. 200 Engravings. 688 Pages of Letterpress.

ONE SHILLING.

3. All the above bound together, 1482 pages, with magnificent steel plate frontispiece, 3s. 6d.

'Mr. George Measom, who is well known as the author of some of the most graphic, as well as the cheapest, illustrated railway guides ever published, has just added these two to his list. The first contains about 500 engravings, a volume of 794 pages; and the second, which is illustrated with 300 engravings, is a volume of 688 pages; and the price of each volume is but one shilling. They are truly marvellously cheap productions, and they are as good as they are cheap, for they contain a great deal of valuable information about the principal towns on the several railways mentioned.'—Leeds Intelligencer.

'Travellers cannot do better than provide themselves with these excellent guide-books; for they are full of information, and will supply many hours' reading in the train, thus answering the double purpose of amusement and direction. The illustrations are appropriate and well executed, whilst those which relate to our great hives of manufacturing industry must convey to many foreigners a startling idea of the magnitude and importance of the industry of this country.'—News of the World.

MESSRS. CHARLES, GRIFFIN, &amp; CO., STATIONERS' HALL COURT.

* * Mr. GEORGE MEASOM will feel obliged for any local information of public general interest, for embodiment in future editions of the above works.

St. Margaret's, Twickenham, S.W.—June, 1864.

MARIENBERG.

HYDROPATHIC ESTABLISHMENT, NEAR BOPPARD, ON THE RHINE.

THIS Establishment is in the immediate neighbourhood of the Rhenish Railway Stations and Landing Places of the Rhine Steamers, and is placed in the most delightful and smiling situation in the whole of the Rhenish Provinces.

It is very close to Coblenz, Ems, and Wiesbaden; and it has been known during the last 25 years as one of the first, most elegant, and largest Establishments for Cold Water Cure. Long experience, extraordinary results, charming arrangements and luxury, and, above all, the advantage of incomparable Water, has procured for this Establishment an European renown.

It is especially visited by the Nobility of all countries, who seek this pleasant spot to re-establish or strengthen their failing health, or to while away most agreeably the summer season.

BADEN-BADEN.

Hôtel de Russie : G. Jung, Proprietor.

THIS first-class Hotel has been greatly enlarged and improved, and a beautiful Garden added to it. It is most delightfully situated near the Kursaal, and is patronized by the élite and fashionable visitors to Baden-Baden. English Families will find this a very agreeable residence, at which there is a choice of large or small Apartments, well furnished with every comfort and convenience that can be desired; and no expense is spared to render the Hotel deserving their patronage. The Hotel is celebrated for its cuisine, cleanliness, and good attendance. Visitors staying at this Hotel can hear the Band playing on the Promenade very distinctly. English Newspapers.

LAUSANNE.

Hôtel Gibbon : Mr. Ritter, Proprietor.

THIS First-class Hotel, highly recommended in every respect, is situated in the best part of the town, and commands the finest and most extensive views of the Lake, the Alps, and the splendid scenery around Lausanne. The terraced garden adjoining the salle-à-manger is unsurpassed by any in the neighbourhood, and was the favourite residence of Gibbon, who wrote here his History of Rome. This house will be found to give very superior accommodation, and to offer to travellers a highly desirable place of residence or of temporary sojourn.

Pension at Reduced Prices during the Winter Months.

BRUSSELS.

CARTER'S COMMERCIAL HOTEL and TAVERN,

established Fifty Years, 16 & 18, PLACE DU MUSÉE, PLACE ROYALE, has every accommodation and comfort for single Travellers and Families, at moderate charges. Mr. and Mrs. CARTER, who are English, will pay every attention to the wants and wishes of their visitors. Private Apartments for Families, with Board. English Newspapers. Bass's Ale, Barclay's Stout, and Aitchenson and Co.'s Scotch Ale, always on draught.

WIESBADEN.

HÔTEL D'ANGLETERRE; Proprietor, JOS. BERTHOLD; near the Promenade and Kochbrunnen. Mineral Water Baths supplied by the Kochbrunnen; large and small Apartments for Families, and excellent Bedrooms for single Gentlemen. This House has been known for many years among the élite of English Visitors to Wiesbaden, and it is still conducted in its ancient style of comfort and elegance. Highly recommended by the author of the 'Bubbles from the Brunns of Nassau' and Murray's Handbook. Price very moderate. After the season, Apartments, including kitchen, &c., are let in this Hotel on the same terms as private apartments in the town.

D I E P P E.

GRAND HÔTEL IMPÉRIAL

DE DIEPPE,

Charmingly situated on the Beach.

IT IS THE NEAREST HOTEL TO THE ENGLISH STEAMERS; OF THE HIGHEST CLASS FOR COMFORT AND CONVENIENCE;

SPECIALLY DISTINGUISHED BY THE EMPEROR'S AUTHORITY TO BEAR THE TITLE OF "IMPERIAL," AND BY THE EMPEROR'S ARMS.

SPECIAL TERMS WITH FAMILIES,
BY THE WEEK OR FOR THE SEASON.

PRIVATE CARRIAGES BELONGING TO THE HOTEL.

The Cellar contains some very Old Wines, and also Wines of First Quality, of the Best Vintages.

VERY ADVANTAGEOUS TERMS FOR THE WINTER.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR.

M U N I C H.

E N G L I S C H E R   H O F

(HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE).

SITUATED near the Royal Palace and Hofgarten, at the extremity of Brienner St., and on the Wittelsbach Square, originally built as a palace for Queen Hortense, and afterwards occupied during ten years by the English Ambassador. This capacious edifice has been heightened by a story, and furnished with Water Supply laid on, Baths, and Telegraph Wires in all the rooms and passages, so as to render the attendance of servants immediate. It presents a great choice of airy Bed and Sitting-Rooms. The Cellar is furnished with the best wines, and the Kitchen managed by an experienced Chef.

For the convenience of travellers an Omnibus runs to all the Stations, and Private Carriages are provided at a moment's notice. With all these advantages the Scale of Prices is fixed on the most moderate footing, consequently travellers—English especially—are earnestly invited to make trial of a house possessing so many recommendations, by their humble servant,

May, 1864.

CHRISTIAN SCHAFFROTH.

V I C H Y.

G R A N D   H Ô T E L   D E   L ' U N I V E R S .

PROPRIETOR—MR. CHABASSIER.

THIS well-known and first-class Hotel, deservedly recommended by English travellers, is conveniently situated between the Railway Terminus and Mineral Springs, and it combines comfort with moderate charges. The Table d'Hôte is most liberal. Public Saloon with Pianos. Private Breakfasts, Dinners, and Rooms if required. Good Coach-house, Stabling, and Garden.

MR. and MADAME CHABASSIER spare neither trouble nor expense to render this Hotel preferable to all others for Families and Gentlemen visiting Vichy.

English, German, Spanish, and Italian spoken.

V I C H Y - L E S - B A I N S .

G R A N D   H Ô T E L   D U   P A R C ,

Opposite the Baths and the Park.

AS in Paris and London, Vichy has its Grand Hotel. The Grand Hotel du Parc of Vichy, for comfort, elegance, and convenience, is equal to any of the large Hotels of Paris or London.

SUITES OF APARTMENTS FOR FAMILIES.

TURIN.

---

HÔTEL FEDER.

PROPRIETOR, MR. C. GIULIANO.

---

This Hotel has been much enlarged, consisting now of 200 apartments, which have been furnished with great comfort and elegance befitting a first-class Establishment. Its situation in the centre of the Town, near the Houses of Parliament, the new Exchange, the Post-office, and the Theatres, at the corner of the magnificent Rue de Po, offers to travellers great advantages; and families will find all the comfort and privacy of private life. Apartments at all prices, suitable to single tourists or families. 'The Times' newspaper.

---

PASSAGE OF MONT CÉNIS.

---

SUSA TO ST. MICHEL

(and vice versâ).

---

MR. JOSEPH BORGIO.

---

Carriages can be obtained for the crossing of Mont Cénis, from Susa to St. Michel, or vice versâ, on application to Mr. JOSEPH BORGIO at SUSA—Hôtel de France.

ST. MICHEL—Railway Station and Hôtel de l'Union.

TURIN—Grand Hôtel de l'Europe.

Carriages of all kinds, to hold 2, 4, 5, and 7 persons.

Travellers will find this the most comfortable and least fatiguing way of crossing this mountain, the passage being made in the same time as by the COURIER.

PARIS.

HÔTEL ST. MARIE,

83, RUE DE RIVOLI.

Restaurant à la carte: Rooms, from 1 fr. 50c. to 5 fr.; Saloons, from 2 frs. 50c. to 5 frs. per day. This Hotel is recommended for its central situation, close to the Protestant Temple de l'Oratoire, the Museum of the Louvre, the Tuilleries, the Palais Royal, the places of amusement and promenades, and also in the vicinity of places of business, the Bourse, and Post-office, the Boulevard Sebastopol, the Palais de Justice, the Museum de Cluny, the Hôtel de Ville and Palace, the St. Chapelle, the Museum and Garden of the Luxemburg. The prices are reasonable, and suitable to Commercial gentlemen.

PARIS.

W. S. KIRKLAND and CO., 27, Rue de Richelieu, Foreign Literary and Commission Agents. Subscriptions and Advertisements received for all English, American, and Colonial Newspapers, &c. Orders for Books, Magazines, Reviews, and COMMISSIONS OF ALL KINDS, promptly executed. A parcel twice a week from London, and fortnightly from New York. Tourists can subscribe for any short period to all the English newspapers, &c., and forward Subscriptions in postage-stamps of any country, by an order on London, or on any of the principal towns on the Continent.

OFFICE IN LONDON, 23, SALISBURY STREET, STRAND.

TOULON.

GRAND HÔTEL DE LA CROIX DE MALTE.

PROPRIETOR—MR. N. VACILACHI.

This first-rate Establishment, situated on the Place, is patronized by the highest English and American families. Comfortable apartments. CUISINE SOIGNÉE. A special Omnibus with the name of the Hotel upon it takes travellers and their luggage to and from every train. The Proprietor speaks English, Greek, Italian, &c.

GHENT.

GRAND HÔTEL DE LA POSTE.

PROPRIETOR—MR. C. DUBUS.

This first-class Hotel, situated in the most beautiful square of the town, the Place d'Armes, close to the Railway Station, recommends itself for its comfortable and superior accommodation at moderate prices. Table d'Hôte at 1 and 5 o'clock, during the summer months. Private dinners at all times.

DIEPPE.

HOTEL ROYAL, FACING THE BEACH, the Bathing Establishment, and the Parade, is one of the most pleasantly situated Hotels in Dieppe, commanding a beautiful and extensive view of the sea. Families and gentlemen visiting Dieppe will find at this Establishment elegant large and small apartments, and the best accommodation at very reasonable prices; the refreshments, &c., are of the best quality. Table d'Hôte and private Dinners.

METZ.*HÔTEL DE L'EUROPE.*MR. MONIER, PROPRIETOR.

This first-rate Hotel, much frequented by Families and Gentlemen, situated in the finest part of the town, near the Railway Station and Promenade, is replete with every comfort: the apartments are tastefully and elegantly furnished. It is celebrated for its cleanliness, good attendance, and reasonable prices. Saloons, Reading, and Refreshment Rooms; Table d'Hôte at 1 and 5 o'clock; Breakfasts and Dinners at all hours. Advantageous arrangements made with Families during the Winter Season. In front of the Hotel there is a fine extensive garden and large court-yard. Baths and carriages in the Hotel. Omnibuses and carriages belonging to the Hotel convey passengers to and from the Railway Station. English, French, Italian, and German spoken. Moderate prices.

BARCELONA.*GRAND HÔTEL AND CAFÉ D'ORIENT.*PROPRIETORS—MESSRS. DURIO BROTHERS.

IN THE CENTRE OF THE RAMBLA.

These Establishments, advantageously situated, have just been newly enlarged and decorated.

Table d'Hôte at 10½ and 5½ o'clock.

French, English, Belgian, German, and Italian Newspapers. Restaurant.

Carriages for the Town and the Environs.

TOURS.*GRAND HÔTEL DE BORDEAUX.*PROPRIETOR—MR. FLEURY.

This First-class Hotel is situated on the Boulevard, opposite the Railway Station. The accommodation at this Hotel is most comfortable, and suitable for Families or single Gentlemen; and no efforts will be spared by the Proprietor to render his Patrons' stay at his Hotel both pleasant and satisfactory.

*Baths in the Hotel. English spoken.NEUCHÂTEL.*HÔTEL DE BELLE VUE.

Admirably situated, completely on the borders of the beautiful Lake, it has a splendid view of the Alps, from Mont Blanc to the summit of the Appenzel. This new first-class Hotel offers, from its excellent attendance, its elegant and newly furnished apartments, every comfort desirable.

*English Church Service at Neuchâtel.Baths in the Hotel.*Pension, Moderate Prices.

---

D I J O N .

---

H Ô T E L D U P A R C .

Proprietors, Messrs. RIPARD BROTHERS.

---

THIS Hotel is situated close to the Theatre, and the beautiful Promenade of the Park, in the finest part of the town. A Garden in front and behind the Hotel. It has been newly furnished, and entirely re-fitted throughout with every comfort and convenience.

Table d'Hôte at Ten and Six o'clock.

Private Breakfasts and Dinners, or à la Carte. Comfortable Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms for Families.

Omnibus of the Hotel to meet every Train.

---

---

L Y O N S .

---

G R A N D H O T E L D E L Y O N , RUE IMPERIALE, AND PLACE DE LA BOURSE.

---

TWO HUNDRED BEDROOMS, and TWENTY SALOONS, in every Variety; Large and Small Apartments for Families, elegantly furnished; Saloons for Official Receptions; Conversational and Reading Rooms; Coffee and Smoking Divan; Baths; Private Carriages, Omnibuses, Restaurant; Service in the Apartments, à la Carte, or at fixed prices.

A L L L A N G U A G E S S P O K E N .

The GRAND HOTEL DE LYON is too important and too well known to require injudicious praise: it suffices to state that it cost nearly THREE MILLIONS OF FRANCS, and that the accommodation is of so comfortable and luxurious a character as to attract the notice of all visitors.

Although the GRAND HOTEL DE LYON affords the most elegant accommodation for the highest classes, it is frequented by visitors of the humblest pretensions. Rooms at 2 fr., very comfortably furnished.

TABLE D'HOTE at 4 fr. In consequence of the Proprietors having contracted with the Bordeaux and Burgundy Wine-growers for supplies of their Best Wines, qualities of the first vintages may be had at this Hotel at moderate prices. Since the Hotel has been in the hands of new Proprietors, instead of a Company, the reduction they have made in the prices precludes them from paying Fees to the Cab and Coach Drivers at the Railway Station. Travellers are therefore requested to bear in mind that the Grand Hôtel de Lyon is situated in the centre of the Rue Impériale, near the Bank of France, and opposite the Palace of the Bourse.

WILDBAD.(Five Leagues from Pforzheim.)Hotel Klumpp, formerly Hôtel de l'Ours, MR. W. KLUMPP, PROPRIETOR.

THIS First-class Hotel, containing 36 Salons, and 170 Bed-rooms, with a separate Breakfast and Reading Room, as well as a very extensive and elegant Dining Room, Artificial Garden over the River, is situated opposite the Bath and Conversation House, and in the immediate vicinity of the Promenade. It is celebrated for its elegant and comfortable apartments, good cuisine and cellar, and deserves its wide-spread reputation as an excellent hotel. Table-d'hôte at One and Five o'clock. Breakfasts and Suppers à la carte.

EXCHANGE OFFICE.

Correspondent of the principal Banking-houses of London for the payment of Circular Notes and Letters of Credit. During the season it is the office of the Diligence to Pforzheim Station of the Baden Railway, which leaves Wildbad for the Courier and Express Trains, and returns from Pforzheim after the arrival of these trains. Through Tickets issued, and Baggage Registered, to and from most of the principal towns.

SPA ; BELGIUM.*HÔTEL DE FLANDRE.*MR. SURY, PÈRE, PROPRIETOR.

Contains ONE HUNDRED BEDROOMS and TWENTY-FIVE SITTING ROOMS, furnished in modern style and taste.

THIS Establishment enjoys the patronage of the best Families on the Continent, and of England. It is situated in the most healthy part of the town; and recommends itself from its EXCELLENT CUISINE and the politeness of its proprietor. From its numerous and vast Apartments, Mr. SURY is able to receive the largest Families at any time during the season. A GOOD CELLAR. Fine Garden. Omnibus for arrivals and departures. 'The Times' newspaper taken in.

TREVES ; ON THE MOSELLE.HÔTEL DE LA MAISON ROUGE(Roths Haus in Trier).*PROPRIETOR, Mr. JOSEPH BECKER.

SINCE 1861 this Hotel has been greatly enlarged. It is situated in the principal market-place, and offers to Tourists and large Families every comfort and convenience. 'The Times' and 'L'Indépendance' taken in during the season. Apartments from 1*l.* 50*c.* to 3*l.*

BADEN-BADEN.

Hôtel de Hollande : Proprietor, A. Roessler.

THIS favourite and first-class Hotel, situated near the Kursaal, Promenade, and Theatre, commands one of the most charming views in Baden. The increase of business rendering it necessary to enlarge the Hotel, it now consists of more than a hundred sleeping apartments, elegant sitting-rooms, and a garden for the use of visitors. It is conducted under the immediate superintendence of the Proprietor, who endeavours, by the most strict attention and exceedingly moderate prices, to merit the continued patronage of English visitors. Galignani's and other Journals. The Wines of this Hotel are reputed of the best quality in Baden. Fixed moderate charges for everything.

Breakfast, Café, 36 kreutzers; Tea, 42 krs. Table d'Hôte at One, 1 fl. 24 kr.; at Five, 1 fl. 48 kr. Mr. Roessler, remaining sole Proprietor, will spare no pains to deserve the confidence of English Travellers. English is spoken.

BIARRITZ.

HÔTEL DE FRANCE,

And the magnificent Maison Garderes.

PROPRIETOR, MR. GARDERES.

THESE two first-class Establishments are delightfully situated on the Beach, in front of the Imperial Château, the Baths, and in the centre of the Promenades. They are furnished in a most superior style, with every comfort and convenience that can be desired by English or American Travellers. Moderate charges. The Proprietor speaks English.

Carriages for Excursions in the Pyrenees and Spain.

Table d'Hôte. 'The Times' newspaper.

B O N N.

GRAND HÔTEL DE BELLE VUE:

THIS first-rate Hotel, fitted up in a most superior manner for the accommodation of English Travellers, and delightfully situated on the banks of the Rhine, in the immediate vicinity of the Railway Station and the landing-places of the Steamers, with large Gardens and a splendid view of the Seven Mountains, will be found a very desirable place for a long stay in Bonn. It offers every comfort and attention, combined with cleanliness and moderate prices.

The English Club, under the presidency of the Rev. Mr. ANDERSON, is held in one of the saloons of the Hotel.

Excellent Table d'Hôte at 1 and 5 o'clock. Advantageous arrangements can be made by single persons or Families remaining for a period.

TURIN.

---

GRAND HÔTEL DE L'EUROPE.

PROPRIETORS—

MESSRS. BORATTI AND CASALEGGIO.

Situated, Place du Château, opposite the King's Palace.

---

THIS unrivalled and admirably conducted Hotel has been entirely refurnished to afford great comfort, and in the very best taste, and thus peculiarly recommends itself to the notice of English travellers.

EXCELLENT TABLE D'HÔTE,

AT 5½ O'CLOCK.

---

Interpreters Speaking all the European Languages.

---

CHARGES MODERATE.

---

THE TIMES NEWSPAPER.

---

An Omnibus from the Hotel will be found at every Train.

London and South-Western Railway.

LONDON STATION, WATERLOO BRIDGE.

PARIS, ROUEN, HONFLEUR, AND CAEN,

Via SOUTHAMPTON and HAVRE,

Every Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday.

Leaving Waterloo Bridge Station, London, at 8.30 p.m.

The Cheapest Route.

Fares throughout (London and Paris)—FIRST CLASS, 28/0; SECOND CLASS, 20/0.
Return Tickets (available for one month)—FIRST CLASS, 50/0; SECOND CLASS, 36/0.

Offices—Waterloo Bridge Station—No. 53, King William Street, City—Universal Office, Regent Circus—No. 216, Oxford Street (West)—Golden Cross, Charing Cross—Swan-Two-Necks, Gresham Street, London.—Southampton, Railway Station.—Havre, 47, Grand Quai.—Paris, 3, Place Vendôme.

JERSEY, GUERNSEY, AND ST. MALO,

MAIL SERVICE.

Via SOUTHAMPTON—The favourite Route.

Every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.

Fares throughout (London and Jersey or Guernsey)—31/0 FIRST; or 21/0 SECOND CLASS.

Return Tickets—45/0 FIRST; or 35/0 SECOND CLASS: available for One Month.

The Last Train from London is at 8.30 p.m.

Offices as above.

JERSEY AGENT, Mr. G. H. Millais. GUERNSEY AGENT, Mr. J. B. Barbet.

This Day, a New and Cheaper Edition, with Map, 16mo., 3s. 6d.

MURRAY'S

HANDBOOK FOR LONDON AS IT IS.

JOHN MURRAY, ALBEMARLE STREET.

SWISS COURIERS'
AND TRAVELLING SERVANTS' SOCIETY,
BEg to inform the Nobility and Gentry, should they require the services of a Courier or Travelling Servant, only those whose characters have borne the strictest investigation, both as regards sobriety, honesty, and general good conduct, have been admitted into the Society, and who are capable of fulfilling their duties efficiently. The Society therefore ventures to solicit your patronage, and hopes to deserve your future favours.

All information may be obtained of the Secretary,

HENRY MASSEY, Stationer,
 103, PARK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE.

Established 1856.

TO CONTINENTAL TRAVELLERS.

DORRELL & SON'S PASSPORT AGENCY, 15, CHARING CROSS, S.W.

Every Information given respecting Travelling on the Continent.

French and Italian spoken, and Correspondence carried on in either Language.

BARRISH SUBJECTS visiting the Continent will save trouble and expense by obtaining their Passports through the above Agency. No personal attendance is required, and country residents may have their Passports forwarded through the post. A 'PASSPORT PROSPECTUS,' containing every particular in de-tall, by post, on application.

Passports Mounted, and enclosed in Cases, with the name of the bearer impressed in gold on the outside; thus affording security against injury or loss, and preventing delay in the frequent examination of the Passport when travelling.

Fee, Obtaining Passport, 1s.; Visas, 1s. each. Cases, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 4s. each.

THE LATEST EDITIONS OF MURRAY'S HANDBOOKS.

English and Foreign Stationery, Dialogue Books, Couriers' Bags, Pocket-books and Purses of every description, Travelling Inkstands, and a variety of other Articles useful for Travellers.

THE ATHENÆUM.

NOTICE.—On the Repeal of the Paper Duty, the Price of 'THE ATHENÆUM' was reduced from Fourpence to THREEPENCE.

Every Saturday, of any Bookseller or News Agent, Price THREEPENCE.

Each Half-Yearly Volume complete in itself, with Title-Page and Index.

THE ATHENÆUM

JOURNAL OF ENGLISH AND FOREIGN LITERATURE, SCIENCE, AND THE FINE ARTS.

CONTAINS:—REVIEWS of every important New Book—REPORTS of the Learned Societies—AUTHENTIC ACCOUNTS of Scientific Voyages and Expeditions—FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE on Subjects relating to Literature, Science, and Art—CRITICISMS on ART, MUSIC, AND DRAMA—BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES of distinguished Men—ORIGINAL PAPERS AND POEMS—WEEKLY GOSSIP.

THE ATHENÆUM is so conducted that the reader, however distant, is, in respect to Literature, Science, and Art, on an equality in point of information with the best-informed circles of the Metropolis.

Subscription for Twelve Months, 13s.; Six Months, 6s. 6d. If required to be sent by Post, the Postage extra.

Office for Advertisements—

20, WELLINGTON STREET, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

BENHAM & SONS'

General Furnishing Ironmongery Catalogue

MAY BE HAD GRATIS AND FREE BY POST.

It contains ILLUSTRATIONS of their extensive STOCK of

STOVES, FENDERS, AND FIRE-IRONS,

KITCHEN RANGES & COOKING APPARATUS

(for which Prize Medals have been awarded to them in the International Exhibitions of 1851, 1855, and 1862),

GAS WORKS, GAS FITTINGS, &c.,

Baths, Pumps, and Water-Closets, Hot Water Apparatus, Conservatories, &c., Cutlery, Electro-Plate, Tea Urns, Lamps, and every description of General Furnishing Ironmongery.

IRON & BRASS BEDSTEADS & CHILDREN'S COTS, BEDDING, BED-HANGINGS, BLANKETS, &c.

FLAVEL'S PRIZE KITCHENER,

With Patent Improvements, to which a Prize Medal has been awarded in 1862; also the only Kitchen Range which obtained a Prize Medal and Special Approval in 1851.

These Ranges are strongly recommended for their simplicity of construction, and economy and cleanliness in use; also as a certain cure for smoky chimneys.

They are made from 3 feet to 18 feet in width for large or small establishments, and may be arranged to supply a bath, steam kettles, hot-closets, &c.

BENHAM & SONS,

19, 20, & 21, WIGMORE ST., CAVENDISH SQUARE, LONDON, W.

also in the Hardware Court of the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, S.E.

BELLAGIO, LAKE OF COMO.

THE HÔTEL GRAND BRETAGNE

HAS been enlarged by the addition of 50 Bedrooms. On the first floor is a Reading-room well supplied with books and newspapers, 'The Times' and 'Galignani' among others. Salle à manger on the ground floor. Billiard and Smoking Room. A handsome pleasure Garden. Church of England Service in a chapel belonging to the Hotel twice every Sunday. Persons staying a week or longer received en pension on moderate terms.

Mr. A. MELLA, Proprietor and Director.

COPENHAGEN.

HÔTEL PHOENIX.

Mr. W. FIEDLER, PROPRIETOR.

A FIRST-RATE well-conducted Hotel, to accommodate all classes of Travellers, and is extensively patronized as such. It is situated opposite the residence of the British Ambassador, in the best part of the town; and the Proprietor respectfully recommends it to the Nobility and Gentry visiting Copenhagen.

CHAMBERY.

HÔTEL DE FRANCE.

Mr. CHIRON, PROPRIETOR.

A NEW Establishment, situated upon the Quay Nesin, in an open, airy situation, close to the Railway Station. Large and small Apartments, scrupulously clean.

Table d'Hôte at 11 and 6 o'clock.

GENEVA.

HÔTEL DE LA COURONNE.

PROPRIETOR, Mr. CARL ALDINGER.

THIS Establishment, of the first rank, completely newly furnished throughout, situated in front of the magnificent bridge of Mont Blanc and the English Garden, enjoys a most extended view upon Lake Lemman and Mont Blanc.

English and American newspapers. Table d'Hôte at 1, 5, and 7 o'clock. Omnibus of the Hotel to meet all Trains.

WORKS ON SCIENCE, &c.

ANTIQUITY OF MAN; FROM GEOLOGICAL EVIDENCES. By SIR CHARLES LYELL, F.R.S. Illustrations. 8vo. 14s.

A MANUAL OF SCIENTIFIC INQUIRY, for the Use of Travellers, &c. Edited by SIR J. HERSCHEL and Rev. R. MAIN. Maps. Post 8vo. 9s.

METALLURGY: THE ART OF EXTRACTING METALS FROM THEIR ORES AND ADAPTING THEM TO VARIOUS PURPOSES OF MANUFACTURE. By JOHN PERCY, F.R.S. With Illustrations. 2 Vols 8vo. 63s.
Vol. 1.—FUEL, COPPER, ZINC, BRASS. Vol. 2.—IRON AND STEEL.

ORIGIN OF SPECIES, BY MEANS OF NATURAL SELECTION; or, the Preservation of Favoured Races in the Struggle for Life. By CHARLES DARWIN, F.R.S. Illustrations. Post 8vo. 9s.

VOYAGE OF A NATURALIST ROUND THE WORLD. By CHARLES DARWIN, F.R.S. Illustrations. Post 8vo. 9s.

ORCHIDS, AND THE VARIOUS CONTRIVANCES BY WHICH THEY ARE FERTILISED THROUGH INSECT AGENCY. By CHARLES DARWIN, F.R.S. Woodcuts. Post 8vo.

SILURIA; a History of the Oldest Fossiliferous Rocks and their Foundations. By SIR RODERICK MURCHISON, F.R.S. Illustrations. 8vo. 42s.

THE GEOLOGY AND EXTINCT VOLCANOES OF CENTRAL FRANCE. By G. POULETT SCROPE, M.P. Illustrations. 8vo. 30s.

THE HAND; its Mechanism and Vital Endowments. By SIR CHARLES BELL, K.G.H. Woodcuts. Post 8vo. 6s.

HANDBOOK OF DESCRIPTIVE AND PRACTICAL ASTRONOMY. By GEORGE F. CHAMBERS. Illustrations. Post 8vo. 12s.

PHILOSOPHY IN SPORT MADE SCIENCE IN EARNEST; or, The First Principles of Natural Philosophy Explained, by Aid of the Toys and Sports of Youth. By DR. PARIS. Woodcuts. Post 8vo. 7s. 6d.

JOHN MURRAY, ALBEMARLE STREET.

---

BADEN-BADEN.

HÔTEL DE LA VILLE DE BADE.

PROPRIETOR, MR. EDWARD ROESSLER.

THIS Hotel is most conveniently situated near the Railway Station, and commands most beautiful and charming views from its Ten Balconies of the picturesque scenery. It has been newly refurbished in the most elegant and comfortable manner, making up 110 Beds. For its superior accommodation, and the attention shown to the comfort of his guests by the proprietor, this Establishment will be found particularly deserving the patronage of all Travellers. French and English newspapers. Advantageous arrangements can be made with Families and single Travellers intending a long stay.

BOOKS FOR TRAVELLERS.

GUIDE to the CENTRAL ALPS, including the BERNESE OBERLAND, EASTERN SWITZERLAND, LOMBARDY, and the WESTERN TYROL. By JOHN BALL, M.R.I.A., F.L.S. Post 8vo, with Maps. [In June.]

GUIDE to the WESTERN ALPS, comprising DAUPHINE, SAVOY, and PIEDMONT; with the MONT BLANC and MONTE ROSA Districts. By JOHN BALL, M.R.I.A., F.L.S. With an Article on the Geology of the Alps by M. E. DESOR. Post 8vo, with Maps, &c., 7s. 6d.

GUIDE to the PYRENEES, for the use of Mountaineers. By CHARLES PACKE, B.A. With Frontispiece, Maps, &c., and a new APPENDIX (March, 1864). Crown 8vo. 6s.

*.* The large MAP (the Central Pyrenees) may be had separately, price 3s. 6d.

THE DOLOMITE MOUNTAINS: Excursions through TYROL, CARINTHIA, CARNIOLA, and FRIULI, in 1861, 1862, and 1863; with a Geological Chapter, and Pictorial Illustrations from Original Drawings on the Spot. By J. GILBERT and G. C. CHURCHILL, F.R.G.S. With Maps, 6 Plates in Chromolithography, and 26 Engravings on Wood. Square crown 8vo, 21s.

PEAKS, PASSES, and GLACIERS: a Series of Excursions by Members of the Alpine Club. Edited by J. BALL, M.R.I.A. F.L.S. Fourth Edition; with Maps, Illustrations, and Woodcuts. Square crown 8vo. 21s.—TRAVELLERS' EDITION, condensed, 18mo. 5s. 6d.

SECOND SERIES of PEAKS, PASSES, and GLACIERS. Edited by E. S. KENNEDY, M.A., F.R.G.S. With 14 Maps and 51 Illustrations on Wood. 2 Vols. square crown 8vo. 42s.

NINETEEN MAPS of the ALPINE DISTRICTS, from the First and Second Series of Peaks, Passes, and Glaciers. Square crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d.

MOUNTAINEERING in 1861: a Vacation Tour. By JOHN TYNDALL, F.R.S., Professor of Natural Philosophy in the Royal Institution of Great Britain. Square crown 8vo. with 2 Views, 7s. 6d.

VOLCANOS, the Character of their Phenomena, their Share in the Structure and Composition of the Surface of the Globe, and their Relation to its Internal Forces: with a Descriptive Catalogue of all known Volcanos and Volcanic Formations. By G. POULETT SCROPE, M.P., F.R.S. Second Edition. 8vo, with Illustrations, 15s.

BISHOP BUTLER'S ATLAS of MODERN GEOGRAPHY, enlarged to Thirty-three full-coloured Maps, drawn and engraved on Steel by E. WELLER, F.R.G.S., accompanied by a complete Alphabetical Index. Royal 8vo. 10s. 6d.

CONTANSEAU'S POCKET FRENCH and ENGLISH DICTIONARY; being a careful abridgment of the Author's Practical French Dictionary, preserving all the most useful features of the larger work, condensed into a Pocket Volume. Second Edition. Square 18mo. 5s.

N I C E.

Shortest and Pleasantest Route to Italy,

VIA NICE AND THE CORNICHE ROAD.

RAILWAY OPEN THROUGHOUT.

LONDON to NICE in 33 hours! LONDON to GENOA in 40 hours!

NICE to GENOA, by Diligence, twice Daily.

Steamers to GENOA, FLORENCE, CIVITA VECCHIA, NAPLES, CORSICA, &c.

THIS Route, recently opened, offers great facilities to travellers, in expedition, economy, and fine scenery. Nice has long been well known to travellers for its salubrity and unequalled situation on the Mediterranean, attracting annually thousands of visitors from all parts of the globe; it has now the advantage, by the opening of the Railway, of being situate on the direct, most agreeable and picturesque route to Italy.

The Hotels at Dijon, Macon, Lyons, and Marseilles are of high character, and offer every possible inducement to the traveller to break his journey at places full of interest; while the traveller wishing for speed can obtain that object, combined with economy, on a route unequalled in Europe.

LONDON to NICE	..	..	..	..	..	33 hours.
LONDON to GENOA	..	..	..	..	..	40 "
LONDON to FLORENCE	..	..	..	..	..	48 "

All information respecting Nice, or the routes and residences, may be obtained gratis in London, on application to Mr. DE BERNARDY, 9, Northumberland Street, Strand, W.C., Corresponding Member of the Union Syndicale.

NICE.

Alpes Maritimes. Union Syndicale.

HONORARY PRESIDENT.

Count GAVINI DI CAMPILÉ, Prefet of the Department of the Alpes Maritimes.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

M. MALAUSSENER, Mayor of Nice. General COURARD. THOMAS COVENTRY, Esq.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNION.

M. COULMAN, late Deputy.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

M. XAVIER EYMA, Editor of the 'Journal de Nice.' M. PAULIAN, Propriétaire.

SECRETARY.

M. CORINALDI, Propriétaire.

TREASURER.

M. ARBO, President of the Chamber of Commerce.

COMMITTEE.

Mons. LEOPOLD AMAT.

" BOUTAN, Adjoint au Maire.

" BOVIS, Conseiller Municipal.

" BRUN.

" CHAUVAIN Père, Propriétaire.

" CHAUVAIN Fils, Propriétaire.

Mons. COLOMBO, Pres. du Tribunal de Commerce.

" CORINALDI, Propriétaire.

" COULMAN, Ancien Député.

" XAVIER EYMA.

" ALEXIS FAY, Propriétaire.

Mons. GILLY, Propriétaire.

Capt. MELVILLE GRINDLAY.

CYPRIAN LION, Propriétaire.

Doctor LIEBANSKI.

Count DE ORESTIS, Propriétaire.

LEON PILATTE, Pasteur.

MAURICE SAUVAN, Propriétaire.

CORRESPONDING MEMBER IN LONDON.

Mr. DE BERNARDY, 9, Northumberland Street, Strand, W.C.

The object of the Association or Union is to promote and organise every practical measure that may promote the comfort and agréments of the traveller or visitor to Nice, for which purpose it has created

1. An Office of Gratuitous Information ;
2. A Committee of Arbitration for the settlement of all discussions and disputes ;
3. A system of encouragement and adoption of all measures likely to promote the objects it has in view.

This Union numbers amongst its members all the principal authorities of Nice, and the chief inhabitants, proprietors of hotels and of houses and apartments, tradesmen and others, interested in the prosperity of Nice, and bound by the By-Laws of the Union to submit to all its regulations for the protection, convenience, and comfort of visitors, who will find a sure guarantee for the faithful adhesion to the rules laid down in the high character of the officers and members of the Union.

Great improvements have been made in Nice since the last season. A diminution of rents has been effected by the increased accommodation afforded by the numerous houses and villas built, building, and projected in Nice and its environs. The hotels have been increased and improved, and now rival the finest establishments of the kind in the world.

The means of communication with Italy are rapid and various—by the Mail Carriages and Diligences, twice daily, by the Col de Tenda to Turin—and the Corniche Road to Genoa. Steamers daily to Monaco, Marseilles, Genoa, Leghorn, Naples, Corsica, &c.

Applications for information will have every attention, if addressed to Mr. Corinaldi, Secretary of the Union Syndicale, Nice; or to the London Office, addressed to Mr. DE BERNARDY, 9, Northumberland Street, Strand, W.C.

N I C E.

LAW &amp; ESTATE AGENCY.

London Office—9, NORTHUMBERLAND STREET,
STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

MR. DE BERNARDY (of London), established 1835, Corresponding Member of the Union Syndicale of Nice. Under the auspices of the principal English residents in Nice Mr. DE BERNARDY has made arrangements to open an Office, and to be in attendance himself, at NICE during the Season, for all purposes of Law and Estate Agency, visiting London periodically during the Season for the convenience of his clients.

Travellers or intended Visitors to Nice will obtain all the information, gratis, which they may require as to Routes, Residence, Houses, Apartments, &c., on application to the London Office, or at Nice.

At either place, in the absence of Mr. DE BERNARDY, he is represented by competent Clerks.

N I C E A N D L O N D O N

LAW AND ESTATE AGENCY.

LONDON OFFICE—9, NORTHUMBERLAND STREET, STRAND, W.C.

N I C E.

HOTEL VICTORIA.

THIS HOTEL,

KEPT BY JEAN ZICHITELLI,

Is situated on the well-known PROMENADE DU MIDI, facing the South, with an unequalled and magnificent uninterrupted SEA VIEW.

THE HOTEL VICTORIA is of first-class character and reputation, and is favourably known to all the distinguished visitors to Nice who honour it with their patronage, and who have expressed their satisfaction at the comfort, careful service, cleanliness, and moderate charges which distinguish it.

TABLE D'HÔTE AND PRIVATE DINNERS. LARGE AND SMALL APARTMENTS.

OMNIBUS TO THE STATION.

SEA BATHS IN FRONT OF THE HOTEL.

---

NICE.

---

ALPES MARITIMES.

Hotel de la Grande Bretagne.

---

HENRI BREZZI,

PROPRIETOR.

---

THIS Hotel, which occupies the first rank at Nice, has just been again enlarged by fresh apartments, and the addition of a magnificent Ball-room, which had the honour of being inaugurated by the first English society of the town on the occasion of the marriage of the Prince of Wales. The position of this Hotel is most delightful.

---

THE ENGLISH PROMENADE, THE ENGLISH CHURCH,

AND THE PRETTY

“JARDIN DES PLANTES,”

Where the Band plays twice a week, at two o'clock in the afternoon, are opposite this vast Establishment, which faces the south, and has a fine view of the sea.

---

The Testimonies given by the Families who have resided in the Hotel is the best and strongest assurance of its comfort.

---

THE PROPRIETOR IS RECOMMENDED FOR HIS ATTENTION AND CIVILITY.

---

Apartments and Board at very Moderate Prices.

---

EXCELLENT TABLE D'HÔTE.

---

There are in the Hotel the two finest Saloons, intended for Balls and Concerts.

NICE.

---

ALPES MARITIMES, FRANCE.

---

Grand Hotel Chauvain.

SITUATED ALL SOUTH.

Much frequented by the English Nobility and Gentry.

---

MM. CHAUVAIN, the Proprietors, are Members of the 'Union Syndicale' of Nice. M. CHAUVAIN, jun., being Secretary of the Committee of 'Renseignemens,' or General Information, offers his services to parties in need of them.

---

GRAND HOTEL CHAUVAIN,

MM. CHAUVAIN, Proprietors,

NICE,

ALPES MARITIMES, FRANCE.

FLORENCE.

THE FLORENTINE BOUQUET,

Distilled from a combination of those delicious flowers for which Florence is so highly celebrated, by

ROBERTS & CO.,

DISTILLERS OF ESSENCES,

AND

PHARMACIENS TO THE BRITISH LEGATION,

4190, VIA TORNABUONI (OPPOSITE THE CORSI PALACE).

In consequence of the daily increasing demands from England for this now fashionable bouquet the proprietors have established a depôt in LONDON at

A. Whitburn's, Foreign Chemist, 174, Regent Street,

Where it may be obtained in any quantities; as also at their depôts in LEGHORN, H. DUNN, Via Grande.

TURIN, MONDO, Via Madonna degli Angeli, No. 9.

MILAN, POZZI, Ponte di Porta Orientale.

GENOA, BRUZZA, Piazza Nuova.

PISA, CARRAI, Lungo l'Arno.

LUCCA, Farmacia Militare, Via Grande.

BOLOGNA, MELLONI, Via Vetturini.

SIENA, CIUOLI, Piazza Tolomei.

ANCONA, BELLUIGI, Vincenzo.

MODENA, VANDINI, Via Emilia.

AREZZO, CROCHERELLI, Via Vallerlunga.

VERONA, SCUDERELLI.

BORGIO SAN SEPOLCRO, GIGLI.

PISTOIA, FERDINANDO MASI.

CITTA DI CASTELLO, VENTI.

PADOVA, GASPARINI.

VICENZA, CURTI.

NAPLES, LONARDO e ROMANO, 303, Via

ROME, SINDIGHERGH.

[Toledo.]

Travellers are informed that at the above Pharmacy a supply of the following goods is kept. All English and French approved Patent Medicines and Medicated Lozenges; English and French Plain and highly Perfumed Soaps in great variety; Pure Cod Liver Oil from Newfoundland; Dr. de Jongh's ditto; Seidlitz Powders; Robinson's Patent Greats; Taylor's Homœopathic Cocos; Oatmeal; Racahout des Arabes; Soda and Seltzer Water in Syphoid Vases; Congress Water direct from the Spring; India-rubber Goods of every description; Finest Turkey Sponge; Sponge Bags; Metcalfe's Tooth Brushes, Hair Brushes, and Nail ditto; Epps's Homœopathic Globules; Marrow Oil.

Depôt for the Genuine Eau de Cologne of Jean Maria Farina (gegenüber dem Jülichs Platz); Rowland's Macassar Oil, Odonto, and Kalydor; Henry's Calcined Magnesia.

How to Speak, Read, and Write French.

New Edition, 400 pages, post 8vo., 5s. 6d.

HAVET'S FRENCH STUDIES:

Modern Conversations on the ordinary Topics of Life; Colloquial Exercises to be done at Sight, and affording Practice in French Composition; 140 Extracts from Standard Writers; and an ample Dictionary of the Words and Idioms.

London: W. ALLAN & Co.; SIMPKIN & Co.; LONGMAN & Co.; DULAU & Co. Paris: GALIGNANI & Co.

THE PRINCE CONSORT.

With Portrait, Fcap. 8vo., Price 1s.

THE SPEECHES AND ADDRESSES

OF

H. R. H. THE PRINCE CONSORT,

WITH AN INTRODUCTION GIVING SOME OUTLINES OF HIS CHARACTER.

Popular Edition.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street.

---

GENEVA.

---

HÔTEL DES BERGUES.

THE ONLY HOTEL WHICH HAS AN UNINTERRUPTED VIEW OF MONT BLANC AND THE ALPS.

---

MESSRS. WACHTER AND ADRION,

Grateful for the patronage they have enjoyed for the last four years from all classes of travellers, beg to inform their friends that the experience gained in that time has enabled them to improve the accommodation and arrangement of their hotel in such a manner that few similar establishments can compete with it in comfort. The cellar is unrivalled for the quality of the wines and the moderation of the prices. The kitchen department, placed under the care of one of the most celebrated cooks from Paris, is not surpassed in Europe, while the charges for table-d'hôte and dinners à la carte are fixed at the lowest scale compatible with the excellence and variety of the viands supplied and the elegance of the service.

The principal object Messrs. WACHTER and ADRION desire to attain, under their constant personal superintendence, is to render the HÔTEL DES BERGUES, by the comfort it affords, both to families and single travellers, one of the best on the Continent.

The Omnibus of the Hotel is in waiting at the Railway Station at the arrival of all the trains, and the Commissioner of the Hotel is at the same time in attendance to take charge of the baggage of travellers.

GENEVA, May, 1864.

---

THUN (SWITZERLAND).*HÔTEL DE BELLEVUE.

THIS old and celebrated Establishment is situated in the midst of a magnificent Park, surrounded by most picturesque glaciers and mountains, at the foot of which extends the beautiful lake of Thoun. The Park contains the English Chapel, as well as Reading and Billiard Rooms, and the Exhibition of the objects of Swiss Sculpture and Art from the Studio of Mr. WALD; so that families who desire to make a lengthened stay at BELLEVUE will find there every comfort belonging to a first-class establishment.

Proprietor, Mr. WALD, Successor to Mr. Knechtenhöfer.

---

LUXEMBOURG.*HÔTEL DE COLOGNE.

Proprietor, Mr. WURTH FENDIUS.

---

THIS Hotel is of the first class, and is situated in the centre of the town. The ACCOMMODATION is both COMMODIOUS and COMFORTABLE, and the prices on the most moderate scale.

Excellent Cuisine and fine Wines. Private Carriages belonging to the Hotel. An Omnibus of the Hotel at the Station for the arrival of all Trains.

WORKS OF TRAVELS.

ART OF TRAVEL; OR, HINTS ON THE SHIFTS AND CONTRIVANCES AVAILABLE IN WILD COUNTRIES. By FRANCIS GALTON, F.R.G.S. Third Edition. Woodcuts. Post 8vo. 7s. 6d.

INDO-CHINA (SIAM), CAMBODIA, AND LAOS, during the years 1858-60. By M. HENRI MOUHOT, F.R.G.S. Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

SOUTH AMERICA; A RECORD OF ADVENTURES DURING ELEVEN YEARS OF TRAVEL ON THE RIVER AMAZON. By HENRY W. BATES. Illustrations. Post 8vo. 12s.

SYRIAN DESERTS. With Rambles and Adventures among the TURKOMANS and BEDAWEEKS. Post 8vo. 10s. 6d.

JAPAN AND CHINA: a Narrative of Journeys to YEDO and PEKIN; with Notices of the Natural Productions, Trade, &c., of those Countries. By ROBERT FORTUNE. Illustrations. 8vo. 16s.

THE YANG-TSZE; A Narrative of an EXPEDITION sent to Explore its UPPER WATERS. By CAPTAIN BLAKISTON, R.A. Illustrations. 8vo. 18s.

PERU AND INDIA; a Narrative of Travels while collecting CINCHONA PLANTS, and introducing the Culture of BARK into India. By CLEMENTS MARKHAM. Illustrations. 8vo. 16s.

BRITISH COLUMBIA AND VANCOUVER'S ISLAND; their Forests, Rivers, Coasts, Gold Fields, and resources for Colonisation. By CAPTAIN MAYNE, R.N. Illustrations. 8vo. 16s.

THE BRICK AND MARBLE ARCHITECTURE OF NORTH ITALY. By G. E. STREET, F.S.A. Illustrations. 8vo. 21s.

AFRICA: VISITS TO RUINED CITIES WITHIN NUMIDIAN AND CARTHAGINIAN TERRITORIES. With Notices of ARAB LIFE. By NATHAN DAVIS, M.D. Illustrations. 8vo. 16s.

ICELAND: ITS VOLCANOES, GEYSERS, AND GLACIERS. By COMMANDER FORBES, R.N. Illustrations. Post 8vo. 14s.

TARTAR STEPPES AND THEIR INHABITANTS. Chiefly extracted from Letters addressed to Friends. By MRS. ATKINSON. Illustrations. Post 8vo. 12s.

THE GREAT SAHARA: WANDERINGS SOUTH OF THE ATLAS MOUNTAINS. By Rev. H. B. TRISTRAM. Illustrations. Post 8vo. 15s.

GLACIERS OF THE ALPS: a Narrative of Excursions and Ascents; and an Account of the Origin and Phenomena of Glaciers. By JOHN TYNDALL, F.R.S. Illustrations. Post 8vo. 14s.

JOHN MURRAY, ALBEMARLE STREET.

LEE'S POLYGLOT WASHING
BOOKS.

(To save the trouble of translating Washing Bills).

For Ladies or Gentlemen.

IN *English & French.
English & German.
English & Italian.
English & Spanish.
English & Portuguese.*

SPONGE BAGS.

METALLIC SOAP BOXES.

Waterproof Coats.

KNAPSACKS.

FLASKS.

PASSPORTS

Procured, mounted on linen, and inserted in morocco cases, stamped with coronet or name at the shortest notice, and forwarded by post.

Visas obtained and information given.

The latest editions of MURRAY'S HAND-BOOKS kept in the original binding, and in limp leather, more convenient for the pocket, at 2s. a volume extra.

TRUSTWORTHY COURRIERS AND TRAVELLING SERVANTS can be engaged at

LEE & CARTER'S

GUIDE AND TRAVELLING

440, WEST STRAND, W.O.

TWO DOORS WEST OF THE LOWTHER
ARCADE.

Where an extensive Collection of
GUIDES, HANDBOOKS, MAPS,
Dictionaries, Dialogues,
GRAMMARS, INTERPRETERS,

WORD AND PHRASE BOOKS

In most of the Continental Languages, and every article necessary for home and foreign travel is kept in great variety.

ALL THE NEW AND STANDARD BOOKS FOR RAILWAY READING.

MOROCCO AND RUSSIA ROLL-UP WRITING CASES.

MOORE'S GERMAN

INTERPRETER.

With the exact pronunciation in English in a separate column. 6s. in cloth, or 6s. in leather.

MANUSCRIPT & ACCOUNT BOOKS.

Metallic and other Pocket Books.

Luggage Labels.

DOOR FASTENERS.

Patent Inkstands and Light Boxes.

ELASTIC BANDS.

DEPOT,

Railway Rugs,

STRAPS,

Courrier Bags.

MONEY BAGS & BELTS.

PURSES,

WALLETS, AND SOVEREIGN CASES.

TRAVELLING
TELESCOPES,
Compasses,
and Spectacles.

Foreign Paper,
ENVELOPES, &c

Pocket Pen
AND Pencil Holders.

KELLER'S AND LEUTHOLD'S
MAPS
OF SWITZERLAND.

STUDER'S MONTE ROSA.

MAYER'S TYROL.

BOOKS OF TRAVELS AND EXPLORATIONS

1. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN EUROPE
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

2. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE EAST
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

3. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN AFRICA
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

4. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN ASIA
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

5. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN AUSTRALIA
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

6. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN OCEANIA
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

7. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE PACIFIC
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

8. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE ARCTIC
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

9. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE ANTIPODES
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

10. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE TROPICS
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

11. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE DESERTS
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

12. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE MOUNTAINS
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

13. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE ISLANDS
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

14. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE COUNTRIES
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

15. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE SEAS
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

16. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE AIR
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

17. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE SUBTERRANEAN
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

18. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE COSMOS
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

19. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE UNIVERSE
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

20. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE INFINITE
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

21. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE ETERNITY
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

22. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE DIVINITY
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

23. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE SUPREMACY
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

24. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE OMNIPOTENCY
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

25. AMERICAN TRAVELERS IN THE OMNISCIENT
By various authors. 1840-1850.
New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

